We Know, We Know!

It's Official--April was Wet

Ask any area farmer and he will tell you in no uncertain terms that April was a "wet month."

Farmers are working day and night to get in their crops as they were kept out of the fields during the normal planting season by rain which made the fields mud-mires.

Wayne County was nearly two inches above normal in precipitation for the month of April. Wakefield reported a total of 5.25 inches of moisture for the month which represents 1.31 inches above normal. Norfolk showed a total of 4.35 inches for the month, representing an increase above the normal of 2.20 inches.

Temperatures were just above normal for the Wayne County area during the month of April. The fluctuation ranged from a plus .6 of a percent in the Wakefield area to a minus .6 of a percent in the Norfolk area.

Precipitation fell intermittently during the month. Snow was reported in the western half of the state, but most of it melted as it fell or soon afterward, according to a preliminary climatic summary for Nebraska for the month of April by the Conservation and Survey Division of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The report indicated small hail being observed at numerous sites. Large, damaging hail fell in the Grand Island vicinity on April 17.

Precipitation was above normal in all divisions except in the Southwest Division where it was 91 percent of normal. The past month was the second wettest April in 48 years in the Central and East-Central divisions.

During the first ten days of the month, daily temperatures averaged 10 to 20 degrees above normal. Daily temperatures averaged 5 to 15 degrees below normal during the middle of the month and near normal during the last few days of the month.

In the Wayne area, the average daily maximum was about 58 degrees with the average low in the neighborhood of 39 degrees. The average of the month was about 49 degrees. April 3 marked the date for the highest reading of the month when 78 degrees was recorded. April 21 was the date of the low which was 21 degrees.

The cloud cover in the area was also evidenced by the fact that Omaha received only 27 percent of the possible amount of sunshine during the month. In 74 years of record at Lincoln, only two years received a smaller percentage of sunshine than April, 1978.

65-Year-Olds May Pay Taxes

People 65 years and older, who didn't have to pay property tax on their homes for 1977 may find themselves paying in 1978, according to Doris Stipp, county assessor.

Last year $15,000 was subtracted from the actual value of houses owned by people age 65 and up. If a house valued $15,000 or less, the owner didn't have to pay tax on it.

This year, a bill to raise the value subtracted from $15,000 to $25,000 was passed but an emergency clause was not attached, so it won't go into effect until 1979. Because of new evaluations which will be higher this year, these people may have to pay property tax.

Heavy Haulers 'Marks New Era'--Peterson

Information and application forms will soon be available regarding overweight permits, which will allow haulers to exceed legally specified weight limits during harvest seasons.

According to the Nebraska Department of Roads, overweight permits have been used annually, and loads may exceed the legal limits by 25 percent during harvest season.

Application forms and information regarding rules and regulations will become available some time next week and may be picked up at the county clerk's office.

Information is also available at district and subdistrict headquarters and from the Nebraska Department of Roads.

Investors who enjoy the thrill of a risky situation or who have a "compulsion" to gamble should go to Las Vegas. Real estate will be far too dull to appeal to such people as an investment. The real estate market goes down as well as up and specific parcels are worth more... or less... at certain times than at others. However, real estate always has some value; if never becomes worthless. It is this inherent stability that makes it appeal as an investment for well-to-do people. Most wealthy families have a substantial portion of their wealth in real estate. There's a lesson there for the rest of us. When you buy a home, you should consider it to be an investment just as income property would be. Be a smart buyer! Town Team Rally Clips Norfolk

A two run single, by Mike Green in the top of the eighth inning, gave the Wayne Town Team a 3-2 victory over Norfolk Sunday, in Norfolk.

Wayne scored the first run in the second inning as four players drew walks to score Mike Meyer. Norfolk came back to take the lead with two runs in the bottom of the second.

Both teams failed to score again until the eighth inning, when Wayne took the lead for good. Earl Overin singled to start the rally and bases were soon loaded when Norfolk gave up two walks. Green belted a single with bases loaded and two outs to bring the score to 3-2 and what proved to be the winning count.

Norfolk made a comeback attempt in the ninth as they loaded the bases with two outs, but Wayne retired the next batter to end the game, 3-2. Wayne's record is now 2-0 with high wins coming against Norfolk. Earl Overin was the winning pitcher.

Next action for the town team will be against Wakefield of the road, today (Thursday) at 8 p.m. Wayne 010 000 023 4-1 Norfolk 020 000 000 2-2

WS Women's Tennis Over, Bradix Makes Semi-finals

The Wayne State College women's tennis team found it rough going last Thursday through Saturday (May 18-20) at the regional college competition in Winona, Minn., with only one WSC player making the semi-finals.

Shari Bradix, a sophomore pre-law major from Bellevue and the top WSC singles player, was defeated 6-4, 6-4, in semi-final action by the eventual regional singles winner, Cindy Wentworth of St. Peter, Minn.

Bradix, teamed with Mary Curnyn of Denison, Ia., was defeated in the opening match of number one doubles. Bradix and Curnyn later defeated a Missouri Western team 4-6, 6-4, 7-6. The pair lost in final consolation play to a Ft. Hays team 7-6, 5-7, and 6-4.

WSC finished 14-3 on the season in dual competition under the direction of coach Wes Fritz.

