

Democratic Congressional Candidate to Visit Wayne

Congressional candidate H. Hamilton will be in Wayne on Saturday, Nov. 5, to meet with local voters.

Hamilton, a Lancaster County commissioner seeking the Democratic Party's nomination for Nebraska's First Congressional District, will be at the Fourth Jug in Wayne between 2 and 4 p.m. Saturday.

A native of Lincoln, the 35-year-old Hamilton is a graduate of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Teacher's College, and served with the Peace Corps in Ethiopia from 1964-66. He graduated from the UNL College of Law in 1969.

He was a third party anti-Vietnam war congressional candidate in 1968. Since becoming an attorney he has worked as a public defender in Washington, D.C., has been employed with the public service activities division of the American Bar Association in Chicago, was director of the Legal Aid Society of Lincoln for three years, practiced law privately, and opened Nebraska's first legal clinic for middle income clients. He was elected a Lancaster County commissioner in 1974 and in 1976 became commission chairman. He is still serving in that capacity.

Hamilton had originally been scheduled to visit in Wayne Saturday, Oct. 29, but changed the date because of a scheduling conflict.

Wayne County Men 30 Tons Too Heavy

What Wayne County residents weigh, on average, and what they should weigh for proper health, are two different things, it appears.

While the problem is a general one, it is particularly evident in the male segment of the population. Men are considerably heavier now than in former years. Much of their extra poundage has been accumulated in the last decade or two.

To meet the "desirable weight" standards recommended by medical authorities and insurance companies, the local male population over age 18 would have to shed some 61,000 pounds (around 30 tons).

As for the women, they have been gaining, too. But not to the same extent. They have made more of an effort to stay slim.

Fashion has a great deal to do with it. When style dictates a slender look, they proceed to diet and reduce.

By the same token, local people have been getting taller, year by year. The average Wayne County man has added seventh-tenths of an inch to his height since 1960, the figures indicate. He is now slightly over 5 feet 9 inches tall, without shoes.

Women have also been growing. If local women follow the national trend, they now top 5 feet 3 1/2 inches, on the average, which is about half an inch more than before.

The findings are based upon a new sample survey conducted by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and upon similar data gathered in 1960 as part of the Health Examination Survey.

Zoning Controversy Generates Interest

Controversy over a request to rezone some property in Wayne to allow construction of an apartment complex apparently has generated interest in the land as a possible site for a mobile home park.

Mrs. Anna Swinney has requested that about four acres located at the west end of Third Street be rezoned from A-1 (agricultural) to R-2 (residential) and two-family dwellings and multiple family dwellings.

Mrs. Swinney's attorney, Budd Bornhoff, said his client has an opportunity to sell part of the property as a site for a 24-unit apartment complex.

Homeowners in the Knolls and Oak Ridge subdivisions located adjacent to the property are opposed to granting the R-2 zoning, preferring instead an R-1 designation which would permit only one- and two-family homes.

John Struve, acting as a spokesman for property owners opposing Mrs. Swinney's zoning request, said nearby homeowners fear the proposed apartment complex would lower the value of their homes and would create a safety hazard because of increased traffic flow along the already congested Oak Drive.

The city planning commission has recommended to the city council that the R-2 zoning be denied. The council split 4-4 last week on the issue, with mayor Freeman Decker breaking the tie with a vote favoring the request.

The vote wasn't decisive, however. A city ordinance must be passed in order to grant the request for rezoning. A question was raised at the council meeting as to the number of votes needed to approve the request because of the number of signatures on a petition in opposition. It was suggested that a three-fourths council majority would be needed, if enough petition signatures are verified as valid.

City attorney Kern Swarts was directed to check the city zoning ordinance to see if there is such a provision. Swarts Thursday said he had not yet prepared an opinion on the matter. The council is expected to meet in a special session, not yet scheduled, to hear an engineer's report on a water line project.

and the attorney said he might present an opinion then.

City administrator Fred Brink Thursday said Shaker and Robinson Construction of San Bernardino, Calif., has inquired about the Swinney property as a possible site for a mobile home park. Brink said the firm about four years had inquired about building a mobile home park in Wayne. The A-1 zoning currently held by the Swinney property would permit a mobile home park.

Mrs. Swinney said Friday, she had not been approached by the company about acquiring the property.

George Newton of Fairbury, principal developer of the proposed apartment complex, said he became interested in Wayne after being approached by a number of local "prominent businessmen" concerned about the availability of housing in the community.

Zoning Code Draft Expected Tuesday

The Wayne County joint planning commission Tuesday night will review a rough draft of zoning regulations proposed so far for the county.

The commission is still working on the zoning code and Tuesday will review subdivision regulations, but state planning consultant Dave Wright will pass out a preliminary draft of zoning regulations which have been proposed. County clerk Norris Weible, who acts as secretary for the commission, said members will review the preliminary draft and consider any changes they wish to make.

A final draft will be prepared after the commission completes its task of formulating a county zoning code. The commission will schedule a public hearing and receive testimony before a final review of the proposed code.

The planning commission after reaching agreement on the code will forward it to the county board of commissioners, which is responsible for final approval. The board of commissioners will also schedule a hearing on the proposal, and can adopt the code, revise it, or reject it.

Wright Tuesday night will also report on progress in arranging a meeting with the town boards of Winside, Carroll, and Hoskins to discuss zoning regulations for those communities.

The Tuesday night meeting will begin at 8 in the district court room of the county courthouse and is open to the public.

Winside Plans Halloween Party

Halloween in Winside this year will once again be celebrated with a party for preschool through sixth grade youngsters at the city auditorium.

A collection for the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund (UNICEF) will be taken during the evening.

To see that youngsters get home safely, a witches wagon will be held following the party, about 9 p.m. Each child must be at home when he is called to receive a prize.

WSC Records Highest Enrollment Increase

Wayne State College enrollment for 1977, when full and part-time students are considered, compared with 1976 increased by 10.7 per cent, a greater percentage of increase than any other public college or university in Nebraska, according to a report issued by the Nebraska Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers.

Total enrollment for WSC indicated in the report is 2,365 compared with 2,135 last year. The 1977 figure includes 1,799 full time and 566 part time students.

