'McGee Is Underrated As Solid Team Player'

Mike McGee an underrated player? That's the assessment of Arlington coach Bob Kremke who takes McGee and 11 other high school seniors to Wayne State College today (Thursday) for a week's preparation for the All-Star basketball games.

"I've seen him play, of course," Kremke said of McGee, "and I think he is underrated as a team player." That may be because he scored 38.1 points per game as a senior at Omaha North. Or because he was named athlete-of-the-year in the metropolitan press. "He certainly draws a lot of attention on the court," Kremke said. "But he hits the open man well. I think he's a good team player."

McGee has also drawn the attention of Aurora coach Bill Holliday who, as the South head coach, must figure a way to stop McGee and the North. Holliday, whose team also begins workouts today at Kearney State College, is willing to give the edge to the North. "I hope it is the kiss of death," he said while noting that the favored team has always been beaten in eight previous years of All-Star Basketball.

Holliday concedes that name recognition is a North advantage. "They have the bigger name shooters. And that's where the names come from."

But he doesn't feel the South has to feel inferior. "We've got good players. The South has the boys who are best in their area — team leaders, standouts that can do everything. They're not known, but they're good basketball players."

Both Holliday and Kremke agree that 1977 is the year of the premiere shooter. Both teams have several excellent outside shooters that could put the four-year scoring record of 27 points by an individual in danger.

Kremke said the North will not run a pattern-type offense. "Don't look at what I run at Arlington," he warned. "We're going to try and run some kind of a motion offense — a passing or cutting offense."

That fits with Kremke's philosophy that all-star games are for the kids and not the coaches. "We anticipate the South will be psyched to beat the North, primarily because of the name recognition factor."

Kremke said his major worry is defense. Game rules dictate a man-to-man defense. And, while Holliday is anticipating McGee, Kremke had his eye on the South's Jim Gregory of Omaha Burke. "He poses a problem," Kremke said. "He's a pure outside shooter and has great range. Nobody has stopped him."

The South also has the tallest player in the game in Jim Honz of Omaha Bishop Ryan. If gives the South a solid inside-outside punch, according to Kremke.

Holliday figures the game could key on fouls. "They could really hurt us," he said. "It's hard to say if someone gets in foul trouble if the other kids will pick up the slack."

Both the South of North will scrimmage outside competition on Sunday and Tuesday evenings. On Monday afternoon each camp will conduct a mini-camp for area boys entering grades 6-9 this fall.

The North opened the South in last year's all-star double-header and leads the series six games to three. The two teams will meet Aug. 4 at Mid-Plains College in North Platte and on Aug. 5 at the University of Nebraska Sports Center in Lincoln.

Omaha, G.I. Players Sweep Wayne Meet

Young tennis players from Omaha and Grand Island netted a pair of trophies Sunday by winning their events in the Wayne Junior Open at Wayne State College.

Over 140 entries competed in the two-day tournament which saw eight of the 1 top seeds win their respective divisions. Conant, and fellow Omaha See OMAHA, page 5

'The Guy Upstairs Really Helped Us'

Juniors Turn Near-Disasters into 'Great Plays'

With the three plays we made, we must have had the guy upstairs helping us," smited coach Hank Overin after this American Legion Juniors knocked off Emerson in the finals of the District 3 tournament Sunday night at Coleridge.

Overin was referring to the game-saving defensive plays in the first and seventh frames which salvaged the 7-6 championship win and opened the door for the underdog Juniors to compete in the area tournament tonight (Thursday) in Wayne.

Third baseman Al Nissen came up with a headsup double play in the opening frame and shortstop Vic Sharpe got in on two crucial plays in the last inning.

With two on base, Emerson catcher Steve Bell hit a charging grounder off Nissen's chest. Nissen picked the ball up, tagged third for the force out, then fired the ball to first.

In the seventh, Sharpe nearly ruffed a high-fly when the ball bounced out of his glove. Luckily, he kept an eye on the ball as he dove to the ground and caught it with his bare hand for the first out. The final out came when another hard-hit Emerson shot caromed off Sharpe and headed towards second base when Wayne's John Keating tagged the base for a force out.

