OBSERVATIONS

Reorganization needed

Meetings last week regarding the Wayne Senior Citizens Center produced liftle but confusion. The point of contention was whether to retain Mr. Jociell Bull as center admini trator, but the central issue, which never really came up for discussion, is control of policy for the center. That, perhaps, is understandable when one considers the cumbersome machin-ery which now is supposed to provide direction.

direction. The center's membership operates as an organization with elected officers. There is an appointed advisory board, and the city council is involved because the center is financed through city tax the center is financed through city tax dollars. The net result is that none of these groups can provide effective leadership and policy making, and responsibility ends up in the hands of the only person in a position to take it, the administrator. The resulting situation is unfortunate, forcing the administrator to wear two hats — one policy-making and the other administrative. It is comparable to the street commissioner's shoulders responsi-bility for not only supervising city street, bility for not only supervising city street. No particular blame for the situation projects, but deciding what projects will be done. No particular blame for the situation attaches to anyone. Until now the machi-mery for control has operated adequately. But an individual can seldom please everyone all the time, and tegitimate complaints can arise from/fime to time. Unfortunately, the Senior Citizens Center policy-making machinery is so cumber-some that when (controversy rears its head, the machinery moves slowly, and ultimately collapses under its own weight before gefting down to basic problems. City officials have supported Mrs. Butl, commending her for the tremendous amount of energy she expends in carry-ing out her duties. It would be a shame dence. The center in our estimation has a good administrator at this time, but direction may be needed from time to time as with any department head. Operating the center as a separate department would provide befter control, streamline the policy making apparatus, and make it less cumbersome to handle conflicts so it can serve the needs of all potential members.

members. The Wayne Senior Citizens Center is among the best in the state. It seems a shame to see it forn by internal dissent when proper organization could probably resolve differences. — Jim Strayer.

If was probably the more popular device of the two. The hook was fitted to a metal plate that curved to fit the lower part of the palm of the hand. The hook came out of the palm piece and curved toward the wrist. The picker had greater hand usage with the hook rather than a peg-as it was fit to the hand with leather fittings and straps. The buckles were designed with leather straps around the wrist. There were a variety of styles and designs of corn shucking hooks. The husker made a motion of reaching forward and sharply drawing the hand back toward the body as the bent hook hit the ear, this ripping away the shucks as the second hand grasped the ear and threw it into the wagon. This became a rhythmic, co-ordi-nated movement of the hands and body down the rows of corn. A picker picked two rows of corn. A sitedy hired find halos added hired hands as corn pickers. Letter's from bus driver's, school admin-istrators and transportation specialists in urban and rural areas alike agreed that violators of the school bus stop law are numerous. In the letters, the writers stressed the potential danger to children if motorists do not stop when a school bus has its stop arm extended. Many of them stated their frustration at not being able to do much about the situation. They suggested stric-ter enforcement of the law and harsher punishment for violators.<sup>2</sup> Excerpts from letters showed the writ-er's concern and frustration. A bus driver in a small community school stated:

told (by bus drivers) that about 50 per cent of the cars don't stop as the law requires." A bus driver wrote: "There have been at least 11 or 12 of these violations reported this year, Not many get to court and when an open and shut case does, it is dismissed." The transportation foreman of the Lincoln Public Schools wrote that 141 violators were counted during a one-month period. However, as the laws stand today it is difficul to prosecute violators successfully as they and their cars must be positively identified. Nebraska enforcement agencies may have to resort to something used by the lowa State Patrol. In an attempt to catch more violators, a state trooper with a radio tuned to a police frequency rode inside a bus while a trooper in an umarked car drove behind the bus. In this way, violators could be caught on the spot as they passed the bus with its stop arm extended.

sion controls. EPA said that reduction of hydrocar-bon emissions from automobiles has been significant but added that the overall total was only slightly lower because of increases in industrial and other sources. The decthe in automotive emissions was just one of the major factors in the generally better clean air picture. Parti-culates, chiefly a pollutant from indus-trial plants, were reduced by the instal-lation of control equipment. The auto-industry spent millions on its own manu-facturing facilities. Oxides of nitrogen increased because of emissions from elecric utilities and the road. That picture will brighten in the vears ahead, according to AIC, as three-way catalytic converters make their debut to curb that chemical.

Rubber Checks

Rubber Checks Funny, isn't if, how in the Bert Lance case we were told by him and his supporters that, "everyone has over-drafts' even though the sums involved were in the hundreds of thousands of dollars, and Wednesday Robert Hansen, who has field as a candidate for governor of Nebraska, was arrested for allegedly writing a $404 insufficient fund check? I'm not defending Hansen, understand, if the charge is true, but it makes me wonder if crimes are only crimes when they are relatively small ones. Guess if just depends on whose ox is getting gored. Or perhaps I should say Lanced?

If the county must bear those costs, Ewing said he extimates local tax-payers could end up paying between $300,000 and $800,000 before the project is completed. The group opposing the pro-lect did receive one welcome piece of information, Ewing con-tinued. DOR officials said a public hearing will be conducted in Wayne before the project is initiated.

biblic hearing will be conducted in Wayne before the project is initiated.
The senior Ewing said he intends to present to the city council within the next two or three weeks a list of all property owners who have signed state-ments opposing the project, and will request that the council withdraw is endorsement of the plan, granted following a vole a year ago.
Ewing said he believes con-demnation proceedings could push project expenses hidh enough to finance a bypass project which he has proposed.
The city planning commission previously recommended a simi-lar bypass project, Ewing said, but the council has been fully ex-plored. He has previously sug-gested that routing Highway 35 traffic through Wayne on separ-ate one-way streets could, pro-vide a viable aternative to the proposal for the four-lane road.

The city's comprehensive to the proposal for the four-line road. The city's comprehensive plan completed in 1973 includes a "map with a recommended route for a bypass. Traffic approach-ing Wayne from the west would be routed south on the road adjacent to the county fair-grounds, east on Grainland Road, then northeast across Main Street onto the point where the right of way intersects with Highway 35. Mern Mordhorst, chairman of the planning commission which approved the comprehensive plan, said the comprehensive plan, said the comprehensive in the city council decides a bypass is wanted. He said the plan does not advocate for or against a bypass. 16 For Cards Sixteen persons attended El-derly Club Wednesday evening at the Hoskins Fire Halt. Pitch prizes went to Marvin Malchow and Mrs. Walter Koehler, high, and Fred Johnson and Mrs. Frieda Meierhenry, Iow. Mrs. Hilda Thomas and Mrs. Erwin Ulrich were on the coffee committee.

Erwin orrect and the committee. Mrs. Carl Hinzman and Mrs. Frieda Meierhenry are in charge of arrangements for the next meeting, on Oct. 5.

Ewing said Wayne residents are concerned not only about loss of yard space to Seventh Street property owners, but the danger presented by increased truck traffic, especially those carrying toxic or flammable chemicals. If the DOR is justify-ing the four-lane plan because of increased traffic, it must be considered that part of the in-crease will be truck Traffic, representing an increased haz-ard to the city, he said.
