Ailing Spikers Drop 5 Matches

Wayne State's volleyball woes continued as Berniece Fulton's ailing spikers lost five matches during the week to drop their record for the year to 12-16. Three of the losses were to Central States Conference teams, giving the Cats a 2-7 mark in league play. Wayne lost to Doane and Peru at Crete Friday. Doane defeated the Cats, 12-15, 15-11, 15-12 while Peru won 15-4, 15-12.

Prep Picks

The following is a list of this week's area prep football games. Winners are selected in boldface by sports writer Bob Bartlett.

Wayne at Emerson Hubbard, 24-10; Coleridge at Winside, 13-7; Bancroft at Allen, 28-0; Wakefield at Hartington, 21-7; Wausa at Laurel, 14-0.

Backstop Bob Bartlett

WHILE flying those friendly skies to Denver and back over the weekend, I got an inside look at pro football via an article written for an airline magazine.

In a question and answer session, former New York Giants halfback and end Frank Gifford gave a closer look at the intricacies of watching a football game.

Gifford, who does the play-by-play for ABC's Monday night football telecast, doesn't mind pointing out that a spectator can follow a ball game as well on television as in the stadium. Fact is, the viewer can follow it better, he said.

"Of course, you'll never get the atmosphere and the feel of a stadium, but technically, there's no way you can see with the naked eye what television can show you — the replays, the slow motion, and all the technology that's been developed over the years. We have 14 cameras; you have two eyeballs."

On the subject of the game itself, Gifford noted that there are a lot of subtle keys to tell you where the ball is going. Sometimes you'll get individuals — like the pulling guards — who'll give you a clue. "There will be a lot of fake action but those guards usually won't be faking because they've got to get out there in front of the runner."

Question: Can you tell early in a game if one team has an edge over the other? Answer: Yes. "It's almost something you feel. As a player, you sense it immediately."

Another clue is the team which consistently comes up with a second and three, a second and four, that's a team to watch, Gifford said.

As far as Gifford is concerned, quarterbacks have been overrated when it comes to a team's success or failure. He blames the press, and the people who don't understand what football is all about. Most good teams are running teams, he said, adding that a team which can stay on the ground and score usually has control of the game.

On the other hand a quarterback of exceptional ability can make a big difference. "You get a team with a Kenny Stabler or a Joe Namath and you could have a winner. I think Namath is going to carry his team to the Super Bowl. Whether they're going to win or not we don't know. But they could easily. He's got great talent. There's nothing really wrong with him. I'm a big fan of Namath's."

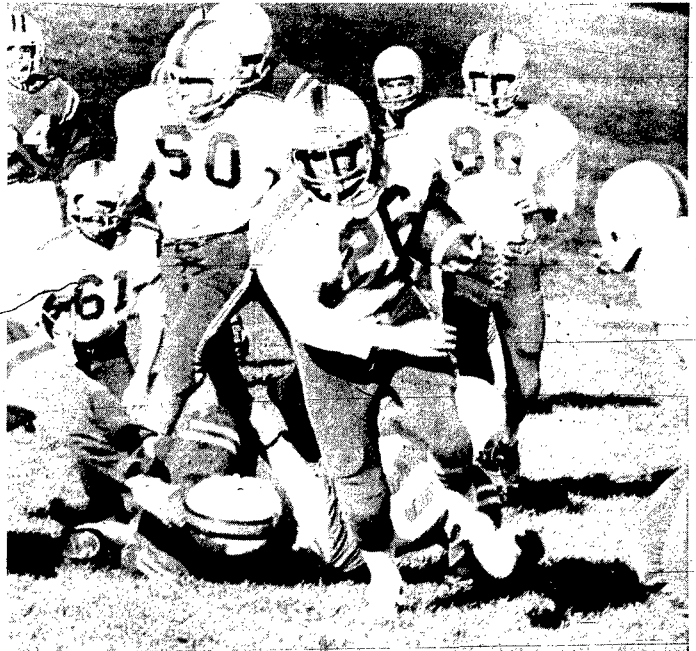

Question: If most quarterbacks are overrated, what dimension of the game has been underrated? Answer: Defense. The best thing you can have on a football team is good defense, Gifford said. Fans, commentators and newspaper people want to see offense, but any good football person will agree that what's important is the defense. "As an announcer, I've been trying to balance the coverage of offense and defense for years. You give me a team with a good offense and one with a good defense, and unless you have an extraordinary quarterback, the defense will win it every time."