With the exception of the sixrun third inning, Overin was happy with the pitching of his club. Doug Carroll, who started on the mound, gave up the reins to Sharpe for two and a third frames before he returned to the mound.

Carroll, who gave up three hits in the first two frames, watched Emerson chip away at Wayne's 4-0 lead with three hits, two passed balls and two errors for a sin-run outburst. Sharpe, who blasted a home run and chalked up the mound win over Laurel in the first district meet-came in to retire the side. Two things which helped Wayne in the tournament were bench strength and pressure on the opposing teams. Overin added, "In prior games, the Juniors have had a tough time fielding enough players. But for the tournament finals, Wayne had enough players to help fill the bench and force those playing to play better or be replaced.

As far as pressure goes, Overin noted that "with our record, we had nothing to lose. There was more pressure on the teams playing us."

That pressure, mounted in the second inning when the locals scored four runs off three hits and two Emerson errors to take a 4-0 command. With one out, Al Nissen lined up second base to score Steve Bodenstedt and Mark Brandt for a 2-0 command. Catcher Kevin Murray singled to shallow left field to push home Dan Ahlvers before a fielder's choice by Sharpe scored Nissen.

In the bottom of the third, Wayne again took control on the RBI singles by Bodenstedt, Nissen and Keating for the final score. Nissen led the parade of Wayne hitters with a double and single in two at bats while Murray and Carroll had two hits each in four times at the plate.

Against Laurel Saturday night, the locals staged their biggest upset of the season by knocking off Bob Weisenberg's See JUNIORS, page 5

JUST IN case the throw is low, Wayne center fielder Jeff Zeiss ducks his head as Laurel pitcher Paul Guern overthrows first baseman Brad Saunders. Zeiss started the Midgets off to another good inning, helping the locals score three runs in the second frame for a comfortable 9-0 lead.

G.I. Willoughby will be leaving the middle of next month for Missouri Southern State College in Joplin where she will continue as head coach for women's basketball as well as direct tennis.

Miss Willoughby, who also taught physical education at WS, has led her basketball teams to three state championships, a Central States Intercollegiate Conference title and participated six years in the regional AIAW tournaments.

Most recently she has had an article published in the NAGWS Basketball-Volleyball Guide for 1977-79 entitled, "Preparing to Coach Your First Game."

A native of South Sioux City, Miss Willoughby graduated from Wayne State in 1964. After three years of teaching high school in Colorado and one in New York, she started at Wayne State in 1970 she received her master's degree from University of Northern Colorado at Greeley.

Wayne Runners Capture Firsts

Wayne runners scooped up all the first place finishes in the second "Fun-Run" race Sunday, sponsored by Wayne Track Club.

Jeff Backstrom won the 600 with a time of 1:38. Dave Hamm was uncontested in the mile at 5:54 and Don Rinehart ran a 22:29 four mile.

Threatening skies and high humidity hampered a good turnout. Rinehart pointed out. Only eight runners competed.

Next event on tap for WTC will be the Omaha Marathon, a grueling 26-mile grind on Sunday, Aug. 7. Besides Rinehart, others already signed up are Andy Myrtle and Larry Bockelman.

On Aug. 14 the club will travel to Norfolk for the annual six-mile road race and on Aug. 21 the Wayne club will hold another fun run, beginning at 7 p.m. For more information call Rinehart at 375-9984.

Results Sunday: 600—Backstrom, 1:38; Ed Burnett, 1:38.5; Chip Hagerman, 1:42; Hamm, 1:42.9. Mile—Hamm, 5:54. Four mile—Rinehart, 22:29; Bockelman, 23:03; Kurt Lancaster, 23:28; Kevin Rowan, 23:54.

club, 3-2, on the hitting of Sharpe and the game-saving play by first baseman Tim Koll. With third baseman Doug Thompson on third base in eighth frame, Laurel was in position to tie the match and send the contest into more extra frames. With two away right fielder Mike Dalton blasted a shot to Koll, who knocked the ball down, then fired it home where Murray tagged out Thompson to end the game.
Laurel took the lead 1-0 in the first frame on a solo home run by shortstop Brian Johnson. Wayne went in front 2-1 on Sharpe's two-run circuit hit in the top of the seventh but had to go an extra frame when Johnson came up with a base hit to score Don Dalton from third.

