McGee Headlines List For North All-Stars

It may be an understatement, but North all-star basketbell coath Bob Kramid of Arlington feels his team has a group of "awfully talented kids." The 1977 all-star North squad may be the best collective group of individual talent that the Yankes have enjoyed since the game bagan in 196. "Ther's a jor'd good kids." Kremke said of both the North and the south. As a result, Kremke sees the possibilities for several good matchops in the all-star games where man-to-man defense is mandafory. "You can truly use almost any kind of offense you want," he said of the North's possible strategy for the Aug. 45 doublehaeder.

doubleheader. Kremke and assistant Joe Folda of Sidney will match their North squad against the South Aug. 4 at Mid-Pleins commu-nity college in North Platte and Aug. 5 in Lincoln at the University of Nebraska Sports Center. Both facilities are sir-conditioned.

ele-conditioned. Kremke and his star-studded North squad will invade Wayne State's Rice Auditorium where they will start practice in late July. The North holds a 6-3 advantage including a sweep of last yeer's two games, the invagural year for the summer soubleheader. Previously, a single game had been played in doubleheader. Previously, a_single game had been played in Lincoin. The 1977 North squad contains five Class A athletes, four from Class B and three from Class C. Although all the North all-stars are generally well-known throughout the state, the name that brings almost instant recognition is Mike McGee of Omaha North. With a 38.1 senior scoring average and 15 rebounds per game, the 6.5 North High product has been labeled one of the hottest collegiate prospects from Nebraska's high school ranks in recent years. McGee holds 11 Metropolitan Conference records and, according to North cach Bob Murray, "will make any team go and is a consant threat offensively and defensively." Teaming with McGee trom the Metropolitan Conference is Omaha Benson's 6.7 Dan Clausen, a rugged center whose 17 rebound average last year is tops among the North all-stars. The three Class C competitors on the North should prove to be just as competitive, From Class C champion Howells is 64-6 center Dick Jakubowski, He broke into the Howells starting lineop in January of his sophomore year and stayed there for the remainder of his high school career. He averaged 12.2 See McGEE Logae 5 years to come.

New storage facilities.

New sources of supply.

Conservation programs.

We re planning construction of a liquelieu fautral gas plant. An LNG plant takes gas not needed in warm weather, liquefies it, and stores it for winter use. We're expanding our existing storage facilities. We're planning to bring more fuelt or our system by finding other fuels that can be transmitted through the pipelines. We're actively testing residential "dual fuel" systems by infining other holes that can be transmitted through the pipelines. We re actively testing residential "dual fuel" systems where both natural gas and propane are used. These are some of the ways Peoples is making more energy available to our consumers. The gas industry is working to increase the total supply of natural gas. They're drilling new wells in the Gulf of Mexico and off the East Coast. Importing liquefied natural gas. Tapping vast new supplies in Alaska and the Arctic. And increasing the productivity of old wells by drilling them deeper. We're helping our customers conserve energy with a Free Home Insulation inspection Service and easy payment plans for insulation and automatic thermostat set-back devices. We're gradually adding the aerial thermal scanner technique to our service. It's a way of monitoring the rooftop temperature of your home so you can see at a glance how much heat you're losing through the roof. We sell appliances that are built to save treendous amounts of energy every day in your home. We're encouraging customers to conserve in every way we know how. And it's paying off—21% of them have followed our advice and re-insulated last year. This goes to prove how confident we are that you'll continue to heat your home, your water, cook your meals and dry your lobbe with natural gas. It's still the cleanest most efficient

Unicameral overrides veto on ADC payment increase legislation

CAPITOL NEWS LINCOLN — Gov. J. James Exon's first web of the 1977 Legislative session was promptly overridden by the law-maters.

