Five Haystacks

About 30 firemen from the Wayne volunteer fire department battled a hay stack fire for three hours on the Scotty Thompson farm about a half mile east of Wayne.

The blaze, which destroyed five stacks, was reported about 1:15 p.m. Friday, according to fire chief Dick Korn. No cause of the fire has been determined, Korn pointed out, but firemen have ruled out the possibility of someone setting the fire.

Two pumper trucks and two tankers were used to fight the fire which was whipped up by southernly winds.

The loss was estimated at $720.

Rock Climber Is 'Outward Bound

A May graduate of Wayne State College will leave Wayne Tuesday for Eugene, Ore., where he will attend a different kind of school.

Dave Anderson, a 1973 Wayne
High graduate, will participate in an Outward Bound program including hiking, rock climbing and snow travel.

Outward Bound, a non-profit offering a different type of outdoor experience.

The rock climbing portion of the Oregon program will be old hat for Anderson. The 21-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Anderson of rural Wayne has been climbing since he was a junior in high school.

Another Wayne High graduate, Dale Tomrdle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Tomrdle of Wayne. Introduced Anderson to the sport. Tomrdle learned climbing from Mark Jonas of Moscow, Idaho. For safety, climbing is a buddy-type sport and Tomrdle needed a local partner. He taught Anderson the basics, which Anderson tried out in the Palisades area near Sloux Falls, S.D., before graduating to the Needles area near Rapid City, S.D.

Anderson's first major climb was Yosemite Point in Teton National Park. Along with Tomrdle, Jonas and another companion, Anderson scaled the 13,000-foot peak on a face never years, completing 45 major ascents.

The first climb came after Anderson had completed six weeks of platon leader training with the Marine Corps at Quantico, Va. He has since decided to switch to the Navy and will enter officer training at Newport, R. I., in the fail. A chemistry major while at WSC, Anderson hopes to enter nuclear propulsion school after receiving his commission as an ensign.

Old time mountaineers might find some of today's climbing techniques unfamiliar, Anderson said. Pitons — iron stakes driveninto rock to anchor ropes—have become almost obsolete. With the tremendous Increase in climbing as a sport, many popular rock faces were becoming scarred from the stakes and most climbers have given them up in favor of chockstones or "chockes," machined aluminum boths wedged into crevices.

"A lot of climbers, including myself, have never driven a stake," Anderson said.

The Outward Bound program will mean plenty of rugged living and the Wayne climber has been getting in shape for it, running four miles three nights a week and lifting weights on alternate nights. He has also been sandpapering his fingertips to build up caliouses.

"If you don't, your fingers will get scraped bloody the first couple of days on rough rock," he said.

All that may sound like more preparation than many people care to take for a hobby, but Anderson said anyone in good health can enjoy rock climbing. The trick is to know your abilities, and not exceed them. "You just need to look ahead and use some common sense," Anderson said. "More people get hurt driving to and from climbing areas than do while climbing."

ng." The University of Nebraska The University of Nebraska-Lincoln recreation department has offered weekend seminars for beginners the past couple of years. Anderson said, recom-mending the sessions as a good way for learn the basics. Cost for the training has been about $12, Anderson said, and follow-up weekend excursions to South Dakota have cost about $30. The address for obtaining in-formation on the training is: Mark Ebel; "UN-L Recreation— Department, 1740 Vine St., Lincoln.

Department, 1740 Vine St., Lincoln.

The buddy system, with climb. ers linked by anchored ropes, provides a degree of safety. Anderson said. If a climber behind the leader slips, the rope will snug him up after a drop of a foot or two.

A misstep can be more serious for the leader, who will drop twice the distance to the closest anchoring chock. That can be dangerous, sometimes resulting in internal injuries.

"I've never fallen while leading, and if I did, I might be tempted to give if up." Anderson admitted.

Still, danger is part of the attraction of climbing:
"You get in a situation where you know you can't, but you know you have to. You feel like you could push your fingers into the rock to have something to hang on to. It scares you, and you get an adrenalin 'high,' When it's over and you've done it, it's great."

While most of Anderson's climbing has been on South Dakota and Colorado mountains, he has done some climbing in Nebraska. A toy designer recently attracted considerable attention when he used specialists.

he has done some climbing in Nebraska. A toy designer re-cently attracted considerable attention when he used specially designed equipment to scale the World Trade Center building in New York City. Concrete, as well as rock, has challenged Anderson, too. He said he has scaled a couple of buildings in Lincoln.

