The revaluation of Wayne County real estate has been a long and exacting process, started in the fall of 1974 when a new Wayne County soil map was released. Mrs. Stipp's staff began listing the number of acres of various soil types for each farm in the county. "I opted to do the reappraisal myself, rather than contracting with an outside firm, because I fell it would cost less and would provide employment for local people," Mrs. Stipp said.

Todd Greunke of Winside won first place honors in the "first ever" 4-H small engines contest Tuesday at the 1977 Nebraska State Fair.

By winning the contest, Greunke is eligible to represent the state at a national contest — the Western U.S. Regional-4-H Engineering Events — to be held at Ak-Sar-Ben in Omaha later this month.

Winning second plage, and an alternate to Greunke to the national contest, was Mike Schorn of West Point.

Gruenke is in his fifth year of 4-H and is the 17-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Greunke.

In the event, the contestants completed a service inspection, identified engine parts, had a written quiz and worked on an engine trouble shooting exercise.

The AMOCO Foundation of Chicago provides a grant to Greunke to help defray expenses to the national contest. He and Schorn were each purple ribbon winners.

Increase Needed if Referendum Successful

The Wayne-Carroll school district, will need a property tax increase next year of about 5.5 mills to offset the loss of anticipated revenues from a 250 million increase in state aid to education, according to superintendent Francis Haun.

A mill levy increase won't be felt this year, Haun said. The district will-use reserve funds to compensate for the loss of some $80,000 school-officials had anticipated receiving as the districts portion of the additional $20 million in state aid funds allocated by LB 33.

If appears certain the additional aid won't be forthcoming with the intent of the property of the said funds allocated by LB 33.

Opponents of the state aid increase completed a petition drive to force a referendum vote on the issue, halling the increase until after, voters have an opportunity to mark their ballots in November 1978. Haun said signatures are now being, verified but reports he has read indicate there is little doubt that the drive was successful.

The issue was still in doubt when the District 17 school board approved its budget for 1977-78. The budget was passed with the additional state aid funds figures in, being largely responsible for a mill levy decrease, of 7.25 mills.

Haun said the district will use reserve funds, this year to compensate for loss of the anticipated state aid increase, leaving the mill levy at 57.09 based on a properly valuation of $16.058,555. The 1975 of levy was 64.34 mills, based on a $14,662,295 valuation. Haun estimated a levy increase of 5.5 mills would be necessary during the 1978.79 fiscal year if electors turn thumbs down on the $20 million state aid increase in balloting in November 1978.

Under the previously enacted state aid bill, $55 millon is now distributed to Nebraska school districts. LB 33 would add $20 million this year and in each of the two following years, with the goal of providing about 40 per cent of the costs of primary and fear of runaway inflation, fueled by deficit spending. Nebraska Democratic Party National Committeeman Alien O'Donnell of Wayne spt. 2 posted a letter to President Carter urging steps to preduce unemployment Corter urging steps to preduce unemployment or Oronnell said unemployment drains the national treasury through welfare programs and is a threat to the President's good of achieving a balanced budget. Thone said in a release the Senate Budget Committee estimates federal budget in the coming year will be around sold billion and the Congressman predicts it will be even higher:

Government figures on cost of living changes don't include taxes, he said, and for the middle class, laxes at all levels are one of the fastest growing costs of living.

"It you're a citizen who primarily pays taxes instead of one who mostly benefits from taxes, your personal initiationary rate may be twice what the federal government is announcing." Thone said.

"We can't end the federal government's initiationary role through reorganization of government or so-called 'reforms' of programs," Thone concluded. "We simply must bite the builtet and balance the federal budget to control the initiation that eats away at the savings and the earnings of every one of us."

"O'Donnell, in his letter, said/"With the current deficit running at 560 billion, and without any vigorous programs to attack unemployment, it is highly unlikely there can be a balanced budget by 1981.

He suggests the following measures to reduce unemployment, it is highly unlikely there can be a balanced budget by 1981.

A reader recently paid me a compliment, unwittingly, I believe. We were discussing an issue that had been discussed at a city council meeting. "How do you feel about it? I couldn't tell from what you said in the story."

As I told him — that's good. You aren't supposed to be able to tell from news stories how the writer feels about the issues involved. Opinions should be reserved for the editorial page.

It's not always easy to be objective in writing news for a community newspaper. Quite often you find yourself smack in the middle of things and have to guard against letting your feelings show in news stories. It's something you and owithout being conscious of it, but

There are so many in the Wayne community who should be given a hearty 'fhank you' for making the Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon such a success. regulating his authorized expenditures, it is the council's responsibility to take necessary action.