Rinehart 31st In Road Run

Don Rinehart, Wayne, competing for the Plains Track Club of Omaha, placed 31st overall and 18th in the open division of the first annual Nike-United 10,000 meter Road Run Sunday.

A field of over 1000 runners competed and Rinehart's time of 34:21 was about four minutes behind that of winner Fred Canahan of Genoa. Rinehart also completed in the Drake Relays Marathon in Des Moines and finished 78th out of 1100 runners.

His time of two hours and .59 minutes qualifies him for the Boston Marathon next year.

HEALTH

TIP

Unpleasant breath or halitosis may be caused by diseases in the mouth by neglecting ordinary mouth cleanliness, according to the Nebraska Medical Association.

Halitosis may also come from infections in the nose, throat and lungs, and sometimes may even originate in the stomach. If the mouth is clean and healthy and the teeth are in good condition, a physician should be consulted if bad breath still exists. Indigestion, lung cancer and lung infections, diabetes and other conditions may cause unpleasant breath. Only a physician can manage these ailments.

Mouthwashes can do nothing more than camouflage an unpleasant breath for a limited time, reports the Association. The only sure cure is to find and remove the cause. If the cause is elsewhere than in the mouth, no mouthwash can be expected to do any good.

Dentists point out that commercial mouthwashes have no medicinal value. Clear drinking water is just as effective for rinsing the mouth to clear it of loose food particles or soluble substances.

However, your dentist may prescribe a special mouthwash for certain conditions of the gums or other tissues of the mouth.

Randy's RECAP

According to Randy Hascall

JOHN "JERSEY" JERMIER, was fired as Kansas State's athletic director, Sunday, because he allowed former football coach, Ellis Rainsberger to sign 13 more football recruits than allowed.

To Wayne sports fans who remember back as far as 1968, "Jersey" was a familiar name around the area. He was head football coach at Wayne State from 1962-69 and a friend to many local people.

After leaving Wayne, Jermier coached at Colorado State and Iowa before going to Kansas State. According to an article in the Omaha World-Herald, he hinted that he was sacrificed in hopes of a more lenient penalty against Kansas State.

Jermier was quoted to say, "The only guilt I admit to is the fact that maybe I didn't study the forms closely enough, and I followed the policy that had been in existence for some time."

A HEAVY RAIN in Ralston Monday postponed the first round of the state class B baseball tournament. Wakefield's first round game was moved to Wednesday at 6 p.m.

TWO HOLES IN ONE were reported in Sioux City during the past week. The strange thing is that both were recorded by Les Brosamie. I've know lots of golfers who have golfed all their lives without an ace and now some lucky guy in Sioux City gets two in less than a week. How about sharing.

LOS ANGELES will refuse the 1984 Olympics if they have to assume financial liability. The Olympic Committee approved L.A. as the site for the Olympic action but the mayor and city council are upset that the city will probably have to assume financial liability.

QUOTE OF THE WEEK comes from Boston Red Sox Manager Zimmer. After Fred Lynn was called out on strikes he charged the umpire and yelled, "The pitch was this far off the ground and this far outside (with hands about 12 inches apart). You couldn't hit it with an ironing board."

Needless to say, when the argument was all over, Zimmer was given the thumb by the umpire and had to leave the game.

LOOKING BACK on the State track meet, it was a good year with many records falling. The one that impressed me the most was the triple jump record set by Todd Brown of Holdrege. Brown broke the 50 foot barrier with a leap of 50' 11". The old state record was 47.9.

A TWELVE TEAM TOURNAMENT is scheduled in Wakefield beginning Friday. The Chuck Ellis Memorial Tournament will match Wakefield, West Point, Sioux City Heelan, Sioux City West, Norfolk, Sioux Falls, Pender-Bancroft, O'Neill, Lincoln East, Sioux City North, Wayne, and Aberdeen in five days of competition.

It's a big tournament and should be a good one, with finals on Tuesday, May 30.

Agriculture Slips To Fourth in State

A recent study by the University of Nebraska—Lincoln Bureau of Business Research that indicated agriculture has slipped to fourth place among the state's leading industries was not designed to show the total impact of farming and ranching on Nebraska's economy.

When the total impact is measured, agriculture is and will continue to be the most dominant force in the state's economic picture, said Dr. Michael S. Turner, Extension agricultural economist at UNL's Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

The study, released earlier this month, reported that Nebraska's 1976 gross state product—the total value of goods and services produced in the latest year for which figures are available—stood at $11,833.1 billion. It listed the top four segments of the state's economy in terms of gross product as being wholesale and retail trade, manufacturing, finance, insurance and real estate, and agriculture, respectively.

But the $1.4 billion gross agricultural product reported in the study does not include more than $2.5 billion in current operating expenses of Nebraska farms and ranches, Turner said. Such expenses account for about a fourth of the $10.4 billion non-agricultural gross state product, he said.

Current operating expenditures include purchases of feed, livestock, seed, fertilizer and lime, repairs and operating costs of capital investments and hired labor. The figure does not include an additional $118.4 million spent on machinery depreciation, farm property taxes, farm mortgage debt interest payments and rent for non-operator landlords.

Turner said a few people "may have been surprised" by the study's results, although he said the problem largely is one of definition in interpreting the true role agriculture plays in the state's economy.

