Future of Sidewalk Displays in Doubt

Additional research by the city attorney had been directed but it appears now the city council cannot pass an ordinance which would allow merchants to display their wares on sidewalks in front of their buildings.

Attorney Kern Swarts Tuesday night delivered an opinion to the city council stating that such an ordinance would be illegal and invalid, based on Nebraska case law.

Swarts cited a Nebraska Supreme Court decision in a Lincoln case, saying that sidewalks are set aside for public use and that city government has an obligation to keep them clear.

Councilman Jimmie Thomas disapproved of the idea of banning sidewalk displays. "I think the council has always dictated the rights of downtown businessmen. We could end up with a ghost town. We have some empty buildings now and we could end up with more."

Vernon Russell asked if there is any reason why the council see SIDEWALK, page 12.

Drought Hardship Loans Available Through FmHA

Farmers who have suffered substantial losses and hardships due to drought conditions may be eligible for loans through the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) according to LaVern Ostendorf, FmHA supervisor for Wayne and Stanton counties.

Ostendorf said rural municipal-type groups suffering from the same conditions may also be available for loans and grants, part of special federal assistance to drought-stricken areas, including all of Nebraska.

Farmers or ranchers in officially designated drought areas may be eligible for emergency loans if they are unable to obtain necessary credit from other sources at reasonable terms, Ostendorf explained.

These farmers or ranchers must have suffered crop losses at least 20 per cent below normal production due to the drought in 1976, or be unable to plant all or a portion of their normal crops in 1977, including feed crops, or be unable to graze pastures or be precluded from harvesting all or part of the crops they have planted.

Loans not exceeding the amount of loss are made at a five per cent interest rate. Additional amounts needed for production purposes or loans for major adjustments are loaned at the prevailing market rate, currently eight per cent. Repayment terms ordinarily range from one to seven years, except that emergency major adjustment loans for real estate purposes may be made for up to 40 years.

Boat and Pickup Veer off Highway

A 16-year-old Wayne girl was taken to Providence Medical Center Wednesday morning following a pickup truck accident on Highway 35 about six and one-half miles west of Wayne, but details regarding possible injuries were not available at press time.

A hospital spokesman said a complete examination of Jackie Connors had not yet been completed.

Her brother, Steven J. Connors, 17, of Wayne was driving the pickup towing a trailer and pontoon boat, belonging to the County Sportsman at the time of the accident. According to state patrol officer Bill Watson, the accident occurred when the right rear trailer wheel dropped off the edge of the road pavement on the highway.

Murder Suspect Bound Over To District Court

Richard Hander of Laurel was bound over without bond in Cedar County court Tuesday to stand trial in district court on a charge of first degree murder.

Hander is accused of the May 14 shooting of Howard Leroy Drayer, also of Laurel, which resulted in his death.

Drayer was found across the street from his home that night at about 11 o'clock, having suffered multiple gunshot wounds.

Drayer was taken to Providence Medical Center in Wayne, then on to a Sioux City hospital where he died May 16. The Woodbury County coroner ruled the death the result of a gunshot wound. A .22 caliber rifle allegedly used in the shooting is being held by authorities.

Hander has been refused bond and is being held in the Cedar County jail. No date for an initial hearing in district court had been set Tuesday afternoon.

Body of Ex-Wayne Man Recovered

The body of a former Wayne man was discovered Sunday in the Missouri River near Orrick, Mo.

Robert Lee Peterson was believed drowned Nov. 24, 1976 along with two companions when their boat overturned.

Peterson, 29, graduated from Wayne High in 1966. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Orin Peterson, formerly of Wayne, now live at Octavia.

The body was discovered partially covered by silt and was identified by a blue jacket with a TWA Airline emblem and by keys found in the trouser pocket.

Funeral services were scheduled for Wednesday at Merrill, Iowa.

In addition to his parents, Peterson is survived by his wife, Susan, of Kansas City, Mo., where the couple lived at the time of his death, two daughters, Bobbi and Debbi Peterson, of Wakefield, a brother, Darrell of Higginsville, Mo., and three sisters, Amy Bechly of Omaha, Shirley Louis of Columbus, and Charollet of Omaha.

The board also voted Monday to raise from $50 to $100 the sewer and water hook-up fee.

Watch the Barrel

Lightning Strikes Redeemer Church

The spire of the Redeemer Lutheran Church in Wayne Saturday morning attracted a lightning bolt which damaged the bell tower roof and burned out some electrical circuits but apparently caused no major damage to the stone building.

The Rev. S.K. deFreese said no one was in the church when the bolt struck shortly before 11 o'clock Saturday morning.

Aluminum sheathing on the spire was discolored by the electricity. Rev. deFreese said, and the explosive jolt knocked loose some boards from the wooden roof atop the bell tower. A single stone was jarred loose

Sheriff's Office Gets Radar

R. James Pearson, director of the Department of Motor Vehicles and Governor's representative for highway safety, has announced that the Highway Safety Program financially participated in the purchase of the 91 moving vehicle radar units to be placed across the state. The Wayne County sheriff's department has been selected to receive one of these new units.

Last year in Nebraska, exceeding a safe speed was the number one contributing factor in 53 of the 208 fatal accidents, Pearson said. As a countermeasure to this speed related problem, the Nebraska highway switches out of their wall fixtures, and fusing electrical breakers.

No estimate of the damages was available Monday, but Rev. deFreese said insurance should pay for the cost of repairs.

CPR Course To Be Offered At Winside

Miron Jenness, American Heart Association representative, will teach a class on cardiopulmonary resuscitation June 21-24 at the Winside fire hall.

Cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) entails use of external chest massage and mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to supply the brain with oxygen in situations such as heart attack or electrical shock, where the victim stops breathing and has no pulse.

The Winside class will meet from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Further information can be obtained by calling 286-4544.

A similar class was offered this week in Wayne by Wayne County American Red Cross safety programs chairman Bernice Fulton.

English Teacher Selected For Fulbright-Hays Post

The competition was stiff with 3,500 applicants, but Thom Baynum of Wayne broke through to the top when he was selected one of the 150 national winners of a Fulbright-Hays Teaching Assistantship.

The award, given by the Institute of International Education at the United Nations in New York City, hands Baynum one free ticket to Arles, France, a small town in Southern France, set up centuries ago by the Romans.

There the part-time Wayne State College English instructor will teach nine hours of American literature and American civilization in a French high school.

Baynum, formerly of Wilmington, Del., first discovered WSC on his way to California after graduating from high school in 1970.

He liked it and decided to stay, receiving his bachelor of arts degree in 1975 with majors in English and French. This summer Baynum will receive his master of education degree in English.

Baynum also served as a graduate assistant during the fall term 1976, and served as part time English teacher during the past semester.

Living in Wayne for several years, Baynum resides at 109 S. Lincoln. His mother, Pauline Baynum, joined him awhile ago after making a move from Delaware.

First learning of the Fulbright-Hays award in mid-February, Baynum did not know his See FULBRIGHT-HAYS, page 12

Economic Development Is Goal of 18-County District

Wayne County and 17 other counties in Northeast Nebraska sometime in the fall should be able to apply for assistance for projects designed to provide more jobs, according to Bill Martin, field representative for the Nebraska Department of Economic Development (DED).

Martin is in the process of organizing an Economic Development district under guidelines of the Economic Development Administration (EDA), a division of the U.S. Department of Commerce.

Counties within development districts can apply for financial assistance to help finance projects designed to provide additional jobs within the district, Martin said.

Assistance is available through the EDA for three categories of projects, Martin said.

Grants are available for public works and development facilities. Projects eligible include sewer and water lines, roads, and development of industrial parks, regional airports, and tourism facilities, if it can be shown that the projects can contribute to providing additional jobs.

