Ford: Will Farm Bill Drive U.S. Out of World Market?

The 1977 farm bill and the plight of the family farm were among the issues addressed by former President Gerald Ford in a session with an Agricultural Economics class on the University of Nebraska-Lincoln East campus Friday.

"If President Carter signs the 1977 farm bill, as Ford believes he will, Ford questions whether higher loan prices and target prices 'will in effect drive U.S. agriculture out of the world markets? That's the gut issue.'"

Ford declined to say, if he were now President, if he would sign the farm bill. He did, however, say that confronted with just the food stamp portion of it, "I'd veto it."

Ford feels strongly that the food stamp portion of the bill ought to be detached and stand on its own merits, and that it was included in the farm bill as "bait for Congress and the President."

In addition, he said he thinks the food stamp program at the present time is exclusively a welfare program and ought not to be a "burden" to the Department of Agriculture.

Asked the implications of drying rural communities, Ford said he thinks it would be "catastrophic for moral, ethical and religious values" in the U.S. if it should happen. He is, however, generally encouraged by recent trends of people moving back to rural areas and thinks it is a "wholesome" sign.

Responding to a student question about the effect on American agriculture if the American farm should be taken over by big corporations, Ford said he thought the agri-business trend, carried to its ultimate conclusion, would lead to the demise of the family farm, which would be "most unfortunate."

Although the 1976 revision of the estate tax laws has made it easier for some, Ford still sees the problem of young people getting into agriculture as one of the most serious problems. "The capital investment is tremendous, and the burden of carrying it with prices today is almost unbearable," he said.

A partial answer for American agricultural problems, Ford believes, may be found in more energetic efforts to expand exports.

In other comments, Ford said: "The energy program has to be one that will 'get the approval of Congress and stimulate production.'" He said he strongly disagrees with Carter's proposal to "impose significant taxes on producers. I prefer that we have deregulation to stimulate production. If we give incentives, we can develop new natural gas and new crude oil domestically, but we can't do it unless we have incentives."

"Solar energy is not a panacea to U.S. energy problems. Those who say solar energy overnight is going to be a major contributor to energy production in the U.S. are inaccurate. It will be a factor... but most energy experts will tell you solar energy will not be a significant contributor overall until 1990."

"It would be 'shortsighted' of the U.S. not to proceed with nuclear energy programs. Mr. Carter and I differ in one respect... he's against breeder reactor development and I feel we should develop both."

"Foreign exports of American agricultural products can no longer offset U.S. balance of trade deficits due to the growing importation of foreign oil. Agricultural exports were very beneficial in keeping our balance of trade in a respectable position. But as some of our foreign sales of agricultural commodities have gone down, along with price decreases and as there has been an increase in the cost of oil and the utilization of foreign oil, that combination has significantly caused our trade imbalance and our balance of payments problem."

He sees no incompatibility between a substantial Food for Peace program and American agricultural interests. The food program, however, "can be used for more than humanitarian purposes... it can be helpful in implementing American foreign policy." The President, however, "ought to have more freedom to utilize this resource of America's, and if we had more freedom, a President could do a better job for American agriculture on one hand, and a better job of American foreign policy on the other."

"The best way to raise farm prices is to expand U.S. overseas markets, either commercially or in the Food for Peace program. 'I think we have to have some carryovers, but when it gets to the magnitude of the '50s or '60s, I don't think it's good for agriculture or humanitarian purposes around the world.'"

Rather than limiting imports, he prefers to use "the technique of reimbursing workers in America who lost their jobs as a result of imports." Carter's solution to the flooding of U.S. markets with Japanese-made television sets, for example, was a "good" one, according to Ford. "I believe that is far better than letting others flood markets or putting arbitrary limits on imports." An exception, he said, is when a foreign country tries to flood U.S. markets with products made under government subsidy.

Soil aeration will increase root growth and tend to increase deep rooting. This can be accomplished by shallow spading around the tree in the fall. This also improves water drainage. Surface roots should not be injured.

When winter injury occurs, remove dead branches and twigs in late afternoon.

Protect trunks of young, thin-barked trees from sunscald and frost cracks by wrapping with a suitable tree wrap. Burlap or slat screens placed two feet away on the south and southwest sides, protects exposed evergreens from drying winter sun and winds.

