Long before the coming of the first white man to this area. Indians grew orn. But their comfields were small and the corn was gathered while #Was still green. It was cut from the cob, dried in the sun, placed in leather or fiber bags and stored in pits for future use. The buffalo hunt was scheduled so that it did not interfere with the planning or har-vesting of corn. According to Conquering the Great American Deserl by Professor Everett Dick of Union College (published by the betraska State Historical Society. 1976), customarily corn was planted by the earliest settlers the first year they arrived in Nebraska Territory. This was done-for several reasons. Corn "was easier to plant and harvest than was small grains, and as there were almost no mills to grind flour, the pioneer resorted to the use of corn. Take politics out of federal judge selection tunity. The U.S. Senate recently passed a bill creating 113 additional district judge-ships (there are now 398) and 35 addi-tional circuit judgeships (there are now 97). This bill (S. 11) — still pending in Congress — deliberately omits any pro-vision for merit selection. In addition to the 148 new judgeships, 23 vacancies exist in the federal district court and nine in the circuit courts. This means that in time a quarter of the total, number of federal judges will be Carter appointees. It's a perfect moment to inslutite a new appointees. It's a perfect moment to instutite a new It's a perfect moment to instuttle a new system. But pollitics as usual seems to be the order of the day, and nothing is going to happen unless citizens stiffen the spine of their elected representatives. Tell your two U.S. Senators to establish for your state a federal judicial selection commission to assisi them in making suggestions to the President of candidates for federal district judge and U.S. Attorney. If your Senators say that's impractical, tell them that their Senate collegues from California, Colorado, Iowa, Kentucky, Pennsylvania and Okla-homa already have established excellent systems for merit selection. Remind them that both the American Judicature society are solidly for merit selection. At a time when lawlessness extends from the lowest to the highest levels of society, a judiciary infected with cron-yism and political horsetrading is in-torable. It's bound to increase the cyni-cism of citizens.

If you haven't already done so, take a minute to say "thanks" to the people who made possible another terrific edition of the Wayne County Fair. The list would include a considerable number of people — ticket takers, parking directors, livestock show superintendents, to name only a few, along with the annual barberue. The fair board certainly deserves special credit for providing programs which kept the grandstands full. Marlyn and Bonnie Koch, of course, set up camp for the duration and put in countless hours orchestrating the entire fair, making sure everything went smoothiy.

Let them stay wild!

Aren't those baby animals cute in the spring? Boy! In my running around the woods, looking for food, I see lots of fawns and bunnies and baby raccoons. Sometimes, I don't see their mothers, because they are out foraging for food, too. Unfortunately, humans sometimes pick up wild babies because they think they've been deserted. That's too bad. My Uncle Thaddeus Vole says that wild animals very seldom survive human care. He says the mother is usually close by anyway, and picking up young wildlife only disrupts a wild family. So, NEVER pick up a wild baby.

Can you match the names of the animal babies listed below with their parent?

A rust inhibitive primer was used before adding new paint, and wood was finished with stain and penetrating sealers. The trunks were then antiqued to give them, an authentic appearance. At the second workshop, in July, choice of linings were discussed. Interiors of the trunks were measured and cardboard templates were made, covered with padding and lining, and glued into the inside. Several women used braid and uphotstery tacks for a decorative touch. Miss Kiahn said a properly restored trunk can sell anywhere from $100 to $30 and more. Good Hunting in the Future

SEVERAL MONTHS of feeding and caring by Richard Bair and other members of Wayne Izaak Walton League paid off last week when the group banded and set free about 85 young pheasants. Most of the birds were released around the lakesite north of Wayne by Steve Hall, left, along with Bair and his son, Matt. And hopes are the birds will make for good hunting in the near future when they grow to maturity and breed. The pheasant program is sonosored by the Nebraska Games and Parks Commission, which supplies the chicks to growers in the state free of charge. The grower, however, must provide feed and shelter.
