'Glass Menagerie' Is First Drama Club Play for Year

Members of the Wayne High Drama Club Saturday night will present a performance of Tennessee Williams classic social drama "Glass Menagerie."

The production will be the club's entry in the Huerfano Conference one-act play competition in January, in district drama competition in December, and, hopefully, in state competition in February, Blendenman said.

Sophomore Jeff March plays Jim O'Conner, Laura's gentleman. Daughter Laura is physically handicapped and her mother, Amanda, hopes to see her married. Son Tom wants to get away from the family, but is responsible for its support.

There will be only one performance of the play, beginning at 8 p.m. in the high school lecture hall. Drama Club sponsor Ted Blendenman said tickets will be sold for only 250 seats.

"We want an intimate theater for this production," he explained. Ticket prices are 75 cents for students and $1.25 for adults.

Blendenman said club members are also working on the play "Jack, or the Submission," which they will present during a

WSC Choir Has Full Schedule

The Wayne State College Concert Choir has a busy schedule planned for this year, including an international tour to Mexico City.

The 73-member choir directed by Dr. Cornell Runestad will begin its touring year with a demonstration concert at the Logan Valley Conference Choral Clinic at Rosalie on Wednesday.

The clinic is held annually for high school choirs to work together under the direction of a guest conductor. Dr. Runestad of WSC will conduct the group and work with the high school students.

The WSC choir will sing a number of selections to demonstrate different techniques for attending high school singers. Choirs from about six area high schools are expected to attend, including singers from Beemer.

Kjer Appointed Allen Treasurer

Former town board member Gaylen "Bill" Kjer has been appointed Allen's water commissioner and treasurer to fill the unexpired term of Merle Ruback.

Ruback handed in his resignation Monday night, telling members that he would be leaving the village soon.

Kjer, who has served on the board in past years, will begin serving immediately and continue until Ruback's three-year term expires June 1, 1978.

In other action Monday night, members set Dec. 5 as the hearing date for the street improvement program. During that meeting they will decide which streets will be resurfaced.

Parents and Teachers Meeting

Parent-teacher conferences in the Wayne-Carroll schools will begin today (Monday) and continue through Friday during American Education Week.

Wayne mayor Freeman Decker has signed a proclamation recognizing the special week in the city.

American Education Week is sponsored nationally by the National Education Association, the U.S. Office of Education, the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, and the American Legion.

Classes will be dismissed at 2 p.m. throughout the week, with conferences beginning at 2:15 and ending at 4:45 each day, with individual conferences lasting about 20 minutes. Buses for all students will run at 2 p.m. during the five-day conference period.

Trees Available

This year more than three million trees and shrubs are available for distribution for shelterbelt plantings under the Clarke-McNary program. Wayne county agent Don Spitz said.

Seeding trees will cost $14.50 per hundred, which includes the cost of the trees, mailing charge and tax. Evergreens available are red cedar, Scotch, Austrian, Jack, eastern white and southern white pines, Colorado blue spruce and Black Hills spruce.

Tall broadleaf tree varieties listed are hackberry, honey locust, cottonwood, silver maple, black walnut, green ash and northern red oak. Shrubs and small trees include lilac, honey suckle, American plum, autumn olive, Russian olive, cotoneaster, chokecherry, nanking cherry, ginkgo maple and sumac. Tree orders can be taken immediately until the supply of trees is gone.

"Last year we were running out of some species in December, so order early so you won't be disappointed," Spitz said.

Acreage Reports Due Soon

The Wayne County ASCS office will be accepting 1977 crop acreage certifications until Nov. 30.

Ralph Olson, chairman of the county ASCS committee advised that a report of total county acreages will be sent to the state ASCS office on December 1. All acreage certifications need to be given prior to that time.

Acreage reports are being requested from all farms in anticipation of next year's feed grain and wheat program. Olson explained that reports are needed for all crops on the farm. The old feed grain and wheat allotment will not be used for the 1978 program. The new program will be based on current cropping practices. A normal crop acreage will be established on each farm based on the certification of 1977 grain crops grown.