According to the report, 841 men and 958 women are now attending classes on a full time basis. In the part-time category, 214 men and 352 women are attending classes.

WSC president Lyle Seymour commented "Obviously we're pleased when we have an enrollment increase. It indicates we are doing what people in our service region want us to do. We're serving the needs of people in our region.

Among other public institutions offering four-year degree programs, Chadron State College and the University of Nebraska Medical Center each experienced an 8.5 per cent increase in enrollment. The UNMC total is 1,896, including 1,202 full time and 694 part-time students. For Chadron the total is 1,896; 1,286 full time and 783 part time.

Kearney State College increased enrollment by seven per cent, to 6,037, including 4,717 full time and 1,820 part time.

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln, with 22,256 students, and the University of Nebraska-Omaha, with 15,033 each experienced modest increases of .3 per cent.

Peru State College, with 744 students — 602 full time and 142 part time — had a 7.6 per cent decrease, down from last year's total figure of 805.

Among private four-year institutions, Bellevue College has experienced the greatest gain of any Nebraska College, 23.7 per cent. Total enrollment is 1,909, compared with 1,543 last year.

Speaker: Carter Ended 'Lone Ranger' Days

The Carter Administration in an attempt to show a contrast between its conduct of foreign affairs and that of the previous administration has attempted to de-emphasize "big power politics," NBC correspondent Richard Valeriani said Thursday in Wayne, but have since found that big power politics intrudes itself in foreign affairs regardless of policy.

Valeriani, addressing the District 3 Nebraska State Education Association convention at Wayne State College, said the days when Henry Kissinger was for practical purposes a deputy President for foreign affairs, under former Presidents Nixon and Ford, have ended under the Carter regime. "The Lone Ranger has ridden into the sunset. Now it's the cavalry to the rescue."

In opening remarks, the television newsman quipped, "It's good to be in Nebraska, birthplace of the NBC symbol," referring to a settlement made by the National Broadcasting Company after it discovered a new "N" logo it had developed was nearly identical to one in use by the Nebraska Television Network.

The Carter Administration wanted to show at the outset it is concerned about human rights in dealing with foreign affairs, he continued, and the State Department under Carter swiftly repudiated the style of former Secretary of State Kissinger. With the appointment of Cyrus Vance as State Department head, the Secretary of State has again become the agent of the President.

The President had found he likes dealing with foreign affairs, Valeriani said, because of the opportunity to act unilaterally, without interference from Congress.

Foreign affairs give the President an opportunity to be active in a highly visible way, he added, and Carter "is determined to show us he's learning."

The "Carterization" of foreign affairs, Valeriani said, is designed "to make us feel good."

"Pragmatism is down, morality is up," he noted.

The President's three priorities in foreign affairs are human rights, nuclear non-proliferation, and reduction of the sale of conventional arms, the NBC White House and State Department correspondent said. The President is learning he can't reduce the arms traffic by pressure, unilateral action, or by challenging the Russians all over the world, he added.

The Soviet Union's reaction to behind the scenes pressure for human rights, or by Presidential public announcements, was predictable, the newsman said. They felt the U.S. was returning to a Cold War stance aimed at undermining Soviet power.

"The world came to be skeptical about American diplomatic Evangelism," Valeriani said.

Overtures toward establishing diplomatic relations with Cuba and Vietnam are evidence of Carter's attitude of burying the diplomatic hatchet where possible, he said. There is no urgency in bettering relations with those two countries, Valeriani said, and the President hasn't given any reasons for his decision to phase out American troops stationed in Vietnam. There may even be a danger in tampering with the U.S. military deterrent in South Korea, he added. He said deposed budget director Burt Lance might have summed it up best with some down-home Georgia wisdom: "If it ain't broke, don't fix it."

Regarding the Panama Canal treaty proposal, Valeriani said the Carter administration didn't do a very good job at-home in preparing the country for the treaty. The administration was caught up in the imagery of the action, Valeriani said, and forgot to work in the trenches. He predicted the treaty won't be acted upon by the Senate until February, and will pass by a narrow margin.

Making another prediction, the foreign affairs specialist said he thinks there is a 60-40 chance that the Geneva peace conference on the Middle East will reconvene this year or next year, but cautioned that considerable negotiating must take place before a settlement is reached. The official U.S. view now is that after defending itself in four wars, Israel is here to stay; the question is defining the nation's borders.

The American people in conducting foreign affairs must realize the U.S. is no longer the "undisputed king of the world's mountain," the speaker noted.

Fashion Show to Boost Drive

Volunteer workers for the March of Dimes campaign in Dixon County are planning a style show Friday evening to help raise funds for the National Foundation of March of Dimes.

Officers of the Future Homemakers of America chapter at Allen High School will model the garments at 7:30 in the high school auditorium.

Mrs. Loren Carr of Allen, Dixon County chairman for March of Dimes, said the public is invited to see the new fashions. There will be a $2 ad-gauchos and bridal wear.

Music, skits and door prizes will be featured during the show.

All proceeds from the evening will be used by the voluntary health agency to aid in the fight for prevention of birth defects. The March of Dimes supports numerous research programs, medical services, and public and professional health education and community service projects.

Mrs. Garry Schroeder of Wakefield is co-chairman for March of Dimes in Dixon County.

WSC Course Takes Students Into Factories

While other college students are learning in classrooms, the Industrial Production Techniques Class at Wayne State College travels around the state using factories as their learning centers.

The class has been visiting various factories as part of the WSC Industrial Management Program. Instructor Jerry Lynch said the factory visits familiarize the students with the various production methods used in the industry.

The group has toured nine different industries this semester, including Inland Concrete of Lincoln, Vulcraft of Norfolk, Broyhill Industries in Wayne, Fuchs Machinery and Supply of Omaha, Farmiland Industries of Sergeant Bluff, Iowa, Chief Industries in Grand Island, Valmont of Valley, Waubaum's of Wakefield and the Industrial Products Show in Omaha.

Students observe a variety of industrial practices during tours. Lynch said they look at plant layout, production flow, quality control, government regulations, training programs, material handling, working conditions, plant conditions and overall plant management.