In its effort to determine the gross state product, he said, the Bureau of Business Research limited the definition of agriculture solely to income from farm and ranch production and subtracted current operating expenses to avoid counting the same dollars twice.

Based upon such an analysis, agriculture's fourth-place ranking in the latest gross state product figures is not unusual. In terms of constant 1972 dollars, agricultural production has been no higher than fourth since 1967, when it was third, according to bureau statistics. The last year agriculture ranked first was 1960.

"Most agricultural economists have a broader view of agriculture and certainly one that includes not only the income generated by the state's farms and ranches, but also the supporting industries from which farm and ranch operators purchase many of their production needs and the industries that market their agricultural products," Turner said.

Placing a precise value on agriculture's total economic impact is impossible currently because of a lack of data, he said, although future efforts will be made to accumulate such figures.

But Turner offered several examples of agriculture's contribution to other economic sectors based upon 1972 census figures published in the Nebraska Statistical Handbook last year. They indicate that:

more than a third of the $6.4 billion in wholesale trade volume based on dollars of sales were directly linked to agriculture. About $2.22 billion was spent on farm products and raw materials and $420 million went for farm supplies.

More than a third of the $1.733 billion of all value-added manufacturing, or $581 million, was attributable to food and kindred products.

"Obviously, there are many other areas in terms of wholesale trade, such as purchases of machinery and electrical goods, as well as other industries like transportation, services and finance, insurance and real estate for which farm and ranch businesses form a dominant share," Turner said. "When these are combined, agriculture would be the dominant industry in the state."

"And I don't see anything on the horizon that would cause me to believe that agriculture in the foreseeable future will have a less dominant position in the state's economy than it does now," he said.

Agriculture will maintain its "favored industry" status because it has the comparative advantages of a favorable climate, good water supply and fertile soil, Turner said. It would take a dramatic and unlikely mineral discovery or substantial shift in the nation's population concentration to change that, he said.

During years of poor grain or livestock prices, he said, the state likely will see farmers consider growing alternative crops other than abandoning agricultural production altogether.

"I don't think we have to have a super big concern over the level of agricultural prices over the long pull," Turner said. "From year to year, we're going to have some low prices, but over the long haul we'll have prices that will allow agricultural production to continue."

He said the Bureau of Business Research study is correct in stating that Nebraska's agricultural industry is subject to extreme fluctuation in real output and is the state's most volatile industry.

"Agricultural prices are sensitive to changing economic conditions," Turner said. "Agriculture also is dominated by biological considerations and variations in weather patterns that cause fluctuations in prices and output."

The report said that from 1961-76, there was a 3.5 percent average annual increase in total agricultural output in Nebraska, considerably higher than the 0.9 percent increase in the nation's farm output. Yet, it said, real output figures also indicated that the state's agricultural industry is "much less stable than the nation's agricultural industry."

"These figures also emphasize the obvious fact that agriculture has a much greater impact on Nebraska's economy than it does on the national economy," the bureau said. "Fluctuations in real output for the state's farm industry are tempered somewhat by the interrelationship of agriculture with a set of relatively stable nonagricultural industries."

RUSSIAN KNAPWEED

Description
Russian knapweed is a perennial, reproducing by seed and underground rootstocks. The plant has large underground rootstocks by which it spreads into new territory, sends up numerous new plants, and stores large amounts of food materials. The stems are one to four feet tall and are covered with downy white hairs. The leaves are slightly hairy. The lower ones have very rough or lobed margins. The heads are about 1/2 inch wide and have blue to purple or rose-colored flowers. The seeds are an ivory to light brown color, flattened, ovate shaped, and usually without bristles or hair. Russian knapweed seed is occasionally found in alfalfa and clover seed.

Control
In pasture or waste areas, use one quart 2,4-D plus one pint Banvel at early bud stage. Avoid tillage five weeks before and one week after application. Plan to treat for several consecutive years.

Special Remarks
Russian knapweed is extremely difficult to control with presently available herbicides.

HORSE RACING

There's a fever that hits Nebraska every spring that has nothing to do with apple blossoms and rose buds. Nothing that is unless the horse you're betting on happens to be called by those flowery names. For from May 2-July 22, AkSarBen, Nebraska's biggest and classiest track, opens its doors to thousands of racing fans.

The Omaha event attracts some of the finest horses on the circuit. On weekends, the betting handle tops over a million dollars. AkSarBen has a great reputation and people flock in from surrounding states to get in on the action.

No sooner does AkSarBen close up shop than Lincoln steps in July 24-August 26 to keep things going strong. The Lincoln State Fairground's track is among the most modern in the area and draws attention from the best horses everywhere.

While attracting some of the top regional stables, Columbus opens its doors to thoroughbred racing from August 29-September 30. Then, it's off to Atokad in South Sioux City, as it wraps things up in late autumn with an exciting fall racing meet from October 4-November 26.

Even the most ardent fans would have to admit they get extra special treatment in Nebraska. Grand Island's Fanner kicks off the season in March, and as noted, racing continues through November. It adds up to 191 days of bang! action in Nebraska.

WINNERS & LOSERS

The longest winning streak in baseball history occurred between Sept. 7 and Sept. 30, 1916 when the New York National League team won 26 games in a row.