"A good team is a team that constantly has the other team off balance. When you see this, you're usually looking at a defense that is a totally orchestrated movement of eleven players. Take the Dallas Cowboys. Watch the Cowboys: every time you turn around Leroy Jordan, the middle linebacker, has another tackle. But what you may not see are the two interior tackles pinching off the guards so that none of the blockers gets to Leroy. He's so attuned to their defense — coach Tom Landry's defense — that Jordan can look into that backfield, pick up his keys and know right away where that ball's going to be. A lot of time, he hasn't even looked at the quarterback. He watches the flow; he watches the guards pull. He's right where the ball is. You don't get many players who are coached that well and you don't get many people as disciplined as Leroy Jordan. He's a great player, but he's also got a great defense behind him."

TURNING to the subject of prep football, our Herald, backstop thinks it has come up with a perfect list of predictions this Friday. After stumbling over the Wakefield-Winside match (I did the same thing by picking Wakefield to win), the team of Dave and Ray ended up last week with a 3-1 record for a season showing of 19-10.

This Friday night they see Wayne over Emerson-Hubbard, 20-7; Coleridge past Winside, 14-12; Hartington by Wakefield, 12-8; Bancroft over Allen, 35-0, and Laurel past Wausa, 14-6.

Off to Another Fast Start

GALLOPING Chip Carr (26) ran for 120 yards and scored two touchdowns Tuesday to lead the freshmen to a 25-8 victory over West Point Central Catholic. Carr put the locals on the scoreboard in the first quarter on a 32-yard end around play. Robbie Harmeler made the tally 12-0 at the half with a 25-yard scoring burst in the second period. In the second half, Carr went 58 yards up the middle on the first play of the third quarter before quarterback Jere Morris rifled a 20-yard TD pass to Kevin Nissen. Following the last score, Nissen booted the PAT. With three seconds left CC scored on a 53-yard pass play to prevent the shutout. Also leading Wayne's offense was Bryan Aquirre.

Osmond Dumps Winside in 3

Despite a "well-played" game, coach Kathy O'Connor's Winside Wildcats couldn't come up with a victory Tuesday night when invading Osmond won in three sets.

The Tigers won the first 15-4 before Winside came back with the identical score to send the match into another set. There Osmond posted a 15-9 win to drop Winside's overall record to 4-9.

Wausa Reserves Blast Winside

Host Wausa reserves whalloped Winside Monday, 30-6, to drop the Wildcats' record to 0-2 for the season. Next contest for the JVs is Monday against Coleridge.

Wakefield Can Claim Share of L-C Title

Wakefield can play the role of spoiler tonight (Thursday) and at the same time pick up a share of the West Lewis and Clark volleyball title if the Trojanettes topple host Wausa.

A Wakefield win would put coach Ernie Kovar's team in a three-way tie for first with the Vikings and Osmond. As a result, Osmond would go to the conference playoffs next week. If Wausa wins, it would represent the division next week.

Wakefield lined up for the conference battle Tuesday night with a three-set win over Bancroft, 14-16, 15-6 and 15-8, as the Trojanettes treated hometown fans to their sixth win in 10 starts during Parents Night.

Gloria Hansen, Robin Mills and Lisa Paul top scorers with 14, 10 and nine points respectively. Mills led setters with 13 while Kathy Schwarden had seven. In the spiking department, Karen Johansen had 12 with nine unreturnable, and Lisa Greve had six. Paul had five.

After a slow start this season, Wakefield's reserves pushed their record past the .500 mark with 15-10 and 15-9 wins for a 5-4 record. The C team dropped its eighth game in nine starts, 10-15 and 8-15.

quarterback Jeff Dion and Rick Johnson. Dion went one yard on a sneak play following a fumble recovery by Scott Kay who returned the ball to SSC's four yard line. Johnson dashed 24 yards to paydirt to cap a 50-yard scoring march.

A pair of fumbles in the second quarter halted Wayne's dream of a victory. The Devils coughed up the ball deep in their own territory where SSC took advantage for both scores.

Loss of Vision Doesn't Slow WSC Student

By RICK POMERVILLE
WSC News Service

Evelyn Haines has adjusted very well to college life, especially for a blind, 38-year-old mother of three.

"It's fun," she says with an ever-present smile. "When you're older, you look at going to school a lot differently."

Mrs. Haines, a sophomore at Wayne State College, lost about 95 per cent of her eyesight two years ago to retinitis pigmentosa, an inherited blinding disease. After losing her vision, she was offered a chance to attend college through a vocational rehabilitation program.

"I always wanted to come back to school," she said. "Monetarily I was more able to after I was blind."

