LENRD Budget Hearing Set

The Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District will conduct a public hearing in Wayne on July 28 to hear testimony on the district's proposed budget for 1977-78.

A board of directors meeting will follow the hearing, at 8:30 p.m. Both meetings will be in the Birch Room of the Wayne State College student union.

The total budget figure proposed is $1,205,732, with $524,037 of that amount to be provided by a one-mill tax on property in the district, based on the tentative valuation for 1977.

State funds would contribute $263,135 of the total, $198,000 would be provided by other local funds, and unencumbered balances of $263,000 would make up the remainder.

Decorator Strips Included In Improvement Project

The Wayne downtown improvement project will include decorative brick strips in the new sidewalk to be installed, but not as originally planned, according to improvement committee co-chairman Roger Nelson.

The committee proposed that 16-inch wide brick strips be installed from building to curb above water lines to provide access in case work on the lines should be required. Consulting engineers, however, later said that the cost of replacing the strips would be greater than replacing concrete.

Instead, wider brick decorator strips will be installed between buildings and planter cutout squares which will be left open adjacent to the curb.

Plans call for five planters to the block — three on one side and two on the other, in an alternating pattern. Planter cutouts on side streets will be about 30 inches wide. Main St. planters will be from 32 to 34 inches wide.

Youngsters Tuning Up for Music Camp

There is still time for young musicians to register for the annual High School Music Camp to be held at Wayne State College. The 23rd annual event, which gets underway Sunday will last through July 31.

Tuition is $70 for students staying on campus. Scholarships are available to students who received "one" ratings in high school music contests during the past year.

Camp offerings include band, orchestra, choir, stage band, swing choir, piano, guitar, theory, private lessons in brass, woodwind or strings, vocal solo coaching and conducting.

Special activities throughout the week will include a faculty-staff recital; student recital, camp capers variety show, stage band and swing choir performance, honor group concert. See MUSIC CAMP, page 8.

wide. The decorator strips extending back from the planters to the buildings will be the same width as the planter, Nelson said.

He added that project contractor Leonard Gill said his company will first install new sidewalk and curb and gutter on two of the side streets, to become familiar with the project. Then will proceed to Main St., one side at a time. Construction time for the project is 70 working days.

Fairgrounds Cleanup Is Monday

Wayne County Fair Secretary Marilyn Koch is looking for volunteers to help clean up the fairgrounds Monday.

The cleanup effort will begin at 4 p.m. and Koch said anyone wishing to help is invited to come to the fairgrounds at any time after then. Cleanup equipment needed includes mowers and trimming equipment, and rakes.

Kurt Otte is also asking for volunteers that night to help cut wood to fire the pits for the annual barbecue sponsored by local county fair boosters.

Koch added that anyone wishing to reserve outdoor display space during the fair contact him as soon as possible. All indoor display space has already been reserved, Koch said, and outdoor display areas are filling up fast.

City Budget Proposal $4.7 Million

The Wayne city council Tuesday night at 8 will conduct a public hearing on a proposed 1977-78 budget nearly one million dollars higher than 1976-77 expenditures, but the figure might not be as alarming as it sounds, according to city administrator Fred Brink.

Money for several major projects is included in the budget proposal, the city administrator said. The projects are being contemplated and money must

Persistence Pays Off

YOUNG David Doescher may have a real antique on his hands, thanks to his being inquisitive. The 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Darrell Doescher of Wayne recently was scouting beneath the Logan Creek bridge south of town when he spotted what looked like part of a cow's skull. After he started digging further, David realized that this job would take the help of his dad. The pair soon found out that the skull belonged to a buffalo estimated to be about 7,000 years old. David's dad said they could pinpoint the age of the skull by measuring the span of the horns and the depth of the soil in which the skull was found, then sending that information to University of Nebraska officials. Rather than do that, David will trust what old timers guess to be the age and go about preparing the skull for display at his home.

Hail Damage Aid Sought

The Wayne County board of commissioners Tuesday agreed to seek a disaster area designation for the county as a result of hail and wind damage suffered June 30.

The USDA county emergency committee recommended the action to the commissioners based on an assessment of damages following the storm.

Local Beef Producers Turn Thumbs Off Issue

National returns are not available yet, but if results in Wayne County are any indication, the beef referendum issue is doomed to failure.

Friday was the final day for voting on the referendum and Wayne County Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service director Ray Butts Tuesday released the results of balloting in the county. Final tally: 93 in favor of the referendum, 110 opposed.

The referendum vote was authorized under the Beef Research and Information Act, to provide for a three-tenths of one per cent check-off on the sale price of beef. The money would be used to finance research in the beef industry, and for beef marketing and public information programs.

The Secretary of Agriculture will appoint a 68-member beef board to administer program if the referendum is approved. Members will be selected from organizations in beef producing states, on a quota system based on animal populations.

Registration for the referendum was held in June. In order for the issue to pass, half of those registered must vote and two-thirds of those voting must approve. Total registration for Wayne County was 261.

Losses were in excess of $120,000 according to the survey. Crop damage included: corn, $54,000; soybeans, $54,000; milo, $1,600; oats, $20,700; alfalfa, $4,700. In addition, an estimated $2,500 in damages was suffered by homes in the county.

The emergency committee report indicates 15 farms in the county suffered crop losses of 20 to 29 per cent as a result of the hail and heavy winds, and five farms suffered losses of less than 20 per cent.

The request for a disaster area designation will be forwarded to the state emergency board. If the designation is granted, individuals who suffered losses in the storm would become eligible for low interest loans from the Farmers Home Administration.

The commissioners Tuesday also appointed three members to represent Wayne County on the governing board of a recently formed 18-county economic development district. Serving on the board will be commissioner Floyd Burt of Winston, Wayne county administrator Fred Brink and James Miller of Hoskins.

Allen Senior Attends FHA National Leadership Meeting

An Allen High School senior is one of 1,500 delegates who recently returned from the Future Homemakers of America (FHA) National Leadership Meeting in Seattle, Wash.

The delegate, Cheryl Koch, is vice president of the Allen FHA-Hero chapter and vice president of program development for the FHA state executive council.

Theme of the national meeting was "Leadership '77 — Explore Roles, Set Goals." During the four-day meeting, July 11-14, the delegates participated in leadership training workshops and explored techniques for decision making, goal setting and assuming leadership roles as homemakers.

The 1,500 delegates were selected from among 450,000 applications. Criteria for selection included exceptional achievement in scholastic and extracurricular activities and demonstration of high personal standards.

Miss Koch, in addition to her FHA activities, is president of the Allen High senior class; a member of the student council and National Honor Society, a cheerleader, is active in 4-H and is president of the St. Paul Lutheran Church Waltham League. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Koch of Concord.

More Scholarships Given

More Wayne State College President's Scholarships have been awarded to students who will attend during the school year beginning in the fall. Recipients include:

— Patrick Veik, a 1977 Petersburg High school graduate, who will receive a full tuition scholarship.

Veik was active in track, basketball and the school's athletic letter club, and was a class officer. He ranked 10th in his class and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Veik of rural Petersburg.

Jaycees Plan Benefit Game

The Wayne Women's Recreation League softball team will play Eddie's Angels, sponsored by WOW radio in Omaha, in a benefit game Aug. 6 in Wayne.

