SPEAKING OF FOODS

Dietary Fiber Not a Cure-All Warns UN-L Food Specialist

Consumers, who for years have heard about proteins, sugars, starches, fats, vitamins and minerals, are now being told they need fiber in their diet, too. If they want to be healthy, fiber is the key.

Advocates of fiber say it can help prevent cancer, heart disease and a variety of other ailments, in addition to making persons more healthy. Skeptics say it's all an advertising gimmick with no hard evidence that dietary fiber is related to heart disease or cancer.

Teresa Shaffer, Extension food and nutrition specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, says the truth probably lies somewhere in between. A well-balanced diet which includes a wide variety of foods will provide all the nutrition, including fiber, that a normally healthy person needs, she says.

Fiber in our diet comes largely from cereals, fruits and vegetables, says Shaffer. Specifically, fiber is the plant food, or roughage that is not digested. Leaves, flowers, seeds, fruits, stems, roots, bulbs and tubers are all the different parts of plants that are fiber sources.

Colon rectal cancer is only one of the diseases thought to follow the low fiber diet. Others include diverticular disease, appendicitis, cardiovascular (heart) disease, diabetes, gallstones, varicose veins, hemorrhoids and the most rampant of all Western illnesses — obesity.

Fiber provides no nourishment to speak of, but there is a correlation between the amount of fiber consumed and healthy elimination. Fiber appears to influence the length of time required for food to pass through the digestive system and the amount of moisture retained in the digestive tract.

Over a period of time, Shaffer says a certain amount of fiber is necessary for normal nutrition. Just how much, however, is not certain.

Some scientists have observed that there is a lower incidence of certain diseases in developing countries, such as Africa, where large amounts of fibers are eaten. On the other hand, in highly developed western countries, where consumption of dietary fiber has declined, incidence of these diseases is much higher.

Of course, says Shaffer, many other environmental and diet differences between developed and underdeveloped countries exist. The cause of varying incidences of these diseases. The relationship of dietary fiber to heart disease, cancer of the colon and other diseases has not yet been proven, and scientists say that it could take up to 30 years to find out for certain.

Shaffer points out that persons who don't eat very much fiber generally do eat a great deal of fat, and vice versa. "There seems to be a tradeoff between more fiber and less fat," she says.

This, as well as low intakes of fiber, could be the reason for higher incidence of certain diseases in western countries.

It's already known that Americans should, for the sake of their hearts, cut down on saturated fats and cholesterol. In addition, foods that Americans eat in quantity, such as meat, dairy products and sugar have virtually no fiber.

"If we eat a well-balanced diet, we'll not only have no fiber problem, but we'll also be getting other important nutrients from those foods that we've known about all along," says Shaffer.

If any changes should be made in America's eating habits, she adds, it should be to eliminate the empty-calorie foods. "People who do this generally end up eating more foods that contain fiber, anyway," she says.

"Whole grain bread is fine if people want to eat it," says the food specialist, "but refined white bread isn't as bad as people make it out to be. It's not a useless source of nutrients."

Processing of foods such as refined white bread do take some fiber out of the diet, says the specialist, but not enough is known yet about how to test fiber content in the system to draw any definite conclusions.

Some processing simply changes the form of fiber in foods, she says. It's not necessarily true that raw vegetables are a better source of fiber than canned vegetables, she says.

The main rule to follow when considering fiber or any other part of the diet, Shaffer adds, is to use common sense. A diet which includes a wide variety of meat, vegetables, fruit, cereals and dairy products will provide all the nutrients and fiber needed, she says.

4-H Outreachers to Sing At Family Night in Allen

The 4-H Outreachers, a singing group from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, will be featured at a family night program at the Allen Consolidated School on Friday, March 18, at 8 p.m. Entire families as well as the general public are invited to attend the program. There will be no admission charge. A free will offering will be taken to help defray the group's traveling expenses.

Students in the group are all former 4-H members who like to sing and who volunteer their time to be ambassadors for 4-H across the state.

The 45 voices are led and directed by Steve Johnson of Hastings and Monti Griswold of Ogallala, both UN-L students. The group sings mainly country and folk music, accompanied by guitar and banjo.

Twenty-five to 30 singers are expected to be present for the performance in Allen. Among the group's members is Jeff Creamer, son of Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Creamer of Concord.

The family night program is being arranged by six Dixon County Home Extension Clubs as part of the statewide program to emphasize the enrichment of family relationships.

Women in charge of program arrangements are Mrs. LeRoy Koch, Dixon County Home Extension Council chairman; Mrs. Duane Koester, county family life leader; Mrs. LeRoy Creamer, president of the Artemis Club, and Anna Marie Kreitels, area home extension agent at the University of Nebraska-Northeast Station, near Concord.

This Top '5' Has Scoring Punch

By BOB BARTLETT

Credit for Lori Erwin's smooth ball handling, sharp shooting and all-around good play, doesn't go to just one coach, but to two mentors who are coaching her all year long.

Besides getting playing tips from Allen High School head man Steve McManigal during the season, the 5-10 senior also gets some valuable advice from another man who knows the sport — her father.

Lori, who is one of five area girls named to the first-ever Wayne Herald All-Area girls basketball team, says her father, Gary of Concord is the main reason she developed interest in the sport way back when she was in sixth grade.

Her father played ball for Concord while in high school and for Morningside College in Sioux City. That background, Lori added, is the reason the whole family of four girls is showing such a keen interest in the cage sport.

Working out on the family's concrete court several hours a day during the summer and continuing the work schedule at school has developed the 16-year-old into one of the top scorers in the state.

A prime candidate for all-state honors, Lori averaged 23 points a game and 13.3 rebounds while she led her team to a 17-3 record.

Said coach McManigal of Lori's Play: She shot 55 per cent from the field for the year, held the team together while under pressure and did a fine job under the boards.

Those same kind of characteristics are present in four other members of the top area quint, nominated by coaches from the five area schools and selected by the Herald's sport staff.

Also on the top five-member team are 5-11 junior Sydney Mosley of Wayne High, 5-8 junior Cheryl Abbs of Laurel, 5-5 senior Mary Kober of Wakefield and 5-10 junior Paula Hoemann of Winslow.

Of those four, Hoemann is the top pointmaker with a 16-point per game average. Abbs is right behind at 13 points a game followed by Mosley at 10 and Kober at eight points.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hoemann of Hoskins, Paula was the sparkplug both offensively and defensively for coach Kathy O'Connor's Wildcats.

On the boards, she averaged almost 11 rebounds a game.

Defense was a basic part of Abbs' season which helped to turn the Bears' game into a respectable finish, coach Ev Jensen pointed out. She averaged 10 caroms a game and got the ball down court for the setup. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Louis Abbs of Dixon.

Mosley provided the needed height for coach Curt Frey's Blue Devils who turned a slumping season into winning year.

The turnaround for Wayne came in the Stanton tournament where the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Mosley of Wayne scored 20 points to lead the Devils past the Mustangs for the tournament title.