She maintains a better than "B" average with 14 credit hours. Though she lives about one mile from campus, she said she has no problems making the 20-minute walk, using a cane to guide her way. She jokes about the walk and the reactions of other students.

"I use a fiberglass cane that works great as a ski pole in the winter if you're falling," she laughs. "Someone once asked me if it was part of a pole lamp."

Evelyn said she has had few problems in classes. She wears a braille watch to make classes on time. She also tapes lectures. Required books, in taped cassette form, are ordered from New York. A "reader" (someone to read materials to her) is furnished for assigned readings or special items needed from the college library.

"The only trouble I have is on research," she said. "You can't really expect a college of this size to have all the facilities I need, so I have a reader, friends or my daughter to help me."

Evelyn is divorced, but her children, ages 14, 16 and 18, have helped her college career by editing papers she types and sharing household chores.

"They are just wonderful," she said. "My daughter reads my papers after I type them and corrects mistakes."

Evelyn said she enjoys life as a student and attends seminars, concerts and other campus activities. But, because she is an older student, she would rather be with her children.

"I think it is a matter of time and priorities," she said. "I would rather be home with my daughter than at a football game."

Freedom is very important to Evelyn. She could have a "seeing eye" dog to help her around campus, but she said she would rather not have to worry about caring for a dog.

"Independence can sometimes get you into trouble," she said. "When you do need help you are afraid sometimes to ask. Other people are afraid to ask if you are having problems."

She said she gets along well with students on campus. What she likes most about campus is being treated as a "regular" person.

"I have run into problems with people treating me a little different downtown," she said. "I haven't run into this very much on campus. In fact, most of my friends just say 'I forget you are blind, and I just love that.'"

MRS. EVELYN HAINES has no problems getting around the Wayne State College campus, though she lost 95 per cent of her vision to a disease two years ago. The 38-year-old mother of three said she enjoys being a college student. "When you're older, you look at going to school a lot differently."

Campus Students Score Higher

Students living on campus at Wayne State College have higher grade point averages than students living off campus, according to recent registrar figures for the first and second terms of the 1976-77 academic year.

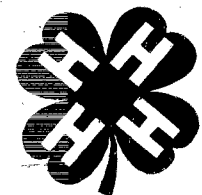

Grade averages for on-campus students were higher overall than for off-campus students during freshman through senior years.

The largest difference be-

Antelope Hunters Record Good Year

Nebraska antelope hunters recorded a 76 per cent success during the recent rifle antelope season that ended on Oct. 2, according to Bob Craig of Alliance, Game and Parks biologist. "Check station data indicates 1,325 antelope were harvested by 1,735 permit holders," Craig said. His information shows 83 per cent of the harvest occurred during the first three days of the season, with an average of 1.46 days spent in pursuit of the pronghorns.

"The 76 per cent success compares well with the 1976 success of 73 per cent," Craig added. "But, our antelope hunters have scored even higher success in years past. Earlier aerial survey work indicated several Panhandle management units were below the 1976 populations, but other units jumps, one by over 50 per cent."

Leslie Lassies

The Leslie Lassies 4-H Club held its achievement meeting the evening of Oct. 5 in the Alvin Svoboda home. Members and their mothers attended.

Books were turned in and premiums presented to the girls. Ice cream and a cake baked and decorated by Mrs. Jerry Clausen were served for lunch. All members' names were on the cake.

tween on and off-campus students was with the sophomore students. Off-campus sophomores averaged 2.59 (on a 4 point scale) during 1976 and 2.76 on campus. Winter semester on-campus students averaged 2.8 and off campus 2.66.

Dr. Marvin Beamer, director of residence life at WSC, said he is not surprised by the figures. He said living on campus provides "conveniences" not available to off-campus students, such as cooked meals and little or no transportation requirements.

"On-campus students have more time for studying because certain things are done for them," he said. "Grades are naturally higher because students live on the doorstep of the classroom."

Beamer said on-campus students are located in the center of campus activities and are likely to study more than off-campus counterparts.

"Off-campus students study at home and do not use the library here," he said. "They drive to class and leave the educational environment at the end of the class period."

Beamer added that on-campus students become familiar with course instructors and are more able to gain extra class scheduling assistance from classmates who live nearby.

Though the registrar's statistics show yearly increases in averages, the overall total average shows off-campus students achieve higher grade point averages. Beamer said those averages are misleading because of a "disproportionate" number of freshman and upper division students who tend to live on campus.