Ves promptly overridden by the law-makers. Action came just one day after Exon returned to the Unicameral a bill which will increase aid to dependent children payments more than he had suggested in his budget message to the senetics on February 10. The override motion came from Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha and was supported by 30 votes — the exact number required to put the law into the books, despite the governor's objections. While urging his colleagues to disre-empastized the legislation would in-remase the state budget only seven-tenths of one per cent.

crease the state buoget oury service means of one per cent. The current cellings on ADC payments are $210 a month for a mother and one child and $42 for each additional child. Exon proposed increases to $233 for a mother and one child and $50 for each additional child.

dditional child. The new cellings will be $250 and $40. During debate preceding the override pie, several senators said there are udget cuts that can be made to make up for the increased general fund appropria-tion of 53 million the new law will require. Sen. Frank Lewis of Believe said, "We need to reshuffle priorities" and suggested one item that might be elimin-ated from the governor's budget is s1 million to upgrade the tractor testing laboratory at the University of Nebraska. Sen. Martin Kahle of Kearney said he was conservative but felt compelled to support the Increases because many ADC mothers are "having a tough time." He also discounted the idea that there is widespread cheating on the part of ADC recipients.

recipients. In his veto message, Exon said the increases had been approved "without consideration of the state's ability to meet these additional expenditures."

Packed Hearing Members of the Legistature's Public Works Committee got their ears filled with an exceptionally large amount of testimony recently during a public hear-ing on a resolution supporting the contro-versial Norden Dam. About two-thirds of the estimated 300 persons at the hearing indicated they backed the project which would irrigate about 77,000 acres. A recent U.S. District Court ruling that the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation's environmental impact statement was inadequate temporarily haited the project, also known as the Ofbault Unit.

statement was inducquate imporarily haited the project, also known as the O'Nuill Unit. The Tesofution, sponsored by Sens. John DeCamp of Neligh and Maurice Kremer of Avoroa, "Urged and admon-ished" Nebraska's congressional delega-lion to work aggressively for favorable consideration of the proposal. Those speaking for the resolution claimed the benefits from the work would be statewide while opponents said it would help only a few persons. "According to Dayle Williamson, execu-tive secretary of the Nebraska Natural Resources Commission, the project would reduce reliance on groundwater supples and would recharge aquifers. He said legislative support for the resolution hearing is held in Congress in April. The estimated cost of the unit is 5107 million. The requested federal appropria-tion for fiscal 1978 is about 58 million. Opponents included Wes Sandall, presi-tion. He claimed persons who would be attected were not allowed to vote on formation of the project's reclamation district. Another of his claims was that the proposed work cut through the land of farmers and ranchers and make pivot irrigation systems useles.

Personal Property Tax While those attending the Norden Dam hearing were jammed into the East Senate Chamber, another large crowd was attending a Revenue Committee hearing in the West Senate Chamber on a bill to Thcrease personal property tax exemptions.

hearing in the versi sense unamoer on a bill to Turcease personal property tax exemptions. Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood argued y the exemptions should be increased mainly for the benefit of farmers and businesses which must carry inventories. He said the personal property tax is inequitable and is unfairly administered and collected. According to Schmit, farmers cannot absorb the tax as part of their operating costs and cannot pass il along to consum-ers of their products. Businessmen who must have inventories are also adversely affected, the Bellwood lawmaker said. The bill he was supporting proposes an additional 37.5 per cent in exemptions for farm products and business inventories and would be fully implemented in 1980 when the state appropriation to the personal property tax relief fund would total 30 million. State tax commissioner William Peters opposed the bill, saying it would increase the 1977-78 fiscal budget, shift more taxes into real estate and increases the sales and income tax raits. We said Goov, J. James Exon is considering legislation that would phase out the tax over a period of about 10 years but would recer the relief fund for reimbursing counties at about 985 million. Schmit said he is positive 985 million would be "totally inadequate" in 10 years. Lodwing that far down the road and trying to figure out what the situation will be amounted to "buck passing," he said. Furnas County assessor Ruby Hayes and the Nebraska Association of County budivisions be fully concerned that political subdivisions be fully reimbursed or whatever they might lose as a tax base. Retirement Bill Representatives of cities asked the Legislature's Retirement Systems Com-mittee recently to kill a bill which would change fire and police department retire-ment plans in all first class cities as well as in Omaha and Lincoln. The bill would also apply to sherfif employes in counties which have provided retirement benefits for them. City spokesmen said the bill, strongly supported by policement and tiremen, would be to costly.

