Decision Is Pending On Health Department

The Wayne County board of commissioners Tuesday will discuss a proposal to form a county health department.

Representatives from the State Health Department Feb. 1 presented a proposal to the commissioners for establishing a county health program on a one-year experimental basis.

The commissioners took the proposal under advisement and have since talked with the Dakota County commissioners about the county health program there.

April 30. Both are eligible for reappointment.

Setting of a public hearing date for a bottle club liquor license application by Pat Young.

State Health Department director of community health Mary Munter said that prior to 1972 only four counties in Nebraska had health departments. Since then, health director Dr. Henry Smith has emphasized community health programs, she said, and the total number has risen to 12, including eight in rural counties.

Counties with populations of less than 30,000 are required to put before the voters any proposal for establishing a county health department, but the state does have a program which allows a one-year demonstration program without a vote.

Another health department official estimated that a one-year trial program for Wayne County would cost $25,000. The state would pay half of the cost of the trial program and would negotiate with the county each year thereafter for a portion of the cost if a health department issue were placed on the ballot and approved by the voters. The department would be regulated by a nine-member board including a physician, a dentist, either the county clerk or county schools superintendent, a county commissioner, and five citizens.

A wide range of services could be offered depending on local needs, Miss Munter said, suggesting that a home nursing program would probably be one of the most needed services for Wayne County. Initial staffing would probably consist of a public health nurse and an administrator, required by state law for county health departments.

The commissioners are scheduled to begin discussion of the proposal at 2 p.m.

Also on the agenda are:

- Discussion of a proposed Wayne city-county paving project on Grandland Road.
- A resolution to apply for second year funding for consolidated law enforcement in the county.
- Appointment of two members to the county joint planning commission. The terms of Neil Sandahl and Fred Mann expired

Bringing Home a State Trophy

THE THREE-MAN team of Gene Gross, from left, Dan Byers and Kurt Rewinkel of Wakefield High brought home another state award for the Trojans' trophy showcase last week when the trio won the Class C crown in state chess competition. Two of the three seniors, Gross and Byers, have played the game for about seven years, but this is the first year for Rewinkel. Wakefield instructor, Dennis Crippen, right, also fared well at the meet where he placed fifth in the open division and won a trophy.

Officials Hoping for Noisy Afternoon

Sirens will wail for several minutes Tuesday beginning at 1 p.m., but it won't be any cause for alarm. In fact, officials might be alarmed if the three Civil Defense sirens don't make some noise.

Wayne will be participating in a 22-state Civil Defense warning exercise. A message from Civil Defense National Warning Center at NORAD headquarters in Cheyenne Mountain near Colorado Springs, Colo., will initiate the exercise over the National Warning system, made up of telephone hot-lines and local warning points.

Signals tested Tuesday will include the attack signal. In a real emergency, the signal would mean to go to the nearest public fallout shelter or to protected areas at home or at work. Wayne County Civil Defense director Pat Halley said, adding that the public is not expected to take any action during the test.

The Wayne city council has authorized testing of the town's three sirens on a monthly basis. Two of the sirens got less than passing marks on the first test.

Pops Concert Will Include Special Tribute

A tribute to Louis Armstrong will be one of the special features of the Wakefield High School Pops Concert, beginning at 7:30 Tuesday night at the elementary school gymnasium.

The Wakefield High School swing choir and concert band will perform popular and rock music from the past and present and the swing choir will present a special number, "Rhythm of Live," with choreography.

About 45 students will participate under the direction of Mrs. Diane Trullinger.

Retiring Manager Notes

Safety, Service Big Changes in Phone Companies

The type of service offered to customers has changed greatly since Mike Smith began his career in the telephone industry but the biggest change he has noted are in safety procedures for employees.

"Things we did every day back then would get a man fired in two minutes today," Smith noted during an interview Friday afternoon.

Some 250 friends and fellow telephone company workers gathered in Norfolk Friday night in recognition of Smith's rapidly approaching retirement, which will end a career which began 34 years ago with Mountain States Telephone Company in Boise, Idaho.

An Okdale native and Okdale High School graduate, Smith worked for Mountain States for four years before returning to Nebraska. He worked for the Union Pacific railroad for a year before joining Northwestern Bell at Lyons as a combination man, installing telephones. Four years later he was transferred to Fremont where he worked another four years, first as a combination man and then on a testing board. He was transferred back to Lyons where he was exchange manager for 10 years.

In 1966 Smith was transferred to Wayne where he was in charge of the service department. Later the service and office manager positions were combined with Smith taking complete charge of the six men and one secretary working out of the Wayne office.

