Board members of the Region V Office of Developmental

Board members of the Region IV Office of Developmental Disabilities in Wayne postponed until Monday, May 9, any decision to either keep its offices in Wayne or move to Concord.

In a meeting Friday at Jeff's Cafe, members held off in making a commitment after hey learned that contractors didn't have the final information regarding actual site of a new building.

The board, which went into executive session, talked with representatives from Carhart Lbr. Co., Vakoc Construction Co., ofthe Construction Co., of the Construction Co., and of the Construction Co., and the Const

The present office, located at Pile Hall on the Wayne State College campus, has been given until July 1 to move out in order that the college may remodel the building into student apartments.

The Region IV office has been looking for new quarters in Wayne but so far has been unsuccessful. The only concrete offer to date is for the former Concord school, now owned by the village.

Parents of the children at the Wayne center for child development bowaver are concerned.

Parents of the children at the Wayne center for child development, however, are concerned about what they termed "remoteness" from medical facilities if the center were moved to the Dixon County community. Marra Plans To Expand to Sioux City

Increased energy costs are making fuel-saving home improvements a hot item these days and one Wayne business expanding its operation to keep up with the demand.

Marra Home Improvement Co. is no newcomer to the home in the fix up business. Sunday (May 1) marked the 27th anniversary of the Wayne business and owner Wilmer Marra Thursday announced plans to expand the business which includes a new office in Sioux City expected to open within the next couple of weeks, and the addition of Jonan sales staff which will be headed by newly-appointed sales manager Vance Lancaster.

Lancaster has moved to Wayne from Colo, lowa, where he was general manager for ABI industries, inc., which distributes automatic crop drying equipment.

Ammonia Transport Tips Over in City

Tips Over in City

A 50,000-pound transport trailer containing about 12,000 gallons of ammonia tipped over Thursday evening a yard south of Carhart Lbr. Co.

The transport, which was still lying on its side Saturday morning, tipped over when apparently shoring underneath the wheel stands gave way.

A passerby, Laurence Lindahl of Allen, spotted the overturned vehicle and called police about 8 p.m. According to investigating officer Robert McLean, no leaks were detected by owner Fred Gildersleeve, who operates Wayne Grain and Feed, worked through part of the night to empty about half of the contents into smaller tank wagons. The rest, McLean pointed out, couldn't be empited while the transport was on its side because of lack of pressure.

Congressman Gets Special Advice on Energy Issues

Finally, in the Fields

WARM temperatures the past week and a half are just what area farmers needed to finally get into the fields to start spring planting. Coupled with the good weather are the needed rainfalls which have amounted to over seven inches during the past two months. Although the moisture isn't enough to carry-farmers through the expected long, hot summer, it's enough now to hope for a good season.

The nation's energy supply is one of the prime topics being considered today by congressmen and First District Representative Charles Thone recently received recommendations on energy policy from a select group of his constituents.

policy from a seriest group or in a com-tuents.

Allen High School senior Lori Von Minden was one of 10 First District students who recently spent a week in Thone's Washington office as a congres-sional intern. Each of the students was assigned an area of energy policy to study and at the conclusion of the visit presented their recommendations.

Miss Von Minden was designed to study President Carter's proposal for increased daxes on gasoline to encourage conserva-tion. Her recommendation to Thone: he shouldn't vote in favor of higher gas taxes.

Miss Von Minden Tuesday said she belleves people pay enough taxes now, that a gasoline tax would direct a flow of capital to the government, taking away incentives from oil producers to find new sources of petroleum, and that such a tax might encourage producers to also raise their prices.

might encourage producers to also raise their prices.

The proposed gasoline tax would work a hardship on tarmers, she said, adding that Thone is working on a bill to exempt farm fuel if the President's taxation proposal is accepted.

The interns also studied a bill introduced into Congress by Thone to designate an Energy Conservation Day.

Miss Von Minden said the group generally concluded that the special day could be beneficial by making the public aware of the need for conservation, and perhaps to encourage Implementation of conservation measures such as putting up storm windows.