Less hardy trees and shrubs are subject to direct low temperature injury. Winter-tender trees and shrubs require special precautions to insure against damage. The hardiness and adaptability of the tree or shrub being planted should be determined, and protected locations selected. Certain trees and shrubs may require additional protection such as hilling around the base of the plant with several inches of soil or providing winter covering with burlap, plastic or canvas.

High-nitrogen fertilizers that promote soft, tender growth should not be used in the fall.

Following dry summer and fall months, soak thoroughly around the trees before freezing weather sets in. This helps replace the subsoil moisture lost during the summer drought.

Mulching in early fall, increases moisture retention during winter months and prevents deep freezing. Sawdust, wood shavings or chips, straw, peat moss, ground corn cobs or

He expressed disagreement with the move in California to force agricultural universities to stop doing research and development in automatic pickers to protect migrant farm workers. "I think this would be a very serious adverse impact on American agriculture... If we ever go down the road that we're not going to improve our capabilities to produce and market, we might as well get out of the agriculture business."

This and That... from YOUR COUNTY AGENT

WAYNE COUNTY EXTENSION AGENT

In any year soybean growers leave an average of 13 per cent of their total crop on the ground after harvest. Here are some suggestions for reducing these losses.

Pre-Harvest Losses

Avoid shatter loss and lodged beans by starting to combine when the bean crop is mature and at 14 to 15 per cent moisture.

Most seasons there is enough good soybean harvest weather to finish combining before bean moisture gets down to 10 per cent. So it's better to slow down your ground speed.

Harvest more acres per day by combining early in the morning and later in the evening when there is a heavy dew. A variable speed cylinder on the combine permits increasing cylinder speed when the dew is heavy, reduce cylinder speed as pods dry off.

Combine Header Losses

Make combine reel and sickle work together. Cutterbar should be sharp and any worn parts replaced so it will work smooth.

Accidents Can Be Tragic Harvest

Fall's bounteous harvest, when farmers realize the fruits of a year's hard work, also may reap tragedy in the form of fatal or crippling accidents.

Rollin Schnieder, Extension safety specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, said 26 persons already have been killed in farm-related accidents going into the harvest season. In contrast, 29 persons were killed throughout the year in 1976, which had a dry fall.

"If farmers fail to take necessary precautions, around machinery and other potential hazards, this year's total could go higher, Schnieder said. Bumper feed grain crops around much of the state, coupled with wet weather, could cause problems similar to the wet falls of 1972 and 1973, he continued.

Combine-caused fatalities are usually no a major problem, he pointed out; however, in 1972, five farmers died in combine accidents during the fall harvest. Schnieder noted that similar accidents occurred in 1973, while the dry falls of 1974, 1975 and 1976 did not show these problems.

"The majority of these fatalities occurred when combine heads or corn heads fell on the victims," the safety specialist said. "People get under the head to clean it out, and the accident occurs." One of the most basic farm safety practices is to turn off any machine before doing any work on it. Research into the fatalities indicated that when the accident occurred, the equipment had to be running, Schnieder said. The accident could not have happened if the equipment had been shut off.

In addition to combine accidents, elevator and auger accidents are fairly common, Schnieder said.

Elevators and augers are high on the accident list each year, with young children many times being the victims. This can come from being caught up in the flutes of the auger or being caught in the power take off drives," he said. He advised mothers to watch young children carefully when a load of grain is brought home for unloading.

"Youngsters have no business being around the augers or open power drives," he said.

Cutting Heights

Added to the dangers of harvest is the possibility of hydraulic units on grain boxes falling on the operator.

Each year one or two farmers are killed when these units fall and the person is crushed between the frame of the truck and the box," he said. These accidents occur when the farmer is working on the unit without having the box held up by a stop on the hydraulic cylinder or even a post holding the box as an extra reinforcing measure.

Suffocation in grain bins and falls from grain bins are two other types of common accidents that occur during the fall. Schnieder said, "Youngsters — usually boys — are the ones most likely to be involved in the suffocation."

Schnieder noted that the moisture which has been so abundant the last few weeks has developed some lush forage this fall. He said that a couple of farmers were killed last year when caught up in large round balers during fall haymaking, a warning to be especially watchful this fall, he said.

A new problem is causing concern on the safety front this fall, Schnieder said. "Many of the new wagons and forage handling units are so large that they are shoving the towing tractors off the roadways while going downhill. On an upgrade, they are so heavy that the tractors cannot pull them."