Errors Halt Laurel's Bid In Loop Play

"It was just a case of too many errors," explained player-coach Jerry Schroeder about Laurel's 9-7 loss Monday night to league-leading Crofton. Laurel was charged with six miscues, spilling a 13-hit attack off Crofton's Rod Hegge. Laurel tried to overcome Crofton's sizeable lead with a pair of runs in the sixth, seventh and eighth frames, including a two-run circuit hit by George Schroeder in the eighth. The winners took a 5-1 command in the third on a three-run homer by Randy Phillips.
The loss to the Tri-County leaders halted Laurel's chances of repeating as season champs with only one game remaining prior to the start of post-season playoffs Sunday. "The only thing we have to look forward to is the playoffs," Schroeder noted as his club prepares to face Wausa at home.
In on the latest confrontation, Laurel downed Wausa, 8-7, Sunday night. The area club scored five runs in the bottom of the ninth to pull out its 11th win. A two-run single by George Schroeder and a two-run double by Nick Danze tied the match at seven apiece. Winning pitcher Ken Benson, who relieve starter Brad Erwin in the fifth, drove THERE'S GOING to be a big shakeup in the coaching ranks at Wayne State a lot sooner than some people might think. Already women's basketball and softball coach G. Willoughby has handed in his resignation and soon will be packing her bags for Missouri Southern in Joplin, Mo.

Two other coaches have confirmed that they will be leaving before fall classes start, but declined to make the moves official until they formally resign.

CHECKING over Wayne High's basketball schedule for 1977-78 season, the Blue Devils have added West Point, Lyons, Elkhorn High and Class C toughie Walthill to their 15-game, two-tournament roster. The baseball calendar also will show a marked change since Homer and Hooper-Logan View dropped the sport from their spring lineup. Since both those Class C schools chose to let the diamond sport fall by the wayside, some people are questioning if high school baseball will remain at Laurel and Wakefield.

ANOTHER team headed for nationals? That's what former Wayne High player Monte Lowe predicts for his Mount Marty basketball quint in 1978.

Lowe, who played the guard spot on last year's 23-9 club, carried a six-point average on the Mount '5' who went to the nationals last year. According to the 6-2 Wayne product, the entire squad plus some tall talent from California and New York state will be making up this year's crew and should provide the green light for a trip to the NIAA nationals.

HOMER AND Wakefield are the only teams which have berths locked up in the upcoming Northeast Nebraska Baseball League playoffs. The other two positions could involve as many as three clubs if cards fall right for Allen-Martinsburg.
According to league secretary Merlin "Lefty" Olson, an Allen win over Pender-Bancroft in a makeup game tentatively scheduled for tonight (Thursday), would throw the race for third and fourth into a three-way logjam. An Allen victory means the area club would hold a 7-7 record — same as Pender and Newcastle. To settle that problem, Lefty is proposing a playoff Friday in order to get the post season playoffs off the ground.
Because of lack of time, Lefty pointed out that the Dakota City-Pender and

Thought for Today

"Habit is a cable; we weave a thread of it each day and at least we cannot break it."
Horace Mann
We are truly creatures of habit. Think a moment of your actions from the moment you awaken in the morning. The routine, for most people, is pure habit. . . things we have done in the same way for years. Changes, when necessary, can be almost painful.
Fortunately, habits can be good as well as bad. We should consciously try to build good habits. . . better posture, worthwhile reading, courtesy to others. . . which are also hard to break once firmly established.
Prudent people may prefer to specify the details of their own memorial service. This relieves loved-ones of the need for making painful decisions while under emotional stress. Ask for full facts.

Medical malpractice law ruled constitutional by state high court

CAPITOL NEWS
LINCOLN — The Nebraska Supreme Court has ruled constitutional the state's controversial medical malpractice law.