About 10 per cent of the on-campus students between 1975 and 1977 were seniors, while 50 per cent were freshmen. Beamer said freshmen and sophomores are not in their major study areas and have lower averages than juniors and seniors. The grades in the first two years lower the overall on-campus average.

Beamer said he thinks the figures indicate that students should consider the academic benefits resulting from on-campus living before deciding where to live while in college.

WH Cheerleaders Rate 'Superior'

Winside High cheerleaders received a superior rating during a cheer clinic Saturday at the University of South Dakota at Vermillion.

The girls were Alene George, Brenda Voss, Terri Hartmann, Coleene Miller and Lori Langenberg. The team was among 25-30 squads attending the all-day clinic sponsored by the University's cheerleaders.

Hospital Foundation Pledge Committee Is Still Active

The pledge service committee of the Wayne Hospital Foundation is continuing its activity in collecting pledges that were made and remain unpaid in connection with Providence Medical Center in Wayne, according to committee chairman Kenneth Olds.

Olds said some pledges have become uncollectible because of death or because of persons involved moving from the community. "There is therefore a need to collect unpaid pledges from other persons and organizations which have not paid their pledges as of this time," Olds said.

The Wayne Hospital Foundation has discontinued its office in the Chamber of Commerce office in order to avoid operating expenses, but payment on pledges or other contributions to the fund can be made to Robert Jordan at the State National Bank, Joan Lage at the First National Bank or to Olds.

The Parable of The Chewing Gum Man*

It was common knowledge among his colleagues that William Wrigley, Jr. attributed the success of his chewing gum empire to constant and forceful advertising.

Once he was traveling to California on the famous but now extinct Super Chief with a young accountant from his firm. As they were reviewing the figures for a quarterly statement, the young man said, "Sir, Wrigley's gum is known and sold all over the world. We have a larger share of the market than all of our competitors combined. Why don't you now save the millions you are spending on advertising and shift those dollars into the profit column for the next quarter?"

Wrigley thought for a moment and then asked "Young man, how fast is this train going?"

"About sixty miles an hour," replied the young accountant.

And Wrigley asked, "Then why doesn't the railroad remove the engine and let the train travel on its own momentum?"

Moral: Cut your promotional dollars and you cut your own steam. Keep your momentum going with a regular advertising program in

The power district's schedule calls for selection of a proposed route line to be completed in November. Construction is scheduled to start in the summer of 1978 with completion in September 1979.

Norris expressed surprise, saying the company has releases signed by all property owners whose land was crossed by the line.

The NPPD official negotiating for the easement told him all his neighbors had signed releases granting easements to build the line across their land.

A neighbor, Don Thies, fought NPPD in court from 1972 through 1976 before receiving a $20,000 settlement, Dangberg pointed out.

The beleaguered Norris defended NPPD, saying easement acquisition on the last power line project had been according to law.

Legion Auxiliary Receives Assignments

The American Legion Auxiliary met Monday evening at the Legion Hall. Special guest was Marcia Rastede who talked and showed slides taken during her three-week seminar at Freedom's Foundation in Valley Forge, Pa.

A letter and gift shop assignment were read from Mrs. Ardell Mueller of Thurston, District 111 president. The unit is asked to send 14 gifts of $2 each for hospitalized veterans to their families at Christmas.

The Allen unit is again planning to serve coffee during parent-teacher conferences at the Allen school on Nov. 3.

The Allen-Waterbury rescue unit was called at 10 a.m. Sunday to the Gary Blair residence to take their infant daughter, Holly, to St. Luke's Medical Center in Sioux City.

The Junior MYF of the Allen United Methodist Church elected new officers Oct. 9. They are Leonard Wood, president; Joe Ellis, vice president; Des Williams, secretary; Eric Anderson, treasurer, and Robb Linafelter, news reporter.

The Jack Mitchells and the Clarence Schroeders were guests in the Vernon Ellis home Friday for a birthday supper honoring the host.

Eleven members responded to roll call with their favorite soup and accompaniment. The lesson, "Soup Sense" was given by Mable Wheeler and Joyce Schroeder, who served samples of fruit soup and clam chowder.

Three States Join AGNET

Montana, North Dakota and South Dakota have joined the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources' Agricultural Computer Network (AGNET). The Old West Regional Commission has sponsored the project's 30-month trial period.

The three states were hooked up with AGNET's computer in the Nebraska State Capitol in mid-September. Wyoming also eventually will be a part of the project, although no date has been set for its entry. Nebraska has had an AGNET system since 1975.