There is now debate on the weight that a tractor should pull safely if there are no brakes on the towed vehicle, he said. "Some of the manufacturers would like to see a weight of two to three times the weight of the towing vehicle. This would be tolerable if the towed vehicle had brakes. However, it should be no more than the weight of the towing tractor's weight if there are no brakes on the towed vehicle," the safety specialist said.

result in severe winter injury to evergreens and other shrubs. Trees and shrubs growing in exposed, windy locations may be injured by low temperatures, repeated freezing and thawing or drying winter winds.

Winter injury to needle and broadleaf evergreens is often the result of excessive desiccation during February and March when extreme and rapid temperature fluctuations occur. Evergreens growing in dry, sunny, exposed locations are most subject to winter injury. Evergreens lose water continually during the winter months as part of their normal growth processes.

Although water loss is greatly reduced during the winter, an excessive amount is lost during warm periods. When water in the trunk of a tree or in the soil around roots is frozen, an insufficient amount is absorbed by the roots to replace that lost by the needles. Consequently, the needles turn brown and die.

Even though the weather can't be controlled, there are a few precautions to take which reduce winter injury:

Following dry summer and fall months, soak thoroughly around the trees before freezing weather sets in. This helps replace the subsoil moisture lost during the summer drought.

Mulching in early fall, increases moisture retention during winter months and prevents deep freezing. Sawdust, wood shavings or chips, straw, peat moss, ground corn cobs or danger of an accident.

The storm sewer project came in a related matter during discussion of the minutes of the council meeting. City attorney Kem Swarts said then while diverging an opinion on conflict interests that it appears a conflict apparently would exist a councilman owning property near the project voting on a matter.

Councilman Vernon Russell concluded to the opinion, saying one of the 10 lots he owns in the area are adjacent to the project, are drained by it.
Russell said if a conflict exists with him in the storm sewer project, one must exist in a plan bury electrical distribution lines in an area where two councilmen (Darral Fugelberg and Jimmie Thomas) live.

Swarts had delivered the motion that Thomas could vote on the issue because he would have no financial interest in the project. The area is already served by overhead electric lines and the underground project won't be assessed to property owners. The project, which had previously been defeated with Thomas abstaining in the vote, passed at the last council meeting with Thomas voting.

Thomas Tuesday night said if there is any question of a conflict of interest on his part, he would choose to withdraw his vote and ask that the matter be placed on the agenda for the next meeting.

Swarts said his opinion remains that no conflict of interest exists on the electric system project, explaining that the subject had been reviewed by the Nebraska Bar Association committee on inquiry.

The council accepted a $7,839.50 bid from Gill Construction for a project to widen Main Street between Fifth and Sixth Streets. Only one bid was submitted for the project, authorized by the council after being requested by Al Wittig and Phil Griess, who will build a shopping center on adjacent property.

The bid was accepted with the provision that the property owners pay for items such as curb cuts, driveways and approaches, tree removal, and excavation.

In other action the council:
— Deferred action on a proposed ordinance to place the Wayne Senior Citizens Center under direct control of the council.

Mayor Freeman Decker
suggested the action, he said, because he believes more direct control would help eliminate conflict which has arisen since one faction began calling for the removal of director Joceli Bull.

Thomas asked that the ordinance be considered at the next meeting to give the council time to review it.

— Deferred action on a city planning committee request that property belonging to Ann Swinney, Richard Carman, Joe Dorsey, Werner Janke, Charles Wittler, Frank Gilbert, Roy Coryell, Fred Ellis, Darral Moore, and Howard Stoakes be annexed into the city.

The council was informed that property involved owned by Moore and Stoakes is already within the city limits, and that Ellis does not own the property in question.

Dorsey told the council he believes the planning commission recommendation is vague, property descriptions are inaccurate, and it fails to include other property adjacent to the city and receiving city services, including the county fair grounds. He also said some of the property involved is agricultural.

The council agreed to return the recommendation to the planning commission for further study and clarification.
— Was informed that new uniforms have been ordered for the city police department. The uniforms will be a conventional style for police with blue trousers and grey shirts. Money for the uniforms was appropriated in the city budget.

