

OBSERVATIONS

Be a honey and buy some

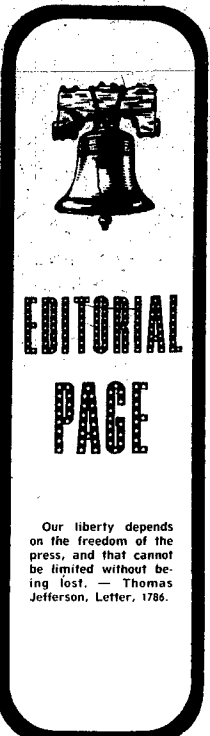

The Nov. 13 Honey Sunday sale in Wayne County wasn't as successful as in recent years. That is probably at least partially due to the fact that the county was still digging out from the snow storm which struck earlier in the week.

Whatever reason, members of the Wayne County Association of Retarded Citizens plan to continue offering the jars of honey for sale. Drive chairmen are Mrs. Owen Hartman in Winslow, Mrs. Merlin Kenny in Carroll, and Mrs. Kenneth Siltman and Mrs. Carl Haas, co-chairmen for Wayne and Wayne County. Anyone wishing to buy some honey is urged to call their respective chairmen. The money you pay for a jar of honey will go for a good cause. It should be partially attractive because the sale is now conducted by a county rather than regional organization.

The Northeast Nebraska ARC has always done a fine job, but local members decided to form a county chapter because they felt they would be able to focus on local needs. The honey sale amounts to Wayne County people helping Wayne County people.

Wouldn't you like to buy a jar of honey? — Jim Strayer

'Rules' not authentic

We received a copy of James J. Kilpatrick's column which appeared in the July 7, 1970 issue of The St. Louis Globe-Democrat regarding the so-called "Dus-seldorf Rules for Revolution."
The "rules" were included with a letter to the editor received by the Herald and were printed along with the letter in the Thursday edition.
The noted columnist says of the rules, they "are a hoax, a fraud, and a fake, but perhaps we gain instruction there-by."

Kilpatrick traces the so-called rules and reveals that an Ohio Congressman, skeptical of their authenticity, asked then FBI director J. Edgar Hoover, now deceased, about the paper. Hoover's conclusion: "The document is spurious."
Our thanks to the reader who sent us the copy of Kilpatrick's column. — Jim Strayer.

STRAY Thoughts

By Jim Strayer

Christmas Announcement

O'Donnell, who said he will announce his political plans after Christmas, said in a conversation last week that Ley's letter is a good beginning. "From the letter, we may find out more about the amount of support I have, what my chances are, and if I should run."

Honor Deserved

Dorothy Grono received a well deserved honor during Wayne County's 4-H achievement night. Judy Tennre presented her with a silver serving tray to show the appreciation of 4-H'ers for the tremendous job she does as secretary in the County extension office.

Look out, Las Vegas

Las Vegas will never be the same. Don't know when he's going, but Dick Ditman won the grand prize — a trip to the Nevada City — during the Wayne Country Club Stag Night Wednesday. Couldn't have happened to a better guy. Just hope they get a little advance warning out there so they can be prepared.

Appropriate Winners

A couple of prizes awarded at the Stag Night were sort of appropriate. Mike Loefe, who used to own a bar, naturally won a fifth of liquor after being the first participant eliminated from consideration for the prizes. And who should win a suit from Surber's Clothing but Roger Nelson of Swan-McLean Clothing?
Doug Barry was also a winner, taking home a color television set.

Top Coach

Congratulations are in order for Wayne High football coach Stew Cline. He was named Coach of the Year by his fellow coaches in the West Husker Conference. That's quite an honor, particularly for a coach completing his first year in the conference, and it is well deserved.

Changes Announced

Sister M. Therese Koch, who resigned Nov. 10 as administrator of Providence Medical Center in Wayne, will not become administrator of Our Lady of Lourdes Hospital in Norfolk as we previously reported.

According to a news release, major changes have taken place in the Missionary Benedictine Community, whose mother house is in Norfolk.

The release states, "In response to many of these recent upheavels, several sisters from the community have decided to make a new foundation, the Federation of St. Scholastic. This Federation of American Benedictines Religious is separate from the Missionary of Benedictine Community whose headquarters is in Roma."

Sisters making this change in addition to Sister Therese are Mother Imelda Koch, Sister Alice Lordeman, Sister Mary-Elizabeth Weiland, Sister Roselle Koch, Sister Deana Case, and Sister Kathleen Garvin. Their place and work of ministry have not yet been decided.