AGNET was developed at UNL for use in research, Extension and teaching programs and farming and ranching, according to Dr. James Kendrick, co-leader of the AGNET System and a UNL professor of agricultural economics. Dr. Thomas L. Thompson, UNL professor of agricultural engineering, is co-leader.

The states involved in the program have access to information regarding irrigation scheduling, livestock rations, family budgeting, diet, machinery depreciation and other topics related to agriculture and home economics and family living.

AGNET regional supervisor Al Stark said each state will operate independently by setting up the programs they feel will be most beneficial to them.

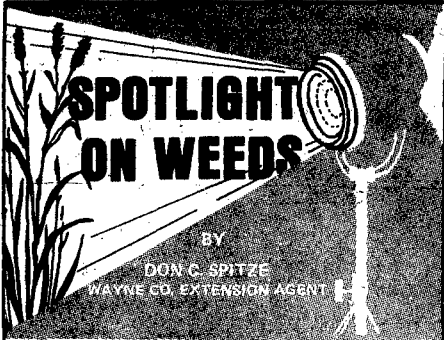

"At this point, the states that just joined the system are using Nebraska's programs. As they develop their own, we will be able to have access to those programs," Stark explained. He added that each AGNET participant will evaluate the program at the end of 30 months (March 1980).

"The Old West Commission supplied most of the funds for the states to join the program, although each contributed some of its own. At the end of the trial period, each state will decide if it wants to remain in the program and supply its own funds," he said.

He explained that since each state is fairly independent within the system, the program will not die at the end of 30 months just because one state decides to drop AGNET.

He pointed out that the program's advantages include sharing ideas and eliminating duplication of efforts. "There is going to be some cost savings by not having each state writing its own programs. Another advantage of the linkage is the potential of combining expertise. Since more programs will be available, the information received will be broader based," he said.

Kendrick noted that while it will be more difficult to run a program with five separate components, instead of one, the advantages far outweigh the disadvantages.

WAYNE CO. EXTENSION AGENT

Description — Musk thistle is also known as nodding thistle. The deep reddish purple flowers are large and attractive. The head is solitary on the end of the stem and nods or hangs down as it grows in size. The thistle is primarily a biennial.

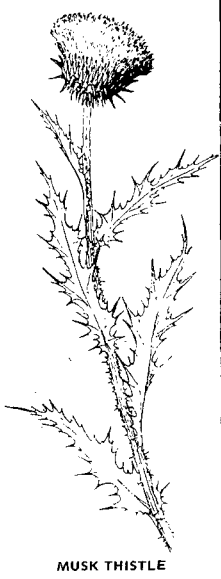

The deeply cut (segmented) leaves are dark green with a light green midrib. There is a grayish green area at the outer edge of each spine-tipped leaf segment. The leaves extend onto the stem, giving it a frilled appearance. The plant is relatively free of hairiness. Plant height varies between two and seven feet.

Musk thistle may produce as many as 20,000 seeds and germination may run as high as 95 per cent. Blooming starts with the terminal head the first week in June and continues until mid-August.

Control — There are two different herbicides that may be used to control musk thistle. You may use 1.5 quarts of 2,4-D per acre. Treat rosettes in late fall.

A just released herbicide that looks even more promising than 2,4-D is Tordon 22K. Use this chemical at the rate of six to eight fluid ounces per acre on permanent grass planting in the fall between October to soil freeze-up, — or Dec. 1, which ever is earlier.

Special Remarks — Tordon has just been released for use on musk thistle in rangeland and permanent grass pastures. Tests have shown that Tordon when used in the fall is more effective than other herbicides.

MUSK THISTLE

Soil-Test for Nitrogen Important

Nitrogen in soil is very much like a bank account — there are both deposits and withdrawals, said district Extension agronomist George Rehm.

Deposits are made by applying nitrogen fertilizers, he continued. The crops, of course, withdraw the applied nitrogen. There is, however, one major difference. The bank supplies monthly statements of deposits and withdrawals. Today's farmer does not receive monthly reports describing the status of the nitrogen account in his soil.

It isn't very difficult, however, to check the nitrogen status on a yearly basis. This can be done very easily by using a regular soil testing program. Soil samples can be easily analyzed to determine the amount of residual or carryover nitrogen in the soil.

The nitrogen content of the soil varies from farm to farm and from field to field, according to Rehm. Nitrogen is mobile and will move down through the soil with rainfall and irrigation water. Crops can use the nitrogen that accumulates below the soil surface as well as the nitrogen that is in the surface.

