Consider Keepsakes for Gift-Giving

Persons looking for an unusual gift to give may not need to look any further than their own home, according to Magdalene Pfister, Extension home fur-nishings specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Nebraska-Lincoln.

She says now may be the time to dusy off one of those family relics or dig out those old family photographs for a Christmas gift that passes on memories as well as good wishes.

"Family helrloom gifts can help bond generations and families together." says the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources specialist. "And they don't have to be expensive."

Some special gift ideas might include old books, cookbooks, sheet music, a photo album, a musical instrument that granddad used to play on, antique kitchen utensils or other items that have special meaning for the recipient.

special meaning for the recipient. Giving family keepsakes can be a good idea for older persons, adds Pfister. "Many persons on fixed incomes may have a difficult time meeting Christmas expenses, and others who have moved to smaller quarters might use this as one way to distribute some of the goods they've collected during the years," she says.

An added advantage for elderly per-sons is that giving more expensive keep-sakes now is a way to avoid inheritace taxes later which friends and relatives might incur if they were willed an item instead, she says.

Whether giving an old family dresser, a piece of china, cut glass, sliver or even innens such as quilts or pillows. Pfister suggests including information regarding the piece's history along with it.

An example might be," Received in 1935 from the J.L. Smith family for a wedding present," or "This was from your grandmother who received it from her mother on her lith birthday."

also would be a creative way to give a gift.

Still another suggestion is to make a gift from family clothing items, notes Pfister. A worn comforter or pieces of material from grandmother's wedding dress could be made into a collage, a quift or even a pillow with decorative stitchery.

"Use your imagination to create some thing special for giftgiving," she adds. "An old candy dish or even the glasses formerly containing preserves or cheeses could be filled with candy or popcorn for an inexpensive and meaningful gift."

FORMER Wakefield High cagers Alan Johnson and Scot Keagle return to the Platte College basketball team for their second season. Johnson returns to his guard position and Keagle, who played center, will see action at forward. Both are senborners.

THE Coach of the Year award presented to Wayne State head football coach Del Stoltenberg last week is the second such award Stoltenberg has received in his nine years at the helm.

Back in 1970 he was named District 11 coach "51" the year when his Wildcats finished the season with a 7-3 mark, won the Nebraska College Conference and played in the Mineral Bowl in Excelsior Springs, Mo.

About this year's 7-3 finish, which was good enough to finish second in the eightheam Central States Conference. Stoltenberg made it clear that the honor is strictly a result of a team effort.

"A great personal honor, however, we have preached team effort and togetherness all year. Consequently, I feel this is a great tribute to our coaches (Ralph Barclay, Doug Barry, Doug Radtike, Stew Cline, Al Tamberelli, Randy Slaybaugh), and a very special group of players—our 1977 squad.

"This is something that should be shared by all, for no one coach or athlete was individually responsible for the success we had this year."

YOU CAN bet your last dollar that Scott Kudrna won't easily forget his first time competing in junior varsity wrestling.

If was Monday night when coach Stew Cline's JVs fangled with visiting Randolph and Kudrna came up with six big points to win the match for Wayne in a come-from-behind thriller, 27-26.

To say the least, the 16-year-old sophomore was excited with his pin in the second period. He was even more excited to know that his points pulled the Blue Devils out of certain defeat to give the home team a 1-0 season start.

Midway through the JV meet, Kudrna had an inkling that his match might cast the deciding vote. Both clubs tossed the lead around before Randolph took a three point lead in the 185 pound match. There "was an awful lot of pressure" going into that match, Kudrna admitted, but he just kept his cool and relied on the instructions given to him by the coaching staff and pointers he picked up during practices from teammates Dan Mitchell (also a heavyweight) and Alan Schuett.

IN A way Bill Balir of Colorado and Jim Seward of Wayne State approach their team's losses in the same manner. Blair calls his 104.70 loss to highly-rated UCLA as a stepping stone towards improvement. Seward views his 99.73 loss to NW Missouri as "a situation where we learned that when playing against a good deam we have to have a better effort." Wayne's loss, which was its first in four outlings, came after the Cats went three overtimes to beat Benedictine the night before to get into the finals. Seward admitted that overtimes physically didn't hurt his ball club, but may have bothered them mentally.