Proceeds from the game, scheduled to begin at 1 p.m. in the city ball park, will go to buy equipment for the new children's development center being constructed for leasing to the Region IV Office of Developmental Disabilities.

The Wayne Jaycees are sponsoring the benefit game. Admission will cost $1.

be appropriated in the budget if the council decides to proceed with them, but the fact that the money is budgeted does not necessarily mean the projects will be approved and the money spent.

The budget proposal totals $4,721,791, compared with 1976-77 expenditures of $3,731,764, based on real and estimated costs.

The item showing the greatest increase is the street fund. Expenses for 1976-77 are shown at $231,971, compared with $821,014 in the 1977-78 proposed budget. The 1977 proposed budget figure includes money for extension of Providence Road South to Highway 35, about 2,200 feet of new paved street; enclosing about 2,000 feet of storm sewer in Roosevelt Park and participating in a 1,000-foot paving project on Grantland Road.

Other major projects under consideration are upgrading the electric distribution system including possible conversion to underground power lines in some areas, and building a trash compactor transfer station, already bid at about $85,000.

Wakefield Care Center Seeks Expansion

The Wakefield Health Care Center has submitted a proposal to build a 20-bed addition to the existing nursing home.

Greater Nebraska Health Systems Agency (GNHSA) project review coordinator Herb Spears said requests for nursing home expansions must be reviewed and approved under federal law because a sizeable percentage of nursing home costs are reimbursable under Medicare and Medicaid programs.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare wants to avoid overbuilding in the nursing home industry, he said.

Russel Swigart, administrator of the Wakefield Health Care Center, said the addition would be added to the west side of the existing 42-bed facility, which is attached to the Wakefield Community Hospital.

Estimated cost of the addition is $260,000. About $200,000 of that amount would be financed through municipal revenue bonds. About $70,000 currently in savings would also be available to finance the project.

The GNHSA replaced comprehensive health planning councils in Nebraska under a bill signed into law in 1975. The agency, which serves 71 Nebraska counties, is under the direction of a 30-person governing board. It acts in an advisory capacity to the State Health Department where applications such as the one submitted by the Wakefield Health Care Center are considered.

The agency's project review committee will conduct a public hearing on the Wakefield request at 10 a.m., Aug. 11, at the St. Kearney Inn in Kearney. The committee will present its recommendation to the GNHSA governing board at a meeting scheduled for 10 a.m., Aug. 25, at the Holiday Inn in North Platte.

The governing board's decision will then be forwarded to the State Health Department for final action. Spears said an appeal could be filed if the Health Department decides to disapprove the request.

The city-owned Wakefield Health Care Center went into operation Jan. 21, 1975. Swigart said $310,000 in revenue bonds financed construction of $50,000 building, and another $50,000 was borrowed for equipment. About $305,000 in outstanding indebtedness remains on the revenue bonds, he said, adding that the loan for equipment has been repaid.

Timetables for construction are tentative, Swigart said. "We would like to see construction start late next spring, but that would be a monumental miracle."

He said property for the addition must be acquired if the request is approved, and that will include buying two homes. The property owners wish to relocate in Wakefield, he said, and plans under consideration include the possibility of moving the two homes. Swigart said that while he is hoping for an early start, he recognizes that working out details in acquiring the property could easily push the starting date for construction into the fall of 1978.

The request for an addition was made because of the demand for rooms in the nursing home, Swigart said. Occupancy has been high and there has been a waiting list of from 25 to 30 people for the past four or five months.

Adding the additional 20 rooms would be relatively inexpensive, Swigart said, because existing service facilities such as dining rooms and kitchen would be adequate to serve the additional residents.

Glady's Peterson served the cake and Cordelia Chambers poured. Punch was served by Alice Dorman. Others assisting were Virgil Chambers, Mahalide Harms, Goldie Leonard and Mildred Wacker.

Another group of center members will play for center members at 3:15 p.m. Aug. 15. At the membership meeting of the Wayne Senior Citizens Center on Monday afternoon, Mrs. Gale Bathe was elected to serve the remaining term of vice president for Mrs. Pearl Griffith. Mrs. Bathe will also serve on the focal advisory committee of the Senior Citizens Center.

Mrs. Griffith resigned the office of vice president because she plans to make her home in California.

Other business during the membership meeting included amending the constitution and by-laws to state that center officers may only serve a one-year term and can be re-elected for another term of one year at the annual meeting in August.

A discussion to change the monthly membership meeting day will continue at the next meeting, set for Aug. 15 at 2 p.m.

There were 21 at the Senior Citizens Center picnic supper Friday evening at the center. The picnic site was changed from Bressler Park because of threatening weather.

Following supper, several Senior Citizens Center members and director Jocell Bull helped with Mrs. Pearl Griffith's household sale.

Ponca Blasts Allen for 2nd NNBL Victory

A rash of walks coupled with several errors and key hits boosted Pontiac-Dwight-Ponca post-Alton-Martinburg Sunday night to record the club's second win in the Northeast Nebraska Baseball League.

Ponca scored five runs in the sixth to wipe out a 4-1 deficit and came back with four runs each in the seventh and eighth frames to hand Allen its sixth loss, 14-4.

Starting, Allen hurler Neil Blohm, who held host Ponca to one run in five frames, got into trouble in the sixth and had to give up the reigns to Scott Miller. But Miller also had his share of problems, walking in a run and giving up run-scoring base hits before Blohm returned to the mound to end the inning. Jeff Creamer later finished the game for Allen.

"That loss put our playoff chances in jeopardy," admitted second baseman Gary Troth. Allen slipped one notch to fifth in the eight-team league with a 6-6 record.

The area club bolted to a 1-0 lead in the first of a run-scoring double by Miller. In the third, Troth scored on a single by Loren Book for a 2-0 Allen lead. A bases-loaded walk and an infield hit by Bill Schultz score Allen's final runs for a 4-1 command in the fifth.

Nip Wakefield for, 13th Win

Midgets Capture RBL Title

Wayne Midgets sewed up another Ralph Bishop League title Monday night by nipping Wakefield, 2-1.

The win upped the locals' record to 13-1 in league play and 16-3 overall, going into first-round action of the District 3 American Legion tournament at Coleridge Wednesday night.

First baseman Dean Carroll scored both Wayne runs, picking up one each in the first and sixth frames. Carroll connected with a one-out double, stole third on a wild pitch and scored when leadoff hitter Jeff Zeiss was out at second. Carroll drew a walk in the sixth and scored on Tom Ginn's booming double to end the game.

Wakefield tied the match in the top of the fifth when pitcher Todd Swigart was safe on first via a fielder's choice, stole second and rounded third on a pair of passed balls from Zeiss to catcher Dan Mitchell. With two away, Wakefield had runners on second and third before coach Hank Overin put Ginn on the mound to retire the side. Hurlers for both clubs combined to throw a six-hitter while teammates played errorless ball. Starter Zeiss gave up only two hits — singles to Swigart and Chuck Sherer.

During the season, Wayne posted two wins each over Wakefield, Laurel, Wisner, Emerson, Bancroft and Pender and split with second-place Walthill, which ended the season with two losses.

Dennis Carroll (7-2) recorded the team's only no-hitter of the summer in a 23-1 rousing of Emerson during the second game of the season.