About Kober, coach Jackie Underwood made it clear that Mary is "the best team leader we have. She has excellent ball control, is a team leader and consistent scorer." Kober is the daughter of Mrs. Lillian Kober of Wakefield.

Wildkittens Take on Top-Seeded Mt. Mercy Tonight

Coaches Agree 'It's Anybody's Tournament'

By WENDY HEDQUIST

Wayne State College

Eight coaches are quick to admit that "it's anybody's tournament" referring to the A.L.A.W. Region Six Tournament scheduled at Wayne State today (Thursday) through Saturday.

And their prediction seems justifiable considering the contenders are not just good, but the best in seven different states.

The tournament promises more than the usual excitement for top-notch players in championship competition. And inspiring stakes should urge more determined play as the winner qualifies for national competition in sunny California.

The eight teams will play a game a day with games scheduled for 1 p.m., 3 p.m., 7 p.m., and 9 p.m. today, Friday and Saturday.

Host Wayne will have a chance to eye the others prior to their game against Mt. Mercy College of Cedar Rapids, Ia. The Wildkittens, winners of the Central States Intercollegiate Conference crown and second in the state, will play the Iowa champs at 9 p.m. tonight.

Wayne may just have the edge over Mount Mercy since their equivalent to Connie Kunzmann, Ann Dolan, who averages 20.5 points per game, is recuperating from injuries. But other high contributors, 5-11 sophomore Mary Kay Stepanek, who averages 17 points per game, and Mary Forret, with 11 are on the starting list with sophomores Anne Dale and Maria Meyer and freshman Theresa Dolan.

South Dakota's top team, South Dakota State University, at 1 p.m. today. Little is known about the South Dakota champs, but Fort Hays sports an 18-8 season record and a player who ranks second in scoring in the CSIS.

Janna Choltz, a junior guard, who averages 17.2 points a contest, will present a challenge to the South Dakota women along with next-in-line Deb Robinson with 14.3, who also leads the Tigerettes in rebounding.

Other Fort Hays point-makers to keep an eye on include Sheri Paersall and Brenda Cahoj,

Devaney to Speak at AH Banquet

University of Nebraska-Lincoln athletic director Bob Devaney will be the guest speaker at the Allen High School athletic banquet Thursday night, March 17, at the high school auditorium.

Tickets are on sale for $2.50 per person for the 6:30 p.m. dinner and may be purchased from members of the A Club. Deadline to buy tickets is Monday.

Latter awards will be presented to athletes who earned them in the fall and winter sports. Spring sports awards and the Athletes of the Year honors will be presented later during the school year.

WHEN Jill Stenwall sets out to do something, she gets the job done, make no bones about it. Example: During the opener of women's track at Kearney State recently, the freshman heaved the shot putt 45-3 1/2 feet to not only win her event, but also set a new school record, with a college letter and, on top of that, earn a ticket to the national meet in May.

With all those good things going for her, you'd think the young Winslow lass would let them go to her head. Not Jill. Her next meet against Northern Colorado she threw the steel ball 46-2 1/2. She topped that mark Saturday with a toss of 47-2 1/2 against Kansas State.

Jill's best at Winslow was 45 11 — which also is the state record in high school girls sports. Not on the records is the loss of 49-3 she made last summer at the Bicentennial meet in Norfolk.

That loss of 49-3 may sound a little deceiving. In high school, the shot putt weighs eight pounds, but in college, the steel ball weight four kilos, or 8.13 pounds.

THAT TRIP to the nationals at UCLA in California won't be coming up until May 19. Meanwhile, Jill will be turning up for Kearney's Invitational, March 19, which is expected to include some stiff competition for Jill. Right now there's a girl from Emporia State in Kansas who has thrown the ball at least 50 feet.

STILL WAITING for the results of Wayne keeper Don Coughlin's try at a recent pro-am tournament in Las Vegas. Coughlin, who used to carry some hefty 200 averages while bowling in Omaha, wouldn't say how he fared. Only comment: Not too good.

MONEY AND time are the roadblocks now hindering an area basketball team from playing in the AAU regionals at Indianapolis, Ia. this weekend.

The five-man team of George Schroeder, John Redmond, Tom, Rob and Steve Erwin, placed second during a district meet at Odeli where the quint lost to Bankers Life of Lincoln. However, the top two teams are eligible to play in the regionals.

The problems the group is encountering is the loss of their sponsor and conflicting working schedules.

Lidie's 30 Points Not Enough to Aid His Club to Win

In an one-on-one scoring battle Monday night, Mike Lidie of Team 4 outgunned Jack Froehlich of Team 7, 31 points to 27, in a League recreation ball at the city auditorium.

Lidie's points, however, weren't enough to lead his team to victory as Team 7 prevailed by four, 74-70. Lidie popped in 12 points in the second quarter to give his team a 37-35 lead. Froehlich came back by scoring eight points in the last two quarters for a 65 all ball game and send the game into overtime. Froehlich again was instrumental, sinking a basket and converting two of four charity tosses for the win.

In other action, Mike Loofe scored 17 points and Don Larson added 15 as Team 1 downed Team 3, 63-55. Team 5 chalked up its fourth win with a 63-59 decision over Team 6 in the final game of the night.

In the standings, Team 3 is in first place with a 7-3 record followed by Teams 1 and 4 with 6-4 records, Team 6 at 5-5, Teams 2 and 5 with 4-6 records and Team 7 at 3-7.

Monday night's schedule: at 7, Team 6 versus 4; at 8, 7 versus 3, and at 9, 1 versus 2.

Moving can be very troublesome. Especially when you're out to settle the wilderness. The roads were terrible. No restaurants along the way. Why the trip itself took months. But, if you were willing, the government would give you land. Land that was bought and paid for with money raised from Americans taking stock in their country. So thousands had a little land in every homestead. Today, millions of Americans are still taking stock in their country by buying U.S. Savings Bonds. Because whether you purchase Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan at work or through the Bond-a-Month Plan where you bank, you're putting your money where it counts the most. For you and for your country. So buy U.S. Savings Bonds. They'll put your savings on the right road.

Camping Season Will Be Extended At State Parks

The camping season at state park areas with modern facilities will be extended into October on an experimental basis this year, according to Gene Mahoney, director of the Game and Parks Commission. "People have been asking that our modern campgrounds stay open into the fall, and we want to try to accommodate them," Mahoney noted. "However, whether this type of schedule becomes permanent depends on a couple of factors. Financing remains a problem, and we will be doing some severe belt-tightening to handle the added costs the season extension entails. Secondly, usage will help us determine whether the longer season should be continued in the future. If a reasonable number of people do not take advantage of the late season, we will probably revert to the old schedule," he said. Timetable for the modern camping facilities will be May 14 through Sept. 3. Areas involved include: Chadron, Fort Robinson, Ponca and Niobrara state parks; Mormon Island and Windmill state wayside areas; Fremont Lakes, Johnson Lake, Two Rivers, Kearney County Lake, Lake Ogalala, Louisville and Victoria Springs state recreation areas. Primitive camping will be permitted at all areas year-round, as usual. Cabins at the state parks and Victoria Springs will be open from May 14 through Sept. 17. Swimming pools will operate from June 4 through Sept. 5.