— Approved a permit for the city fire department to dispose of ties removed along the railroad right of way between Highway 35 and Husker Concrete.
Fire chief Dick Kork asked for the permit, explaining that the company recognized authority on school textbooks, will address the audience at the showing of the film Saturday night.

members are Clarence Pfeiffer of

The committee decided to applicants' respective qualifications. A decision on the appointment is expected at the Oct. 10 meeting. Annual salary for the Controversial

intended for high school students.

The showing touched off a conflict between Exon and the state school board. The governor chastised the board for not taking a stand on the film, and board members replied it is not up to them to dictate to local school boards what films can be shown in their schools.

Walter Thompson of Oakland, whose State Board of Education district includes Wayne, said the Wayne schools "are well qualified" to take care of the problem.

Mrs. Norma Gabler, a nationally recognized authority on the film Saturday night.

Aging

Counties agreeing to join the agency must bear a share of administrative costs for operating the agency, based on the proportion of over-60 residents in the area who reside in the individual county.

Wayne County, for example, has about 1,700 persons aged 60 or older, or 3.9 per cent of the total over-60 population in the 22-county Region IV area. If all counties in the area agree to join, Wayne County would pay $286 for administrative costs.

The fewer the number of counties which join the agency, the higher its administrative costs for each county, Wiley said, pointing out that their proportion of funds available through the agency would probably also increase, although that is at the discretion of the governing board.

The agency board will annually submit to the state for approval a plan on services to the over-60 population which will inventory resources available within the area and establish objectives and priorities, in cooperation with agencies already existing within the area.

Wiley said promotion of the agency is just getting underway.
The commissioners of only one other county have been contacted about the proposal and they have been hesitant about agreeing until they see what other counties will do. "Right now, we're looking for a county willing to show it is a leader in meeting the needs of the elderly."

EXTENSION NOTES

By Tama Krause

BROWN BAGGIN'
Off to School? Or just going hunting? You will probably pack a lunch. In fact, if you are like most Nebraskans, you carry a lunch with you to work or school, automobiling or hiking, and even to Big Red football games.

Tailgait lunches save many fans the expense of eating at concession stands, just as sack lunches save the expense of eating in a restaurant at noon.
That brown bag meal can get boring if it is the same old lunch all the time. Do not allow lunches to drift into the old sandwich-fruit-cookie routine.

While daily lunch packing may seem a monotonous, endless chore, it need not always be the case. The secret, of course, is in putting "something special" in the lunch box. That something special could be new and unusual foods, different with sandwiches, surprise garnishes and relishes, dessert treats and so on. The most important thing is that the carried lunch have that same just-made freshness the family always enjoys in their meals at home.

To start with, try various kinds of breads. Remember that rye, raisin and pumpernickel make delicious sandwiches.
Even a hard roll or a favorite quick bread could be a welcome change. Always cut sandwiches into sizes that are easy to handle and surprise the youngsters occasionally with sandwiches cut into special shapes with cookie cutters.

There is more time to think of novel sandwich fillings if they are prepared the night before and placed in the refrigerator until the morning rush. Always be generous with fillings, but not so much so that they ooze out and make eating a messy business. Remember that since the filling is going between two slices of bread, you can afford a little bit more seasoning than usual.

Levy
last year, a $8.85 mill Wakefield School district levy, as well as the Wayne County and other levies.

Each mill in taxation raises one dollar in revenue for each $1,000 in valuation. Free high tuition, for example, is based on a valuation of about $18.9 million for property in the county with Districts 17 (Wayne, 95R (Winside), 60 DR (Wakefield), 45 (Cedar County), 2 (Pierce), and 54 (Cedar County) not included because those districts offer high school.

Approximate valuations for Wayne County towns for 1977 are Wayne $10.2 million; Winside, $725,000; Carroll, $361,000; Hoskins, $401,000; Sholes, $67,000, and Wakefield, $208,000.

Rural fire districts in the county levying taxes, in addition to Carroll, are Wayne 2, 52 mills; Hoskins 3, 42 mills; Winside 4, 1.14; Pender 5, 1.14; Randolph 7, 2; Wisner 8, 7.7; Wakefield 9, 2.75, and Stanton 11, .96.

County residents living in the Pender Hospital District will also pay a 2.3 mill levy for bond redemption.