'Who Cares About the Temperatures'

TEMPERATURES reaching into the upper 90's this past week have made the waters at the Municipal Swimming Pool in Wayne just right for a good swim. However, not everyone was in agreement Monday when this picture was taken, as evidenced by the small crowd. According to pool manager Jan Zeiss, over the weekend the pool was jammed with people looking for a cool place to be. Top left, Cindy Lindner doesn't worry about the temperatures, just her form as she performs a backwards dive with a twist.

Wakefield's 6-Run Burst Blasts Wayne

A six-run outburst by Wakefield ended three innings of scoreless ball Monday night and sent the visitors on to a 8-2 victory over host Wayne.

Led by pitcher Brad Jones with a two-run single, Wakefield put together a four-hit attack in the fourth and solo runs in the fifth and seventh on base hits by Todd Swigart.

Wayne, which ended league play with a 2-8 record, ended Wakefield's scoring punch in the fourth without errors. Starting Wayne hurler Doug Carroll had five strikeouts to his credit after two frames. Meanwhile, Jones whiffed four after two and went on to strikeout 13 Wayne batters. The juniors scored in the sixth. See WAKEFIELD, page 8

Thought for Today

By Rowan Wiltse

"A man without decision can never be said to belong to himself; he is a feather in the air which every breeze blows about."
John Foster

Nothing is ever started, let alone finished, until someone makes the decision to go ahead. Most of us are faced with dozens of decisions every day. Much are easy to make. Some decisions, for some people, seem to be impossible.

The tough decisions are those where the possible results are uncertain. Yet, more damage and heartache probably result from a reluctance to make decisions than for making faulty ones. Be as sure as you can that you're right, then go ahead.

We serve, with sympathy and compassion, all who come to us in sorrow, regardless of faith or creed.

A FLOOD of information about the upcoming Nebraska Coaches Association annual All-Star basketball game hit this desk, pointing out that the first practice session for the North stars at Wayne State's Rice Auditorium is only a week away.

Leading the parade of 12 players will be Omaha North's Mike McGee, the 6-5 forward who swept all-state honors from Omaha World-Herald (Athlete of the Year) and Lincoln Journal-Star.

Mike holds a lot more honors — 11 Metro Conference records to be exact, according to his coach, Bob Murray. Shooting and scoring are two areas Mike is well adept, averaging just over 38 points in his senior year with an all-time high of 54 points against Omaha Gross this year.

One player Wildcat fans might want to keep an eye on is Bob Keller of Bassett. The 6-2, 185-pound three-year letterman will be packing his bags after the Aug. 5th all-star game in Lincoln to head for Wayne State.

Bob estimates that his strengths are ball handling, scoring and defense. "I have been the key man against man-to-man or zone press and often had to bring the ball down against any press," he said in a news release prepared by all-star publicity man Larry Fauss.

Bob averaged close to 16 points and eight careers an outing. Like McGee, Keller has a list of awards an arm long both conference and all-state.

Bassett mentor Clayton Steele adds that Keller would be better utilized as the playmaking guard in a two-guard offense or the point guard in a one-guard offense because of "his ability to see the play of the whole floor and analyze the situation."

HAPPENINGS: From now until Friday American Legion Junior and Midget baseball teams from Wayne and Laurel will be vying for a ticket to the area Class C tournament during District 3 action at Coleridge. Wayne Midgets have a good shot at capturing the District title if their pitching holds up, said coach Hank Overin.

Wayne and Laurel Junior clubs battle it out Friday to see who goes to the finals Saturday.

THE ANNUAL Wayne Junior Tennis Tournament will be held Saturday and Sunday at the Wayne State tennis courts. Over 125 have signed up, reports tournament director Tom Roberts. No list of the players was available at press time, but Roberts pointed out last week that some of the top players in a three-state area will be in Wayne for the tournament.

Dakota City Closes Door on Wayne, 2-0

Dakota City shut the door on Wayne's hopes of making the four-team NNBL playoffs with a 2-0 shutout performance Sunday afternoon by pitcher Mitch Osterholt.

It wasn't Osterholt's strikeout pitching so much which saved the game for the home team, but the fact that he never let any Wayne batters draw a walk.

The hard-throwing righthander struck out nine batters during the nine innings of errorless ball by Dakota City and gave up only five hits. Wayne hurler Earle Overin chalked up 12 strikeouts but issued seven walks, including a pair to center fielder Ron Stabile who scored both Dakota City runs.

Stabile, who leads off the batting order, took a full court before he drew the walk in the fourth. With one away, second baseman John McQuillen doubted to score Stabile for a 1-0 lead. In the eighth, Overin threw four balls to Stabile who went to second on a wild pitch and scored on a base hit and error charged to right fielder Dave Hix.

The locals never got any runners past second base. Second baseman Steve singled and went to second on a sacrifice by left fielder Steve Hix.

12 Hours of Yelling Produce Some Sore Throats

The Willow Bowl at Wayne State College has witnessed many activities through the years, from commencement exercises to wedding ceremonies. This week it is the scene of singing, dancing, shouting, cheering girls — 121 of them from high schools in Nebraska, Iowa and Missouri.

The event is the second annual cheerleading clinic sponsored by WSC and the International Cheerleading Foundation (ICF). Seventy young people attended the first such clinic held in Wayne a year ago.

The girls, except for four commuters, are housed at Bowen Hall. Their day begins at 8 a.m. when they stop at the college cafeteria for breakfast. Then it's off to the Willow Bowl for practice in the shade of the trees until lunch time. Practice sessions resume in mid-afternoon, but many of the clinic participants use the afternoon free time to practice on their own and work on special routines in order to make a better showing during the nightly evaluation which takes place during the evening practice session after supper.

Traveling trophies, which make the rounds during the week, will be taken home by squads which are judged best during the final evaluation today (Thursday).

Champ activities got underway with registration Sunday. Clinic instructors are ICF cheerleaders from Florida University, North Carolina University and Wisconsin University. The clinic concentrates on cheers, pom pom routines, chants, stunts, dancing, student body spirit and fund raising activities.

Participants include Laura Lessmann, Holly Mallette, Susie Proett and Sherry Workman of Wayne; Shauna Roberts of Carroll; Alena George and Teri Hartman of Winslow, and Coelene Miller of Hoskins.

Schroeder's Run, Hits Lead Laurel To 2-1 Loop Win

Left fielder John Schroeder scored one run and drove in another Sunday night to lead Laurel town team to a 2-1 win over host Tilden Battle Creek.

Schroeder, who went three for five, put Laurel in front in the first inning when he connected for a base hit, went to second on a sacrifice by John Abts and scored on a single by George Schroeder. In the top of the fifth Rod Erwin crossed the plate on Schroeder's base hit.

Tilden tied the match in the fourth when Tom Rethwisch drew a base on balls, stole second and scored on Bill Hughes' base hit. Hampered by the three-hit pitching of George Schroeder and reliever Bob Weisenberg, Tilden failed to get another strong scoring opportunity in the nine-inning Tri-County League contest. Schroeder went seven frames before player-coach Jerry Schroeder called on Weisenberg.

With only three games to go, Laurel (10-3) remains a game out of first in the nine-team league.

Starter Fertilizer Has Four Benefits

Increased yield, lower rates of fertilizer needed, improved weed control and greater tolerance of rootworm damage are four benefits of using starter fertilizer for corn, according to E.J. Penas and G.W. Rehm, University of Nebraska-Lincoln District Extension soil specialists.