Lectures and discussions before and after tours are included in classroom work. Students also study texts to familiarize themselves with different production techniques.

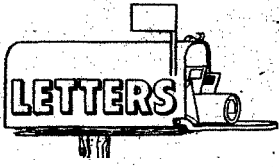

Lynch said the tours are planned to give students exposure to many types of industry. They have visited a trailer fabrication plant, a concrete plant, several metal industries and an egg packing plant. They also plan to tour a medical plant and two electronic industries.

"The students that have completed the program here are able to find jobs in this area that seem to fit in pretty well with the training they have received," Cattle said. "I am very pleased with the results we are having."

Course in part of the Industrial Management Program at WSC. Students combine business classes and industrial art classes to prepare for entry level management positions in various industries.

Dr. Don Cattle, WSC Industrial Arts Division Head, said the program has been successful in training students for the needs of area industries.

"The students that have completed the program here are able to find jobs in this area that seem to fit in pretty well with the training they have received," Cattle said. "I am very pleased with the results we are having."

Writer wants sidewalks cleared

Wayne

Dear Editor: I am very happy about the downtown improvements that have been completed and those that have been planned. Wayne has needed them for a long time. The planners are to be congratulated. Yet I have a serious complaint to make.

I am under the impression that sidewalks are for pedestrians, both for their convenience and their protection, yet I note that one business could hardly wait until the concrete was dry before parking cars on it. This is in violation of a city ordinance. In fact, at one time, a merchant was given a ticket for displaying merchandise on the sidewalk in front of his place of business.

I am referring to the sidewalk at the corner of Third and Logan. This is not only a violation of the city ordinance, but creates a serious and dangerous traffic hazard. Bear in mind the workshop for the handicapped at Second and Logan. Some of these people walk north on Logan and must walk in the street to get past. As to vehicular traffic, one must pull almost into the intersection to see north and south traffic.

I have spoken to a city councilman on this matter and nothing has been done. I was informed that the problem would be taken up with the city administrator who would take action. Nothing has been done.

Perhaps this businessman has unknowingly allowed this situation to exist, perhaps not. Nevertheless it is his merchandise on the sidewalk and should be removed immediately. After all, the downtown improvements were made not only to improve Wayne's appearance but to make it more pleasant to shop in Wayne.

It seems to me that businessmen should take more pride in their businesses and see to it that sidewalks should serve the purpose for which they were built and not for the permanent display of merchandise no matter what it may be.

After some discussion it was suggested that the matter could be settled between the commissioners and the superintendent. The board of county commissioners has proposed making the office appointive instead of elective, and cutting down on the hours the office is open because there are only six rural school districts left in the county.

One year they took their wives along. They added a cook, a maid, two chauffeurs, and a butler. Although they all enjoyed the contact with nature, no one really roughed it. Separate sleeping tents with name plates were supplied. A dining tent about 20 feet square provided a mosquito-free area for relaxed meals. Several vehicles that made the safaris are at the Henry Ford Museum in Dearborn, Michigan, including a 1922 Lincoln kitchen truck, a White truck used for carrying tents and a Ford truck with a water tank.

Entertainment on the trips included high-kicking, stair-jumping, sprinting, tree-chopping, and tree-climbing contests. The newsmen and photographers who covered the vagabonds' adventures reported such feats as Ford's ability to bound up 10 steps in two hops and Burrough's felling a tree in four minutes flat.

Millions of people were exposed to the possibilities of motor camping through the heavily publicized trips, probably stimulating the recreational vehicle industry that today gives Americans the mobility to explore.

STRAYEr Thoughts

Today's paper is published on a special day, Halloween. Morris Jacobsen, teacher at School District 51, again this year submitted a number of stories written by his students about the spooky goings-on. A few of my favorites are reprinted here.

The Owl and the Alligator

By STEVEN RETHWISCH

One Halloween ago, I lay down and thought about Halloween. I thought about witches, goblins and ghosts. I was running from them. They were coming at me with brooms. In sight there was a swamp with alligators swimming in it, their eyes looked like baseballs on the ground. I had no choice but to jump. Splash! I was soaked to the skin and swimming very hard. I almost made the other side when I was bitten by an alligator and he wouldn't let go.

I kept on running and was scared by an owl. He took off flying and landed right on my head. I hit him but he wouldn't let go. But I kept on running with an alligator on my foot and an owl on my head. The witches came in sight again with their brooms. They started pounding on my head harder and harder. They just wouldn't quit. I screamed and woke up. My shirt was soaked because Blacky, my black cat had knocked a glass of water on me. My foot was caught in the covers and Blacky was on my head pounding with his tail. After a while everything was better. That was a scary Halloween.

The Real Thing

By MARK DORING

It was Halloween night and I was invited to a costume party at LeRoy's place. We were going to have a contest to see whose was scarier. LeRoy lives on a farm and I didn't know what place it was. So I went to the house of Dr. Frankenstein. He was having a party too, but I didn't know anybody. I was curious to find out who they were. So when midnight came, I asked Dr. Frankenstein who were the other masked crusaders. Then I found out they were really the real thing. So I ran to a door, opened it and saw Dracula coming out of his coffin. When he got to the door, I slammed it shut in his face. I ran to another door and found Frankenstein coming so I ran till I came to the window. I looked out and saw Harry, the werewolf. I ran down the stairs, passed Dr. Frankenstein and out the door into the cemetery and to a fence that led to LeRoy's place. I told him the story. He didn't believe me.

I was going to show him the house but it was gone so I showed him the place where I jumped the fence and he still didn't believe me.

Glad It's You

By LANCE DEWALD

On Halloween night I was trick or treating. When I got to the last house, it looked like it was haunted. I rang, and rang the doorbell, but no one answered. I went inside. There was a casket, a broom, some teeth, a mummy case, and a skeleton. I went to open the casket to see if there was anything in it. Suddenly I heard some walking up stairs. I went up half way. Then there was a shadow. He started laughing. "Ha, Ha, Ha, Ha, Ha, Ha, Ha you will pay for coming in our haunted house."