A long streak of losses has been experienced by union organizers. For instance, only about 22% of the U. S. work force are union members, it's only 10% in the textile industry, and after almost 15 years of out effort, union organizers have achieved the representation of less than seven percent of the workers at J. P. Stevens.

"The World's Grainkeeper"

Thought for Today
By Rowan Wiltse

"No one is rich enough to do without a neighbor."
Danish Proverb

Just as friends add depth and meaning to life, our neighbors can make our existence more pleasant and more secure. In the early days on our frontiers, neighbors could be counted on for help in times of crises. Neighbors banded together for protection, to raise barns or to harvest crops. Money cannot buy the satisfaction that comes of mutual aid, exhibited when neighbors help each other. It warms our hearts when good neighbors show a genuine concern about us and our problems.

With us, there are no minor details in connection with a funeral service. Everything we do is important to the family we serve; it gets our closest professional attention.

"the pulse of our community"

No. 1 Source of Local Information

by Carolyn Neal

Our weekly newspaper is a vital part of our community, results of a recent survey of Nebraskans indicate.* The survey shows that 95.8% of Nebraskans read one or more newspapers regularly.

Like a pulse, our local paper monitors the community. In fact, the paper is the No. 1 source of every kind of local information. According to respondents to the survey, no medium is better in providing local news and sports.

Local advertising is another reason people read our paper. 78.3% of Nebraskans said the newspaper is the first place they turn for shopping information.

That, in turn, is why retailers rely on the paper. They know newspaper ads are a sure way to reach the consumer.

Sellers, shoppers, and citizens — all find what they want in the paper. You can, too. To get to the heart of the matter, look to the pulse.

*This advertisement prepared by Carolyn Neal, University of Nebraska School of Journalism.

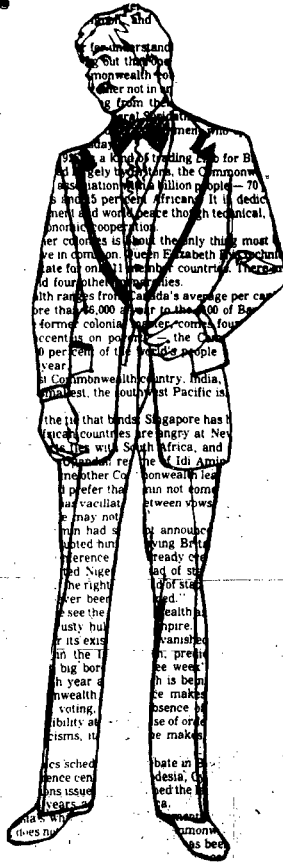

*Survey conducted under the direction of the faculty of the Marketing Department, UNL, March, 1978.

What are you (your estate) worth on paper?

Total up exactly what you're worth. Value of your home and car. Savngs. Insurance. Stocks. Pension Plans. Turn out to be more than you thought? What if you were suddenly out of the picture? Is your will up to date? With the constantly changing laws will your executor have all the necessary information concerning your estate? Talk to your lawyer and then discuss the status of your estate with one of our trust officers. One visit and you'll know why so many of your neighbors have placed their trust in us.

Special session idea flops

CAPITOL NEWS

By Melvin Paul

Statehouse Correspondent

The Nebraska Press Association LINCOLN—The recent suggestion of Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh that Nebraska lawmakers call themselves into special session met with a very negative response.

Just two days before the May primary election, DeCamp held a press conference in Lincoln during which he endorsed Stan Juelts of Kimball for governor and proposed that it would be a good idea to have the state senators get together to deal with spending tid legislation for governmental subdivisions.

His suggestion was made as a petition drive for a limit of 5 percent on budget increases by property taxing units of government got off to a good start.

If the signature-gathering campaign is successful and the lid proposal is placed on the general election ballot, its approval would lock the legislature into the state constitution.

DeCamp reasoned it would be better to have the state senators deal with the issue, rather than have so stringent a regulation placed into the constitution.

The legislators refused during their session this year to enact a lid bill, a point which Gov. J. James Exon made when asked to comment on the current petition drive. The governor supports the petition effort but said he has no plans to call a special legislative session.

If the governor refuses to call a special meeting of the Unicameral, it takes the votes of 33 of the lawmakers to call themselves into meeting.

Unicameral Speaker Roland Luedtke of Lincoln described DeCamp's recommendation for a special session "absurd." He interpreted the Neligh senator's proposal as "some kind of political move."

Dress Code Challenged

The threat of Wheeler County School Superintendent Allen Gross to expel a student for wearing blue jeans to school has resulted in a federal court suit.

The action was filed in U.S. District Court as Lincoln by Kenton and Nancy Olson of Bartlett and their three children, Jacqueline, Lance and Wesley.

They contend the dress code should be declared unconstitutional.

Under the code girls are not permitted to wear blue jeans to class, but other colored jeans are acceptable. The code also forbids tank tops and halter tops for girls as well as the wearing of any garment with printing, lettering or cartoons, because they might be "disruptive."

Gross said the code has been in effect for 20 years and that 117 of 125 students recently signed a petition in support of it.

The Olsons contend the code violates the rights of students to govern their lives, appearance and manner in which they choose to present themselves to the world.

And they claim the ban against lettering on shirts is an infringement on the right to free speech.