Now There's an Honest Hunter

A pleasant surprise arrived in the morning mail recently at the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission headquarters. Accompanying a letter of apology was $26 to cover the cost of a 1976 nonresident hunting permit and Upland Game Bird Stamp. The sender had hunted for two days in Nebraska last year without a permit and wanted to pay his just debt. His letter states, in part: "I hunted with a friend but was unable to purchase a license, because I did not have the money then and wanted to hunt very badly. I realized I was hunting illegally and now have a desire to straighten out that account. Had I had the money, I would have bought the

Here's why your gas bill is so high.

A far colder winter than last.

Increased rates.

This winter was the coldest in many years — an average of 35% colder than last year. And, there have been recent increases in gas rates... increases made necessary primarily by hikes in the price we pay for gas. The combination of these two things made your gas bill much higher than you probably expected.

We can't do anything about the weather, but we're doing things to keep your rates as low as possible. And, we want you to know about them.

So, we'll be telling you in a series of ads in this paper... You'll see how we at Peoples are cutting costs without cutting our quality of service. You'll see how you can do the same thing in your own home. And finally, you'll see what the energy prospects are for the future.

Watch for these ads and read them. They're being run as a service of Peoples Natural Gas in an effort to keep our customers informed.

We're trying to help.

Allen Student Qualifies For State FFA Contest

One Allen High school student qualified for state competition as the result of his performance Tuesday in the District 3 Future Farmers of American vocational-agriculture contest at Allen. Richard Stewart placed third in welding competition, winning a blue ribbon and earning a ticket to the state FFA contest in Lincoln March 31-April 2.

Randy Sullivan placed fifth in the welding contest, also winning a blue ribbon. Sullivan's placing also qualified him for the state contest but schools can enter only one student in each event. Stewart will represent Allen High.

Gary Brownell and Lin Smith teamed up to place fourth in the tractor maintenance contest and win a purple ribbon. Brownell won a blue ribbon in the individual competition and Smith won a white ribbon.

Both Allen High teams won red ribbons in the national farm mechanics contest. Jack Warner, Rick Smith and Monte Roeber comprised one team; Don Bock, Bryce Chapman and Jerry Stewart the other.

Mark Creamer and Bill Chase won a white ribbon in the farm wiring team event. Both students won red ribbons in individual wiring competition.

About 200 students from 27 high schools participated in the day-long event which began at 9 a.m. and ended at 2:30 p.m.

Schools entered in the competition in addition to Allen were Blair, Clarkson, Emerson, Hubbard, Hooper-Logan View, Howells, Leigh, Lyons, North Bend, Oakland-Craig, Pender, Schuyler, Scribner, Stanton, Tekamah-Herman, West Point and Wisner-Pilger.

SPARKS FLYING from a welding project by a FFA contestant bounce off a face mask during Tuesday's competition at Allen High School. Altogether there were six different divisions students from 17 chapters took part in during the district meet. One student from Lyons surveys as a part of the farm management division while others sample milk and cheese as a part of the milk foods portion of the contest. For others, there are the tedious moments spent on written exams.

Thought for Today
 By Brian McBride

"A gentleman is one who never hurts anyone's feelings unintentionally..."
 Oliver Herford

Only rarely does anyone deliberately set out to hurt another person's feelings. People who do are often left with no one who will associate with them and are thus deprived of victims. The bruised egos and hurt feelings that occur so often are the result of unthinking remarks, which are just as capable of hurting as those which are planned.

Gentle people, men and women, give some thought to what they say before they say it. When their comment might hurt feelings, they leave it unsaid.

When tragedy strikes, your first call should be to us. We can advise you and relieve you of many of the details which must be handled promptly.

Students Will Present Recitals

Two Wayne State music students will present their Senior Music Recital, Tuesday in Ramsey Theatre at Wayne State College.

Alan Sipes of Osceola and Roslyp Nyquist of Millard will perform at 8 p.m. The public is invited to attend the recital and the reception following.

Featured in a vocal performance, Miss Nyquist will sing Italian, German, and English pieces. Highlighting her performance will be "Le Nozze di Figaro" or "The Marriage of Figaro," an Italian piece by Mozart from the aria "Porgi, Amor, Qualche Ristoro."

Also included will be four early English numbers by Henry Purcell, three German lieder and three contemporary sacred numbers.

Jana Rutledge of Wayne will serve as piano accompanist.

Featured on percussion instruments, Sipes will perform one multi-percussion solo entitled "Spanish Dance" using two timpani, a xylophone, snare drum, tamborine, suspended cymbal and castanets. Two snare drum solos will also be included in his performance plus a vibraphone solo and marimba and flute duet with Sue Hogan of Kearney.

The highlight of Sipes' selections should be "Sonata for Timpani," a work for four timpani in three movements.

Both 56-hour music majors at Wayne State, Miss Nyquist carries a vocal major, piano minor and a kindergarten through 12 instrumental teaching endorsement. An instrumental major with a percussion concentration, Sipes also carries a second concentration in trumpet.

Unicameral Public Works Chairman Takes a Look at Water Lobby

By DAN LOOKER
Center for Rural Affairs, Watfall

At a recent Public Works Committee hearing on water bills, a woman speaking for the Izaak Walton League suggested that the state result in water use in Nebraska because local authorities might be easily swayed by pressure groups.

Sen. Maurice Kremer smiled and leaned toward the microphone on the committee chairman's table. "Don't be too sure we're immune from it either," he said in soft, low voice that vocalizes the legislator's calm style of conducting hearings.

Kremer's remark was an understatement. A host of interest groups have a stake in Nebraska's rich but dwindling water supply and they've been actively selecting their interests in the Unicameral.

Early one morning, before most other senators arrive at the Statehouse, the 60-year-old farmer found time in his crowded schedule to talk about those interest groups. It wasn't a gripe session. Instead Kremer listed groups he considers valuable resources because of their knowledge of water issues.

A number have offered to help write legislation governing water use, he said.

Those include the University of Nebraska, the Game and Parks Commission, most major farm organizations, the Nebraska Water Resources Association, the Nebraska State Irrigation Association, and the Nebraska Association of Resources Districts.

Others which have "expressed interest" in water laws include Nebraskans for Progressive Agriculture, the League of Women Voters, the Ag 40 Group, the Sierra Club, the National Audubon Society, the Nebraska Wildlife Federation, the Izaak Walton League, the number of irrigation districts and power districts, some Nebraska cities, and the Rural Electric Association.

Though many of those names have popped up in press accounts of the legislative session, not all are well understood. Who are those groups? Who do they represent? What are their interests?