They defined a "starter fertilizer" as one containing one or more plant nutrients applied at corn planting to the side of, directly below or to the side and below the seed. They noted that the terms "row-applied" and "banded" fertilizers also have been used to describe the treatment.

A starter fertilizer is used to place essential plant nutrients in a position where they will be readily available to the small root system of the young corn plant. In Nebraska, this type of placement is especially important for phosphate, sulfur and zinc, they said.

They pointed out that neither a "pop-up" fertilizer (one applied with the seed through the seed-tube of the planter), nor liquid fertilizers mixed with herbicides and broadcast or banded over planted corn can be considered starter fertilizers.

The former method of fertilization has not shown much promise in Nebraska, because it is most effective where the soil phosphorus level is low, soil is wet and soil temperatures are low, the specialists said. The latter method is acceptable for placement of nitrogen and sulfur, they said, because these nutrients are mobile and will move into the soil with moisture, where they can be used by corn roots.

It's important to point out that using a starter fertilizer does not automatically insure higher corn yields, they stressed.

They added that in some cases, while the growth rate may increase in young corn plants, at the end of the season there is no increase in grain yield. This is likely to happen in fields where soil nutrient levels are medium to high.

Weed control benefits occur when rapidly growing plants shade the soil between the rows earlier in the growing season. This shading suppresses weed growth and reduces competition by weeds for both soil moisture and nutrients.

Starter fertilizer also may increase the growth and development of the root system, which may allow the corn to withstand corn rootworm damage better. However, it should not be substituted for a soil insecticide designed to control rootworm.

When broadcast and incorporated, plant nutrients are mixed with a much larger volume of soil, and higher rates of the nutrients are needed to do the same job as starter fertilizers.

The rates of starter fertilizer application depends on the salt content of the fertilizer, the distance between the starter and seed and the soil texture.

They explained that salt index can be determined by adding the rate of nitrogen to the rate of potash applied. When soil moisture at planting is adequate, problems associated with salt damage will be reduced.

Non-sandy soils have significantly higher salt index than sandy soils, they said.

Placement of starter fertilizer can be easily adjusted. If the starter is not far enough from the seed, time spent in adjusting the placement may result in improved emergence and higher yields.

If used properly, the starter fertilizer can be a key management tool for corn production in Nebraska, they concluded.

The only trick to preparing Lemon Lime Chiffon Pie is to cook the filling in a double boiler (make your own with two different sized saucepans, if necessary). Ingredients are thickened over simmering water to avoid sticking or burning.

Lemon Lime Chiffon Pie

One 9-inch pie

- 1 1/2 cups Graham Cracker Crumbs
- 2 tablespoons Sugar
- One-third cup Butter, melted
- 1 envelope Unflavored Gelatin
- 3/4 cup Sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon Salt
- 3 Eggs, separated
- One-third cup Water
- 2 teaspoons grated Lime Rind
- One-third cup Lime Juice
- 1 carton (8-oz.) Natural Lemon Chiffon or Lemon Flavored Lowfat Yogurt
- 1/4 cup Sugar

Stir together crumbs, 2 tablespoons sugar and butter; place in 9-inch pie pan. Firmly pat or press mixture over bottom and sides of pan. Bake in preheated 375 degree oven 8 to 10 minutes, or until lightly browned. Cool completely before filling. In top of double boiler combine gelatin, 3/4 cup sugar and salt. Blend in egg yolks, water, lime rind and juice. Cook over simmering water, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens and coats a metal spoon, about 10 minutes. Chill until mixture mounds when spooned, about 30 to 45 minutes. Fold in yogurt. Beat egg whites until foamy; gradually add 1/4 cup sugar and beat until stiff. Fold in gelatin mixture. Pour into cooled crust. Chill until firm, at least 3 hours.

After the filling is cooked, it is chilled until it mounds when spooned. Lemon chiffon flavored lowfat yogurt and beaten egg whites are folded in and the mixture is poured into a prepared graham cracker crumb crust. Pie should be chilled until firm.

State GOP boss asks for explanation of governor's stand on taxes

CAPITOL NEWS

LINCOLN — The chairman of the Nebraska Republican Party has asked Democratic Gov. J. James Exon for a "full explanation" of his stand on the sale and income tax increases.

Anne Batchelder of Omaha said Exon's statement that he will seek a rollback of a one-half per cent hike in the sales tax if a petition drive to repeal the state aid to schools increase is successful leaves several questions unanswered.

If the aid law is repealed, Mrs. Batchelder said, the State Board of Equalization next November should lower the sales and income rates back to 1970 levels.

She recalled the governor has claimed changes in the federal tax structure could cost Nebraska about $7 million in state income tax revenue. This gubernatorial assertion, Mrs. Batchelder said, has been disputed by at least some economists.

"The governor owes our taxpayers a full explanation," she said.

She added that the governor was also silent on the fact that sales tax would be collected for six months and the income tax for a full year before any downward change can go into effect.

According to the state GOP chief, Department of Revenue projections indicate the state would receive $13.85 million in sales tax money and $15.3 million in income tax dollars.

She noted this total of more than $29 million "will have no school aid drawn against it if the aid bill is repealed. At the most, $7 million will be drawn against it if there is, in fact, a loss of state income tax dollars because of federal tax law changes."

What, Mrs. Batchelder asked, would they be done with the minimum balance of more than $22 million.

She added: "We believe that it may be the beginning of a little leaving-office kitty the governor would like to put together to show Nebraska as being solvent."

"It should also be a sum necessary to cover any shortfall for the last fiscal year because of faulty projections."

Water Legislation

A specialist in water law has informed the Unicameral's Public Works Committee that surface water issues will be among the first he studies during his research of water legislation.

J. David Aiken of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln said he will thoroughly analyze Nebraska's water laws and that his research should be completed early next year.

Sen. Maurice Kremer of Aurora, committee chairman, said Aiken will meet with the group at least once a month to report his findings. The Aurora lawmaker said Aiken should keep the members advised about data that would be helpful in drafting water legislation.

A number of water bills were introduced during this year's session of the legislature but most of them were either held in committee or did not get debated on the legislative floor.

Kremer indicated Aiken's research and the committee's interim study will determine which water measures will be proposed to the Unicameral next year.

Aiken said his investigation of surface water issues will include the statutory authority of the department of Water Resources. Because many of the laws governing the department were drafted about 80 years ago, many probably need revisions, he said.

Next, Aiken said, he will study ground-water controls as they relate to the 1975 Ground-Water Control Act.

By January, the water specialist said, he will be ready to make recommendations on how natural resources districts' ground-water authority can be strengthened and clarified.

Aiken said a report on riparian water rights should be completed by February. Late that same month, he said, he hopes to present an overview on water rights issues. Among other things, the last report will discuss ground-water ownership, transbasin diversion, conjunctive management of ground-water and surface waters, storage of ground-water and municipal water rights.

Agriculture Director

Gov. Exon has appointed Roger Sandman Director of Agriculture, effective when Glenn Kreuscher, the current director, is officially installed as head of the Nebraska Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Sandman has been deputy chief of the Agriculture Department since 1971.

He was born and raised on a farm near Cambridge and was graduated from the University of Nebraska in 1965 with a bachelor of science degree in agricultural education.

He taught at Allen and Wood River for more than five years before his appointment as deputy director of agriculture.

Sandman has served on many state and national committees which deal with the advancement of agriculture and rural America.

