

Committee Will Replace Veteran's Service Officer

The Wayne County veteran's service officer position is being replaced Tuesday night by a committee. The committee will consist of Chris Bargholz, and committee chairman Ernest Muehlmeier submitted his resignation from the committee effective Sept. 1. The committee voted 3-2 to replace Bargholz effective Jan. 1, 1978. The 65-year-old veteran, disabled in World War II, has held the service officer's post since 1961. The committee said it didn't believe Bargholz was satisfactorily performing his assigned job.

Muehlmeier, in his letter of resignation, said he doesn't feel he will have the full cooperation of all committee members.

The county board of commissioners will appoint a replacement for Muehlmeier. The committee is taking applications for the $9,473 a year veteran's service officer position. It is expected to make a decision on filling the post at a meeting Sept. 12. The county commissioners must approve the committee's recommendation.

Committee members in addition to Muehlmeier are Clarence Pfeiffer of Winsted, Frank Moelle of rural Winsted (in Wayne County), Arnold Zach and Jean Nuss of Wayne.

Eligible for the veteran's service officer position are individuals who served in the armed forces during specified periods of conflict. Further information can be obtained and application for the position made at the county clerk's office.

Winside Man Gets 18-Month Sentence in Pen

Don Busskohl of Winside was sentenced Aug. 19 to 18 months in the Nebraska Penal and Correctional Complex for possession of amphetamines.

Busskohl will be credited with two days he has served in jail prior to sentencing.

Busskohl pleaded no contest to the charge on June 24. Judge Merritt C. Warren found him guilty and had continued a $5,000 bond pending a pre-sentence investigation report.

Former Hoskins Man Harnesses Hobby Horse

By PAT OSWALD, Winside Correspondent

Former Hoskins resident Freddie "Bus" Lorenz was asked to make a harness for a miniature horse about a year and a half ago, and wound up with a new hobby.

He now makes harness sets for entire teams of miniature horses, plus covered wagons to complete the sets. The wagons are authentic replicas of the real thing, with each piece copied to scale, resulting in a finished product about 18 inches long.

A carpenter, now with a Norfolk address, Lorenz uses scrap lumber left over from his occupation to build the wagons. Double trees, yokes and running gear are whittled. Hollowed out dowels serve as axle hubs with smaller dowels used for wagon wheel spokes. The miniature wheels are shod with tiny aluminum strips duplicating the steel bands which were used on full size wheels. The fabric wagon covers are made from its linen and cotton thread.

Lorenz drafted his own blueprints for the wagons and made his own, durable patterns from metal. He also hand made many of the tools he uses in the work. The only power tool used is an electric drill.

Leathers used in making the tiny harness sets is purchased in sheets, usually black or tan. Split cow hide works best for harness because of its firmness, while softer sheep skin works well for making horse collars, Lorenz said.

After being stuffed, the collars are hand stitched and formed to resemble a full sized collar.

Harness making tools include hammers, screwdrivers, knives, shears, and a variety of grippers and pinners specially made by Lorenz. Stitching is done on an 1883 sewing machine. Sewing is the most tedious part of the job, Lorenz said. "If you sew crooked or make a mistake, it really stinks."

Harness sets are decorated with one-eighth-inch diameter chrome buttons attached with special tools. Spreaders are made from plastic curtain rings, cuckoo clock chains become tug chains on the miniature harness sets, and Western shirt buttons become bridle rosettes.

"BUS LORENZ" was asked to make a harness set for a miniature horse and wound up with a new hobby. Now he makes not only complete harness sets but the covered wagons to go with the miniature teams.

Counties Eligible for Loans To Improve Water Systems

The Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) will receive applications until Sept. 30, under special loan programs initiated by President Jimmy Carter to assist farmers and improve community water systems affected by prolonged drought.

Wayne County FmHA supervisor LaVern Ostendorf and Dixon County supervisor Claude Wright said the application deadline was designated by a federal interagency drought emergency coordinating committee in naming areas eligible for benefits of the special program.

Wayne, Stanton, Dixon and Dakota counties in Nebraska are among the areas designated.

FmHA farm emergency loans covering losses from drought and providing additional credit needed to restore production are available to farmers who lack other sources of credit. Loans, which may be supplemented by grants, are available for emergency measures such as deepening or drilling new wells to improve community water systems adversely affected by drought.

Ostendorf said the FmHA office for Wayne and Stanton counties at 120 Loagan, Wayne, can supply further information on terms of the special drought emergency programs.