The most influential may be the Nebraska Water Resources Association (NWRA). Its 1,500 members represent nearly every irrigation in the state in water. Irrigation equipment manufacturers such as Valmont Industries, Lindsay Manufacturing Company and Western Land Roller Company, a fourth of the state's banks including Lincoln's National Bank of Commerce, the Central Nebraska Public Power and Irrigation District, chambers of commerce, several University of Nebraska water specialists, agribusinessmen such as Jay Cooper, owner of Cooper (Ted) Company, and farmers and ranchers who irrigate their land.

It turns out that most of the groups Kremer mentioned are tied to its umbrella organization. Kremer himself is a member. Environmentalists are the only major interest left out of NWRA, and the organization's lobbyist and executive director, Pat Palitz says she's been trying to recruit a few of them, too.

That may prove difficult, because NWRA supports building more dams and irrigation projects, including the Norden Dam on the Niobrara River. Environmentalists oppose that and most proposed large reservoirs, favoring small farm ponds and watershed projects as an alternative means of storing water. NWRA also supports limited diversion of water from one river basin to another, public dedication of ground water instead of private ownership, and merging riparian rights to stream water (those which go with ownership of land) with appropriations system requiring permits to use stream water for irrigation. At recent hearings on water bills, NWRA lobbyist Palitz has been urging the Public Works committee to hold up those bills, study them, and come up with a comprehensive package of legislation next year.

NWRA is an outgrowth of the Nebraska Reclamation Association, organized in 1949 to promote Bureau of Reclamation projects. It expanded its role in 1971 to include agribusiness and groundwater irrigation interests and adopted its present name. The group is closely tied to the Nebraska State Irrigation Association, an 85-year-old organization that has traditionally represented the interests of farmers using surface irrigation in central and western Nebraska. According to Palitz and other NWRA members, the two groups plan their lobbying efforts together, along with a third organization, the Nebraska Association of Resources Districts. It represents Nebraska's 24 Natural Resources Districts — locally elected units of government formed in 1972 out of the state's soil and water conservation districts. All three lobbying groups share the same Lincoln office and it was they who helped the Public Works Committee write the Ground Water Management Act of 1975. It's the only law that deals with potential shortages of ground water, giving local Natural Resource Districts last resort authority to limit pump irrigation.

Those three groups may be the most powerful. Here's a brief summary of the make-up and interest of some others:

—Nebraskans for Progressive Agriculture is a group of about 150 agribusinessmen who have lobbied against bills that would limit "Corporate Farming." Glenn LeDoy, who owns an Omaha farm management company, is the group's president. He met with Kremer once this year to tell him he favors good management of water but doesn't want to stop irrigation development. LeDoy says he favors giving the Ground Water Management Act more time to prove its effectiveness.

—The League of Women Voters has 700 members in Omaha, Lincoln and the larger cities of central Nebraska. It favors laws recognizing that the public has an interest in how water is used and it wants the state to guarantee that some water will be left flowing in streams. The group's water specialist, Alice Hamilton of Omaha, agrees there may be a need to study bills more, but her personal worry is "that we'll get so much irrigation use and lower the ground water table so much that farming isn't a viable thing in this state."

—The Sierra Club, the National Audubon Society, the Nebraska Wildlife Federation, and the Izaak Walton League all have a common interest in conserving water and in a law that would maintain some water in streams for wildlife, wetland, livestock and recharging the ground water supplies which feed city wells for Omaha, Lincoln, Fremont, Columbus and other cities.

Lincolnite Corinne Bowen heads the 1,700-member Wildlife Federation and is an articulate voice for that viewpoint. She recognizes the complex job facing the legislature, but she feels postponing more irrigation development is as urgent as the need to study water legislation another year. "Otherwise it's an excuse for apathy, indifference and mismanagement," she says.

So far, Bowen's arguments have not prevailed. Instead, Sen. Kremer's position seems more in line with that of groups urging more study of water problems. During the interview about water lobbyists he said little water legislation would come out of the Unicameral this year. Last week he told an Associated Press reporter that he favored adopting "one major code, and no piecemeal legislation."

Russell also questioned the need of AM radio in the one-ton truck. Street commissioner Vern Schuit said the radios relieve boredom when workers put in up to 16 hours a day clearing snow. "If we don't get it (radio) we'll put it in. The men want them and will donate for them if they have to."

Specifications for the truck were approved as submitted.

"Some people think Nebraska is 'Clovville' or 'Cornville', that there are four head of cattle to every person," joked Paul Andreas, Wayne State College recently referring to "some people's" opinions of Nebraska history.

But to Andreas, Nebraska history is a fascinating and never-ending area of interest. "Nebraska history will keep you alive for the rest of your life", Andreas said.

The Omaha Westside instructor, who has researched Nebraska history extensively, made these comments recently at the WSC Conference on Nebraska History.

The two-day event focused on several aspects of Nebraska history as papers were presented by history buffs from throughout the Midwest.

More than 500 people attended the sessions Friday and Saturday, soaking in a wealth of information about Nebraska. "Black Heritage," "Women in Nebraska's History," political statistics, and more.

A particularly exuberant speaker, Andreas (who claims to be the number two authority on Nebraska history) spoke on a now extinct part of Nebraska's history, important in the history of Nebraska's commerce and trade — the steamboat.

"Once An Eagle," was presented by Mrs. Zach Boughn. A farewell gift was presented to Rev. and Mrs. Potter.

Sunday Supper

The Vance Pfanz family, Sioux City, Henry Ulrich and Cecelia Wintz were Sunday supper guests in the Fred Pfanz home.

More than 450 steamboats were sunk in the Missouri River since 1864 noted Andreas in his presentation entitled "Steamboat History of Nebraska." That total chiseled down showed 193 of these sunk by snags, 26 by ice, 25 by fire, rocks, bridges, explosions, sandbars and even one tornado accounting for other shipwrecks.

In a slide presentation the historian traced the steamboat's history in Nebraska, noting that only 12 years after the steamboat's invention in 1807, steamers were frequent travelers on the Mighty Mo.

And throughout his presentation he mentioned not only famous boats but famous names like Peter Sarpy, Lewis and Clark, Steven Long, Pike — people who traveled and settled Nebraska.

He mentioned the great Russells, Majors and Waddell Freighting Company once located in Nebraska City, a company requiring 40,000 oxen and 18,000 mules, which also operated the famous "Pony Express." He mentioned J. Sterling Morton, founder of Arbor Day, who once made a fortune selling dried apples to Indians.

Drain and mix with rest of ingredients. Put large square of cheese cloth into bowl about size of original head of cabbage. Line with saved cabbage leaves. Pack cooked mixture firmly into leaves, reforming head of cabbage. Gather ends of cheese cloth together and tie firmly at top. Put into deep pot of boiling water with an old sauce dish in bottom of pot to keep bottom of cabbage ball round. Cook, uncovered, about 45 minutes. Senators beginning huge talk of revising state criminal code

CAPITOL NEWS
LINCOLN — Nebraska's lawmakers have made a small start on what promises to be a huge task — rewriting the state's criminal code.