Not much consideration was given to safety in the early days of his career, Smith noted. In fact, some of the old timers were likely to chide a man if he took time out for safety measures.

"We didn't wear safety belts half the time and it was a trick

Feb. 25. A siren located near the El Toro lounge worked okay, sounding the individual signals for fire, natural disaster such as a tornado, and attack.

The siren located behind the fire hall sounded only the fire signal and one near the cemetery didn't work at all.

City electric system superintendent Bill Mellor said the fire hall siren was tested later with out sounding and no malfunction was discovered. A burned out

Salad supper is Thursday

Salads of all sizes, shapes and flavors, plus a tavern, potato chips and beverage should be enough to entice everyone to the city auditorium Thursday night.

For the third year in a row, Wayne's chapter of the American Field Service and members of Wayne High School's AFS committee are planning to sponsor a salad supper to help raise funds needed to sponsor a foreign exchange student at Wayne High School during the 1977-78 school year.

Serving will be from 5 to 7:30 p.m. Tickets for the supper, at $1.50 for adults and 90 cents for children, may be purchased at the door.

Entertainment during the evening will be by instrumental and vocal students from the high school and middle school.

Mrs. Margaret Lundstrom, secretary of the AFS, said persons who would like to donate salads for the supper can bring them to the auditorium when they come to eat.

Attending Thursday night's supper will be Fulgence Ibarra Jainga Quimpo "Jo Jo," who is the 11th foreign exchange student to spend a year studying at Wayne High School. Jo Jo comes from the Philippines and is staying with the Rev. Kenneth Edmonds family while attending classes here.

Mrs. Herbert Niemann, AFS president, said about $500 was raised at last year's supper for the AFS.

Pollution Complaints Aired

By JIM STRAYER

Pollution isn't a problem confined to metropolitan areas according to testimony presented by several rural Wakefield residents Friday night during a hearing conducted by the Department of Environmental Control (DEC).

Owners of property adjacent to or near Big Red Farms, Inc., claimed the company, one of the nation's largest producers of eggs, has failed to properly dispose of the 900,000 hens kept on the farm, creating a nuisance and possibly violating environmental regulations.

Dan Gardner, president of the Milton G. Waldbaum Company, which owns Big Red Farms, admitted that the company has had problems with waste disposal since the farm went into operation in 1972, but denied charges that the company has avoided trying to solve those problems in order to show bigger profits.

DEC director Dan Drain opened the hearing by saying his department has received complaints against Big Red Farms and has sent representatives to investigate.

"The company has done a number of things to try to improve the situation but those efforts obviously have not satisfied everyone," Drain said.

About 90 people packed the hearing room in the Wakefield elementary school and testimony from about 15 people was presented either in person or by representatives against Big Red Farms.

who either lived in the area or said they had encountered the nuisances during visits.

Testimony against Big Red Farms who also presented in person by several residents including Joe Mattes, Cecil and Dennis Fredrickson, and Mrs. Viola Allinger.

Other exhibits presented by Fischer include aerial photos and maps which he said showed the channels followed by run-off water from Big Red Farms.

Gustafson's son, Ron Gustafson, now a planner with a rural health planning agency in Madison, Wis., said in a letter he had viewed the offenses during a visit to his father's farm and claimed that Big Red Farms is violating Nebraska regulations for livestock waste disposal.

The owners of Big Red Farms benefit from pollution, the letter said, because failure to adequately dispose of manure means bigger profits.

Contract Terms Released

The Winside board of education and the Wayne County Education Association representing Winside teachers Saturday announced details of the settlement for contract terms for the current school year.

Base pay is set at $7,950 with four per cent increase for each year of teaching experience and for each nine hours of education beyond the bachelor's degree. Teachers so far this year have been paid according to the old $7,350 base rate, pending settlement of the negotiations.

The school district's contribution toward health insurance was increased from $19.10 a month for a single premium to $23.40 and from $24.95 for a family premium to $40.

In addition, three columns have been added to the current extra duty schedule, and it is agreed that negotiations for 1977-78 will include discussion of a proposal to take one more step to ease the current salary columns in the first three columns in the current salary schedule.

The case has been scheduled for hearing in the Court of Industrial Relations after a fact finding board could not resolve the situation but a suit of court settlement was reached.

A final offer sent to the fact finding committee by the teachers' association included a $7,350 base salary, increasing the increment for additional education to four and one-half per cent, a $23.40 contribution for single health insurance premium and $16.72 for family insurance adding three columns to the extra duty pay schedule and dropping the first two columns.

The board of education's final offer sent to fact finding was a $7,900 base salary, retention of "four by four" increments on the salary schedule, either $23.40 toward health insurance premiums of $19.10 toward single insurance and $24.95 for family insurance, and addition of three columns to the present extra duty pay schedule.