For example, Martin said, a community could ask for assistance for a new well and pumping station if it is necessary to increase the water supply as a prerequisite to attracting industry.

Business development assistance is provided in the form of loans to individual companies. Loans could be provided to help start a new company or to expand an existing business, Martin said.

EDA business development program is designed "to pick up where the SBA (Small Business Administration) leaves off," he added.

In addition to making loans for land, buildings and equipment, the EDA will also loan money for working capital, something the SBA tends to shy away from, according to Martin.

Loans can be made either directly by EDA or through local banks with the agency guaranteeing repayment.

The EDA's third program provides technical assistance to prospective new industries, providing money for feasibility studies. For example, Martin said, a farmer may have designed an improved corn picker and be interested in manufacturing it. The EDA can either conduct a study of the feasibility of such a venture, or can provide financial assistance to contract for a study.

Counties which will be included in the district in addition to Wayne County are Knox, Antelope, Boone, Nance, Pierce, Madison, Platte, Cedar, Stanton, Colfax, Dixon, Dakota, Thurston, Cuming, Dodge, Burt, and Washington.

EDA guidelines provide eight reasons for which counties can qualify for assistance, but only three have much application in Nebraska, Martin said. Qualifying for assistance are Indian reservations, counties with declining per capita employment, and counties with high unemployment.

Counties not part of a district which qualify for assistance are eligible to receive assistance grants on an equal cost sharing basis.

One advantage to forming a district, according to Martin, is that counties within a district which qualify for assistance under EDA guidelines can receive grants with the EDA providing 60 per cent of the money and the community making the request providing 40 per cent in matching funds.

In addition, counties within the district which would otherwise not qualify for EDA assistance are eligible to receive 50 per cent cost-share grants for projects which could benefit the economies of counties which do qualify.

The 18-counties in Northeast Nebraska selected for the district were chosen because they correspond with the area which Martin serves from his office in Norfolk, and because of economic, geographic and cultural similarities, Martin said.

Only three areas in the district are now designated for EDA assistance: the Santee Indian reservation in Knox County, the Omaha and Winnebago reservations in Thurston and parts of adjacent counties, and Stanton County.

Knox and Nance counties have submitted plans necessary to become qualified for assistance. Platte, Colfax and Cuming counties can qualify under EDA guidelines but must submit a plan to do so.

Other counties in the district, including Wayne, Dixon, Dakota, Cedar, Madison, Pierce, Antelope, Boone, Burt, Dodge, and Washington, do not have sufficient unemployment or decline in per capita employment to qualify individually, Martin said.

He pointed out, however, that those counties which qualify for assistance after the district is approved, for projects which could benefit other counties in the district which do qualify.

For example, he said, "a project to help with industrial development in Wayne might receive EDA assistance because it is possible that workers in counties which qualify, might drive to Wayne to work at new jobs made possible through assistance."

Martin said it was necessary for the boards of 14 of the 18 counties in the proposed district to sign a resolution to join. A membership resolution was introduced by Wayne County commissioner Floyd Burt but did not receive a second. Two other counties also failed to pass resolutions declaring their intent to join the district, but the other 15 counties agreed to the proposal. The number is sufficient to form the district and counties which did not sign resolutions automatically become members. Martin pointed out, however, that counties can withdraw from the district at any time by passing a resolution to that effect.

Many states have had Economic Development Districts organized for years, Martin said, but the Northeast district will be the first in Nebraska, and unique in the nation because of its organization.

Some areas in Nebraska have previously applied for Economic Development District status, but the requests have been denied because the area involved was too small, usually two or three counties comprising a Council of Governments (COG).

Martin said the state has been assured the Northeast district will be approved because of its size: 18 counties, 10,000 square miles, and 230,000 people.

The district will be governed by an overall Economic Development Plan (EDP) committee made up of three representatives from each county. Two must be elected officials, although not necessarily members of the county board. The third member from each county will be a lay leader with an interest in economic development.

Martin said concern has been expressed by some government officials over having yet another meeting to attend. Plans now are to provide funds for office space, an administrator, and staff.

That will not be the case in Nebraska's first district, Martin said. Many Nebraska counties are at or near the statutory mill levy limit and county boards aren't receptive to joining organizations which will drain funds from already tight budgets.

Instead, Martin will administer the program as part of his duties as DED representative for the area. Project planning, assistance in grant preparation, and dissemination of information will be handled by COG's and by DED in counties which don't belong to a COG.

The DED will provide research assistance, industrial development technical assistance, tourism technical assistance, and clerical See ECONOMIC, page 12

Newcastle Throws Wayne into Cellar

Newcastle handed Wayne town team its fourth straight loss Tuesday night to throw the locals into last place in the Northeast Nebraska Baseball League.

The invaders pounded away on hurler Earle Overin for nine hits in a sweet 10-3 victory and Newcastle's fourth win in five games.

Back-to-back singles by Newcastle's leading hitter, first baseman Vet Beyler and shortstop Joe Brandl, quickly got the visitors in front, 2-0, after the first inning.

Newcastle continued to pour it on in the third with four runs on two hits and a pair of wild throws for a 4-0 cushion. A sacrifice fly by Mike Green scored Mike Creighton to put Wayne on the board in the bottom of the third, 6-1.

The home team closed the gap in the sixth on a sacrifice fly by Mike Meyer and a RBI single by Overin to whittle the lead to 6-3.

After three frames of hitless ball, Newcastle warmed up with two hits each in the eighth and ninth to score four runs and put the game on ice.

Designated hitter Bob Rockwell singled in the eighth and with one away scored on Bart Kneiff's base hit for a 7-3 score. Newcastle came back in the ninth to score one run on a bases-loaded walk by Beyler and added two more on Kneiff's two-run single.

Errors Aid Dakota City To 4-3 Win

"Lack of defense, that's what beat us," said Wakefield town team coach Max Gross after his club lost a 4-3 squeaker to Dakota City Sunday afternoon.

"We had the pitching (Roger Saul threw a two hitter), but lack of defense beat him," Gross emphasized.

Wakefield had a 3-0 lead after four frames on three hits, an error and a sacrifice. Rob Eaton, Keith Siebrandt and Mike Barge put together consecutive base hits to score two runs on Barge's single. Barge advanced on an outfield error before he scored on a sacrifice by Roger Luth.

Dakota City, which tied with Wayne and Pender for the cellar in the Northeast Nebraska Baseball League, came up with four runs in the bottom of the eighth off a pair of singles, a walk and three Wakefield errors.

Wayne State freshman Mike Osterholt of Sioux City got the win. Saul (8-1) took the loss.

Whoa There Horse

AT LEAST for the youngsters the Sunday morning session of the annual Carroll Play Days was filled with plenty of excitement and hard riding, especially for this pair of riders who attempt to jump off their steeds and land in a fire during the musical fires contest. Afternoon activities for junior and senior riders had to be postponed until Saturday night at 6:30 because of rain.

Summer Cattle Management Important

Less time is spent working with cattle during the summer than in winter, yet summer cattle management needs are the same or more than in winter, according to beef specialist Vernon Krause.

Cattle on pasture or in the feedlot may be given only short inspections in order to save time for field work, he pointed out. However, considerable amounts of money could be saved and many of a cattleman's problems can be reduced by good care during the summer.

One of the biggest problems for the cattlemen is estimating forage supply. Forage amounts are regulated for a large part by weather. If weather becomes unfavorable, pastures can be overgrazed. Pasture rotation is a strongly recommended practice which will result in more forage per acre at a given time, however, care in rotation is needed in order to properly utilize the forage.

Another area which needs attention is the pasture breeding season. Noting when a few familiar cows are in heat, then following up 19 to 20 days later helps in determining if cows are being settled, Krause said.