In addition, I prefer the higher limit of 5,000 to the $2,000 limit for administrator authorized expenditures. The higher limit allows the administrator to make spontaneous decisions which could ultimately allow the City of Wayne to save money. (Refer to example in Jim Strayer's column 'Observations: Limit Should Be Enforced.') The $2,000 limit could easily impair that spontaneity.

It is indeed difficult to set a limit on authorized expenditures. It is my belief, however, that we have hired a professional to do a job. We must put out trust in him until it becomes 6bvious that he no longer deserves that trust. It is necessary to give him the needed freedom to operate effectively within the boundaries of that trust, and the established limits of administrative expenditures.

In closing, I might remind that the reason for hiring a city administrator is because of the part time nature of the cityl legislators. We could not possibly give prior approval for all expenditures involved in the day-lo-day operation of city government if the limit were as low as $2,000. It simply isn't within the realm of political reality.

Sincerely, Sam, Hepburn, Wayne city councilman — First Ward.

USDA says 'No more doughnuts' in schools

Evidence that there is a prolonged program to direct and change the dietary habits of the American people through the regulatory powers of agencles of the Federal Government whether they like it or not, has surfaced,

A USDA-proposed regulation announced by Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Carol Tucker Foreman would ban doughnuts, also know as a "formulated grain-fruit product," from school premises. The regulation, which could become effective on June 30, 1978, would withdraw authorization for the use of "formulated grain-fruit products" ha the school breakfast program.

Cream-fillett cakes, coffee cake, oatmeal bars and peanut butter crackers also fall into the câtegory in question. Ms. Forman in announcing the proposal, said "We believe that the use of these products in the school breakfast program is not consistent with promoting food habits in children and does not further nutrition education through a well-balanced diet of conventional foods."

Ms. Foreman asid there are controversies over sugar and fat content of the products, their actual convenience, and their value in teaching good eating habits to children.

The committee recommended that Americans should est less meaf, more fish and pouttry; replace whole milk with skim milk; cut back on eggs, butter and other high-cholesterol sources; cut back on sugar; cut back on salt and eat more fruits, vegetables and-whole grains. Other guidelines from that committee included: whole wheat instead of white read, brown rice, cooked breakfast cereal instead of coid cereal, no. more potato-chips, cake mixes, whipped toppings, and cut back on soft drinks, sugar, honey, sirups and molasses.

The average American will continue to eat what he or she likes, Ms. Foreman, Sen. McGovern, et al, notwithstanding. Education is one thing but planned bureaucratic manipulation is something else. The proposal to ban doughnuts and rolls from school funch programs illustrates how far bureaucracy will go in Jis encroachment into every facet of Ameritan life. It can be applied to the kind of houses in which Americans live, the kind of automobiles they drive and how they are equipped, the kind of hospital and medical care they are to produce, the kind of education their children are to crecive. In bureaucracy there are no limits. — M.M. Van Kirk, Nebraska Farm Bureau.

In June of 1889, Addison E. Sheldon, editor of the Chadron Temperance Advocate, houred his town's school building, where local elementary and high school classes were conducted. A subsequent report appeared in the June 7, 1889, Advocate, on file at the Nebraska State Historical Society, where Sheldon later served as director. Sheldon's life-long interest in education was manifested by his 1937 book Nebraska Old and New, written especially for school children. That he enjoyed his brief association with the young scholars of Chadron is evident from the opening paragraph of his Advocate who work and she had think and work and scheme from one week's end to another want a renewal of youth, a rest for the mind and a smile for the face, if for only a short time of this hurried life, let them go and do likewise. Don't wait till the last day when the crowd comes and the forces are drawn out on, parade, but just quietly drop in without a word of intrination and see what every day life in the camps of the children Is."

Sheldon noted improvements — and deficiencies — in education: "The first thing that strikes one is the great improvement in school appliances and drill that has taken place in the last few years. The text-book in some cases — particularly the readers — we don't think so good, but after all it is not so much the book that the scholar learns as it is the teacher and the way."

so good, but after all if is not so much the book that the scholar learns as it is the teacher and the way."

Although the first primary class, perhaps equivalent to our modern kindergarten, seems to have been quite large by current standards, Sheldon thought if effective and well managed: "In the first primary, taught by Miss Bryant, are 53 little boys and girls — all the way in size from a grashopper to a tree-toad, instead of being given a book and made to but their infant heads against it after the old prevailing style, they are kept busily interested in blackboard work. Little songs, drawing exercises on the slate, etc. The aim is to give the child mind just allttle at a time of study, and by varlous pleasant exercises to keep his mind from becoming wearied and inattentive. It is to be noted that the little girts in the becoming wearied and inaffentive. It is to be noted that the little girls in the primary are much more attentive and take more pains to excel than the boys." The number of pupils in each class in the higher grades decreased only slightly: "In Miss Evans' room, the secondary primary, are 49 scholars. A class in reading have written their lesson one states and are reciting. The tone and inflection of voice are good for such young scholars. Exercises in the way of, writing sentences of various kinds follow for the whole school. We should say that the children of today were being taught a great deal more of real ideas and the foundation of thought than they were fifteen years ago.

the children of today were being taught a great deal more of real ideas and the foundation of thought than they were fifteen years ago.