I said, "Who's ours." The shadow said, "Me and those behind you." I turned around. I saw a witch, a mummy, a skeleton, and up stairs was Dracula.

I said, "Oh no! Dracula." The witch, the mummy and the skeleton took off their masks. Dracula was Todd. The witch was Cherie. The mummy was Chad J. and the skeleton was Mark J.

I said, "I'm glad it is you." They said at the same time, "Me too." The End.

C.W. and Friends

By CURT ROHDE

One Halloween when we were trick or treating we met up with a ghost. He was very mean. He pulled our hair, chased us, and tried to scratch us.

We thought maybe we could get that ghost back. His name was Charles White-sheet rather known as C.W. So we looked up his ghost number in the spook book.

Now we had a plan. We went up to his house and yelled, "Come and get us

C.W." Now he chased us to a pit. We jumped in. C.W. thought that he had us. But he didn't know that we had just lain down in front of it.

C.W. went down in there and we trapped him in. Now we made spooky noises and sounds. C.W. was so scared he promised he wouldn't be mean again. So we all went trick or treating and got lots of candy.

Quite a Flight

By DAVID WOSLAGER

In the year of 1939 our school was supposed to fly to France for a Halloween party, but went off course and ended up in Transylvania. It was weird and scary. We stayed in an old creepy hotel. As we were walking to our rooms, weird things were happening. Steven and Shaun disappeared and no one was brave enough to go back. We got to the second floor, looked back, and Kurt had skeleton arms hanging on him. We were on the third floor and Curtis was being carried away by Dracula and Rodney was hypnotized and turned into a werewolf. Now half of us were gone. We went to our rooms and everyone's room was haunted by the other half of us. We were so tired we didn't care if it was haunted. In the middle of the night Curtis got his first victim. Chad and then carried him back to the lab. In the morning everyone was tied to their bed in the lab. We were going to be turned into ghosts to haunt people back in the U.S. The mad scientist was about ready to make us ghosts when Steven and Shaun came and unlocked us all without being seen. Then all at once everyone got up and ran for our lives. They were chasing us all over and Dracula fell on the switch and turned everyone back to normal. We all jumped on the plane and hid under the seats all the way home.

Out of Old Nebraska

Halloween in bygone years afforded youngsters an opportunity for practical jokes which was seldom available at other times. Most adults, even small town policemen, overlooked minor property depredations and other pranks on Oct. 31.

Newspapers on file at the Nebraska State Historical Society reveal the Halloween activities which occupied our parents and grandparents on this annual night of mischief. The Nov. 3, 1892, Chadron Citizen reported: "Halloween was celebrated in the usual manner by the youthful Chadronites, and the pranks that he played during the quiet hours Monday night left their mark for older people to laugh or swear at in the morning, as occasion required. Signs were exchanged, gates carried off, buggies run away and it looked as though every wheeled vehicle in town that was not locked up stood on Second street in the morning."

Removing vehicles from private property and placing them in unlikely locations was also popular in Omaha and other larger towns. The Nov. 2, 1894, Omaha World Herald reported an unusual ending to a late October gathering in that city: "A 'Poverty' social was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed N. Brown on Harrison Street Wednesday evening. When the guests began leaving they found one of the C.O.D. grocery wagons on the front porch as a reminder for someone that last evening was Hallo-

Halloween fun sometimes had more serious consequences, however. The Nov. 3, 1905, Alliance Semi-Weekly Times reported: "Halloween was appropriately observed by about a score of the school children and youngsters. Some were took advantage of their being out to the doctor's office door and hide the key. He leaves the office unlocked so those needing him can go there, find there had been a sick call that night. The fun might have had a serious ending. Some Nebraska towns and cities have sporadic attempts to repress Halloween mischief. The Nov. 1, 1894, Omaha World Herald included the results of Omaha's efforts to keep order: "It was Halloween last night, and the mischievous miscreants stalked forth in the land with humbug majesty, for Chief Seavey had detailed fifty big blue coated policemen to patrol the city in pairs and drive them within doors. Satan made some fearfully large tracks in the frosty night, however. Officer S. S. Drummy saw a score of the imps at Thirteenth and Vinton streets, and with the assistance of Officer Dillard intended to make them suffer. Just as he started for them he fell and struck the pavement with his right hand and broke his second finger."

On other occasions, however, Halloween pranks affected not policemen or property owners but the perpetrators themselves. According to the Nov. 1, 1904, Alliance Semi-Weekly Times, "one of a gang of young ladies (?) who went out on a tomboy lark last night, met the deserts she and the rest of them richly deserved. In tipping over an outdoor her sleeve caught on a nail and she was thrown waist-deep in the mire, and rescued therefrom after several minutes of lamenting."

In order to keep youngsters occupied and property damage to a minimum, Halloween parties were organized in many areas. The October 28, 1937, Pierce County Call included a grocery store advertisement which urged patrons stock up on Halloween Party treats. "Feed the youngsters plenty of golden pumpkin pie at the Halloween Party and they won't be so destructive. One of the ways to keep youngsters off the street on Halloween is to set them toasting these fluffy tender marshmallows."

The modern holiday, with some exceptions, is a farmer version of yesterday's night of mischief and destruction. Community parties and funhouses organized by civic groups have largely replaced Halloween activities enjoyed by parents and grandparents as children.

YOU AND YOUR CAR

Americans have had the urge to roam ever since they stashed their belongings in covered wagons and rumbled off in search of wide open spaces.

The rutted trails have been replaced by an extremely complex network of superbly maintained highways. The modern day explorer travels year round in a completely equipped "home on wheels" that would have dazzled his ancestors.

The Automotive Information Council, predicting that total vehicle sales could approach 15 million units this year, says that a new record would be achieved by an unprecedented boom in the sales of light duty trucks. It is estimated that approximately half of these vehicles are used for recreation.

Where did it start? Long before camping became a national pastime Henry Ford, Thomas Edison, Harvey Firestone, and naturalist John Burroughs headed for the wilderness. The series of trips between 1916 and 1923 took them to Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Tennessee, New England, and Michigan.

If you visualize these camping pioneers piling into a single vehicle and heading for the nearest state park, forget it. Their idea of camping meant a caravan of at least six cars plus seven drivers and helpers.

