Refund Checks Waiting

Anyone who paid taxes in Wayne County in 1973 has a check waiting at county treasurer Leon Meyer's office, although the amount might be as little as three cents.

Meyer said the Nebraska Supreme Court decided in 1973 that a one mill tax levied then to support Nebraska technical colleges was illegal.

The Unicameral during its current session finally appropriated funds which have been disbursed to county treasurers so refunds can be made for taxes paid in 1973 in support of the tech schools.

Meyer said anyone who paid real estate, personal property, or motor vehicle tax during that year should have a check waiting in his office.

Amounts could be as small as three cents, for example, for a person who registered a trailer that year.

Meyer said checks can be picked up at his office or taxpayers can wait to receive them.

Allen Board Will Discuss Negotiations

The Allen school board is expected to discuss and possibly act on teachers' salary negotiations for the 1977-78 school year during its monthly meeting Monday night.

According to reports, teachers have reached an agreement with the board, but it won't be official until members formally okay the agreements.

Thus far, three teachers have indicated that they will not return next year. They are English teacher and basketball coach Jim Koonitz, music teacher Lorna Stamp and vocational-agricultural instructor Daryl McGhee.

McGhee, whose name was inadvertently left out of the April school board report, has been teaching at Allen for the past six years. He plans to go into farming with his father in Winnebago.

Contracts have been issued to all elementary, junior high and high school instructors, except for those who resigned. Issued a contract without the board's vote of confidence was business teacher Ron Wecker.

Wakefield Woman Becomes Citizen

Mrs. Gary Mitchell of Wakefield was one of 48 people to take the Oath of Allegiance to become an American citizen on April 21.

The ceremony took place at the U.S. District Court in Omaha. Judge Albert Schotz presented the certificates with the women's division of the Chamber of Commerce, The League of Women Voters, The Daughters of the American Revolution and the American Legion Auxiliary in attendance, passing out American flags, flippins and books on citizenship.

White Collar Numbers Increasing

What changes have taken place in the makeup of Wayne County's labor force in recent years?

To what extent has automation caused a shifting in jobs? What is the distribution now, as between white collar and blue collar employment?

Government figures show that the proportion of men and women in white collar occupations in the local area has been rising, year by year.

On the basis of data gathered for the country as a whole, the white collar ratio locally now is about 13.3 per cent higher than it was back in 1960.

At that time, according to the census taken that year, there were 3,851 people employed in the local area, 1,140 of them in white collar occupations. The rest were in blue collar jobs, in service industries or working on farms.

The facts and figures on employment are from the Department of Commerce and from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, which has made detailed studies of labor force distributions.

Since then, automation and mechanization in the factory, on the farm and in production processes in general have had a marked effect on the composition of the work force.

As a result, what with the readjustments that have taken place, the proportion of white collar workers in Wayne County has reached 42.9 per cent, it is estimated.

Elsewhere in the United States, the average is 42.6 per cent.

Under the heading "white collar" are a wide range of occupations, including professional and technical workers, teachers, sales clerks, bank employees, clerical workers, business executives and the like.

Classified as "blue collar" in the government's reports are machinists, craftsmen, foremen, construction and factory employees, farmers and others engaged in the production of goods or in their transportation, operation, maintenance and repair.

Although the number of people in blue collar occupations has increased by 4.5 million since 1960, reflecting the rise in the national population, the white collar contingent has grown more than three times as fast.

'I Have the Answers Right Here'

Region IV Board Meets Friday

Decision on Relocation Expected

The governing board of the region IV Office of Developmental Disabilities is expected to decide Friday where the agency will relocate its child development center.

The training and residence center for mentally retarded children is now located in Pile Hall on the Wayne State College campus but the lease expires June 30 and will not be renewed.

Region IV advisory board members met earlier in April to discuss alternatives for relocation.

The Village of Concord has offered use of the old Concord high school building for a $1 annual fee. Drawbacks, as seen by the advisory board, are remodeling costs, $600 monthly rent for specially built modular homes for children in the residence program, and distance from medical facilities.

The advisory board members also said they fear the center will lose some staff members, many are WSC students, if the center is moved out of Wayne.

Only one building in Wayne was available at the time of the advisory board meeting and Region IV director Mary Ann Brennan said location and the considerable amount of remodeling necessary to make the building suitable probably make it impractical.

The agency had also talked to contractors about the cost of leasing a new building — Region IV is prevented by law from purchasing real property — and found costs would be from $850 to $930 a month. Mrs. Brennan said then she questioned the fiscal feasibility of such an arrangement.

Advisory board members decided to take some additional time to try to find investors interested in constructing a building which could be leased at a more acceptable price.

Mrs. Brennan Tuesday said some interest has been expressed by local investors and contractors. That information will be presented at Friday's governing board meeting, which will begin at 1 p.m. at Jeff's Cafe.

Wayne State College plans to remodel Pile Hall into apartments for students, because of a demand for that type of campus living arrangement, according to administrative officials.

Junior Lawman Selection Named

Don Bock, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fay Bock, has been selected to represent the district American Legion at the Junior Lawman Program in Lincoln, June 6-10.

The representatives will undergo extensive training in law enforcement conducted by the Nebraska Highway Patrol.

Bock is a junior at Allen High and is sponsored by the Floyd Gleason Legion Post at Allen. Others selected to attend from the district are Kevin Kneiff of Newcastles and Tom Henderson of Emerson. Alternate for the district is Glen Sedivy of Wait-hill.

DEC Rule Sparks Clash

A pair of city officials squared off in a verbal donnybrook in the Wayne city council chamber Tuesday night over a squabble which had flared up earlier that afternoon.

Councilman Vernon Russell, manager of D & J Pulletts in Wayne, said he had been unable to use a road through the city sewage lagoon site Tuesday afternoon because the gate was locked. Russell wanted to know why.

The councilman said he has used the road for two years to gain access to land which serves as a disposal site for manure from the poultry operation. He said Brink and street commissioner Vern Schulz had allowed the use of the road so manure trucks could avoid losing droppings on city streets.

Brink said he had been informed that Nebraska Department of Environmental Control (DEC) regulations prohibit unauthorized people from being inside the fenced area at the lagoon and Schulz said the decision to prohibit access was made because trucks were leaving tracks in grass at the site.

Russell contended Brink should have been aware of the regulation two years ago when he (Russell) was first given permission to use the road, and said he would personally call Schulz a liar about tracks being left at the site because he

Dixon County 4-H Youngsters To Take Podium

The Dixon County Timely Topics 4-H speech contest will begin tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 at the Northeast Station near Concord.

Speeches will be judged on timeliness and identification with 4-H organization, delivery, personal appearance and audience response.

Ribbon placings will be awarded at the conclusion of the event.

City Will Test Warning Sirens

Wayne residents shouldn't be alarmed when they hear the city's Civil Defense sirens sound Friday at 1 p.m.; it will be only a test.

But knowing what those sounds mean will be important in event of a real emergency, said police chief Vern Fairchild, assistant Civil Defense director.

Sequence for the test is as follows: tornado warning, both high and low pitches for three minutes; a one-minute pause; fire signal, high and low pitches alternating every 10 seconds for three minutes; one-minute pause; attack signal, both high and low pitches, on for 10 seconds, off for 10 seconds, continuing for three minutes.

It will only be a test when the sirens sound Friday, Fairchild said, but in event of a real tornado or attack signal, shelter should be sought immediately.

Eagles Ceremonies Are Sunday

The Wayne Fraternal Order of Eagles chapter will conduct official institution ceremonies Sunday at 2 p.m.

Ceremonies for the men's organization will be in the Wayne National Guard armory. The women's organization ceremonies will be in local Eagles headquarters at 119 Main St. in Wayne.

State F.O.E. president Robert Carlson of Blair began a drive in January to organize a local chapter, called an aerial, of the Eagles organization.

There are 27,000 Eagles members in 31 clubs in Nebraska. The nearest neighboring clubs are in Norfolk and West Point. Officers for the Wayne aerial will be elected Friday night, a member said.

Burglary charges were filed Monday in Wayne County court against two men alleged to have participated in a break-in April 2 at Korn's NU Tavern in history.

The felony charges were filed against Darrell Alvin and Terry Biggerstaff, both of Wayne. The two men were arrested April 14.

About $280 was reported missing following the break-in.

Charges of destroying or injuring property, a misdemeanor, were also filed Monday in Wayne County court against two men.

Michael Niemann, 16, and David E. Clausen, 18, both of Wayne, were arrested early Saturday morning for allegedly damaging a parking car.

According to a police report they kicked and battered with a baseball bat an automobile belonging to an Emerson man.

Kiwanis Club Honors Students

Evaluation is one thing you can't get away from in life, according to Sunday night's guest speaker at the 13th annual Wayne Kiwanis Club scholastic achievement banquet.

