'Nutrition' is Word During National Week March 6-12

"Nutrition: Foodway to Fun and Fitness" will be emphasized during the fifth annual National Nutrition Week, March 6-12, sponsored by the American Dietetics Association (ADA).

Over 300 members of the ADA in Nebraska, working in hospitals, universities, industry and health agencies will be helping to spread the "nutrition word" during the annual observance.

According to Teresa Shaffer, extension food and nutrition specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, nutritionists will be urging Nebraskans to follow a program of moderate exercise and balanced diet.

"Usually when people think of a lack of nutrition, they think of people not getting enough to eat," she says. "In the United States, however, the biggest problem is people eating too many of the wrong foods and not enough of the right foods."

For example, Americans to-day nibble their way through nearly six billion dollars worth of snack foods each year, she says. These foods generally do nothing for the state of our health.

Proper nutrition has been receiving increased attention in recent years as some medical research has indicated that many of the most common health problems, including heart disease, hypertension and even cancer, may be the result of poor diets. And that's not to mention the most prevalent western affliction of all obesity.

Shaffer urges all Nebraskans to take a good look at their eating habits—and the ones they're teaching their children.

Meals and snacks should be built upon milk and dairy products, meat and fish, fruits and vegetables and enriched or whole grain breads and cereals, she says. "Perhaps even more importantly, adds Mrs. Shaffer, diets should include a wide variety of these foods. A diet that includes lots of meat, but few vegetables or fruits is inadequate nutritionally, she says.

Along with proper eating habits, exercise is important to staying healthy, says Shaffer. Exercise need not be limited to calisthenics, walking, bicycling and swimming are some pleasant, effective ways to burn up calories and shape up bodies, she says.

Champions from Seven States Invade Rice for AIAW Tourney

Seven champion teams from Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Minnesota and the Dakotas will compete along with host team Wayne at the Region 4 AIAW Basketball Small College Tournament for women, March 10-12.

Seeded in order of their finish by state in last year's tournament, Mount Mercy College of Cedar Rapids, Ia., stands out on top matched with the Wildkittens for action at 9 p.m. Thursday.

Third ranked Fort Hays of Kansas will begin tournament action with a 1 p.m. game against South Dakota State University, also Thursday. Then action centers on number two seeded Missouri champions, the Tartan women, who will face North Dakota's victor, Minot, at 2 p.m.

Midland Lutheran College, the team who lured over Wayne for the Nebraska championship last Saturday, is seeded fourth scheduled to play St. Catherine's of Minneapolis, Minn. at 7 p.m.

Winners Thursday are scheduled for evening games Friday, the losers playing afternoon games that day. The Saturday schedule has a seventh place game at 1 p.m., fifth place at 3 p.m., third place at 5 p.m., and 7 p.m. for championship competition.

Only two points meant the difference between first and second place for the Wayne State Wildkittens Saturday. The women lost to Midland, 58-56 in a most-of-the-way trailing game for the Wildkittens.

Behind 32-28 at the half, the Wildkittens finally gained momentum in the final minutes, ahead by one point for nearly a minute. Midland contributed the final two points for the first place victory.

Under her usual 20 points per game average, Connie Kunzman sank 14 points for the Wildkittens followed by 10 points for Julie Brinkman and another 10 for a tired-up Ellie Studer.

Another usual point-maker for the Wildkittens, Pat McKay, sank under her usual number, making eight points for the Wildkittens and Lori Mittelstaed contributed six.

Kunzmann led in rebounds for the Wildkittens with 11 and Brinkman, the conference leader in assists, added four more to her high assist total.

The Wildkittens earlier defeated Peru Thursday, 82-63, and Kearney, 84-66, Friday, to place them in the finals Saturday.

The Wildkittens go into the Region 4 tournament with a 23-6 overall record. The women wrapped up the conference championship with a 13-1 record.

WS Cindermen Tie for Third At Wesleyan

"Picking up the scraps" pretty well summarizes what five visiting teams did at the Nebraska Wesleyan track Invitational Thursday. Host Wesleyan scored 140 points with firsts in 14 of 16 events.

Wayne State and Southeast Community College tied for third with 15 points, trailing Kearney State's 66 and ahead of Concordia, with 12, and Dana, 1.

Jerry Krueger and Dave McNeel earned Wayne's highest placings — both third as Krueger high jumped 6-2 and McNeel pole vaulted 13-6. Kevin Peter son also vaulted 13-6 but placed fifth on more attempts.

Merlin Lahm long jumped 20-11, for fourth, and Andy Myr-tue gained fourth with a 2:25.2 time in the 1,000 yard run. Wayne's mile relay was fourth at 3:39.1.