It was a long weekend, the coach went on. After playing Friday night, his players had to sit through the afternoon watching girls baskerball before taking to the court in the finals Saturday.
That long wait apparently affected Wayne's shooting — making only 32 percent.

Brewer's team already had beaten the Owls once, in the opening game of the season at Wayne, but the foes were ready this time. After trailing, 29.24 at halftime and 43.29 with 13 minutes left in the game, the Owls began a gradual comeback.

They pulled to within a basket twice before Donna Schroer's two free throws with 3.32 left tied the game at 56. At tip in by Connie Kunzmann gave the lead back to Wayne.

The Kittens were up by 64.61 with 1:03 to play on a pair of graigs tosses by Kunzmann, but a basket by Laura Smith cut the lead to one with 50 seconds left. After a time out, the Owls went for the final shot. Kristi Schantz rebounded a missed

Brinkman had five assists and 15 points in the first game of the tourney, a 65-64 loss to Tarklo, Wayne's only loss of the season. "I was really glad to see Julie make the team." said Wildkitten

Nayne's strong finish can be attributed to two things, coach Don Koenig said after his grapplers fell two points short of tough, Randolph Monday night. There was a good crowd on hand to cheer the Blue Devils in their opening season dual, and the amount of enthuslasm members of Koenig's crew displayed both in the junior varsity and varsity matches.

Wayne came out on the short end of the score, 30-28, after heavyweight Dan Mitchell picked up six points for his pin. Mitchell's win was one of five victories by Wayne grapplers for the night at Jhe Devils' auditorium. Lower weight wrestiers Mike Schock, Rick Lutt and Dave Schock each won their matches. Both Schock boys pinpet their opponents and Lutt getfied an extra point for his 10-2 decision. Kelly Hansen also won the 138-pound title.

"There is a sharp edge of competition between Nebraska's higher education systems," said the candidate, "but I think we can better work with what we have in determining the role and mission of each public post-secondary institution."

Phares stated that his primary concerns now for Nebraska are the water issue and agricultural economy. "I'm very much interested in the effort to expand marketing capabilities," said the Rpublican candidate, adding that he feels a direct pipeline is needed to the governor's office to determine what the farmer wants. "We need to work aggressively in expanding the farm market." Phares told the group Tuesday night, saying that he would like to see a unifted effort of farmers in Nebraska and other farm belts so that an impact can be made in Washington.

Of the petition drive he noted,
"It's a simple issue for which many people have developed feelings: over the years. The response to date has been wide spread and positive. The Omaha World-Hearld, the Lincoln Journal, and the Lincoln Sar have all carried favorable editorials."

In addition to Farm Bureau members, Ring gave credit to County Extension club citizen-ship committees and at least one local Sierra Club member for helping with the drive.

"We have plenty of petitions left and anyone who would like to help is encouraged to give a call." Ring said. He added it would be particularly helpful to have more volunteers canvassing in Wayne.

Ring said plans are to conclude the Wayne County campaign by Dec. 22.

Taxes Biggest Items in Budget

How is the average Wayne County family spending its money these days? How much of it is going for taxes, how much for basic necessities and how much for luxuries and savings? According to a study made by the Tax Foundation, a non-profit research organization, tederal, state and local taxes are the biggest item in most family budgets.

In general throughout the country, they mount to more than is required for food, housing and household operations combined.

The findings, applied to Wayne County and to the average earnings in the local area, means that approximately $6,400 per household is going for taxes at the present time.

Despite the fact that incomes have been on the rise, locally and elsewhere, the overall tax load has been keeping pace. During the past four years, it is shown, per capita taxes have increased at the average rate of 7.3 percent per year.

There remains a total of 1 hour and 9 minutes, the process of which are available for discretionary spending, it may be used for savings, for education, for personal care, for recreation and entertainment and for luxuries in general.