Dr. Max Lundstrom, vice president of administration at Wayne State College, told a group of 48 honor students, their parents and club members that "throughout life you will be evaluated more in the future than in the past."

He explained that evaluation is a necessary tool for both employers and educators who seek top talent in this modern world.

There are three kinds of people in this world, he said. There are those who make things happen, those who watch things happen and those who don't know things are happening.

"You are here because you have met the goals and excelled," he told the eight junior high and 40 senior high school honor students.

Dr. Lundstrom urged the students to continue to reach for higher goals while maintaining their dedication to work hard.

Receiving honors were:

Seniors — Janet Baier, Cindy Bull, Katherine Haas, Laura Haase, Ron Koch, Terry Lessmann, Bill Marr, Sandra McLain, Aaron Nissen, Roger Wacker.

Minstrel Likes Fiddlin' Around

A former computer programmer who had fiddled around with music for nearly 20 years and finally decided to become a full-time musician will perform at Ramsey Theatre Saturday night.

"Henry the Fiddler" as the violinist bills himself will begin his performance on the Wayne State College campus at 8 p.m. His performance is sponsored by the Beta Sigma national broadcasting honorary society in conjunction with Ozark Attractions, Inc. Admission will be $2.

Tired of the routine as a computer programmer in Chicago, Henry went on the road as a minstrel for five years, then began playing concerts. An Iowa Beta Sigma spokesman said his repertoire includes a dozen different musical styles and every performance is usually different because he caters to the taste of his audience.

Winside Lady's Book Tells About Family's 'Growing Up' Years on Dixon County Farm

Growing up in a family of six children always means there are plenty of stories and "remember when's" whenever the family gets together for birthdays, holidays and just about any other occasion.

Although many families probably wish they had a written recollection of their "growing up" years, Mrs. Emil (Rosina) Thies of Winside sat down with pen in hand and went to work re-telling the adventures of her and her five sisters on their parents' farm near Concord.

"There Were Six," a book written by Mrs. Thies, was recently published by the Clinton Printing Co. in Clinton, Iowa, and relives the many adventures of Mrs. Thies and her sisters.

Mrs. Thies is the former Rosina Swanson, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Swanson of Concord. "There Were Six" derived its name from when the sixth daughter was born to the Swanson family.

The book includes stories of the girls' childhood days, dating back to 1909. Ventures in farming, homemaking, school, church, gardening, entertainment, butchering and processing meat and transportation are just a few of the usual and not so usual events Mrs. Thies talks about in her book.

The setting for the Winside lady's book is her parents' farm, in Dixon County.

Mrs. Thies said she wrote the book for the benefit of her grandchildren, family and friends. She said it took about two years to write in her spare time from memory. The book contains 79 pages, including pictures.

Her father, Rudolph, was born in Hamburg, Germany and came with his family to America by boat when he was a youngster. The family settled near Malcolm and later moved to a farm east of Concord where grandpa Andrew Swanson homesteaded.

Mrs. Swanson, the former Pauline Weseloh, was born near Emmett in Holt County, in a sod house built back into a hill. When she was a small child she moved with her parents to a farm near Wakefield.

The Swansons were married Oct. 9, 1907. Their first daughter, Rosina, was born in 1909. Following were the births of Edna Dangers of Wayne, Lillie Liplop of Winside, Gerthy Johnson of Norfolk and last, but not least, Mildred Dangers of Wayne, who, according to Rosina's father, was supposed to be a boy.

The girls, all born on the same farm, were baptized, confirmed and married in St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church, rural Concord. They attended Myrtle Creek School District 30 at Concord.

Mrs. Thies said the farm, which her mother and father sold in 1944 when they moved to Concord, still has many fond memories for her and her five sisters.

"When each one left home, we left behind a childhood memory tucked away on that farm," said Rosina. "Each of us had a favorite spot," she adds, "and mine was under a tree alongside a lane which led to the fields."

Mrs. Thies said she wonders if the tree still stands on the now deserted farm.

Mildred Dangers, youngest of the six Swanson girls, said she thinks Rosina's book is "fantastic." "To relive for the whole family our growing up years is something else," said Mrs. Dangers. "I enjoyed it (the book) immensely and it will be a treasure to me always."

Mrs. Thies, who was honored at a convocation Tuesday afternoon at Winside High School, summed up her book with the following poem she wrote:

Rosina, the oldest, born on a cold January Day

Then a year later, plus a few months, in April, Elsie came to stay;

Edna arrived in the next year, in October came Harvest time, Lillie a year and a half later, in June, in good old summertime. We waited seven years for our sister, Gerthy, who arrived in May.

And five years later, baby Mildred came our way. We enjoyed our young lives with work and play.

Let's remember in that unhurried yesterday, I don't think we ever complained we had nothing to do. We remember the joy, tears, sickness and pain

In those memories hold dear our youth again. We thank thee, Dear Lord, in this year of 1976. All healthy, all happy together — there are still six.

MRS. EMIL THIES of Winside glances through the book she wrote in which she talks about her family and their experiences growing up on a farm near Concord. The book, entitled "There Were Six," arrived from the publishers in Iowa on Easter Sunday.

Wayne Woman's Club Member Earns Top Award for Essay

For the second year in a row, the Federated Woman's Club of Wayne placed first in the state essay contest for professional writers at the 81st annual convention of the Nebraska Federation of Women's Clubs.

Over 400 clubwomen from across the state attended the convention in Lincoln April 19-21. Mrs. Ottwin Schlueter of Pender, NFWC president, presided.

Mrs. Margaret Lundstrom, a member of the Wayne club, received the first place award in the professional writer's category for her essay on an assigned topic, entitled "Arise! Activate Dreams." Last year, club president Mrs. Leila Maynard took top honors in the same category.

Her address at the Wednesday evening banquet was entitled "Improving the Quality of Life." Among those conducting workshops on Wednesday afternoon were Dr. Daly; Dr. Anne Campbell of the Nebraska Commission of Education; James Pearson, who directs the governor's Highway Safety Program; Charlotte Lewis from the State Library Commission; and Mrs. Ora Russell, NFWC parliamentarian.

Wayne Hosting SO Saturday

For the second consecutive year, Wayne State will be the site of the district and state Special Olympics track meets. The district meet gets underway this Saturday beginning at 10 a.m. at Memorial Stadium where about 100 youths ages seven years and older will participate in the five events. Meet director Jim Winch of Winside said the top three winners in each division will qualify for the state meet, May 20-21. The five events youngsters will compete in on the district level are the 50 and 220-yard dashes, relay, long jump and softball throw.

Let's Try It Again

Another meeting to organize teams for the Wayne County Softball League will be held Monday night at 7 o'clock at Mike's Tavern, 102 Main. Representatives from local and area teams will meet with a representative from the Nebraska Slo-Pitch Men's Softball Association to go over rules for the season. If enough teams are represented to form an eight-team or larger league, play hopefully will start the second week in May. Only a handful of team captains turned out for the first meeting this week.

Stolpe Cracks 3-run Homers To Lift LH

Cleve Stolpe ignited an explosion of Laurel runs Tuesday with a pair of three-run circuit blasts as the Bears of coach Bob Weisenberg outlasted visiting Allen, 10-7, in a slugfest which marked Laurel's first win of the season. Stolpe unloaded his double-barrel blasts in the fourth and fifth innings adding onto his team's 3-2 lead and putting his club in front by 9-2 before Gordie Kardell later scored for a 10-2 count. Allen bats didn't remain idle, though. In the top of the fifth the Eagles scored four runs on five hits, including doubles by pitcher Brad Chase (1-2) and right fielder Mark Rubeck. Allen drove across its final run in the sixth when Chase, who singled, crossed the plate on Kevin Hohenstein's two-base hit.

"They were hitting the ball pretty well, but it was our errors which helped them in the first inning," said a dejected coach Gary Troth after his club suffered its fourth setback in seven games. First three Laurel batters got on base with a walk and two base hits and scored with the help of Martin's two bagger and Allen miscues. The Eagles chipped away at the lead with runs in the second and third innings by Mark Creamer and Rayme Dowling.

Tennis Team Now at 12-6

With a 12-6 dual record after the weekend, Wayne State's tennis team is enjoying its best season in years. Wildcat netters defeated Westmar, 7-2, and Buena Vista, 9-0, in a double meet Saturday at Storm Lake, Ia.

A DOUBLE STEAL by Wayne runners Tom Ginn, left, and Aaron Nissen resulted in Ginn's safe slide to home plate while Nissen slipped in a chase down between second and first for the Blue Devils' first out in the three-run fifth frame. Allen second baseman Mark Creamer tagged out Nissen, then jumps into the air for the late toss to catcher Depny Uhl. The Wayne club went on to win the game, 7-1, to boost the locals' record to 4-2 going into a doubleheader Wednesday at Boys Town in Omaha.