One year they took their wives along. They added a cook, a maid, two chauffeurs, and a butler. Although they all enjoyed the contact with nature, no one really roughed it. Separate sleeping tents with name plates were supplied. A dining tent about 20 feet square provided a mosquito-free area for relaxed meals. Several vehicles that made the safaris are at the Henry Ford Museum in Dearborn, Michigan, including a 1922 Lincoln kitchen truck, a White truck used for carrying tents and a Ford truck with a water tank.

Entertainment on the trips included high-kicking, stair-jumping, sprinting, tree-chopping, and tree-climbing contests. The newsmen and photographers who covered the vagabonds' adventures reported such feats as Ford's ability to bound up 10 steps in two hops and Burrough's felling a tree in four minutes flat.

Millions of people were exposed to the possibilities of motor camping through the heavily publicized trips, probably stimulating the recreational vehicle industry that today gives Americans the mobility to explore.

Winter's fast approaching!

Brrr...it's starting to turn really chilly these days. Fall is definitely in the air, and all my animal friends are busily getting ready for winter. Some of them, like the ground squirrels, are eating like crazy to store up fat for their winter hibernation. When the time comes, they'll burrow deep in the ground and fall into a deep sleep. Their inner "thermostat" will lower their body temperature to just a few degrees above freezing. Their breathing will become slow and irregular, and their hearts will beat only about 7 to 10 times per minute, compared to a normal of 300 times a minute. Ground squirrels awake every 11th day or so to eat and drink, but they may still lose up to 80% of their body weight by spring. Some other animals fall into a deep sleep that lasts all winter, while some are active throughout the cold months. We voles will tunnel up through the snow for food and water. Can you help me get through the maze of tunnels to the surface?

Church Women Planning Community Day Service

St. Paul's Lutheran Church of Wayne will host World Community Day services Friday afternoon, Nov. 4. All area women are invited to attend the 2 p.m. service, sponsored by Church Women United of Wayne.

The worship celebration will feature contemporary and folk music. There will be a free nursery in the church basement, and lunch will be served.

The theme for this year's World Community Day is "Heart Change — Global Change."

The offerings on World Community Day help support the work of Intercontinental Mission, the channel for Church Women United to foster global change through funding and self-help and development programs.

Grants are made to meet the needs of persons in six continents in the areas of spiritual growth, community and family service, socio-economic development, education, health programs, human rights, justice, peace building, women's concerns, and hunger in the United States and globally.

In addition, annual grants have enabled nine women's Christian colleges in Asia to pioneer in education for women, helping them to develop their full potential and prepare them for national and international responsibilities.

Throughout the year, but especially on World Community Day, church women purchase gift certificates to respond with material aid to human beings who are in need of immediate relief from the ravages of war, famine, poverty and natural disasters; child development and maternal health programs; training and development projects involving women; and timely help in response to emerging opportunities.

There will be a short business meeting of Church Women United following Friday's service and program. Officers are Mrs. Donald Nau, St. Paul's Lutheran, president; Mrs. Gaylen Bennett, First Baptist, vice president; Mrs. Herb Niemann, United Methodist, secretary; and Mrs. Darrel Rahn, Redeemer Lutheran, treasurer. Board members are Oeldie Leonard, Presbyterian Church, and Mrs. Bob McLean, St. Marys.

Preregistration Needed For Craft Workshop Next Month at Concord

With the holiday season rapidly approaching, thoughts start turning to gifts and giving. Handmade crafts, for many persons, add a personal touch of warmth to holiday gift giving.

Diane Radack of Floral-Craft in Yankton will conduct a craft workshop at the Northeast Station, near Concord, on Nov. 10 from 9:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m.

Anna Marie Kreifels, area home extension agent at the Northeast Station, said all area homemakers are invited to participate in the workshop. Those attending will complete five craft items, including a plush teddy bear, chenille flower bouquet, macarame wall hanging, silk flowers and quilting.

Registration fee, and Miss Kreifels, is $11.50 and includes all craft supplies and coffee. Participants will need to bring a sack lunch, scissors, wire cutter, needles, white thread and tape measure with them.

Enrollment is limited to 30 persons and payment must be sent with pre-registration. Deadline for pre-registration is Nov. 7. Refunds will not be guaranteed for persons unable to attend, however, they may send someone else in their place.

Persons planning to participate in the workshop should send their name, address, telephone number and $11.50 workshop fee to Anna Marie Kreifels, Northeast Station, Concord, Nebr. 68728, by Nov. 7. Checks should be made payable to Miss Kreifels.

Powerful Pierce Rolls to 62-0 Squashing of Devils

By BOB BARTLETT
Some may say that Pierce was running up the score Wednesday night at Wayne State's Memorial Stadium for the benefit of prep raters, but anyway you add the game up the Blue Jays are good.

They displayed the speed, poise and a good passing game that made coach Jerry Gdowski's Jays the top club in the Class B division rankings.

In handing host Wayne High its fourth loss, 62-0, Pierce rolled up 512 yards on offense and squelched Wayne's attack for 106 yards in what Blue Devil mentor Stew Cline labeled as one game which Pierce "beat us up front."

"That's where you win the games," he reflected as Cline wrapped up his first season at Wayne with a 4-4-1 record. Looking over the year, Cline noted that overall record isn't what he remembers most — just the last game of the season. "It was an embarrassing situation. . . we ended up the season in pretty poor fashion."

Pierce quieted any shouts of victory by Wayne fans during Parents Night early in the first quarter when the invaders took a 14-0 lead with less than four minutes gone.

The Jays got excellent field position to set up its first two touchdowns. Wade Heyer, who scored a pair of six pointers, went 27 yards around end on the Jay's second play of the game for a 6-0 lead with 10:25 remaining in the first quarter.

The try for the two-point conversion failed, but the Jays soon made that up when Jay Fink blocked a Kevin Murray punt inside Wayne's 10-yard line and faked the ball to paydirt. Next play quarterback Gary Schlenpenbach hit Heyer on a pass for the two points, and with 8:45 showing on the clock the Jays were in front 14-0.