District Trial Ends for Devils

Logan View Ousts Wayne '5'

A tuned-up Hooper Logan View team Monday night made easy pickings of Wayne High in the semifinals of the Class B district boys tournament at Wayne State's Rice Auditorium.

With three players scoring in double figures, the Raiders walked to a 69-47 decision and a berth in the district finals against West Point Central Catholic at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Manigal and 6-7 Rob Schwab, who was second high for the Raiders with 20, each poured in 10 points in the first half. Logan View's big threat in the middle, 6-6 Wayne Westergaard, collected 17 points and a batch of rebounds as the taller Raiders dominated the boards.

the outside. Koll made six of 13 points in the first half and Ginn contributed eight of his 13 for a 24-16 Wayne lead.

No one scored in double figures for Cedar. Three players find high with six points, including Bill Wieseler, Mike Litz and Rick Wieseler.

Wayne was in the ball game for the first period, trailing 18-12 going into the second quarter. Logan View only had a four-point edge but a goal tending call against 6-5 Tim Koll put the invaders up by six at the buzzer.

The goal tending call apparently took a lot out of the locals after a long discussion with officials failed to change the score. Result: Wayne continued to fall behind, 34-22, at the half and 54-38 after three periods.

Defense was the name of the game for the Devils Saturday night as the locals held Harling-ton Cedar Catholic to 16 points in the first half and 12 in the last two quarters for a 41-28 win.

Wayne used a 2-1-2 zone defense to shut off the Trojans' in the middle, forcing them to shoot from the outside.

Meanwhile, Wayne balanced its scoring with 6-5 Tim Koll in the middle and Tom Ginn from

That goal tending call apparently took the wind out of Wayne's sails after the Blue Devils and their coaching staff unsuccessfully tried to convince officials that the ball went under the net, not through the hoop. Result: Wayne continued to fall behind, 34-22, at the half and 54-38 after three periods.

Logan View's three-prong attack was led by 6-3 senior Roger McManigal with 23 points. Mc-

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS: Sophomore, Gregg Lage of Winside finished one of his best years on Nebraska Wesleyan University's wrestling squad, when the 150-pounder last month was crowned the Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference champ.

The accomplishment that feat, Lage had to beat three-time NIAC champ Jerry Mins of Midland, 6-4, in the finals. Both Mins and Lage wrestled at 142 last year, but this season Lage picked up some valuable tips from his coach, Ron Backman, and a little bit of weight, which has made a big difference in Lage's style, Backman said.

"We've tried to cut him too much," the coach noted about Lage's weight last year. With the additional pounds and experience, the Winside High grad has gained more strength and has become more aggressive, the coach said.

Lage finished the year with a 12-1 record and for a two-year total, that makes his mark, 25-2-2.

Next two years hold a lot of promise for Gregg, according to Backman. Plans are to take him and several other top Plainsmen grapplers to the NCAA Division 3 tourney next year.

Gregg's outstanding season prompted Backman to quip that he'll be glad to take as "many of those Winside kids I can get" if they can wrestle like Gregg.

WAYNE'S Monte Lowe, who plays basketball for Mount Marty College in Yankton, may well be on the road to the NAIA nationals along with his team for the NAIA can get by Mount State High regional play.

The Lancers last week wrapped up the District 12 independent championship crown by beating Yankton, 61-57, then Monday night of this week topped Dakota Wesleyan, 83-68 in first round of regional play. Wednesday night Mount Marty 22-8 was scheduled to play at Minot, N.D. for a trip to the nationals at Kansas City.

Against Yankton, Lowe scored five points and against Wesleyan he has three.

In a special edition published by the college paper, The Moderator, Lowe is pictured in action along with five other teammates.

DENNIS PAUL, formerly of Wakefield, will make a return trip to Cedar Rapids High where he will be head coach for football for the second year and girls basketball.

Class B Coaches Will Direct '77 All-Star Tilts

Two Class B coaches—Bill Holliday of Aurora and Bob Kremke of Arlington—are the choices of the Nebraska Coaches Association to head the coaching staffs for the ninth year of All-Star High School Basketball, Holliday and Richard Ideus of Class D Shickley have been assigned the South team while Kremke will team with Sidney's Joe Foida, another Class B coach, to tutor the North, the Association said.

Holliday, the all-time leading high school scorer in a four-year varsity career at Wilsonville, in southwest Nebraska, is no stranger to success. Although the current Aurora squad is 8-9, the Huskies are defending Class B State champions.

Under Holliday, Aurora has built a 90-34 record including two state tournament qualifiers. His overall record is 153-60 with other coaching experience at Stamford, Theodore and Hebron.