If a producer grows any grain crops in 1978 requiring a set-aside, he will be required to stay within his normal crop acreage (NCA). The NCA is a total of his 1977 grain crops. The farm's 1978 grain crops plus set-aside cannot exceed his NCA, Olson explained.

Farmers who believe their 1977 figure is abnormally high or low can submit 1975 and 1976 figures.

"We have been accepting crop certifications since June," Olson said. "However, we were instructed to take acreages for feed grains only. In August, the ASCS office was instructed to take certifications for all crops. Therefore some farms were requested to make another trip to report the remaining acreages."

There are still about 300 farms in Wayne County to come in and finalize their certifications, he noted. These reports are needed by Nov. 30 to be credited to the farms NCA.

Set-aside requirements for feed grain crops have not been announced yet, Olson said. The wheat set-aside was announced at 20 per cent of the farm's wheat planted for 1978 harvest. If a set-aside is required for feed grains, it will be based on 1978 plantings. Producers not complying with set-aside and NCA requirements for 1978 will not be eligible for loans, disaster and deficiency payments.

Conference Set

Wayne State College professor Dr. Maria Grovas and Dr. Douglas Benson of Hastings College will direct a workshop in Spanish and social studies Friday and Saturday on the WSC campus.

School Board Will Review Aid Estimates

Wayne-Carroll schools superintendent Francis Hahn tonight (Monday) will ask the board of education to appoint a faculty committee to provide recommendations on a proposed storage building for the school athletic field.

Hahn said the school district now has enough money in a sinking fund to finance a storage facility at the track and field located south of West Elementary School.

The school board at its regular meeting beginning tonight at 7:30 will review final estimates on the amount of state aid money it will receive for the current school year. The board also will review a final draft of policies for special education, and will consider a request by board president Dorothy Ley that the board consider periodic afternoon meetings to review curriculum.

Two Nominated for Fellowship

Two Wayne State College seniors, Kathy LaBoon and Greg Anderson, have been nominated by the Wayne State Honors Committee for the Danforth Foundation Graduate Fellowship Program.

The fellowships are intended to offer financial support and personal encouragement for students of exceptional promise who plan college teaching careers in the undergraduate liberal arts curriculum.

Students are selected on the basis of academic accomplishment and intellectual ability; evidence of personal characteristics favorable to college teaching and evidence of concern for ethical and moral values in subject disciplines, the educational processes and social institutions.

The WSC nominees were selected from 20 top students at Wayne. The nominees will be examined by the Danforth Foundation and final selection will be based on overall qualifications.

Miss LaBoon, 19, daughter of Col. and Mrs. C.R. Mason of Omaha, has carried over a 3.75 grade point average (on a four-point scale) at WSC. She is a 1975 graduate of Bellevue High School and a senior at WSC majoring in biology. See FELLOWSHIP, page 10

Wayne County Is Regional Leader In Second Quarter Sales Increase

Net taxable retail sales in Wayne County during the second quarter of 1977 were 21.9 per cent greater than during the same period the previous year, according to a report issued by the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Bureau of Business Research.

The report indicates retail sales in the county during the 1977 second quarter amounted to $8,361,000, compared with $6,776,000 for the same period in 1976.

The second quarter increase recorded in Wayne County was the largest of any of the five counties in State Planning and Programming Region 11.

Figures for the other counties in the region, with the 1976 total followed by the 1977 total, and then the 1977 total as a percentage of the 1976 total, are: Antelope, $9,231,000, $8,818,000, 95.5; Madison $45,903,000, $46,004,000, 100.2; Pierce, $6,649,000; $6,930,000, 104.2.

Wayne County has also experienced the greatest percentage of increase for the first half of 1977 of the five Region 11 counties. First half 1977 retail sales amounted to 112.9 per cent of the 1976 figures. Percentages for other counties in the Region are: Antelope, 100.5; Madison, 103.4; Pierce, 97.6; Stanton, 83.3.