Based upon the overall findings, the average family in Wayne County has nearly three-fourths of its income going for food, clothing, shelter and taxes, in terms of earnings in the local area in the past year, it is equivalent to approximately $13,550 per household.

First round of 'sunset hearings' completed by Legislature

**CAPITOL NEWS

LINCOLN** — Legislative history was/made recently in Nebraska when the state's tirst round of "sunset hearings" was completed by the Government, Military and Veterans Affairs Committee.

The central issue of the hearings was whether six state agencies should be allowed to exist beyond July 1, 1978. The legislative staff has been reviewing the agencies for several months, and the Legislature will decide next year if they should be allowed to exist.

Immediate disbandment of the six agencies is guaranteed if the state's 49 lawmakers fail to enact legislation in 1978 to reestablish the agencies.

The sunset review process, which essentially got its start in Colorado, is aimed at forcing systematic reviews of state agencies, boards and commissions.
The reviews are intended to determine

Under Nebraska's 1977 Sunset Law, which itself has only a six-year life span, a total of three dozen agencies will find their futures on the line when they come up for state review.

During the committee's recent hearings, the agencies that tried to prove their continued existence was warrantee were the Department of Economic Development, the Board of Cosmetologist Examiners, the Board of Barber Examiners, the Board of Barber Examiners, the Board of Hearing Aid Dealers and Fitters, and the Board of Registration for Sanitation.

As expected, none of the agencies asked the committee to recommend to the 1978 Legislature that they be disbanded.

Nebraska school district officials told a legislative committee recently that they're tooting too much of the bill for special education for handicapped children.

During the late November hearing.

Officials from eastern, and central Nebraska complained to the Unicameral's Education Committee that the state isn't reimbursing school districts for 90 percent of their excess special education costs.

reimbursing school districts for 90 per-cent of their excess special education costs.

The state's responsibility to reimburse school districts for 90 percent of the excess costs is detailed in a Department of Education rule.

Larry Olson, director of special educa-tion for the Columbus city schools, said his district is paying more than 90 per-cent of the excess cost of educating handicapped students.

One reason for the problem, according to those who testified before the committee, is that the department's rule prevents the state from paying districts for some of the costs that are associated with special education programs.

For example, Joe Gaughan of the Omaha Public Schools said such things as heat and electricity are not considered "education costs" for handicapped students even though they are for regular students. a

The committee didn't take any immediate action on the school officials' complaints, but legislators say they may review the testimony sometime this month for possible action in the 1978 session.

Protect the Capital

control delvelopment around the state Capitol.

The committee's plan represents an attempt to preserve the towering Statehouse as a Lincoln — and a Nebraska. In addition, the committee already has succeeded in getting the Lincoln city council and the Legislature to impose height restrictions on buildings constructed around the Capitol.

In the committee's plan, which has been forwarded to state and city officials for review, private and public employees are urged to provide incentives for employees who take the bus, or ride in a car pool, to work.

In addition, the plan sets out detailed recommendations for maintaining the view of the Capitol from Pioneers Park, Woods Park, Holmes Park, Capitol Beach, Coddington and Middle Creek, Lincoln Memorial Park and two parks near Emerald

Many Agricultural Senators

The Insurance Information Institute of Chicago has released a survey on state senators that says persons engaged in agriculture hold the largest single block in the Nebraska Legislature.

According to the survey, 13 — or 27 percent — of the state's 49 lawmakers are engaged in agriculture. The survey also shows that 9 — or 19 percent — of Nebraska's senators are entrepreneurself-employed.

In addition, the survey says just more than 10 percent (5) are educators, 6 percent (3) are women and 4 percent (2) are lawyers. Lawyers nationwide remain the largest single professional or occupational group in the nation's 50 state legislatures, the survey said.

OBSERVATIONS

Trees are best choice

me new sidewards in the downtown observes district.