Terms of administrators' contracts for the current school year were also released. High School principal Al Schlueter is receiving $15,000 plus $600 in medical insurance allowed for a 10-month contract.

Superintendent Don Leighton is receiving $18,975.80 plus a $600 medical insurance allowance for a 12-month contract.

Complaints leveled against the company fell into three major categories: run-off of waste water, disposal of chicken manure, and odor from a manure drier.

Several farmers owning property adjacent to Big Red Farms claimed waste water from the operation was allowed to run off the company's property, down roadside ditches, onto adjacent property, and into Logan Creek.

Berneil Gustafson said excess waste water was allowed to run into his pasture preventing him from grazing part of his land and claimed water running down a roadside ditch eventually drained into Logan Creek. He also charged that sludge-like manure at one time flowed from Big Red Farms onto his property, killing "all living things in its path" including grass and cedar trees.

Quoting from a diary which he began keeping in 1975, Gustafson named numerous dates over a two-year period in which he alleged nuisances or property loss caused by run off waste water or manure, and "nausea ting" odors caused by the Big Red Farms manure drier.

Gustafson's nephew, Dan Fischer, who spent part of his youth on the Gustafson farm and now is a Denver attorney, narrated a slide presentation allegedly showing the causes of complaints Fischer, who said he was not appearing in the capacity of an attorney, presented testimony on his own behalf and read statements prepared by eight other persons.

Musical Will Bring 'Sunshine' For Audience

Wayne High students will bring a little sunshine into the lives of their audience Friday and Saturday. "Little Mary Sunshine" is the title of the musical production scheduled for those dates.

Oscar Fairfax, Marcia Peterson as Ernestine Liebflecht, and John Keating as Fleet Foot.

Thone: House bought members ethics

By CHARLES THONE
First District Representative
 "Present House leadership isn't as forthcoming as Speaker Thomas B. Read, 1955-1959, who gathered minority party leaders and told them, 'The majority has decided to perpetrate the following outrage.'"
 "Latest of many outrages by present House leadership is the handling of the new Code of Ethics for members. It came to the House floor under a gag rule that permitted only two amendments specified by the leadership. A member could make a motion to strike any section of the code but couldn't make an amendment to amend it."
 "Some House members have what are variously called 'unofficial office accounts,' 'constituent service funds' or 'communications funds.' Supposedly, they are to pay for expenses of a member that aren't paid for by the government. I have never had an account."
 "Such accounts of House members aren't subject to any reporting, limitations or regulations. Donations from foreigners, labor unions and corporations are illegal for federal campaign funds but are accepted in many 'office accounts.'"

 "The leadership's proposal called for ending these accounts, but for providing an additional $5,000 per year for operating the office of each member out of federal funds. It voted to strike this section. We can't buy ethics of members of Congress. Here's one minority member of Congress who would rather try another time to do away with 'office accounts' than to permit another dip into your tax funds."
 "I am strongly committed to tough rules of conduct for members of Congress. During the debate on the code, I revealed extensive information about my personal finances — much more than had been proposed by any of the code's authors. I released a statement of the net financial worth of my wife, Ruthie and myself. I also reported the amount of federal and Nebraska income taxes we paid in each of the years since I came to Congress. I intend to make such reports yearly as long as I hold public office."
 "What are some of the other outrages that the House majority leadership has perpetrated already in 1977? One of the most heinous is the refusal to let the House vote on whether its members should have an inordinately large pay raise."

 "On the first day the House met in 1977 it adopted new rules under a gag rule. Those rules are a step backward from open representative government. They include allowing committee to amend bills with less than half the members present, allowing committee chairmen to vote proxies of absent members and increasing frequency of legislation consideration under no-amendment, limited debate procedures."
 "Yes, and we should remember that in 1976 when the Wayne Hays-Elizabeth Ray and similar scandals showed abuse of accounts of members and committees, we in the minority proposed an audit of all House accounts. The majority said to forget past sins and prepare a new Code of Conduct for members. Their proposal to bribe members to stop operating slush-fund 'office accounts' is a scandal in itself."

STRAYEr Thoughts

By Jim Strayer

For those of you have been dying of curiosity, an explanation of why the "Sunshine is Coming" picture in the March 7 issue didn't have a caption giving an explanation:
 "We, we didn't" forget, and no, we weren't talking about the great weather we've been having."
 "Sunshine refers to 'Little Mary Sunshine.' The Wayne High School musical will be presented Friday and Saturday."
 "Why no caption? Vocal director Larry Straitman asked us if we would run the picture without an explanation, just to tickle your curiosity. The cast did the same thing at school. One day they all showed up with their 'Sunshine is Coming' T-shirts and didn't offer any explanation. Naturally, everyone wanted to find out about it and it was a good way to publicize the event."
 "Larry asked if we could do the same with the picture and it sounded like a good idea."