In Region 25, Cedar County experienced a 20.5 per cent year-to-year increase during the 1977 second quarter. Total sales in 1976 amount to $8,200,000, while to 1977 figure was $9,882,000. Dixon County second quarter sales in 1977, however, amounted to only 90.1 per cent of the 1976 total — $3,761,000, compared with $9,009,000 in 1977.

Cedar County sales for the first half of 1977 were 109.1 per cent of the 1976 total, while 77 per cent for Dixon and Knox Counties are 97.1 and 96.8, respectively.

Net taxable retail sales in Nebraska for the 1977 second quarter were $1,729 million. On a dollar volume basis, sales were 16.9 per cent above the level recorded in the first quarter of 1977, but were up only 5.5 per cent from the second quarter of last year.

Retail sales adjusted for price changes were actually lower in the second quarter of 1977 when compared to the corresponding period last year. The 5.5 per cent rise in retail sales was less than the 6.7 per cent increase in the Consumer Price Index, resulting in a 1.2 per cent decline in the actual volume of goods sold at retail.

Given a slight increase in state population during the period, real per capita retail sales in the state declined by slightly more than 1.2 per cent.

Taking into account the 6.7 per cent increase in prices, Wayne County, for example, was the only county in Region 11 to experience a year-to-year sec-

Who Needs a Sled?

AN EARLY snow storm blocked roads Wednesday and probably was the cause of more than a few back aches as Northeast Nebraskans began digging out from under the white stuff, but these Allen youngsters found there were some benefits, such as sliding down this snow pile, even though they didn't happen to have their sleds with them. OBSERVATIONS

No apartments, but some bright spots

The Wayne city council last week turned down a request for rezoning which would have cleared the way for a 24-unit apartment complex. We supported the zoning request, and haven't altered our position.

Despite being on the losing side of the issue, we can see a couple of benefits from it. First, the issue focused attention on the need for housing in Wayne. Nearly everyone who commented on the zoning request agreed that additional housing is needed. It seems wise to look at the city and see what sites are available for construction of multiple family dwellings, and examine how suitable those sites are to both potential developers and owners of adjacent property.

If Wayne continues to develop the way many of us believe it will, the community will need additional apartment housing, and now is the time to make necessary preparations.

Also, while we do not agree with the council's decision, we think it illustrates that it is worthwhile to attend council meetings and air one's views on issues.

The sentiment has been expressed in recent letters to the editor that it is futile to participate in city government because council members are not responsive to their constituents.

Homeowners living in two subdivisions adjacent to the property in question did attend both planning commission meetings and council meetings to oppose the request for rezoning. It is impossible to say why individual council members voted as they did on the issue, but we believe those homeowners did have an effect on the outcome.

We don't agree with the outcome, but we commend the people who made known their opposition to the zoning request, rather than doing nothing and complaining later. Had the council approved the request and the apartment complex been built.

People who seek out their elected officials to express an opinion have no guarantee that the official will vote in accordance with their wishes. There are always at least two sides to a controversy. One side must win and one must lose.

It is, perhaps, easy for those on the losing side to declare their elected officials "unresponsive," while those on the winning side of that particular issue would take the opposite view.

Losing a round or two, however, isn't a good reason to give up the fight. We believe that, at least at the local level, individuals can have an impact on their government. Those who are dissatisfied with, for example, city government, but don't make an effort to participate are forfeiting a right. — Jim Strayer.

STRAYER Thoughts

By Jim Strayer

Somehow, I knew it was going to be one of those weeks. It started Saturday morning (Nov. 5) when I went in the darkroom to develop the last roll of film for the Monday paper:

Bob Barfield had shot a roll that I was to process, because he departed in the wee hours of the morning to visit friends in the western part of the state. I developed a roll of film, all right. Unfortunately, it was a roll of slide film Bob had shot on another weekend jaunt. That doesn't work too well. (We roll our own film, both black and white, and color.) On top of that, I never did find the correct roll.