Petition Filed

The first completed petition in a drive to repeal the 1977 state aid to education law, LB 33, was filed recently with the Secretary of State.

On the petition were the names of 20 Omaha residents.

Secretary of State Allen Beermann said the list would be sent back to the Douglas County clerk, who must validate the signatures.

Those who oppose this year's $20 million school aid increase have launched a campaign to force a referendum vote on the new law.

They have until Aug. 30 to file the required number of names but leaders of the drive said they hope to have it completed several weeks before that.

Commenting on the referendum effort, J. Paul McIntosh of Norfolk, president of the Nebraska State School Boards Association, said school boards should prepare two budgets — including the higher aid and the other computed without the extra state dollars.

In a prepared statement, McIntosh said, "Boards should adopt spending budgets according to their needs, but those needs will not change regardless of the amount of money they have coming from the state.

Two estimates of income should be prepared, McIntosh said, one based on the amount expected from the state if the petition drive to repeal LB 33 is successful and one based on the amount expected from the state if the petition effort fails.

"School districts will need to certify higher local property tax requirements if the petition drive succeeds because they will have to anticipate less money from the state," he said.

Our liberty depends on the freedom of the press, and that cannot be limited without being lost. — Thomas Jefferson, Letter, 1786.

Special prosecutor replies to Nader letter

In an earlier column, I reported former Watergate special prosecutor Leon Jaworski's strong objections to the proposed Consumer Protection Agency. Mr. Jaworski's letter was printed by the Washington Star, which prompted the rebuttal from Ralph Nader and his associate Mark Green, also in the Star. Rep. John Erlenborn (R-Ill.) send a copy of the Nader-Green article to Jaworski for his comments. His reply — which I have had to edit for reasons of space — follows:

Dear Mr. Erlenborn:

There is, I believe, a misconception inherent in the legislation and in the Nader-Green article that the interest of consumers differs somehow from the interest of all citizens, and that consumers, therefore, need a special representative in Washington.

It should be pointed out that there are many agencies whose express purpose is to deal with the specific problems of the average citizen.

More importantly, however, it is the function of every government entity to take into account, as the fundamental premise of its existence, the needs of all the people. Messrs. Nader and Green tell us that, "Farmers have Agriculture, Business has Commerce." They would, no doubt, argue that laborers have the Department of Labor. But these assertions are not true.

The Department of Agriculture makes agricultural decisions based on the needs of all citizens, not just farmers. The same is true of the Department of Commerce and the Department of Labor. It is true of every other government entity. And it is the job of the President and the Congress to make certain that all agencies act on behalf of all the people at all times.

My concern is that the Nader-Green view of government may lead to the creation of an agency that is not bound in any way to reflect the balanced judgment of the President and the Congress as the elected representatives of the people. The administrator of the consumer protection agency would be unaccountable to those whom we have chosen to assure that in every decision of government the voices of all the people are heard. Of course it is true, as Messrs. Nader and Green state, that the Attorney General is not an elected official. But he is directly accountable to the President, who is.

Not only would the agency be unaccountable, it would have the license to sue all other government agencies and to speak out as the officially-designated representative of every citizen of the United States.

The power to represent any person or group of persons, whether in court or from a podium, carries with it the authority of the persons represented. If we vest in a government official the power to represent the people at any time in any forum, have we not granted that official the full political authority of the people? Obviously we have. If this is not an extraordinary and potentially dangerous grant of authority, then I cannot imagine what is. Messrs. Nader and Green attempt to support their argument by asserting that the office of Watergate special prosecutor has "power, and the potential for political abuse." But their view of the power and potential for abuse reveals the flaw in their own argument and tells us why the consumer protection agency must ultimately be defeated.

The Watergate special prosecutor was vested with the legal authority to address a particular and extremely compelling national crisis. I have consistently advocated that it not be made a permanent position, and it was recently abolished because its job had been completed. If the carefully defined authority of the special prosecutor had the potential for political abuse, then the unbounded powers of the "consumer advocate" will have it to a far greater degree.

Furthermore, no national crisis mandate or justifies so radical a departure from our system of checks and balances. The government has flaws like every one of us. Its defects should be addressed and remedied by the President and the Congress. I know of few periods in our history when the institutions of government have undergone the scrutiny of the executive and legislative branches to the degree that they are now. This examination is timely, appropriate, and thoroughly consistent with the Constitution. There is no reason to abandon it and turn to an unprecedented, ill-conceived concept that simply adds more government. Sincerely, Leon Jaworski.

Farm and ranch numbers are leveling off

The decline in the number of farm and ranch units in Nebraska has leveled off at approximately 68,000 units according to figures taken from the Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service for the last three years.

The service has used the figure of 68,000 for 1975, 1976 and for a preliminary estimate for 1977. The decline in farm and ranch units in the state has been continuous since 1920 when there were approximately 130,000 units. There was some decline in numbers during the 1930's when drought and low prices brought a heavy run of mortgage foreclosures and by 1940 the figure was around 125,000 units.

Improved economic conditions in the decade between 1940 and 1950 were coupled with manpower shortages during the war years and a turn toward modern mechanization and tent themselves to farm consolidations and larger farm units. By 1950 the number of farm and ranch units were down to around 110,000. Mechanization and low farm commodity prices hastened consolidation in the 1950's and 1960's. Farmers and ranchers used new and improved equipment to increase their manpower efficiency. The choice was increase your holdings and survive or leave the farm and enter a rising and generally active job market. For some who left the farm, it was a choice and for others a necessity.

By 1960, the number of farm and ranch units in Nebraska had dropped below 100,000 and by 1970 was below 75,000. After such steep declines, the leveling off at 68,000 for the past three years is encouraging. The average size for 1977 is estimated at 706 acres, the same as the past two years, but up from 697 acres in 1974 and 687 acres in 1973. The 1977 estimate is 118 acres greater than the 588 acre average for 1965.

The current stress on the agricultural economy brought about by inflated production costs and break-even or below cost profit margins for both livestock and major crops and could produce a resumption in farm consolidations and further declines in farm and ranch unit numbers. The spiral of land prices has been phenomenal with the average price per acre going from $132 in 1967 to $407 in 1977, an increase of 308 per cent. Contrary to some popular misconceptions, buyers at the inflated prices have generally been farmers themselves and not corporate non-farm conglomerates or foreign investors.

There is some indication that the decline in the state's agricultural economy has slowed the land price climb. The average price per acre at $407 represented a 13 per cent increase over the $359 per acre figure used by the reporting service on Feb. 1. That rate of increase while substantial was the lowest since the 1971-72 period.

It is widely acknowledged that on an agricultural income production basis, many of the high prices paid for land in the state during the past two years cannot be justified. Buyers who did not have a large equity in existing land holdings to help finance additional land purchases are reported having trouble.

There is another reason why the number of farm and ranch units in the state seemingly has stabilized. Modern farming and ranching requires the very best of management and there is a physical limit to what a farm and ranch family can handle and do a top job, big equipment and modern farming techniques notwithstanding. — M.M. Van Kirk, Nebraska Farm Bureau.

OBSERVATIONS

Public interest sporadic

The Wayne County joint planning commission has adopted a comprehensive plan for the county, which will be recommended to the county commissioners and town boards to Winside, Carroll, Hoskins and Sholes.