What a Scoop
 Speaking of dramatics, one of the characters in the Allen High School play brought forth a few chuckles around here. Follow by the name of "Scoop" Cramer. A thorough check by our crack team of investigative reporters, however, has revealed that the play "High White Star," is not about the life and times of Herald publisher Alan Cramer. Darn it.

Finished Course
 I finished by cardiopulmonary resuscitation course last week, along with three sheriff's deputies, the Wayne-Carroll school nurse, and some more people from Providence Medical Center.
 The course is taught in two three-hour sessions. Some extra time is also required to practice the techniques on resuscitation dolls at the hospital, but the total amount of time involved isn't that great.
 That's not to imply it's a snap course. The training in CPR is such that anyone who passes the tests for certification should have confidence in their ability to apply the techniques if the need arises.

At the same time, I think just about anyone can find time to take the course if they want to, and it is time well spent.

Reduce Fatality Rate
 Why? In localities where a large percentage of the population has completed the training, the incidence of fatalities from heart attack has decreased dramatically. As the course teaches, regardless of what type of emergency medical care is available, it is impossible for professionals to arrive in time to help during those critical first few minutes. Which means that if lives are to be saved, someone at the scene must know what to do. That's where CPR comes in.
 Milron Jenness hopes to train enough Wayne County residents to insure that odds are excellent someone available to will know what to do in case of heart attack or a blocked artery. The training will be made available. Volunteers are needed, and there really isn't any good excuse for not taking the course. It isn't easy, but if I can pass it, so can you. And you might just be able to save a life someday.

Out of Old

Winter storms in Nebraska often make traveling difficult and tie up traffic for hours or even days. Stranded motorists are forced to interrupt their travels and seek shelter wherever they can.
 Pioneer Nebraskans were similarly inconvenienced by blizzards. The November 22, 1886, Daily Nebraska State Journal contains a first-hand account of the predicament in which one of its traveling reporters found himself when an 1886 November storm paralyzed Frontier County:
 "I was at Curtis, in Frontier County, Monday, Nov. 15 (1886), when a blizzard of exceptional severity bore down on us... At 5:30 a.m. Tuesday morning I... gathered my grips and started for the train. The wind was blowing with increased fury, the drifts were piled waist deep, and the snow was flying so thick and fast that one could not see a block away."
 "At 6 a.m. the train started. I retired myself in a seat as cozily as possible, and with (a) ... novel sought to pass away the morning hour. I was deeply interested in the story and had read some two dozen pages when the train stopped on the prairie and the whistle of two engines told us that we had caught up with the freight train and that there were 'breakers ahead.' A few sudden starts and as sudden stops and a council of war, when we run back to Curtis and got dinner. Leaving the freight cars we took two engines and with a combined baggage and smoker, a passenger coach and a caboose, started again on our trip, resolved to conquer or stay in the drift. Reaching a point about three-quarters of a mile from Moorefield, we stopped again, and then we danced 'forward and back' all the rest of the day without advancing fifty yards on our journey."
 "Late in the day, a few of the bolder ones, myself among the number, defied the elements and made a break for the town, while the more timid resolved to stay with the ship. There were seventy-two pairs of blankets in the B. & M. (Burlington & Missouri) depot, which the agent kindly turned over to the passengers and with these they made themselves as comfortable as possible. Some of the boys sought the hotel, where the proprietor, Ulrich Schlegel, did his best to make them comfortable. George Spangler and I called on Job Norwood and asked to be allowed to sleep on the counters of his store...

 "The morning came, but the fury of the storm had not abated. After a breakfast at Schlegel's, I sat around Norwood's stove and by a generous use of muscle in feeding it we succeeded in keeping warm... The day passed much as the previous one had done, only that in the afternoon the storm ceased and the sun came out. Night came and went and day dawned again. In the meantime the telegraph had ceased to work...
 A birthday party given for the author of this account by his stranded fellow travelers included the presentation of gifts: half a glass of beer, a book of Robert Ingersoll's speeches, one smoked sausage, a sack of peanuts, a stick of candy, a slice of cheese with a cracker, one cigar, a bunch of raisins, a sack of Brazil nuts, a copy of the Moorefield Signal, a stick of Black Jack chewing gum, a bunch of daisies and a pair of earmuffs. "The party was as merry as one as Nebraska's prairies had ever seen, and the presents as liberal as the once fat pocketbooks could afford or the resources of the town furnish, after this long and steady drain of feeding and caring for 140 extra men during the prolonged siege."
 Chafing at the forced inactivity, the stranded travelers soon took matters into their own hands...
 "As the train was still stuck in the drift and the telegraph could tell us nothing, our party grew restive under the restraint and we resolved to get out, especially as the agent, the conductor and the engineer had started on foot for Holdrege, sixty-three miles away, the section men had commenced to cut up the railroad ties for fuel...
 We therefore engaged teams and started for Gothenburg... This trip was made up of the unusual incidents when there are many deep and long snowdrifts to cross. Our party arrived in Gothenburg about 9 p.m. and soon were aboard the U.P. (Union Pacific) east bound passenger train bound for home and civilization."

