Door Was Broken; No Loss Reported

The bottom pane in a door to the Tri-County Co-Op Association office in Winside was discovered broken Tuesday morning.

The door was unlocked and open, the Wayne County sheriff's office said, but nothing was reported missing.

Commission Will Recive Published Plan

The Wayne county joint planning commission Tuesday night will receive copies of the final publication of the county comprehensive plan.

The commission earlier this year conducted a public hearing on the plan before giving approval for publication. The commission is expected to adopt the publication Tuesday.

It will be submitted to the county board of commissioners which will also conduct a public hearing before deciding whether or not to pass a resolution adopting the plan. The plan is not regulatory in nature but is designed to serve as a reference source to guide development in the county over a 20-year period.

Communities involved in the planning — Winside, Carroll, Hoskins, and Sholes — will also consider adopting the plan.

The planning commission Tuesday will also continue work on zoning regulations. The group is expected to decide what it will recommend regarding the minimum number of acres required to build a home in portions of the county zoned for agriculture.

Allen Woman to Attend Valley Forge Seminar

The Nebraska Department of the American Legion Auxiliary has selected Mrs. Allan Rastede of Allen as its delegate to a graduate credit seminar on the preservation of the principles of freedom.

The seminar will meet July 11-29 at Valley Forge, Pa. The seminar is conducted by Freedom's Foundation at Valley Forge.

Included in the series of lectures and seminars will be 20 owner of the decorating business, said remodeling of his new location is scheduled to begin around June 20, with plans to move in sometime around the middle of July.

—A spokesman for the Montgomery Ward Catalog Agency said the company has not yet made a decision regarding relocation.

Lost Battle

FIRE DESTROYED this machine shed on the LeRoy Herschled farmstead seven miles south and three-fourths of a mile west of Winside Friday night at about 6:15. Winside and Stanton firemen fought the blaze but were unable to save the building, which was destroyed, along with the tractor shown here and a feed wagon. The fire was apparently the result of faulty wiring on the tractor.

Region IV Children Need Temporary Home

The Region IV Office of Developmental Disabilities is looking for a temporary home for 10 children in its Wayne Children's Developmental Center residential program.

Director Mary Ann Brendan said the center is temporarily located in Terrace Hall on the Wayne State College campus, but new quarters will be needed from sometime in early August until construction of a new building is completed.

Both the training and residential programs of the children's development center were previously located in Pile Hall on the WSC campus but the lease on the building expired Wednesday. The building will be converted into student apartments.

The college has provided Terrace Hall as temporary quarters for the center, Mrs. Brendan said, but will need the building sometime in early August. The new building to house both the residential and training programs won't be ready until September or October, Mrs. Brendan said.

Youngsters in the residential program are enrolled in the training program but their parents live too far from Wayne to make daily commuting practical. Temporary living quarters will be needed for the period when Terrace Hall must be vacated before the new building is ready for occupancy.

Mrs. Brendan said WSC is cooperating in trying to find additional space which could be made available for the interim period. "President (Lyle) Seymour is doing his best to find quarters for us," she said, but added that her office is also looking elsewhere for a temporary home for the youngsters and any suggestions are welcome.

The Region IV governing board was scheduled to meet

Friday to discuss details on the new building with contractor John Vakoc of Vakoc Construction, but the meeting has been postponed for a week until June 10, Mrs. Brendan said.

Tentative plans are to locate the 50- by 80-foot steel building on property east of the Amber Inn on the north side of Highway 35 just east of Wayne.

Mrs. Brendan said it is hoped the board of governors at the June 10 meeting will be able to review the lease for the building and that both parties will be able to sign the agreement. Region IV is prohibited by law

Masons Will Burn Mortgage

The evening of June 14 will be a joyous occasion for members of the Wayne Masonic lodge. The organization is planning a ceremony that night to burn the mortgage on its temple at 911 Lincoln St.

The event is scheduled in observance of the local lodge having made the final payment on its loan from the grand lodge of Nebraska which financed construction of the new Wayne temple in 1968.

The celebration will begin with dinner at 6:30 p.m. in the Downtown Plan Approved

After one and one-half years of preparation, final plans and specifications for the Wayne downtown improvement project received the city council's approval Tuesday night.

Included in the plans are new sidewalk — the current 13-foot width on Main St. and narrower, 10-foot walks on side street in the district — new curb and gutter, underground electrical conduit, replacement of some underground plumbing, and alternate items such as sidewalk planters, benches, and fluted sidewalk.

The engineer's detailed cost estimate is $238,300, higher than previously anticipated. It appeared for a moment that the final estimate might delay approval of the plans but the majority of the council apparently wasn't in any mood to stall.

"We don't have to accept any bids," Keith Mosley said, adding that advertising for bids is the only way to find out what the project will really cost. "Let's get the show on the road."

The councilman's motion to approve the specifications and ask-for-bids passed unanimously. The bid opening date will be set after consulting with the city's engineering firm.

The downtown improvement committee was appointed by the mayor in October 1975 and began work on the project planning phase in January 1976.

The committee since then has worked with the city council, making recommendations for renovating Wayne's downtown business district and the council enacted an ordinance creating an improvement district in the area.

In addition to the general improvements in the plan approved Tuesday night, several businessmen indicated to the committee their desire to renovate the fronts of their buildings. Designer Al Nelson of Red Oak, Iowa, met with a number of store owners and subsequently contracted with about 25 of them to provide drawings for face lifting of buildings. Improvement committee co-chairman Roger Nelson Tuesday said work on the first face lift is tentatively scheduled to begin the second week in July if details can be worked out with a contractor. He declined to identify the store or contractor at this time.

Merchants apparently will be able to display their wares on the new sidewalks after the improvement project is completed. City attorney Kem Swartz was directed to draft an ordinance for the next meeting which would permit display of items on a 36-inch area of the sidewalk adjacent to their buildings.

A number of store owners had approached the council at their last meeting about sidewalk displays. An ordinance on the city code book now prohibits placing merchandise on sidewalks but the matter didn't become an issue until the police department received a complaint and was forced to issue a citation.

A survey of some businesses indicated slightly more than half were against allowing the displays, but council member Carolyn Filler Tuesday night pointed out that only businessmen on Main St. were included in the poll. That didn't provide a broad enough sample to give a true picture of opinion on the matter, she said.

Two more teachers have been hired by the Allen board of education, filling all vacancies for next year according to board secretary Wayne Stewart.

A spring graduate of Dana College in Blair, Joy Lynn Rethwisch will teach first grade, replacing Diane Jorgensen. Miss Rethwisch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Rethwisch of rural Wayne, is a Wayne High School graduate.

Mrs. Jean Carlson of Allen will teach vocal music in grades kindergarten through six on a part time basis. The position is new to the Allen school system.

Teachers previously hired to fill vacancies include:

—Mrs. Robert Heckathorne, who will replace Barbara Ranschaw as kindergarten teacher, a half time position.

—Eugene Lauritsen, who will teach vocational agriculture.

—Mrs. Doris Furness, who will teach third grade.

—Lois Mendlik who will teach band to all grades, and vocal music to junior high and senior high school classes.

Robert Heckathorne will replace Virgil Ferguson as schools superintendent.

Engine Missing

A racing engine valued at $2,500 was taken sometime over the weekend from Randy Boden, 108 W. Eighth.

Boden told Wayne police Sunday afternoon intruders broke into the house by kicking out a back door and taking the engine from the back porch. Boden wasn't home at the time of the break-in.

Book Store Is Opening in Laurel

A grand opening for the Inspiration Corner Book Store in Laurel is scheduled for Saturday.