Citizen-interest in the plan, frankly, has been minimal. Few county taxpayers showed up at a public hearing early this year to offer any comments on the plan. That perhaps, is understandable. The comprehensive plan is not regulatory in nature, so many people might not have thought it important enough to warrant their attention.

The planning commission, however, has repeatedly expressed its desire for citizen input in its task. The commission members, after all, are local people, your friends and neighbors, undertaking a difficult and probably thankless chore. They are interested in knowing what you think.

The commission is now engaged in the second phase of its job — formulating a zoning code for the county. The planning commission can only recommend a zoning code. The county commissioners will have the final say over what, if any, zoning regulations are adopted.

But zoning is a regulatory function of government, and Wayne County residents will be bound to follow whatever code the county eventually adopts. The commissioners can make changes in the code as recommended by the planning commission, the code can be amended after it goes into effect.

Without presuming to speak for the three county commissioners, however, we predict that much of what is recommended by the planning commission will be finally adopted. If this prediction proves correct, the work now being done by the commission should be of immediate interest to landowners in particular, and to county residents in general.

A decision has already been made on what is regarded by some as the key issue in the whole zoning process — the minimum number of acres required to build a home in rural Wayne County.

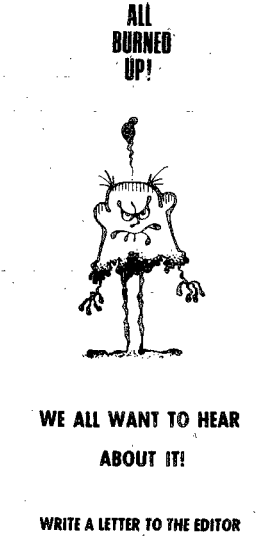

A number of interested parties including farmers, realtors and home builders attended one meeting to offer their opinions on the subject. Much of the testimony presented was in opposition of a large acreage requirement.

The commission at the following meeting voted to recommend a 23-acre minimum lot size. Those unhappy with the decision to say there is little use in attending meeting, concluding public opinion apparently has little effect on the decision making.

That, of course, is always possible in a representative type public body. But the final decision has not yet been made. A public hearing will be conducted before the planning commission decides what code it will recommend. Anyone interested in land use in Wayne County should keep abreast of developments as the planning commission continues its task, make an effort to talk to commission members, and decide what course of action they prefer regarding zoning. That personal recommendations, then, should be presented at the public hearing in a reasonable manner.

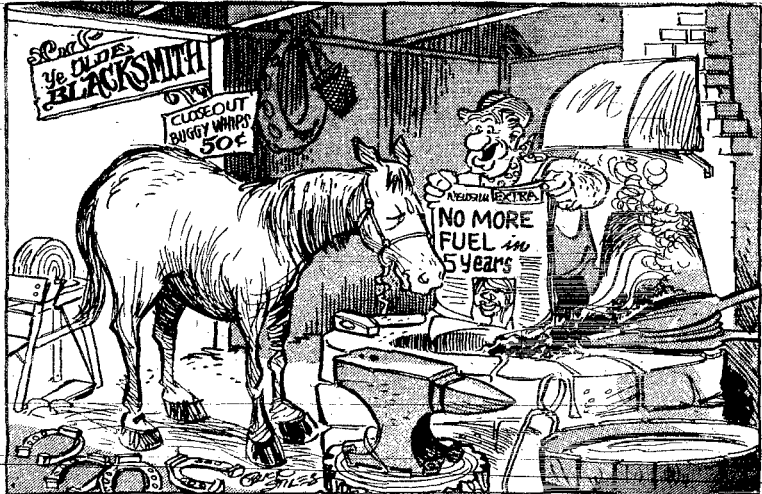

There is, of course, no promise that such action will bring about any amendments in the final recommended zoning code. But those who fail to speak up and make their opinions known before hand have little ground for complaint after the fact. — Jim Strayer.

Alfalfa Losses Total $395 Million

Losses to alfalfa growers in the United States total more than $395 million each year and losses from insects and nematodes are nearly as much.

Researchers at the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, University of Nebraska-Lincoln, are breeding alfalfa for better resistance. The story is in the summer 1977 issue of the Farm, Ranch and Home Quarterly, published by the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Other topics in the four-color magazine deal with "needing" beef to make it more tender; detecting herbicide carryover in soil; roadside marketing; geologic maps; various research projects in the Institute; teenagers having babies; pseudomonas virus; corn vs. grain sorghum production; storing moisture in nature's soil banks; and use of sulfur for better corn yields on sandy soils.

The publication is available free by writing: Quarterly Subscription, Agricultural Communications, University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Chiggers are the larvae or first stage of certain mites. The chigger attaches itself to folds of skin or edges of hair follicles. It secretes a fluid that digests the underlying tissue and portions of the skin. The chigger bite is not noticed until about three to 24 hours after it has attached.

Chiggers usually settle where clothing is constricted such as at the beltline or under socks. They may remain attached as long as three to six days, but scratching frequently removes them before they finish feeding.

To prevent chigger bites, use one of the commercial repellants before visiting infested areas (usually tall grass, thickets, or where soil is undisturbed) and bathe immediately after returning.

Infested lawns can be sprayed with diazinon or malathion to reduce the numbers developing there. Irritation resulting from the bite can be soothed temporarily by several creams or lotions on the market that are prepared for insect bites. Those that contain a local anesthetic, such as benzocaine, are more effective. If bites are scratched, use an antiseptic to prevent infection.

Blossom Drop

Blossom drop can be a problem on many vegetables in the garden. This means tomatoes, summer and winter squash, melons and cataloupe, peppers and many garden crops may have a lag in production.

During hot periods when the temperature gets much over 90 degrees, the pollen is not effective in fertilization. Fruit may start to develop and then fall off prematurely because it wasn't fertilized.

Very windy days or a program to control insects may also be cutting down on insect activity. This can reduce pollen transfer and fertilization of the flowers.

If your plants fail to set fruit you can purchase aerosol cans of materials that will increase blossom set.

Blossom End Rot

Blossom end rot can occur on peppers and tomatoes. The spots occur on the blossom end of the fruit and is dry, sunken, leathery or papery. It's brown or black in color.

Extreme changes in the weather, uneven soil moisture, and low calcium and phosphorus may make the problem worse.

But there are two ways to control it and lessen the chances of fruit rots spreading. Pick and destroy damaged fruit. Keep an even soil moisture content. Avoid cultivating beneath the plants, and don't over-fertilize plants with nitrogen.

In Spanish no word begins with an "s" followed by another consonant, and a Spanish speaker trying to pronounce Spanish in English will normally say "Espanish."

Cuba Could Become Farm Market

U.S. once the seventh largest U.S. farm market, could once again become a major importer of products from Nebraska and other farm states — if a couple of important factors fall into place.

This guardedly optimistic prediction comes from Dr. Everett Peterson, University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension economist, who says normalization of relations between the U.S. and Cuba and improvement in Cuba's foreign debt situation are necessary prerequisites to reopening Cuba-U.S. trade.

"With resumed trade, the United States might gain at least a third of Cuba's farm imports," Peterson said. In 1976, Cuba's food imports were valued at $760 million, within total imports of $3.5 billion, for a 150 per cent increase over such imports in 1972.

Considering the type of commodities Cuba is importing — wheat, rice, corn, flour, tanned milk, cotton and vegetable oil — the U.S. could gain at least two-thirds of this trade, the economist said.