Research in developing alternate sources of energy is the key to solving energy problems, the Allen High senior said.

There was plenty of time for touring There was plenty of time for touring, too, with stops including the White House, FBI headquarters, the Pentagon, and the Japanese Embassy. The Nebraskans also viewed a performance of "Black Elik Speaks," written by the late John G. Neihardt, a graduate of Wayne college and Nebraska's poet laureate until his death.

The most impressive part of the trip for Lori, however, was visiting with a number of congressmen including Sen. Ted Kennedy, senate majority leader Robert Byrd and Republican Party senate whip Robert Michael.

Everybody is looking for a free lunch

It has been a week long battle between proponents of state aid, namely, the larger urban communities attempting to extract support through toxation for some of the more rural communities under LB 33 while the proponents of an extension of the personal property tax exemption. LB 518, attempt to extract urban tax dollars for refund to the more rural countries.

exemption. Le sig, attempt to extract without tox dollars for refund to the more rural counties.

Everybody is looking for a free lunch at someone else's expense. The reality of the situation, of course, is that everyone has the same problem. His taxes are just too high. We all want our subsidies. We all want our state aid. We all want our state aid. We all want to exported services. We all want the government to do something, but we would all like very, much to have someone else pay for it.

We have lived under this philosophy for so long that the jex burden which now takes approximately one-half of every dollar earned in one tax form or another, has brought us to the point where we just don't believe we can stand another tax increase. Yet, who among us has said,

"fine. I will give up this or that function of government that serves me."

The situation is further aggravated by the desire on the part of politicians who try and rectify a portion of this problem by various tax exemptions: Tax exemptions for the thin the thin that the poor; tax exemptions for the poor; flue tax refunds for everyone—food tax refunds; for counties, intangible tax refunds; personal property tax refunds; nomestead exemption tax refunds. And each time we exempt a tax or refund a tax, then for those few who are still income producing, the tax burden increases even more.

The day is rapidly approaching when we have or order our priorities of government service and eliminate a great many of them. If we take much more in tax from those who are still producing an income, they will most surely join those who fare very nearly as well on tax free government supported programs. We discourage those who continue to work (and whose wives have joined them) in order to produce a standard of living they wish to have.

These are some of the basic problems that confront the legislature as they undertake a decision on the budget for the next year. Who gets how much and from whom will we take it? As we proceed to tax to raise these revenues, it is always too much to ask and yet as we allocate these funds among various government levels, it is never enough to cover their needs. Perhaps like Solomon, we must express the intent to cut the baby in half and give to each mother. Perhaps then someone will come forward. Not only do we have the complaints that it is not enough, but there is the constant comparison that someone else has gotten more.

I have yet to hear someone say they received too much. It would seem that inasmuch as we are expending over one billion dollars in this state, that surely to know the process of the content of the cover government services to a mere one and one-half million people.—Sen. John R. Murphy.

First there was "Eerthquake." Then there was. "The Towering Inferno." Exciting, you say? Bah. They are nothing compared to the, new disaster movie which is going to be filmed right her in Wayne. They're going to call it "City Council."

It's all about how two, or three city officials couldn't get together on how to dispose of a tremendous quantity of chicken manure. The problem probably could have been worked out but it was more fun to get had and yell and snoop around in wood piles and while that was going on the city slowly sank.

In case the story line sounds familiar, it is (very) loosely based on a recent fit is (very) loosely based on a recent cyty council meeting. Only one councilman and a couple of other city officials were involved in the fireworks, but had reasonablengss prevailed, on both sides, the maiter need not have caused the uproar it did.

Frankly, I'm thinking about asking for a franchise to sell tickets to the meetings. It isn't exactly "The Greatest Show on Earth" but it certainly was a circus.

No. snack foods aren't the problem. It's mustard.

STRAYer Thoughts By Jim Strayer

I love mustard, always have, on just about everything. And frankly, folks, I've been living in mortal fear the past few years, afraid that someone will discover that if a rat eats 456.7 pounds of mustard a day, it has a 6.397 per cent chance of getting cancer.