With just over a minute left in the first stanza, Pierce had another six points on the board when, on third down from the six, Rick Warneke bounced off Wayne tacklers for the score. Pierce made the score 22-0 on a pass to Scott Higgins.

The Jays put 22 more points on the scoreboard in the second quarter to go into the locker-room with a 44-0 cushion. Warneke scored twice more on a nine-yard pass from Heyer and a 28 yard run, and on second down and 18 from Pierce's 12, Heyer went up the middle to cross the goal line.

The shutout was the second for the Blue Devils this season. The week before the Pirates of Emerson-Hubbard knocked the Devils out of the running for the West Husker title, 27-0.

"Pierce's pass defense was its weakest point," Cline pointed out during the Second Guesser's meeting Thursday. "If we could have completed a few passes, we might have been on the scoreboard."

Quarterback Tom Ginn several times threw the ball on target only to have his receivers miss the catches. The Devils started to connect on its passing game early in the third quarter when end Danny Ahlvers grabbed a Ginn pass to give Wayne its second first down of the half near midfield.

On defense, Ahlvers and Murray made two crucial tackles after chasing down their opponents following long gains.

Ahlvers tagged Heyer at the nine yard line after about a 40-yard gallop that put the Jays again into good scoring position in the second quarter. Wayne's defense, which later held the invaders on their first scoring drive deep in Devil territory at the start of the second half, appeared like it was going to stop Pierce early. On second down and goal to go from the six, Murray and Dave Hansen combined to sack Higgins for a WAYNE'S defense held Pierce scoreless in the third quarter on gang-tackling plays like this to stop the potent Bluejays attack. Surrounding Pierce's runner with the ball are Kelly Hansen (30), Tim Thomas (63) and Mark Heithold (25). The invading Jays came up with the big

Cats Now 17th

Wayne State has moved up two notches to 17th in last week's NAIA Division 11 rankings.

The 52 Wildcats, who were scheduled Saturday to face Ft. Hays State, passed Chadron State (6-2) which dropped to 20th.

In Division 1, Central States Conference leader Kearney is 12th with a 5-1-1 record.

Hunters, Trappers Flocking To Fields as Seasons Open

The next few weeks will be busy ones for Nebraska hunters, trappers and coon dog men, with pheasant, quail and fire-arm deer seasons opening, fur-bearer trapping seasons coming up, and the beginning of the raccoon season.

Traditionally the most popular event on the fall outdoor calendar in Nebraska is the pheasant season opener, this year on Nov. 5. Many Nebraskans are optimistic about the pheasant population this year, saying that they are seeing a lot of birds.

Game and Parks Commission biologists say their surveys show the ringneck population relatively the same as last year, but they are hoping that the most positive predictions prove true. This year, the limit has been reduced to two birds per day and six in possession, but the season will be longer in most of the state. Pheasant hunting will extend through Dec. 31, except in the Panhandle, where it will close on Nov. 30.

Quail hunting opens Nov. 12, one week after the pheasant opener. Prospects are somewhat better than last year, with bobwhite populations on the way to recovery from heavy winter losses in marginal ranges like the northeast and the Republican Valley. In the prime quail territory of the extreme southeast, the quail population is comparable to previous years. Limits on bobwhites are six per day and 18 in possession.

November 12 also sees the opening of the firearm deer season across Nebraska. The whitetail population might be slightly lower because of a disease outbreak last year, but prospects are still good. Deer hunters should be finalizing arrangements for a place to hunt by now.

November 1 marks the opening of the raccoon and opossum season in Nebraska. Prior to that date, coon dog men could run the critters without killing them, but on Nov. 1 they can be taken with dogs or traps for See HUNTERS, page 5

Hyland: Use Scented Baits When Trapping Varmints, Furbearers

The killing or injuring of birds of prey in traps meant for varmints or furbearers has become a growing problem in recent years, largely because new and inexperienced trappers are using improper techniques.

"The main problem is the use of exposed bait," says Joe Hyland, a Game and Parks Commission wildlife biologist with more than a little trapping experience. "Invariably, the first scheme a new trapper comes up with is to lure an animal with food, whether a dead chicken, a road-killed rabbit, a calf that died in the pasture, a chunk of meat, or just a bit of fur or feathers. This attracts coyotes, bobcats, foxes and raccoons alright, but the food visible from the air also draws in hawks, owls and eagles."

The result is a bird with legs badly lacerated or crushed in the traps. Some of the birds can be saved through the efforts of raptor rehabilitation centers like those of the Henry Doorly Zoo in Omaha or the Wachiska Audubon Society, but many must be destroyed.

There are a number of techniques that take the target animals at least as effectively as exposed bait, without attracting raptors, according to Hyland. "For the canine species like coyote and fox, you appeal to their curiosity and their territorial instincts, and you sweeten things up for them with a scent bait."

According to Hyland, many experienced trappers See HYLAND, page 5

Tough Center

WAYNE center Scott Havener has shown so much improvement throughout the Blue Devils' campaign, this year, said coach Stew Cline, that he was named the Second Guesser's Player of the Week. For his efforts the senior lineman received the Guesser's certificate during Thursday's meeting.

their furs. Other fur season openers are Nov. 11 for mink and muskrat, and Nov. 25 for beaver.

"During November, Nebraska's waterfowl seasons are also open, and some duck and goose shooting is at its peak. As the season progresses, attention usually shifts from the light geese in the east to Canada geese farther west. And, duck hunters divert attention from the smaller early birds to big, late-migrating mallards. Duck hunting prospects are the best they have been for several years due to a wet summer and fall and fall marshes and ponds.

Rabbit and squirrel seasons are also open throughout November. Things look particularly good for bunny hunters, with cottontail populations well above previous years.

Shooting hours are 15 minutes before sunrise to sunset for upland and small game, one-half hour before sunrise to sunset for waterfowl, and one-half hour before sunrise to one-half hour after sunset for big game.