The book store, featuring best sellers, Bibles, Bible study material and stationary, is located in the Loft on the second floor of the missionary fellowship hall at 207 W. Second St. in Laurel.

A youth center and Bible study center are already active on the ground floor of the building. Opening of the book store is the result of the several months work by persons of various religious faiths who pooled labor and finances to renovate the former missionary fellowship parsonage.

Refreshments will be served during the open house Saturday, from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Veteran Remembers

A TOUCH of sadness, perhaps, flickers across the face of Albert Soules of Wayne Monday as he remembered comrades from long ago. The World War I veteran was part of the honor guard during Memorial Day ceremonies at Greenwood Cemetery in Wayne. For more pictures see page 6, section 2.

Wildlife Refuge Becomes Classroom

A kangaroo rat named Bud, a morel mushroom nine inches long, the skin of a bullsnake, varied specimens of lizards, turtles, butterflies, cacti, and sunbats: all of these were brought back from the wilds recently by eight Wayne State College students and two instructors.

The plant and animal collection and sunbated bodies now serve as constant reminders of a two-week, 24-hour-a-day outdoor class at the Valentine National Wildlife Refuge.

There the students and two instructors studied the "interaction of animals and plants in their homes," otherwise known as ecology.

Dr. Charles Maier and A. Jewell Schock, both associate professors of biology at WSC, led the nature exploration class during a three-week post session in May.

According to Maier, the ecology class has been offered previously but this was the first year for the out-in-the-wilds setting. Students previously stayed in Wayne and made daily excursions to area nature spots.

This year the class project was to become "acquainted with the ecology of the sandhills," Maier said. The assignment included a series of hikes and 1,375 miles of field trips and trips on the road.

With binoculars and notebooks in hand, the students began their sandhills adventure learning how to spot and observe different types of plants and animals, and the identification of each.

The students were the lucky witnesses of the courtship of a sharp-tailed grouse, watching the cocky male spread his wings out, zooming like a 747. In this process "booming" the female stands at distance, finally selecting her hubby.

Ken Gatz of Jackson handled the capture of a snapper, while assisting game and wildlife workers in fish net checking procedures. After going through a series of cones, the eight pound turtle was deposited on a shore where he could not escape.

The snapper measured 15 inches long across his shell with his head and neck measuring nine inches long.

Among their other slights: baby killdeer (shore-inhabiting birds), several types of aquatic birds, deer, a coyote, two common snipes, a black long-tailed weasel, catching a kangaroo rat, and migratory birds not usually seen in Nebraska.

In a field trip to the Fort Niobrara big game management area, northeast of Valentine, the group saw buffalo, longhorn cattle, elk, and antelope. And besides picking morel mushrooms (which they feasted on during their trip) the students gathered wild asparagus.

Originally the class had intended to make water comparisons of lakes in the area, but plans changed a bit when one lake was found to be 40 miles away. The class instead assisted game and wildlife employees in activities such as electroshocking (the detection of living fish in ponds by electrical shock), and checking fish nets. They also hiked continually over the sandhills and did some water analysis, finding the suitability of water as a habitat for fish.

All wildlife finds and other experiences in nature were recorded in notebooks by class members. Lecture sessions considering the fundamentals of ecology were conducted throughout the two-week stay.

The students learned to "see things that they never saw before" through the course, Maier said. Margaret Yew of Indonesia said she had been to the wilderness before, but "never knew how to observe the environment."

She said the experience was a faster and better learning process than through books, adding that the class helped her "enjoy nature more and recognize the problems of the environment."

Kathy LaBonn of Omaha said the experience will stick with her. Driving in her car now, she notices things about the environment that she never recognized before.

Through the experience the class was trained to recognize the ground and atmosphere and total environment, something they had never learned before. "You don't watch TV unless it's on," said Gatz, "somebody turned the TV on."

The students also thought they were learning from the best in both areas, Maier who is specialized in plantlife, and Schock, who is specialized in animal life.

Besides sharing in their nature excursions, the students also learned to get along and live together in a six-room house provided by the Refuge. Cultural experiences were shared, too, with Miss Yew from Indonesia and Linda Adelbai from the Palau Islands.

Pro-Life Group Hosts 'Learnshop on Life'

The Wayne County Right to Life organization sponsored a Learnshop on Life at the Wayne city auditorium last month. Clergymen and their wives from a 10-county area in Northeast Nebraska were invited to attend the symposium.

The Rev. Eldor Meyer, administrative pastor of the Trinity Lutheran Church in Grant Island, discussed the development of the Biblical concept of the worth of human life, beginning with the book of Genesis. Pastor Meyer told the group that he believes the reason the Bible contains no arguments expressly against abortion is because abortion was not a problem among the persons for whom the scriptures were originally written. "Abortion has gained acceptance in our society," according to Rev. Meyer, "because modern man has abandoned all faith in God's providence and is afraid of life itself." "Man cannot leap out of his relatedness from past and future reality by removing imperfect people from his life," he added.

"I don't know anybody who claims that any psychological or psychiatric problems are cured by abortion," said Dr. Richard Sanders, a psychotherapist from the Northeast Nebraska Regional Health Center in Norfolk. Dr. Sanders said evidence shows that psychological harm results from abortion more often than not, and that the physical effects of abortion are unpredictable.

Other members of the symposium included the Rev. John Rizzo of Genoa, who introduced a McGraw-Hill science film "When Life Begins," featuring intra-uterine photography of the human fetus from conception to birth, and Mrs. Jerry Stuart of Birth Right of Stouland, who narrated two slide presentations illustrating abortion procedures. She explained the personal support program offered to pregnant women by Birth Right volunteers.

Wayne County Right to Life president Linda Dorcy was in charge of the day's events. She was assisted by The Rev. Larry Ostercamp and the Rev. Thomas McDermott, both of Wayne, and several members of the Right to Life organization.

The next public meeting of the pro-life organization is slated to be held on Wednesday, June 15.

"FAST FOOD" EATING
Many people, especially teenagers have developed the habit of "grabbing a bite" at one of the "fast food chains" that have become so numerous and popular. What about the "burgers, fries, shakes" menu? There is nothing wrong with it, if it is worked into a good nutritious diet. Planning the rest of the day's food is necessary to keep a balanced diet. Here are some guidelines to follow: Make up for vitamins A and C and fiber deficits of fast food meals in other meals during the day. Eat dark green or dark

NEN Clubs Out of the Running

Favorite Heelan, Sioux Falls in Finals

Tournament favorite Sioux City Heelan and Sioux Falls were set Wednesday night to square off for the championship game of the Chuck Ellis Memorial Baseball Tournament at Wakefield.

The pair posted easy victories in semi-final play Tuesday night when Heelan topped Aberdeen 8-5 and Sioux Falls ripped Sioux City West 10-1. Before Sioux Falls went into semi-final play, it had to overcome West Point with an 8-2 decision earlier Tuesday.

Heelan hurler Tim Guinane blasted a three-run homer off Aberdeen's Scott Bosanko to give his club a 4-0 cushion in the third frame. The losers came back in the sixth to score all five runs on two hits.

In the first game Tuesday, Sioux Falls halted any chances of a Nebraska team getting in the finals when it scored three runs in the fifth to stake an 8-0 lead over West Point.

West Point and Wakefield were the only two NEN teams in the running for a shot at the title after the first day of tournament play eliminated Wayne and Emerson. West Point, Wakefield and Wisner were the only NEN teams in the running for a shot at the title after the first day of tournament play eliminated

Wayne and Emerson. The tourney, which didn't get started until Sunday due to wet grounds, saw Wayne ousted 12-2 by Heelan and Emerson booted out by

HEELAN HURLER Jeff Dicus slides safely into home plate Sunday to score his club's first of three runs in the second inning. Plate umpire John Torczon calls Dicus safe after the ball got loose from Wayne pitcher Doug Carroll in the wild inning that saw Dicus score from second on a pass ball and a throwing error. The Sioux City team went on to post wins Monday and Tuesday to set up the final showdown against Sioux Falls Wednesday.