Two Wins Boost Devils to 4-2

Pitching, Hitting Start to Pick Up for Wayne

Throwing for the first time this season, Wayne High hurler Doug Carroll tossed 11 strike-outs and gave up only one run Monday to lead the Blue Devils to a 7-1 win over visiting Allen. The win upped Wayne's mark to 4-2, including a 3-2 decision over Wakefield Saturday.

"Back-to-back singles in the top half of the opening frame produced the Eagles' only run of the afternoon, before Wayne started to wind up its attack with three runs in the fifth sandwiched between a pair of runs in the first and sixth innings. Allen pitcher Brent Chase, who suffered his first loss on the mound, started off in the first with a base hit, went to second on an error and stole third before left fielder Kevin Hohenstein drove in Chase with a single.

The Devils retaliated in their half of the first with runs by Jeff Zeiss, who scored on a balk, and Aaron Nissen. As the game progressed, Wayne got stronger on the mound and at the plate. In the last three frames, Carroll gave up only two hits while he struck out six. Meanwhile, Wayne bats connected for seven hits, including four in the three-run fifth.

Third baseman Tom Ginn singled in the fifth, went to second on an error and stole third before he and Nissen, who walked to first, attempted a double steal. Nissen was caught in a chase between bases but Ginn scrambled home safely for a 3-1 Devil lead. Also scoring were Carroll and first baseman Vic Sharpe with the help of a RBI single by shortstop Steve Bodonstedt and an Allen miscue. Carroll, who also shined at the plate with two hits in three at bats, drove in pinch runner Mike Rehwisch in the bottom of the sixth before he scored on catcher Kevin Murray's base hit.

Also having a good day at the plate was Zeiss who had a double and single in three at bats.

Against Wakefield Saturday, the Devils had a tougher go as the Trojans of Joe Coble rallied with two runs in the fourth and forced Wayne to get a run in the sixth to win.

Wakefield responded with a pair of singles and double with one way to score both runs in the fourth off winning pitcher Vic Sharpe. Catcher Dean Sharp and third baseman Doug Starzl each singled and hurler Jono Kline doubled them in to put the Trojans on top, 2-1.

Kline, who held Wayne to five hits, gave up a run scoring single to Murray who drove in Sharpe in the top of the fourth for a tie ball game. The game-saving play for Wayne came in the sixth on an on-target throw by center fielder Aaron Nissen who tossed out Starzl as he raced toward home plate. Starzl opened the frame with a double and tried to round the plates on first baseman Chuck Wageman's base hit. Wayne right fielder Dean Carroll got the game's longest hit when he connected with a Kline pitch to the left field wall for a triple and score Murray from first in the sixth.

WH Golfers Land Sixth At Oakland

Wayne High golfers tied Beemer for sixth and Wakefield golfers came in 13th among 14 teams Monday at the Oakland-Craig Invitational.

Wayne's foursome of St. Prather, Bob Bernhoff, Jay Stoltenberg and Doug Pferson shot an 18-hole total of 365 while Wakefield's team of Tim Patterson, John Viken, Lyle Borg and Mark Hitz finished with a 390.

Patterson led Trojan golfers with a 40 and 43 for an 83 to land him among the top 10 medalist golfers in the afternoon meet. Class C toughie Oakland won with a 315 total, which averages about a 78 for each player. Blair was second with 322 followed by Omaha Cathedral and Fremont Bergan with 351 each, Scribner with 355, Wayne and Beemer, West Point with 374, Tekamah-Herman and Stanton with 376 each, Hooper-Logan View with 377, Arlington with 378, Wakefield, and Waterloo with 414.

Prather again topped Wayne players with an 86 while Bernhoff finished with an 89, Stoltenberg with 94 and Viken with 96.

Far Wakefield, Pflerson was second with a 96, Borg followed with a 102 and Hitz had a 109.

Russell Raps Ringing Homers In Double Win Over Westmar

Four consecutive home runs — that's the feat Steve Russell accomplished in Wayne State's double win over Westmar here Tuesday. The Russell barrage represented just one of many sterling statistics that came out of the 15-0 and 12-2 romps.

Said coach Larry Schultz of the Russell roundtrippers: "I have never seen that happen in any game I have been associated with. And they were shots," the coach added. "One of them must have been three times as high as the flagpole." (The pole is behind the outfield fence about 330 feet out.)

'Low-Acid' Tomato Fear Squelched

Spring gardening time is here, and gardeners are once again concerned whether certain tomato varieties are unsafe for canning.

Specialists at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln dispute rumors that some tomatoes are too low in acid to be safe for regular canning methods. Tomato varieties that have been said to be low-acid include smaller tomatoes, some of the newer varieties, and light-colored tomatoes.

According to Dr. Roger Unlinger, chairman of the Horticulture department at UN-L, the so-called "low-acid" tomatoes are really not significantly lower in acid content. They are simply higher in sugar content," he says, "and so they taste sweeter."

Although there are some variations in acidity in tomatoes, he says there's not enough of a difference to make some unsafe for canning.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture concurs, saying all garden varieties of tomatoes, regardless of size, shape, color or variety are similar in acid content.

Teresa Shaffer, Extension food and nutrition specialist at UN-L, says concern over the issue arose because a number of seed catalogs are describing some tomato varieties as being low in acid. These include Pink O'Heart, White Queen, Pink Ponderosa, Yellow Pear, Snowball, Red Cherry and Patio Hybrid, to name just a few.

The amount of acid food contains does make a difference in how safe certain canning methods are, she says. For example, highly acid foods, such as most fruits, are normally considered safe for the water bath method of canning, which doesn't reach the high temperature levels that pressure canning does.

"This is because the low pH helps inhibit toxin development without the high temperatures," she says. For other, less acid foods, higher temperatures achieved in pressure canning are a must to destroy any potentially dangerous toxic substances.

So far, however, tests have shown that all tomatoes still fall within the cut-off point where they can be safely canned by the water-bath method, she says. In fact, the USDA reports only a "handful" of botulism cases due to home-canned tomatoes in recent years, none fatal.

Canners should be wary of over-ripe tomatoes, however, notes Shaffer, as these could lose enough acidity to encourage toxin development.

For those who are still concerned about canning "low-acid" tomatoes, Shaffer says they can add lemon juice, vinegar or acetic acid during canning to increase the acidity level. Recommended amounts and procedures can be obtained at local county Extension offices statewide.

Some tomato varieties particularly well-suited for canning include: Tomboy, Surprise, Red-pack, Fireball and Glamour. UN-L horticulture specialists say these choices have nothing to do with acidity levels, but they do bear large fruits which are meaty, firm, and tolerant to cracking and handling.

According to Study:

Many Rate Middle Age as Best Time

If you think you're happy with your life now, chances are you'll like it even better the older you get, according to research findings of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Department of Human Development and the Family.

Sally Van Zandt, an assistant professor who has been directing the department's research on life satisfaction among various age groups for the past several years, says that once people get adjusted to the idea of growing older, they usually find they are more satisfied with their lives than when they were younger.

For example, one departmental study found that 43 per cent of middle-aged persons interviewed said they were happier with their lives than they were when they were younger. Nearly 41 per cent said they were as happy and only 15 per cent said they were less contented.

According to Van Zandt, the same pattern appears to hold true for the elderly. "Those over 65 generally say they are more satisfied with their lives now," she says. "They seem to feel that life has been basically good to them."

Much of her work, however, has dealt with life satisfaction in that grey area most people refer to as "middle age." Put off by some and dreaded by most, middle age is difficult to define, she notes. "When you're young, you think it's 30 and when you're 30 you think it's 45," she says.

For research purposes, she says, middle age generally is defined as the years between 30 and 65, although she admits it is pretty much an arbitrary definition.

"It's largely the result of the adage that you can't trust people over 30 and that people are suddenly 'old' when they retire at 65," she says.

But despite the adage, many middle-age persons find they are more satisfied with their lives than at any other time in the family life cycle, she says, partially because their child-rearing days are over or nearing an end and they are free to reap the satisfaction of "having done a job well."

There also is a certain amount of stability in growing older, she adds. "Marriages may be better and there is a more widespread acceptance of roles in society, standards of living and occupational status," she says.

This is not to say, however, that people don't face difficult adjustments as they grow older she says. Many women, experience genuine crises when their children grow up and leave home because they must develop self-concepts other than that of mother, notes Van Zandt.

Men also frequently face an identity crisis as they reach middle age. "They may find that the company they've worked for all these years doesn't care about them personally or they may lose their jobs," she says. "They can't understand it because they feel they did all the right things and said 'yes' to all the right people and it didn't get them anywhere."

Middle age generally is a lot easier to face when self-concepts are not so limiting, she says. Studies have shown that mothers who also have careers adjust to growing older better than those who have defined their roles exclusively as housewives and mothers, she says.