Early summer is the best time to castrate bull calves that were either born on pasture or were too young to castrate when cattle were first put on pasture. If the job is put off, calves soon are too big to handle. Cleaning up on dehorning, vaccinating and ear tagging should also be given attention at this time.

Parasites like screw worms and flies need to be controlled as well as possible with back rubs, dust bags or a regular spraying program. Reducing parasites goes a long way in increasing cattle gains.

In the feedlot, heat can be a killer, especially during humid days. Cattle should be handled a little as possible, and shade or mist sprinklers may need to be provided for nearly finished cattle.

Good management in the summer can reduce problems next fall and increase potential profits from cattle, Krause concluded.

MAX GROSS is a maverick of sorts when it comes to playing baseball. The player-coach of the Wakefield town team has no regards for age (he's 44), he just wants to keep playing the sport, even after 25 or so years of pitching in the major league farm clubs and for semi-pro teams.

Max hung up the idea of throwing three years ago when he ended his pitching career, but that three-year layoff was just too much. Now he's playing first base for Wakefield and doing a pretty good job.

The Broken Bow native started his baseball career at the age of 14 as a pitcher on the American Legion Junior team. He played two years on the town team, then in 1953 was picked up by the then Brooklyn Dodgers and sent to their farm systems. He spent three years traveling to systems in Union City, Tenn., Ponca, Ok., and Macon, Ga., where he ran into control problems and left the majors.

This career sent him to the semi-pro leagues across the U.S., including Lincoln where he played for the Pirates before calling it quits three years ago.

Gross, who came to Wakefield about a year ago, keeps on with the game simply because he loves it. "The good Lord blesses you with a good arm and a good body, so I keep on going."

What about the abuse his body is taking? "It helps to abuse your body once in a while. But when it really hurts, it's time to give it up," he added.

IF IT weren't for colleges who supply players for a lot of the town teams in the area, Gross believes that town team baseball would be a thing of the past.

As for the future of the sport, he doesn't think things are going to get brighter. Already most teams can't attract the good-size following to make the sport popular. There's just too many things other people want to do, he explained as the reason a lot of fans aren't coming to the games.

"Today's people don't have the pride to excel," he pointed out as another reason town team ball is on the downswing.

PICKUP PULLERS Kevin Fineran and Roger Heftli continue to bring home the honors. Over the weekend the pair competed in meets in Sioux Falls and Ceresco, bringing back to Wayne a total of nine awards.

Sunday at Ceresco, Heftli won the 7,000-pound open. He bettered that feat the day before at Sioux Falls with firsts in the 7,000 open and 6,000 modified and a second in the 5,000 modified.

At Sioux Falls, Fineran was second in the 6,000 modified, 7,000 open and third in the 5,000 modified. He picked up a pair of thirds at Ceresco to win the 5,000 and 6,000 modified.

Carroll Carnival Days

Many psychologists agree that parents should accept childishness in their children. It's natural for youngsters to fidget when they have to sit still for long stretches and to run instead of walk.

Experts have also found that too much regimentation may cause children to rebel. For instance, schools that take candy machines out of their lunchrooms to cut students' intake of sweets may find the youngsters boycotting the lunchrooms and going outside for what they want.

Father Gets Credit for Interest in Music

By PAT OSWALD
Winside Correspondent
 "The Sound of Music" just about describes the life of Winside's Jan Gottberg.
 She has had a keen interest in music since she was five and today still pursues it in addition to being a mother of three active children and keeping pace with the hurried life of her husband, the Rev. G. W. Gottberg.
 For Jan, who gives lessons as well as plays the church organ, every Sunday morning, there was a time when music didn't encompass her life. It was during nurse's training that music took a back seat, but that period didn't last long.
 Credit for Jan's interest in music has to go to her parents, the Rev. and Mrs. William Hilt of Kansas. Her mother made sure Jan continued to practice, even if it meant hauling young Jan to lessons. But her father played the biggest role in her music development by buying sheet music. "Dad liked all music and I feel that because of him I derived an enjoyment of all types," she said.
 To please her father, she learned to play his favorites: "Sentimental Journey" and "Butterfly Kisses."
 By age nine, Jan played for Sunday school and a year later played for worship services. "Here, again, Dad had much to do with my experience," she said. He would prance down the church aisle, and, while singing, call out another hymn, she went on.
 That rapid change forced Jan to learn the hymn numbers quickly and be ready for quick changes. An older sister once commented to their father how rough that was for Jan, but his only answer was that it was good experience for her to get used to quick changes. Jan now realizes how right he was, because playing for church or any other public function can mean many quick changes.
 Placing high hopes on their children, the Hilt's borrowed $500 to purchase an upright piano during the depression years. "My parents weren't big spenders, they just wanted us kids to know music," Mrs. Gottberg said.
 Like everything else, music can have unusual happenings. While a sophomore in an Iowa high school, Jan entered a district music contest and won a trip to the state meet, at the University of Iowa. During the contest, she walked on stage and suddenly had memory lapses.
 Her rating of two that year spurred her on to do better and by her senior year she earned a one rating.
 Looking back, some of the good memories include a trip to the Boston Pops and the congregation's request that she play on a new grand piano purchased for St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Winside.
 Besides teaching piano as a hobby, Mrs. Gottberg began it as a community service after another piano teacher, Mrs. Jack Krueger, moved to Wakefield almost five years ago.
 A child's desire to play, and most of all, sit still, are two key ingredients in pursuing a solid music background, she said. "Parents or children shouldn't give up," she cautioned. "It takes a lot of time, practice and patience."

Practice makes perfect. At least, that's what Steve Morse is learning from Mrs. Jan Gottberg as they go through another piano session. Steve, 15, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Morse of Winside.

Business Payroll Increasing

According to a government report, just released, the number of business establishments in operation in Wayne County is relatively large.
 There are more of them in being locally, in proportion to population, than in many areas of the country.
 The report, which is entitled "County Business Patterns," was compiled by the Department of Commerce in cooperation with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Essentially, the data in it is based upon tax reports submitted by employers under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act. It provides information on the number of working people in each community who are covered by Social Security, the amount they earn and the size of the establishments that employ them.
 Listed in Wayne County are a total of 213 business firms that employ one or more persons. The number is exclusive of "Mom and Pop" operations that are self-conducted.
 Of the total, 135 have four employees or less, 49 have from five to nine, and 17 have 10 to 19.
 The predominance of moderate-size businesses in the local area conforms to the pattern in most parts of the country.
 Their durability in the face of competition is indicated by the figures, which show that no less than 94 per cent of the local establishments have fewer than 20 employees.

 Throughout the United States as a whole, 88 per cent have less than 20 and, in the State of Nebraska, 90 per cent.
 With respect to the employment situation, the findings are that Wayne County's business firms provide gainful employment for 1,205 people in jobs covered by Social Security.
 How many children do married women expect to have within the next five years? Will they average the same number as in the recent past? Answers to these questions will indicate the future growth and composition of the nation's population, data vital to planners both in government and private business.
 Richard Burt, director of the Bureau's regional office in Denver, announced today that information on birth, expectations of American women will be collected during the week of June 20-24 from a sample of households in this area. The questions are in addition to the usual ones asked in the monthly survey on employment and unemployment conducted nationwide by the Bureau for the U.S. Department of Labor.

 Households in this area are part of the sample of 70,000 across the country scientifically selected to represent a cross section of all U.S. households.
 Results of this monthly survey provide a continuing measure of economic conditions in the nation. The April survey indicated that of the 96.7 million men and women in the civilian labor force, 90 million were employed. The nation's unemployment rate was 7 per cent in March, compared to 7.3 per cent in February, and substantially below the recession peak of 9 per cent reached in May 1975.
 Information supplied by individuals participating in the survey is kept strictly confidential by law, and results are used only to compile statistical totals.