The Olsons asked for a restraining order and a permanent injunction which would forbid enforcement of the code.

Equal Opportunity Ruling Overturned

Annie Snygg failed to prove she was the victim of discrimination when she did not land a job as a police patrolman in Scottsbluff.

So said the Nebraska Supreme Court, which upheld a district court ruling that overturned a Nebraska Equal Opportunity Commission finding in favor of Ms. Snygg.

The commission had ordered the city to give Ms. Snygg $4,358 in back pay and more than $1,000 for attorney fees.

After reviewing the case, the Supreme Court said, "The evidence which has been summarized was sufficient for the trial court to find that Ms. Snygg had not been appointed to the position of patrolman, not because she was a woman but because in each instance there had been better-qualified applicants available who were eligible for the position."

The State Justice Department was involved in the case as a "friend of the court." It suggested a section of a state law governing district court review of commission findings might be unconstitutional. The Supreme Court rejected that idea.

Ms. Snygg first became an applicant for a patrolman's job in 1971. After being advised there was no place for a female patrolman, she took a job as a police dispatcher.

She made several more attempts to be hired as a patrolman but each time the vacancy was filled by a man.

Ms. Snygg resigned in 1974 and filed the complaint of discrimination later.

Jobless Pay Not for Aliens

The State Justice Department has issued an opinion that says illegal aliens cannot receive unemployment compensation benefits in Nebraska.

The opinion was prepared in response to a request from State Labor Commissioner Gerald Chizek.

The department noted there is no law barring illegal aliens from obtaining benefits. But it said the section of the statutes requiring registration with the Nebraska Job Service to secure benefits would preclude illegal aliens from receiving them.

The opinion said, "We have determined that it is impossible and in fact would be an illegal act for an illegal alien to register with the Nebraska Job Service."

It added the U.S. Department of Labor had indicated "in no uncertain terms" that state job service offices may not provide services to such persons.

Want Turnover Studied

Gov. J. James Exon has been asked to set up a special commission to study ways of reducing the turnover rate among state employees.

The request was made by the Nebraska Association of Public Employees, which suggested the commission include representatives from state government, labor and private industry.

The action came within days of a report from the State Personnel Department which showed the employee turnover rate during the first three months this year was 5.8 percent.

That was the highest experienced in the four years that such records have been kept.

According to Richard W. Gray, Jr., chairman of the association's board of directors, the high turnover is a factor of inefficiency in state government because workers during their first year of training "cannot be expected to perform as efficiently as longtime employees."

The association said it has advised the governor of the situation and asked him to try to reduce the turnover before the next governor takes office.

Roger Schulz, executive director of the association, said salary levels are only one of the reasons why so many quit their state jobs.

He said several state agencies, one of which is the Game and Parks Commission, pay the same salaries as other departments but have turnover rates of less than 10 percent.

That suggests, Schulz said, that other factors such as management techniques and philosophy should be re-evaluated.

The association said if the governor appoints the commission, that if requested, it would advocate consideration of a competitive salary structure, a system to reward more productive workers and a reduction of political appointments.

There should be more promotions to high level positions of longtime employees, the association said.

OBSERVATIONS

A refreshing note

Just when we think we're beginning to understand the present generation, we are exposed to information which puts today's teens in a different light.

In a country-wide survey of 23,900 high school seniors listed in "Who's Who Among American High School Students" drinking, drugs and tobacco are taboo instead of the things to do.

Eight out of ten teens polled put alcohol in the dangerous drug category, so they are either cautious drinkers or they don't tinkle at all. Almost half (49 percent) have never had a beer; 46 percent don't drink wine and a whopping two-thirds haven't tried hard liquor.

These are encouraging figures because they contrast sharply with those of a 1972 survey when only 15 percent of the teens were teetotalers.

It is interesting, though, that of the group which does have an occasional beer or glass of wine, 36 percent say their parents have okayed the practice. This is a jump from a year ago when 49 percent said their parents didn't know about or didn't approve of their drinking.

According to the survey, this generation of teens don't dig the drug scene either. Whether it's because they feel drugs might impair their ability to perform or not, 89 percent have never tried marijuana or the hard stuff.

Although two-thirds of the students agree that marijuana has become an accepted part of teen lifestyle, this doesn't mean they condone drug usage.

Some 62 percent are against legalizing grass and most of the kids think drugs are just as dangerous as alcohol.

The teens' social habits are consistent with their views. Some 59 percent don't run around with other teens who use drugs and 86 percent won't go to parties where drinking and drug use is prevalent.

The Surgeon General's warnings have apparently sunk in: 85 percent of the group as a whole, 81 percent have never lighted a cigarette and 8 percent have quit.

It is refreshing to think that if the "high" of today's teens is achievement, we're bound to feel the sobering influence of tomorrow's leadership. — Chuck Barnes.

Implications of corporate free speech

of the United States

WASHINGTON — "Error of opinion may be tolerated where reason is left free to combat it."

These words from Thomas Jefferson's First Inaugural Address are still the definitive statement about freedom of speech, as the Supreme Court reaffirmed on April 26.

The case was The First National Bank of Boston et al. v. Bellotti. The National Chamber Litigation Center participated as a friend of the court. In support of the First National Bank.

In its decision, the Court struck down a Massachusetts law which prohibited corporations from trying to influence voters on any issue "other than one materially affecting... the corporation."