In the same way, if a man thinks he is worthwhile only in relation to his job, he's almost certainly heading for disappointment, she says.

Single people also may find middle age a trying time, according to Van Zandt. "They're not so much 'dissatisfied' with themselves as with their roles in society and how people look at them," she says. Compared to those who are married, however, singles generally are most satisfied with their occupations, leisure time and standard of living.

One of the biggest hangups about middle is what Van Zandt refers to as the "maturity myth." She explains that "when you're young and you expect to act a certain way when you grow up. When you get older, you find you're still the same person. You still yell, lose your temper, cry and have difficulty coping with some things, and so you're disappointed."

"People don't just grow up and become mature," she adds. "There are stages in adulthood very similar to those in childhood. If there's a 'terrible two's,' there's also a 'frivolous forties'."

This problem has been magnified in recent years because of a growing life expectancy rate, notes the professor. For example, in 1925, the average life expectancy for Nebraskans was 48, she says, while now it is nearly 70.

"It used to be that a woman typically was a widow before her children were grown," she says. As a widow, she was "old" and so this really eliminated any middle-aged years. Now, however, a couple can expect to spend 15 to 20 years together after their children are grown before the husband dies, she says.

Thistle Control Recommended

Right about now, when farmers are doing their best to get fertilizer applied and corn planted, it's the best time to spray musk thistle.

This advice comes from University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension weed specialists, who say that musk thistle, a tenacious pasture pest, should be sprayed when it is in the rosette stage or when the leaves are still in a "flat pattern" close to the ground. Once the plant starts to "shoot" the flowering stalk, it becomes more difficult to kill with chemicals.

Fred Roeth, Extension weed control specialist, UN-L South Central Station, Clay Center,

HEALTH TIP

The organ which controls equilibrium or balance is deep inside every individual's head.

The Nebraska Medical Association points out that when this balance organ is affected, persons may suffer dizziness or other symptoms of imbalance, often an inner ear infection.

Balance is controlled by two kinds of nerve receptors located in three membrane-like tubes and two small sacs in the inner ear. Dizziness is a symptom of an inner ear infection which can be diagnosed through a simple blood test.

The nerve receptors or semi-circular canals are set at right angles to each other. Hair cells are imbedded within them in fluid which transmits brain messages through pressure on the cells when the head is changing position.

The other kind of receptor also uses hair cells, but its fluid mass is coated with a layer of tiny grains of limestone. Head movement causes the grains to shift, which makes the hair cells send out nerve impulses to the brain.

These tiny receptors within the inner ear are human gyroscopes to provide balance and equilibrium so persons can move about without injury. The Nebraska Medical Association says that consistent problems in balance may be a symptom of illness or disease that your physician should know about.

said the past winter apparently was tough on musk thistle in central Nebraska. At a research site near Ord, only about 50 per cent of the musk thistle rosettes survived in the winter, in contrast to near 100 per cent survival in the winter of 1975-76.

"Survival probably averaged higher than 50 per cent across the state, because the Ord site is on exposed upland terrain devoid of ground cover for protection," Roeth said. At any rate, enough survived to make normal treatment necessary, he emphasized.

April weather has been ideal for rapid growth and the normal spring treatment dates (by the end of April in southeastern Nebraska; by May 10 in other parts of the state), are recommended.

Herbicides to use are 2,4-D or 2,4-D plus Banvel, Roeth said. Good coverage is important, and chemicals should be applied when daytime temperatures are 60 degrees F. or above. The combination of 2,4-D and Banvel has provided slightly better control in UN-L tests, Roeth said.

"Neither treatment will likely give 100 per cent control, so some follow-up chopping will be necessary," the agronomist said. "Only by preventing seed production can we hope to stop musk thistle," he concluded.

Network Will Air Survival Test

What would you do if there was a fire in the high-rise building you were living in. How would you escape?

The National Disaster Survival Test will be aired over NBC-TV Sunday, May 1 at 7 p.m. CDT. The program is modeled after the National Drivers Test conducted 12 years ago, according to Rollin D. Schneider, Extension safety specialist in the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln specialist noted that this program is patterned after many different types of disasters, including being caught in high-rise apartments, tornadoes, floods and earthquakes.

Emmy award-winner Tom Snyder will host the 90-minute special Sunday. It will provide television viewers across the country with an estimate of their "survival quotient" — an index to how much viewers know about what to do in disasters or other potentially dangerous situations requiring life-saving knowledge.

According to Vincent L. To-fany, president of the National Safety Council, "this is especially appropriate and timely because of the great number of disasters and disaster related accidents recently experienced by the nation in addition to those that are anticipated in the near future."

Man, Nature Brotherhood Essential to Overcome Ecological Crisis

If men were to adopt the Indians' spiritual attitudes toward the earth established before the Europeans settled in America, then today's ecological crisis might be solved, said Clara Sue Kidwell, the first House-Neihardt dialogist to visit Wayne State College.

She was sponsored by the Wayne State College Center for the Development of the Humanities with funds funneled through the Wayne State Foundation.

In her formal talk Thursday evening, Miss Kidwell, who is part Chippewa and Choctaw, emphasized the Indian's relationship with nature, Western European misunderstanding of the Indian culture, and man's exploitation of the earth.

She noted that ever since Western Europeans settled in America, white man's concept of the wilderness had differed from the Indians concept. White men felt that forests and the wilderness had to be conquered. Land to the Europeans was something to be cleared, to be controlled, to be tamed, she said. The white man did not understand why Indians did not control the earth and considered the Indian hand method of farming unproductive. But to the Indians, Miss Kidwell said, land was the mother, the source of all life, and not regarded as private.

"Land was something to be held in common among them and to be held for the good of all people," the Berkeley professor pointed out. Not until the 18th century with the French philosophers did Indians come to be regarded as "noble savages and children of nature."

"All too often the Indian's land was taken away in favor of European farming," Miss Kidwell said. She noted the Christian belief that human beings are dominant over nature has contributed to attitudes that have fostered man's control of the land leading to the current ecological crisis.

Miss Kidwell proposed that man adopt the old Indian beliefs of man and nature are brothers in order to respect the land and use natural resources wisely. (She later emphasized the "brother" concept from a passage in Neihardt's "Black Elk Speaks" when he referred to two-legged and four-leggeds as inter-related, who must conscientiously work together.)

Explaining the Indians' relationship with nature, Miss Kidwell noted that a basic difference exists between the Indian spiritual concept of the universe and the Western European mechanistic concept.

While white man separates the natural from the supernatural, said the professor, Indians believe that all is supernatural. She emphasized that the whole basis of Indian life relies on an on-going relationship with the spirits.

White man develops and controls the land with constant technological advances, but the Indian, who believes that all is spiritual, asks for help and provision of natural resources from the spirits, Miss Kidwell explained.

The professor, with a masters and doctorate degrees in the History of Science, noted that while Indians have not developed the land in white man's way, they have developed highly complex systems of social organization and ceremonialism over nature.

The professor said that while the Indian's careful use of the land has established him as a conservationist to the white man, it is ironic that this same Indian is subject to white man's laws which exploit the land. She noted that a main difference in white man's idea of conservation compared with that of the Indian is based on the idea that "things will run out." Indians, who would sometimes let surplus buffalo carcasses rot, felt that animal and natural resources were abundant and that these resources were provided by the spirits.

She stressed that people should realize that some resources are not limited. The University of California professor pointed out that today's farmer burns up more caloric energy through machines than through caloric intake, a statement not true for Indians who still farm by hand. She also noted an increasing dependency by white man today on fossil fuels that are not becoming scarce for agricultural purposes.

President Carter's energy solution of coal as a main fuel source means that "reservations are coming under increasing pressure to develop their land since many of the reservations are underland with coal," she said.

The Indian is faced with an economics versus tradition question, the professor stated. Should Indians sell their land for money needed to live reasonably and lose their culture and way of life to the white man? Or should the Indian cling to the land for tradition's sake, while suffering economically?

Miss Kidwell commented that in the Hopi and Navajo Black Mesa areas the Peabody Coal Company is "literally raping the earth through strip mining." She also noted population repercussions through strip mining.

The House-Neihardt dialogist said the ecological crisis in the modern world imposes a threat on society and Indians who do wish to continue living in the Indian way.

BACKYARD CHEF?

On the basis of past experience, some families may feel that backyard barbecues are devices put into the world to destroy good meat and ruin the cook's good humor.

If you have called your backyard off limits for barbecuing attempts, think again. With a little planning and brushing up on some barbecue know-how, the backyard chef can once again have a place of prominence in your family.

Any fresh meat cuts that can be roasted or broiled are prime candidates for outdoor cookery. For example, barbecue menus can be built around beef, pork and lamb roasts; smoked or cured ham and ham rolls; spareribs; tender beef and pork steaks; lamb or pork chops; ham slices; tender beef or lamb cubes and patties; bacon, and the many varieties of sausage.