The legislation, the most hotly debated issue in the 1976 Unicameral, was upheld by three of the seven judges. The other four dissented for various reasons.

But in Nebraska, the Constitution provides that no state law can be ruled invalid unless five of the court's justices agree.

The long-awaited decision came in connection with an appeal from Lancaster County district court which had directed former State Insurance Director E. Benjamin Nelson to implement the law, but stayed the order while the case was being appealed to the Supreme Court.

Nelson, believing the statute might be constitutionally flawed, had refused to put it into effect.

The State Justice Department, which argued the case for Nelson, said the act violated state and federal constitutional guarantees of free access to the courts because it requires that malpractice claims must first be filed with the review panel.

Other Justice Department contentions were that provisions limiting the liability of health care providers and the amount an injured patient could recover were also unconstitutional.

But the high court said the review panel, which calls for use of a special procedure before resorting to the courts was reasonable.

If the review group decided a person had no basis for a claim, he could still have access to the courts "for a vindication of what he thinks his rights may be," the court said.

It added, "New devices may be used to adapt the ancient institution (the Constitution) to present needs and to make of it an efficient instrument in the administration of justice."

Also rejected were arguments that a review panel's recommendation might unduly influence a jury and that the $500,000 ceiling on judgments amounts to a special privilege for health providers and an undue restriction on the patient.

The opinion, written by Justice Harry Spencer, said it must be remembered the Nebraska procedure is an elective one which guarantees a claimant an assured fund of $500,000 for the payment of any malpractice claim he may have. The law provides a patient's only remedy against a qualified health care provider is under the act, unless the patient has chosen not to come under the law's provisions.

One of the dissenting judges, C. Thomas White, said, "Such an election provision ignores the inequality of bargaining power. The very nature of a person's status as a patient places him in a position which makes effective bargaining difficult."

Justice Leslie Bostlaugh said the sections dealing with an election by a claimant are "unrealistic and illusory."

The ruling was lauded by Dr. Warren Bosley, who was president of the Nebraska Medical Association during the malpractice battle in the legislature.

"The law, he said, 'will make it possible for physicians in Nebraska to do their work with a little less tension.' He added the law will be "very workable."

Abstracts Accepted
 The State Board of Equalization has agreed to accept county abstracts of property valuations. The 3-2 vote came after State Tax Commissioner William E. Peters said counties are seeking to raise their valuations in an "equitable way."

Secretary of State Allen Beermann and State Treasurer Frank Marsh voted against acceptance. Beermann said it was "incalculable" to assess railroads at 35 per cent of value and let the counties off with less. But Peters said the two were completely different and should not be compared.

Even though they voted against the majority, Beermann and Marsh agreed little could be done about the problem at this time because of lack of time and information.

A 1977 law mandates counties to revalue property during the coming year. If they don't they will be penalized by loss of a portion of their money from the State Property Tax Relief Fund. The penalty the first year of noncompliance would be 10 per cent, and this would be increased in subsequent years unless the counties satisfied the requirements of the law.

Peters told the board that just about all of the counties are trying to comply with legislative directives. He said several backed off from putting into effect their reappraised real property values so their valuations would be "close conformity" with those in neighboring counties.

The tax commissioner said counties are assessing property at an average of 19.41 per cent of actual value, even though the law requires 35 per cent. Serving on the Equalization Board with Beermann and Marsh are Gov. J. James Exon, State Auditor Ray Johnson and Peters.

Farm Bill
 Gov. Exon has urged the state's congressional delegation to support the Senate version of the farm bill as "the least of two evils."

In telegrams to members of the delegation, the governor said the Senate measure provides higher price supports for crops.

He recalled that he advised President Carter on March 29 about the serious financial problems of Midwest farmers. However, he added, "The President appears adamant in opposition to any significant increase in support levels for 1977 and previous years' crops."

That attitude is "a mistake," Exon said.

He said the House, at a minimum, should adopt amendments that would prevent Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland from "offering farmers the new farm bill with its unsatisfactory support levels as the only alternative to a 'take-it-or-leave-it' policy or production reductions for the next crop year without additional consideration to the farmers."