The criminal code hasn't been completely updated for more than 100 years, and all of the legislators admit there are many ancient statutes on the books which should have been deleted a long time ago.

Some of the senators are less than enthusiastic about what the final product will be. Several have revised notices they won't vote for the revised code if it makes it to a final reading.

Four bills have been prepared by the Judiciary Committee to serve as the vehicles for the numerous suggested changes.

Sen. Wally Barnett of Lincoln, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, encouraged as much constructive criticism as possible during debate which will be limited to one hour daily until the massive job of reviewing more than 800 pages of proposed legislation is completed.

Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha attributed lack of discussion during the first several hours the measure was being considered to a lack of understanding by most of the lawmakers.

Chambers said he will ask many questions during the debate but that he will not offer amendments and will not vote for the proposal.

Sen. Douglas Beruster of Uffca said the legislature is trying to do the impossible — "make a silk purse out of sow's ear."

He said it would have been wiser if the Unicameral had taken another state's modernized code and adapted it to Nebraska.

But Barnett and Speaker Roland Luedtke of Lincoln both cited the thousands of man-hours judges, attorneys and others have devoted to preparation of the legislation as assurance it has much merit.

"Let's listen awhile before we get too critical," was the counsel of Sen. William Nichol of Scottsbluff, another Judiciary Committee member.

Housing Loans
 Residents of many small communities across the state apparently have at least one thing in common with persons who live in deteriorating sections of large cities. Both have considerable difficulty in obtaining housing loans, according to testimony presented recently to the legislature's Banking, Commerce and Insurance Committee.

Several of those testifying said they live in small towns whose residents deposit substantial amounts in banks and savings and loan associations in nearby cities. But the committee was fully aware of these financial institutions' ready refusal to make housing loans money available to applicants from small towns and villages.

Sen. George Burrows, one of three sponsors a bill aimed at guaranteeing that every applicant will get an equal opportunity to obtain a loan, said small town citizens are getting "ripped off" along with many who live in older sections of cities.

Sen. Paul Vendtite of Omaha, one of the sponsors, said three "banker friends" have admitted refusing loans to those living in certain parts of the city is a common practice.

The bill would prohibit denial of loans to persons living in the area in which they live or in which they want to buy or build a home or business.

William Brandt of Unadilla, lobbyist for the Nebraska Bankers Association, said federal regulations will soon provide much of the protection the bill proposes.

Parking Fines
 A recent attorney general's opinion indicated overtime parking fines, every penny of them, should go to the public schools.

Cities, according to the opinion, cannot keep any of the fines, even though it's known that most keep part of the money. Omaha keeps $2 of every $3 and Lincoln retains 95 cents of every dollar.

Senator John DeCamp of Neligh who requested the opinion said it appears cities are not only keeping the money illegally but probably must also pay back what they have collected in the past.

Assistant attorney general Bernard Packell said that interpretation may be correct but declined to say anything more.

He did tell DeCamp the statutes clearly do not authorize cities to deduct costs connected with collection of parking fines.

DeCamp asked for the opinion after the heard arguments on a bill which proposed cities be allowed to keep $1 of nonmoving violation fines as an administrative fee.

Gas Regulations
 Another bill proposing that the state take over regulation of gas utilities is before the Legislature's Public Works Committee.

Similar legislation has been introduced the past several years because some towns and cities believe they are at a disadvantage when they negotiate rates with their suppliers.

A League of Nebraska Municipalities poll showed 55 per cent of 141 respondents favored state regulation, 33 per cent were opposed and 12 per cent had no opinion.

Sen. Jack Mills of Big Springs who introduced this year's bill said the Public Service Commission has said it could handle the regulation proposed if given additional staff.

The bill suggests assessments against gas utilities to raise the extra funds the commission would need. But the total assessments could not exceed $150,000 annually for the entire state.

Mills argued suppliers would be helped too because instead of negotiating rates with every municipality they serve, they could go directly to the commission and request adjustments.

The committee conducted an interim study on the matter but, according to testimony during a hearing on the Mills bill, didn't get much response from cities and towns.

Mobile Homes
 During the past six years the average price of mobile homes has doubled to about $12,250, making it difficult for those on modest incomes to buy them under current installment loan laws.

The Banking Commerce and Insurance Committee has been asked to change the law so the repayment period for a mobile home loan could exceed 145 months.

Marlin Huff, executive director of the Nebraska Manufactured Housing Institute, said 96 per cent of all new homes under $20,000 and more than 70 per cent of those under $30,000 are mobile homes.

Under questioning, Huff said lenders would not be interested in less than 12 per cent loans on such homes, even if the repayment period were extended. Higher risk, lower down payments and the fact that financing usually includes furniture and appliances were listed as reasons why lenders want retention of the 12 per cent interest rate.

U.S. standard of living is still highest

Americans still enjoy the highest standard of living in the world, despite recent headlines indicating we have slipped to sixth place in per capita income.

How can this be true? Well, it depends on exactly what is measured and how relevant that is to "standard of living" or, for the sake of simplicity, purchasing power.

The World Bank periodically publishes tables which rank countries by income per capita. These tables are computed by taking the total output of the national economy of a country and dividing it by the population.

For many years, we ranked first by this criterion. But in the World Bank's preliminary figures for 1975, our $2,660 per capita puts us in sixth place, behind Kuwait ($1,510), the United Arab Emirates ($1,480), Qatar ($8,320), Switzerland ($8,050) and Sweden ($7,880). The first three are oil sheikdoms with very small populations.

Undoubtedly these per capita income figures tell us something about the direction of change. But they are a poor guide to relative standards of living, because they take into account only income and ignore the local cost of living.

The United Bank of Switzerland has been making much more painstaking comparisons since 1970. The bank's most recent study shows the United States last year. For 41 major cities around the world, it compares typical wage-salary rates for a representative range of occupations with local costs for a typical "market basket" of goods and services.

The study makes for some interesting browsing. It shows, for example, that a food basket of 36 items typical of those used by the local consumer would cost $355.32 in Tokyo (highest) and $100.60 in Bogota (lowest). For the four U.S. cities included in the survey (Chicago, Los Angeles, New York, San Francisco) the food package ranges from $177.99 in San Francisco to $212.30 in New York.

The cost of a medium-priced automobile (including sales tax, if any) is highest in Istanbul, Turkey ($12,344) and lowest in Madrid ($3,420).

In terms of total outlays for goods and services, Tokyo is the most expensive place in the world to live, according to Union Bank. In second place lies Manama (Bahrain), followed by Oslo, Stockholm, Zurich, Geneva, Copenhagen, Tel Aviv and New York. Chicago is 14th, Los Angeles 18th and San Francisco 20th.

What about pay? An automobile mechanic earns the most in Los Angeles ($18,720) and the least in Manila ($5,050).

A primary school teacher earns the most in Geneva ($21,805) and the least in Manila ($1,042). A department manager, or mid-level executive, earns the most in San Francisco ($31,600) and the least in Buenos Aires ($3,691).