School district levies in addition to those already listed are:
1, 7.51 mills; 5, 12.54; 15, 6.25;
23, 26.50; 25, 8.14; 32, 24.62; 33, 11.31; 45, 17.96; 51, 9.78; 57, 14.61; 68, 10.76; 75, 20.36; 77, 10.27; 45 (Cedar), 49.92, 2 (Pierce), 59.22, and 54 (Cedar),
55.2.

A total of 57 taxing districts are included in the county. Consolidated levies for each are listed in a legal notice elsewhere in this issue.

Tilling the soil isn't new to Nebraskans but Mrs. Ivan Frese and daughter Jodi have tended an unusual crop this past summer, one intended for bouquets, not grain bins.

Junior Leaders Plan November Bowling Party

The Dixon County Junior Leaders during a Sept. 20 meeting discussed the results of the foodstand at the county fair and the threshing bee. A bowling party is planned for Nov. 13 at 2 p.m. at the Wayne bowling alley.

Junior leaders in Dixon County have been promoting county 4-H awards during the past year. At their club meetings, 4-H members have presented information on how to apply for awards. On Saturday, Sept. 17, a workshop on awards was conducted by Anna Borg at the Northeast Station. The deadline for submitting these 4-H award applications is Monday.

of some 1,400 gladioli bulbs in a bed seven rows wide and 40 yards long.

The bulbs, or corms, were set out in five separate plantings of about 280 each, in order to stagger the time they were in flower so freshly cut flowers would be available throughout the season.

The commercial enterprise supplied gladioli locally for funerals, church events, and in particular, anniversary and friendship bouquets.

Furrows for the first planting were made by the man of the family with a lister, but spring rains demanded his attention for more conventional crops and preparation for subsequent plantings were done with a hoe.

That will change during the second season of the enterprise, Mrs. Frese said. Furrows for the spring planting will be fall-plowed this year.

Even so, the bed will demand plenty of work. It will be larger, for one thing. Gladioli bulbs produce new corms which are separated from the parent bulb and are planted, either producing flowers, or maturing for a year if too small to yield blossoms immediately.

Mrs. Frese said she and Jodi will have about 2,000 bulbs to set out in April.

The work has only begun when planting is completed, however. Early morning hoeing is necessary to keep the rows free of weeds, and the flowers require an inch of water each week for healthy growth.

The work doesn't end with the close of summer, either. The last bouquet of the season was cut last week, and the gardeners are now busy digging up the bulbs, drying them, and powdering them with insecticide. They will be stored in a cellar through the winter months, separated according to variety.

PICTURE AND STORY BY JIM STRAYER

Gladioli have sword-shaped leaves and spikes of brilliant colored flowers. The Frese garden produces just about every color imaginable, from 30 different varieties. The names of a few describe the variety of hues: Wine and Roses, Lilac and Charreuse, Banana Split, Black Walnut, Purple Tarts, Blue Bird, and Orange Crush, to name a few.

Mrs. Frese has had home gladioli gardens for years, and Jodi became interested in gardening through a project with the Gingham Gals 4-H project. Roy Meier provided advice when mother and daughter decided to try commercial growing.

He and his sister, Annie, grew commercial quantities of the flowers for about 15 years, but got out of the business five or six years ago.

Bulbs are purchased from suppliers in Minnesota and Wisconsin. The Frese family had an opportunity to visit their suppliers, some with gladioli gardens as large as 35 acres.

"It was quite spectacular," Mrs. Frese said, adding that her visit convinced her and Jodi are taking the right steps in tending their garden. "They do everything by hand, too," she explained.

With some 30 varieties of gladioli in various stages of bloom throughout the summer months, the Frese garden, about a mile south of Wayne, is a feast for the eye. So much so, Mrs. Frese said, that the first reaction of most people is to sniff the brilliant blossoms. Gladioli, however, have no fragrance.

That poses no problem, Mrs. Frese said. "Their beauty makes up for it."

JODI FRESE, a 14-year-old Wayne High freshman, admires some of the 1,400 gladioli she and her mother, Mrs. Ivan Frese, raised during the summer. The last bouquet of the year has been cut, and bulbs are now being stored for the winter, awaiting spring when they will be planted, and allowed to blossom again into brilliant hues.

More Women Working

Almost half of the married women in the nation now work in jobs covered by Social Security, according to Dale Branch, Social Security district manager in Norfolk.