Don't forget about poultry, too. Young chicken and turkey broilers are best for barbecuing — two to three pounds of chicken, and four to seven pounds of turkeys. Ducklings and young geese are also deliciously different when barbecued.

Although cooking time will vary in certain situations, basic guidelines can be used. Steaks, chops, patties and other grilled meats vary from a total of 10 to 12 minutes for frankfurters to 15 to 20 minutes per side for a two-inch medium-rare beef steak.

Cooking time for roasts may vary from one to one and one-half hours for small bone-in roasts, such as spareribs, to three and one-half to five hours for a large boneless meat or poultry roast. Allow at least one to one and one-fourth hours for chicken halves and parts of similar size.

To prepare the grill for barbecuing, line the bottom of the fire bowl with heavy-duty aluminum foil, the cover the foil with about a one-inch layer of gravel.

Start the fire far enough in advance so you will have a good bed of coals at the time you plan to start barbecuing. The usual method — which takes about 45 minutes — is to stack briquets in a pyramid shape, soak lightly with charcoal lighting fluid, let stand one minute and light.

Make sure the liquid fire starter you use will not give the food an unpleasant flavor or odor. Never add liquid starter to a fire that has died down and needs reviving; a dangerous flare-up can occur. Also, never use kerosene, gasoline, paint thinner or alcohol for lighting a briquet fire.

When the lighted surface is covered with gray ash, spread the coals evenly. The fire is then ready for cooking. A better fire and more uniform cooking will result if the briquets are tapped frequently to remove the gray ash.

Wood chips or flakes such as hickory, oak or fruit wood give an extra smoke flavor to barbecued meat. Soak chips in water at least one hour before use to give maximum smoke without burning. Add a few chips to the coals while the food is cooking. Liquid smokes also work well in marinades and basting sauces.

"A Tornado!"

Tornadoes are occurring much more frequently in recent years, and the loss can be so complete. Be sure your property insurance includes full replacement value coverage for tornado or windstorm damage.

Pop's Partners

Larry Bakkers entertained 12 members of the Pop's Partners 4-H Club April 11 at 7:30 p.m. Co-hosts were the William Domsch family.

The group responded to roll call by telling what they like best about spring. Pat Domsch gave a demonstration on cake decorating.

Next meeting will be at the Willis Kahls on May 9 at 7:30 p.m. Norman Meyers will assist. Mark Muller, news reporter.

He's suffering from a Heart Attack, but he may die from ignorance

Because the people around him have no idea what to do. And, because they don't, he may die. Needless.

If you don't know how to help a heart attack victim, it's time you learned.

If you discover someone who has collapsed, chances are you can save him if you know CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation). CPR will teach you how to tell whether his heart has stopped, or whether he has just fainted. If his heart has stopped, you'll know how to keep him alive until medical help arrives. With mouth-to-mouth ventilation and closed chest cardiac compression, CPR has to be learned. Contact your local American Heart Association for information on CPR training in your area.

If you don't know CPR, the only thing you can do is call the emergency medical service as fast as you can. Because if his heart isn't beating, he'll be past any kind of help in six minutes.

So remember what we've told you. Take the time to learn CPR. Ignorance is a terrible reason to die.

council. City attorney Budd Bornhoff, attending his last council meeting in that capacity, agreed with Russell's observation and declared the action void.

Russell also said he disagreed with the substance of the opinion because it provided for some ornamental lighting.

Russell said he fears that could set a precedent and pointed out that a request for ornamental lighting in the downtown business district has been rejected.

When engineers passed around preliminary drawings of a trash compactor station the city plans to build, Russell also questioned whether or not the council had ever authorized engineering on the project.

City clerk Bruce Mordhorst checked his records and found that the motion on the transfer station was to direct the administrator to go ahead with the project.

Bornhoff said the motion was broad enough to cover engineering.

The engineer said a rough cost estimate for the building and compactor, which will compress refuse into containers for transportation to a landfill, is from $80,000 to $90,000.

Russell, a commercial trash hauler, revealed that he is working to set up a landfill because the transfer station will put him in competition with the city. He said fees for using the compactor proposed so far are unfair. Based on a cost of $55,000 for the transfer station, Russell estimated it will cost the city $21,000 a year to operate the station and the electric compactor usage fees won't generate half that amount.

Russell said he is moving as rapidly as possible to set up a landfill and asked that any additional engineering be held up two weeks until he can offer more details on the landfill and what he will charge for use.

He said he wants to see the taxpayers stuck for over $200,000 the next 10 years for a facility which will put local haulers out of business," he said.

Vakoc pointed out that he voted against the transfer station originally but said it would be hard for him to justify delaying the project now.

He said Russell was given an opportunity to present a proposal on a privately operated landfill at the time the transfer station decision was made but had not given any indication of what usage fees he would charge.

Russell said that then he was asking for an assurance from the city that it would not operate a transfer station or landfill. Now, Russell added, he is not asking for any assurance but will operate the landfill strictly as a private business.

He estimated that construction costs of the station will run nearly $100,000 and suggested that taxpayers decide if it should be built, through a referendum vote.

In other action the council: —Approved a capital improvement program.

—Approved the appointment of Bernard Wyatt of Norfolk as a retirement officer of the city while regular officers are attending training in Grand Island.

—Approved an ordinance providing for retirement and pension plan for elderly city employees.

—Failed to suspend the statutory rule calling for three separate readings on an ordinance to change from four to two months the amount of time city residents can have unlicensed vehicles on their property. The ordinance will come up for second reading at the next council meeting.

—Failed to pass a motion on the title of an ordinance to create an improvement district in five blocks of the Roosevelt Park addition to the city.

With only six council members present, negative votes by Vakoc and Jimmie Thomas blocked further action on the ordinance because a majority of the elected council did not vote in favor of the title, but the ordinance will be reintroduced under a new number at the next meeting.

vides that paving can be extended through the two blocks through a resolution only. A petition was presented Tuesday night bearing the signatures of all adjacent property owners asking for armor coating, if the city agrees to bear half the cost.

The type of paving contemplated for both the S. Douglas and Roosevelt Park street projects is double armor coating.

If the projects are completed, the council will sit as a board of equalization to decide how much of the cost will be assessed back to property owners.

Property owners have indicated they favor the projects if 50 per cent of the cost is borne by the city. The council can make no commitment in advance but has given some indication that it would favor such an arrangement.

—Approved the following prices for swimming pool tickets: family—$20; individual—$7.50; single admission—50 cents.

Personal property tax bill generates heated debate

CAPITOL NEWS

LINCOLN — A bill which came before Nebraska's lawmakers late in the session has been generating a lot of debate — much of it heated.

The measure is LB518 which would abolish the personal property tax during the next three years — first on farm equipment, next on business inventories and last on livestock.

The night before the legislature began discussing the controversial proposal, Gov. J.J. Exon met with more than a dozen senators so they could outline their differences on personal property relief.

Some time ago, the governor said his support of the legislation would hinge on several conditions. One of these is that the legislators pass a bill that would limit the amount by which local governments could raise their annual budgets.

That condition plus statements Exon made during this meeting with the senators didn't go over very well with Sen. Loran Schmitt of Bellwood, principal introducer of the exemption bill.

Schmitt charged the governor with "an appalling attempt to dictate the order of legislative business."

He spoke against an amendment that would have given livestock an exemption ahead of business inventories.

Even though livestockmen have "gone through hell without a shirt" the past several years, Schmitt said, they have agreed to have farm animals last on the priority list.

The amendment, favored by the governor, mustered only nine supporting votes, compared to 29 that were cast against it.

Also voted down was an amendment from Sen. George Burrows of Adams. He proposed exemption the first $50,000 in actual value in all three classes and a 50 per cent exemption on actual value between $50,000 and $100,000.

The bill provides that the maximum state appropriation to the property tax relief fund will reach $70 million in 1980.

Money in that fund is distributed to political subdivisions to make up for loss of revenue generated by levies on personal property.

Burrows argued that with the $70 million lid, there eventually would have to be a shift to heavier reliance on property taxes by local governmental units. When that shift occurred, the farmer would wind up a "dead-head loser" unless the bill included his amendment, he said.

Bills Advance

The bill to increase state aid to schools by $20 million annually until it reaches 40 per cent of the school's operating costs has gotten through its first test in the legislature.

But the motion to advance the measure picked up only 25 votes — the exact number required to get a bill moving through the legislative machinery after preliminary debate.

If the proposal, sponsored by Sens. Gerald Koch of Ralston and Shirley Marsh of Lincoln, gets through the Unicameral, it will very probably be vetoed, just as similar legislation was the past two years.

It would take 30 votes to override a veto, and there is doubt among legislative observers that many could be rounded up.