City spokesmen said the unit, struty, supported by policement and firemen, would be too costly. Among provisions in the measure is one to increase benefits to a minimum of 50 per cent of the final year's pay, with an increase of two per cent for each what after the pension starts, up to a maxi-mum of 70 per cent.

Lobby controls—threat to liberties? individuals and organizations would re-frain from presenting their views to Congress If they had reason to fear criminal penalities for failure to comply with complicated procedures requiring the advice of a lawyer to fathom. In any case, many of these heavy hand ed reform proposals are born of a popular misconception of iobbyists as a sinister types who head for Capitol Hill with loss of money in their pockets and no votes and leave it with lots of votes and no money. Sure it has happened. But it's not common. That kind of activity is utilimately counterproductive and the truly Washington-wise know it What should a good lobbying reform bill embody? It should be simple and easy to understand. It should be fair and equitable in its coverage.

Washington is a city much given to cures worse than the disease. The lobby-ing reform legislation being contemplation by Congress furnishes ample evidence of that problem. one kind of reform is certainly ded, partly because of the real abuses aurine king of reform is certainly needed, partly because of the real abuses which occasionally occur and especially because of the numerous detects of the existing law. But such abuses as there have been hardly justify the serious threats to our constitutional liberties that have been that's wrong with the present rules? As things now stand, individuals or organizations must register and file reports with the House and Senate when, among other things, their "principal tion.

purpose" is to influence national legisla-tion How do you decide what your principal purpose is2 No one seems to know. This clusive and subjective requirement plac-os conscientious people in the untenable position of not knowing what they must do to comply with the law. For the same reason, the vague language has made a tarce of enforcement, which is no longer even altempted. This situation, plus the scandals of recent memory, have given rise to numerous pieces of "reform" legislation. Consequently, both the House and the Senate are now considering lobbying reform bits thal would inhibit the discussion of legislation in private newsletters, compel private organizations to disclose their membership lists, classity as "lobbying" the process of informing the members of an organization about legis-lation of interest to them, impose com-plex and cosity burdens of red tape both on the "professional" lobbyist and on those who make only incidental and infre-quent contacts with Congress, and hold over the heads of all the threat of criminal penalties for failure to comply with these draconian regulations.

criminal penalties for failure to comply with these draconian regulations. Anyone who doesn't recognize such proposals as a serious threat to the constitutional rights of petition, free speech, free press and assembly is dangerously naive. Indeed, with respect to disclosure of membership lists the Supreme Court has consistently recog-nized that "... competied disclosure can seriously infine an privary of associa.

nized that ".... compelled disclosure can seriously infringe on privacy of associa-tion and beliet guaranteed by the First Amendment." Compelled disclosure was, in fact, one of the tactics used by recalcitrant state governments against the National Asso-ciation for the Advancement of Colored People during the early days of the civil rights struggle. It is wrong because it permits partisans to learn the identity of the members of an approximo arcanization the members of an opposing organization in order to harass or intimidate them

Equality needed in property tax system limitation if the valuations are low, the number of mills applied is simply increased and total levies in excess of 100 mills are not particularly uncommon in some districts. Such inequalities have put real stress on property owners, whether it is the family trying to buy a home or a landowner unfortunate enough to have his farm in a high levy school district. The word reappraisal strikes fear in the heart of a property owner that his taxes are going to go up. Actually the purpose of a reappraisal if property done