More than 22 million married women — 47.1 per cent of them — have jobs outside their homes compared to 43.6 per cent 10 years ago, according to the U.S. Department of Labor.

"Working women build Social Security disability, survivors, retirement and Medicare protection for themselves and their families," Branch said. "More married women work now than in 1967 because families are smaller and there are more jobs for women and more day-care facilities for children."

Monthly Social Security benefits can be paid to a wife on her work record even if her husband keeps working, according to Branch. And, if a woman has worked long enough in jobs covered by Social Security and then retires, becomes disabled, or dies, her children can be paid benefits on her record until they're 18 — or until 22 if they're full-time students in school and remain unmarried.

Full Social Security retirement benefits can start when the worker is 65, reduced benefits at 62. Disability benefits can be paid to workers under 65 and their families when the worker is disabled and not expected to be able to do any substantial work for a year or more.

People retiring in 1977 generally can get social security retirement payments with as little as six and one-half years of work covered by Social Security. To get disability payments, workers generally need six and one-half years of work covered by Social Security with at least five years of it in the 10 years before the disability began. But workers disabled before the age of 31 may be eligible for payments with as little as one and one-half years of work covered by social security, depending on age. Medicare starts for most people at 65, he noted. But disabled people under 65 can get Medicare if they've been entitled to social security disability benefits for at least 24 consecutive months.

Walthill Center Launches Fund Raising Drive

The Walthill Center for Rural Affairs will launch its annual fall fund raising drive Oct. 3 with the theme "Help Us Ask a Few Tough Questions."

Since its inception in 1973, the center has gained a reputation for digging deep for the answers to nagging questions about how various public policies affect rural Nebraska. The organization has quizzed its way into important issues like corporate farming, monopoly price fixing, groundwater use, and alternative energy sources.

"Along the way, we've had to ask a few tough questions," say co-directors Don Ralston and Mary Strang. "We depend on rural Nebraskans to help us keep All the Bankers Gone? The goal of the fund raiser is $19,000. The funds will be used to support the Center's news journal, Nebraska's New Land Review, which is mailed free to 3,000 subscribers, and its special research reports.

During the past year, the Center issued a special report on the decline of independent banking in Nebraska and its effect on farm credit. The report, Where Have All the Bankers Gone?, revealed that 20 per cent of Nebraska's rural state banks had over half their stock pledged as collateral to a city bank, and that only one-third of the banks in Nebraska are independently owned.

The center also uncovered evidence of price fixing in the edible bean industry in western Nebraska, helping to launch a Nebraska Attorney General's investigation into competition in the industry.

The drive will include speaking engagements, media advertising, and direct mail solicitations. The drive will conclude with the center's annual meeting in January. Contributions may be sent to the center offices in Walthill.

Safety Course Required for Young Hunters

State law now requires that youngsters 12 through 15 must successfully complete a hunter safety course before they can hunt.

Roy Stohler of Concord will be conducting a certification course beginning Oct. 10 at 7:30 p.m. at the Northeast Station near Concord. Other classes will be held on October 17 and October 24.

Hunter safety training is definitely a step in the right direction toward eliminating hunting accidents, improving the hunter's image and introducing a positive approach to shooting, Stohler said. Hunters who will be 12 during 1977 are eligible to take the course and will not receive certification. Stohler's telephone number for those wishing additional information is 586-2261.

Thought for Today By Rowan Wiltse

"Abuse, if you ignore it, will gradually die away; but, if you show yourself irritated, you will be thought to have deserved it."

Tacitus and his vicious gossip. . . was an old one when Tacitus, a Roman historian and philosopher of the first century, made his comment. Tacitus' solution is still the best.

Our natural inclination is to react vigorously. . . to defend ourself and perhaps inflict some damage in return for the hurt we have suffered. The most effective defense is simply to ignore the abuse, signifying it is unworthy of notice.

Three generations of service to the families of Wayne and surrounding area.

Ceilings by Celotex

As seen on TV

Ceiling feature acoustical control qualities in addition to beautiful, decorative appearances. The surfaces of these ceilings have tiny pin perforations which serve to absorb sound and thus help to reduce noise levels in a room. Acoustical tile provide better sound absorption performance than is normally achieved with gypsum board plaster or wood ceiling surfaces. This panoramic Tiara Ceiling makes a beautifully dramatic difference.