Crawford Resignation
 Jacqueline Crawford plans to resign no later than Sept. 1 as superintendent of the Nebraska Center for Women at York.

State Corrections Directors Joseph Vittek said he has known for some time she wanted to accomplish some different things in correctional work.

Vittek said it has been no secret to him for the past 18 months that colleagues in correctional work have been trying to recruit her.

Ms. Crawford submitted her resignation early to permit an "orderly transition stage," according to Vittek.

He said a nationwide search for a successor would begin. If a replacement cannot be found by Sept. 1, Lucille Splinter will probably be named acting superintendent, Vittek said. Mrs. Splinter is the assistant superintendent.

Sender replies on LB 33

By Sen. Donald Dvorak

Dear Editor:

In reference to the July 14 letter under the column "Another Point of View" on the subject of the referendum petition drive to put LB 33 on the ballot, I would like to make the following comments.

The writer is guilty, like many other Nebraskans, in focusing only what he will receive from the LB 33 pot and forgetting all about what he has to put in.

Gov. Exon said LB 33 was the reason that sales tax was raised from 3 to 3 1/2 per cent. He also said that if the petition drive was successful, he would recommend to the Board of Equalization that the sales tax be reduced back to 3 per cent. LB 33 will increase state spending for schools by $20 million, but the 1/2 per cent sales tax will raise approximately $34 million.

Nebraskans will be spending $3.40 to get $2 back or $1.70 to get $1 in return. This is assuming that they are sharing equally in the $20 million pot. The $20 million is divided into two relatively equal parts. One part is foundation based on an equal per pupil distribution across the state. The other part is equalization based on a school district assessed evaluation.

The part of the formula that is unfair to most out-state areas is the equalization part. Wayne County will receive an average of $207.05 per pupil. The state average is $240 per pupil. Omaha receives $259.50 per pupil including generous payments for busing students in Omaha, and Bellevue gets a whopping $386.93 per student.

The sad part is that at the end of the third year, if the bill is fully funded to the tune of $60 million, the gap widens. In my opinion, assessed valuation is a poor index of wealth. The 1972 medium family income in Wayne County was $6,741 while Garpey County enjoyed $10,999 medium family income.

Another disadvantage of the present formula is that any new reappraisal could result in greater losses for the county with gain, higher values. The counties that gain in these instances are those counties that are lagging behind in keeping their appraisals current.

I have much concern as to the amount of money being spent in Nebraska on education. Operational costs in the public schools in Nebraska have increased in 1966-67 from $144,994,610 to $379,557,848 in 1975-76. In the same time our public school enrollment has decreased from 323,774 students to 315,573 students. Our elementary school enrollment in the last two years has decreased approximately 8,000 students yet we have 207 more teachers in the elementary program today than we had two years ago.

I cannot believe that the answers to excessive costs is increased state spending. It appears to me that Nebraskans bought this argument when they voted in the sales and income tax. I do not see great amounts of property tax relief today but am very much aware that our state general fund expenditures raised by the sales and income tax has swelled to a half billion dollars a year.

In response to my personal finances, and I can speak for only myself and not the other two individuals who were also attacked, all elected officials, even school board members, are required to make a financial disclosure as required by the recently enacted Sunshine Law. I have already complied with this requirement to the best of my ability.

I have worked hard and the Lord has been good to me and I probably had more than my share of breaks. I have, however, learned that one can't gain much by spending $1.70 to get less than $1 back.

State conservation efforts criticized

Failure of state and local agencies in Nebraska, and generally throughout the nation, to take responsibility for sound conservation of land and water and other natural resources is an invitation to the federal government to move into the field with all the powers and ills of federal bungling and bureaucracy.

Some of the ridiculous regulations and arbitrary decisions of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the Office of Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) in recent years with their frustrating and expensive red tape give clues to what can be in store if the federal government is injected into the land use and, yet, one can find many field examples across Nebraska where local agencies and local people ignore and condone flagrant abuses of basis land and soil and water conservation practices.