Baynum will be off to France this fall, attending a general meeting in Paris in late September. Then in early October school will begin, lasting eight months.

This is not Baynum's first trip to France. Last summer he studied French civilization and French literature at Sorbonne in Paris for six weeks.
While a student at WSC, Baynum was a member of French Club, the Alpha Mu Gamma Foreign Language honorary, Sigma Tau Delta English organization, the Literature Club, and was president of the "Judas Goat," a literary magazine.

In 1971 he received an award in English as the Sophomore Scholar.
Norman Nordstrand, professor emeritus of English, helped Baynum with the Fulbright-Hays application. Baynum applied for the position last October.

Saturday's incident was the second time in less than a month that lightning has struck a building in Wayne. A house belonging to Judy Zabel was struck May 16, blasting a hole in the roof of the home and damaging some electrical circuits.

Connors swerved into the left lane, while attempting to guide the trailer back onto the asphalt. The truck and trailer then veered back to the right, off the road and flipped over once, coming to rest on their wheels.
The pickup suffered right front and left rear damage, a damaged roof and a broken windshield. The boat and trailer were also damaged extensively.
Other passengers at the time of the accident were Scott Connors, three and Chris Jasa, 19, both of Wayne.

can't redefine where sidewalks begin and end, suggesting that an area from business fronts out three feet not be considered sidewalks. Swartz said such an action would be comparable to the council vacating a street or alley, but was directed by mayor Eugene Decker to research the idea. Decker also directed the police department to hold in abeyance enforcement of the ordinance against sidewalk displays until the next meeting.

Swartz was also directed to return with an opinion on another issue raised by Russell during consideration of payment of claims. Russell questioned the legality of paying two claims for paving of Henry Victor Park. Each claim was for more than $3,000. Russell questioned if the claims could legally be considered as two separate items. If not, the amount would be in excess of $6,000, more than the statutory limit of $5,000 for projects completed without advertising bids.

City administrator Fred Brink said the paving was done in two phases and considered them separate projects. He said the city was able to purchase the asphalt for $11.40 a ton, rather than the current market price of $24 a ton, because the asphalt was an experimental batch mixed by a road construction company now working on Highway 25.

Swartz was directed to return with an opinion on whether or not the two claims could be considered separate items, and if the project would be exempt from the $5,000 limit because of emergency clauses in the law.

Bids were opened for a proposed trash compactor station. Bids were taken in two divisions: Division I included a transfer station building basic item; Alternate A for site preparation including placement of 8,000 cubic yards of fill material; Alternate B includes electrical wiring; Alternate C includes sewer and water line extensions.

Division II includes transfer station equipment: a refuse compactor, a refuse container, and a hopper.
Stevens Steel Structures, Inc. of Norfolk bid $11,587 for a steel building but did not bid any other items.

bid $64,745 on the building; including alternates A and B, and $1,842 on Alternate C.
Otte Construction of Wayne bid $50,776 on the building, $7,917 on Alternate A, $5,170 on Alternate B, and $2,078.50 on Alternate C.
Omaha Standard bid $19,962 on the compactor, $4,830 on the container, and $5,128 on the hopper; for a total of $29,920.

Highway Equipment bid $12,300 on the compactor, and $4,210 on the container, for a total of $16,510. The company did not bid on the hopper.
The city engineering firm was directed to return to the next meeting with a recommendation on accepting bids.
Saying the facility will cost about $100,000, Russell said he thinks the bids were way out of line with the engineer's estimate, which Russell termed misleading.
The engineer's estimate cost submitted along with specifications at the last meeting was $65,000.

In other action, the council:
—Heard Swartz' opinion that city funds cannot be dedicated for improvement of the Lions Club park because the property is under the jurisdiction of the airport authority. Swartz was directed to return with an opinion on whether or not the city can give money directly to the Lions Club for the purpose of promoting the city through the park, or if the city could help maintain the park.
—Agreed to donate $250 to the Jaycees for the Fourth of July fireworks display.
—Approved recommending in favor of granting a Class C liquor license to Kenneth Jorgensen who will take over Mike's Tavern in August, operating under the name Fourth Jug.

support, functions it is now performing in the area, the existing staff.
In approaching counties about joining the district, I've told commissioners I will bring in a resolution for them to withdraw from the district before "I'll ask for money," Martin said.
The OEDP annually will formulate an overall plan for projects needed to develop the region's economy, but it will be up to individual counties and communities to decide whether or not to initiate projects and apply for grants.
The OEDP plan, for example, may list communities which need to improve their water supply for industrial development purposes, but those communities will not be committed in any way to actually taking action.
Communities which wish to apply for an EDA grant will also be able to do so independent of the district governing body.

"We won't be trying to tell communities what they should or shouldn't do," Martin said. "They know what is best for them."
He added he will be available to assist with preparing requests for grants, but communities need not consult him if they want to do the work on their own.

Martin said the resolutions for membership from individual counties were sent to Gov. J.J. Exon last week. His office will then apply for provisional designation for the district, which should be received sometime in August.

The district must then prepare the district plan which will be submitted to the EDA in Washington, D.C. The plan should be completed within 60 to 90 days of provisional designation, Martin said. Communities in the district will be able to apply for assistance after EDA approval of the plan is received.

Turn out on to floured board. Knead 5 to 10 minutes, or until dough is smooth and elastic. Cover with plastic wrap, then a towel. Let rest 20 minutes on board, and prepare filling.

FILLING: Melt ½ cup (1 stick) butter and set aside. Combine ½ cup brown sugar, packed ¼ cup granulated sugar, 2 teaspoons cinnamon and ½ cup chopped nuts. Reserve for later use.

After dough has rested 20 minutes, punch down and divide in half. Roll each half into an 18x12-inch rectangle, and brush with melted butter. Sprinkle ½ cup Filling evenly over dough. Beginning on 18-inch side, roll up tightly, jelly roll fashion. Cut into 18 pieces. Place cut-side down in well-greased 8 or 9-inch round pans. Brush tops with remaining butter. Sprinkle about 1 teaspoon filling on top of each roll. Refrigerate, 2 to 24 hours. When ready to bake, remove from refrigerator, let stand at room temperature 10 to 20 minutes. Bake in 375-degree oven 25 to 30 minutes. Immediately loosen edges and turn out on plate. Makes 36 pinwheel rolls.

State Tax Commission meets to set sales, income tax rates

CAPITOL NEWS

A full has settled over the statehouse after the frenzied activities that marked the final several days of the legislative session.

Most of the senators seemed to be in a hurry to get out of the Capitol. That was understandable, especially for those who have to figure out ways of making a living, something they can't do on a $400 a month salary.

Some of the actions of the lawmakers will start making themselves felt soon. By the time this appears in print, the State Board of Equalization will have met and most certainly will have increased the state sales tax from 3 per cent to 3.5 per cent.

Governor J. James Exon and State Tax Commissioner William Peters have said repeatedly the extra $20 million in state aid to schools approved by the legislature will necessitate the tax hike.

There are some, however, who believe the increase probably would have been needed without the higher state aid because revenue hasn't been flowing into the state treasury at the rate that had been expected.

Peters said before the board met the 1977 income tax rate will be increased one or two points, retroactively. He said an adjustment is required in the 17 per cent of federal liability rate because of changes in the federal law which narrowed the base against which the state tax is assessed.

That means, Peters said, the 17 per cent will not produce as much money as it would before Congress amended the federal law.

Under state law, the board must set tax rates that will generate enough funding to cover the costs of operating state government, plus another three to seven per cent as a state treasury cushion.

Exon has said the overlevy should be enough for a six per cent buffer. That would be double what it has been the past two years.