However, he warned that while all these products rank as important U.S. exports and can be delivered to Cuba at highly competitive prices, Cuba has developed strong trade ties with other nations since the breakoff in trade relations with the U.S. in 1959. In addition to the USSR and eastern Europe, Canada and Argentina actively trade with Cuba.

Cuba's debts with other countries, especially Western nations, pose an ever greater potential problem, Peterson analyzed. These include a $4.6 billion debt with the USSR, which might hinder trade with the West, and also a more than $1 billion hard-currency debt with Western nations.

There also is the question of claims by the U.S. to $1.8 billion worth of property in Cuba, expropriated after the 1959 revolution, as well as Cuban claims to $60 million in assets frozen in the United States," he pointed out.

Assuming these obstacles could be overcome, Cuba's potential as an importer for various commodities stacks up this way:

—Wheat: Cuban wheat and flour imports are expected to hold at current levels of about 900,000 metric tons a year. Canada now has the largest share of this market, which could complicate U.S. re-entry, but the United States would be competitive given its freight advantage and ability to offer the same quality wheat as Canada.

—Rice: These imports total 250,000-300,000 tons annually, helping keep Cuban per capita rice consumption the highest in Latin America. The Chinese and Soviets have been supplying much of this rice in recent years, but U.S. long-grain varieties have been preferred in the past.

—Coarse grains: These imports, which consist mainly of corn, have reached an annual level of more than 300,000 tons, with the bulk of them coming from Argentina. The U.S. freight advantage should make U.S. corn highly competitive in this market.

—Dry edible beans: As a one-time major supplier of dry beans to Cuba, the United States is believed capable of selling 20,000-80,000 tons there today.

—Vegetable oils: These imports, estimated at about 65,000 tons annually, now consist mainly of USSR sunflower oil. They could be replaced by U.S. vegetable oils.

—Cotton: The United States is believed capable of obtaining a sizable share of this market, which is estimated at 100,000 bales annually.

—Other products: U.S. exports to Cuba of lard, cured pork, cheese, butter and processed milk averaged about $14.2 million a year in 1955-59 — a trade that has been taken over by Canada and other supplies. In addition to the possibility of resuming sales of these products, Cuba may offer a new market for breeding cattle, poultry breeding stock and hatching eggs.

Until 1959, the United States was Cuba's largest trading partner, accounting for about 65 per cent of the country's total trade turnover. With a population of nearly 70 million and an average per capita income of $820, Cuba needs agricultural trade.

Whether some of this will shift to the United States — with the attendant advantage to Cuba of earning hard currencies — depends on Cuba's willingness to comply with provisions of Title IV of the 1974 U.S. Trade Act.

This would include entry into a bilateral trade agreement and assurances on free emigration, both subject to Congressional approval. Without such agreement, most-favored-nation tariff status, as well as Eximbank (Export-Import Bank of Washington) and Commodity Credit Corporation credits, would continue to be denied Cuba.

Cuba's main interest in the U.S. farm market would be to resume sugar shipments, which in the 1950's earned about $335 million a year in the United States alone. However, current political concern over Cuban sugar imports without equivalent concessions precludes any immediate imports. Also Cuba's interest in the U.S. market may not be strong right now, given the low world price of sugar and Cuba's agreement to supply some 3.5 million tons this year to the USSR at a fixed price equivalent to around 66 U.S. cents per kilogram — more than double the current price.

Ram Sale Set

The oldest continuous purebred ram sale in the United States will occur for the 41st time in Lincoln Aug. 6 at the Nebraska State Fairgrounds.

The "Top of the Flock" sheep show and sale, sponsored by the Nebraska Sheep Breeders Association, will start at 9 a.m. at the fairground's 4-H arena, said Dr. Ted Doane, extension sheep specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

He said 60 rams and 40 ewes have been consigned for the show, which will culminate with the selection of the sweepstakes ram about 1:30 p.m. Any established breeder who registers 10 sheep annually with any breed association and maintains quality in his herds is eligible to sell at the show, he noted.

Doane said the show will be judged by Dr. Bob Noble of Oklahoma State University in Stillwater, while the 1 p.m. sale will be conducted by Dick Kane, an auctioneer from Wisner.

Sheep are divided into ram, ram lamb and ewe classes for the show, with a breed champion chosen in each class. The sweepstakes ram last year was consigned by William Hansen of Hansen Suffolk in Minden, and was purchased for $560 by Mrs. Betty J. Wiltz of Maryville, Mo. As part of the event, Doane said, the Nebraska Registered Sheep Breeders will buy a wool blanket which will be given to the winner of the feature horse race that afternoon at the fairgrounds.

On Aug. 5, a banquet will be held at 7 p.m. at the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education, 33rd and Holdrege Streets, to kick off Nebraska's involvement in the American Sheep Producers Council's (ASPC) Blueprint for Expansion plan, he said. The plan calls for doubling the nation's lamb production and increasing wool production by 50 per cent within 10 years.

Featured speaker will be Dwight Holaway of Pipestone, Minn., ASPC coordinator of the plan.

Study Outlines Drought Impact

The impact of the recent three-year drought is reflected in a new survey entitled, "Groundwater Levels in Nebraska, 1976," which reports that average water levels for fall 1976 were lower than those for fall 1975 in 91 of Nebraska's 93 counties.

Published by the Conservation and Survey Division of the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, the new report states that groundwater declines for 1976 averaged less than one foot in 49 counties and more than one foot in 42 counties. In two counties, the average water level rose less than one foot.

The greatest declines, according to the report, occurred in Chase, Fillmore and Perkins counties where the average water level change was more than three feet. Even though water-level declines were recorded in two previous years, the average water-level declines were greater in 54 counties between fall 1975 and fall 1976 than those of a comparable period a year earlier.

Six areas where large-scale use of groundwater for irrigation caused significant water-level declines are highlighted in the report. These areas are the Big Blue River basin, Platte River valley, Mira Valley, O'Neill area, Imperial area, and the Alliance area. Two other areas — the Tri-County and the Farewell areas — are treated individually because of significant water level rises related to the infiltration of surface water diverted for irrigation. All eight of these areas are lifted up for special attention in the report.

During 1976, installation of irrigation wells continued at an accelerated rate in Nebraska, as 4,398 irrigation wells were registered, bringing the state's total to 44,078. An estimated six million acre-feet of groundwater was pumped during 1976 to water more than 80 per cent of the approximately six million acres of irrigated land in Nebraska. This amount of groundwater is many times more than the total amount pumped for domestic, livestock, municipal and industrial use in the state.

New wells were registered in all the state's 93 counties except Arthur, Cass, Grant and Pawnee. More than 100 wells were drilled in each of 14 counties: Holt, 190; Antelope, 144; Hall, 128; Lincoln, 122;

Dodge, 122; Fillmore, 119; Pierce, 115; York, 114; Adams, 114; Custer, 113; Buffalo, 108; Merrick, 105; and Platte, 102.

Groundwater levels during 1976 were affected markedly by the dry conditions throughout the state. All eight National Weather Service divisions reported that precipitation from May 1 to the end of 1976 was significantly below normal. This in turn led to less water re-charge to aquifers and to greater water use for irrigation.