In agriculture, farmers in too many instances have abandoned the practices of contour farming, strip cropping and terracing that their fathers learned as a matter of hard necessity. They have been tearing out the shelter belts for the convenience of center pivot systems and putting the plow and chisel to sandy soils that should never be cropped.

Around major cities, leap-frog land developments create a hodge-podge of housing ventures for people who want to experience "country living" and take advantage of lower taxes, yet expect all the services they had in urban living, police and fire protection and educational benefits for their children. Developers build and sell houses on flood plains and adjacent to lakes and rivers and the buyers, when floods and disaster come, clamor for public agencies to throw up dikes and dams and reimburse them for their losses.

In the last 10 years, an affluent society has gone into some of Nebraska's most picturesque scenic areas to bulldoze trails to the top of peaks and pinnacles where they erect mansions for no other reason than to command a panoramic view. The resultant erosion and pollution that is sure to come from such developments can never be fully repaired. Wasteful though such developments are of energy, resources and environment, they continue to be permitted.

Despite general agreement that Nebraska's vast underground water resources are being dangerously depleted in some areas of slow recharge, there is fierce resistance whenever state legislation is proposed to limit irrigation development in those areas, and to arrive at some sort of reasonable system of underground water rights. The chairman of the Nebraska Legislature's Public Works Committee who has promised introduction of a comprehensive water conservation and regulation bill in the next session, this spring warned landowners that time is running out and they must face up to reality. In recent years, public hearings on the subject have too frequently run into unreasoning resistance.

The present accumulation of agricultural surpluses is good evidence that from both a short-range and long-range viewpoint, there is no necessity to ignore sound soil and water conservation practices and to put lands into crop production for which they are unsuited. Regulation and control can best be accomplished at local and state levels. The alternative to failure to act at those levels is for the heavy hand of the federal government to move in to attempt to do the job.

— M.M. VanKirk, Nebraska Farm Bureau.

OBSERVATIONS

Shouldering the blame

M.M. VanKirk's comments elsewhere on this page are worthy of note by Nebraskans, for a couple of reasons.

He writes about the injection of the federal government into land use planning and the amount of red tape generated. At the same time, he points out that federal action has been prompted in part by the failure in many instances of state and local agencies to take steps to conserve land and water.

Van Kirk outlines some of the problems which can result from lack of planning. Those comments should be of particular interest to residents of Wayne County, now suffering from labor pains inherent in giving birth to something as distasteful to many as a county zoning code.

The Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation writer's comments, however, are pertinent to areas other than land use planning and resource conservation. That is just one area where we see every increasing federal encroachment on local government.

The increasing federal control is a development much decried throughout Nebraska, including from time to time, in these columns. But as Van Kirk points out, local agencies often fail to take action when they have the opportunity, leaving a vacuum which Washington decides to fill.

As Midwesterners, we tend to be an independent bunch, and that is something to be proud of. But being independent and being overly provincial are not synonymous, something which too often we fail to recognize.

A personal friend, engaged as a city administrator in a couple of Nebraska communities, provides a good example of the type of thinking encountered, too often.

He informed a city councilman of a Nebraska Supreme Court decision on an issue of interest to the community at the time. The councilman, displeased with the decision, responded by asking who was the Nebraska Supreme Court to rule on the decision, what did the justices know about HIS community, why should they be allowed to make ruling which affected HIS community when they didn't know anything about it, and, after all, didn't even pay local property taxes?

The incident may sound extreme, but it is nonetheless an example of the type of "logic" applied not infrequently when actions, by state or federal officials prove unpopular.

"We decry the loss of local control, yet local control at times has been a 'do nothing' process aimed at maintaining a perceived status quo.

"We didn't need such-and-such 30 years ago. Why do they have to tell us we need it now?" has become a battle cry for many.

"Now" isn't 30 years ago and there are few things which have not experienced change. There is nothing wrong with wanting to keep things pretty much as they are in areas where people are happy with a pleasant life style. But it's a fact changing world and at times one must run fast to stay in the same place. Foot dragging can result in a slide backwards. It's time we recognized that what that happens, the federal government is going to step in and dictate changes, probably not to our satisfaction.