One ascent was cut short when he was? discovered after completing only 20 feet of the climb and authorities, forced him to give up the endeavor.

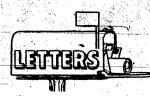

Climbing buildings is frowned upon, to say the least, Anderson said. "There are some problems of liability." he explained.

Another time, however, he was two-thirds of the way up the side of a building before discovered, and was allowed to complete the climb. Officials weren?

Councilman comments On transfer station

Dear Editor:
You report of the last council meeting, and your comments, about the proposed transfer station were as uninformative and slented as usual. Your concern for the reporting of news articles as they actually happen or what is actually said, has a lof to be destree.

Since you came to Wayne over a year ago, I can only compliment you on one coverage of council meetings being accurate and not slanted, to fit your opinion. I also doubt that you will print this tetter in its present form because you do not want the people of Wayne to really know what is going on.

The last council meeting I brought out five points concerning the transfer station which the taxpayers should know about and that the council has neglected to consider before building such a facility. You saw fit not to report on any of these points because you know that they are true.

—Rates: As you did say a councilman these points because you kngw that they are true.

—Rates: As you did say a councilman said that it was hard to set a rate without cost. I said the same thing when asked what my rates would be. (Look who's cailling the kettle black.) The administrator has proposed rates and coucil has refused to take action. He has also proposed the college be chared nearly four times more than anyone else. If am expected to set rates without knowing all costs, why not the city? Should a person with one sack of garbage pay the same as a person with six or seven sacks? This is what is proposed.

—Negotiations: Negotiate contract with Mr. Root and city of Nortolk for disposal of garbage, also find out length of contract and expected life of their land. Ill. If would certainly be a disaster to spend 80 to $90,000.00 of taxpayers money and not have anywhere to take the garbage. Even you are not stupid enough not to agree with this.

—Hours of operation: What is the use

America's romance with the auto-mobile is an old story but some people exhibit an even deeper affection for their mobile is an old story but some people exhibit an even deeper affection for their wheels.

Take Larry Boehly, a McLean, Virg. construction engineer, as an example. He is the founder and president of the National Driver Association, a non-profit club whose 1,500 members contend that government has gone too far in its regulation of the automobile.

"It blows my mind to see all this effort and money being spent to harrass people who exceed 55 miles an hour on our highways when more than half the traffic fatalities can be fraced to drunken drivers," Boehly told the Automotive Information Council.
"I'll admit fatalities were reduced a few percentage points by enforcing the lower speed limit." he said, "but why don't we crack down on booze in the blood? Jail sentences for intoxicated drivers should be mandatory."

Boehly, who believes that some safety and emissions standards are unnecessary, began his club last September with a letter to the editor of an automotive magazine for car enthusiasts. He later bylined a column in the publication and invited other motorists to join his cause.

"I'm for the air bag but I don't think I of building this facility if it is not going to be open for the people to use? And if it is open so that the people use it to any great extent. If will mean the loss of home service. Who will benefit by this and isn't this a major factor? The cost on this issue could be anywhere from $3.00 to $7.000 a year for an employe to run the station.

—Cost: Overall cost of transfer station, to the taxpayer plus loss of revenue and operational cost each year. The two transfer stations that I talked to were losing $12,000 per year plus cost of facility and operational cost each year. Since we are going to have two times as much garbage it is only reasonable to assume that, we will lose 15 to $20,000 per year.

—Enolineer's estimate: This has a bad assume that we will lose 15 to $20,000 per year.

—Engineer's estimate: This has a bad odor. The first estimate was 80 to $50,000. Two weeks later this was reduced to 60 to $65,000. When I asked for a break down, I received a total of $47,000. Yet this engineering firm built the station at Neligh one year ago and the figures are not even close plus there was no great amount of dirt work involved. Strange, buth?

Nelign one year ago and in ligures are not even close plus there was no great amount of dirt work involved. Strange, huh?