Bright Spot

Looked like the weekend was going to be a bit brighter, however. Friends from Fairbury were visiting and Kay and I had been looking forward to it. Naturally, I woke up about 2:30 Sunday morning with the flu. I spent the day in bed Sunday, and our guests were forced to cut their visit short.

My illness also meant missing the Northeast Nebraska Pork Producers Association banquet, a pretty important date on our news calendar. Bob wasn't back in time to fill in, so we didn't have a representative there, although we did get a story, and a picture of the new queen, Laura Hagemann, who deserves a hearty congratulations on her selection.

More Bad Luck

Bob's return trip got a little rough too, but the body shop people say they can repair it. Seems someone smacked into an abandoned filling station in Pilger and littered the highway with concrete. One piece proved an effective barrier for Bob's car.

Another Wayne Herald member, Mel Baumgardner, also met with a mishap over the weekend, resulting in a banged up foot.

Wonderful Winter

I don't have to tell anyone what happened Tuesday night. Something hit the fan and I think it was several inches of snow driven by 45 mph winds.

Drifted roads brought travel to a halt and left us with about half our normal staff Wednesday, which just happens to be our publication day. All of us front office types got to fill in on the production end, and let me tell you, if we didn't appreciate our press room people before (we did), we certainly do now.

It had been a while since I had put on an apron and worked in the press room, and was I rusty. I felt kind of sorry for shop foreman Ray Murray, who suddenly found himself in command of a group of relative amateurs, but somehow, we got it done.

Incredible Journey

Bad roads still left us short-handed Thursday, and I guess you could say I came full circle in the newspaper business. I started out many moons ago delivering papers, and that's what Bob and I did Thursday.

Not door to door. No. Bob and I piled into Jim Marsh's nine-passenger bobbed — I mean station wagon — and hauled bundles to the communities where we have carrier service.

I drove, and I didn't think it was such a bad trip. When we got back to the office,

"My Very First Visit to the Pawnee Village in 1855"

John Milton Thayer, United States Senator, Nebraska governor, and military leader played a significant role in the political and military history of early Nebraska. Thayer, a Worcester, Massachusetts, lawyer, came west in 1854 and settled in Omaha. Excerpts from an address by Thayer to the Nebraska State Historical Society, published in the Society's 1907 volume of Proceedings and Collections, illuminate his early life and military experiences in Nebraska:

"The legislature elected under the proclamation of (Territorial) Governor (Thomas) Cuming met during the winter of 1854-55 (and) made provision for laying off the territory into a brigade, and had elected me brigadier general to command the frontier and to struggle with the Indian. I did not give much thought to the subject at first, but thought I would undertake whatever duties might devolve for it . . .

"I had built a small house on the site of Omaha . . . (and) had just about got settled in it when (Territorial) Governor (Mark) Izard . . . called (and said . . . that the Pawnee Indians were making a raid on the settlers along the Elkhorn River . . . and that he felt it his duty to call upon me to go out once to the Pawnee village . . . and hold a council with the chiefs . . . Here was a development which I was not looking for. I had no familiarity with the Indians and had hardly ever seen them (but) taking a cheerful view, I determined to be of use to the settlers."

"The village of the Pawnees was on the south and west side of the Platte River on a very high point a few miles this side of where the town of Fremont had just commenced a settlement. The Governor said to me that Mr. (Samuel) Allis, who had formerly been a missionary to the Pawnees and had been employed as interpreter for that tribe (was) to accompany me on the expedition as it would be necessary to have his services as an interpreter . . . O.D. Richardson, who had settled in Omaha, having formerly been lieutenant-governor of Michigan, kindly volunteered to accompany me in this movement. I had decided also to take along John E. Allen, a brother-in-law. That made up the party of four . . .

"I, of course, could not tell how long we would be absent, but I determined to provide a good supply of good things . . . My wife was an excellent cook, trained in a good New England home, and she volunteered to prepare rations for us that would last us some days. She at once set to work and baked a half dozen loaves of bread, boiled a whole ham, baked six or seven mince pies, and fried nearly a half bushel of doughnuts, ground coffee for several days consumption, put in a full supply of condensed milk, pickles, and other good things . . .