Nitrogen in the soil is related to bank accounts in another way. Since nitrogen recommendations are adjusted for the amount of carryover or residual nitrogen in the soil, fertilizer recommendations are reduced when carryover is high. If carryover nitrogen is high, less money needs to be spent for nitrogen fertilizer and this is good for the bank account.

The amount of carryover nitrogen in the soil cannot be determined by analyzing a sample of surface soil. A sample of the subsoil is needed. For example, the surface soil from a field at the Northeast Station had 15 pounds of carryover nitrogen per acre at the start of the 1977 growing season. However, the soil from one to two feet and 23 pounds carryover nitrogen per acre and the soil from two to three feet had 34 pounds of residual nitrogen per acre.

If nitrogen recommendation had been based on the analysis of the surface soil only, more nitrogen fertilizer than actually needed would have been used. Collection of subsoil samples is important for making accurate nitrogen recommendations for crop production, Rehm said.

Nitrogen can also accumulate in some sandy soils. So, taking residual nitrogen is also important for these soils, he added.

Fall is an ideal time for taking soil samples to measure the amount of available nitrogen and other needed nutrients. Fields can be sampled any time after harvest. Local county extension offices as well as the Northeast Experiment Station have the free sample boxes and easy-to-follow instructions.

Climate Control Still Questionable

This question was discussed by the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources meteorologist Dr. Blaine Blad at a convention of five professional organizations meeting in Lincoln. The groups were the Nebraska chapters of the Soil Conservation Society of America, Society for Range Management, Professional Soil Scientists, Forage and Grassland Council and the Central Great Plains chapter of the Society of American Foresters.

Dr. Blad defined the climate as a broad description of the general weather conditions for a large region generally based upon long term averages. The climate is determined by the large scale weather systems that dominate such an area.

Most of the modifications to global climate have thus far been more or less unfortunate and incidental rather than beneficial and deliberate. Global climate is in a delicately balanced state and a change of one-degree Celsius or 1.8 degrees Fahrenheit in the average temperature of the earth would have drastic effects. This temperature could be altered by the screening of the sun's heat rays by pollutants in the atmosphere.

The recently much-publicized aerosols and other particulate matter such as dust and smoke could have such a screening effect. On the other hand, the increased consumption of fossil fuels has created more carbon dioxide, possibly creating an even more favorable situation for plant growth. Dr. Blad listed five environmental factors that affect plant growth: radiation from the sun, plant or leaf temperature, availability of water, carbon dioxide concentration, and plant nutrients.

Blad says that although the inadvertent alteration of the atmosphere has as yet had only minor effects if any, on global climate, future increases of atmospheric contamination are potentially deadly and should be watched closely.

When attacked, the hedgehog rolls itself into a ball, thus exposing no part of its body that is not protected by its sharp prickly spines.

Blad cited much more effective management methods in regard to the "microclimate," a situation wherein each field or location may have a climate drastically different from the general climate. He mentioned such natural causes as the direction and degree of slope, depressions, the type of crop and vegetation, and proximity to large bodies of water.

Alteration of the air or plant temperature in a microclimate has been accomplished by irrigation, heaters, wind machines, windbreaks, protective foams and the use of shade. Water is conserved in a microclimate by the use of methods such as mulching, ecotallow and minimum tillage.

And of course a controlled environment or microclimate can be created by the use of a green house for use with high value crops.

Blad summed up by saying that the question of managing the general climate has to be answered at present with a big "maybe" and that currently the best bet is to manage the microclimate.

State Is Popcorn Leader

Even with popcorn production down in most areas, Nebraska popcorn lovers needn't worry about running out of the snack, since they live in the number one popcorn producing state.

Milford Hanna, University of Nebraska-Lincoln agricultural engineering assistant professor, said that Nebraska is one of the two states whose 1977 popcorn production is above the 1976 production level.

He noted that there is a slight surplus of 1976 popcorn, which might account for the decline in the amount of acreage planted in most areas.

"Most popcorn is planted under contract by a professor," Hanna said. "If a farmer isn't contracted, he doesn't plant the crop."

He added that the demand for popcorn most likely would go up if there was another use for it besides popping.

Nebraska had been the nation's leader in popcorn production since 1974.

Hanna speculated that Nebraska's popcorn production has grown during the past five years due to the increased use of center pivot irrigation.

"The breakthrough with that type of irrigation began about five years ago in Nebraska, which not-so-coincidentally, is about the time the state began having the U.S.'s top production figures," he said.