Kremke has enjoyed success at whatever school he has coached. He opened his career at Weeping Water, compiling an 85-28 record in five years including the state Class C championship in 1961. In four years at Papillion, the Monarchs were 67-41. At Arlington, the Eagles are currently 12-5, adding to an impressive 62-16 under Kremke in his four years at that school.

The all-star games have been scheduled for Aug. 4 at Mid-Plains College in North Platte and Aug. 5 at the NU Sports Arena in Lincoln.

HEALTH TIP
Superfluous hair may be removed by a variety of effective ways. The Nebraska Medical Association urges a woman to consult a dermatologist who can recommend the best treatment without irritating results when she has excess facial hair she wishes removed.

Shaving is an effective, inexpensive, but temporary way of removing leg hair. As far as women are concerned, shaving is unsatisfactory for removing facial hair because a stubble shows after a day or two. However, hairs on the face and arms can be bleached with peroxide so that they are hardly noticeable.

Epilation (hair removal) on a large scale has been accomplished using hot wax, which is spread on the skin and allowed to harden. When remove rapidly, the wax takes the hair with it. This method is repeated every few weeks and is very uncomfortable. Chemical depilatories give similar results.

Electrolysis is a permanent way of removing hair. This process involves the insertion of a small needle into the hair follicle and the application a burning current to the hair roots so that it is completely destroyed. The Nebraska Medical Association says electrolysis can yield very good permanent results, but even the best technicians can miss one out of every five or six hair roots so that they will regrow.

WS Is Hosting 38 Teams - Vault Clinic

Wayne State will sponsor a clinic on pole vaulting March 19, at 10 a.m., with Pat Murphy, jump coach at Fremont High School, as clinician.

WS track coach LeRoy Simpson said all track and field coaches are invited to attend and bring their athletes along. High school athletes can attend, but only as spectators, because Nebraska School Activities Association rules prohibit participation in such events.

Wayne State vaulters will demonstrate, directed by Murphy.

The clinic will be run in Rice Gymnasium. There is no cost for attending.

3 Cat Grapplers Are Competing In NAIA Tourney

Three Wayne State wrestlers are up on the mountain top this weekend, competing in the NAIA national tournament at Eastern Washington State College, Cheney.

All champions of the NAIA district meet last Friday, the Wayne national contenders are Kiran, 158 pounder from Rutland, Ia.; Randy Humpl, 167, from Butte, and Dwight Lienemann, 177, from Winside.

All have national meet experience, but all lost first matches. Hanson and Lienemann last year and Humpl two years ago.

Lienemann takes the best Wildcat record into this tourney. He has won 31 matches, unbeaten at 177 pounds, and lost three, all at 190. Fifteen of those wins came on falls, tying his own all-time Wayne pin record, set last year as freshman. If he wins three more, he'll tie another Wayne record, 34 season victories, set by Jim Meyer two years ago.

Hanson, a junior, has 29-7 chart, with nine falls. Humpl, a senior, is 10-2, with three falls, after a late start following injury.

The trio hopes to keep alive a Wayne distinction of winning at least one national place - first to sixth - for the tenth straight year.

Dixon Drops 2 To City Teams

Both the girls and boys city recreation teams were victorious over host Dixon Tuesday night.

Kris Proeff sank eight markers and Terry Johnson and Stacy Marsh contributed six each to the victory. Also scoring were Jill Zeiss and Frances Praher with two each.

Dianne White led Dixon with eight points and Carmin Lubbersied had five.

Seventh and eighth grade boys battled Dixon to a 36-30 victory. Eighteen points and a host of rebounds by Perry Nelson led the locals to their first season victory. Perry poured in 10 points in the second half to pull his team out of a 10-10 halftime deadlock.

Contributing to the Wayne win were Jim Sperry with 8, Kevin Echlenkamp with 6 and Todd Pfeiffer with 4.

West Point Gals Headed for State

West Point girls earned themselves a ticket to the state high school girls tournament by defeating Crofton, 48-45, in a Class C regional game at Wayne High School, Thursday night.

The Cadettes trailed 25-23 at the half in a balanced scoring duel. The winners wiped out the deficit in the third period with the help of their leading scorer, Robin Scherer with 19 points, to take a 38-35 lead heading into the last stanza.

High-pointmaker for Crofton was Laurie Reilenrat with 18.

UNDERSTANDING FREE ENTERPRISE
By William T. Ylvisaker 1776

While the year 1776 sticks in most peoples' minds as the birthdate of the democratic system of government as we know it, few people know that another very important event took place the same year. It was in March, 1776, a few months before the Declaration of Independence was signed, that a book, called Wealth of Nations was published, written by Adam Smith, a very popular professor at the University of Glasgow in Scotland.