The FmHA office at Ponca will handle requests for Dixon and Dakota counties, Wright said.

Trustees to Request 18.5 Per Cent Hike

Citing increasing recognition of the four state colleges as institutions offering high quality education, the State College Board has approved a budget increase request of 18.5 percent for the colleges for the 1978-79 year.

Meeting in Wayne, the board said it recognized that growth in the reputation of the state colleges has brought them a continuing responsibility to maintain academic excellence, as well as needed physical plant development.

"Students are coming to see that the broad ranging education program of the four state colleges prepares them for careers and life as well as the large universities do," according to George Rebersdorf, Omaha, chairman of the State College Board.

At the Wayne meeting the board also gave the green light for several physical plant development projects. Kearney State College will proceed with a quality of the facilities at Wayne.

$154,000 renovation project on the former TB hospital at Kearney to house the nursing education program at the College. The board also approved the establishment of a regional research center at Kearney to be operated as a branch repository of the State Archives in conjunction with the Nebraska State Historical Society.

"The purpose of the renovation is to bring a higher level of proficiency to those areas of campus," he said. "We are going to renovate internal facilities to ensure we maintain a high level of quality in these areas."

Seymour said the estimated total cost of the project will be about $1.3 million.

"That figure depends on when it is bid in," he said. "If we get it in this year it will be in the neighborhood of $1.3 million."

In other business, board president George Rebersdorf, appointed a committee to study the issue of beer consumption of the four state campuses, including WSC.

"I think we have to face reality and get in tune with the times," Rebersdorf said.

WSC President Seymour said the main consideration on the issue would be developing a proposal for the board that would "protect the right of both those students wishing to consume beer or alcohol and those Classes for West Elementary School students will begin at 8:45 sharp Wednesday morning, principal Dave Luff reminded students and parents Friday.

Any new students should register before classes at the school office at 612 W. Fourth St.

WSC Offering Extended Campus

Classes aimed at the working person are offered again this fall through the Wayne State College Extended Campus Program.

Donald Keck, director of continuing education at WSC, said this year's classes are designed for those interested in a particular subject.

"We are primarily trying to reach the person that already has a job," Keck said. "We try to make it convenient for working people to take classes."

Keck said WSC is part of a cooperating group of colleges made up of the Northeast Technical Community College, WSC, the University System and the State Department of Education. Members cooperate in arranging classes to meet a community's needs.

If we hear of a need at Wayne State for a class but for some reason cannot provide it, we will help design or arrange the class through one of the other schools, Keck said.

WSC is offering over 29 extended campus classes at various locations this fall. Keck said classes are located "where we recognize a need." Class topics range from death and dying to basic black and white photography. Keck said many of the classes are offered on weekends to encourage working people to attend.

WSC extended campus classes are taught by qualified instructors and most are worth college credit. Classes begin at various times throughout the year. The first of the classes, improvement of instruction in reading, begins Aug. 25.

Several other classes beginning in September are concerning parents of the exceptional child, Shakespeare on film; introduction to transactional analysis; psychology of death and dying; basic black and white photography; poetry of Gerard Manley Hopkins and Dylan Thomas; the sacred and profane; principles of specific learning disabilities and study techniques for elementary school children.

Keck said new classes are offered during the year depending on demand. He said classes are often added to the extended campus program after a group or individual has expressed an interest in a subject.

"Last year we had a request one day and delivered the class the next," he said. "It really depends on the situation. Most of the time it takes a little time to organize a new class, but we are open to new ideas for classes."

Keck said many "working people" attend extended campus classes because of an interest rather than for college credit. See CAMPUS, page 9

Addition One Step Closer

Action Thursday by the Greater Nebraska Health Systems Agency (GNHSA) board of directors leaves only one final hurdle between the Wakefield Health Care Center and final approval of a request for permission to add a 20-bed wing to the existing 42-bed facility.

The GNHSA board unanimously agreed to recommend in favor of the request for expansion according to agency project review coordinator Herb Spears.

GNHSA acts in an advisory capacity to the State Health Department division of hospitals and medical facilities in reviewing requests for permission to expand health care facilities. Review of expansion requests is required by the federal Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) Department because of a sizeable percentage of nursing home costs are reimbursable under HEW administered Medicare and Medicaid programs. Spears said HEW requires the review process to avoid overbuilding in the nursing home industry.

Spears said Friday morning the GNHSA was preparing a report of the board's recommendation in favor of granting the request for expanding the Wakefield city-owned nursing home. Bert Casari of the State Health department division of hospitals and medical facilities said the recommendation would be reviewed immediately upon receipt by his agency.