YOU AND YOUR CAR

The modern automobile thrives on loving care but actually demands less owner surveillance than the cars of 40 years ago, reports the Automotive Information Council.
 That may seem surprising in view of the many conveniences like air conditioning, automatic transmission and the power assists that are on a majority of the passenger cars traveling today's highways.
 Some critics insist that products of the Seventies—in and out of the auto industry—just aren't built the way they used to "build them." That's true. Today's automobile is a highly complex unit of machinery but the average buyer doesn't want a simple machine anymore. The Model T, the common man's car, began to fade when the common man didn't want to be common anymore.
 Many people today will recall when a major petroleum company in the Thirties prided itself on its "2,000-mile oil." Except in cases of extreme use (ie, desert driving), most manufacturers today recommend an oil change of at least three times that duration.
 Emissions are on newspaper front pages these days. One would guess that the older cars with their smaller engines would pollute less than the modern power plants. One company made a test of a 1936 car and found it emitted 12.4 grams per mile of hydrocarbons and 86.8 gm of carbon monoxide. The 1977 standards for those two chemicals are 1.5 and 15.0 gpm. The '36 did do better on oxides of nitrogen with 2.8 gpm against the current standard of 3.1 gpm. Oxides run low when the other two contaminants are high.
 Despite a weight increase of more than 450 pounds, the 1936 car delivered only 15 miles to the gallon in the city, 20 mpg on the highway. The newer car ran 22 and 30 mpg. Both were equipped with a manual transmission.
 That old car called for a chassis lubrication every 1,000 miles, an oil change every 2,000 miles and semi-annual draining of radiator coolant. Those figures compare with lubrication at 30,000 miles and coolant replacement at 40,000 miles.
 While the demands on the owner are less frequent these days, the motorist should be reminded that a tuneup at regular intervals can do wonders for smoother operation and lower fuel costs. That's not asking too much when you consider the maintenance requirements of yesterday.

Wildkittens Use 'Best Game' to Wallop Midland, 73-62

In what coach G.J. Willoughby called the "best all-around game ever," the Wayne State Wildkittens defeated Nebraska state champion Midland 73-62 in A.L.A.W. Region 6 Women's Basketball Tournament Friday in Rice Gym.

The way they did it in final against Missouri's Tarkio, who earlier defeated Fort Hays of Kansas, 85-59. Wayne was scheduled to meet Tarkio at 9 p.m., Saturday, preceded by a Fort Hays-Midland battle for third at 7.

The strong bench crew of Ellie

Sluder, Peg Yockey, Cathy Belz, and Peg Langel proved an able supplement to Wayne's starting five after early foul trouble kept top scorers Pat McKay and Connie Kunzmann on the bench most of the first half.

Although the Wildkittens maintained the lead for all but a few seconds, it was a tooth-and-nail fight between the Wayne women and the Warriorettes. Midland grabbed the lead several times in the first half until a sequence of baskets by Tammy Compton, Lori Mittelstadt and Yockey placed the Wildkittens ahead at the half 34-27.

The Wildkittens held their biggest lead in the second half at 13:48 after Kunzmann swooshed three consecutive baskets for a 17-point lead, 52-35.

This lead chipped down, however, with constant point production by Midland's Patty Schmidt and Cheryl Brooks. The Wildkittens were never safe until the final minute when Wayne's lead climbed to 13 points, assuring the Wildkitten victory.

In contrast to Wayne's back-and-forth battle, Tarkio took a slippery slide ride over Kansas champs Fort Hays. From the very beginning Tarkio was never in fear of going behind, jumping to a 12-point lead in the first few minutes with the points accumulating to a 44-22 halftime lead.

Everyone who played scored for Tarkio, but Donna Schroer, Deb Kahler and Connie Cook were the most familiar names in scoring showing 18, 12 and 11 points respectively.

For Fort Hays' Sheri Piersall was top scorer with 12, followed by Janna Choltz with 10.