What would the world be like then. Losing saccarin is bad enough, but please, not mustard. Can you imagine hat dogs without mustard? Or a ham and Swiss on rye?

Now this latest threat. No, I don't think she will write the FTC a letter claiming that mustard rots my teeth. But suppose he formed an organization of wives who sent the agency a laundry bag full-off assorted shirts, neckties and other tress of apparel adorned with little yellow splotches here and there, and demanded that mustard bottles be kept out of the hands of adult males. How could they resist that kind of demand when you consider some of the other pressure groups the government has caved in to?

Guess I'll just have to make sure she doesn't see that story.

Out of Old

The Captain Meriwether Lewis left St. Louis on April 1L_1977, for its final trip up the Missouri River from St. Louis to Brownville. Aboard were four Nebraska State Historical Society employees to serve as crew under the direction of Captain Raymond L. Holland of the 270-foot sidewheeler US Corps of Engineers dredge boat.

The boat, which was towed up the river at a speed of four miles per hour, was constructed in 1922 at a cost of $478,360 with accommodations for a crew of 52. Donated to the Historical Society in 1976 Donated to the Historical Society in 1976 as surplus property, the Meriwether Lewis will be placed at the Brownville State Recreation Area through the cooperation of the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission. Here it will be used by the Society as a Museum of Missouri River History.

In 1670; 130 years before Meriwether Lewis and William Clark "pushed, towed, and sailed their boats" up the treachersons with the shifting sandbars, snags, and fallen trees, Father Jacques Marquette in 1670 had written of "the river on which are some great nations who use wooden canoes." The Indian canoes were replaced by the keelboats of the explorers and fur traders, and then, in 1819 the first steamboat — The Western Engineer — ascended the Missouri to Fort Lisa, a point serveral miles above Omaha.

Steamboats became an important factor in the fur trade, but river traffic did not reach its peak until after Nebraska Territory was opened to settlement in June, 1854. The little towns clustered along the river grew rapidly, and on June 10, 1857, the Omaha Nebraskian reported that "settlers and strangers are thronging in in such numbers that every house, public and private, is full, and many have to camp in the streets." Several "capitalists of Omaha" purchased the Washington City, and then "cleansed re-fittled and refurnished, her" and moored her, at the landing as a temporary hotel.

During the winter months the river was not navigable, but according to the Rulo Western Guide, in the spring the first boat that arrived at the isolated settlements "was hailed like the star of Bethlehem and received as a messenger sent from Heaven, bringing glad tidings of great joy to the different points along the Missouri River, that had been shut out from all resources of trade, either exporting or importing for many months."

The advent of the first boat at Nebras me ouvern of the first boat at Nebraska City was described in more mundane terms by the editor of the Nebraska News (March 20, 1858): "Our writings were disturbed last evening at 7 o'clock by the ringing of bells, the thrilling whistle of the engine and the shouts of 'A Boat!' 'A Boat!' The streets were at once filled with men and boys running to the wharf to meet the Platte Valley." She had made the trip from St. Louis to Nebraska City, a distance of approximately 738 river miles, in six days. Mary had reached Omaha before the ice had entirely left the river to claim the honor of being "first."

According to the June, 1966 issue of Nebraska History ("The Influence of Transportation" by Donald F. Danker) "the Steamboats added an element of color and gaiety to the society of territorial river towns as well as performing the very necessary services of carrying goods and passengers." In May, 1837, the elegant Silver Heels was named for the boat. Passengers aboard the Hannibal, which arrived at Omaha the same day as the Silver Heels, had had a much slower journey. The trip from $t. Louis to Omaha had taken 19 days, and at the completion of the journey, a Mornon passenger wrote "if ever a company is heartsick of a journey our people are of this. I thank my God for so beautiful a day as we are favored with to land."