Wayne Foursome Wins Best Ball

The four-man team of Bob Reeg, Jim Marsh, Dick Pflanz and Wayne Wessel won the four-man best ball handicap tournament Monday at Wayne Country Club.

The quartet toured the 18 holes with a 61 to nose out the team from Pender by one stroke. Shooting a 62 were James Mable, Mary Kubik, Larry Wingett and Harold Schroeder.

A total of 19 foursomes competed in the match, which was organized late last week to replace the annual Memorial Day tournament.

Rest of the top five teams included two which shot 63s and another which has a 64. Tying at 63 each were the four-man teams of Lowell Olson, Sid Preston, Bob Johnson and Morrie Sandah; and Darrel Fuelberth, Terry Karel, Jim Paige and Gene Claussen.

The 64 went to Darrell Dantelson, Jeff Fisher, Rex Fisher and Denny Spangler.

Balk, Error Lift Laurel To 3-2 Win

Laurel came up with two runs in the bottom of the ninth Sunday night off a controversial balk and wild throw to nip visiting Coleridge, 3-2.

Catcher Nick Danze scored the tying run from third when the plate umpire ruled that Coleridge's catcher stepped out of the box before pitcher Kevin Krel threw the ball to intentionally walk third baseman John Abts. With runners on first and third, Jerry Stanley drove in the winning run when he hit a short grounder in front of the catcher who overthrew first for the easy out.

Laurel, which owns a 2-0 record and tied for first place in the Tri-County Baseball League, was idle Wednesday night after its scheduled opponent, Creighton, reportedly dropped out of the league. Next league game on tap for the area town team is Sunday night at home against Tilden-Battle Creek.

Coleridge ended a scoreless deadlock in the fourth inning when Benson smashed a solo shot over the right field fence off Laurel's Bob Weisenberg (0-0). Weisenberg went five innings. See BALK, page 5.

Overin: A Heelan Victory Would Make Us Look Good

"The only thing I have to say is that I hope Heelan goes on to win the tournament. That would surely make us look good," said Wayne mentor Hank Overin after his club fell to the Sioux City team, 12-2, during first day of the Chuck Ellis Memorial Baseball Tournament at Wakefield Sunday.

Playing nearly perfect ball, Sioux City failed to commit any errors in the abbreviated five inning match as hurler Jeff Dicus and reliever Chuck Baxter combined to strikeout 12 Wayne batters while they gave up only four hits.

Dicus went four and a third frames, striking out 11 of the 21 batters he faced before Wayne started to get to the salty right-hander for two runs on a passed ball and a run-scoring single by Larry Creighton.

The winners seemed to score at will against the locals. In the opening frame, Heelan scored four runs off two hits, a passed ball and one of Wayne's six errors for the day.

Losing pitcher Doug Carroll, who was ransacked for five hits in two frames, got a glimpse of what to expect from Heelan in the first frame when first baseman Chris Champ belted a bases loaded single to center field only to have hustling Mark Brandt, who ran from his left field position, drop the ball for a 2-0 score.

With the bases still loaded, Heelan's Tim Conley scored from third on a passed ball for a 3-0 lead, before shortstop Jeff Goergen doubled in the fourth run of the inning.

Heelan, which scored in every frame, came back in the second with three more runs off three hits for a 7-0 command. Champ, who was there for three, smacked a two-base hit to score the second run of the second frame.

Wayne reliever Vic Sharpe took over mound duties in the third frame, but Heelan's bats were still hot. The invaders struck for two more runs in the third and fourth innings and put the game away with one run in the final fifth.

Overin, Blevins Toss Two-Hitter

Wayne hurlers Lyle Blevins and Earle Overin combined to toss a two-hitter Tuesday night to blank visiting Pender, 7-0, in the season debut for both clubs in the Northeast Nebraska Baseball League.

Overin, who took over in the sixth from Blevins, contributed to the win at the plate with a pair of hits and two runs scored during his two times at bat. The salty right-hander, who wiffed nine Pender batters, doubled in the three-run sixth and came back in the seventh with a single and scored one of the team's four runs in that frame.

With two away, Overin doubled, went to third on an error and scored the first run of the game on a wild throw by relief pitcher Ray Welch.

Shortstop Maurie Mintken, was the next Wayne batter to score after he was safe on first via the error, sole second, advanced to third on the wild throw and scored on third baseman Larry Raabe's base hit.

Second baseman Terry Luth, who was three for five at the plate, doubled Raabe home for a 3-0 lead.

In the seventh, Pender really ran into problems. A throwing error and a lost ball allowed four Wayne runners to cross the plate.

Left fielder Mike Green ripped what looked like a base hit behind second base, but as it turned out three runners scored including Green when Pender failed to find the ball which was several feet away from second base.

Wayne had its share of problems also. When Overin came in the sixth, he had to rely on some nifty hard-throwing strikeouts to halt Pender's scoring threats. With the bases loaded and two away, Overin went to his last ball to strikeout right fielder Brad Grahlner.

In the seventh, Pender again

Thought for Today

By Rowan Wiltse

"People generally quarrel because they cannot argue."

Gilbert K. Chesterton
Too often we dignify a quarrel by calling it an argument. In order to argue, we should have some knowledge of the subject being discussed. We should be able to put our thoughts into words, in a way that will convey our meaning convincingly to whoever we are "arguing" with.

The less information a person has, the more he is inclined to quarrel, rather than argue. Quarrels involve raised voices, name calling, irrelevant "facts" and very little logic. Quarrels change few opinions.

The decisions made under the pressure of emotion stress are never easy. Pre-planned arrangements can be made well in advance of need. We can provide all the information you might desire, without obligation.

HOW WOULD you feel if you were the first contestant in a field loaded with some of the best gal shot put throwers in the nation? Bet you'd be nervous and scared.

That's just how Winside's Jill Stenwall felt when she was the first woman to have the shot during the national NAAIA meet at UCLA last month.

"I was kinda disappointed in my toss," said the 1976 Winside High graduate who now attends Kearney State, "but I was scared. For one thing, I was the very first thrower and another, I knew about some of the other girls throwing... they were throwing a lot more consistent."

The Kearney State freshman finished ninth in the nation with a toss of 45 feet—a little short of the winning mark of 51 feet.

Jill, who owns the state high school record with a mark of 45-11, has heaved the steel ball 47-7/8 several times this year for Kearney. Once on her home turf during the state college meet and another at the Central States Intercollegiate Conference meet at Emporia, Kas.

Her future plans are to continue throwing for Kearney while picking up a degree in physical education and biology. Add a coaching endorsement and Jill hopes after graduation to teach on the high school level.

For now, Jill intends to squeeze in workouts when she's not working for her father, Ken, at the family gas station. On her calendar, though, are two important dates she doesn't want to forget. The first is June 11 when she'll give youngsters at the Norfolk meet a chance to learn about hearing the shot during an exhibition toss. The second date is June 18—circled in red—when she'll head to Hastings for the AAU meet.

SPECULATION: If the greens at the Wayne County Club don't hear from writer Bill by the time July 10 rolls around, it's almost a sure bet that club officials will have to scrap any plans for holding major money-making tournaments this year.

Already junked were plans for the June 5th Memorial Day tournament, the first big tournament of the season. Next on the agenda is the July 10th annual Wayne County Club Open.

"It's safe to say that the front nine of the 18-hole course is coming along pretty well. The main stickler is the back nine which a lot of the Wednesday night duffers are referring to as the "sand dunes."