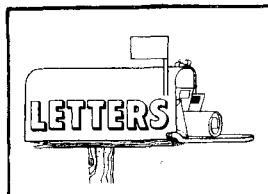

"We took the trail leading west from Omaha, and in a few hours crossed the Elkhorn River on a flat-bottomed boat, near where a family had located, and then made for the direction of the Pawnee village on the high bluff to which I have alluded, reaching a point on the Platte on this side of it."

In a difficult crossing of the Elkhorn, Thayer, Allis, and Richardson swam the horses unhitched from their wagon across the river to reach the Pawnee village. Thayer was thrown into the water when his horse became temporarily lodged in quicksand, but both horse and rider managed to reach the opposite shore safely. Following a successful parley with the Pawnee, the party recrossed the river. Thayer recalled: "I was beginning to think of the good things we had in our wagon, and the splendid supper we were to have . . . Visions of cold ham, bread and butter, doughnuts, mince pie, and hot coffee with condensed milk and with all the good things enumerated above ready at our call. Well, on arriving at the wagon our astonishment was overwhelming when we were informed by Allen, the fellow who had stayed at the wagon, that about twenty of the Indians came there as soon as we had reached the council tent, and overpowered him, (and) took by force everything in the wagon."

"My first thought was 'what shall we do?' Recalling the fact that we had found one family at the ferry where we crossed the Elkhorn in a log cabin, we determined to return there and seek what relief we could by way of supper and

'That Wayne County Crew Deserves Thanks'

Dear Editor: On Thursday after our storm, we were visiting in downtown Carroll. Lynn Roberts made the statement that if he were any good at writing, he'd like to show Cal Comstock and his crew how much he appreciated their great effort by writing a letter to The Wayne Herald. I felt that too often this kind of statement falls on rocky ground and dies whereas words of criticism seem to land in fertile soil and grow abundantly. In behalf of Lynn, Bob and I and all the other folks who feel as we do, we send our thanks to you, the personnel of Wayne County Public Power. Mrs. Robert Johnson

Looking at bird tracks!

Did you ever look at bird tracks in the snow and wonder what kind of bird made them? I asked my Uncle Thaddeus, who knows a lot of stuff. He says birds have feet that help them do certain things. Take ducks, for instance. They use their feet for swimming. Hawks and eagles have strong feet for grabbing things. Cranes and herons have big feet for wading in a muddy marsh.

See if you can match the names of some birds to their tracks—pheasant, duck, crow, quail, heron, junco, flicker, and eagle.

Mr. Whiskers also appears in NEBRASKAland Magazine, published monthly by the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission.

YOU AND YOUR CAR

Much of the frustration with auto repair and service today is caused by poor communication between the customer and his mechanic, says the Automotive Information Council.

"Most people are really nice to deal with," says Bill Brown, who owns a repair shop in Plymouth, Michigan. "I've been in business 32 years and I've found that our customers really try to work with us when they understand how to communicate with us about their vehicles' problems."

Brown, who services second generation customers, says his number one problem is the customer who tries to diagnose his car's trouble. "Instead of telling us the problem, and letting us analyze what needs to be done, a lot of people come in and tell us what to do. For example, a customer may say he needs a front end alignment. His problem could really be the steering or tires. If we did the alignment he'd be back in a week or so, really upset because the car still is not running properly."

"What we try to do is find out why he thinks he needs an alignment—what the problem is. Then we determine what the solution is," he explained. "Maybe he doesn't need an alignment at all."

Brown says he spends two to three hours a day talking to his customers to discover their car's problems, educating them, and writing up detailed estimates and instructions for the four mechanics who work for him.

He asks his regular customers to keep their bills so that the next time they work on their cars he knows what's been done and when it was done. "Keeping accurate and detailed records saves a lot of time and money," he says.

He also thinks car owners should learn as much as they can about their vehicles so they can discuss their problems knowledgeably with their mechanics.