He pointed out that Nebraskans are encouraged to plant popcorn since there are two processing plants in the area: Blevins in North Bend and the American Popcorn Co., in Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Keeping Kiwanis Going

RECENTLY installed as president of the Wayne Kiwanis Club was Deryl Lawrence, second from right. His officers include, from left, vice president Sid Hillier, president-elect Leon Meyer, Lawrence and secretary-treasurer Vern Fairchild. During this week's meeting, Wayne-Carroll school superintendent Francis Haun told members that the school system again has earned the AA accreditation for its high achievement in all categories of readiness used by the state department of education. Wayne is only one of 29 schools across the state which has received this rating. The school first earned the AA standard in the early 1970's and had maintained that standard since.

Dixon Farm Bureau Picks Dale Jackson

At an annual dinner meeting in Wakefield last month, members of the Dixon County Farm Bureau heard a financial report and elected officers for the coming year. Dale Jackson will serve as president. Other new officers are Sterling Borg, vice president; Mrs. Ed Fahrenholz, women at large, and Gaylen Fisher, youth at large. Delegates to the state convention, slated for Dec. 4-7 at North Platte, are Harold George of Dixon, Carl Armstrong of Ponca and Dale Jackson of Allen. Alternates are Vern Jones, Allen; Steve Von Minden, Ponca and Vernon Grosvenor, Dixon. Members representing townships in the county are Dick Grosvenor, Newcastle, Ponca, Silvercreek and Hooker; James Stapleton, Ottercreek; Jan Von minden, Galena; Glen Magnuson, Concord; Courtland Roberts, Springbank; Lyle Boeckenhauer, Wakefield and Emerson; Clarence Boeckenhauer, Logan; Gaylen Jackson, Clark, and Gary Krause, Daily.

Mrs. Fahrenholz told about women's activities throughout the year, which included a report on the safety survey. An insurance report was given by Paul Fisher. Elmer Gall of Norfolk, district representative of Farm Bureau, spoke on state activities and various new services which will be made available. About 70 members turned out for the meeting and program.

Cob Feeding Experiment Promising

One promising laboratory method of increasing the digestibility of corn cobs fed to ruminant animals apparently has some pitfalls when applied to the feedlot, according to a recent study at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The study was conducted by Larry L. Berger, 26, of Manhattan, Kan., and earned the animal science graduate student a $100 check and a plaque recently after his competitive paper reporting its results was judged the best of seven entered at the annual meeting of the Midwest Section of the American Society of Animal Science in Madison, Wis.

It was the first time in the three-year history of the competition that a UN-L student has won. Each animal science department from universities in the 12 states of the midwestern section is eligible to designate one graduate student to participate.

Berger said his research conducted under the supervision of Dr. Terry Klopfenstein, found that test tube experiments indicated that treating cobs with 7.5 percent sodium hydroxide can improve their fiber digestibility from 53.6 per cent to 75.6 per cent.

"Generally, sodium hydroxide appears to improve the digestibility of the fibrous components of forages," he said. "It allows the animal to more completely utilize the energy in forages."

In the laboratory, he said, the greatest improvement in digestibility occurs when cobs are treated with five per cent or higher levels of sodium hydroxide.

"Although the exact mechanisms by which sodium hydroxide treatments improve fiber digestibility are not clear, at least part of the improvement results from the solubilization of hemicellulose," he said.

But Berger said digestion trials on steers and lambs showed that levels of four per cent or more, the additional digestibility potentially made available by sodium hydroxide was not efficiently utilized.

When the same 7.5 per cent treatment level was fed to lambs, he said, digestibility was improved to 66.2 per cent, nearly 10 per cent less than was indicated in the test tube trial.

"At levels of five per cent sodium hydroxide or higher, the negative response in animals became noticeable," he said. "And at 7.5 and 10 per cent levels, it had a marked effect."

"That's probably because, at least at high levels, sodium hydroxide appears to have a negative effect on the microbial population in the rumen," Berger said. "Because it has this negative effect, it doesn't allow these bugs to digest all of the fibers that potentially are available."

Berger said two possible explanations for the effect high levels of sodium hydroxide apparently have on fiber digestion exist:

Ruminants seem to have more difficulty in digesting the cellulose in cobs treated with the chemical because it inhibits enzyme action.

Ruminants fed treated cobs have an increased rate of feed passage through the rumen, lessening the amount of time the microbes have to digest the cobs.