Let's give credit where credit is due: the green crews are doing the best they can with the help of Mother Nature. If she doesn't want to cooperate then maybe at least by August, maybe the best thing to do would be to tear up the greens and start over.

Anyway you look at it, this summer is going to be a bleak 1977 as far as the record books go. No doubt the club will lose a lot of income this year, and maybe the only way to recover might mean another hike in the membership fees next year. Time will tell.

IN THE WIND: There's talk brewing in baseball circles around Wayne that the city may have a second town team.

Seems that several members of the present town team, coached by Don Goeden, want to get in more playing time, so they've taken it upon themselves to search for a few more fellow players and possibly get into another league. Word has it that they may be trying to get into the strong Tri-County League after Creighton indicated that it may want to drop out of the 10-team league.

HATS OFF to Paul Eaton and his helpers for the fine Chuck Ellis tournament Wakefield again is holding this year. The field is in great shape—very professional-looking—the lineup has some of the top Class A teams from three states and hospitality unbeatable.

The home team knotted the score in the bottom of the seventh when Abts doubled to right field to score Danze from first.

In the ninth, Coleridge put two men on when Schroeder walked Ron Stone and intentionally walked Benson. Stone, who stole second, scored when a pickoff attempt by Danze at first missed its target and went into right field.

had a man in scoring position when Gerch, who walked, rounded second on a throwing error by catcher Mike Meyer and stopped at third. Again Overin got the strikeout to retire the side.

Wayne had a chance to score in the sixth frame when Lutt, who was on third, raced home on right fielder Mic Daehnke's flyout to deep center. But plate umpire Steve Gline ruled Lutt didn't tag up at third, and was thrown out.

Blevins, who had 11 strikeouts, gave up a double in the first inning to leadoff hitter Gerch. In the last stanza, designated hitter Roger Hoefs got to Overin for a base hit.

In the only other NNBVL game played earlier this week, Dakota City toppled Ponca, 5-1.

Back to the Bag

SCRAMBLING back to first base is Wakefield shortstop Wes Lueth who escapes the attempted throw in the first inning. Lueth later scored on a two-base hit by teammate Brent Chase to give his Legion team a 1-0 lead against Aberdeen Monday. The roof caved in for the area club in the bottom of the seventh when Aberdeen scored a run to end the game at 3-2.

West Point 6-1. Wisner, which posted a 2-1 win over Sioux City North, was the next NEN team to exit the journey on a 10-0 blanking by Heelan in Tuesday's action. Wakefield soon followed with a 3-2 setback at the hands of Aberdeen.

Wakefield appeared to have a shot at getting into the semifinals and earn a placing among the top four clubs Monday until Aberdeen closed the door with a one-out run in the bottom of the seventh for a 3-2 victory.

Coach Paul Eaton's crew, which posted a sweet 2-0 blanking of Class A Norfolk in the first round Sunday, rallied in the top half of the seventh to knot the score on Todd Swigart's two-out ground single through second base. That hit scored pinch runner Rick Guy from second base and setup what Eaton had hoped would be extra innings.

An error and back-to-back singles by Bill Cantalope and Tim Burgard reopened the door for the South Dakota club in the bottom half of the seventh when pitcher Scott Mann was safe on first via a throwing error on the shortstop. Pinch runner Kevin Thomas went to second on a hit by Cantalope and raced home on the shortstop's hit to score the winning run.

Wakefield took early command of the game when Wes Lueth, who singled and stole second, dashed home on third baseman Brent Chase's double to right center field in the first inning.

A mixup in signals between pitcher Jono Kline and second baseman Swigart in the fourth resulted in Aberdeen's scoring which tied the game at one-all.

Leadoff hitter Gary Deibert was hit by a pitched ball and later went to second on an error by Kline. Before throwing to the next batter, Kline flipped around and threw the ball to second for the attempted tag out when the ball zipped past the base into center field.

Aberdeen went into the lead in the fifth frame when second baseman Scott Bosanko hit a two-out single to left field to score Burgard.

Against Norfolk Sunday, Wakefield scored runs in the third and fourth innings and relied on the one-hit pitching of Brad Jones for the win.

Swigart scored the first run for the hosts when he raced home from third on a double steal. Jones put his team in front 2-0 after he doubled and crossed the plate on Doug Starzl's two-bagger.

Walthill Trips

Midgets, 10-6,

In RBL Opener

Walthill struck for five runs in the first inning Tuesday night then proceeded to blow out an overconfident Wayne Midget club, 10-6, in the first game for both clubs in the Ralph Bishop League.

Playing at Walthill, Wayne couldn't get untracked until the fourth frame when the locals scored three runs for a 6-3 deficit.

Tom Ginn took the loss for the locals, giving up seven runs. "We were just a little overconfident. We're not as good as we used to be so we're going to have to work awful hard to keep going," said coach Hank Overin. "All the league teams will be out to get us so we're going to have to give 100 per cent," he added.

Psychologists tell us that grief should not be suppressed, but should be expressed aloud. Giving vent to grief is in itself healing.

"The tendency to hurry thru a funeral with a few impersonal sentences and prayers is a failure to understand either its purpose or the real needs of those who mourn", says Rev. Dr. Paul E. Johnson. In short, the only remedy for grief is to grieve.

State Commission Plans Hearings

"Older people in Nebraska have had a significant impact on our planning for next year," said David Howard, executive director of the Nebraska Commission on Aging, commenting on a recent series of eight town hall meetings attended by more than 1,000 people.

Comments made at the meetings, including one in Wayne, have been reflected in the objectives for the Nebraska Commission on Aging's state plan for the fiscal year starting October 1.

"Now we need to give the elderly a chance to comment on our efforts," Howard said.

Residents in the Northeast area will have an opportunity to comment on the proposed plan at a public hearing at 2 p.m. on June 16 at the Norfolk Senior Center, 715 Norfolk Ave.

Comments made at the five follow-up public hearings in Norfolk, Grand Island, Scottsbluff, Ogallala and Omaha will be incorporated into the state plan before it is submitted to Washington in August.

Family Finances
brought to you by Pat Gross

Q. This has not been a good financial year for my family. Everything seemed to go wrong and now I am pretty far in debt. I haven't panicked, but I just don't know what to do. What do you recommend?

A. Well, you've made a good start by recognizing the danger signals. First, have a family conference. Everyone old enough to understand should be told that the family has a financial crisis. They're a part of the action and they need to be told the truth.

Your family should, of course, immediately stop any new credit use. You can't borrow yourself out of a crisis. Next, develop a bare bones budget. This will permit you to meet basic necessary expenses and to begin paying off those credit obligations.

Finally, contact the creditors. Tell them your problem and that you are facing up to it. Advise them what you are able to do with respect to the debts you owe, but don't promise anything you can't deliver. If you are serious, they will likely accept a part payment while you are getting organized. If your debts are not too substantial, and your credit is good, they may offer you a consolidation loan to lower your monthly payments. Remember, be honest with yourself and with your creditors — and develop a plan for recovery.

Downtown

Councilman John Vakoc added that he would find it difficult to tell a businessman who had been assessed for new sidewalk that he couldn't display merchandise on the new walkway.

Swartz told the council there is no statute prohibiting sidewalk displays but pointed out that the primary purpose of sidewalks is to provide for pedestrian traffic. He also said the city would be liable for injuries resulting from such displays if the council approved of merchandise on sidewalks.

The attorney did say, however, that a provision could be included in the ordinance making merchants primarily liable for damages.

Businessmen including LeRoy Barner, owner of Barner's Appliance and Lawn Center; Larry Hintz, Gamble Store manager; and Al Wittig, owner of Wittig's Food Center, said they had checked and were told their insurance covers liability for damages.