"Miss Dorton's room comes next in grade. A recitation in geography shows very careful attention has been given to the general outlines of continents and countries, leaving the more minute dei tails to follow in the natural way. There are 33 scholars in the room.

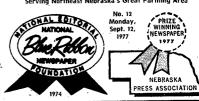

"Across the hall in Miss Malka's room the geography recitations dwell more upon the domestic resources and products of countries. 'Railroad' geography,' a hing unknown to scholars twenty years ago, fills a large space here as it should the number of pupils is the same as it Miss Dorion's room.

"Upstairs Professor Denton is hearing a class in the Latin reader, and the lesson for the day is a brief account of Cataline's conspiracy. . The next classes are one on general history, taught by Miss Palmer, and one in natural philosophy by Professor Denton."

Although Sheldon, in summarizing his visit, regarded school facilities and methods of instruction at Chadron as "greatly improved," he did point out only serious sontcoming of most school systems of the 1880's: "The thing that seems to be lacking most is some provision for the dull scholar. Everyone who has taught school knows what a terror and bugbear the downright dull child is. It is easy enough to teach the bright ones and a joy and inspiration to see them conquer difficulties, but the stupid, the lazy and the shiftless are a burden that the most conscientious feacher is glad to be rid of They usually linger along till they are so big'they are ashamed to be in a class of them. What can be done for them? It is a hard question to answer."

Individualized instruction and special education classes have reduced but not eliminated Sheldon's problem of the "dull scholar." In many other respects, however, the schools of 1889 cmpare favorably with our own.

Winside Invit Starts Tonight

Three area volleyball teams will be competing in the annual Winside Invitational tonight (Monday) and Tuesday. Besides host Winside, teams from Laurel and Wakefield will be battling in the eight-team tourney which features top powers from the Lewis and Clark and West Husker Conferences. Osmond of the West Lewis and Clark loop and Emerson-Hubbard of the West Lusker appear to be the favorites to go into the finals Tuesday night, said tournament director Kathy O'Connor, because both clubs are undefeated after the first two weeks of net play.

The tourney starts at 6:30 p.m. with host Winside playing Pierce. Osmond and Wynot then will take to the court followed by Laurel versus Coleridge and Wakefield versus Emerson. Each, match will begin 15 minutes after the finish of the preceding match.

Semi-finals will start at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Permits Needed

State Road Director, David Coolidge, said the Department has amended the rules and regulations for the control of outdoor advertising in the state.

Under the new amendments, owners of any outdoor advertising signs adjacent to the interstate and primary highways must file applications for permits from the Department of Roads by Nov. 3.

However, on premise signs advertising goods and services offered by the owner on regularly used property of the business do not require permits.

The amendments to the state's outdoor advertising rules and regulations bring the state into line with recent changes in the Federal Highway Beautification Act of 1965, Coolidge said.

Applications for the permits and copies of the new rules and regulations are available at the Department of Roads' district offices.

times to coordinate reappraisal efforts. Mrs. Stipp said, for example, that assessors from Northeast Nebraska counties have conferred in an aftempt to insure that property valuations across county lines are quitable. "I feel the new appraisal is more fair and equitable than previous appraisals in the state," Mrs. Stipp said. Land valuations are based on soil type, production record, and the real estate market.

Farm buildings get physical, functional, and economic depreciation, Mrs. Stipp said, adding she believes those factors have resulted in bringing appraisals down to fair value. Nebraska's county assessors worked hard to convince state officials that farm buildings often add little to a farm's value when land is sold, Mrs. Stipp added.

Top value appraised for prime irrigated farm land in Wayne County is $745 an acre. Top valuation for the best dryland property is $540 an acre.

Wayne County residents have been extremely cooperative in the reappraisal effort, Mrs. Stipp said. Continued cooperation, will hopefully, help the review process go smoothly after property owners are entitled to look at records for their preceiving their reappraisal notices.

Property owners are entitled to look at records for their property at Mrs. Stlipp's office. The valuation will be explained and anyole believing they can show that their property has been appraised too high can ask for a review by the assessor. It still unsatisfied after a final notice of valuation is received, they can file a protest with the county board of equalization, which will make a final decision. Deadline for filing protests is May 1, 1978.