The coming of the railroads was the beginning of the end of steamboats. A beginning of the end of steamboats. A few excursion vessels still remain, but for the most part the Missouri River traftic is now confined to the barge industry. The Captain Meriwether Lewis will preserve an important part of Nebraska history. Donations can be made to the Nebraska State Historical Society Foundation. Such donations will be acknowledged both in the Societys publications and on the boat. This is a chance for all Nebraska Admirals to contribute to the Nebraska Navy Flag-ship restoration.

OBSERVATIONS

'No thanks' on limit

The Nebraska legislature, or at last some members, seem to be enamored this year with the idea of placing limits on the amount by which local governmental subdivisions can increase their

Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh, for example, has offered an amendment to a bill which would limit the annual budget increase to seven per cent.

That sounds good at first blush. The tax bite gets bigger every year and a limit could provide some relief.

But there are some drawbacks to the idea. First, it is distatisful to have our state senators sit in Lincoln and decible our local governmental bodies aren't competent. And frankly, that is what the Unicameral will be saying it the limitation proposal goes through.

We're not hesitant about letting our city council, school board, county com-missioners or what-have-you know when we think they aren't doing a good job, but we think they are much more aware of local needs than the Unicameral.

We also think local voters should exercise control over what local officials do. If a legislative limit on local officials, questions the competency of local officials, it aslo questions the ability of voters to choose competent representatives.

Limiting budgets also poses some dangers. Projects which are really needed might not be possible because of the limit, and officials might be tempted to increase the budget during, years when additional funds aren't needed, in order Limit budget increases for local government? No thanks. But if someone could figure out a way to limit federal and state budget increases—wouldn't it be sweet.—Jim Strayer

Wayne High girls did it again!
The ever-improving Blue
Devil track squad of coach
Mavis Dation Friday wrapped up its second straight West Husker Conference title by beating a field of seven other teams and bringing home its fourth meet victory of the season.
In a heated race with arch rival Wakefield, the locals scored 80 points to nudge the Trojans of Ernie Kovar who had 74 points. Host Columbus Lakeview had 69 followed by WisnerPilger with 39, EmersonHubbard with 44, Stanton with 32, Madison with 25 and Hartington Cedar Catholic with 18.

Wayne was in front throughout the entire meet and finally won the title thanks to the performances of the school's top 440 runner Less Barclay, who won the event, and teammate Jane

Wayne Repeats

Mavis Dalton. The battle for first was nip-and-tuck all the way, she added.
"The strength of our team this year has a lot to do with the track," she pointed out. "We have a place to practice now." "We've always been strong in the filed events, but now we're running a lot better."
Results for Wayne and Wakefield entries:

High jump — 3 Lisa Nuss, Way, 5-0; 4 Mosley, 5-0. Discus — 1 Rouse, 101-11; 6 Peg Pinkelman, Way, 89-4.

- 1 Barclay, 1:02 (meet and school record); 4 Edmunds, 1:04.5 5 Joy Myers, Wake, 1:04.8, 440 relay — 2 Wayne (Laura Les: mann, Lisa Daniels, Stephanle Do cey, Sandy Jacobmeler), :53.

ORDINANCE NO. 865

Family Finances

brought to you by

Pat Ghoss

Q. My neighbor tells me heas taken out a loan to consolidate his debts. Is that a smart thing to do?

A. It depends on why he took the consolidation toon. If he did it to reduce his monthly payments, if he did it because he thinks he can borrow his way out of debt, it was foolish.

Let's say your neighbor was paying $10 a month on eight of eight different reredit obligations, and that $80 a month is more than he can handle. He then took out a consolidation loan to pay off his current obligations and reduce his monthly payments.

This consolidation loan

duce his monthly payments.

This consolidation loan will be paid back over a longer period of time and for that reason will cost him more in total interest paid, but his monthly payment will be brought down to say. SS a month, or some level that he will be able to handle.

A consolidation loan gives a person time to work things out. He should use this time to develop a sound money management use this time to develop a sound money management plan for the future, so he won't get in a bind again. And, of course, he should not take on any new credit. Obligations until this consolidated obligation is paid off.