There was some question in drafting that an ordinance be directed if the proposed sidewalk display area should be 26 inches in all areas, particularly where the sidewalk will be narrowed to 10 feet if the council moves ahead with the downtown improvement project. The council agreed to resolve that detail at the next meeting.

In other action the council:

- Approved the mayor's appointment of Melvin "Bud" Froehlich to the city planning commission, Darrel Fuelberth as council representative to the Chamber of Commerce, and Keith Mosley as the council representative to Wayne Industries, Inc.
- Approved ordinance 866, reducing from four months to two months the time unlicensed motor vehicles can be parked within the city limits, unless enclosed.
- Agreed that city administrator Fred Brink should return to the next meeting with proposals for financing a project to enclose a storm sewer in the Roosevelt Park area.
- Agreed to recommend in favor of granting Class C liquor licenses to the Wayne Eagles Club, and to Conrad Suhr, new owner of the NU Tavern. The Eagles Club, a non-profit organization, would be allowed to sell liquor for consumption on the premises only if the State Liquor Commission grants the license.

Approved specifications and agreed to advertise for bids for an addition to the city fire hall to house a new ladder truck scheduled to arrive in mid-July. The engineer's estimate is $7,700. The city budget includes $15,000 for the project.

Took no action but gave tentative approval to a request by the Wayne Lions Club to participate in construction and maintenance of a shower and restroom building at the Lions Club park adjacent to the airport.

The property is now under the jurisdiction of the airport authority and it must be determined if the city can legally spend money on the park. Councilman Jimmie Thomas said he thinks the feeling of the council is that the city will participate in improving the park if it can legally do so.

Clete Sharer addressed the council, outlining Lions Club expenditures in the park which have totaled more than $2,300. The tempo picked up on the last agenda item. The item, placed on the agenda by councilman Vernon Russell, was labeled "landfill" but discussion centered around a proposed city trash compactor.

The city is now taking bids for the project, with an engineer's cost estimate of $65,000.

Russell questioned the estimate and said a contractor had told him engineer Bruce Gilmore's estimates are generally "extremely low."

"I think there is some hanky-panky in the engineer's estimates," Russell said, predicting the project will cost more than $65,000.

Operation of the station, which will compact refuse into containers for transport to a landfill, will also be costly, Russell said, and he berated the rest of the council for not having already established rates for using the compactor. He pointed out that when he proposed to operate a landfill to serve the city, one of the points of contention was that he did not say what his fees will be.

The councilman said the station will be in competition with trash haulers, including himself, because of protracted hours of operation.

Brink Wednesday said no recommendations have been made regarding hours of operation or use fees. When the project was being developed, revenue projections were presented to the council but hours of operation and fees used were hypothetical and have not been recommended for implementation, he said.

Russell blasted Brink for the projections which were used and the administrator replied, asking if Russell is familiar with LB 182, passed recently by the Unicameral.

"No, Mr. Brink, that's what we pay you for," Russell replied. "Why don't you tell us all about it."

At that point, mayor Freeman Decker cut off discussion and asked for a motion to adjourn which was made, seconded, and passed.

Brink Wednesday morning said the law places restrictions on landfill operations. It requires that landfills be located more than 1,000 feet from any state or federal highway unless properly landscaped, and also imposes drainage and venting requirements, Brink said.

"The law makes it virtually impossible for any individual to set up a landfill and eliminates many sites which would otherwise be suitable," Brink said.

Closing days of session among most unusual in Unicameral's history

CAPITOL NEWS

LINCOLN — The next to last day of the 1977 legislative session was one of the most unusual in the history of the unicameral.

The lawmakers refused to approve the mainline budget bill after much arguing and parliamentary maneuvering but finally agreed late in the night they would consider the measure on the last day of their meeting, June 1.

The bill under consideration, LB 532, was the one that includes funding for most of the state's agencies. In all, it proposed spending more than $640 million of which $256 million would come from the general fund.

One item in the measure, an extra $20 million in state aid to education will be vetoed, according to Gov. J. James Exon.

Without passage of the state aid funding mechanism, the state would be required to collect the $20 million but would be unable to spend it because of the way legislation is written. Many senators said that was the reason the main budget measure could not muster enough strength to pass on the 89th day of the 90-day session.

Passage of the bill on June 1 means there will be no opportunity to override any changes Exon makes in the measure. Another bill already passed over the governor's veto forces the state to collect the $20 million, but Exon said he might veto the distribution requirement and call the lawmakers into special session to straighten out the matter. But later the governor said he would try to avoid a special session if the senators pass the LB 532 on June 1.

Code Vetoed

Gov. Exon, after hinting he might do so, followed up several days later and vetoed some of the most controversial bills considered by the legislature this year.

Exon said he would not sign the series of measures that provide for a comprehensive updating of the state's criminal laws — the first such revision in more than 100 years. The chief supporters of the legislation said they would make an attempt to override the veto on the final day of the session.

They accused the governor of playing politics with his veto, but Exon promptly denied that was the case. "In his veto message, Exon said more input was needed from judges, attorneys and the public before such far-reaching changes in the statutes were made."

He also said the proposed code should be reviewed before being enacted into law.

"It is better to be cautious now rather than sorry later," Exon said.

Senators Wally Barnett of Lincoln, John DeCamp of Neligh and Roland Luedtke of Lincoln — chief proponents of the new code — said they were shocked and disappointed by the governor's action.

They emphasized that the legislation made provisions for a review committee and that the code would not go into effect until July 1, 1978, allowing plenty of time for any changes that might be needed. DeCamp said that in his seven years as governor, Exon has always given legitimate reasons for not signing bills "but this time he did it without apparently understanding" what the measures proposed.

Luedtke said, "No piece of legislation has ever had as thorough a hearing and debate as the code." If it is not approved this year, it probably will be a very long time before the lawmakers will consider the subject again, he said.

Personal Property

The bill proposing a phase-out of the personal property tax on farm equipment, business inventories and livestock during the next three years won final approval on a 30-10 vote.

Also approved and sent to the governor was the measure that would withhold from counties money from the property tax relief fund, if they don't revalue their property by 1978 and each year after that.

Exon had earlier said he would sign the bills if both were passed.

Sen. Lorin Schmit of Bellwood steered the personal property tax proposed to passage, even though it was submitted later than most bills.

Sen. Richard Lewis of Holbrook was the pro behind the legislation for revaluing property. It also is aimed at placing a lid on the amount local governmental subdivisions can increase their annual budgets.

The spending ceilings, however, could be lifted after a public hearing on any proposed increase was held by the taxing district.

Under the bill, a county would lose 10 per cent of its money from the relief fund if it didn't revalue property by next Jan. 1.

Anyone in the state interested in knowing has been told that Gov. Exon and his wife, Pat, have a net worth of about $190,000.

The governor recently released a detailed statement which gave the Exon's financial status as of April 30.

He noted his income, other than his $25,000 gubernatorial salary, has been "significantly reduced" since he became governor.

According to his statement, Exon's outside income during the 1971 to 1976 period ranged from a low of $15,586 in 1974 to a high of $28,991 in 1976.

In the period before he became governor, Exon said his business profits varied from a low of $36,047 in 1970 to $52,700 in 1969.

The Exons own an office equipment and furniture firm.

The governor said since he became the state's chief executive he has not participated actively in the business and serves only on the board of directors.

OBSERVATIONS

Questions

The restrooms at Henry Victor Park were again subjected to vandalism last week. If the facility is damaged again, it will probably force the city to lock the doors at night.