"If we receive the recommendation early next week, we should have a final decision next week, Casari said Friday.

Wakefield Health Care Center administrator Russel Swigart said in a previous interview that the request for an addition was made because of the demand for rooms in the Wakefield nursing home. Occupancy there has been high, he said, and there has been a waiting list of from 25 to 30 people for the past four or five months.

Estimated cost of the addition is $260,000. About $200,000 would be financed through municipal revenue bonds. About $70,000 currently in savings would also be available for the project, according to Swigart.

The city-owned Wakefield Health Care Center went into operation on Jan. 21, 1975. Revenue bonds totaling $310,000 financed construction, and another $50,000 was borrowed for equipment.

Swigart said about $305,000 in outstanding indebtedness remains on the revenue bonds. The loan for equipment has been repaid.

Spending Limitation On Council Agenda

The Wayne city council Tuesday night will be asked to decide if it will limit the size of expenditures which the city administrator can make without prior approval when it considers ordinance 870.

The ordinance requested by councilman Vernon Russell, would limit expenditures to $2,000 unless first cleared by the council.

The council will also discuss progress on the downtown improvement project, a proposal to widen Main St. between Fifth and Sixth Streets, resurfacing of Highway 15 in Wayne, and paving Grainland Road.

MARLENE VENTEICHER digs her work as the first female member of the City of Wayne street department, although she will leave the department to become a freshman at Wayne State College this week. She joined the department in May. Here she is helping to repair a troublesome storm sewer.

Wayne High School band members should check out their uniforms for the year during two time periods today, band director Ron Dalton said.

Varsity band members can check out uniforms between 10 a.m. and noon, and between 1 and 4 p.m. Dalton said a $5 deposit will be required at the time uniforms are checked out.

Dalton said the band is scheduled to give three performances during the day at the fair.

STRAYEr Thoughts

By Jim Strayer

to news writing and took a big load off my shoulders.

Secrets Are Safe

Sometimes, there is a story behind the story which you see in newspapers. In the case of the kindergarten pedestrian safety program conducted by the Wayne police department, I overheard a number of stories from the youngsters about some of the idiosyncracies of their parents' driving habits.

It made interesting listening, and probably would have made good reading, too. But don't worry, mom and dad, your secrets are safe with me.

Not So Bad

Maybe downtown improvement isn't such a bad thing, after all. I understand the construction crew put in a new sidewalk for Andy James, and he invited them down to his business for pizza. Imagine that.

Signature Needed

Just a reminder regarding letters to the editor: in most cases we will withhold a writer's name if requested, but we still must have a signature on the letter. I received an unsigned letter last week and have been unable to get in touch with the author to explain a policy, so if someone is wondering why I haven't printed their letter, there is the reason.

Pure Prairies
We should all be thankful that government didn't operate in the last century like it does now. This country was never settled from sea to sea.

If government inspectors had checked over wagon trains for safety, as example, the pioneers would never have been allowed to start their westward journey.

Covered wagons wouldn't have been allowed, of course. Their removal, canvas tops are too much, like covering tables, and we've been told those are safe.

Then, too, there was the shameful lack of safety features. No seat belts, shoulder harnesses or air bags in sight. And wonder how long it would have been before some "bright bureaucrat" would have required "emission controls" on wagons' motive power, so as not to pollute the prairies. At least they probably would have met mileage standards.

Mr. Whiskers notebook

Nebraska sure has changed!

My Uncle Thaddeus said that his great, great, great Grandpa told some really wild stories about Nebraska 135 million years ago. It's hard to imagine serpents and sharks swimming in an ocean where we all live now. And even a little over 200 years ago, long after the oceans were pushed back, only native grass, herds of wild animals and a few Indians lived on the Nebraska plains. Can you name these wild animals that no longer roam free in the state?

Take a minute and think about these questions. Why do animals become extinct or why are they confined to small populations in remote areas? If you have a good answer, please send it to: Mr. Whiskers, Nebraska Game and Parks Commission, Box 30370, Lincoln, Nebraska 68503.

Modern Americans have harder view of life

By JOHN W. GARDNER

It isn't possible to separate the American Dream from the people who dreamed. Most of the colonists and later immigrants to this land came on their very nature more venturesome than those who remained behind.