PRIVATE OWNERSHIP of property is a key principle of the free enterprise system.

Smith's book spelled out a system of economic organization based on three key principles: the right to private ownership of property, the need for the profit motive, and the rule of the marketplace. By rule of the marketplace we mean that the customer calls the tune in terms of what goods eventually are produced. These principles are at the heart of what we call our free enterprise system.

Q. How can I tell when I should use credit and when I should not?
A. A good question - and the answer may surprise you. You can only use credit safely when you are currently spending less than you take home. Remember, you have to keep on paying all those regular bills, plus making the monthly payments on the new credit.

You don't use credit just because you've spent all your cash. Credit is a budgeting tool, it isn't extra income. What credit can do is allow you to purchase something which costs too much to take out of any one paycheck, and spread the payments over several paychecks so you can handle it. That way you can get it when you need it and have the use of it while you pay for it. Don't forget, however, that credit costs money. You should always know exactly how much, and be sure having the thing now is worth what it costs.

HEALTH TIPS

HEALTH TIP
Overweight persons face greater health risks in respect to the major disorders besetting the American population, according to the Nebraska Medical Association.

Experience suggests increased danger to health through heart, circulatory, kidney and metabolic disorders as well as surgical and obstetrical complications.

Proper management of overweight requires a correct diagnosis plus an attempt to assess the specific individual cause of overweight. Emotional factors operate in every person, fat or not. There does not seem to be one single psychological problem peculiar to overweight persons. However, emotional factors may cause overweight or help maintain it through influence on diet habits.

A physician will try to help the overweight person manage his problem by establishing an energy balance in the individual with the right kind and right amount of body weight for that person.

The Nebraska Medical Association points out that emotional, physical, dietary and pharmaceutical factors all contribute to the conquering of overweight.

When the medical technologist pricks your finger taking a blood sample, a wide variety of information about you and your health is available.

Through a number of tests using your blood, the doctor can discover how many red and white blood cells and blood platelets the sample contains. He can determine how healthy the cells are and how much hemoglobin pigment is present to carry oxygen to the tissues.

The physician is interested in the proportion of various types of white cells. Before surgery, or after a heart attack, the clotting time of blood is most important.

Chemically, your blood reveals blood sugar content, cholesterol and other substances which give information about the body. Immunity reactions performed on the blood plasma can tell a physician about past diseases or the state of protection against currently common diseases.

The rate at which the red blood cells settle into a sediment gives the doctor useful clues about tissue injury and the progress of chronic disease processes.

The Nebraska Medical Association points out that there is a world of useful diagnostic information in just a few decanters of blood.

Fried Fish

For crisp, golden brown, appetizing appearance always use a heavy, iron skillet. This works well in the kitchen, over an open fire or on the backyard grill.

Heat fat, 1/2 inch deep, in heavy frying pan. Fry over medium heat until brown on one side. Carefully turn and brown other side. Fry about 10 minutes, depending on thickness, or until fish flakes easily with a fork and coating is crisp and golden brown. Drain on paper towels. Serve with tartar sauce or lemon butter. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Pot penalty hearings attract standing-room-only audience

CAPITOL NEWS

LINCOLN — Should the penalties for possessing small amounts of marijuana be softened or stiffened?

Two bills proposing opposite changes in Nebraska's statutes were outlined before the Legislature's Judiciary Committee recently.

Testimony for and against both measures was heard. But it was apparent that the majority of those attending the standing-room-only session favored Neiligh Sen. John DeCamp's proposal which would reduce the penalty for possessing an ounce or less of the weed to a fine not exceeding $100.

of up to $1,000. Venditte would also increase the punishment for having hard drugs. The Omaha lawmaker said he has found most of the Douglas County district judges seem to prefer DeCamp's bill. But he said he feels strongly about the need for his legislation and indicated he will offer it again, if it fails to win approval this year.

He said DeCamp's bill could lead to decriminalization of marijuana and added their appears to be a national movement aimed at that objective.

Lincoln police chief George Hansen, described by DeCamp as "the chief architect" of his bill, said his officers have been issuing citations for users of small amounts of marijuana and this has permitted more efficient utilization of Capital City policemen.

comparatively harmless drug. Venditte said he wanted to see copies of those study reports because he has read others, also prepared by experts, that contain different conclusions.

According to Fort, who said he was the major expert prosecution witness at the Charles Manson trial, the DeCamp bill is "the only alternative to legalization of marijuana."

Carpenter Returns
Former Sen. Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff has given the Legislature's Revenue Committee some advice. He told the committee, which handles most of the tax bills, that Nebraskans are getting restless because they are being taxed so heavily.

state operations. But he said numerous subdivisions of government have been established with the power to impose mill levies.