Writing for the majority, Justice Powell said, "The proper question... is not whether corporations have First Amendment rights... instead, the question must be whether (the Massachusetts statute) abridges expression that the First Amendment was meant to protect. We hold that it does."

In other words, it is the speech that matters, not the speaker. This position is the only one consistent with political democracy. If there cannot be free competition in the marketplace for ideas, then a society is in reality controlled by those who define what is an "acceptable" idea. Voters cannot choose among alternatives that are never presented to them.

Surprisingly, the Court's decision has been criticized by some pillars of the liberal community, whose fear of business (other than their own) is evidently greater than their devotion to freedom of expression. Corporate wealth can buy public opinion, they charge.

Taking that view seriously requires both a monumental contempt for the intelligence of the American people and a gross misunderstanding of the business world.

Even if America's corporations were free to expend all of their resources in support of a unified stance on public issues, all they could do is add to the information available to the voter, not subtract from it.

But the two conditions above are impossible conditions. First — and most obviously — corporations often disagree among themselves about the proper approach to public problems. Such disagreement would be reflected in most issue advertising undertaken by the business community. And second, the vast majority of corporate funds are committed to running the business. Any management that began to spend recklessly on political issues would be quickly replaced by angry directors and stockholders.

So don't lie awake nights worrying about a deluge of corporate advertising imploring you to vote for or against proposition something-or-other. If you notice any change at all, it will be only a slight increase in such activity.

There are, however, some other interesting implications of the Court's decision:

1. Regulation of lobbying. Statutes intended to regulate business lobbying are now suspect and subject to challenge if they abridge First Amendment rights of speech, association or petition.

2. Tax implications. Current Internal Revenue Service regulations impose a tax "penalty" on certain forms of corporate and trade association communications. It can not be argued that these rules have a "chilling effect" on the exercise of free speech.

3. Independent political advertising. If the Bellotti decision is read broadly, it can be interpreted to permit independent expenditures by corporations to advocate the support or defeat of candidates for public office.

Let me emphasize that these last three points are not settled. They will have to be thrashed out in the courts before a corporation may safely ignore present restrictions on the activities listed.

It will be years before the last of the fallout from the Bellotti case reaches the earth. But the decision clearly strengthens the American tradition of extending freedom and encouraging debate. Mr. Jefferson would approve.

More right than wrong

NEBRASKA FARM BUREAU FEDERATION

By M.M. VanKirk,
Director of Information

There is, much more right with U.S. agriculture and the nation's food situation than is wrong, and most nations and people of the world would be delighted to exchange places with us.

After a prolonged period of fault-finding and emphasis on the ills of agriculture and all that is wrong in the nation's food system, it is time to take a reasoned look.

Consumers should consider what's "right" from their standpoint and some of these evidences would include:

Abundance — No consumers in the world have the abundance and variety of foods available to them as we Americans. U.S. consumers spend as little as 16 to 20 percent of their disposable income for food as compared to 30 to 80 percent in both developed and under-developed nations.

Quality and Nutrition — The quality and nutritional value of U.S. food preparations available in the average U.S. supermarket is the envy of the world. It has come about, not primarily because of government regulation and supervision, but because consumers are selective and demand the best in packaging, refrigeration, preservation, display and choice.

Food processors and retailers must provide customers the goods and services that measure up competitively or they do not survive.

Healthful — Despite all the clamor about "junk foods" and elimination of the most minute traces of potentially harmful trace elements, the incidence of food poisoning and related illnesses is infinitesimal of the overall volume in the vast U.S. food chain.

Those who travel outside the continental limits of the United States are well aware of the admonition, "Be careful of the food and water or you will be in real trouble." Americans have been growing bigger and stronger and living longer with each generation and taking it all for granted.

And the nation's farmers and ranchers could well take a look at some of the more positive advantages of their situation:

High Level Production — While most countries must employ from 40 to 80 percent of their working population in food production, a U.S. labor force of around 3 percent of the population produces an over-abundance that feeds the nation and provides the largest share of the world's exportable food supply.

Most Capital and Mechanization — There is more capital at work in American agriculture and more mechanization than is to be found anywhere in the world, and comparatively speaking, at lower cost to the producer.

Market Information and Research — Despite all the complaints to the contrary, few nations provide their farmers with the degree of agricultural research and market information that is available to all segments of U.S. agriculture.

Relative Prosperity — Name one nation in the world where the "average farmer" would not be willing to exchange his holdings and opportunities for those enjoyed by his American counterpart and developed under our very imperfect but effective competitive market system.

There is no room for complacency about the U.S. agricultural system but there is a need to mix honest appraisal with what is becoming a chronic penchant among consumers and farmers alike for unreasonable belly aching.

HEALTH TIPS

A great deal of nonsense appears in popular literature on nephritis, a disease of the kidneys more popularly known as Bright's disease.

The Nebraska Medical Association says that nephritis is a serious disease, and its diagnosis can be made only by a physician.

Backache, general weakness and frequent night urination are suggested as being caused by this disease. All sorts of peculiar remedies are offered for sale in ads ranging from mineral waters to magnetized belts. Nephritis is associated with infections of the throat, ear or skin. The patient may be anemic.