The 104-page report was prepared by Michael J. Ellis of the U.S. Geological Survey and Darryll T. Pederson of the Conservation and Survey Division, IANR, UN-L. Included in the report are hydrographs and well data for 46 recorder wells located in 42 counties. Copies of the report (Nebraska Water Survey Paper 44) are available at $2 each plus sales tax from the Conservation and Survey Division, 113 Nebraska Hall, City Campus, University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Oats Can Be Used in Beef Rations

Oats have long been regarded as good feed for growing cattle and for starting cattle on full feed, but there has been a tendency to remove oats from high concentrate rations, district beef specialist Vernon Krause said.

The high fiber content of oats in addition to price relative to its feeding value has often been the reason for less oats in a ration, he continued adding that oats prices now are very competitive with other grains sources and ration costs could be reduced by including oats.

Feeding oats and still getting optimum gains requires some changes in our understanding of roughages and concentrates. Oats have 20 per cent roughage, about the same as ear corn, according to the specialist. Most feeders would like to feed about 15 per cent roughage so oats and ear corn should have another grain like shelled corn or wheat added to lower the ration's roughage level.

Oats are a very good protein source, Krause pointed out saying 13.2 per cent, so less supplemental protein would be needed. Oats also are a good source of phosphorus. A mixture of 20-25 per cent corn grain and 75-80 oats will supply enough energy, protein, phosphorus, and roughage for finishing steers. Calcium is low, however, so an economical source like limestone should be fed at .15 pound per head per day. Other nutrients like trace minerals and Vitamin A can be added as safety factors in addition to other feed additives.

Oats can also be used in growing rations. In corn silage-oats rations, a 50-50 mix with 15 pound of limestone per head per day should result in a ration ideally suited for growing 500 pound calves, Krause said. If alfalfa is used in the growing program, more oats should be used. About 60 per cent oats and 40 per cent alfalfa hay will supply all the nutrient needs of growing calves.

Some processing seems to be beneficial for good oats utilization. A medium grind or roll is preferable and more desirable than finely ground oats.

"All things considered, use of oats depends upon its price relative to other grains. A good rule to follow in determining whether to use oats is the price per bushel should be one-half or less the price of corn," Krause said.

An employe of Roy Hurd Ford-Mercury Inc. was in the right place Thursday night to win the $25 consolation award in the weekly Birthday Bucks promotion.

Twenty-nine-year old Larry Fous of Wayne was at his place of work when the winning date of July 11, 1948 was announced. Although his birth date of May 3 didn't match the winning date, it was close enough to win him the consolation award.

Larry Hintz, manager of Gambles Store in Wayne, drew the lucky date. Had both dates been the same, Fous would have won the $250 grand prize.

Again tonight (Thursday) at 8:15 another drawing will be held and another winner will be named.

Birthday Bucks can be spent just like cash in participating stores.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) has announced revised regulations for cooperative marketing associations participating in Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) Price Support Programs.

On April 12 CCC published a proposed rule revising the eligibility requirements which such associations must meet to be eligible to participate in authorized price support programs on behalf of their members. CCC gave interested persons 45 days to submit comments concerning the proposed revision.

The revised regulations require that in order to be eligible for CCC price support program participation the cooperative must be owned and controlled by its active producer members and any bona fide cooperative members. The board of directors must be active members of the cooperative and directors must have been nominated and elected by active members. (An active member is one who has done business with the cooperatives within the preceding three crop years or such shorter period as required by the cooperative).

Some other requirements for eligibility are:

The cooperative must hold an annual meeting of members or delegates who are to be provided written notice of the scheduled meeting.

The cooperative must admit to membership every applicant who applies for admission for the purpose of participating in the activities of the cooperative, and is eligible for membership under the statute incorporating the cooperative, except when the applicant's admission would prejudice the interest of the cooperative.

A cooperative must furnish evidence that it is financially able to make advances to its members and to market their commodity.

If price support is sought for a particular crop of a commodity, not less than 80 per cent of such crop of the commodity that is acquired by or delivered to the cooperative for marketing must be produced by its members or by members of its member cooperatives.

If price support is obtained from CCC on any part of the commodity in a pool, the proceeds must be distributed only to members participating in such pool. Proceeds from an eligible pool, on which price support has been obtained, must be combined with proceeds from ineligible pools for distribution and final settlement.

If price support is obtained from CCC the cooperative must maintain records of acquisitions and dispositions of commodities; the records should enable CCC to determine that the quantity of the commodity on which price support is obtained is not in excess of the quantity acquired from eligible members.

A cooperative seeking price support on any authorized 1977 and succeeding crop of a commodity must submit an application for a determination of eligibility to the director of grains, oilseeds and cotton division, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, USDA, P.O. Box 2415, Washington, D.C. 20013. An eligibility application form and related questionnaire and a copy of the revised regulations may be obtained from the division director.

Income Information Vital When Applying for SSI

It's very important that people tell Social Security representatives how much cash they have in checking or savings accounts when they apply for supplemental security income (SSI) payments, according to Dale Branch, social security district manager in Norfolk.

"Many people have been found ineligible for SSI checks because of money in their checking or savings accounts and have had to pay back the SSI payments they received," Branch said.

The SSI program, administered by the Social Security Administration, makes monthly payments to people with little or no income and limited resources who are 65 or over or blind or disabled. To be eligible, people generally can have resources of $1,500 or less for one person, and $2,250 for a couple, including cash in checking or savings accounts.

Failure to report resources in checking or savings accounts is one of the most common causes of SSI payment error, according to Branch.

"If we don't know about people's resources over the limit," he said, "we may incorrectly find them eligible for SSI checks. Later, when we learn of cash over the limit in their accounts, they have to pay back the SSI payments, which can be a problem."

"Social security wants to spare people that problem," Branch said. "But we can only do that if we know what resources they have, including cash in checking or savings accounts," he said.

Social security can verify whether or not people who apply for SSI payments have cash in checking or savings accounts, according to Branch. "People who deliberately lie about their circumstances to get SSI payments can be prosecuted for fraud," he said.

People can get information about applying for SSI payments by calling or writing any social security office. "When applying," Branch said, "it's a good idea to bring checking and savings account books along — also as many as possible of the following: stocks and bonds, life insurance policies, automobile registration cards, last year's income tax return, W-2 forms, and evidence of all other income. These can also affect eligibility for SSI payments."

People getting SSI payments must promptly report changes in their income, resources, and living arrangements to social security.

Barbara Winter will be at the Wayne Senior Citizens Center Tuesday from 9 a.m. until noon to answer questions about social security.

Wayne Student Receives Honors

A Wayne native in May received the top award possible for an American student in Russian studies.

Kenneth deNesie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Denesia, of Wayne, received the Russian Institute Certificate from Columbia University. He was one of 11 students to graduate from the institute.

Zbigniew Brzezinski, President Carter's chief advisor on Russian affairs, is a past director of the institute, now headed by Marshal Sulman, an advisor to Secretary of State Vance.

DeNesie in the summer of 1976 was dean of American students studying at the Puskin Institute at Moscow University, Leningrad State University, and in Kiev. He was responsible for the Americans in the group and dealt with the Soviet Union foreign Ministry.

In the summer of 1975, deNesie worked as a program advisor for the American Institute of Foreign Study at Moscow University and Leningrad State University, where he had studied the previous year.

A Wayne High and Wayne State College graduate, deNesie, received his masters degree in economics at Long Island University graduate school of economics. He will continue to pursue a doctorate degree in economics this fall while teaching full time in the social science department at the New Jersey Institute of Technology.