Some more tips for avoiding repair frustration:

—Be familiar with your car's routine maintenance schedule and stick to it.

—Don't go into a repair facility with a chip on your shoulder. Have enough confidence to realize mechanics are professionals.

—Request a written estimate or have a clear understanding of what the shop is to do and the total cost involved.

—Leave a number where you can be reached before the shop proceeds with any undiscussed additional work. They should quote prices and labor.

Workshop Postponed

A Christmas craft workshop, which was to have been held Thursday at the Northeast Station at Concord, was postponed because of the first winter storm to hit Northeast Nebraska last week.

Drum Major, Majorettes Add 'Touch of Class' to Wildcats' Marching Band

The Wayne State Marching Band has had a successful season providing entertainment at WSC football games and various parades. An important part of the marching band is the drum major and majorettes who provide color and added personality to the group.

The majorettes perform dance routines, adding to the overall entertainment quality of the band. The drum major acts as the band leader during ceremonies and parades.

Dr. Ray Kelton, band director at WSC, said the Majorettes and drum major have done an outstanding job this year for the college.

"I think they have done very well this year," Kelton said. "I am very pleased with their performances."

This year's drum major at WSC is Scott Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Miller of Omaha. He is a 1975 graduate of Northwest High School and a sophomore at WSC majoring in broadcasting.

Majorettes include: —Peggy Hunt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Doyle Hunt of Glidden, Iowa. She is a 1977 graduate of Glidden Ralston High School and a freshman at Wayne State majoring in English education.

—Sheryl Hodge, daughter of Richard Hodge of Omaha. She is a 1977 graduate of Millard Senior High and a freshman at Wayne State majoring in social science.

—Dawn Bowen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bowen of Fremont. She is a 1976 graduate of Fremont Senior High and a sophomore at WSC majoring in vocal music.

—Ginger Weber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Weber of Hastings. She is a 1976 graduate of Hastings High School and a sophomore at WSC majoring in history and French. — Photos by Bob Ernst.

This Year's Version of Wildcats To Resemble Wild 'Family Affair'

It looks as if Wayne State basketball coach Jim Seward may have a family affair of sorts on his hands when the Wildcats open up the 1977-78 roundball season at home against Bellevue College Nov. 22.

Seward's squad includes seven returning lettermen, only three of which have lettered more than once at Wayne. However, most of the others have played together in some way or another for several years, thus making his squad look something like a family.

For instance, Joe Peitzmeier and Mark Olsen were a fine tandem last year for the Wildcats, but more so because of the two years they worked together at Northeast Tech. Indeed, Northeast seems to be a farm system of sorts for Seward. This year another former Blackhawk, 6-6 junior Bob Reeson, joins the Wayne fold.

Former Wayne State star John Redmond adds to the family act. Redmond's half brother Lew Sykes was recruited for his basketball talents. Sykes felt so good about coming to Wayne State that he brought along his cousin Murray Brooks. The two have played ball together for years and should be a welcome addition.

Seward says the lack of veteran experience may be a weakness, but adds that the returnees this year are among the most experienced in his four years at Wayne.

Besides seniors Peitzmeier and Olsen, three-year lettermen Lenny Adams, Joe Curl and Dale Meyer will add their skills to the squad. Another senior, Gary Billings, looms as the possible heir apparent to Wayne Robinson's scoring leadership role. Another letterman, sophomore Bob Kelly, will also be back after making it good as a freshman.

"Overall, we have more team depth than we've had and our overall quickness is better," said Seward.

Seward has often been criticized for his inability to recruit the towering pivot man that many Central States Conference schools have. "If we went out and got a big man," said Seward, "we might have to change our whole style. Our present style is conducive to the talent we have."

The Wildcats finished 18-12 overall last year and 8-6 in league play.

Seward expects the conference to be more balanced this year. "The good teams should be strong again and the poorer teams should be up," said the Wayne boss. "Missouri Southern probably has the most outstanding talent, but Emporia (last year's champion), although they lost a couple of players, has the best continuity."