Scoring for Wayne State showed an even distribution of points with Yockey and Mittelstadt on top with 12 each; Julie Brinkman with 11; Kunzmann, 10; eight for McKay and Sluder; and two points for Belz.

Brinkman also ranked high in the area she knows best, showing 11 assists for the Wildkittens. Wayne's free throw percentage was "fantastic" according to Willoughby, the Cats making 11 of 12 shots for a 92 per cent game average.

For Midland high scorers were Brooks with 23, followed by Schmidt, 11, and Pat Harder with 10.

In afternoon games of the Friday second round, Mount Mercy of Cedar Rapids, Ia., downed superior St. Catherine College of St. Paul, Minn., 75-68. Although the No. one seeded women laved all the way, they had to work until closing minutes before locking it up.

Victory put Mount Mercy into a 3 p.m. Saturday fifth place game against South Dakota State, a 66-59 winner over Minot State of North Dakota in the other Friday game. The South Dakotans also had a chore, leading by only 27-26 at intermission before gunning to their biggest pad at 58-43 with six and one-half minutes to go.

St. Catherine and Minot were matched in the 1 p.m. Saturday game for seventh place.

With one exception, all first-round games went topsided, including Wayne's 82-66 decision over Mount Mercy — sparked by Connie Kunzmann's 34 points. That rated as top score in Thursday-Friday action. The Kittens shot 60 per cent from the field.

Midland, Nebraska champion, escaped Thursday with a 75-73 squeak over St. Catherine after numerous changes of lead. The count was knotted at 73 a minute from the end until Cheryl Brooks hit an underhanded scoop shot to provide the winning edge at 49 seconds. The Kates thereafter lost a couple of scoring opportunities on turnovers.

In other Thursday games, Fort Hays State, Kansas champion, defeated South Dakota State, 82-70, led by Sheri Piersall's 27 points and Janna Choltz's 20.

Tarkio, second seeded, as champion from Missouri, had no trouble with Minot, 75-47, in the first round. For Wayne's Wildkittens, that score was painfully reminiscent of their season-opener loss at Tarkio, 78-46.

To the championship winner — Wayne or Tarkio — goes the prize of a bid under the AIAW national tournament starting March 22 at Pomona, Calif.

Both teams had reached the regionals finals before, Wayne losing a close one to Kansas State University several years ago, and Tarkio losing last year to William Penn. Both K-State and Penn now are competing in the big-college AIAW division.

Deadline Tuesday For Turkey Permits

Time is running short for Nebraskaans to apply for their spring shotgun turkey permits, reminds the Game and Parks Commission.

The second application period ends Tuesday. Permit requests must be at the Commission's Lincoln Headquarters by close of business on that date to be eligible for drawings scheduled on March 24.

An earlier application period accounted for all the permits in the Verdugo Unit. However, the Round Top area had 714 remaining at the opening of the current round of applications. Niobrara had 729, Southwest offered 57 and the Wildcat Unit had 70 remaining.

The spring shotgun turkey season runs from April 16 through May 8, while the archery hunt stretches from April 1 through May 8. Permit fees for other archery or shotgun are $15.

St. Mary's Wins Dixon Tourney

Youngsters from St. Mary's School in Wayne took home the first-place prize in the four-team Dixon basketball tournament Thursday night by defeating Dixon, 37-27, in the finals.

Leading by 18-13 at the half, the locals poured on the scoring in the third period to virtually lock up the title. Led by Jeff McCright with four of his game-high eight points in the third period, Wayne jumped out to a 28-15 margin going into the final stanza.

Scoring for Wayne: Todd Schwartz 8, Chad Dorcy 4, Shannon Dorcy 4, Sean Dorcy 2, Chris Wieseler 2, Tom Garvin 2, Pat Melena 2; For Dixon: Doug Moore 11, Stuart Lubberstedt 8, Chip Young 2.

Ready for A Rebound

EYEING the basket in hopes of a rebound is Wayne State's Connie Kunzmann who is sandwiched between two Midland players. Kunzmann led coach G.L. Willoughby's girls with 34 points as Wayne State topped Midland to get into the finals of the AIAW Regional tournament.

Wayne, Fort Hays Split

The possibility of a rainout never would have occurred to Wayne State baseball coach Larry Schultz a few days ago. Wayne's home debut Tuesday against Yankton College in a double-header starting at noon on the college diamond... If surprising weekend weather conditions don't continue. The Wildcats did manage to play their season opening games Friday as they split with Fort Hays State at Hays. Wayne's Dewey Edger made his college debut memorably with a pitching win of 9-0 in the first game. Hays retaliated with a 5-4 squeak in the second game. Wayne had two more doubleheaders on the calendar Saturday and Sunday at Kansas State University, Manhattan, weather allowing.