I think that it is time for the tax-payers to call their councilman or woman and ask them to answer these questions. The bids will be opened Tuesday night and none of these questions will be answered. This entire situation has a bad smell and I have several ideas as to what is in the air, one of which is that the City of Wayne is going into the garbage business while most of the other cities are trying to get out of it. Are people afraid that if I was to start a landfill that I will make a dollar? I have kept the best garbage rates possible for seven years without doing it free, do I deserve this kind of ridicule from someone such as you? You are not even a taxpayer Mr. Strayer.

should be forced to buy it." he said. "I wear seat belts but I don't want anyone to tell me I have to use them. I shouldn't have to buy heavy beams for my cardoors, or buzzers that tell me to remove the key or buckle my belts. That buzzer is offensive to me."

Boehly, who owns a full sized car, a sports car and a truck, says that the industry has gone far enough in meeting clean air standards (over 80 percent achieved) and has already done a good job in making cars safer. On better gas mileage, the Virginian comments: "Demanding better economy and cleaner air at the same time without providing enough time to meet those goals tells me that Congress really just doesn't understand the engineering problems."

Boehly, 37, who disclaims any business association with the industry, thinks the law requiring bett installation on all cars is a good one. He also likes radial tires, urges anti-skid braking devices as an option and thinks "right turns on red signals" a marvelous idea.

He describes his members as generally in their Thirties with a great interest in automobiles.

STRAYer Thoughts

By Jim Strayer

Being a contest judge is not without its dangers. Tuesdey night, for example, it was making rounds of downtown stores to help pick a winner for the Moonlight Madness costume contest and I stopped one woman to get her name down as a potential winner. How was I to know she was a customer, wasn't entered in the contest, and didn't consider her outfit a costume."

Time Passing By

I just sent in a reservation for my 10-year class reunion but even without that event scheduled I could tell It's been a few years since I left my home town. How? I always check out the court news column when I read the Fairbury Journal-News and the longer I'm gone, the fewer names I recognize. Some of the old regulars I knew so well hardly get a mention any more.

Oh, sure, there is the odd parking ticket now and then, but it's nothing like the good old days. Guess it means either the old crowd has gotten older (which means I have too) and wisser. (I. won't. make any claim to that), or they've all moved away. It's one way of noting the passage of time.

I missed out on what is, or was, known as "New Math." The class which followed mine was the first in our school system to be introduced to the new and wonderful system, but my classmates and I missed out, darn it.

But being born too early has its disadvantages. I found an Item last week about a professor popularly known as the "Mad Hugger," who is offering a non-credit on hugging. (With a course like that, who cares about credit?) They never had anything like that when I was in school.

Nebraska The weekly brass band concert on warm summer evenings in the city park or on the courthouse square was once almost as much a part of the Nebraska scene as Sunday church services. There are still a few bands playing, but year by year the number shrinks. Summer recreation is found elsewhere now — in motoring, at the movies, in the swimming pool, but most of all in air-conditioned comfort in some bistro or at home listen-

It is true that a student band exists in most communities. Slashily outfitted and led by dancing majorettes. In summer the students might be called fogether—for festive occasions, but mainly school bands function only during the school bends of the bands a century ago, clad in their blue uniforms—if in special costume at all—would hardly recognize their modern counterparts.

City-sponsored brass bands, manned City-sponsored brass bands, manned with amateur musiclans, most often carried the name "cornet band" because of their principal instrument. Pictures of those bands a century, ago rarely show woodwinds. A band might be composed of corniets, trombones, tubas, alto horns, and drums.

Tecumseh's Military Band, playing in the immediate post-Civil War years, was an outgrowth of even earlier bands. Ashland's Silver Cornet Band began playing soon after the town's founding. An early organization in Bialr was the Cornet Band, organized in 1875 by Levi Handy. Ed Howe, editor of the Falls City Nemaha Valley Journal in the 1870's (later a famous author-newspaperman at Atchison, Kansas), enthusiastically called on his readers to support the band:

"How the people like a good brass band ... Good music suggests everything that humanity should strive for. Every man who wishes the happiness of his race should encourage good music and discourage cheap music. Everything cheap should be discouraged . Frown down on everything cheap and unnatural. Encourage every good thing; particularly every good brass band."

There were few holidays that did not find the band on hand — Memorial Day, Independence Day, Labor Day, old settlers' day or community picnics. They also played special concerts, at balls, for election rallies, and at funerals.

The Gothenburg Cornet Band, organized in September of 1885, made its first public appearance at a masquerade ball given Thanksgiving night, November 26, 1885, at Thomas and Bradley's Hall. Two hundred people attended.