But some of their attributes can only be explained by the experience on these shores — attributes that came somehow out of the vast land, out of our escape from the burden of history. There was buoyancy, a sense of the future, a taste for improvisation, confidence, passion for self-improvement, a resilient willingness to keep trying.

Later we came to love success, but that was never what America was about: America was about "trying" — and the opportunity to try.

As the years passed, the American Dream took on deeper, richer, more mature tones. We experienced failure and tragedy. We learned that the world was complicated, and that we ourselves were complicated.

Some of the lessons were so bitter, there were observers who thought we'd never recover. And, ironically, the dozen years preceding our 200th birthday were particularly troubled years: assassinations, bitter racial conflict, a hated war and the greatest scandal in our political history.

Americans today are not unmarked by those troubled years. There is uncertainty. There is contempt for much that has been pretentious and false in our national life. But anyone who looks closely will see something else: resilience, stamina, the courage to look at our faults — and under all the noisy, strife-ridden, often self-indulgent surface of our national life, an insistent desire to do better.

We tend to imagine that earlier generations had more "character"; but one must render a mixed judgement. Nineteenth and early Twentieth Century Americans had an essentially youthful notion that nothing could really go wrong for America: every problem would be solved. The Americans from every walk of life today — teachers, business people, workers, professionals, and civil servants — who are seriously lacking the problem-solving we face as a nation are, in important ways, more mature. They take a harder view of life.

Our Founding Fathers knew that humans were flawed and that therefore human societies would be flawed. But the soaring optimism of 19th Century America forgot their wisdom and left it behind. In our attitudes today we are closer to the nation's founders that were the Americans of a century ago. Our sense of mission has been chastened and purged of the pride that goes before a fall.

But we haven't given up. True, there is hypocrisy, self-indulgence and cynicism; and we have our share of rascals and fools. But with respect to most Americans, scratch the surface and you'll find a yearning for something better.

We want to be better people. We want to help make this a better country in a better world. We want our liberty, so that we can continue to work on our problems as a free people. We want justice for everyone — and we know now that some of the obstacles to achieving it are in our own hearts and minds. We still treasure the idea of opportunity — to be what each of us can be as individuals, to be what we can be as a nation.

And we want more down-to-earth things too: a decent life for our kids; a job, respect, dignity in our later years. Most of us know that we've got to work for those things. An endless stream of news stories leave the impression that Americans work hard, raise their kids, love their country, stretch each dollar, mourn their dead, and keep going.

Looking back, I have great affection for the morning optimism of a young nation. But my deepest admiration goes to those many Americans who are keeping America's dream alive today.

Supreme Court 'faltered

From the Peru Challenge

The U.S. Supreme Court faltered again in the route to the once-cherished goal of equality with its decision upholding admittedly discriminatory seniority systems.

The court voted 7-2 recently that minority-group teamsters have no recourse against union and employers' seniority systems which deny them equal consideration for job benefits and promotions. The court majority went so far as to admit that the system ticks the Black and Spanish-speaking workers into lower paying jobs, but found that situation harmonious not only with the U.S. Constitution, but even with the 1964 Civil Rights Act which forbids racial or ethnic discrimination in employment.

As the minority judges Thurgood Marshall and William Brennan said, the decision means that for many workers, "equal opportunity will remain a distant dream."

The court has decided to uphold institutional racism, that structuring of public and private organizations which results in patterns of racial discrimination without depending on individual acts of prejudice. Another example of institutional racism is property-tax funding of public schools, which practically guarantees that poorer districts have poorer schools, and less chance to break the poverty cycle.

In the cases of seniority systems, the court need not have imposed a system of reverse discrimination, but merely to have stated that all employees be given equal consideration.

United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young spoke too strongly in an interview recently in calling Presidents Nixon and Ford racists; if his goal is to increase understanding of racial discrimination in America. He apparently considers having "no understanding of the problems of colored people" sufficient grounds for the racist epithet, which leaves no term for outright racial prejudice.

What is important for the country, and some Supreme Court members, to deal with is that discrimination in America is built into so many institutions that it does not depend on personal racism, such as Young attributes to Nixon and Ford. It exacts its monstrous cost of wasted human potential as smoothly as clockwork, and the Supreme Court has just rewound the clock.

Thanks for reply

Dear Editor: I wish to publicly thank Mr. Vakoc for his explanation of the misdate statement, and also enlightening us with some interesting information, especially the third, fourth and eighth paragraphs, concerning the duties and proceedings of the council.

Although many questions remain to be answered, I am sure the masses are indebted to him for this information.