The matter of real property tax valua-tions in the counties of Nebraska has always been a bone of contention, but has assumed very large proportions in this session of the .Nebraska Legislature because of its relation to other issues. Since the state got out of the property tax field as a source of revenue for state purposes and turned to the sales and uncome taxes (1967) the need for equali-zation of valuations between the counties as larged been ignored. But with Tation of valuations between the counties has largely been ignored. But with nobody "minding the store." (Ife chickens have come in to roost. For example, there is the matter of multi-county taxing districts, such as community technical college districts that include a number of counties. A county which has had a relatively recent property valuation reapprisais auddenly may discover that a two-mill levy applied by a district taxing agency causes its residents to pay twice as much in laxes as residents of an adjacent county which may not have had a property valuation reapprisation of an adjacent county which may not have had a property valuation reapprisation for 20 years. Senator Richard Lewis of Holbrook addressed hinseft to this problem when he introduced LB 131 in this session. It yropoes that property values across the state be trozen at 1976 levels until every county has completed post-1975 reap-praisals. It would also limit counties, school districts and other units of local government to annual increase of six per cent in the size of their budgets. At its public hearing, the bill drew strong opposition from school interests who said a six per cent increase is not a realistic figure. An amendment was progosed that the 6 per cent could be exceeded it the taxpayers approved at a special election. An opinion from the attorney general's office has used inder bodgets. Thus the state is districts using in the contraversial subject of distribu-nion of state id to school districts qualifying for equalization add. is to equalize valuations in relation to other comparable property. And it is the state's job, difficult and pollically-unpop-ular as it may be, to "pull the whistle" on counties which have ignored and postponed their reappraisal obligations

It should have reasonable reporting requirements which are not so complex that they inhibit the free expression of opinion. It should not apply to persons who contact Congress infrequently it should not have a "chilting effect" on the exercise of the rights of petrtion and assembly.

Anything that goes very far beyond these simple requirements is likely to be a greater evil than those in purports to prevent. — Richard Lesher, U.S. Cham-ber of Commerce.

Of Nebraska's 93 counties, only 33 have had general reappraisals in the 1970's. The date of the last reappraisal on the rest go back to the 1980's and in the case of two, clear back to 1957 — M.M. Van Kirk, Nebraska Farm Burea.

It's nest-building time!

Spring is here, and all my friends are busy preparing to raise their families. My clever Uncle Thaddeus says lots of different creatures build nests, not just birds. Us voles have nests, too. Some other creatures that build nests are caterpillars, turtles, mice, ants, moles, muskrats, and more. It's also fun to try to spot the different kinds of nests built by the various kinds of birds. Can you match up these nests with the birds that make them?

The litter problem

OBSERVATIONS

Legislators have fairly littered the vicameral with litter bills this year — re in all.

Legislator's have fairly littered the Unicameral with litter bills this year — five in all. Sen. Shirley Marsh of Lincoln Intro-duced LB 75. which would increase the minimum penalty for littering from $25 to $50. The bill, now on General File, would also increase penalties for other game and fish violations. Just how effective this bill would be in controlling litter is questionable. An increase in the minimum fine should provide more of a deterrent but enforce-ment would remain a problem.

Increase in the minimum time should provide more of a deterrant but enforce-ment would remain a problem. Omaha sen. Larry Stoney's bill would have an even greater deterrant effect, in our opinion, if used. The bill would give judges an option when sentencing persons convicted of littlering. Rather than a fine or jail sentence, the judge could require those convicted of littlering to pick up litter in a designated area — roadsides and state parks would be good choices. Stoney said the purpose of the bill is to eliminate the annual 31 million state expenditure for litter pickup. Again, whether or not the bill could accomplish that goal is open to question Locally at least, the court news columns requently, indicating the manpower gener-ated by the law probably wouldn't the quently, indicating the manpower gener-ated by the law probably wouldn't be sufficient to take care of picking up all of the state's litter. However, the possibility of being sen-tenced to spend a Saturday picking up litter cartainly might make one think twice before chucking a can, bottle, wrapper or what have you out the window.

window. Sen. Loran Schmit's bill, LB 220, opens a can of worms better off buried and forgotten. The bill proposes to tax manu-facturers in Nebraska of items thought to forgotten. The bill proposes to tax manu-facturers in Nebraska of items shought to be the biggest contributors to the litter problem. Including some foods, soft drinks, newspapers and plastic contain-ers. An amendment to the bill has added wine and alcoholic beverages, automo-biles, tires and furniture to the list of items to be taxed. In fairness, just about anything might be included because just about any tangible object can become litter. Schmit's bill would impose a tax which would eventually cost the consumer. Nebraska doesn't need another of the seemingly endless special taxes which be taxed because of people who violate litter laws. It would make just as much some to fax the manufacturers of items most commonly solar under to linance as a the manufacturers. most commonly stolen in order to finance an anti-burglary campaign. The bill, had been bracketed on Enrol-ment and Review Final and was schedul-ed to be taken up the Unicameral on Tuesday. The legislator killed a bill which even-tually must be passed, despite some unpleasant results. Commonly known as the "BottlegBIII" it would have required a live-cent deposit on reusable bottles and a 10-cent deposit on nonreusable cans and bottles.