The Ogalilate Cornet Band played for a grand ball at the skatting rink on Christmas Eve in 1885. Tickets were $1.00 and the proceeds went "for improving the band." A bandmaster from Illinois wassoon afterward lured to Ogalilat, perhaps as a result of the benefit concert.

At Chadron in 1888 the Silver Cornet Band "played appropriate dirges" as the funeral procession accompanied the body of Frank E. Akin from the Episcopal Church to the cemetery.

After Silas A. Holcomb was nominated for governor on the Populist ticket in Grand Island in August, 1894. he returned to his home in Broken Bow by train. Serenading him at the depot on his arrival was the Silver Cornet Band and the Cat Creek Bugle, Fife, and Drum Corps. He was escorted to the opera house where a reception had been planned. (Governor Holcomb served from 1895 to 1899.)

Professor John F. Lenger, a former musician in the Austrian army, came to Niobrara in 1879 and organized the Santee Sioux Indian Band. As the only "all-Indian band in the world" at that time, it played at the Chicago World's Fair in 1893 and for President Benjamin Harrison in Washington D.C.

A musical organization in the Nebraska Sandhills in 1900 was the Cowboy Band organized by the Ladies' Ald of Mullen. It was directed by James Kudrna, who also taught cornet and violin.

Competent young musicians were permitted to play on occasion. Sometimes all-boy organizations were founded. One was the West Point Cadet Band, established in 1877, whose members were from 8 to 12 years old. If remeined active well into this century. Early photos in the library of the Nebraska State Historical Society show no women in bands, but sometime early in this century. Temale faces began to appear — especially as high school bands proliferafed. Now there are as many women as men. However, early band concerts often featured fe-male vocalists, and women were usually the top-notch performers on the plano and stringed instruments.

Affluent big-town bands rode as well as marched in parades. Their conveyances, were long, ornate, specially constructed wagons; hence, the term bandwagon, which has come to describe persons of one persuasion whooping it up for their winning cause. But even small-town bands had conveyances. Gates, a tiny community in the hills of northeast Custer County, once provided its musicians with a band wagon drawn by four handsome horses and driven by Stillman Gates, himself.

Enjoy Nebraska's parks!

Let's get together soon at one of our state parks or recreation areas. There are more than 90 places maintained by the Game and Parks Commission where we can have some outdoor fun. We can visit most of them year-round, and the facilities like cabins, modern campgrounds, and historical displays open in May. Five of the biggest of these areas are called state parks, while others are called state recreation areas or state wayside areas. There are also historical parks, where you can learn about Nebraska's past. Can you name some of the fun things we can do at our state park areas?

In the Midget contest, Blair scored runs in all but the fourth inning of the six-inning match while the winners connected for only three hits.

Wayne didn't get its scoring machine in gear until the last frame when the locals scored four runs on three back-to-back run-scoring singles and a fielder's choice.

Changing Life Style Effects Amount of SSI Payments

Changes in living arrangements appear to be the most common item that needy, aged, blind, or disabled people who receive monthly supplemental security income (SSI) payments fail to report to the Social Security Administration, according to district manager, Dale Branch.

ing to district manager. Date Branch.
Since living arrangements are important in determining the amount of an SSI check as well important in determining the amount of an SSI check as well as a person's continuing eligibility to receive payments, failure to report a change in living arrangements may result in payments for which people are not eligible. The law requires that overpayments be paid back most times, which could be an additional hardship to people already in need.

When people apply for SSI they tell social security what their living arrangements are. The maximum federal SSI payment is $167.80 for a couple living with others or in an institution, the other funds involved in their support and maintenance may be taken into account. This may cause them to qualify for a lower SSI payment.

Consequently, if the living arrangements change after SSI checks start, the amount of the check may change. The new living arrangement should be reported as soon as possible so that the checks will be in the proper amount.

For example, if a person that the checks will be in the proper amount. For example, if a person moves into the household of mother,"like a son's or daughter's, or into a public home, the payment amount would likely to be reduced. People living in institutions may be ineligible for SSI payments or eligible only for a reduced amount.

SSI payments or eligible only for a reduced amount.
Changes in your living arrangements do not necessarily mean your SSI payment will be reduced. In fact, if could increase. For example, if you decide to move from the house held of a relative, or from a public home to your own place.

your payment amount might increase. If you decide to move in with a friend to share expenses and you pay an equal share of the expenses, your payment amount may not be affected. It's also very important to report to social security when you change your address, even if it means no change in your living arrangements or if your SSI check is being sent directly to your bank. Aside from sending your check to the right address, we have to be able to send you important information about changes in the program from time to time, and we need to be able to reach you when it's time to redetermine your continuing eligibility and SSI payment amount.