According to reliable sources, the petition against uprooting Seventh St. was signed by approximately 80 per cent of the residents. I hope this petition was not rendered after the fact. I believe we know where the council stands on this issue.

One of the duties of our council, in my opinion, that rates high priority, is to sort out and judiciously use our tax dollars, without causing undue hardship on any citizen.

My mission is to wake up the masses and try to get information to them, that can be understood by all. I believe I have accomplished part of that mission. Thanks again. — Willard Blecke.

Wayne High Spikers Have Height and Experience

BY LAVON BECKMAN
Wayne High School volleyball coach Mavis Dalton says her team has a lot of experience and height this year, prime ingredients for a successful volleyball season.
Lettermen back this year as starters are seniors Kelly Frevert, 5-9; Lori Johnson, 5-8; Lisa Nuss, 5-5; and junior Peg Pinkelman, 5-6. Junior letterman Lesa Barclay, 5-7, is expected to round out the varsity squad.

Coach Dalton said that in addition to all the height, senior leadership could mean a lot in determining whether or not this team will be a successful season for her spikers.
Wayne, which finished with a 12-6 record last year, second in the Beemer Invitational, third in the West Husker Tournament, and runners-up in district action, will have some improving to do before the Blue Devils can set their sights on a trip to the state tournament this year.

Helping coach the team to a hopefully successful season will be the new assistant coach this year, Darrell Heier.
The teams Mrs. Dalton especially hopes to beat in the West Husker Conference are Wisner-Pilger and Pierce. "Both teams are strong," she says, "but I think we can do it."

Wisner came on strong last year, defeating the Wayne spikers in three out of four games.
Wayne came back, however, to knock Wisner out of the district tournament and their chance for a state title.
Wayne will get a chance to see Wisner in action when the two teams take part in the eighth-team Beemer invitational tournamet Thursday. In that season opener for the Blue Devils, Wabs in the meet are Wall-hill, Battle Creek, Bancroft, Beemer, Stanton and Wisner-Pilger.

Coach Dalton is planning on a strong front line net game because of Wayne's height, and a lot of spiking and blocking.
Winners at the Beemer invitational on Thursday will return Saturday for semi-finals and finals.
Rest of the varsity schedule is:

September — 6 at home with Schuyler; 13 at Randolph; 20 at Norfolk; 27 home with Emerson; 29 home with South Sioux City.
October — 4 home with Norfolk; 6 at Wisner-Pilger; 13 at home with Hartington; 13 at Pierce; 17 West Husker Tournament; 31-Nov. 3, Class B District Tournament.

November — 11-12, State Tournament.
Practice sessions for freshmen girls will begin Wednesday. Coach Dalton says she is expecting about 20 freshmen to show up for practice. All girls planning to participate should have their physical slips turned into the coaching staff by the start of practice.
The rest of Wayne's roster: Seniors — Bev Munter.
Juniors — Jodi Fleer, Sandy Jacobmeier, Tracy Keating, Tammy Oberg, Susie Proett, LaVonna Sharpe, Sherry Workman, Laura Lessman.

Top Harriers Back at Pittsburgh

Three top runners on Pittsburgh State University's District and Conference Championship cross country team were joined by seven newcomers when practice began Thursday.
The 1977 PSH State squad will be shooting for a fourth consecutive Central State Intercollegiate Conference Championship and a fifth consecutive National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics District 10 Title.
The three returnees are Bob McLeod, senior All-American from Valley Falls, Kansas, Mark Rabuse, senior All-American from Kansas City, and David Wise, sophomore from Kansas City. Coach Dave Sunram said "the success of this year's team will depend upon the ability of our new people to compete successfully at the university level."

Former State Senator Cited for Conservation

George Syas, former state senator from Omaha, has been named "Conservationist of the Year" by the Nebraska Conservation Officers Association.
A plaque presented to Syas recently at Game and Parks Commission Headquarters cited him for "outstanding effort and contributions in the field of wildlife conservation."
Conservation officer Ted Blume of Lincoln, secretary of the association, said that the award was made to honor Syas not only for recent contributions, but also for his "long-standing support of wildlife and outdoor recreation during his career in the legislature."
During his 26 years in the Unicameral, Syas supported the Game and Parks Commission on scores of bills, including legislation in recent years establishing a wildlife habitat plan and opening hunting seasons on mourning doves.
Pitt will compete in the CSIC District 10 meet Nov. 5 at Wayne State College.

The great magician Harry Houdini's real name was Ehrich Weiss.