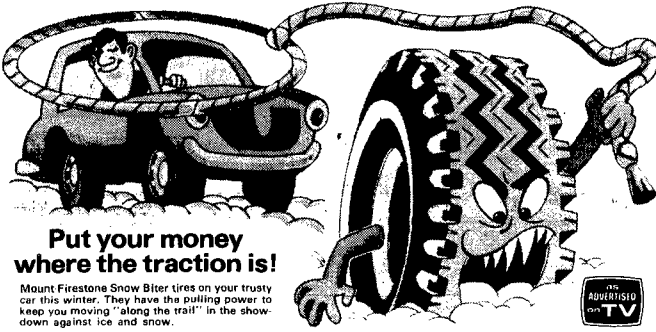

This year, all hunters and trappers must have a Habitat Stamp, in addition to the appropriate permit. However, if a hunter has a stamp signed and attached to one Nebraska permit, such as his small game permit, he does not need another for his big game or trapping permits.

More details on Nebraska hunting and trapping regulations are available from Game and Parks Commission offices and from permit vendors across the state. Three pamphlets are required for complete hunting information. One "contains" basic hunting regulations, while bulletins no. 1 and 2 have specific regulations on each season.

Bazaar is Just a Week Away!

With just one week to go, members of the Wayne Community Hospital Auxiliary are busy preparing for their annual fall bazaar.

A lot of hard work and long hours have gone into making Christmas decorations, children's toys and many other miscellaneous gift shop items for the event on Saturday, Nov. 5.

Mrs. Jean Benthack, auxiliary president, has issued a plea to individuals and organizations with items to donate for the bazaar to take them to the auditorium Friday, Nov. 4, so they can be priced for Saturday's sale.

A story in Thursday's Wayne Herald incorrectly reported that items could be taken to the auditorium on Saturday morning to be priced.

A story in Thursday's paper was also incorrect in reporting that Mrs. Carl Lentz and Leola Bressler are serving hostesses for the bazaar. Instead, the women were hostesses for the regular October meeting of the Hospital Auxiliary, on Oct. 21.

Chairmen for this year's bazaar are Jean Benthack, gift table; Mrs. Hazel Bressler, Mrs. Camilla Liedtke and Mrs. Lillian Berres, white elephant; Mrs. Richard Carman, candy; Mrs. Hattie McNutt and Mrs. Elsie Hailey, grab bag; Mrs. Norbert Brugger and Mrs. Julia Haas, tickets; Mrs. Jim Hein and Mrs. Howard Witt, food fare; Mrs. Jim Corbit, kitchen; and Mrs. Ed Wolske, dining room.

Doors to the city auditorium will open at 10 a.m. for the bazaar and will remain open until 4 p.m. The bazaar will include a candy booth, food fare and white elephant table. In addition, soups, sandwiches and desserts will be served throughout the day.

Proceeds from the bazaar will go toward the purchase of a new spectrophotometer now in use at Providence Medical Center.

Celebrating 'New Look'

THE WAYNE Chamber of Commerce celebrated the completion of the city's downtown improvement project Thursday, Friday and Saturday and Wayne Herald photographers caught part of the action. From top, left, clockwise: Jill Mosley won third prize in the Best Decorated Bike category in a kids parade Thursday night, dressed as a witch and riding a unicycle. Mickey and Minnie Mouse also made an appearance. Steve Hansen, three year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Stan Hansen of Wayne, captured one of the balloons released Thursday morning by the Chamber, but many of the helium-filled balloons escaped. KCAU TV (bottom photo) was also on hand to record the action. Thursday morning after the balloon release, Mrs. Fred Bruns of Wayne won $150 in Birthday Bucks during a special drawing at Jeff's Cafe. Ed Fahrenholz of Allen won $100 in a drawing which followed the kids parade Thursday night. About 2,000 people attended a free pancake feed Friday night at the city auditorium. Prizes awarded then were: biggest pumpkin squash, Jason Schultz of Wayne; biggest ear of corn, Ashlan Thies of Wayne; biggest pumpkin, Donna Sherry of Laurel. Entries in the contest were on display during the week at the First National Bank and State National Bank in Wayne. Drawings for turkeys were scheduled for Saturday, and the annual Farmers Appreciation Night Saturday was the last event on the schedule for the three-day celebration.

WSC Starts Writer's Circuit

Don Jones, a native Nebraskan poet, will appear at Wayne State College Tuesday through Thursday in the first of a series of poet presentations arranged through a newly-formed "Plains Writer's Circuit."

The Circuit, initiated by WSC, is an informal arrangement between WSC and several other Nebraska and Iowa Colleges, including UN-L, Kearney, Morningstar, Concordia, Hastings, Kan., Wesleyan and Briar Cliff. Colleges nominate poets to come to their area, with the possibility of other colleges requesting the poet to visit. This would increase the number of presentations by the poet and lower the cost to each college.

Jim Brummets, poet-in-residence at WSC, said the Circuit is a beginning program that should increase the variety of poets coming to the colleges. "The circuit is one means by which we can share the cost of bringing these people in an area," he said. "It will increase the number of writers we can invite."

Brummets said the Circuit will try to increase the cultural awareness in Nebraska and Northwest Iowa area by bringing in native writers. "The Plains Poet Circuit will give special attention to poets who have physical or spiritual ties to the plains region," Brummets said. "Special consideration will also be paid to younger poets who have made a substantial beginning in their own writing."

Don Jones is the first of about six poets to be invited under the new program in Wayne. In addition to WSC, he will visit Hastings College. He will also appear at Winnebago and Pender High Schools through the WSC "poet-in-the-schools" program.

"His presence in the classroom should aid students in becoming more aware of their heritage as Nebraskans and the rich and varied culture that surrounds them," Brummets said.

Jones has authored books of poetry including "Medical Aid and Other Poems," "9 Postal Poems" and "Miss Liberty, Meet Crazy Horse."

Jones will hold a special public reading at WSC Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Fine Arts Building. The reading will be aired live on KWSC, the Wayne State cable television station. Advanced free tickets are available in Room 202 of the Humanities Building at WSC.

UN Doesn't Want 'Star Wars'

By Donald J. Frederick National Geographic News

The United Nations wants no part of that interplanetary violence depicted in "Star Wars." UN delegates recorded messages in 12 languages on copper-plated records carried aloft in the Voyager 1 and 2 spacecraft launched in late August and early September.