The former Scottsbluff lawmaker was critical of a bill which would provide for statewide real property valuation through a computerized system.

Rearings Requested
Three men whose death sentences were upheld by the Nebraska Supreme Court on Feb. 2 have asked the court for rearings.

and John Rust — by their attorneys. The requests argued the state's capital punishment law violates certain constitutional provisions and the court was mistaken when it ruled a jury does not have to be involved in the death sentence.

Bingo Bill
Fear was expressed during a recent hearing that a bingo bill before the Revenue Committee might open the way for organized crime to take over operations of the corn game in Nebraska.

reporting system which would require giving the state the name of each winner of each game and the amount won.

Most of the opponents represented churches and several opponents said. They said bingo was designed mainly for fun, especially for older persons, and is not used primarily as a money-raising activity.

Foreign, domestic boycotts compared

What's wrong with the boycott of Israel by some Arab states in the Middle East? Politics and religion aside, the problem is that a secondary boycott is involved. That is, the boycotting powers are not simply refusing to trade with Israel — which is their prerogative, they are also trying to prevent third parties from trading with Israel; third parties not included in the dispute.

I salute our legislators in their pursuit of principle. I hope, however, that they can find some way to resolve the problem without making life harder still for the hostages — American businesses trading overseas.

o eagerly considering legislation that would permit the construction trades unions to use a type of secondary boycott. What the unions want is the right to shut down an entire construction project when one union has a beef with one subcontractor. If the plumbers, for example, struck the plumbing contractor they could picket the site and keep out the employees of the electrical contractor, the mechanical contractor, the roofing contractor, the insulating contractor, etc.

shut down operations to force a nonunion contractor off the job, thus eliminating independent competition with union wage rates and work rules. — Most minority contractors are non-union. They would therefore suffer disproportionately. — Trades union wage rates — which are already among the highest in the nation — would go higher. Hourly wages now average $11.46 including fringes, and most of these people work a full year. — Not only would construction (housing) costs go up because of higher wage demands, but other costs would rise too. With added power, the unions could prevent the use of cost-saving techniques. The unions probably have the raw political power to get their common situs law enacted: raw power is necessary — they'd never make it on the merits of the case. — But might seldom makes right. — It will be interesting to watch your congressman handle these two issues. See if he votes to condemn international secondary boycotts as morally wrong, then votes to permit them domestically, as politically expedient. — Richard Lester, U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Potential great for energy conservation

With currently-known energy saving techniques, the potential exists for Nebraska farmers and ranchers to save nearly one-half on the volume of fuel which they consume annually in their agricultural production.

That's a startling statement and sure to meet with a lot of head-shaking on the part of farmers and ranchers who are battling the costs of production which are eating them out of house and farm. Fuel costs are going to continue to rise and one way they can hope to stay in the game is to find ways and means to get more efficiency out of the fuels they use.

ices by an individual could amount to 45 per cent more work on the fuel used in tractor operations, 50 per cent saving in fuel for irrigation and a 50 per cent savings in fuel for drying.

More help is on the way in this matter. In later January 1976, the Federal Energy Administration formally entered into a cooperative government contract with the governors of the states of Nebraska and Kansas for an 18-month, $300,000 project to develop a model voluntary statewide energy conservation program for farm production agriculture.

The agricultural engineering department of Kansas State and University of Nebraska have been working with 100 selected farmers (100 in each state) who have been keeping records of their fuel consumption and helping in the testing of many aspects of the model fuel conservation program. Results of this program will be coming available this year along with a program to make the information available to every farmer and rancher through demonstration and example. It is estimated that for every five cents invested in this type of energy conservation program, $1 in fuel savings will result, in other words a cost benefit ratio of 20 to 1.

That's not far fetched. It has been demonstrated countless times that the benefits from all agricultural research have paid off at a 10 to 1 ratio. While fuel was cheap and plentiful, there was a little incentive for strict conservation. Every farmer and rancher would readily agree that he can find ways to reduce this fuel use by reviewing this production operations.

By far the largest use of energy in Nebraska agriculture is for irrigation, which uses 38 per cent of farm energy consumption. Irrigation technology has steadily advanced and it has been demonstrated that by using present conservation methods, water use can in many instances be cut by 50 per cent without loss of production. Farmers for a generation and more in the North Platte Valley have observed, "We do our best job of irrigating and have raised our best crops in the years when we've been short on water."

Fuel conservation for the farmer means money he doesn't have to pay out, reason enough for him to become fully energy conscious. — M.M. Van Kirk, Farm Bureau Federation.