Also receiving first round approval recently were the 778 pages of criminal code revisions.

The lawmakers devoted one hour almost daily since March 28 to consideration of the proposed code changes.

The primary code measure, which included sections dealing with abortion, drugs and sexual assault, triggered some of the hottest arguments this session. And there have been indications more can be expected when the code revisions come up for second round consideration.

Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha, who has been the most critical in his comments, has promised he will be offering more amendments.

He did succeed in getting deleted from the code the anti-riot statutes placed into the books in 1969 during the period of campus and political unrest across the country.

Some of the laws passed by the Unicameral during that period would have been worthy of the Gestapo, according to Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh.

Sports Complex

It appears the legislators won't be discussing a name for the state fair-ground sports complex — at least not for quite some time.

The senators recently agreed to postpone indefinitely action on a bill which some of them had tried to use as a vehicle for changing the name of the multi-million-dollar structure after University of Nebraska Athletic Director Robert Devaney.

In its original form, the bill would have eliminated the statutory prohibition against naming state buildings after current state officials or employees.

As it stands now, the measure provides for calling the building the Nebraska Sports Complex. The bill remains alive, but Sen. Frank Lewis of Bellevue who fought the hardest to have the sports facility named after Devaney said he doesn't want anyone to mention the subject to him again.

"Get this abhors off my neck," was his request to the legislator.

Court Ruling

The Nebraska Supreme Court has ruled a search made in violation of the constitution is not made lawful by what it brings to light. In a 4-3 split decision the court majority said Scottsbluff County district court should have suppressed evidence used in convicting Richard Colgrove who had been charged with possession of marijuana and possession of a concealed weapon.

Colgrove was arrested by a Minatara policeman and a Scotts Bluff County deputy sheriff while they were looking for other persons for whose arrest the deputy had warrants.

While checking the identity of the occupants of the Colgrove car, the deputy smelled marijuana and noted that the speech of one of the occupants was slurred.

The officer then continued his search and found a small quantity of marijuana and the gun.

But the Supreme Court said the evidence could not be used because there was "nothing in the circumstances or, within the officers' knowledge, as demonstrated by the record, which gave any ground whatever for an investigatory stop . . ."

The court's dissenting opinion said the driver of the Colgrove car could not produce a driver's license and this gave the officer the right to find out whether a license had been issued to him. It was during this investigation that the officer smelled the marijuana and this justified further investigation, the dissenting opinion said.

Consumer advocacy bill pops up again

Along with the first crabgrass and dandelions of spring, that hardy perennial Agency for Consumer Advocacy bill is popping up again. This year, the ideas is to railroad it through Congress so fast that effective opposition won't have time to develop.

The ACA is an idea whose time has come and gone. Since its proposal eight years ago — when it was called the Consumer Protection Agency — there has been a revolution in consumer protection acts and regulatory reorganization. These new developments include the establishment of the Consumer Product Safety Commission, the Federal Energy Agency, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, the Environmental Protection Agency, the Magnuson-Moss Federal Trade Commission Improvements Act, the Hart-Scott Antitrust Improvements Act, the Toxic Substances Control Act, the Medical Devices Amendments of 1976, the "Government in the Sunshine" Act, the Freedom of Information Act Amendments, and countless other consumer protection bills.

Consumer "advocacy" sounds like a great idea, in the abstract. It isn't until you get beneath the label that you learn what a bureaucratic force the sponsors have in mind.

Consider the following list of functions for the agency, to which I have added, in parentheses, the existing governmental body or bodies responsible for the same function:

—Plead the consumer's case within the government. (White House Consumer Advisor)

—Improve the ways rules and regulations are promulgated on Federal Paperwork; Office of Management and Budget; General Accounting Office.)

—Aid the President and Congress in identifying inefficient government programs. (All of the above.)

—Help correct inequities in those programs that are designed to protect consumers. (Consumer Advisor; Paperwork Commission; Ombudsmen and Consumer Advocates in the various federal agencies and departments; senators and representatives)

—Help fight inflation by monitoring governmental actions that unnecessarily raise costs for consumers. (Council on Wage and Price Stability)

—Litigate on behalf of consumers in court. (Federal Trade Commission; Justice Department; Consumer Product Safety Commission; others)

The truth is, the ACA would have nothing to do with individual consumers. Rather, it would function as a taxpayer-financed mouthpiece and lawyer for self-appointed consumer activists.

It is impossible to improve upon former Senator Sam Ervin's Caustic summation of the premise behind this proposal: "Because the bureaucracy has become too pervasive to enable consumers to appear before existing federal agencies. It is proposed that Congress create yet another federal agency before which consumers also will not appear."

The ACA would also have a license to interfere in the proceedings of other federal regulatory agencies, which were themselves established to represent the consumer.

These other agencies are not exactly speedy now. It took the Federal Communications Commission 35 years to wrap up its longest-running case. By contrast, the Interstate Commerce Commission managed to approve the sale of the troubled Rock Island Railroad in only 12 years. In the meantime, unfortunately, the railroad went bankrupt. The point is, the consumer has an interest in promptness and economy in government action, too.

Arguments that such an agency will "start small" are an insult to the intelligence of everyone who can remember when the whole government was "small." All government agencies start small. The universal problem is, they don't stay that way very long. — Richard Leshner, U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Our liberty depends on the freedom of the press, and that cannot be limited without being lost. — Thomas Jefferson, Letter, 1786.

Target price concept misunderstood

If a poll were taken among Nebraskans as to their understanding of the "target price concept" of the federal farm program in existence since the 1973 Act was passed, few of the non-farm population and only a percentage of the actual farmers could explain how it is supposed to work.

Most understand the concept and workings of government farm commodity loan programs because they have been a basic tool of federal farm programs since 1933. But the "target price" is something else and the explanation of why it isn't widely understood is simple . . . it hasn't had to be used because since the Act became effective market prices have generally been above the "target price" rates set on wheat, corn and cotton.

There is an exception in this pattern and it is rice. Those who have been clamoring loudly for big increases in farm commodity "target prices" along with much higher loan rates than Secretary of Agriculture Robert Bergland has announced, would do well to take a look at what has been going on for the rice growers.

A world surplus of rice has been built up and huge supplies have been over-hanging the domestic and international market. Americans are not big rice eaters and so most of our production looks to export markets. Farm prices for rice averaged $6.55 per cwt. from August to December, about one-fourth less than for the previous year. When the target price was originally set at $8.25, it was well below the cash market and growers were expanding their production.

Now deficiency payments of $1.70 per cwt. have been triggered on the production of growers' allotted acres and the USDA says payments to growers will total about $135 million. The proposed target price for rice for 1977-78 is $8.40, but for 1978-79 it faces a proposed reduction to $6.75 cwt.

In comparison to U.S. production of corn, wheat or soybeans, rice is a minor crop and always will be. Perhaps in this day of dealing in terms of billions of dollars, $135 million isn't much, but it obviously spelled trouble to the extent that the new target price is proposed for $6.75.

Rice growers are probably losing money at the market price of $6.55 cwt. Their warehouses are bulging with rice that they don't know what to do with, and undoubtedly they wish they were full of $9 per bushel soybeans right now. Normally they would reduce their rice acreage and plant more soybeans and probably that is what they will do if the rice target price is cut back.

Suppose Secretary Bergland had, as some advocated, boosted the "target price" well above current market prices on the nation's six-billion bushel corn crop or the two-billion bushel wheat crop and it is easy to see how things can get out of hand quickly with artificial pricing. First, the nation's taxpayers would not stand for it, and they outvote farmers about 97 to three. Second, unrealistic target prices and loan rates would price U.S. farm commodities out of the world market. Third, they would thoroughly disrupt and probably kill the U.S. live stock industry.

Perhaps Secretary of Agriculture Bergland had been looking over the rice situation when he projected his recommendations for wheat and feed grain producers. — M.M. Van Kirk, Farm Bureau Federation.

OBSERVATIONS

Energy-saving idea

We heard an energy-saving idea proposed which the Carter administration might do well to look into.

Instead of taxing the big gas guzzlers, why not set up a system whereby fuel economy is rewarded by a higher speed limit.

The original idea behind the 55-mile per hour limit, after all, was to save gasoline. Instead of a penalty for big-car owners, the proposal would reward buyers of small cars which get good mileage by allowing them to travel faster on highways. A sort of sliding scale could be set up.

Gas hogs, for example, would be stuck with the double nickel limit, while a compact getting, say, 35 miles per gallon, could go 65 m.p.h.

We're thinking particularly of interstate highway system driving, although the system could perhaps be extended to some two-lane roads. But the privilege of being able to drive faster on superhighways, we think, would be quite an incentive for the average American to buy a small car.

Drivers wouldn't feel they were forced to drive a small car because a federal tax put the big buggies beyond their reach. The system would effect the rich, poor and middle class equally and the auto industry probably wouldn't feel like a change in production had been jammed down its throat by the government.