As you can see, both pay and living costs vary dramatically from place to place. How do you put it all together to make meaningful comparisons? The best method is to compare the number of hours a typical wage earner would have to work to purchase a specified package of goods and services.

Using this system you learn that a San Franciscan can purchase with 22 hours of labor a food basket that would take a resident of Manila 131.5 hours to earn. A Chicagoan would work 45.75 hours for an assortment of clothing that would cost a resident of Buenos Aires 326 hours, and a resident of Stockholm 48 hours.

In general, pay in the U.S. ranks at or near the top, while our consumer prices tend to be roughly in the middle of the scale. Because of this combination, to quote the Union Bank, "the United States is clearly in the lead of the purchasing power comparison." — Richard Lesher, U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Beverage industry told to 'get off cans'

There is little doubt that the majority of farmers and ranchers, particularly those living in proximity to cities and towns, give their support to some kind of effective legislation to end the dumping of cans and bottles along the roadsides and into their fields.

It is a problem of long standing which has worsened as the trend toward canned beverages has become a deluge in recent years. First it was beer cans as the beer industry changed from using returnable bottles to cans. The industry added to the litter problem further when it changed from cardboard cartons to non-biodegradable plastic holders. Those cardboard cartons were bad enough, but eventually they would deteriorate, but those plastic holders are there forever.

Then the soft drink industry went the way of the beer industry and took the can route. And the bottle makers fighting back went to non-returnable bottles of both glass and plastic.

Anti-litter laws up to date have proved largely ineffective. Unless a person tosses cans and bottles and other debris along the roadsides is caught in the act by a law enforcement officer, there is no prosecution. If you want a first-hand report of how bad the situation is, just ask a farmer who has tried to mow his roadside of bushes or highway maintenance crews who have responsibility for mowing alongside state highways.

Hearing has been held on LB 310 introduced in this session by three senators — Douglas Beruster of Uffca, Donald Dwork, of Columbus and Steve Fowler of Lincoln. That's pretty good balance of both rural and urban interest and the bill has a chance despite heavy pressure from the beer and soft drink industries.

LB 310 has been patterned after the Oregon bill which has proved quite successful because it imposes a mandatory deposit on all beer and soft drink beverage containers. If the consumer can get five cents or a dime for returning the containers, he is much less likely to be tossing them out indiscriminately and creating a litter problem in the first place. Four other states in addition to Oregon have similar laws, and they seem to be working.

Let's face it... people drank beer and soft drinks when they came in bottles that one took back to the store and either exchanged or collected the deposit. Few in those days considered tossing out the beer or cola bottles. Kids made extra money turning in those kind of bottles. Bottlers had special equipment for washing and sterilizing the bottles for reuse. As a conservation measure, this nation's beer and soft drink industries should never have "gone on the can" in the first place. We have used waste for convenience and to heck with the environment and the people who have to pick up after us.

The industries that "went on the can" will find ways to "get off the can." If the legislature can pass legislation to require farms and feedlots to prevent pollution of the air, the streams and rivers, surely it can justify legislation to discourage the general public from tossing an annual deluge of cans and bottles in the fields and roadsides. LB 310 should be passed this session... it's time has come and is overdue. — M.M. VanKirk, Nebraska Farm Bureau.

OBSERVATIONS

Sounds like fun

March 26 is a date which Wayne area residents should mark on the calendar. A couple of fun events are scheduled in Wayne for that day.

The Wayne Chamber of Commerce is resuming its popular Home Show this year. Merchants will have display booths set up in the city auditorium March 25 and 26 and a style show will begin at 7:30 p.m. on the first day of the show.

Booths will also be open Saturday, March 26. Merchants have already pledged more than $1,000 worth of prizes and gift certificates to be given away during the show. A cooking demonstration by Nebraska Public Power District home economist June Renander is scheduled for 2:30 p.m. on March 26.

The Home Show in itself should be enough to make residents reserve those dates to spend in Wayne. But a second date will be added to the calendar. March 25 Wayne State College is sponsoring a "Home Show" for its faculty and staff.

The tentative schedule has been published previously in The Wayne Herald and the final schedule will be published in a future issue. Some of the events are a Spanish guitar performance by a WSC student from Panama, a German silent film "Nosferatu", "Dracula", a performance by a Spanish singing group from South Sioux City High, a pair of French movies, a children's hour, cooking sessions on a variety of foreign cuisines, bagpipe players, German and Czech dancing groups, dancing instructions, and a free folk dance from 7 to 11 p.m. to top off the day.

Either event alone is great and to gether they add up to a lot of fun and entertainment. So plan to take a full day, Saturday, for the Chamber Home Show, and the Home Show at the State College. You will be glad you did. For more information call the Chamber of Commerce at 375-2890.

6 Streets Marked For Work in Allen
 Minor street repair work is scheduled to get underway in June on six streets, the Allen town board agreed Monday night.
 Three streets will be completely armored coated while another three will be touched up.
 In other action, members learned that their application for a grant to build curb and gutters was rejected by Tri-County Council of Government.

Stoves Taken
 A pair of wood burning stoves were taken from a vacant farm house southwest of Wayne, according to the county sheriff's department.
 One stove is a white porcelain kitchen trash model.
 The second is a Knox heating stove, brown porcelain with fire brick, measuring four feet high by two and one-half feet wide. The stove has no legs, but has two doors in front flanked by six- and eight-inch aluminum horizontal ribs. The top panel has been broken and repaired by brazing.
 The two stoves are valued at $150.

WAYNE COUNTY EXTENSION AGENT

I have had several farmers report to me that they had a lot of black, empty barley heads in their field last summer. This is a disease called loose smut.

For many years farmers had successfully treated their small grain with a mercury treatment which did the job very well. But several years ago mercury was banned by the government and most treatment was stopped.

Barley seed should be treated each year with the chemical Vitavax. This chemical can be put in the drill box at planting time. Even if Vitavax is used, barley seed should not be used if it comes from plants heavily infested with the disease.

Don't treat more seed than can be used because treated seeds can't be fed to livestock.

Slats Are Building-Design Key

Unquestionably the feature that makes confinement rearing of swine feasible is the pig's ability to adapt to slotted floors, which in turn, reduces the labor of waste management to a low level, according to swine specialist Bob Fritschen.

"Having made the above statement then opens a Pandora's box of ideas to manufacturers on material and design," the Northeast Station specialist said.

While slats of many materials and designs appear to perform the function of transfer of wastes from floor surface to pit, the similarity between materials and design generally ends at that point.

Durability, initial cost, cleaning characteristics, apparent comfort effect on the pig and effect on claw lesion incidence are important considerations when purchasing slats. Concrete slats are conceded to be the most popular insofar as material is concerned, Fritschen noted. However, there is a wide range of quality and design between and even among concrete slat fabricators. Concrete slats that have a smooth surface and a slight pencil round edge favor the well-being of the pig. In addition, concrete slats are becoming wider. Studies and practical field observation show that eight inch wide slats perform very well, indeed.