That would be a shame because the restrooms are a convenience to campers who use the park. That kind of convenience is the type of thing people passing through remember about a community, the type of accommodation which helps give a town a good name.

It's been said countless times before, but it can never be said enough: It's too darned bad that a few thoughtless individuals feel they have the right to destroy something provided for the public good.

I'd like to ask those responsible a few questions.

Is your life so meaningless that you have to get your kicks by tearing something apart? Aren't you a worthy enough person that you can't find something constructive to occupy your time, which would give you more satisfaction than destroying? Or do you resent the success of other people who want to improve the community so much that you feel you are "getting back" through vandalism?

Is it that you don't like our town and want to hurt it by ripping up a public facility? If that's the case, a solution might be to move to another community. But we suspect the individuals responsible would not be happy anywhere.

Or was the problem booze? Did you tip a few too many and it made you feel macho to tear something apart? (Not that we're necessarily discounting the possibility that females were involved.) Did it make you feel big and brave and bad to sneak around in the dark and do your damage?

Unfortunately, those questions will probably never be asked of themselves by the next individuals who decide it is time to tear something up. If they did, they would probably give less than honest answers. And if they answered themselves honestly, it probably wouldn't do any good. But it's worth a try. — Jim Strayer

Our liberty depends on the freedom of the press, and that cannot be limited without being lost. — Thomas Jefferson, Letter, 1786.

"Tax BIG things, HEAVY things, FUEL guzzlers... picky, picky, picky!"

Wheat Commission Report would clear air

Members of the Nebraska Wheat Commission and State Director of Agriculture Glenn Kreuscher could do wonders for greater appreciation of the wheat development and marketing program and the credibility of their administration by answering inquiries about the use of checkoff funds cooperatively and with financial accounting subject to the same verification procedures accepted by other agencies of state government.

The subject of the lack of "accountability" of the wheat checkoff tax program which has been operating since the act was passed in 1955 came up again during recent debate on LB 390, a bill passed on Final Reading by a vote of 41-3. LB 390 permits the excise tax paid by every grower when he sells his wheat to be increased from 1/4 cent per bushel to 1/2 cent per bushel.

The debate on the floor of the Legislature arose over several proposed amendments to the act submitted by outstate senators who have been fielding questions from some of their wheat-grower constituents. One such amendment would have added a provision that is fairly standard in commodity checkoff programs at both state and national levels and would have permitted a grower not satisfied with the program to request and receive a refund.

Senator George Burrows of Adams, one of the supporters of such a provision, told the senators it would be a good safety valve. He said very few wheat growers would request a refund, but it would provide a degree of accountability to the growers that is absent from the present law.

Opponents of such a change in the wheat check-off statute included Senator Lorin Schmit, chairman of the Agriculture Committee; and Senator Richard Lewis of Holbrook, a former member of the Nebraska Wheat Commission. They contended the program has been doing a great job and that those proposing any change were trying to kill the bill and the program.

Senator Robert Clark of Sidney, under questioning relative to an interim study conducted by the Appropriations Committee in 1975, said the chief complaints from growers and from several former members of the commission, was the lack of accountability to the growers. He confirmed that the committee asked for a report from the State Department of Agriculture concerning the check-off program and one has never been submitted. Senator Schmit said he was requesting a report from Director Kreuscher and that it would be available before LB 390 came up for Final Reading.

LB 290 was passed on final reading with an amendment attached which reads as follows: "The Nebraska Wheat Development, Utilization and Marketing Committee shall, on or before January 31, 1978, file with the Legislature a detailed report of its receipts, disbursements, transactions and activities during the preceding fiscal year."

Senator Sam Cullin of Hemingford, a wheat grower, revealed that he got a furious reaction from Director Kreuscher and there was a news-quoted outburst from a former chairman of the Nebraska Wheat Commission later, when he asked for a report on expenditures of the program during the past year. Cullin said he had been getting questions and wanted some answers.

How much easier it would be if each year (not just for this year), the Nebraska Wheat Commission prepared a report of its year's activities. Such a report in folder form could review the history of the wheat program along with its income and expenditures for the year, its accomplishments during the year, and its plans for the coming year. The commission could supply each member of the Legislature with a copy, distribute some to the County Extension offices, and have some available to wheat growers who request information about how their check-off money is being used.

That would make more sense and be much better public relations than telling state senators and fellow wheat growers who ask for information that they are "nitpicking" and trying to destroy the program. — M.M. Van Kirk, Nebraska Farm Bureau.

Coverage criticized

Dear Editor:
Wayne
I am sorry you didn't feel it was news-worthy enough to include a picture or story (I don't consider one line a write-up) when Mrs. Maude Auker received a Distinguished Citizen Award at the Wayne High graduation.
I'm sure not many of the Class of '77 and very few of the rest of us will be present for the 80th anniversary of our graduation. I certainly pray if I am, I am as alert and interested in life as Maude.
Many I've visited with were just as disappointed as I was that this wasn't as important as the four dandelion pictures in an earlier paper.
Thanks to KTCB for broadcasting the graduation ceremonies for those who couldn't attend.
Really appreciate the Souvenir section of area graduates each year. Thanks to The Wayne Herald and the advertisers for sponsoring it. — Joann Temme.

Watergate prosecutor comments on CPA

Today's column consists of excerpts from a letter written by Leon Jaworski, former Watergate special prosecutor, to Rep. Jack Brooks (D-Texas), chairman of the House Government Operations Committee.

The new Agency for Consumer Protection, as it is called in the bill (H.R. 6118), would be vested with authority so broad that it could easily be turned to the political advantage of those who control it. There are no checks sufficient to harness that authority. Under these circumstances, creation of the new agency is unwise.

The Agency for Consumer Protection would be charged to "protect" and to "represent" the "interests of consumers" in nearly every activity of our federal complex. The legislation would grant its administrator the right to appear before agencies and departments of government, the right to sue the government in federal court, and the right to speak from any platform — all on behalf of the "consumer interest" which he "represents."

Let us consider the implications of this authority. To do so, we must first inquire who are the new agency's constituents. They are called "consumers" as if there were a difference between a "consumer" and a "person." In fact, of course, there is none. The agency will ostensibly represent the interest of every man, woman and child in this nation.

This conclusion leads to the question of how the interest of the people will be determined in any given matter. There are no criteria in the bill for defining that interest, nor could there be. Definition of the national interest is the most difficult and most fundamental objective of government; and ultimate responsibility for its accomplishment is placed by the Constitution upon the elected Members of Congress and the President. I have severe reservations about the delegation of so broad and basic a role to one unelected official.

The political authority inherent in such an assignment is literally enormous. If the Agency for Consumer Protection were to function as it is conceived in the bill, the power of the administrator could not be checked by the President.

Neither could Congress nor the judiciary provide an effective balance against the activities of the agency, so long as it remained within its practically limitless statutory authority. Congress could theoretically abolish the agency or limit its appropriation, but in practice would probably not do so. As the designated representative of all consumer interests, the administrator would have a far greater opportunity to influence public opinion than most Members of Congress. I would expect the agency to make the argument that its mandate could not be carried out without substantially greater appropriations. Given the administrator's public platform and his designated status as the representative of all consumers, it is not unlikely that he would prevail. For these reasons, I am skeptical as well about the "sunset provision" contained in Section 23 of the bill.

I do not care to speculate that any person would use the new agency as a vehicle to distort the political process for personal gain or for any other reason. I need not do so to prove my point. Power would be vested in the administrator of the new agency that could be wrongfully manipulated. That alone is sufficient to justify laying the concept to rest once and for all. It is contrary to the most fundamental of our democratic principles to vest in one unelected person the authority to represent, legally and politically, the interests of all the people.