Setting the overlevy at six per cent might result in boosting the state income tax rate to 20 per cent.

Gasohol Controversy

The concept of gasohol — a motor fuel consisting of a blend of 10 per cent grain alcohol and 90 per cent unleaded gasoline — has been receiving much news media attention in recent weeks.

During a meeting of the gasohol committee, Holly Hodge of Holdrege was sharply critical of another member who visited with the governor without the committee's consent or knowledge.

The target of Hodge's comments was Wayne Winslow of Omaha, who admitted chatting with the governor but denied there was anything wrong with getting together with Exon.

Winslow said he was sure other committee members had at times met with governmental officials without first checking with the committee.

He added he wanted to huddle with the governor to discuss the economics of Gasohol. An employ of an oil corporation, Winslow said the petroleum industry is interested in using alcohol as a fuel extender, if it is feasible.

The committee's meeting came just one day after the governor permitted a bill that will provide tax incentives for the production and use of gasohol to become law without his signature.

About a week later, the governor asked the committee for "a totally objective, independent and thorough" marketing study of the gasohol idea.

He said the committee had not always been entirely unbiased and that he was also bothered because Dr. William Scheller, technical adviser to the committee, is involved in a commercial company set up to make alcohol for gasohol.

Scheller, chairman of the chemical engineering department at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, heads a firm that hopes to build a grain alcohol plant.

Exon said the committee has been relying almost entirely on Scheller regarding the economic feasibility of such a plant. And the governor said there are many persons who disagree with the feasibility studies Scheller has developed.

State Building

For awhile at least, the new building a block north of the Capitol that houses many state offices will be known as the Nebraska State Office Building.

The State Building Advisory Commission made that decision at its last meeting. Its members hope the structure will be shortened to SOB. Stanley Matzke, director of the Department of Administrative Services said, "I'd like to get away from those initials."

They didn't seem to both Gov. Exon who suggested, with a smile, the initials probably stand for "Servant of Brotherhood."

Not so, said commission member Linus Burr of Lincoln. They stand for "Sweet Old Building," he said, also with a smile.

One reason the building needed a name, Matzke said, was that many people didn't know what it was or where it was located.

The legislature was supposed to select a name from a list proposed by the commission, but the lawmakers couldn't agree.

Under the law, the legislature and the governor must agree on a name, so the matter could come up again in the unicameral.

Hamilton Announces

It will be a long time before the primary election, but Bruce Hamilton of Lincoln has announced he is a Democratic candidate for Congress in the 1st District.

Hamilton, 35, is chairman of the Lancaster County Board but said after much soul searching he decided not to seek re-election as a commissioner but to go after the congressional seat currently held by Republican Charles Thone of Lincoln.

He said he considers the nation's attempt to cope with scarcity "the chief challenge of our times."

Hamilton said if elected he would work hard to represent the interests of the 1st District but to reconcile them with the larger interests of the nation as a whole.

He is a graduate of the University of Nebraska and its law college.

It won't be the first time Hamilton has run for Congress in the 1st District. In 1968, while in law school, he was the nominee of the New Party, which was formed primarily to speak out against the Vietnam War.

The party ceased to exist after the election in which Hamilton received only several thousand votes.

Among Democrats who have been mentioned as possible candidates for the Thone seat is Hest Dyas of Lincoln, who was defeated by Sen. Edward Zortinsky in the senatorial primary last year and by Thone in the general election two years before that. Another possibility is committee member Allen O'Donnell of Wayne.

Thone, meantime, has not said whether he will seek re-election.

His options, he has said, include trying for another House term, seeking a U.S. Senate seat, filing for governor, or returning to his private law practice.

Preparation can add to holiday driving employment

This summer after you have discontinued the newspaper for two weeks and taken the dog to the kennel, make a couple more vacation preparations. If you're driving, prepare yourself and your vehicle for the trip.

According to the Nebraska Highway Safety Program, June begins the spiral of traffic accidents that continues upward through October. Vacationers are involved in a number of these accidents. This is true because they usually drive longer distances in more congested conditions with a greater variety of recreational vehicles than during the rest of the year. Because they take longer turns at the wheel, they may become victims of fatigue and "highway hypnosis" or the "creeping sleepies."

"Highway hypnosis" is a lulling of the senses caused by the humming of the car tires and engine. Drivers experiencing this sensation become inattentive of their driving without knowing it. Both fatigue and "highway hypnosis" can be prevented if your vacation is planned so you can stop every two hours or 100 miles. At that time, get out of your car, walk around and eat or drink a light snack. While traveling, remain alert by chewing gum, opening car windows, sitting up straight, turning on the radio, wearing sunglasses to prevent glare and eyestrain and constantly moving your eyes to prevent sleepiness.

Of course you should be feeling well before attempting to drive, especially if it's going to be a long trip. An annual checkup, including an eye test, can assure you are in good health.

While on the road, you should always react positively to discourteous drivers by yielding to them if they insist on hogging the road or pulling out first. Trying to "get even" with such drivers only makes them more hostile and discourteous to other drivers and may involve you in an accident.

Besides preparing yourself physically and mentally for the long drive, you should also prepare your car. The owner's manual which came with your car can be of tremendous help. It has sections describing checks that service people can make and safety checks that you can make yourself. Some of the things you can check are the tires, windshield wiper blades, lights, horn, heater and defroster equipment, transmission indicator, oil, battery and gas.

The manual also explains what to do in emergency situations and the proper way to tow your car. In addition, it tells you how to care for your car, how to make it run its best and what type of lubricants, fuel and filters it uses.

If you are planning to haul a boat, trail bike, snowmobile, camping trailer or other recreational equipment, you need also to safety check it and become acquainted with the extra-service equipment, hitches and wiring your car will require. Then study up on trailer towing and the laws governing it in the states you'll be visiting. It takes time and practice to maneuver a trailer safely so practice before you start the trip.

Finally, when driving on your vacation as at other times, there are a number of things to remember: buckle seat belts, obey all the laws of the road, signal turns well in advance, don't mix driving with alcohol or drugs and adjust driving speed to the road and weather conditions.

Vacation driving can be fun driving if you prepare for it.

Won't have OSHA to kick around anymore

Good news. That champion federal nit-picker, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, is going to be born again in the Carter Administration.

At least, so says the Department of Labor, in which OSHA is lodged. Dr. Eula Bingham, Labor assistant secretary in charge of OSHA, acknowledges the agency "has been enforcing rules that have caused us to come under ridicule and attack and have undermined the whole climate of OSHA's work. We have to admit where the failures and mistakes are and get on with the real job of saving lives."

OSHA's problems are traceable in part to the circumstances of its birth, and in part to the bureaucratic mentality. When the agency came into existence, it "nationalized" literally thousands of pre-existing safety codes and standards. Many of these standards were too detailed, some of them were obsolete, but most of them were — until OSHA — voluntary, which permitted some tempering with common sense.

OSHA eliminated the common sense factor and began to spend most of its time and energy measuring the size of toilet partitions, the height of fire extinguishers, and the width of aisles. There are over 450 pages of official standards, including such detail as 35 pages of rules specifying the design of "exit" signs, so OSHA inspectors could always find something wrong in the course of an inspection.

This dedicated pursuit of the ridiculous by the inept left a nationwide trail of victimized business people livid with rage.

The President's own brother, Billy Carter, typifies the experiences many small business operators have had in trying to cope with OSHA. In the May issue of Nation's Business magazine, he says he had to close down on peanut shelling plant and build another, because "We simply could not meet OSHA requirements in the old plant." He estimates that OSHA and Environmental Protection Agency dictates added 22 per cent to the cost of the new facility, and still they are not satisfied.