The words "The price of freedom is eternal vigilance," have a new meaning today. If we don't use the authority of local agencies to make local changes to our own satisfaction, federal bureaucrats will make them for us, to their satisfaction. — Jim Strayer.

Back in the Ol' Days

NEARLY 300 spectators and steam engine buffs turned out for the annual steam threshing show Saturday at the Russell Johnson farm north of Wayne. Despite the high humidity and warm temperatures, the Johnson family cleared part of their wheat field the way it used to be done way back when — using steam-powered trashing machines. After the wheat had been collected, the men would toss the bundles into a trash machine powered by a belt hooked up to the steam tractor. Checking over his machine during the threshing process is young Carl Johnson who has made steam-powered machines his main hobby.

Machinery Investments Require a Sharp Pencil

Higher machinery investments due to both inflation in machinery prices and increases in machinery sizes coupled with low commodity prices make it especially important for farmers to consider both present and future conditions carefully when purchasing new equipment.

This warning comes from University of Nebraska-Lincoln agricultural economist Myles Watts. Many farmers have machinery they purchased "when times were better" and now cannot or are having difficulty making payments on the equipment. Foresight might have avoided such a problem, Watts said.

He said machinery costs are second only to land as a percentage of total cost of production and in some instances may be first. "However, machinery costs per acre vary greatly with the size of the machine, while land costs per acre are generally much more constant," Watts pointed out.

He cited machinery size as one of the most difficult decisions to be made when buying equipment and a large influence on machinery cost. "The question before farmers is one of time and money," he said. Substituting larger machinery for labor will result in a higher return per hour of time spent in the fields, but it will require more capital to buy such a machine and maintain it. However, because of cash liquidity problems and the financial deterioration of the farm firm's position, the farmer may place a lower value on his labor and substitute more labor for machinery than in previous, more profitable years.

If the machinery is not of sufficient size so that field operations can be conducted at or near the optimum time, the farmer may suffer a crop loss, he said. "Since machinery size significantly influences costs, it is important that decision makers have information about the varying costs and labor requirements of machinery sizes," Watts said.

Annual after-tax costs (decrease in after-tax income associated with machinery costs) and field time requirements (an indicator of labor requirement) are two factors to consider when choosing size, he advised. As an example, Watts used a table listing machinery complement size (Power take off tractor horsepower), annual after-tax costs, hours of field time and cost per hour of time saved for a 1,000-acre, summerfallow winter wheat farm.

Watts found that the power take off tractor horsepower ranged from 80 h.p. to 226 h.p., with after-tax costs going from $5,249 to $8,185, respectively. Field time for an 80 h.p. tractor and its complements was 611 hours, compared with 250 hours for the 226 h.p. tractor. Hiring a person for custom work is an alternative to buying machinery, the specialist said, but "to be profitable, the hired person's salary must be less than the cost of owning and operating a machine."

He said that in most cases, labor can't be hired year-round for less than the cost of operation for a piece of machinery. "In some cases, though, people can be hired for a specified period of time," he said. "In that case, it might be more economical to hire someone."

"There are significant changes in both cost and time of field operations with changes in machine complement size," Watts said. If a farmer can estimate his costs and field operation time and have some idea of the value of his labor, then he has a more objective basis on which to choose machinery size, he said.

"Since machinery size significantly influences costs, it is important that decision makers have information about the varying costs and labor requirements of machinery sizes," Watts said.

"If applied annually, Correx will help prevent healthy trees from contracting the disease. However, it does have its drawbacks. The injection equipment to apply the fungicide is costly (up to $100) and is not readily available in Nebraska. Also, research results have not shown positive proof that the fungicides are totally effective," he said.

Though the effectiveness has not been proven positively, there are no other registered fungicides that even have a chance of working, he said.

He explained that the fungicide is systemic, in that it is injected into the tree and goes up the sap system to the crown, where it will be effective. He noted that test trees that have received the treatment for the