"We want to play well every time we step on the floor. Our early road schedule could bother us, but if we can get through that we should be in pretty good shape."

It looks like the club will have good balance. Says Seward, "We'll have trouble picking five guys to put out there at the start."

Wayne's schedule: November — 22 Bellevue College, 29 Peru State December — 2-3 at NW Missouri State Tournament, 7 at Missouri Western, 10 at Hastings, 13 at Mount Marty, 29 Wayne State Holiday Tournament.

January — 5 at Midland, 10 at Peru, 12 Missouri Western, 14 at Doane, 17 Hastings, 20 at Mo. Southern, 27 Ft Hays St., 28 Kearney St., 31 at Chadron.

February — 3 at Washburn, 4 at Emporia, 10 at Ft. Hays, 11 at Kearney, 15 Midland, 17 Mo. Southern, 18 Pittsburg State, 21 Chadron, 24 Emporia, 25 Washburn.

Art Students Build Own Kiln

In today's modern world of technology, many traditional production methods and crafts are forgotten, but the pottery classes at Wayne State College recently found an old "firing" method used by early oriental pottery artists pleasant surprise.

The students built a "Raku" kiln for firing (baking) pottery works as part of the requirements for the three-credit classes. Those unfamiliar with "Raku" may think it is some kind of animal or beast, but in reality it is a hand-built kiln made from light-weight fire brick.

Early pottery kilns used wood and a variety of other combustible materials to heat the kiln; the WSC class used natural gas with a vacuum sweeper exhaust to enrich the oxygen and increase the heat. The student kiln was similar to early kilns in that the temperature varied (up to 2,000 degrees) with little or no control.

WCS art instructor Marleen Mueller said the class built the kiln to help their understanding of kilns and early pottery methods.

"This deals with a lot of accidents," she said. "We like the 'spontaneity' involved. It is kind of a spiritual thing; the pots and glazes sort of 'do their own thing.'"

The process involved in Raku firing is faster and not as complicated as modern furnaces. Though the results in new kilns are more exact, it can take several days for pressurizing, firing and cooling. The Raku kiln allows the process to be completed in less than an hour.

The pots are first formed by the students and heated on the top of the Raku kiln, removing moisture to prevent cracking. The work is then placed in the kiln for five to ten minutes, depending on how long the kiln has been heating.

After the firing, the pot could either be left oxidizing (in the open air) or put through a reduction process.

Oxidizing involves allowing air to hit the surface of the work, resulting in the pottery remaining the same color as when in the kiln.

Reduction keeps the pot away from oxygen to enhance reds, luster or glazes. The WSC students, much like early artists, reduced by placing the work in buckets filled with leaves, saw dust or shredded paper and placing a lid over the bucket, keeping oxygen out. The pot could then be dipped in water to stop the process when desired color was achieved.

Mueller said the pots sometimes have crevices after firing. The students could choose to maintain the imperfections to enhance and add character to the work. She said pouring motor oil on the pots, allowing it to seep into crevices, allowed students to darken and enrich colors.

"It is difficult to control the effect so we acted with surprise when the pot came out," she said. "It was hard to tell how they would turn out."

By building the kiln, Mueller said the students were able to better understand the history of pottery making and the firing processes.

"Here the students were able to actively partake in firing," she said. "It allowed communication between the student and the pottery work. As humans we like to control, but we can also appreciate the lack of control, and that is what is nice about Raku firing."

Snow Is Everywhere

WEDNESDAY'S snowstorm dumped between four to seven inches of the white stuff over Northeast Nebraska, causing many motorists to abandon their vehicles and walk. For some Wakefield residents, like Hubert Johnson (center right), the storm gave him a good chance to try out the snowblower, while for a few others, the day after the storm was a great chance to catch up on some well-needed sleep. Muphy, a beagle owned by Don Kliver of Allen, took advantage of the sun's rays. Over in Winside, below, crews were cleaning main street.

 Linn was dead on arrival at a Sioux City hospital, according to medical reports. Hammer escaped injury.