In the study, corn cobs were ground through a .64 centimeter screen, raised to a 60 per cent moisture content and treated with 0, 2.5, 5, 7.5 and 10 per cent sodium hydroxide by weight, Berger said. The cobs then were packed into 208 liter drums, lined with plastic and allowed to react for 10 days before feeding. The rations fed were 80 per cent cobs and 20 per cent supplement, which included 12 per cent crude protein, half from brewers dried grains and half from urea, he said. The resulting complete ration contained 0, 2, 4, 6 and 8 per cent hydroxide.

Results showed that as the level of sodium hydroxide treatment increased, the amount of potentially digestible fiber that was digested in the rumen decreased, Berger said.

Berger said treating cobs with sodium hydroxide is in the "basic research" stage, and said it is too early to make specific recommendations on its use. However, he said, if further refined, such a process of utilizing cobs — a byproduct of crop production — could prove to be economical when grain prices are high by reducing the amount of grain needed in livestock rations.

Several alternatives may be tested at UN-L in an effort to increase the utilization of the potentially digestible fibers of forages made possible by treating cobs, he said.

"We were using maximum levels of sodium hydroxide during the experiments," Berger said. "If we were to combine treated feeds with untreated feeds, it might tend to lessen the negative effects in the rumen and slow the rate of passage of feed."

Another possibility, he said, is to add different minerals, such as calcium, magnesium, potassium and sulfur, to the ration to counteract the effect sodium hydroxide has on enzymes in the rumen.

"Results of experiments adding minerals have been inconsistent at this time," Berger said. "But we're going to continue working with this mineral balance thing. That seems to be the most practical method (of increasing digestibility) at this time because we can incorporate minerals into the ration of supplement easily."

"We need to find a means of alleviating or nullifying somewhat the negative effect of sodium hydroxide on the microbial population in the rumen," he said. "If we can do that, that will be the key."

Girl's Stater Is Guest of Auxiliary

Twenty-one members of the American Legion Auxiliary met Oct. 10 at 8 p.m. Heidi Carlson, daughter of the Elmer Carlson, and girl's stater was guest speaker. She told of her experience at Girl's State in Lincoln this summer. The Christmas gift shop, projects for several veteran's hospitals and the Dixon county convention were discussed. The convention will be held Nov. 11.

Eva Conner, children and youth chairman, reported on several projects that can be carried out in regard to the youth in Wakefield. The group voted to hold a snacking for local elementary school students following a skating party at the skating rink on Halloween. Leona Brt, Eva Conner and Mrs. Warren Bressler served lunch. The next meeting is Nov. 14 at 8 p.m.

Hi League Hayride
The Wakefield Covenant Hi League and several guests enjoyed a hayride to the Dennis Carlson farm Sunday evening. Jim Stout and Mr. Carlson drove the two racks of 24 young people through fields and back roads, as "ghosts and goblins" lurked along the way. A haunted barn was also visited. Hot chocolate and sloppy joes were served by Mrs. Carlson and Mrs. Marvin Borg at the end of the ride. Devotions were led by the sponsors and the Myron Olsons. The topic question was "What would you do if you knew you had one day left?"

Covenant Women Meet
A different type of program created much thought and inspiration for the Wakefield Covenant Women's meeting Oct. 12. Linda Erlanson, using the crude potter's wheel, demonstrated pottery making to set the mood for the theme, "The Vessel Molded."

Various articles were displayed, from the very simple clay pot to the elegant finished pitcher. Each member was asked to compare her life to one of the products, remembering that the Supreme Potter is shaping her.

Clay Larson, Jeannette Hassler and Jeannette Hassler sang "Fill My Vessel." Mrs. Elmer Carlson narrated the many thoughts in keeping with the theme. Ladies in the group read corresponding scripture verses.

EXTENSION NOTES

By Anna Marie Kreifelts

SALE OF DOWN SEEMS TO BE UP

Garments containing down filling have become popular and fashionable. They are especially warm and very light weight.

When buying a down garment check to see that seams are well sewn. Look for neat stitching and no exposed edges of fabric. Many down garments are first filled with down, then quilted. Consumers should make sure all channels contain filling.

Inspect the surface of the garment. Tiny feathers sometimes poke through the surface fabric. Too many feathers poking through will result in excessive down leakage, and might cause consumer dissatisfaction.

A key to the warmth the garment will provide is the amount of loft or thickness of the down filling. The higher the loft the warmer the garment will be. The amount of filling will also determine the degree of bulkiness the garment will have.

With good care a down garment will last for several years. The cleaning procedure is determined by the garment fabric, not by the down filling. Down will usually withstand as many launderings or dry cleanings as the surface fabric. Check the care label on the garment and follow the manufacturer's care instruction.

A quality down garment is both fashionable and designed to give you years of comfort.