At the same time, Detroit would get the message loud and clear: "Produce the car with the best gas mileage, and you will probably have the most sales."

The proposal would inject a competitive aspect into the quest for fuel efficiency, make it part of the free enterprise system. The auto industry would look for ways to get more miles per gallon in response to a demand from consumers, rather than because it is complying with one more tiresome regulation imposed by the government.

Our first reaction to the proposal was that such a system would create enforcement problems. It was pointed out, however, that enforcement of staggered registration and safety inspection laws has been successful through the use of numbered and colored stickers. Such a system should work equally well for a varied speed limit system for highway driving only.

The idea, by the way, came from a Wayne resident who wishes to remain anonymous. We haven't heard anything like it proposed before and hopefully, if it catches on he will step forward to claim the credit.

There would undoubtedly be some bugs to work out of such a system, but they don't appear to be insurmountable. People generally respond to a reward much better than they do to a rap on the knuckles and the idea is worth looking into. — Jim Strayer.

Beef producers should vote

It appears registration for the beef check-off referendum will be held June 6-17 with voting following two weeks later.

From explanations we've heard, it sounds like the proposal could be a good thing for the beef industry if money collected through the check-off is used, properly.

The beef program is modeled after a similar one in effect for the cotton industry and reports we've heard indicate cotton producers are pleased with results.

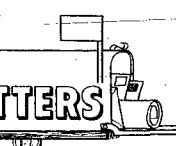

Some safeguards are built into the proposal which should reassure those who might be hesitant about voting in favor of it. First, the check-off is voluntary in that beef producers will be able to obtain a refund of check-off money upon request. Second, the Secretary of Agriculture can conduct another referendum if it is requested by 10 per cent or more of the number of cattle producers voting in the upcoming referendum to determine if they favor suspension or termination of the program. Such action would be taken six months later if producers vote down the order.

The important thing is for producers to register, and follow with their vote. At least 50 per cent of those who registered must vote, and two-thirds of those voting must be in favor of the measure.

The Beef Research and Information Act offers a program for the beef industry and it is up to beef producers to decide if it is good or bad. They can have a say only by casting their ballot and all producers, for or against the program, are urged to vote. — Jim Strayer.

LETTERS

Thanks for article

Shawnee Mission, Kans.

Dear Editor: I suspect few people read more inches of columns of any newspaper than I do of The Wayne Herald.

It seems that each week the familiar names become fewer and fewer. Last week as I read an article "Coterie Meets 60 Years," I received a shock. All names were those of community leaders when I was in high school. They were favorites of my family, especially my mother. There wasn't a stranger in the group.

I looked several times at the date of the paper, Mrs. Horace Theobald was the mother of a close friend, Marion, and we often stayed in each other's home.

Paul Mines organized the first Boy Scout troop in Wayne and I was a member of the troop. I could write a whole column about those listed. It would all be complimentary.

Saturday, April 16, 1977, Mrs. McEachen, Ada, one of my three sons, Richard, and I were in Wayne on a short business trip. I asked Hank Vai to confirm the news item. We met Val Peterson on the street, but did not encounter in our brief trip others we knew.

Thanks for the article. I know others in our family would have enjoyed it. Howard McEachen.

Renters' Guide Being Compiled
 The cooperation of Wayne and surrounding community renters is needed by a Wayne State College Student Senate committee to assemble an off-campus housing directory for members of the Wayne State student body.
 Including information on apartment and housing rental possibilities, the directory is meant to facilitate the student's search for housing outside the immediate campus, according to its backer, the student life committee.
 Difficulty in locating housing in the area prompted the student life committee to initiate the off-campus directory idea.
 All persons who will have places to rent next fall are asked to call Frank Teach, coordinator of student activities, at 375-2200, ext. 219, between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.
 Renters will be asked to complete a questionnaire, supplying information about potential housing.
 Members of the student life committee emphasize that area cooperation is of the utmost importance and absolutely necessary to make the directory a success. Renters, not only in Wayne, but in Laurel, Wakefield, Winside, and other surrounding communities are asked to supply information for the directory.

Registration Dates Set For Beef Referendum Vote

Cattle producers have until Saturday to comment upon proposed rules set to govern the upcoming nationwide referendum on the Beef Research and Information Order, according to a U.S. Department of Agriculture spokesman.

Unless altered, the recommended rules, which were published in the April 15 edition of the Federal Register, will apply to this summer's and all future referendums on the order, said Barbara Kohn, publications information officer for the USDA's Midwest Regional Information Office in Chicago.

"After April 30, they (USDA officials) will assess the comments and set a date for producers to register for the referendum," she said.

Detailed voting instructions probably will be issued near May 15 after comments from the public have been received and reviewed by USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, according to Dr. Paul Guyer, University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension livestock specialist. He said registration for the referendum likely will be held from June 6-17, according to information sent to the state Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) office.

Then, because the Beef Research and Information Act that authorized the order requires that registration be completed ten days before voting begins, there will be a two-week interim period before ballots are cast, he said. Voting tentatively will take place during the first two weeks of July, Guyer said.

The proposed order would establish a Beef Board composed of not more than 60 member producers selected by the Secretary of Agriculture from nominations by livestock organizations. The board will have the power to collect assessments on cattle sales and use the funds to issue the referendum order and proposed rules last week, and copies are available by writing the Program Operations Division, ASCS, USDA, P.O. Box 2415, Washington, D.C., 20013.

Among the rule's provisions are that each producer wishing to vote must register by completing form ASCS 151 at his local county-ASCS office, Kohn said. Absentee producers lacking a local headquarters may

Fertilization
Fertilization of grass should be the next step. Bromegrass in eastern Nebraska will profitably respond to 60-80 pounds per acre of nitrogen fertilizer on upland when rainfall is normal. Bottom land brome will respond to 100 to 120 pounds nitrogen per acre. Phosphate should be added according to soil test.

Warm season grasses also respond to fertilizer. The key to using fertilizer on native grass is the correct time of application. Use the same fertilizer program that was used on brome grass, but apply the fertilizer early in June.

Management Is Important To Production of Timber

Wildlife, recreation and timber are all valuable uses of our forest lands. Through careful planning, we can maximize the productivity of our forests for these uses.

Forests can be developed with wildlife management in mind. The habitats of large and small game animals, including birds, can be improved to increase the number of these valuable species, said district forester Gilbert Stuart.

Recreation may be the main goal in developing woodland. Development possibilities could include picnic areas, camp sites or pond planting areas for your own enjoyment, Gilbert said.

For many, timber production is often the main use of forest lands, Gilbert pointed out. Many practices which can increase timber yields can be implemented through long range planning.

In most cases, forest lands adapt well to the concept of "multiple use" — or being able to have wildlife, recreation, and timber off the same land. Careful, modern management is showing how all these values can be obtained at the same time.

A forest management plan for your woodlot will help you with such questions as:

- Are there areas that are better suited to wildlife, recreation or timber?
- Are there areas that need planting?
- Are desirable trees being suppressed by "weed" or "wolf" trees?
- Which trees should be harvested, and when — to both maximize dollar return, and most benefit the residual stand?

Sound management can be of great value to walnut growers, Gilbert said. For example, in a young stand of walnut, 15 or more feet in height, pruning the limbs flush to the trunk on the butt log of these trees will yield higher quality timber at harvest time. In this same fashion, there are basic management principles that would apply to your forest usage.

Weed Control
Weed control is the third step toward improving pastures. Weeds are a result of poor grazing practices and lack of adequate fertility. But to reclaim unproductive pasture, chemical weed control will be necessary. Herbicides can control annual broadleaf weeds like Trask thistle, sunflower, common ragweed and some perennial weeds. The key to weed control will be timeliness of herbicide application. Many pasture weeds start growing in late April or early May. 2,4-D sprayed at one or two pounds per acre is a good herbicide to use.

So why not plan a successful pasture cropping program by using a good rotation, grazing, weed control and fertilizer program?

Grazing Practices
First should be improved grazing practices. Often cattle are allowed to continuously graze bromegrass through the summer. Under these conditions, bromegrass should be stocked so that no more than 50 per cent of each year's growth is used. Rotation grazing using warm season grass in conjunction with bromegrass is another good practice. Native grass species provide summer grazing while bromegrass rests. Annual sodgrass can also be worked into the rotation grazing program. The months of July and August are the hot months and this is when bromegrass grows very little and needs a rest.

Dear Creek Valley
The Dear Creek Valley 4-H Club met April 18 in the home of Verdel Lutt with 13 members present.

Ideas for the theme booth were discussed and plans were made for the upcoming judging contest.