Pointing to the top of a grain elevator where the shelling operation starts, he said, "We had to spend $400 for some guardrails up there, but one man might go up there once a year."

Meanwhile, OSHA wasn't spending enough time on the big, significant threats to health and safety. The General Accounting Office, a congressional watchdog — recently criticized the agency for issuing fewer than 20 health standards since its birth in 1970.

Dr. Bingham proposes three key reforms:

- Get rid of as many of the nit-picking rules as possible, and stop enforcing those that remain.
- Concentrate inspections on high-hazard industries, especially big high-hazard industries.
- Help businesses — especially small businesses — find ways to become safer, rather than trying to find excuses for penalizing them.

Well, three cheers for Dr. Bingham and Labor Secretary Ray Marshall. If they manage to do what they have proposed, it will be a major victory for both employers and workers.

The only disadvantage is that I won't have OSHA to kick around anymore. But that's OK — there's still the Consumer Product Safety Commission. — Richard Lesher, U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

OBSERVATIONS

Meat industry challenged

National Livestock and Meat Board president David Stroud of Chicago told the 88th annual convention of the Nebraska Stock Growers Association in Kearney the nation's meat industry is facing "the single greatest consumer threat since the early 1920s."

—As Stroud put it, "the American public is being bombarded by the joys of being a vegetarian." He blamed the initial recommended dietary goals of the Senate Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Health for providing "government sanction for antimeat sentiments."

The report, Stroud said, "although a noble idea, is scientifically precarious, full of bad advice and plumb wrong."

Who is right regarding the nutritional aspects of the livestock industry we don't pretend to know, but some questions are raised when we hear reports that the life expectancy for babies born today who survive the first year is somewhere in the 90s.

At any rate, we hope to see the meat industry recoup its losses where public sentiment is concerned. Livestock, of course, constitutes a healthy chunk of the state's economy. But aside from that, and disregarding claims of virtues of meat substitutes, we will still take meat. As a relative put it in a recent conversation, "When I've got the inclination and the wherewithal, I still enjoy a good steak about THAT thick."

One segment of the livestock industry — beef producers — will soon decide an issue designed to develop and disseminate information about their product. Friday is the last day to register for the referendum vote on the Beef Information Act. It is up to beef producers to decide if the 30 cents per $100 of produce check-off would be beneficial, but other segments of agriculture have been pleased with the results of similar programs.

At any rate, we urge any producers who have not yet registered to do so, and participate in deciding an issue which could have a profound, long range effect on their business. — Jim Strayer.

Changes in Unicameral system advocated

Nebraskans in general are proud of their Unicameral Legislature and it is unlikely that if put to a vote that they would trade it off for a return to a two-house system, but it is time to admit that it is not perfect and some changes are in order.

The confusion and debacle which attended the 88th day of the 1977 Legislature simply dramatized the major weakness of the Unicameral system which has been evident throughout its 40 years of existence — a pronounced absence of legislative discipline which lends itself to those who wish to manipulate and delay by parliamentary and procedural methods.

In many years this has been recognized as one of the most common remedies suggested has been to change from a non-partisan to a partisan election of the legislators. In other words, injecting party responsibility and linkage between the legislative and executive branches of government. This would represent a drastic change into unknown territory. Partisan two-house Legislatures are the rule, but how partisan election would work in a one-house Legislature could be something else.

Perhaps the change could be less drastic and binding and involve changes by the senators themselves. There are veteran senators who must surely recognize the basic flaws and are best equipped by knowledge and experience to suggest some practical remedies. But first there must be frank admission that the problems exist and that if they do not do something about them, then the voters eventually may prescribe remedies that could destroy the system.

The non-partisan Unicameral suffers from the basic ills of "pure democracy" which can work in a New England town hall meeting, but bogs down above that level. It has long been pointed out that Nebraska has 49 senators who operate as individualists, fiercely defending their independence from coercion by the speaker, the presiding officer, the governor or any party leader. Pinning the credit or blame for passage or failure to pass any major piece of legislation involves trying to pin 49 individualists or the coalitions of individuals who exist as competing powers of influence in the legislative body.

A review of the general pattern of the 1977 session indicates some of the problems have been more pronounced than those of former years, but not inordinately so. A new speaker set out to keep the legislative process moving on a schedule. Public hearings on bills were started at 10 a.m. rather than only in the afternoon as in former years. A sizable number of non-controversial bills were moved and actually passed fairly early in the session.

By the time the 90-day session was two-thirds over, the committees had completed the bulk of the public hearings schedule and the senators returned to full day sessions. The Appropriations Committee generally completed its work and introduced its bills ahead of the pace of former years. There was talk that the session could be completed ahead of the 90-day limit.

But on the controversial bills, action stalemated. Filibustering took over by senators keyed to passage or killing of a few special bills. Debate was repetitive and prolonged at every stage of advancement. The end result was that more than 100 bills were left on general file to be carried over until next year's 60-day session.

On the 89th day, major budget bills awaited final reading while one senator filibustered for two hours against a relatively innocuous piece of legislation. The senators have great latitude to change their rules and improve the working of the Unicameral system. It is simplistic to blame the ills of this session and past sessions on the lobbyists, the presiding officer, the governor or a few individual senators.

It's time for the senators themselves to admit that the Unicameral has some basic flaws and make changes to compensate for them. — M.M. Van Kirk, Nebraska Farm Bureau.

Wetlands are important!

Boy, did I get wet the other day. I was strolling across south-central Nebraska toward Holdrege to visit my old high school football coach, Cotton Vole, when kersplash, I stepped off a bunch of grass right into a marsh. A marsh is wetland, a place covered with shallow water. It is home for many many kinds of plants and animals. Marshes are disappearing rapidly, being drained by men wanting more lands for crops. Here are just a few of the animals that lose their homes when marshes are destroyed. Can you name them?

Cost-of-Living Increase Noted

A cost-of-living increase in monthly social security benefits will be included in checks delivered on July 1, according to Dale Branch, social security district manager in Norfolk.

The increase will amount to 5.9 percent for most people getting social security payments. The automatic cost-of-living provision was added to the social security law in 1972. "People getting social security checks don't have to do anything to get the higher payments," Branch said. "The increase will be added automatically."

The increase is based on the rise in consumer prices from the first three months of 1976 to the first three months of 1977.

With the cost-of-living increase, average social security retirement payments to retired workers will go from $221 to $234 a month. Average social security disability payments to disabled workers will go from $248 to $262 a month. Average social security survivors payments to widowed mothers or fathers with two children in their care will go from $517 to $547 a month.

Social security pays monthly benefits to over 33 million people. The payments are funded by social security contributions from employees, employers, and self-employed people.

Employees and employers contribute 5.85 percent each of the first $16,500 of yearly earnings from jobs covered by social security. Self-employed people contribute 7.9 percent. "Those figures remain unchanged," Branch said.

Social security checks are usually delivered on the third day of the month. When the date falls on Saturday or Sunday, the checks are delivered the preceding Friday. July 3 is on a Sunday this year, and the checks will be delivered Friday, July 1.

Legislative Action

One result of the Unicameral session this year is higher taxes for Nebraskans, according to Wayne County treasurer Leon Meyer.

The Legislature raised the gasoline tax from 8.5 cents a gallon to 9.5 cents to help pay for road improvements, Meyer told members of the Wayne Kiwanis Club Monday.

The state gets the biggest share of the gasoline tax, Meyer said, 53.5 cents out of each gas tax dollar, with counties and cities dividing up the rest.

The State Board of Equalization Monday decided to raise both state sales and income taxes in order to generate sufficient revenue to meet obligations dictated by legislative action, including approval of an additional $20 million for state aid to schools.

Sales tax will increase from 3 to 3.5 percent and the state income tax will increase from 17 percent of federal income tax to 18 percent. The new rates go into effect July 1, Meyer said.