Farm accident total can be reduced

Last year in Nebraska, farm equipment was involved in 147 accidents. This accounted for five fatalities and 52 injuries.

Nationwide, the number of farm equipment accidents has dropped in recent years, probably due to better slow moving vehicle lighting, improved safety features on farm equipment, and greater public awareness of the hazards associated with slow moving vehicles. Much can be done to further reduce the number of farm equipment accidents, however. Farmers and ranchers who transport farm equipment on public roads have the greatest responsibility. The role of motorists and commercial vehicle operators play in the prevention of such mishaps, must not be overlooked.

Motorists should be on the lookout for the SMV emblem, which is visible under both day and night conditions. This emblem does not mean to stop, but to slow down. Motor vehicle operators should also be aware that new tractors may have turning lights. If a driver sees a tractor with blinking lights, and one light suddenly goes solid while the other keeps blinking, that means the tractor operator is going to turn in the direction of the blinking light. Drivers are reminded that safe driving requires alert and defensive driving tactics, even on familiar roads. Many farm vehicles are struck by neighbors who have violated defensive driving rules. — Nebraska Highway Safety Program.

OBSERVATIONS

Commission could be beneficial

State administrative Services director Stan Matzke announced Friday that a public hearing is scheduled on one of Governor Egan's bills to provide more physicians for rural Nebraska. The bill, LB 494, would create a commission on Rural Health Manpower. The hearing is scheduled for the Legislature's Public Health Committee at 2 p.m., Monday, at the State Capitol. The commission formed by LB 494 would investigate the reasons for Nebraska's rural physician shortage and make recommendations to alleviate the shortage.

ing, of course, the great demands made by their profession. The goal should be to come up with a solid, coordinated plan of action. The danger with commissions and committees is that they will produce studies and volumes of paper, but little else. If the health manpower commission does become a reality, it hopefully will avoid the pitfalls of the latter course. — Jim Strayer.

According to a Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) study, nearly half of all medical students who planned to devote their careers to patient care expressed an interest in practicing in medical manpower shortage areas. Of those, 72 per cent preferred a rural setting. The governor's plan for a rural health manpower commission could be beneficial if used properly. The shortage of doctors in rural Nebraska, while often viewed as a number of independent local problems depending on whether or not a particular community has a shortage, is in reality a state problem. Communities which need additional doctors should continue individual efforts to attract physicians. At the same time, however, an attempt at coordinating efforts can help ensure that the most beneficial use is derived from doctors who decide to establish a practice in rural Nebraska. A health manpower planning commission can be an effective tool if it is made of individuals who have been active in efforts to attract physicians and are familiar with the problems, and doctors already practicing in rural areas, realize

Low Moisture Content Dictates Planting Choice

Dryland farmers in Nebraska will have several planting alternatives when dealing with low subsoil moisture, according to Dr. Richard Wiese, extension agronomist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Wiese said lack of rainfall in September, the month when some soil moisture recharge takes place, has resulted in low to non-existent subsoil moisture, particularly in the eastern third of the state.

Wiese noted that even if normal rainfall of eight to 10 inches is received in May and June, it would be optimistic to expect that subsoil moisture will become recharged to a depth of three to five feet. Areas with drastically low subsoil moisture will require 12 to 18 inches of precipitation to fully recharge, and the chances for such rainfall were not favorable, he added.

Crops usually absorb water from the three to five foot depth during the moisture stress period occurring in the dry months of July and August.

because of reduced farm cash flow. He said farmers may use credit to the limit which banks will allow, although some growers have already reached their credit limit.

For growers without credit, Wiese recommends dispensing with all nutrient application except nitrogen. Reduction in nitrogen should be limited to 20 per cent of normal use, unless residual nitrate nitrogen in the soil is documented by a soil test program, he said.

Wiese predicts a hold-off of fertilizer purchases in non-irrigated areas until sidedress time. "May and June rains will return grower optimism and result in a big rush for fertilizer then. If this does in fact take place, fertilizer-nitrogen consumption may be reduced by five to 10 per cent," he said.

Wiese said he expects no reduction in nitrogen or phosphorus consumption in irrigated crops. He predicted cost-price squeezes to bring about possible reductions in secondary or trace nutrients to reduce production cost.

"In most cases the nutrients have not contributed to enhanced yields anyway," he said. "The cost price squeeze may very well have a good element in effecting a wiser fertilizer program."

Pigs under 21 days old are very susceptible to death from TGE. Precautionary measures are important to avoid a TGE outbreak in baby pigs. This is particularly important with colder weather when TGE is more prevalent.

Preventive measures including keeping baby pigs and breeding stock from other livestock, particularly newly purchased pigs. After pigs have recovered from a TGE outbreak, the TGE virus can be found in the digestive and respiratory tracts for up to four months.