The improvement committee has recommended five varieties of trees for the planters, selected with the assistance of Marshall Nursuries representative Gail Korn. Specific varieties have been selected for each planter to best fit that location's surroundings. Pictures of the varieties selected and plans for the type of tree for each location are on display at the State National Bank and First National Bank in Wayne.

It has been suggested that flowers would be a better choice for the planters than trees. The city council has agreed to put the item on their agenda and the downtown improvement committee has said it is willing to listen to arguments for flowers or other atternatives, while indicating its plans and intentions still give prime consideration to trees.

Some of the objections to trees include leaves which some varieties will shed, the possibility of birds roosting, roots which would be cut if it becomes necessary to excavate and work on underground utilities, drainage, and views being blocked by one variety selected, the Hick's yew.

The committee devoted considerable time to making a study before selecting the types of trees recommended. Members also talked to businessmen in other communities which have planted trees and have been pleased with the result. Some of the trees selected will shed leaves, but with 40 trees in an area the size of the downtown business district, that doesn't seem to present a major problem.

The Hick's yew selected for some The improvement committee has problem:

The Hick's yew selected for some locations will be kept pruned to five feet in height and shouldn't present a major obstacle to the view in the downtown area. Other varieties have been selected to fit in with the surroundings at specific locations.

We cannot say with any certainty that the possible problems of birds, roots and drainage won't be present, but if other communities have satisfactorily overcome those problems, it seems fikely Wayne can do the same. Trees offer several advantages not offered by flowers. They will make a greater overall contribution to the appearance of the downtown areas. Flowers in the sidewalk-level planters would not be visible from the street when cars are parked in the downtown area. Trees would. Flowers would not provide a year round decorative effect to the downtown area. Without claiming any expertise in the matter, it is our understanding that at most, any variety of flower planted would be in bloom for about three months at the most.

Trees would provide some shade in the summer, and would continue to be decorative in the winter months. The bare branches of the deciduous varieties selected would be attractive during the winter months, helping to provide relief to the eye in viewing the downtown area, and providing a profile which would be in keeping with the season.

When initially planted, trees might be somewhat susceptible to vandalism, and would continue to have some vulnerability, but it seems likely that over a period of years, a good healthy tree will be able to survive better than flowers.

Initial cost is estimated at $30 a tree, on the average. It is the committee's plan initial cost is estimated at $30 a tree, on the average. It is the committee's plan that trees be provided by private donation and there is evidence that they would be successful in this endeavor.

Mechanical skills vital to farm survival

The versatility and mechanical skills of U.S. farmers and ranchers, especially the youthful ones, is a major factor in their ability to survive in this troubled time of inflated production costs and low farm he ingenuity and resourcefulness of U.S. farmer and rancher has his-The ingenuity and resourcefulness of the U.S. farmer and rancher has historically set him apart from the food producers of the rest of the world. But oday's farmers and ranchers are in many cases staying financially afloat through their skills and ability to do their own repairs, maintenance and construction work.

Most farms today have a well-equipped shop with the power tools and specialized equipment necessary to keep today's highly mechanized farming operations going. And farmers know how to use it. They have become the greatest "do it yourseffers" in all history of agriculture. Many young farmers today learned their basic mechanical and construction skills in high school shop and vocational ag courses. Some took additional training in the state's technical colleges, and through special trade schools. And a great deal more has been acquired through trial and error, and experience.

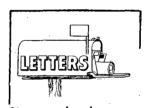

do their own shop work but do custom work for friends and neighbors. During the winter months they tune up their tractors and combines and in many cases do complete overhauls. By so doing they save thousands of dollors in their operating costs. Some hold off-the-farm jobs during the winter months, supplementing their income and improving their skills. In construction, they have learned to repair and remodel old buildings into farrowing houses, build grain and machine storage facilities. They can run a concrete floor for their hog finishing program, install the electrical wiring in their farm home, do a job of plumbing repair or installation, or put a new set of cupboards in the kitchen with finesse enough to please their wives.

They are really good at all these jobs and most professional tradesmen will admit it. And today's farmer mechanics and builders seem unatraid to tackle almost any job. If they run into a problem, there is always a friend and neighbor with skill and ability to stop by and tell them how to solve it.