Other changes which will affect Meyer's office are the law which will require photographs on all Nebraska driver's licenses beginning Jan. 1, and the authorization for the sale of prestige license plates for pickups, formerly restricted to automobiles.

Irrigation Planning Can Save Resources

Frequent, light irrigations on sandy soil save water and the energy to pump it and also reduce the amount of fertilizer nitrogen moving below the reach of plant roots as a potential groundwater pollutant.

That's the finding of USDA Agricultural Research Service (ARS) scientists, working in cooperation with the University of Nebraska Agricultural Experiment Station.

The amount of water and nitrogen fertilizer that can be saved, formerly only estimated, is being measured directly near Pellwood, in Butler County. Preliminary results show a 40 per cent reduction in water lost by deep percolation below the rooting zone when average irrigations of the same field were cut from 1.9 inches with surface irrigation to 0.9 inch with sprinkler. Also, 40 per cent less nitrate-nitrogen was carried below crop roots, according to an article in Agricultural Research magazine.

With furrow irrigation between corn rows 1,130 feet long,

25 per cent of the water from irrigation and rainfall was lost as deep percolation during the growing season.

This loss was reduced to 15 per cent the next year with smaller applications by a center-pivot sprinkler system. Total nitrate-nitrogen losses averaged 45 and 27 pounds per acre. Half of these annual losses occurred during the first two weeks of irrigation when the percolation rate was highest.

ARS soil scientist Lloyd N. Mielke, stationed at the UNL East Campus, said deep percolation under irrigation cannot be entirely eliminated. In fact, rainfall in eastern Nebraska complicates irrigation water management and contributes to deep percolation.

ARS agricultural engineers at Fort Collins, Colo., developed a vacuum extractor used in Nebraska studies for direct measurement of deep percolation. The extractor consists of a porous ceramic tube in a metal tray buried below the root zone. Percolating water is drawn by vacuum pump into the tube and flows by gravity into a container for volume measurement for nitrate-nitrogen analysis.

In the study, Dr. Mielke and agricultural engineer Charles L. Linderman installed eight extractors and began observations after one growing season intervened. The cooperating farmer followed his usual corn production practices except that irrigation scheduling was based on soil water content measured with a neutron probe and tensiometers.

In the furrow irrigation study, the entire field received 100 pounds of nitrogen per acre as anhydrous ammonia before planting. Part of the field had an additional 80 pounds per acre sidedressed before irrigating, and part received 60 pounds per acre applied in the irrigation water. Rates were slightly lower the next season and no nitrogen was applied with irrigation water.

More nitrate-nitrogen leached below the root zone with sidedress application than when the fertilizer was put on with irrigation water. The loss averaged 6.7 pounds per acre in each inch of percolating water with sidedressing and 5.6 pounds with application in irrigation water.

Sandy soils with shallow water tables are difficult to manage under irrigation. The researchers found that the soil to 5-foot depth would hold only three inches of available water. Irrigation was needed every sixth day when the weather was hot, dry and windy.

The study demonstrated the extreme variability of alluvial sandy soils, Dr. Mielke says. Deep percolation measured by the eight vacuum extractors for the first irrigation season ranged from 0.2 to 14.9 inches of water.

Use of automated gated pipe and shorter furrows as an alternative to the center-pivot system could reduce deep percolation and nitrogen loss, Dr. Mielke says. These alternatives to conventional furrow irrigation require more labor or a higher equipment investment.

The study is continuing to verify preliminary results with the center-pivot system.

Test Says Not All Coyotes Are Threat to Livestock

Not all coyotes which range near poultry and livestock are likely to kill domestic animals, a University of Nebraska research project has concluded.

A 16-month study of the habits and homelife of coyotes in southeastern Nebraska found that eight of 15 coyotes ranging near poultry and livestock sites were responsible for substantial predations of turkeys and sheep, with two coyotes — a mated pair — killing more than 200 turkeys.

The study was conducted by William Andelt, with field data gathered through August, 1976 and results released in mid-February. Advisor to Andelt was Dr. Phillip Gipson, former UNL extension wildlife specialist now with the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service in Alaska.

The 15 coyotes were captured near poultry and livestock loss sites, and 14 were outfitted with radio collars and followed by radio from May 1975 through August 1976. Eight of these coyotes showed evidence of killing turkeys or sheep, four were located at loss sites at the approximate time losses occurred and turkey remains were found in the stomachs of seats of the other four.

The two coyotes were believed responsible for killing 217 turkeys from June 4 to August 14, 1976. This represents an estimated loss of $801. The males were often located together and frequently traveled together from April 7 to August 14. Both the male and female appeared to carry food to the pups.

Several additional study coyotes had ranges near the turkey pens, but did not enter the pens.

Home range, activity, and movements of study coyotes were determined. Home ranges averaged 14.2 square miles for adult males and 13.1 square miles for adult females. One yearling female had a home range of 51.9 square miles. Coyotes were usually active from sunset until sunrise and remained inactive throughout the day.

The average distance traveled during 24-hour periods was greater for adult females (7.8 miles) than adult males (6.4 miles). The longest distances were traveled during January and February; this was before and during the breeding season.

Farmers to Report Program Acreages

Instructions requiring farm operators to report the acreages of all program crops (wheat, corn, grain sorghum and barley) on all farms have been received by the Nebraska State Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) Office according to Robert R. Rauner, newly appointed ASCS state committee chairman.

The Agriculture Committees of the Senate and House have reported out farm bills which provide that if a set-aside program is implemented for 1978 crops, the acreage required to be set-aside as a condition of eligibility for program benefits may be based on a percentage of the acreage planted for harvest in 1977.

Although this would not be the only alternative available, in order to provide the Secretary of Agriculture with the full range of options in the event a 1978 set-aside is deemed necessary, the 1977 acreages of wheat, corn, sorghum and barley planted will be obtained. Under either current or proposed legislation, the 1977 reported acreage will not be used for purposes of establishing allotments.

Spring seeded crops shall be reported after planting but before September 1, 1977. Fall seeded crops shall be reported before harvest begins on the farm. County ASCS Offices will soon be receiving detailed instructions on accepting acreage reports.

This and That... from YOUR COUNTY AGENT

Here are some questions and the answers that were given from Backyard Farmer. This popular television program is watched by many Nebraskans.

Question: How and when can rhubarb be divided?

Answer: The best time to divide rhubarb is in late fall or early spring. To divide the plants, simply lift the clumps, separate the crowns, getting as many roots as possible into each one, and replant them.

Question: What is the proper way to harvest asparagus?

Answer: Easy methods of harvesting asparagus are either to cut it with a knife close to the ground or snap off the stems by hand.

Question: When is the best time to transplant iris?

Answer: The best time for replanting is in August?

Question: How can musk thistle be controlled in a lawn?

Answer: If there are just a few musk thistle in the lawn the best removal is to dig them. If there are a number, it is best to spray in the fall with 2,4-D using the same portions as used for dandelion control.

Question: Will 2,4-D control bindweed in the lawn?

Answer: Yes, 2,4-D will control the bindweed, but only if persistence is used and if proper application rules are followed. A good top growth is needed on the

It's Time to Check For Borer Damage

The last three weeks in June is the time to check early corn for signs of European corn borer damage, according to John Witkowski, extension entomologist, at the Northeast Station at Concord.

Witkowski said weather to date has been excellent for borer survival and some of the more advanced corn is already showing damage.

Corn borer egg masses are found on the underside of the corn leaves and hatch about five days after being deposited. Moderate temperatures and high relative humidity are necessary for good egg survival and larvae hatch. Following hatching, the worms migrate into the whorl area and feed for about two weeks on the new leaf tissue, consequently, the shot hole appearance as the leaves expand out of the whorl. When leaf feeding is completed the worms move down the plant and bore into the stalk.