Because the carrier state cannot be determined by testing, spread by carrier pigs that appear healthy is possible. Newly-purchased breeding and feeder swine should be kept away from the farrowing area. A much better plan is never to bring feeder pigs onto farm with farrowing sows.

Care should also be taken to avoid transporting the virus via manure on clothing, boots, trucks and other machinery. During the winter this type of spread can be significant.

matter and plant nutrients. An annual application of barnyard manure (400 to 600 pounds per 1,000 square feet) is recommended. Use one-half this amount of chicken or sheep manure.

The best time to apply manure is in the fall or winter. The use of manure will increase the supply of nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium available to plants. It also increases water holding capacity and improves the physical condition of the soil.

Windbreaks Need Improvement

Older windbreaks in Nebraska are in need of improvement work, according to district extension forester Gilbert Stuart.

The late 1930's saw thousands of miles of windbreak being planted in Nebraska. Most of these plantings contain short lived species, such as Siberian elm and boxelder, the forester explained. The life span of these species is 25-30 years and are in need of replacements.

Often windbreaks were planted on a very close spacing four feet in the row, to provide for mortality and establishing an effective windbreak at a young age. The original spacing is too close for mature trees. The rows need to be thinned to improve the vigor and effectiveness of the windbreak, Gilbert said. Insects and disease can often have a devastating effect on a windbreak. The Dutch elm disease has eliminated entire rows of American elm in some windbreaks. The tent caterpillar has taken its toll on American plum. Dead American elm rows should be replanted and the American plum should be sprayed to control the tent caterpillar.

Snow damage is severe in some windbreaks. Snow damaged trees with broken tops or limbs need to be correctly pruned to increase their usefulness. Older windbreaks have no evergreens and are ineffective in controlling snow drifting. Adding several rows of evergreen to the north or west sides of these windbreaks will improve the controlling of snow. Often rows are spaced too close to afford maximum growth to mature trees. Removing an entire row of a low vigor species will enhance the growth and effectiveness of the remaining trees. As an added bonus, the trees removed can be used on most farms as fuel wood, fence posts, or chipped up and used as livestock bedding.

Windbreaks are a valuable asset, Gilbert said, providing protection to soil, crops, animals and people by moderating the climate. According to research results, field windbreaks located properly will increase crop yields. Also feedlot windbreaks will increase weight gain of livestock during severe weather conditions.

Energy conservation is also an important part of windbreaks. A house that is protected on the north and west sides by a farmstead windbreak will realize a fuel savings of 25-30 per cent during an average winter. With proper management practices, windbreaks will provide everlasting protection on your farm.

Nebraska ASC Committeemen Lost Positions

Three members of the Nebraska State Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) Committee have received word of their termination.

Price support and storage management program specialist Harold C. Rademacher of the Nebraska State ASCS Office has been designated to act with full authority for the state committee until a new committee is appointed.

The three members of the Nebraska State ASC Committee terminated were: chairman Willard Heyne of Fremont and members Arlee Phillips of Hemingford and A. George Alexander of Deshler.

Heyne had served on the committee since April 19, 1973. He was appointed chairman of the committee in January 1976. Phillips was appointed to the committee March 27, 1975 and Alexander received his appointment March 31, 1976.

Rademacher, a native of Sherman county, started his ASCS career as an ASC County Committeeman in Sherman County, serving as chairman for ten years. He was an employee in the Sherman county ASCS Office for seven years, including three years as county executive director. His state office assignment, starting in April 1956, has been as storage management and price support program specialist.

Good Time to Prune Your Trees
Late in the dormant season is the best time to prune broadleaf yard trees. Always try to keep the natural shape of the tree. If a main limb must be removed, it should be cut back flush to the trunk, leaving no stub. The same principle should be used in removing secondary branches (they should be cut flush with the stem of the main branch).

Wounds larger than two inches in diameter should always be painted with regular tree wound paint or some other type of paint having an asphalt base which will not crack.

Topping is a very sloppy way of pruning trees. It accomplishes nothing other than spoiling the appearance and shortening the life of your tree.

Climatologist: Drought Cycle Should Phase Out

The current drought cycle in the midwest should be starting to phase out, according to Dr. Robert Shaw, professor of agricultural climatology at Iowa State University.

"The relation between our weather and sunspots shows that there should be a drought about every 20-22 years," Shaw said. The solar cycle indicated that there would be a drought in Nebraska in the mid-1970's, and while the cycle did not indicate an exact year, Shaw said he thinks the current dry spell might "hang around another year or two, but gradually phase out."

Shaw said the drought that struck Nebraska in the mid-1930's was more widespread. "That drought went north to Canada," he said, and the current one may move that direction as well.