Some producers have gone even wider than eight inches. The common question is, will eight inch wide slats clean as well as five inch wide slats? "The answer is, yes," Fritschen said. Whether slats clean well is more a function of where in the pen the pigs dung rather than width of slats. A disadvantage of concrete slats of the wider design is in the handling of the heavier pieces during construction.

Slats of any material and design will result in more claw lesions than if the same pig were reared on soil, the swine specialist advised. However, the wider slats appear to result in fewer claw lesions than narrower slats, regardless of material. A study at the Northeast Station showed that eight inch wide concrete slats resulted in nearly a 26 per cent reduction in claw

State Farmers Finance Promotion

The Nebraska Soybean Development, Utilization and Marketing Board recently invested $12,500 in market development programs conducted by the American Soybean Association (ASA).

The funds are provided by Nebraska soybean producers through their half cent per bushel checkoff program. Farmers serving on the soybean board determine how the funds are to be used.

Ralph Raikes of Ashland, chairman of the board, commended Nebraska soybean growers for continuing to increase world demand for their crop through the self help check-off program.

"Nebraska farmers are helping provide funding for a major identified soy oil campaign with Germany's biggest edible oil processor," said Raikes. "Last month ASA finalized an agreement with Unilever to help promote their major national brand - Blauband - which will now be identified on the label as 100 per cent soy oil."

Raikes said promotion of the Blauband brand of identified soy oil will complement a consumer awareness campaign begun in 1975 to improve the consumer's image of soy products and soy oil in general.

"Our aim is to make soy oil a preferred oil in Germany and, eventually, throughout Europe," said Raikes. "German housewives now prefer sunflower oil and are willing to pay a premium for it. The identified soy oil campaign is designed so that the housewife will become aware of the consistent quality of soy oil and will then start choosing it over other oils."

This should help bring higher prices for soy oil and increase demand for U.S. soybeans in Germany, he said.

Three Ways Suggested To Fight Barley Smut

Barley head smut is a disease which farm operators quickly notice and become concerned about, said Russell Moomaw, extension agronomist at the Northeast Station, Concord. Several things can be done now to reduce economic loss from barley head smut.

Head smut in barley is of two types. One type is covered smut. Spores of the fungus which cause covered smut lie dormant on the barley seed surface. Barley seed treatment with a fungicide is very effective in reducing covered smut infections which would develop during the growing season. The second type of smut in barley is loose smut, according to Moomaw. Loose smut infection is carried deeply within the barley seed and thus harder to control. If smut was present in the field last year and seed from that field is planted in 1977, another infection of smut is likely to occur.

Loose smut can be controlled in three ways, Moomaw said. First, new seed can be purchased. That alternative should be considered if a large amount of smut has been present in the field during past seasons. Purchase of certified seed would assure genetic purity of the variety and reduce the likelihood of loose smut occurrence.

If new seed is to be purchased, then growers could get seed of a barley variety resistant to loose smut. Beacon is an adapted variety for Nebraska with loose smut resistance. A third thing to do would be to treat barley seed with Vitavax fungicide. Vitavax has been very effective against loose and covered smut infections. Moomaw advised growers to get the planter box formulation of Vitavax, not the formulation which has to be applied by commercial seed treaters. Treatment by commercial seed treaters is excellent but apparently not available in northeast Nebraska.

March 15 is the final day to register for the Nebraska State Fair swine muscle efficiency contest, according to Dr. William Ahlschwede, University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension swine specialist.

The contest, which combines growth and carcass merit by placing pig's muscle growth, is sponsored by the Nebraska State Fair and Nebraska Pork Producers Association and is open to all state pork producers.

Ahlschwede said the criteria for placing in the contest is lean growth. The pig producing 85 pounds of lean in the shortest period of time will win the contest, he said.

Carcasses will be evaluated to estimate the pounds of lean in the carcass, he said, and this figure will be combined with age to determine the number of days, the pig required to produce 85 pounds of lean.

Pigs entered in the contest must be farrowed on or after March 20, Ahlschwede said, and must be marked at or by the time of tattooing. To qualify, pigs must be enrolled and tattooed at birth by extension NPAA or NPPA personnel, he said.

A maximum of 10 pigs may be tattooed per owner, and two of those may be entered in the contest. Owners are defined as any corporation, family or other group where the animals are run as one herd, he said, and pigs cannot be from more than two litters.

Other contest regulations cited by Ahlschwede are that: Each participant must make an entry to the State Fair before the August deadline.

Only male pigs castrated by four weeks of age are eligible.

Pigs may be of any breed or cross, but purebred breeders will be allowed to show only purebreds.

An entry fee of $1 a pig tattooed is required, with a minimum of $5.

Carcasses must meet specific requirements to be eligible for final awards.

Ahlschwede said those interested in entering the contest should contact him immediately at room 210 Marvel Baker Hall, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb. 68583.

William Howard Taft was the heaviest president of the U.S. He weighed 332 pounds.

Vet's View

DR. ROBERT Miller, a veterinarian from Thousand Oaks, Calif., presents some of the insights he has gained in his study of comparative behavior between animal and man, through his favorite hobby - cartooning. The cartoon was taken from Miller's book, "The Best of RMA," published in 1971. The cartoon is provided by the University of Nebraska Department of Agriculture Communications.

"Twice more around this field, Doc, and my plowin's all done!"

Weather Important to Farm Price Trend

How much higher will prices rise for Nebraska farmland? Weather may be one of the most important factors in determining whether the upward price trend continues, said Dr. Ron Hanson, University of Nebraska-Lincoln economist specializing in farm management and agricultural finance.

Nebraska farmland values were up 25 per cent on Nov. 1, 1976, compared to the previous year, representing the fourth largest percentage increase in the U.S., Hanson noted.

"Many (observers) feel a weakening in the farm real estate market lies ahead," Hanson commented, but said the extent and timing of any downward trend is uncertain.

Weather patterns are of crucial importance because they largely determine crop production levels. The UN-L economist said. Favorable weather, as an example, could mean record crop production levels, which could depress cash grain prices well below 1976 levels.

The outlook for 1977 includes the prospect of rising livestock prices and thus more animals on feed, providing a market for grains now in storage, Hanson said. Favorable farm incomes this year could provide larger down payments on farmland purchases. Farm mortgage credit appears "readily available" in 1977, with present interest rates holding steady, Hanson predicted.

"As always, much depends on the farmer's optimistic attitude toward acquiring more land," he pointed out.

Target Prices Announced

Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland has announced the 1977 target prices for feed grains.

Current legislation requires that target prices be adjusted from 1976 levels to reflect the increase in the index of prices paid by farmers for production items, interest, taxes and wages during 1976 as well as changes in the three-year moving average of yields for each crop.

The 1977 target prices are as follows (1977 price per bushel followed by 1976 price): corn, $1.70, $1.57; sorghum, $1.62, $1.49; barley, $1.39, $1.28.