Out of Old Nebraska

The contents of two letters recently discovered in the Crete Mills collection of the Nebraska State Historical Society at Lincoln provide an interesting account of the beginnings of the flour industry in Saine County. The letters, written in April of 1888 by C.M. Turner and Company, Milford, Ne., attempt to persuade C.C. White to give Turner franchise rights to Crete flour in Milford. The rights had already been granted to Turner's competitor.

Turner says: "If we had not counted on handling your flour as soon as the roads became passable we would before now have made some arrangement with the Milford Mills for their flour, but we gave out the word that we were going to handle the Crete flour and had our teams hired to come down on Saturday last, and to be sure, I went to Mr. Parnell and Ocutt and told them I wanted to get from them your terms and prices.

"I was shown your letter of March 31st giving them the exclusive sale in Milford. I was to say the least somewhat taken aback. When I believe I have done more for Crete in the flour trade than any one man in Seward County. I have always felt friendly to Crete Mills. Because on the 4th of July 1870 I made the first pound of flour that was ever made in Saine County.

"That same fall I went to Lincoln and Seward and put it on sale at both places, also at Milford and in the fall of 1871 I took Crete flour along with me and kept it on sale at Sutton for about eight years. In that time I sold about forty car loads of Crete Mills flour, and for the last eight or nine years that I have lived here I have been talking Crete flour and Milford Mills men know this to be true and I don't think I can get special favors from them, or don't know that I can get their flour to sell at all.

"I have always used your Victor flour and my wife thinks she can't make bread of any other. I talked Mr. S.J. Powell into keeping your flour. I rented him my store building for eight years here in Milford, and to fill it up or let it stand empty was the only chance I had left me, and I intend to stay; in fact I must stay, for all I have is in Seward County Real estate."

Earlier, his firm had written of Turner: "(He) was among the first to influence the introduction of Crete flour in Milford and suggested the keeping of it to S.J. Powell while here in Saine Co., Nebr., on the site of the lower Crete Mill, which would naturally make him a good advocate of Crete flour, and having known Mr. White for the last 20 years, we think we should be worthy of some consideration in the sale of your flour; and having had 20 years experience as a miller C.M. Turner could do you a greater amount of good than a man who never had any experience in the sale of flour. For further reference of our firm we would refer you to G.W. Bridges, Esq., of your city."

The original firm in which C.C. White had been a partner was called Bridges and White. Bridges left the business and White took as a partner George H. Glade. The outcome of these communications is unknown; unfortunately the outgoing correspondence was apparently not preserved.

MOD fashion show coverage appreciated

Dear Editor: I would like to express my thanks on behalf of the March of Dimes for the publicity given to our FHA March of Dimes Fashion Show Nov. 4 at Allen. It was our first MOD Fashion Show and the event was most successful thanks to the help we received from The Wayne Herald. This meant so much to our venture. We want to make this an annual event.

Allen

Also for the picture coverage of the event. And on such short notice. It really made my day to hear so many people tell me they read about our MOD Fashion Show in the Herald.
Again, a big thanks for your help. — Mrs. Loren (Betty) Carr.

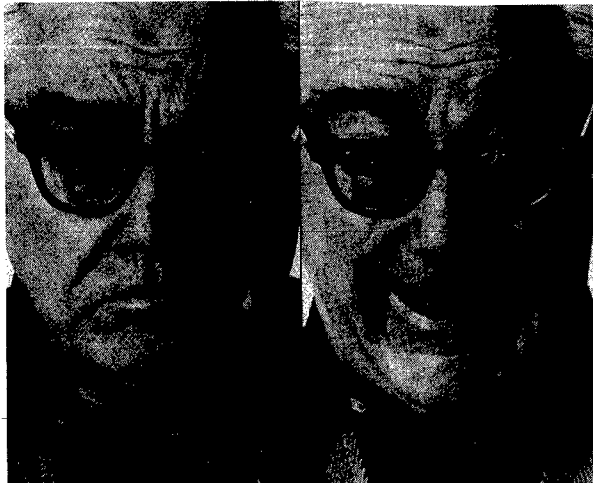

Special applauded

Dear Editor: The singer sings his songs — the Neil Diamond special was once again an hour of considerable musical enjoyment and achievement for one of America's truly young talented composers and performers. Selecting new material for the TV performance, Diamond exposed his capabilities to touch your senses with warmth in ballads such as "Glad You're Here Tonight" to stimulating your feet into dance with the up-tempo selection "Desiree."
Television viewers, indeed, were treated to an hour of warmth, sensuality, and sheer beauty in lyrics and arrangements from a performer who radiates in dignity, grace and candor.
The singer sings his songs; and Neil Diamond continues to sing them well. — Roger Nelson.

Mentors Pick Wayne's Cline 'Coach of Year'

Stew Cline's first year in the coaching ranks of the West Husker Conference not only produced him and his team a .500 mark, it also earned the head mentor "Coach of the Year" honors.