Sincerely yours,
Leon Jaworski

The last time this proposal came before the Congress, another respected expert on the Constitution — and, ironically, another hero of the Watergate investigation — Senator Sam J. Ervin, Jr., wrote a similarly ringing indictment of it. Two such warnings should be enough. The real issue here is not "consumer protection," but rather, whether we can find the will to halt the relentless growth of government power while we still have the ability to do so. — Richard Leshar, U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Balance Sought in Land Interests

In searching for balance between public and private land interests, there are but three choices, according to University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension rural community development specialist Duane Olsen.

"A decision must be made whether to use the land resources and destroy them; to use the land resources and conserve or maintain them or to leave the land resources in their natural state," Olsen said.

He added that all three have been used in the past and will probably be used in the future to try to strike the best balance between the needs of both present and future generations.

"Traditionally, there is a preference for economic or market forces in dealing with land use, rather than political-legal interpretations of society's interest in land use," Olsen said.

However, in the market system, the "best" use of land is determined by economic returns or profits from alternative land uses.

In the market system, third party effects, which deal with individuals and groups other than the buyer and seller, are most often found in the form of environmental concerns.

"As third party spillover from the buyer and seller becomes more extreme, a move is made toward market failure," Olsen said.

Irreversible decisions occur when historic sites or habitats of endangered wildlife species are lost forever, Olsen explained. When irreversible decisions are made, the market fails to account for the value of leaving options open.

"Public interest is another problem, since the public is composed of many groups, each with unique interests and concerns. Conflicting public concerns are very common," Olsen said.

"When the Homestead Act passed, it encouraged settlement of the frontier and private ownership. However, 30 years later when the Forest Reserve Act passed, conservation and preservation were more apparent than private ownership," Olsen explained.

He added that in addition to conflicting interest, public decisions can have substantial economic impacts on private landowners. Gains arise as public investments in new schools, highways, parks or playgrounds create the opportunity for landowners to shift their land into more intensive, high rent producing use. However, losses come about when public actions reduce the present and future productivity of land. Though the U.S. Constitution calls for "just" compensation when the government takes land, the question of fairness is disputable, Olsen said.

While some observers say that public interest should be controlled at the local government, many levels of government are concerned with it, he said.

"Political-legal adjustments in the role of the market must be consciously made by participating citizens, since the balance between public and private land interests will never be wholly resolved," Olsen said.

High Prices Forecast

The longest liquidation phase in the history of cattle cycles is about to end, with higher beef prices forecast for the remainder of the year, according to Dr. Allen Wellman, extension agricultural economist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

During the first part of 1977, inventories of cattle on feed declined somewhat from a year ago, he said.

"January to June marketings are expected to be slightly less than the same period last year," Wellman said. "Slaughter of cows, nonfed cattle and calves also are expected to be down."

He said as producers plan to expand their herds following the two-year reduction cycle, they will contribute to declining beef production in the coming months by retaining some heifers for cow herd replacement rather than placing them on feed or sending them to slaughter.

Such a situation likely will strengthen prices in the future, Wellman said, although weights should be heavier as fed cattle marketings comprise a large portion of total slaughter.

"It is very possible that average choice steer prices for the next three to four months at Omaha could be in the low- to mid-50 range," he said.

The Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources economist said higher beef prices could be limited by several factors, including:

- Increased pork production, which is expected to be more than 13 per cent larger than last year during the first half of 1977 and may show a two to four per cent increase during the last half of this year when compared to last year's figures.

"Bunched or large fed marketings in some areas. Such conditions are difficult to forecast," he said, "but backlogs can result from labor problems, adverse weather and substantial price variations."

"Unfavorable weather. Wellman said weather can have 'an important impact' upon the cattle cycle.

"Drought can push large numbers of cows and yearlings to slaughter, accelerating the inventory reduction," he said. "Some portion of the drop in cattle numbers may be attributed to drought conditions here in the Northern Plains where beef cow inventories declined 13 per cent in 1976."

Further, he said, weather plays a "major role" in feed-grain supplies and costs, which he termed a "major determinant of fed cattle supplies and subsequent beef production." More than two-thirds of the nation's feedgrain supplies are consumed by domestic livestock, he added.

"Increased demand for beef. 'Recent indications are that consumer demands for beef have strengthened because of higher income and lower unemployment rates, and because there is some evidence that beef featuring in supermarkets has increased,' Wellman said.

This and That...
from YOUR COUNTY AGENT

DON C. SPITZE

WAYNE COUNTY EXTENSION AGENT

Chrysanthemums come in a variety of colors and sizes. There are low-growing types called cushions and taller, long-stemmed varieties.

To encourage these plants to develop a uniform shape and more flowers, pinch out the tops as the plants begin to grow. This makes the plant more bushy. As it grows farther, pinch out the tips again. This can be continued until mid-July, but no later. Further pinching back of the plant will delay blooming.

Use shallow cultivation on mums. Mutch the plants to keep the soil cool and holding moisture. As the days get shorter in the late summer and fall the plants will set blossoms and produce a beautiful display until frost.

BLOSSOM END ROT IN TOMATOES

Blossom-end rot occurs to some extent wherever tomatoes are grown. The rot first starts as a small water-soaked spot on the blossom end of the tomato. The spot enlarges, darkens and becomes sunken and leathery.

Blossom-end rot is most prevalent during prolonged dry periods that occur while the plants are making vigorous growth. It may also occur after periods of unusually abundant rain. Heavy applications of nitrogen fertilizers and extreme fluctuations in moisture favor the disease.

To control the disease, avoid excessive use of nitrogen fertilizers. Also apply moisture evenly over the growing season so moisture stress does not occur.

TIPS ON NEWLY PLANTED TREES

It's important that newly planted shade trees have plenty of water. A good rule of thumb is to give them one good soaking per week.

The easiest and most effective way to water the newly-planted shade trees is to dig a saucer-shaped basin around the base of the tree two inches and at least two feet in diameter; then place soil and sod around the rim of the basin as a ridge.

STAKING TREES

Staking supports a tree by forcing it to grow with a straight, upright trunk. This prevents the tree from being whipped by the wind before the roots can become established and helps keep lawn mowers and other equipment from getting too close.

It's a good idea to stake all trees over five feet tall and leave the stakes for one year. Use one, two or three stakes depending on the size of the tree. Common stakes to use are steel fenceposts or 2-x 2-inch wooden stakes about six feet long. Use a number 12 wire encased in a short piece of old rubber garden hose at the point of contact with the tree to prevent injury to the tree.

Sun's Rays May Power Irrigation in Future

The sun's rays may be given more credit for preventing drought in the future than critics are giving such conditions on the nation's farms.

In the first project of its kind, the University of Nebraska-Lincoln agricultural engineering department, in conjunction with the Massachusetts Institute of Technology's (MIT) Lincoln Laboratory, will construct the largest solar cell-powered crop irrigation system on Earth.

Construction on the unit, which will be installed at the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources' Field Laboratory near Mead, began this spring and should be completed in July, according to Dr. William Splinter, department chairman.

The project is being supported by the Photovoltaic Conversion Program, Division of Solar Energy and Development Administration (TERDA).

The solar array will be installed by MIT's Lincoln Laboratory with assistance and support of UN-L under a $114,000 subcontract, Splinter said. He said UN-L will use the energy to power a redesigned automatic gated pipe irrigation unit that will water 80 acres of corn and soybeans at Mead.

Alternate Energy Source

Splinter said success of the experimental irrigation system could demonstrate an alternate source of energy for irrigation, which surveys indicate accounts for half of the entire energy consumed in Nebraska's agricultural production.

Paul Fischbach, extension irrigationist who will head the project for UN-L, said that an additional phase of the project will consist of $25,000 appropriated for a six-month feasibility study designed to determine future sites for solar-powered irrigation units in the United States.