Yield losses probably vary among corn varieties due to varying degrees of susceptibility but Witkowski adds that a single worm per plant left uncontrolled may reduce yield two to three per cent.

The most effective way to assess damage is to determine per cent of borer damaged plants in several locations in a field and average together. Count at least 50 plants at each location in the field. Then pull the whorl of several plants and examine for borers. If borers are still feeding and one-half inch or less long, controls are effective.

Under dryland conditions, controls should be applied when 50 per cent or more of the plants show leaf damage and worms are visible. Under irrigated conditions, treat when 30 per cent of the plants show damage and worms are visible.

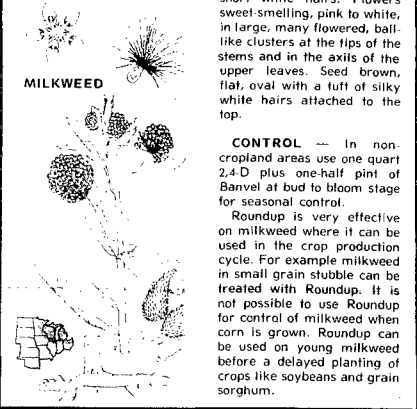

Granules are more effective than liquid treatments and Furadan 10G at 10 pounds per acre, Diazinon 14G at 7.25 pounds per acre, Dylanate 20G at 5 pounds per acre, Thimet 15G at 6.6 pounds per acre, and Topaphene 15G at 13 pounds per acre may be used. Research to date indicates Furadan 10G and Diazinon 15G are the most effective.

See your county agent for additional details, Witkowski said.

Six Lawn Care Practices Recommended

Whether a lawn is a showplace or simply a stabilizer of dust, mud and soil erosion problems, six basic cultural practices will help maintain a satisfactory lawn, according to a University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension turfgrass specialist.

Dr. Robert Shearman said it is advisable to select a turfgrass species suitable for its intended use, ensure proper soil establishment conditions, and establish turf by proper techniques. He added that one should also mow properly with regard to height, frequency, and equipment, fertilize properly and irrigate to prevent drought stress.

Turfgrass species such as zoysiagrass, buffalograss, blue grama and tall fescue are very drought tolerant, though even these must be watered during an extended drought.

Zoysiagrass, bermudagrass, tall fescue and perennial ryegrass are known for their wear tolerance. Bentgrass is the only principal turfgrass that is not recommended for Nebraska.

Establishing turf requires more water than maintaining it, Shearman said.

Ranges in mowing heights account for varying climatic factors, intensity of culture, intended use, and the quality of turf desired. Raise the mower blade during the summer when turf is exposed to high temperatures, and lower it in the fall.

Mowing frequency is determined by the grass' rate of growth. This is most rapid when there is adequate soil moisture, favorable growing temperatures and adequate nitrogen available, he said.

Shearman said that no more than 30 to 40 per cent of the leaf should be removed with any one mowing.

Mowing blades should be sharp and properly adjusted. Dull blades can weaken the turf and mutilate leaf blades.

Shearman called fertilization the key for an attractive, healthy lawn since a well-fertilized lawn can resist weed, disease and insect problems, as well as heat, cold, drought and wear.

He advised that when selecting a fertilizer, a home gardener consider soil test results, turfgrass species, type of soil, intensity of culture, irrigation practice, clipping removal or return, type and cost of fertilizer and convenience of applications.

Shearman recommended a minimum of two fertilizer applications per year, in the spring and fall, although better quality lawns will require at least three in a growing season. Apply fertilizers uniformly, either in dry form or as a liquid. Achieve uniform spreading by use of centrifugal or gravity spreaders.

Supplemental watering is necessary in most areas of Nebraska to maintain a healthy, dense turf, Shearman said. "Lawns should be watered thoroughly and infrequently. Whenever possible, the soil should be wet six to eight inches deep," Shearman said.

He added that to minimize disease problems, the lawn should be watered between sunrise and midday. He explained that diseases develop more rapidly when the grass remains wet for a long period of time.

Some areas such as slopes and areas exposed to wind, direct sun and tree root competition may require more frequent watering than others, he said.

"Watering twice a week during heat stress periods is not uncommon in southeastern Nebraska," Shearman said.

"During cooler periods, watering intervals can be increased to seven to 14 days. Lawns with a high intensity of culture, high cutting heights and coarse-textured soil will require more frequent watering than those maintained to a lesser degree on heavy soils."

Mid-Season Fertilizer Program Recommended

Changes brought about by weather or changes in yield goals can cause alterations in fertilizer applications. In many cases, these changes can take place in mid-season. Mid-season changes are appropriate for some nutrients — but not for others.

For some dryland production, soil moisture may be better than expected earlier in the spring. Because of this, yield goals may be higher. Higher yield goals usually mean that more fertilizer nitrogen will be needed. George Rehm, agronomist at the Northeast Station reminds farmers that additional nitrogen can be applied at sidedress time. The agronomist also points out that sidedress applications should be completed as soon as possible. Delayed sidedress applications will prune roots and could cause crop damage. Unless there are severe shortages of either phosphorus or zinc, mid-season application of these nutrients is of little value for this growing season.

The heavy May rains in some areas may have moved both nitrogen and sulfur below the roots of the corn plants on the sandy soils. Without an adequate supply of both nutrients, corn on sandy soils will turn yellow. In these situations, the application of either nitrogen or a combination of nitrogen and sulfur with the irrigation water would be appropriate.

Rehm points out that the application of nitrogen with the irrigation water is suggested for corn irrigated with center pivot systems. For sandy soils, approximately one-third of the total nitrogen needed should be applied with the irrigation water. An application of 25 to 30 pounds nitrogen per acre during the week prior to silking is suggested for irrigated corn on non-sandy soils. Rehm adds, that all nitrogen applications should be completed before pollination is completed.

As in dryland situations, there is very little need to apply phosphorus, potassium, zinc or other nutrients to irrigated corn in mid-season. Mid-season application of these nutrients is suggested only when a deficiency of one or more of these nutrients is known to exist in a field.

Wayne County Beef Boosters

CARE OF YOUNGSTERS' TEETH

Many American children have some tooth decay by the age of two. Age two or three is not too early to make a dental appointment for your child. This first visit to the dentist will be just to get acquainted and help the child overcome any fear of the dentist. With good preventive care and regular checkups, there may be little need for a child to experience dental drilling or tooth extraction. Good eating habits are of primary importance in preventing decay for your child's teeth. Foods that keep the whole body healthy will also keep teeth and gums in good condition. Between meal snacks should be low in sugar. Treats such as candy, cookies, ice cream and sweetened drinks may play havoc with a child's teeth. Bacteria which are normally present in the mouth combine with sugar to form acids which attack tooth enamel. Eventually cavities will be caused, unless the child brushes his teeth soon after snacking before acids have time to form. Nutritionists suggest between meal snacks be foods such as fresh fruits, raw vegetables, unsweetened fruit juices, milk and cheese. Proper food habits, good brushing techniques and regular dental checkups are necessary for good preventive care for your youngster's teeth.

By Rowan Wiltse

"Take all the experience and judgment of men over 50 out of the world and there wouldn't be enough left to run it."
Henry Ford

In China, maturity is respected. The older people of China are revered; their opinions are sought and their advice is followed by younger people. Here, it seems we're dedicated to the worship of youth... the younger the better.

It's true that the energy and enthusiasm of youth are highly desirable but unless youthful energy is directed by good judgment, little will be accomplished. The wisdom that comes with age is vital to progress.

When a death occurs in a remote part of the country, call us first. We can handle everything and give you local responsibility.