The patient must go to bed and stay there until the infection subsides. After the disease has subsided, the patient should lead a normal life, but have regular consultation with his doctor. However, if any operation, even a tooth extraction, is to be performed, he should warn his physician, about having had nephritis so he can take necessary precautions against infection.

Nephritis cannot be avoided, but when a person suspects its occurrence, he can avoid neglect or the pitfalls of quack treatment.

Anesthesia causes a state resembling sleep. It renders a person insensitive to pain, and it has another effect which is very important: relaxation of the muscles.

The Nebraska Medical Association points out that muscle relaxation makes it easier for a surgeon to operate inside the abdomen or chest or to set broken bones and dislocated joints.

It is not usually difficult to produce anesthesia in most patients with the potent drugs available today. However, the highly-developed skill of an anesthesiologist is necessary to maintain careful control of the body functions like blood pressure, pulse and respiration to keep them as nearly normal as possible during anesthesia and surgery.

The anesthesiologist administers the drugs and also estimates the safety of the anesthesia for the individual patient. He gives certain medicines to prepare the patient for anesthesia and operation, observes the vital signs and administers drugs other than anesthetics when necessary during surgery, as well as supervises the care of the patient while he recovers from anesthesia.

Solar Heat for Animal Shelters

Is solar energy a viable means of heating livestock buildings? Solar heating systems come in two basic forms: active and passive. Both systems have been implemented successfully. The passive system is the most practical means to solar heat an animal shelter.

The active system requires the use of solar collectors and storage equipment and generally requires substantial structural changes to buildings being converted to active solar heating.

The passive system requires a southern sun exposure and is simpler to implement, requiring minimal structural modifications.

Passive systems warm by catching the sun's rays. The south side of the building is two-thirds or total glass, plastic or any material which will allow the rays through. The building must be well insulated and have a good ventilation system.

Some livestock producers tried this type of heating system in shelters, but have not used it properly.

The ventilation system is extremely important. Moisture is produced by livestock and high humidity results, which can lead to illness. It is generally more important to keep enclosed livestock dry rather than to keep them warm.

Animals will generate their own body heat. This is usually enough to keep the building relatively warm, but not enough to provide adequate moisture removal.

Shading is also a major component of the solar heating system. In the winter months the sun, at this latitude in Nebraska, shines on a 24-degree angle. In the summertime, it rises to a 70-degree angle.

A roof overhang is necessary for the summer months in order to block the sun and control the inside shelter temperatures. For Nebraska a one-foot roof overhang will provide 2 feet of shade in the summer.

In the winter, minus the overhang temperatures can be held at 60-70 degrees in the daytime by the passive solar heating method. This is dependent on the number of animals in the shelter. Winter night temperatures can be held to between 40-45 degrees.

Wind will always be a major heating factor in Nebraska, and its effects could be minimized through adequate insulation.

Among heated livestock buildings in the state which use some sort of passive solar heating system, the major problem is that most buildings are not adequately insulated.

Dr. James DeShazer, professor of agricultural engineering in the UNL Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, says in Nebraska, for a natural ventilated building, an R value of 13-14 is recommended for the ceiling and walls. For a completely enclosed building, an R value of 21-24 is recommended for the ceiling.

One big advantage of solar heating livestock buildings over solar heating private homes is that it takes a lower temperature for the air or water.

If a farmer or rancher considers heating his livestock buildings, there's a big possibility that with adequate insulation, proper ventilation and a passive solar heating system, a substantial energy cost savings will result.

However, even if the passive system is not implemented, energy savings gains will result with an upgrading of the insulation and ventilation systems.

Overall, ag engineers agree more thought needs to be given energy use at all levels. Alternative heating systems will not be effective in keeping energy costs down without the basics... adequate ventilation and good insulation.

Gasohol Plan Hopes Dim

Hopes that a regional or national gasohol program will raise grain prices and provide a renewable source of energy are dimmed by failure of the gasohol production process to achieve favorable thermal and economic efficiencies, according to a study by a University of Nebraska-Lincoln agricultural economist.

An evaluation of grain alcohol in motor fuels, authored by Dr. James G. Kendrick, professor of agricultural economics and Pamela J. Murray, ag economist research technician, systematically refutes the principal

Berry Time Almost Here

It's almost strawberry time! The anticipation of juicy, delicious berries is enough to inspire us to devote a considerable amount of time and energy to establishing a good strawberry bed. According to Stan Stirling, Dixon County Extension Agent, there are a number of factors involved in producing berries.

A few well-cared-for plants will often outproduce a much larger patch which receives less attention. 25 to 50 plants will provide enough berries for an average size family, 50 to 100 plants will furnish enough for freezing as well. Often an excellent strawberry bed can be maintained in an area generally thought of as a "flower bed," such as along sidewalks.

Strawberry beds kept completely weed-free are much more productive than those containing weeds and grasses. An excellent strawberry bed can be made by constructing a border of railroad ties set partly into the ground. Such a bed permits easy care. See BERRY, page 3

Peppers Hot Crop to Grow

Peppers perform according to the weather. There might be a bumper crop one year, but the next year hardly any of the green vegetable.

Peppers like warm weather but won't set fruit in extremely hot weather. Blossoms drop when temperatures remain above 75 degrees F. at night. They'll also drop when night temperatures fall much below 60 degrees F.