There is not the time or the money to haul every piece of equipment that breaks down into town for repairs, nor are there enough skilled mechanics to go around. The crops would never be in on time nor harvested on time if it were not for the "do it yourself" abilities of today's modern farmer and rancher. Many of them are inventive and build equipment for their own use, some of which is copied and manufactured by equipment firms later. A classic example of this was the Egging tractor cabs which developed from a farm shop near Gurley by an ingenious farmer who first built one for himself and then a few for his neighbors in the winter months.

U.S. farmers and ranchers have always been "do it yourselfers" but never at the level demanded by today's complex, intricate equipment. They've had to learn to cope with it in order to survive.—M.M. Yan Kirk, Nebraska Farm Bureau.

be successful in this endeavor. Those persons who have suggested flowers as an alternative to trees are to be commended for their interest and participation. Council members are to be commended for displaying their responsiveness by agreeing to place the matter on their agenda. And downtown improvement committee members are to be commended for their willingness to listen to suggestions from others. It is always good to discuss any ideas offered before making a commitment. But it appears to us that trees can add more overall to the downtown area than flowers, and unless considerable evidence to the contrary is forwarded, we believe trees are the best choice. — Jim Strayer.  pullib "CAN WE SEE WHERE YOU KEEP THE RED TAPE ?"

One might think that a process so central to economic justice as the shaping of the tax laws would be the subject of intense public scrutiny. But it is not, and some curious things happen.

In a recent year 112 individuals with annual incomes of more than $200,000 were legally able to avoid paying any federal income taxes. Three of the 112 reported incomes of more than one million. That's the kind of information that has convinced a lot of ordinary hardworking taxpaying Americans that they're playing in a game where someone has stacked the deck.

One of the leading tax authorities in the country has said that income tax rates could be lowered one-third with no resulting reduction in the amount of money raised if all income were subject to tax and the personal deductions were pruned to the essential items.

The cafital gains tax, the many avenues of escape from the estate tax, the abuse of farm tax losses, accelerated depreciation, and innumerable other devices enable the high-income taxpayer to, bring his tax rate far below that of citizens in the middle and lower-income ranges.

Retirees Told: Review Earnings

Review Earnings

People getting Social Security checks who have been working during 1977 should take some time now to review their earnings said Dale Branch, Social Security district manager in Norfolk.

These people should keep in mind that their monthly checks may be affected if their earnings go over $3,000, the annual exempt amount used in the retirement test, Branch went on. Once 1977 earnings exceed the $3.00 mark, $1 in benefits is withheld for each $2 of earnings.

One important factor to keep in mind, Branch continued, is that gross wages, not just take home pay, count toward the retirement test. Many people have been unhappily surprised because they only counted take home pay and then found that total wages exceeded the exempt amount. The result was that they had to pay back some of the benefits they had received in error.

If people find that after reof the benefits they had received in error.

If people find that after reviewing their earnings to date they will or already have gone over $3,000, they should report this at once to their social security office.

Somehwat different rules apply to self-employed people, Branch continued. They can deduct aflowable -business expenses from their gross income to arrive at their net earnings, which count towards the retirement test.

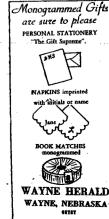

to arrive at their net earnings, which count towards the retirement test.

Another part of the retirement test helps people who earn less in some months or don't work so much in self-employment in some months as others.

This part of the test states that a benefit can be paid for any month that a person neither earns over $250 in wages nor performs substantial services in self-employment.

Substantial services are measured by the amount of time a person spends in connection with the business. Generally, services of more than 45 hours in a month are considered substantial. Services of between 15 and 45 hours may be substantial depending on the nature of the business or services. Services of less than 15 hours a month are never considered substantial.

Both wage earners and self-employed people can get more information about the retirement test at any social security office. The people there have a free booklet entitled "If You Work After You Retire" that gives more detailed information about the retirement test.