Hunters Told: Ask Permission

Opening day of dove season rolls around on Sept. 1, and Nebraskans will have several public areas to hunt, says Marion Shafer, conservation officer for Wayne, Pierce and Madison counties.
Included among those are Sioux Strip Wildlife Area near Randolph and Yellowbanks near Meadow Grove on the Elkhorn. Shafer noted. Both of those areas are owned and managed by the Game and Parks Commission, but most of the land in Nebraska is private, including some prime dove hunting spots, Shafer said.
But it takes respect for the landowners and respect for their property to get access to those lands, Shafer went on. A great deal of private land has been posted "No Hunting" in recent years, he went on.
One of the main reasons, he said, is hunting without permission.
"Time after time we've talked to landowners about hunters and hunting and time after time we've heard the same complaint," Shafer explained. "It just seems that, in modern, mechanized society many hunters, or so-called hunters don't have the time to stop and pass the time of day."
Shafer recommends that hunters stop in to see the landowner a few days ahead of the hunt. Even most of the posted land can be hunted if permission is asked ahead of time. But if permission is denied, he cautioned, don't get all steamed up about it. That only makes matters worse for the next guy.
Such a courtesy stop usually results in the farmer describing the best hunting spots on the place, not in a refusal, Shafer remarked. It also gives him a chance to point out the forbidden places like the standing corn and the north pasture where his herd is grazing now.
"Those taboos are to be respected," Shafer warned.
It seems like only common sense, but it seems that some hunters need to be reminded to pick up their trash. If someone drove by your backyard and tossed a beer bottle into it, you'd be angry. "Yet some people don't expect the farmer to be upset at the same discourtesy. Leave gates as you found them — open or closed. And don't be afraid to lend a hand to the man who has offered his hospitality to you. If you find a fence cut or broken, it only takes a few minutes with a handy pair of pliers to repair the damage. If you don't have that pair of pliers, at least tell the farmer there's a break in his fence.

Respecting the landowner can never hurt, Shafer concluded, and it has resulted in some pretty rewarding hunts and some even better friendships.

Borers Home in Wayne

MR. AND MRS. STEVE BORER

Helen Majerus and Steve Borer exchanged marriage vows Aug. 20 at St. John the Baptist Catholic Church in Petersburg. The Rev. Ralph Lammers officiated at the 2 p.m. double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Anton Majerus of Albion and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Borer of Elgin.

The bride is employed at the law offices of McDermott and McDermott in Wayne, where the couple plans to make their home. The bridegroom is a student at Wayne State College.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a contemporary gown of white polyester jersey designed with an empire waistline and cap sleeves featuring re-embroidered Venice lace. A sheer yoke of English net on the bodice was outlined with wide bands of matching lace, and a band of Venice lace edged the hemline and chapel train. Her fingertip veil, of nylon illusion edged with lace, was held in place by a matching Camelot cap accented with seed pearls. She carried a cascade of white sweetheart roses and rainbow-colored miniature carnations accented with baby's breath and long streamers knotted with multicolored net.

Mary Bittner, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a floor-length, empire style dress of lavender knit polyester, featuring a low V-neckline with a full cape collar and sleeves. A sash of royal purple accented the empire bodice and flared skirt. She carried a colonial bouquet of rainbow-colored miniature carnations accented with baby's breath and long white streamers knotted with multicolored net.

Bridesmaids were Martha Majerus, Patty Borer and Sue Borer. They wore dresses identical to the maid of honor's in pastel shades of yellow, green, pink and blue. Each carried a colonial bouquet.

The bridegroom, attired in a formal white tuxedo accented by a red rose boutonniere, was attended by his brother, Gary Borer, as best man. Grooms-men were Larry Borer, Mark Johnson and Bill Majeroff. They wore tuxedos with ruffled shirts to match the bridesmaids' dresses.

"I think this is an opportunity to deal with a social concern as adults," he added. "We want to involve students in developing a workable plan that will satisfy students, parents, the college and all concerned about the issue."

Seymour said the committee would study the issue and present recommendations to the board and college presidents for consideration at the September board meeting.

The board also approved a salary increase for WSC faculty members. Seymour said the total increase will vary, depending on the job level of the faculty member.

"All faculty members got within a 5.5 percent increase or an amount according to rank," Seymour said. The state legislature bases maximum salary levels on the particular job. Seymour said increases will bring some faculty to the maximum and an increase below the 5.5 percent.

Seymour said the increase is "the first step to bring the salaries in line with other comparable institutions within our region."