Splinter said the experiment plans call for a three- to five-year collection and analysis of performance data on the solar array and its application to various uses in agricultural production. Such research will include experiments in crop drying and in swine confinement housing, he said, and financing will be determined as the study progresses.

William Ramine, MIT Lincoln Laboratory engineer who leads its irrigation project task force, said the subcontract to UN-L will be issued through the Lincoln Laboratory, which is located in Lexington, Mass., about 15 miles west of MIT's campus in Cambridge. The laboratory is chartered to conduct research and development for the federal government.

ERDA's contract with MIT's Lincoln Laboratory calls for field tests and applications of various solar cell-powered sys-

Hotline Message

WAYNE COUNTY agent Don Spitze records his first message on a new Code-a-Phone installed in his office. Spitze Tuesday recorded a message giving information regarding a cutworm problem in the area, and how to deal with it. The new recording phone will also be used to provide irrigation information to area farmers. Spitze said the Irrigation Hotline should go into operation within the next week. Based on weather data collected by the Northeast Station at Concord, the Hotline will let farmers know how much water their crops are using. Number for the Hotline is 375-1472. The Code-a-Phone will be in operation 24 hours a day, seven days a week during the crop season.

tems, of which the unit at Mead will be one.

High Irrigation Expenses

Romaine said Nebraska was chosen for the solar irrigation project because it is one of the largest users of energy for irrigation and has correspondingly high irrigation expenses each year.

He said the array will consist of two rows 325 feet long. Each row will be tilted to collect the sun's rays. One row will be set about five feet lower than the other, to prevent shadows from falling upon it.

A total of about 120,000 individual photovoltaic solar cells, which are silicon wafers roughly two-hundredths of an inch thick and two and one-quarter inches in diameter, will be mounted upon flat panels, Romaine said. The cells will be interconnected by electrical wiring that will lead to two MIT trailers housing large batteries able to store up to 85 kilowatt hours of energy. He said inverters will convert the direct current (DC) electricity produced by the cells from the sun's rays into alternating current (AC) to power the pump motor and other loads.

The solar cells to be used in the experiment generate small electrical currents equal to about one-fourth of a watt of power when sunlight falls upon them, making the peak power of the unit about 25,000 watts, Romaine said.

Each of the solar irrigation system's 36 panels, which will be constructed to withstand 100 m.p.h. winds, will be able to be tilted to a maximum 65 degree angle, with respect to horizontal, by a hydraulic piston system to See SUN, page 7 absorb maximum sunlight, he said.

"That's not the sort of feature that would be put into a working (solar) array because it's too expensive," Romaine said.
"The combination of the very rugged construction of the array coupled with the ability to tilt it makes the construction quite costly. However, these features will allow for additional data to be taken and are, therefore, important for experimental purposes."

Reducing Costs
Romaine said the likelihood of solar-powered irrigation becoming feasible within 10 to 15 years will depend upon reducing its cost. "Photovoltaic cells today are much more costly than are affordable by irrigator," he said. "They are a direct outgrowth of the nation's space program where cost was not a primary objective."
"The goal now is to learn how to make photovoltaic cells with greater reliability and much more cheaply."

Romaine said ERDA goals call for reducing the cost by nearly 30 times between now and 1986, or from the current $15 a watt to 50 cents a watt.
Fischbach said about one-third of an acre normally would be needed to house a solar-powered system the size of the unit being built at Mead. The solar unit will be constructed on the end of the berm of the reservoir to avoid occupying valuable farmland, he said.

Data on incoming energy from the solar unit will be used to program an irrigation scheduling sequence, Fischbach said. Power from the system will operate a 10 horsepower motor 12 hours a day able to pump 1,000 gallons of water a minute out of an irrigation reservoir that is also a reuse pit, he said.
The UN-L irrigator said the project also will be an experiment in "off-peak" utility power use since it is cheaper. Water will be pumped out of the irrigation well during the night into the two acre foot reservoir to avoid using normal sources of electrical energy during peak consumption hours, he said.

Retinking Normal Practices.
"We have to rethink all of our normal practices, which are geared to designing and running an irrigation system 24 hours a day," Fischbach said. "This year, we'll be trying to get the solar unit on line and make the reservoir system work."

Water will be fed into an automatic gated pipe irrigation system, chosen because it uses the least amount of energy and only a 10 horsepower solar-powered motor currently is available, he said.
Fischbach said use of more energy-intensive irrigation equipment and pumping water directly from a well instead of a reservoir is planned for the future. Irrigation will be scheduled through the University's Agriculture Computer Network (AGNET) which utilizes readings from electrical resistance blocks installed in irrigated fields to minimize water and energy use, he said.

Fischbach said UN-L researchers will measure water intake rates of the soil, crop water use and the extent to which irrigation scheduling must be altered to accommodate a varying power source.
Following its use during the July and August irrigation season, the solar unit will be tested for its grain drying potential from October until March in a separate study.

'Horse Race'
Dr. Thomas Thompson, UN-L agricultural engineer and AGNET co-director who will head the drying research, said two grain bins will be set up near the collector.

"Basically, we'll be using electricity generated by the solar unit to power crop drying fans for in-bin drying of grain and analyzing the performance of the drying system," he said.
Thompson said a large fan operating 12 hours a day probably will be used to dry the 12,000 bushels of corn expected to be harvested from the 80-acre Mead field. Two bins each with a five horsepower fan, will be used to dry the crop, he said.

Splinter said, "We're actually in a horse race of trying to develop an alternate energy source before our finite resources are used up. We must look for other energy sources and photovoltaic cells are made primarily of silicon... which is one of the world's most plentiful elements."

"Natural resources won't be a limiting factor in the utilization of solar power... but technology may be," he said.
Romaine said MIT research on the project will seek to improve the current technological level.

"I don't see any question that the solar array will generate power and that this power will run the system properly after the usual number of corrections are made," he said.

"The issue is how well it will work and what are the problems that make it work not as well as we would like it to work," he added.

'Practical Problems'
Romaine said "close attention" will be paid to the efficiency of the electrical system in converting DC into AC to see if direct current can be used without inverting it to power the irrigation pump. Such a system not only would be cheaper but also would avoid the loss in the inverters of about 10 per cent of the total power generated by the solar cells, he said.

"Our first task is to get the system off and working and find out what the practical problems associated with managing the irrigation solar system are," Romaine said.

But he noted that using solar power for irrigation may be just the start of things to come.
"The total number of cells available today for all terrestrial applications of solar energy is not very great—only several hundred kilowatts," he said. But he said that the buildup in the Largely responsible, Romaine said, is ERDA's goal of having "many hundreds of megawatts" of solar power in operation in various applications throughout the nation by 1990. Such applications likely will include private homes, shopping centers and power plants, he said.

DESCRIPTION — Russian knapweed, is a perennial, reproducing by seed and underground rootstocks. The plant has large underground rootstocks by which it spreads into new territory, sends up numerous new plants, and stores large amounts of food materials. The stems are one to four feet tall and are covered with downy white hairs. The leaves are slightly hairy. The lower ones have very rough or lobed margins. The heads are about one-half inch wide and have blue to purple or rose-colored flowers. The seeds are an ivory to light-brown color, flattened, ovate shaped, and usually without bristles or hair. Russian knapweed seed is occasionally found in alfalfa and clover seed.

CONTROL — In pasture or waste areas, use one quart 2,4-D plus one pint Banvel at early bud stage. Avoid tillage five weeks before and one week after application. Plan to treat for several consecutive years.

SPECIAL REMARKS — Russian knapweed is extremely difficult to control with presently available herbicides.