In a test large round bales fed free-choice on pasture, animals waste about 11 percent of the hay when given a one-day supply. Waste increased to more than 24 percent when given a two-day supply and to over 30 percent when a four day, or greater, supply was available.

Another method of controlling access is by placing large hay bales in a feeding rack. Waste was less than 5 percent when large bales were placed in a fenceline feeding rack.

If large forage bales are stored where they will be fed, such as end rows of corn field, an electric fence can be used to keep animals away until they are fed. Move the fence to expose a one-day supply of feed.

Producing corn in Nebraska is tricky business-especially when weather; solls, insects adiasease are factors.

More than 50 seed dealers representatives and farmers gathered at Fremont recently for one in a series of 1977 Corn Production meetings. Eight university of Nebraska-Lincott Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources agronomists presented information on nearly every facet of corn production. Leroy Svec, district Extension agronomist at the UNL South Central Station, Clay Center, explained the functions of the corn plant to the group. Purple leaves on 1977 corn were a source of concern to many farmers. Svec noted. He explained that early season purple color is often associated with cool temperatures, especially cool soil temperatures, where phosphorus uptake by the plant may be limited. In that situation, the purple color is the storm and breakage and ear damage. "The types of measurable damage is influenced by the nature of the storm," Flowerday, University of damage."

Since the leaves of the corn plant are the site of photosynthesis, defoliation of the corn plant as a result of a hallstorm can spell disaster if many of the leaves are destroyed.

"Defoliation losses at an early vegetative growth stage does not reduce yield potential as greatly as the same level of defoliation at a later vegetative growth loss early in the reproductive stage, however, reduces yield potential more than it would later in the reproductive period. At the later more man it would later in the reproductive period. At the later reproductive stage the photo-synthetic function of the leaves is more nearly complete," he said.

For the conventional (spring, plow) and limited systems, Penas said, fertilizer can be either broadcast or applied as a starter. Broadcast fertilizer will be incorporated in both cases. In addition, the farmer using these two systems can either broadcast the herbicide or apply it in a band at planting. Nitrogen can be applied either before planting or as a sidedress treatment.
Penas stressed that the main objective to achieve is good soil-to-seed contact no matter which tillage system is used.
Experiments were begun at the UN-L Field Lab near Mead in 1973 and have continued each year since at various locations across the state. Sander said. These experiments compare the fertilizer recommendations from several soil test laboratories as well as the UN-L Soil Testing Laboratory on the same plot area each year. Soil samples are submitted to each laboratory in the same manner as routine farmer samples.

The recommended fertilizers are applied and compared both on a yield and profit basis. In past years, in the research showed, yields have not been influenced by the kinds of fertilizer applied, the process of the planting and the planting and the planting the planting and the plant past years, the research showed, yields have not been influenced by the kinds of fertilizer applied. Sander said. However, the difference in cost between recommended fertilizer programs has been great, thus greatly affecting profitability for the farmer. It is becoming apparent in these experiments that the high rates and many of the micronutrients and other nutrients as well that are recommended by some soil testing laboratories have not increased yields

Such a mixture is less sensitive to over or under watering. Combine one teaspoon of the mixture with each four inch potfull of soil. A weak solution of soluble fertilizer may be added every two or three months. Water when soil surface becomes dry. Add enough water so it comes out of the drainage hole. Never allow plants to become so dry that they will. Plants have a natural tendency to turn their leaves toward the light. Turning the pots one-quarter turn each week will keep them balanced. ### Thought for Today By Rowan Wiltse

Disraeli We can agree with the first two-thirds of Disraeli's observation but not the latter portion. Old age today is in general far less worrisome than it was as little as a half century ago. Our "bright new era" although imperfect in many ways, has nevertheless vastly improved the prospects for our Senior Cilizens.

The life Span has increased, the productive years have stretched, and the opportunity to prepare adequately for the later years often permits an old age untainted by regret ...far different than the case in Disraeli's day.

Through collaborating funeral homies, we can provide funeral services anywhere in the country. Call us. We can handle all details and give you local accountability.