"If an advanced civilization in the outer reaches of the solar system finds the spacecraft, it should have no trouble figuring out how to play the records and decipher them," says a National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokesman.

The two Voyagers will first explore Jupiter, then accelerated by that planet's gravitational force will head for Saturn, the National Geographic Society says. On their 10-year-long space odyssey, they will take a look at several of the moons surrounding the two planets, and the second craft may go far beyond Saturn to Uranus and possibly Neptune.

Instruments on the two Voyagers will beam pictures back to earth and perform scientific experiments. Voyager 1 will make its closest approach to Jupiter — about 110,000 miles from the surface of the planet — on March 5, 1979. It will transmit pictures as early as December 1978.

The second spacecraft, following a different path than its predecessor, will pass 399,000 miles from the center of Jupiter at its closest approach on July 10, 1979.

Voyager 2 will continue to Uranus, arriving in January 1986, only if the primary Saturn mission has been performed successfully. Because of the alignment of the outer planets at the time, it could also visit Neptune.

"By exploring outer planets like Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, and Neptune, we can go back in time and sample the conditions from which the sun and the inner planets are believed to have condensed," says NASA public affairs officer Nicholas Panagakos.

Uranus and neighboring Jupiter, Saturn, and Neptune belong to a subfamily in the solar system called the Jovian planets. All rotate furiously, have dense atmospheres, and consist of far lighter elements than earthlike, or terrestrial, planets such as Mars and Venus.

Four of Jupiter's moons, Io, Europa, Ganymede, and Callisto, are interesting in their own right. Io and Europa are nearly the size of earth's moon or larger. Callisto is the size of the planet Mercury, and Ganymede is even larger.

Io, closest in of the large moons and the most reflective object in the solar system, is of special interest. Normally orange, it has been seen to brighten for about 15 minutes as it comes out from Jupiter's shadow. One explanation: A gas, possible ammonia or methane, "snows" out of Io's atmosphere white in the shadow, then swiftly evaporates in the sunlight.

Io also arouses interest because its orbital motion somehow modulates many of Jupiter's awesome bursts of radio energy.

Titan, Saturn's largest moon, is unique because it is the only satellite in the solar system known to have an appreciable atmosphere.

Among Bible colleges, Nebraska Christian at Norfolk has 88 students registered, 47.9 per cent fewer than last year. Grace Bible College has 486 students, for a 7.4 per cent decline, and Platte Valley, with 58 students, had a .2 per cent loss.

The grand total for all post secondary schools in Nebraska is 82,003, an increase of 4.8 per cent. Male enrollments are up 2.4 per cent, compared with a 7.8 per cent increase for women. Full time enrollment is up 2.4 per cent, compared with 10.2 per cent for part-time.

Police Blotter

Darrell Allvin of rural Wayne was driving his car out of a parking lot on the 100 block of Seventh Street about 5:30 p.m. Friday when he struck a car operated by Tamara Holdorf, also of rural Wayne.

A truck backed into a car near the intersection of Seventh and Main about 11:50 a.m. Friday. Driver of the truck, Eugene Heller of Pilger, said he was backing his vehicle to allow another truck to turn when he hit a car operated by Brent Gulick of Lincoln.

A parked car owned by Felix Dorsey, 1013 Hillcrest, was hit Friday on the 100 block of West Second when Chris Lueders, 118 Douglas, was backing his vehicle out of a parking stall.

Harry Kinder, 1038 Main, reported about 8:30 a.m. Thursday that someone damaged his fuel pump.

Accidents by Kip Crane, Niobrara, and Bert Jeffrey, 414 W. Second, collided in an alleyway on the 200 block between Main and Pearl Streets.

Veterans Home Needs Articles

Donna Stalling and Dennette Von Minden, members of the American Legion Auxiliary at Allen, said the Nebraska Veterans Home at Norfolk is in need of several items.

Persons with items to donate to the veterans should contact Mrs. Stalling or Mrs. Von Minden.

Articles can include paper-work books, jigsaw puzzles, playing cards, crossword puzzle books, materials for leather crafts, scraps of leather, monogram tool set, birthday, sympathy and all-occasion greeting cards, men's belts, 18 x 18-inch squares of old sheets cut with pinking shears or torn, and clothing for men or larger women.

WS Harriers 2nd Heavy —

Wayne State's harriers came in second at LeMars, Ia., Saturday, narrowly losing to Northwestern 35-35. Host Westmar scored 67 points.

Pat Veik was the top Wayne runner, placing fourth with a time of 26:28. Other Wayne scorers were: Jerry Sanders, 6th-27:06; Al Litbbe, 7th-27:45; Ed Burnett, 8th-27:55; and Mark Baumer, 10th-28:25.

Valeriani —

studies shows that the average man over age 18 had put on more than six pounds during that period and now weighs 172 pounds.

Applied locally, it means that area men in that age group collectively are 16,000 pounds heavier than they would have been in 1960.

As for the women, despite their greater concern with weight, they now average 143 pounds, which is three pounds more than in 1960.

For Wayne County's female population over age 18, the overall increase amounts to 9,000 pounds.

What to do about it? The experts say that the best way to cut down is to step up physical activity and to make a permanent change in eating habits.

Valeriani —

The United States is still powerful, but the Soviet Union is determined to achieve parity, he said, and experiences with the Vietnam war and the oil embargo have demonstrated U.S. vulnerability.

Still, Valeriani said, the U.S. must continue to provide leadership for the free world. Without it, there will be no leadership, and without leadership, there will be no free world.

The Carter administration has its heart in the right place in conducting foreign affairs, he said, but it is "just starting to get its act together."

The grace period is over and on-the-job training is complete, Valeriani judged. It is now time for results and no more rhetoric.

WSC Plants Trees

A tree-planting ceremony was held at Wayne State College Tuesday as part of the "Replace-a-Tree" program sponsored by the Wayne State Foundation.

The program, initiated several years ago, promotes the continuation of planting new trees and shrubs on campus.

WSC president Dr. Lyle Seymour said a similar program was started about 80 years ago at WSC when there were no trees on the grounds. Wayne State now boasts nearly 2,000 trees located on campus.