bottles. Senators Danald Dworak of Columbus, Douglas Bereauter of Utica and Steve Fawler, of Lincoln introduced this bill with the idea of encouraging recycling of containers and thus eliminating what they estimated to be 20 to 40 per cent of Utage

Bottle bills have been enacted success fully in other states. The law would have fully in other states. The law would have some unpleasant side effects, at least initially, Beverage distributors would be forced to initiate a system for picking up reuseable bottles, possibly increasing costs of labor for distributors. Discouráging the use of throwaway containers would also put some can and bottle makers out of work.

HAVEA HAPPY DAY

In the long run, though, Nebraska and the nation are going to have to stop using throwaway containers. According to the Energy Research and Development Ad-ministration the energy required to pro-duce one throwaway can or bottle would power a 100 wath tight bub for five hours. Will probably be later — the United States/s going to be forced to adopt some serious energy conservation measures. Ending the use of throwaway containers is one method.

Ending the use of throwaway commen-is one method Dworak also introduced a bill which would ban flip top cans and plastic ringholders by Jan. 1. 1981. This bill could cut down an specific types of litter but a bothe bill would eliminate the need for the measure. The bill is being held by the Miscelaneous Subjects Committee for further discus view

Subjects commune action toward controlling liter is stronger enforcement of existing laws coupled with charges of penalties, particularly allowing judges to sentence litterbugs to pick up refuse. And sooner or later, a bottle bill is a "must" — Jim Strayer.

rrigation Energy Requirements Depend on Pressure, Depth

The energy required to pump igation water depends upon e depth of the water supply low the land surface, the oper-ing pressure of the distribution m and the efficiency of the oing plant, according to dis-extension irrigation speciarae Morin thick extension irrigation specia-list George Morin. For a well being pumped at 800 gallons per minute (gpm) about one horsepower (hp) must be added to the water sopply is below the land surface. Thus, when ten inches of water are applied to a 130 acre field and the water supply is at a depth of 100 feet below land surface. Jobut 20 hp must be added to the water for 735 hours just to lift if from the ground, Morin said. With the same 800 gpm well approximately two and one-third hp must be added to the water for ach five pounds per square lock (psi) operating pressure system. Thus, for a center pivot with an operating pressure of 75 psi, about 35 hp must be added to the water in order to pressur-ize the system. A typical gated pipe will have an operating pressure of eight or nine psi and will require about four hp. Tests by the Agricultural En-gineering Department have shown that a pumping system can reasonably expect to have an operating efficiency of 75 percent. Thus, the brake horse-power generated by the power source of the pumping plant is about one and one-third that actually added to the water. Additional tests by the depart-ment have shown that the aver-age well in Nebraska uses one and one-third times the gnergy brecessary to satisfy its brake borsepower requirements Thus, with a 800 onm well

With gated pipe 24 hp is added to the water. The brake horse-power necessary would be 32, and about 1,600 gallons,of diesel (19,900 KW-HR of electricity) should be used for 735 hours of operation. Actual energy use will be 2,100 gallons of diesel (26,700 KW-HR of electricity) for the more hybrical pumping plant.

will be 7,100 gallons of diesel (22,700 KW Rd of electricity) for the more typical pumping plant. This means that the energy requirements for the typical power plant (using one and one-third time to fuel required) are considerably greater than for a system operating at 75 percent efficiency. In addition, for this example the energy require ments of the center pivol are two and one third times greater two and one third times greater than for gated pipe. These fac-tors, plus the increasing costs and decreasing availability of energy, mean irrigators should determine if your system is using more energy than it needs to and consider energy when deciding which irrigation system to purchase. Morin said horsepower requirements Thus, with a 800 gpm well operating in conjunction with a