Target prices represent a floor price that eligible producers may receive for their crops. If the national average market price for the particular crop falls below the target price a deficiency payment is made equal to the difference between the target price and the market price. Deficiency payments have never been made on wheat, feed grains or upland cotton in the four years of the program.

Target prices are also used as a base to determine disaster payments should a natural disaster strike an eligible producer's crop. Under such circumstances, disaster payments are paid if the producer is prevented from planting a crop or if yields are substantially reduced. The disaster payment rate is generally one-third of the target price for each commodity.

The Department also said the 1977 loan rates if announced Oct. 13 for wheat, feed grains and soybeans are being reviewed and a decision on final loan levels of these commodities will be announced at a later date.

Per bushel loan levels announced Oct. 13 were: corn, $1.50; sorghum, $1.43; barley, $1.22; oats, 72 cents; rye, $1.70; soybeans, $2.50.

If farmland prices continue spiraling upward, Hanson foresees some farmers or investors "taking some difficult financial decisions."

An immediate problem is the ability to meet annual mortgage payments during periods of low prices for farm products. To overcome the cash flow crunch, some operators may have to resort to short term debt to finance long term mortgage payments, he suggested.

This move will "only erode the working capital position of the farm business" and cause more serious problems in maintaining a liquid farm financial position in later years, he warned.

Farmers are faced with greater financial risks and a narrower profit margin due to the continuing cost-price squeeze. Because of this, "there is little room for management errors" in developing the capacity to repay debts arising from purchase of farmland, Hanson advised.

"Repayability" is now the key word with lenders re-evaluating and approving farmland mortgage requests, he concluded.

EXTENSION NOTES

By Gladys Stout

Are you about to swear off of coffee because of the cost? Let's look at the pros and cons of the coffee dilemma.
Different brands of coffee vary in price. Divide the cost per pound by 50 and you will have the approximate cost per cup. A cup of regular coffee made from some brands costs about 4 1/2 cents per cup, from other brands about 5 cents per cup. A cup of coffee made from regular instant coffee costs less than 2 1/2 cents from freeze dried instant a little more but still less than brewed coffee.

Personal preference or taste preference enters in when you consider changing brands or kinds of coffee. Then you must weigh preference against cost. Who says you have to drink coffee on a "coffee break"? You might consider trying another beverage. Drink tea at one-third to one-half the cost of coffee. Loose tea leaves or instant tea usually cost less than tea bags.

Try bouillon occasionally unless you are on a low salt diet. It costs about 2 cents per cup.
Milk, especially skim milk or reconstituted milk made from nonfat dry milk, costs less than coffee. Milk also provides important nutrients.
A 6 ounce cup of nonfat milk provides about 70 calories plus calcium, protein, riboflavin and other nutrients.
Fruit and vegetable juices cost no more than coffee and provide vitamins and minerals. Orange juice and tomato juice are good sources of Vitamin C.

To solve the coffee cost dilemma compare cost of brands, types of coffee, and consider alternate beverages.

Practice Underway for 'Star'

Practice is underway at Allen High School for the senior class play, "The High White Star," to be presented next month.
The three act comedy written by Tom Erhard takes place in Union High School where the senior class is experiencing the trials and tribulations of trying to elect a class officer.
In the running for the post are Ted Price, played by Stan McAfee, Patsy Beasley, played by Kandi Rahn, and Rick Stedman, played by Jack Warner.
Thinkin' to most of the class is that a cheating scandal at the school involves one of the candidates. Discovering the scandal

Omaha, were overnight guests Saturday in the Emil Swanson home. Mrs. Kenneth Fleer was a guest Sunday morning, and the Gene Swansons and Randy, Norfolk, joined the group in the afternoon.

Duane Thies and Emil Thies were overnight guests Sunday in the Earl Thies home, Ames, Ia. Local Man Picks Up Bucks Prize

Ed Skeahan of Wayne is $25 richer after he won the consolation award in last week's Birthday Bucks drawing.
Skeahan, who was shopping in Ben Franklin Store, picked up the Bucks prize after he found out that his birthday of Dec. 24, 1909 was the closest to the winning date of Dec. 4 of that same year.

Had the two dates matched, Skeahan would have won $675 in Bucks which can be spent just like cash in any participating Wayne store.
Drawing the winning date was Mrs. Willard Jeffrey of Jeff's Cafe.
As a result of no one claiming the top prize, the amount increases $25 to $700 for the drawing tonight (Thursday) at 8:15.

Compromise Creates Probationary Period

A state Supreme Court decision granting instant tenure to state college faculty members has resulted in a compromise between the State College Board of Trustees and the Higher Education Association of Nebraska (HEAN).

Requesting a four-year probationary period for newly hired faculty members, HEAN has agreed to help the board support LB388, a bill introduced by Sen. Robert Clark in the Nebraska legislature.

HEAN agreed to support the board after the trustees accepted the following conditions at a Feb. 25 board meeting in Omaha:

— A four-year probationary period, the first two years being defined as probationary years, with two one-year extensions possible if necessary.

— The word "tenure" should replace the term "non probationary."

— All faculty hired and working before Aug. 15, 1974 will be given tenure.

According to Dr. Lyle Seymour, president of Wayne State College, a probationary period would help to build better faculty members at the state colleges. Currently no probationary period exists, according to a memorandum by the board at that time.

Under LB82, state Supreme Court granted instant tenure to state college faculty members when the phrase "any other subdivision" was interpreted to include state colleges as well as public schools.

An institutional goals inventory was another plan approved by the board members at the Feb. 25 meeting. The board gave the four state colleges authorization to participate in the inventory, a study of institutional goals for student, faculty staff and community sectors.

Seymour said the inventory program in April or May should assess what the goals currently are and what the goals should be. He said its purpose is to assist in formulating the goals of the institution in the future.

Hearing Tests Set For Wayne

Wayne — Electronic hearing tests will be given at the Professional Building, 112 W. 2nd, Wayne, during a free Service Center, open to all hearing aid wearers. The test will be given on Friday, March 11 from 10 a.m. to 12 noon by John F. Collins, Beltone Hearing Aid Specialist.

Anyone who has trouble hearing is welcome to come in for a test using the latest electronic equipment to find out if a tiny, modern hearing aid can help. Diagrams showing how the ear works and some of the causes of hearing loss will be available.

Everyone should have a hearing test at least once a year if he has any trouble at all hearing clearly. Even people now wearing a hearing aid or those who have been told an aid won't help should have a hearing test and find out about the very latest hearing aids.

The free hearing tests will be held at the Professional Building, 112 W. 2nd, Wayne, Nebraska on Friday, March 11 from 10 a.m. to 12 noon.

Booklet Explains Social Security

A booklet explaining the value of social security to young people is available at the Norfolk social security office at 1310 Norfolk Avenue.

The illustrated 16-page publication shows how young workers build social security disability and survivors protection as well as retirement and Medicare protection for themselves and their families, according to Branch, social security district manager.

Single copies of the booklet, "Social Security Information for Young Families," are free on request, Branch said.

The Social Security Administration is an agency of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.