Cline, who was an assistant at Wayne State before taking over the head coaching duties at Wayne High this year, said the award was a surprise, following the conference meeting Wednesday at Wisner, but that not all the honor should go to him.

"It took 38 damn tough boys, good assistants and an administration willing to go along with what we wanted to do to make this year a success," Cline pointed out after his team finished with a 4-4-1 record and 4-1 in the conference.

"When one person gets something or seven (number of Wayne gridders who were mentioned for honors), then everyone shares the honors," Cline continued, saying that the whole student body and cheering section had a lot to do with Wayne's success.

In the final standings, both Wayne and Emerson-Hubbard, finished with 4-1 records. But Emerson won the title outright by virtue of a win over the Blue Devils in the final league game of the season.

Coaching in the high school ranks isn't anything new to Cline. Before coming to Nebraska, he coached for 13 years in Kansas schools. Cline and his wife, Marty, have a daughter, Ellen, who is in second grade.

Wayne County Board of Commissioners met per adjournment with members Beltram, Eddie and Burt present. The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and approved.

Advance notice of this meeting was published in The Wayne Herald, a legal newspaper, on November 10, 1977.

The following officer reports of fees collected during the month of October and remitted to State and County Treasurers were approved as follows:

Don Weible, Sheriff - $33.50

WHEREAS, The County Relief Budget is deficient due to increased costs of the Medicaid program

WHEREAS, we find it necessary to transfer funds from the inheritance tax levied into the County Relief Fund in the amount of $15,000.00

Mr. Upton presented the preliminary draft of Wayne County's One and Six Year Road Improvement Program.

County Clerk, Weible, presented the three signed agreements he had received from Hoskins, Winslow and Carroll assigning the County of those Village's participation in the County Wide Law Enforcement Project for another year.

County Clerk Weible announced receipt of a letter of resignation from Chris Bargholtz, Wayne County Veterans Service Office, effective end of working day Nov. 18, 1977. The Board took no action on this at this time.

Steep Driveways Most Dangerous Study Shows

Farms dot the Nebraska countryside like corn covers Nebraska fields and with almost every farmhouse and field there are access driveways leading from the main roads.

What kind of safety problems do such driveways pose to motorists who leave the road and collide with them?

This is the question considered in a pilot study this summer by two University of Nebraska College of Engineering and Technology professors in cooperation with the Nebraska Department of Roads.

During the development of roadside safety improvement programs, many types of obstacles have been identified as hazardous but little attention has been given to driveway slopes along roads, according to Dr. Edward Post, associate professor of civil engineering, one of the four professional engineers involved in the study.

The purpose of the project was to determine safety problems posed by such slopes and to determine at what cost the slopes could be flattened most economically, the main premise being that the more steep the slope, the more dangerous.

Until recently, such a study could have cost tens of thousands of dollars if full-scale test vehicles were driven through various sets of conditions and monitored for results.

The HVOSM is a computer model which can simulate the motion of a vehicle under various conditions and was modified for specific field applications by the Texas Transportation Institute, with which Post did research prior to coming to Nebraska.

Costs per accident simulation ranged from $10 to $20 for computer time, whereas full-scale tests would have cost from $5,000 to $15,000.

Project researchers were trying to determine the relationship of the slopes to the probability of injury and then decide how flat the driveways would have to be constructed to make them safer and still economically feasible, according to Dr. Patrick T. McCoy, associate professor of civil engineering and the other UNL professor working on the project.

Highway designers and planners make improvements with a cost-effectiveness factor in mind — in other words, how to make roads safer with the money available. This cost-effectiveness approach helps put all safety improvement decisions on a comparative level which is designed to put the money where it will do the most good.

Results from the summer study concluded that driveways with slopes of 8 to 1 — eight feet horizontal for every one foot vertical — are the most cost-effective in decreasing accident injuries. The typical driveway slope focused on in the study was steeper, about 3 to 1. No vehicle rollovers occurred in the model on driveways with slopes flatter than 6 to 1.

The costs of improving a 3 to 1 driveway slope to one of 8 to 1 averaged from $500 to a little over $1,500, depending on what kind of drainage measures were used, or a cost-effectiveness ratio of $700 to $1,000 to eliminate one fatal or non-fatal injury accident.

Despite the study's initial findings the results are only preliminary, McCoy cautioned, noting that the effects of other variables including soil compaction, steering input, surface frictions and side slope angles still need to be researched.

The actual aim of the research was two-fold, Post and McCoy pointed out. First, to possibly help in the safer construction of driveways in the future, and secondly, to demonstrate the capabilities of the University in responding to the needs of the State Department of Roads and other governmental agencies.