SPOTLIGHT ON WEEDS

BY DON C. SPITZE
WAYNE CO. EXTENSION AGENT

Tanweed (Swam Smartweed)
Description — Tanweed is a perennial, reproducing by rootstocks and occasionally by seed. The rootstocks are very large and tough, sometimes reaching 1/2 inch in diameter. These rootstocks creep along under the ground, send up new shoots at nearly every node, store large quantities of food materials and are capable of providing new plants even if broken up in small pieces. The stems grow one to four feet tall, have large broad, smooth leaves and are topped by a single spike of rose-colored flowers. The plant seldom produces seed.

Control — Use one quart of 2,4-D ester plus one pint of Banvel when growing vigorously. Retreatment will be necessary. On crops use lower rates of 2,4-D ester plus Banvel.

Special Remarks — Tanweed is usually not as competitive with growing crops as other perennial weeds like Hemp Dogbane and milkweed. Infestations merit control measures, however.

Dixon Belles
The Dixon Belles 4-H Club met April 11 at the Northeast Station, near Concord. Hostesses were Adel and Jodi Kessinger. Cindy Garvin was entertainment chairman and led the group in word games.

The meeting was called to order by president Sharon Taylor. Minutes of the March meeting were read by Diane White. Mrs. Borg gave detailed information on speech contest. Adel Kessinger gave a reading on how to select a good garden location, how to plant a garden, and how to keep it clean. Jodi Kessinger gave a paper discussion on child care. A demonstration on finishing seams on denim material was presented by Sharon Taylor.

Mrs. Duane White showed a film on cardio-pulmonary resuscitation and demonstrated what precautions to take in the event of a drowning, electrocution or heart attack. All members appreciated what they learned on an artificial victim.

GDD Concept Finally Catching on

Imagine a concept taking 200 years to reach practical use. The concept of growing degree days (GDD) originated in 1735 with observations that plant development is more closely related to the temperature accumulated in a given stage of plant growth than with time alone. However, it was not until 1946 that temperature accumulations were used in plant distribution studies and crop geography. According to Dr. Ralph Neild, University of Nebraska-Lincoln professor of horticulture and M.W. Seeley, UNL graduate student, the system was used in the 1950 by the canning industry to schedule plantings and thus control time of harvest of rapidly maturing vegetables. Breeders and field corn seed producers can use GDD to predict time of tasseling for controlling pollination. They are also interested in classifying hybrids on the basis of their GDD requirements, according to the researchers. The researchers conducted a study in 1975-76 using three field corn hybrids and three grain sorghum hybrids. They said most studies have been limited to only two stages of development — reproduction and maturity. Neild and Seeley's study dealt with crops from emergence to physiological maturity. "Such data are important for crop management decisions throughout the growing season," according to Neild. Three corn hybrids were planted at seven-day intervals between April 22 and June 25 at Neild's farm. The grain sorghums were planted on the same schedule except for the first planting. Observations were made weekly for all varieties and planting dates using photographs and descriptions of the 100 successive development stages of corn and nine stages of grain sorghum as defined by the researchers. According to standard errors of estimate, GDD was shown to be the most accurate parameter for predicting crop development, according to the researchers. Applications of GDD requirements are based on the different development stages of hybrids for different locations in Nebraska. Applications defined by Neild and Seeley include several different phases. —Expected response of crop hybrids planted the same date. The hybrids tested showed similar response to temperature during the early stages, but differences in development became greater as the season progressed. —Expected response of a hybrid to different planting dates. There are differences in the time required for different plantings to reach similar stages of development. —Predicting stage of development at a future date. Also, estimating the number of days to a future stage of development is a similar possible prediction. —Estimating the number of days that a growing season is ahead or behind. Neild said that the last three features were used in preparing computer maps of corn development in Nebraska in 1976. He added that the process which follows development progress will be used again during the 1977 growing season.

Overgrazed Pastures Can Cause Problems

Although recent rains may green up fields and pastures while buoying the optimism of farmers, they also could help trigger the seasonal incidence of a troublesome cattle disease, according to Dr. Paul Guyer, University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension livestock specialist. The number of cases of grass tetany — a nutritional or metabolic disorder occurring primarily in cows nursing calves — even may be greater than normal this year, he said. Largely responsible are pastures that were overgrazed last fall and winter which will have only young, immature grasses this spring, Guyer said. These grasses which are high in potassium and nitrogen, appear to hinder magnesium absorption in cows, resulting in the low blood magnesium content in the animal's body that is characteristic of the disease, he warned. Guyer said periods of cool, wet, cloudy weather "helps boost growth of lush spring grasses and seems to reduce magnesium content of the forage." "We're king of set up for grass tetany this year because of the short rainfall we've had and the close grazing that has eliminated much of the old grass available in the pastures." Initially, cows suffering from grass tetany will graze away from the herd and become irritable and uncoordinated, he said. Later, if not treated, they will collapse, start thrashing, throw back their heads and slip into a coma before dying, he added. Guyer said producers can help prevent incidence of the disease by holding their stock off new grass pastures until cool season grasses reach heights of four to six inches or more. "This takes us to the stage of growth when grass will be more likely to provide adequate nutrition," he said. "If possible, feeding some legume hay or grazing early legume pastures can help because legumes are higher in magnesium." In areas where grass tetany frequently occurs, supplemental magnesium should be fed daily before cows are turned out on pasture, Guyer said. Guyer called magnesium oxide "one of the better and cheaper sources of magnesium." The substance also can be supplied through protein, energy or mineral supplements, he added. "For cows nursing calves up to eight-weeks-old in areas of Nebraska where tetany frequently occurs, we recommend supplying nine to 15 grams of magnesium per head daily beginning at least 30 days before the normal grass tetany season starts," he said.

That equals 15-28 grams or one-half to one ounce of daily magnesium oxide, which contains 54 to 60 per cent magnesium. "Since magnesium is not palatable to livestock, it should be included in a readily acceptable supplement," he said. "It should be fed in mineral feeders that protect the mineral from weather. It is better to put out enough for only seven to 10 days intake to contribute to uniform consumption."

He said ranchers can mix their own magnesium supplements, which should consist of equal parts of salt, magnesium oxide and "some palatable carrier" such as ground corn, soybeans meal or cottonseed meal. Cattle afflicted with grass tetany require immediate treatment, according to Dr. Donald Hudson, research extension veterinarian at the University of North Platte Station. He said the most common treatment is an intravenous injection of at least 500 cc of a dextrose solution containing magnesium, calcium and phosphorus. Local veterinarians should be consulted concerning recommended treatments and dosage, he said.

Social Security Needed For Summer Job

Students, housewives, and other people who plan to get a summer job should apply now for a social security number if they don't have one, according to Dale Branch, social security district manager in Norfolk.
"You should apply for your number several weeks before you need it for a job covered by social security," Branch said. "Frequently, an employer will require that a new employee has a social security number before beginning work, perhaps to accommodate the company's book-keeping system. Generally, it takes several weeks for an application to be processed since it must be screened against central files in Baltimore to make sure that a second number isn't issued to the same person."
More than nine out of ten jobs are covered by social security. "Your social security number is yours alone and remains the same for life," Branch said. "People build retirement, disability, survivors, and Medicare protection by work and earnings credited to their social security number. So when you get a job covered by social security, be sure your employer copies your name and number correctly from your social security card to his records."

People can get information about applying for a social security number by calling, writing or visiting any social security office. People applying for a social security number for the first time may be asked to prove their age, identity, and citizenship.
"If you've lost your social security card, you can get a duplicate by contacting any social security office," Branch said. "You can get a duplicate faster if you've kept the stub that came with your social security card."

I think my Mom should be Mother of the year because...

She's Nicest in 'Hole' World

She is the nicest mother in the hole world. And the best one too. She loves us, her family. We wouldn't know what to do with out her. She takes care of us when we are hurt because she cares for us. She would be mother of the year. — Timothy Martin Jr.
(My Mom's name is Mrs. Tim Martin of Emerson.)

We've Made It, Thanks to Mom

My mother deserves the honor of being "Mother of the Year." She has the love and patience for two teenagers, plus having full responsibility of two boys, seven and four years old. Even when times are hard we've made it through thick and thin. Thanks to Mom. — Jackie Gramberg.
(My Mom's name is Mrs. Karen Gramberg of Winside.)

Loves Others, Too

She goes on hikes, rides bikes, and plays baseball. She cooks good meals and takes care of our health. She is a good mother because she loves other kids too. She tells us she loves us everyday and makes us mind because she cares. We love her very much. — Chad Farrens.
(My mom's name is Margie Farrens of Winside)

Mom Taught Me The Golden Rule

She watched me crawl, stand and walk, helped me up when I fell. Spanked me when I played in the street. Yelled when I stayed out too late. Cried when I went off to school. Taught me the golden rule and to laugh, cry, care, understand, accept and question and was always there. — Dana Stander.
(My Mom's name is Barbara Smith of Gretna.)