If a Tornado Strikes...

One function of the Civil Defense sirens to be tested Tuesday is to warn of the approach of natural disasters and with the tornado season beginning, it is important to know what to do in event of such an emergency.

A tornado warning tells that a tornado has been sighted in the area and usually will give information regarding the expected path or area of greatest danger, according to Nebraska Civil Defense Agency.

In event of a tornado warning, persons outside should seek inside, below ground level shelter if possible. Persons in the open should move away from the tornado's path at right angles. If there is no time to escape, they should lie flat in the nearest depression such as a ditch or ravine.

In buildings with more than one floor the safest place is in a below ground basement, interior hallways on lower floors, or in lower floor interior rooms.

North-south hallways with exterior entrances at ground level should be avoided. The Nebraska CD agency advises, and upper stories should be considered unsafe. If there is no time to descend to a lower floor, a closet or a small room with stout walls or an inside hallway will give some protection. Otherwise, heavy furniture can provide shelter.

In homes with basements, residents should seek shelter in the central part of the basement of the deepest below ground part of the basement.

Shelter should be sought under stairways or in an interior room or closet. In addition, a sturdy table or workbench can provide additional shelter.

Mobile homes should be abandoned in favor of a preselected shelter such as a nearby basement or well-constructed utility building. Shelter should also be chosen in advance for large buildings with free span roofs, such as gymnasiums or manufacturing buildings.

THE WINSIDE school board is expected to formally approve the hiring of science instructor Sandy Hughes during its April meeting. Miss Hughes, who signed a teaching contract with the school district in December, started teaching in January. The board, however, didn't include the approval during a monthly meeting. A native of Ainsworth, Sandy is a December graduate of Kearney State. She takes over for Debbie Childs, who taught junior and senior high science in the absence of a full time instructor.

Two Rivers Lake Opens April 1

Trout fishing at the Two Rivers State Recreation Area opens April 1, according to the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission.

Anglers must have a $2 daily trout tag when fishing the popular put-and-take trout lake. Fishing hours are from sunrise to one-half hour after sunset.

Fishermen should note that the number of fish allowed has been reduced from five to four trout. Inflation has hit hard at the production and rearing facilities that supply the lake with fish, and a change was necessary to continue operation of the lake.

Two Rivers is now open to the public for picnicking, hiking, warm-water fishing and other such activities. Two primitive camping areas will be available, since modern camping facilities do not open until May 14. Beginning April 1, the gates at Two Rivers will be open one-half hour before sunrise and close one hour after sunset.

WSC Is Host For MacGregor

Mary MacGregor and Shawn Phillips are scheduled to perform at Rice Auditorium on the Wayne State College campus on March 22.

Ms. MacGregor's first album, including her hit single, "Torn Between Two Lovers," is achieving success beyond her wildest imaginings.

She spent three weeks on the road with Peter Yarrow, formerly of Peter, Paul and Mary, and was well received before going on her own tour.

Phillips blends rock, folk and classical music into his own personal style. He attributes his ability to hold notes for as long as 45 seconds to yoga.

Boston Latin School, founded in 1663, is the oldest school in the United States.

Rare Beef Lovers Can Sigh Relief

Ground beef doesn't have to be cooked well done in order to be safe, according to Dr. Charles Adams, assistant dean of the College of Agriculture at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.
He says recent reports that hamburger must be cooked to 170 degrees F. or the well-done stage in order to ward off any danger of trichinosis are not true.
Although trichinosis is a contamination of food usually associated with pork, there has been some concern recently that some ground beef may have come into contact with pork and thus be a potential carrier. Adams says the concern is fool since some supermarkets use the same grinder for both pork and beef.
Even if contamination does occur, however, cooking ground beef to a temperature of 130 degrees F. is adequate to kill off any trichinae that might be present, he says. That's the temperature normally used to cook rare meat.
Adams, a long time meat specialist, notes that overcooked hamburger may lose all its flavor and tenderness. For rare beef lovers, then, cooking to just beyond the pink or slightly pink stage is fine, he says.
According to Teresa Shaffer, Extension food and nutrition specialist at UN-L, some have urged that hamburger be cooked to 170 degrees F. because that's the temperature authorities recommend for pork. However, she says, a temperature of 140 degrees is the minimum safe temperature for killing trichinae. The 170 degree level was set as a "sort of compromise," she says. The old advice was to cook pork to 185 degrees, which is "too overdone." The lower level provides a large margin of safety and is more appealing to people who aren't used to eating rare pork, she says.
Shaffer noted that persons should be careful, however, when eating hamburger. "Ground beef doesn't hold up as well as other types of beef such as steaks or pot roasts," she says, "because there is more surface area subject to contamination."
According to Dr. Adams, besides cooking to a 140 degree level, trichinae and other types of contamination can be killed by freezing. He says freezing hamburger at zero degrees F. for 20 days or at five degrees below zero for 98 hours will eliminate any danger.