The project came about at a time when the College of Engineering and Technology is considering the formal creation of a Transportation Research Division in the University's Engineering Research Center.

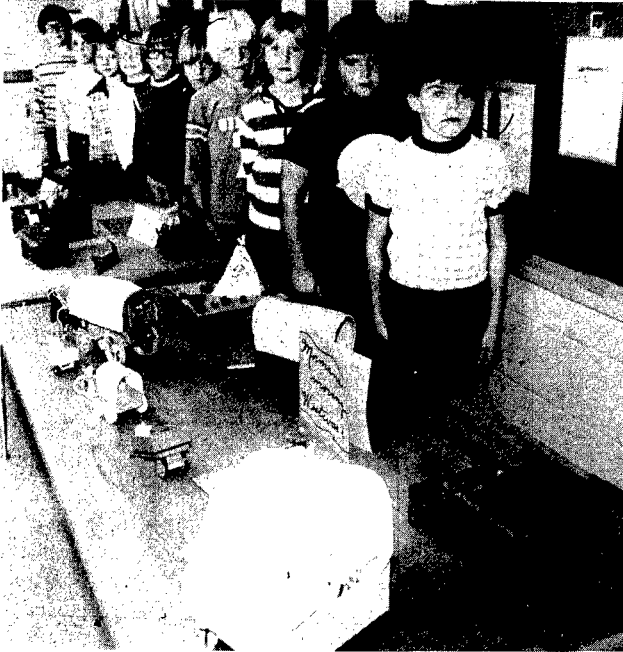

The driveway slope study will help build a "track record" for the proposed division, Post and McCoy noted. Currently, transportation professors at the University offer expertise in planning, traffic, engineering and highway safety, they added.

The study marks the first cooperative project between the Department of Roads and the proposed division, the two pointed out. Department of Roads personnel aiding in the research included David O. Coolidge, director-state engineer, and Richard Ruby, engineering support engineer.

Golden Fete is Sunday

Mr. and Mrs. Jay Drake of Carroll, who were married Dec. 26, 1927, are planning to observe their golden wedding anniversary with an open house reception on Sunday, Nov. 27, from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Carroll city auditorium. The event is being hosted by the couple's children and families. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon (Norma) Davis of Carroll and Mr. and Mrs. Don (Pauline) Frink of Norfolk. There are seven grandchildren. All friends and relatives are invited to attend. No other invitations are being issued.

Truckin'—

 "Some day, maybe I'll see the rest of them (states), she said. "A lot of people don't get to see what I've seen."
 Larry agrees trucking is a great way to see the country, but added, "It's always good to get back here. No place compares to home."
 Larry likes the Northwest, particularly Oregon and also finds upstate New York and Pennsylvania attractive. Deb likes California and Arizona. And while it's always good to be back home, she said, "Nebraska and Iowa are the most boring states to drive across."
 How do folks react to a lady trucker? Debbie said her friends thought it was great when they learned of her new occupation. On the highway, many people are shocked to see a woman driving a truck, she added, but Larry, who has logged in about 160,000 miles a year since he began making long hauls, said it isn't that unusual anymore.
 Fellow truckers accept women drivers, although there is plenty of good natured kidding. "I get harassed a lot, but it's all in fun," Debbie confided.
 Larry has owned his own rig for about a year and a half and has been driving under contract to a trucking company. He recently decided to become independent, bought a bull rack and hopes to build his own business hauling livestock both locally and on long hauls. He was scheduled to leave Friday morning for a run to Utah.
 Debbie wasn't planning to make the trip with him. She will be staying home more now, taking calls from customers and helping manage the business. But she said she isn't through driving yet. There is still plenty of country she hasn't seen, and she plans to keep on truckin'.

Reading—

 "Her" talk "End Results" will be aimed at conveying to parents that they should attach no stigma to the fact that their child may benefit from special reading classes.
 Elementary principal Dave Lutt said the placement of children in special reading classes is no reflection on the student's intelligence or ability.
 "Some of our top students are participating in phonetic reading classes," Lutt said.
 Mrs. Schmerler will explain why some children can benefit from the alternate teaching methods offered in the various reading classes.

Zoning—

 of residential property and about 17 acres of commercial and industrial property will contribute to the sewer line. The project is also designed so that service eventually can be extended to 65 acres of commercial and industrial property on the east side of the adjacent county road.
 Another benefit, Hirschbrunner said, is that some existing residential areas can be tied in with, taking part of the load off existing lines, permitting service to be extended growth on the community's west side.
 The council also took under consideration a request by Wayne Chamber of Commerce president-elect Gerald Bofenkamp that the city take charge of putting up Christmas decorations in the business district.