As for the prospects for rain, Shaw says, it appears that the midwest has a "59 per cent chance of having just below normal summer rainfall following a winter like we've had." This is not a prediction, he points out, but a guess based upon historical tendencies.

"Historically," Shaw said, "very dry summers have not followed winters like this." Additionally, it is rare to have two weather years of the same type in a row, such as two hot or two dry.

When asked about cloud seeding to encourage rainfall, the agricultural climatologist said that "it may be effective in mountainous areas, but there have been no projects that prove cloud seeding would be effective in the plains areas." He added that for cloud seeding to work, the right weather conditions must be available.

either way, we'd like to talk with you about your financial needs.

Area Students Win Regents' Scholarships

One hundred and ninety-two Nebraska high school students will be offered one-year Regents' Scholarships to attend the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.
 Area students who have won the award and their hometowns are: Bradley J. Brown, Alton; Keith A. Knudsen, Laurel; Diane M. Minola, Wakefield; and Terry P. Lessmann, Wayne.
 The students were selected primarily on the basis of their scores on the American College Testing (ACT) tests, with distribution among the state's 250 high schools also considered.

Insecticide Recommendations Unchanged

Farmers will see few changes in the new 1977 insecticide recommendations for combating corn rootworm larvae in corn according to John Witkowski, extension entomologist at the Northeast Station near Crookston.
 According to manufacturers' reports, supplies seem to be adequate, excepting Counter and, Dasanit might be in short supply in some areas, Witkowski said.
 Test evaluations conducted in 1976 indicated all registered planting-time rootworm insecticides performed satisfactorily with Counter, Furadan, and Dyfonate giving the most consistent root protection. In some fields having a history of continuous Furadan usage, root damage was reported as heavy where Furadan was again used in 1976. Farmers faced with the latter situation with Furadan or any other compound, should rotate to another registered rootworm insecticide, according to the entomologist.

Wakefield Man Escapes Injury

An 18-year-old Wakefield man was treated and released from Providence Medical Center early Saturday morning following a one-vehicle accident on a county road shortly after midnight.

Wes Lueth was traveling in a pickup operated by Dallas Breitbarth, also of Wakefield, when the driver lost control of his truck and skidded into a ditch about two miles north and three and a half miles east of Wayne. The pickup sustained extensive front end damage.

the corn rootworm larvae is again high in 1977. Witkowski advises producers to tailor the treatment method to individual fields and rotate with other crops where feasible.
 Witkowski said one of the biggest reasons for poor rootworm insecticide performance is applying the material too early. Insecticides applied at planting time in April and very early in May may break down or otherwise dissipate before needed in June. In Northeast Nebraska, rootworm eggs hatch and larvae begin to feed usually in mid-June. Tailoring the treatment to individual fields means treating early planted fields at cultivation, sometime before June 10, and using a planting time treatment in fields planted to corn after the first week in May.

 Witkowski also warns growers to expect greater than normal larvae feeding in those fields planted or maturing late, the year before or in those fields having severe weed problems last year. This is because adult rootworm beetles are pollen feeders, and just about anything that pollinates will attract them. Top management in this instance, would dictate either rotating to a different crop, planting later in combination with a later treatment or planting early and then treating at cultivation time in late May or early June.

 Two additionally important reasons for poor rootworm performance are improper calibration and under dosage of the insecticide. "Always calibrate," Witkowski advises.

Yield Not Only Reason For Choosing Oat Type

Oats is a major crop of Nebraska, but too often farmers choose their oats on the basis of yield only.

A home of your own is still your best INVESTMENT!

COLUMBUS FEDERAL can help you buy it.

If you were to seek advice to buy your next home now, or wait for "better" financial conditions. Chances are most people would tell you "buy now."

There are several reasons. For one thing rates are not expected to drop significantly in the foreseeable future. Those who wait may find the home they want has increased in cost several thousands of dollars . . . or because totally out of range. (Over the last several years, local real estate prices have increased more than twice the rate of inflation.)

Then, too, when you pay on a mortgage, the portion of the principle you pay each month (amortization) increases your equity!

Uncle Sam assists in home ownership, by allowing an income tax deduction for interest paid on home mortgages, as well as real estate taxes. And if you buy your home now—any increase in value will become your equity!

It's an established fact that home owners have hundreds of dollars more per year to spend or SAVE than the renter earning the same income with the same size family.

So while the cost of money in today's market is an important point to consider, it is far outweighed by the many advantages of owning your own home.

Right now, COLUMBUS FEDERAL has plenty of mortgage money available. We invite you to visit with us. Our Loan Officers will be happy to see you.