Another reason it's important to tell us when you move is that time to redetermine your continuing eligibility and SSI payment amount.

Another reason it's important to tell us when you move is that if you move from one state to another, it could affect your SSI check. For instance, if you lived in a state that did not supplement or add to the federal SSI amount but then moved to a state that did, your check would go up. Of course, the reverse would also be true.

These are but two of a number of changes that SSI requires you to report to social security. All are important as they could affect the amount of money you are receiving and your eligibility for the SSI program. If you deliberately don't report a change so you can continue to receive money from the government to which you would have to pay it back, and you could even be prosecuted for fraud. Also, it a change means you are entitled to more money, social security won't be able to pay it to you until you tell them of the change. Reporting changes is a very important part of the SSI program.'

You can report changes by phone, by mail, or in person at any social security office. A booklet. "Important Information About Your Supplemental Security Income Payments," includes a listing of the most common items you should report.

After eight years of cross-pol-lination, local Iris grower and hybridizer Roger Nelson has received word from an accre-dited American Iris Society judge that his first original variety will be released for purchase by the gardening public.

The new hybrid variety has been registered with the American Iris Society (AIS) as Glory Bound. It will formally be released in the summer of 1978 by Mission Bell Gardens of Roy, Utah.

Mission Bell Gardens is oper-afed by Mrs. J.R. Hamblen, Internationally known grower originator and introducer of high quality hybrid irises.

Nelson said Mrs. Hamblen has grown and tested Glory Bound for three seasons and rates it a "top notch, distinct variety in the now crowded orchid (red-violet) color class of irlses."

Glory Bound is a huge, flaring blend of creamy rose-orchid and spectrum violet with a large deep tangerine beard. The Wayne hybridizer said it produces a strong stem with wide-angle branching and six to seven buds, thus meeting current American Iris Society Standards.

According to Nelson, Glory Bound first bloomed in 1973 from a cross-pollination in 1971.

Trading at Home is like Doing Business with Yourself

The dollar we spend here at home can—and often does—get back around to us several times before it has to go off after something that isn't produced here, or for some service that isn't available locally, such as squanderous government.

Every dollar we spend at home enriches our community so that it is easier for us to make another dollar—and to save us time and traveling expense when our regular and emergency needs arise.

Ellingson attempted to climb the ladder during one of the games at a carnival located in Gibson's parking lot Tuesday night, but ran into a couple of problems—halfway up when he lost his balance and tell off. The idea of the game is to reach the top of the ladder and sound the horn to win a stuffed animal.

In early 1962 the organization decided if didn't want a second story facility and conducted further studies which provided the beginnings of the design for the current building.

Ralph Crockett was appointed chairman of the committee in 1963 which raised more than $9,000 towards a building fund.

The property on which the building is located was purchased in 1963 with money from bonds which the lodge had accumulated through the years, thanks in great part to the careful management of former county judge and lodge sec retary J.M. Cherry, Parke said.

Parke and fellow building committee members Bob Carhart and John Ream worked.

Cartnart and John Ream worked, out the design for the building, which was approved by the state grand lodge on Nov. 20, 1967. Ground breaking ceremonies were held before the month was out, the cornerstone was set July 6, 1988, and the first meeting was conducted in the new building in January 1969.

Cost of the building was $32,500 plus $9,000 for the lot Parke said. In addition, he estimated members contributed about $15,000 worth of-labor.

About a dozen youngsters are now enrolled in the day program and 10 of them, from families living too far from Wayne to commute daily, also participate in the residential program, living in the CDC residence during the week and visiting their families at home on alternate weekends.

If space for the day program can't be found, the education program might have to be temporarily suspended, Mrs. Meier said, or parents would have the option of taking their children home until the new building is ready.

"Right now, we're still looking for alternatives. We will take the best alternative available when the time comes," she said, adding that anyone who would have a building available for the day program on an interim basis can call her at the Region IV office in Wayne.

A meeting had been scheduled for Friday morning to complete details and sign a lease agreement for the 50 × 80-foot building which will thouse both the residential and day programs but the meeting was postponed until June 24.