Hueftle: We Have 2 Kinds Of Justice

"We should be embarrassed for our so-called equality of justice," an instructor of criminology at Northeast Technical Community College said Monday.
There are two different types of justice, one for the white collar crimes, and another for blue collar crimes, according to Gilbert Hueftle.
Speaking at Wayne Kiwanis club, Hueftle said an example of how unfair the justice system is could be seen at the Watergate trial. Persons involved in the breaking and entering of the Republican headquarters at the Washington Hotel were handed relatively light sentences because of the plea bargaining system so prevalent in justice, he said.
Punishment as a result of a conviction lacks the consistency throughout this nation and therefore fails to work, Hueftle noted. "We are too soft on (persons convicted of) high class types of crimes."
To counteract the two-justice system, Hueftle proposed that the U.S. courts set up a determinant sentencing system which would set down a specific punishment to be used by all courts.

fortunately, stay in Wakefield," the letter read by Fischer, said. Gardner took particular exception to the claims in the younger Gustafson's letter.

"I've lived in Wakefield every day for 25 years," he said. "I'm bothered by the misinformation presented."

"We have a hellish problem," he continued. "For four years now we've been trying to correct them."

The company manager acknowledged that water from the operation had on occasion run onto adjacent property but said the water doesn't carry animal waste.

The run off water is overflow from trough waterers in the first hen complex built. When beginning construction, the company was told it would be able to control overflow, Gardner said.

"When we found out we couldn't it was recommended that we build a holding pond."

There was more excess water than anticipated creating a run off problem, he continued.

"Excess water from the holding pond was pumped through the farm irrigation system and did

Lesson Ideas Given

For roll call, members of the A-Teen Extension Club gave ideas for lessons for the 1978 club year. Eight members met Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Harold Wittler.

run onto the Gustafson land, Gardner acknowledged. He said the irrigation boom was moved after complaints were received.

Excess water is now being pumped onto another farmer's land with his permission, Gardner said, adding, "It seems a little unrealistic to me that for the past six months, everyone has wanted all the water they could get but we put water where someone didn't want it."

He also acknowledged that disposal of manure is a tremendous problem for the company, particularly in the first complex built. Subsequent complexes were designed so manure is moved directly to a drier without being taken outside.

Some of the 60,000 hen poultry houses, were completed before the drier was finished and a blizzard which knocked down drier walls under construction further delayed the drier operation.

Manure was piled up, Gardner said. "It was a poor way to handle it but it was the only way to go." He noted that the company paid a contractor for burying some 100,000 tons of livestock waste.

Manure run-off did damage some adjacent land, Gardner said, but the company offered to pay damages.

He also said difficulties have been encountered in controlling odors emitted by the manure drier but said Big Red Farms has gone to considerable expense to alter the equipment in hopes that the problem can be solved.

"The drier is working today like it should have three years ago and I feel it is doing a good job," he said. The company is now awaiting the results of emission tests taken recently by the federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

"I might have made some people's lives miserable in the past, but today I think we're a good neighbor," Gardner said. "We're not money hungry profiteers from Omaha. If you have problems today, we want to know what they are."

"The DEC has sent representatives in the past who have suggested ways of handling problems. Drain said, and he thinks the company has been trying to make progress. "We didn't crack down terribly hard because we thought they were trying to solve the problems."

"If we hadn't thought they were trying, we would probably have been in court with them," Drain said during an interview.

Jack Sukovaty, chief of the DEC agriculture division, said in an interview that Big Red Farms has been working with the state agency "very strongly" during the past year.

The company has taken some "very extensive" steps to control odors, and controls installed are the most modern available, Sukovaty said. He added his opinion that the right type of management can solve the water and manure disposal problems.

Drain said he thinks the company will be willing to take steps to ensure manure won't leave the company's property.

Clarifying a point of testimony, Drain said steam, not smoke, is emitted by the manure drier. DEC engineers have informed him that "maybe hope is over the horizon" where odor from the drier is concerned, but warned that odor will probably never be eliminated.

Neither the DEC or EPA has any regulations defining what is an offensive odor, Drain pointed out. Odor can be measured but deciding what level is offensive is subjective, he continued. Odor from the operation can probably never be completely eliminated, but the DEC director said he thinks it can be reduced to a level neighbors will find acceptable.