A well-drained, warm soil not too rich in nitrogen is best for peppers. Too much nitrogen causes excessive vine growth and tends to delay maturity.

They should not be transplanted until the danger of frost is past. This is in mid-May in eastern Nebraska and late May or early June in the western part of the state. The small plants also will turn yellow and become stunted if night temperatures fall below 55 degrees F. shortly after transplanting.

It usually takes 70 to 75 days to produce peppers suitable for picking. Peppers belong to the same plant family as tomatoes, eggplant and potatoes — crops that should be rotated every year or every other year with other crops to avoid insect and disease problems.

Transplants of several pepper varieties are available. They are classified as either sweet or hot, according to their pungency. Generally sweet varieties are harvested at an immature stage when they are green or yellow but full-sized. Hot varieties are harvested either when immature (green or yellow) or mature (red) for pickling or canning and when mature for dry seasoning.

Careers of 4-H Members

What happens to 4-H members when they graduate from high school? Some of them go on to college and become active in Collegiate 4-H. However, University of Nebraska-Lincoln students who are not former 4-H members are also eligible. The emphasis changes for Collegiate 4-H, reports Stan Stirling, Dixon County Extension Agent. By then many members have learned a great deal already and are studying in school, so Collegiate 4-H emphasizes community service and social activities.

The club selects several service projects each fall and this past year they have included working with senior citizens at Lancaster Manor in Lincoln (GAP), helping with the Headstart program at three city elementary schools, and assisting county 4-H programs with Help Teams when requested.

Other club activities through the year include operation of the UNL 4-H Food Stand during the Nebraska State Fair. This is the only money-making activity the club currently has.

The club has a volunteer singing group, "Outreachers," which travels throughout the state performing for people. Auditions for the group will be held in September and it is an exciting experience to be part of "Outreachers."

Each spring, 20 to 30 UNL 4-Hers travel to National Collegiate 4-H Conference, where clubs from all over the nation meet and discuss accomplishments and discover how to make clubs better. The 1979 conference is to be held at Colorado State University in Fort Collins, Colorado.

Recreational activities provide a break in normal class routine for club members. Examples are summer and fall picnic, Valentine and Halloween parties, and hayrack rides.

Those who are interested in hearing a presentation on Collegiate 4-H have a special opportunity this summer. Jeff Creamer of Concord is a student at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and a member of Collegiate 4-H. He will be available to talk to 4-H Clubs and other groups this summer. Those interested in hearing him can call the Dixon Co. Extension Office (584-2261) or contact Jeff directly at 584-2344.

VIOLETS IN LAWN

Each year violets seem to become more of a problem. Some people have had good control with silvex and some have not. There are different strains of violets which could contribute to the variable results with silvex. Research with crops and weeds has shown there is considerable variation among strains or varieties.

Until more is known about violet control, the best way to whip them if you don't want to live with them is to dig them up or treat with silvex. Repeat the applications of silvex as needed.

SEEDLINGS ARE EASIER TO CONTROL

Seedlings are easier to control than mature plants.

WILTING TOMATOES

There are several causes of tomato wilt. Lack of water is one, but more commonly this wilt is due to one of two diseases. These are called Fusarium or Verticillium wilt. This wilting begins with a few yellow leaves at the base of the plant and then progresses slowly upward until the entire plant dies.

Once a plant is infested with wilt there is no control or cure. See AGENT, page 5

Raise in Meat Prices If Production Lowered

A significant drop in animal production would cause concern more than consumers fearing higher meat prices, according to Lowell Satterlee, professor of food science and technology at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

"That's because much more than hamburger, bacon and chops are extracted from the carcasses of slaughtered domestic animals, he told those attending a UNL Agricultural Experiment Station seminar in Lincoln recently.

"The meat of animals, of course, still is the basic component of the livestock industry. But utilization of the byproducts from the slaughter operation has become much more sophisticated, especially in the last 20 years. And it is the basis upon which a significant proportion of our food, feed, chemical, cosmetic, pharmaceutical and clothing industries are built."

And as research methods are developed to utilize such animal byproducts as fat, protein, minerals, enzymes and hormones, man's dependence upon the meat animal will increase in the future, he said.

"But it must be kept in mind that without our main purpose for meat animal production and slaughter — that of obtaining domestic animals for their byproducts — the slaughter of animals solely for their byproducts for industrial, feed and pharmaceutical use would be infeasible," Satterlee warned.

The most critical use of animal byproducts requiring a large and economically strong animal industry is the neglected area of pharmaceutical and medical supplies," he said.

"Increasing numbers of Americans are dependent upon enzymes and hormones derived from animal tissues and can afford such medications only because there is an abundant supply of organ tissues available at a low cost from the slaughter industry," Satterlee said.

"Many more experimental uses are under study and will only increase our reliance upon animal tissues in the maintenance of human health," he said.

"The demand for tissues also will increase because the incidence of certain disorders, such as diabetes, is on the rise."

Currently, Satterlee said, 10 million Americans, or 2.7 percent of the population, are affected by diabetes. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration estimates that the incidence of diabetes, which is treated with insulin produced from the pancreas glands of meat animals, is increasing at a 6 percent annual rate and will affect 4.1 percent of the population by 1985, he said.

"At the current rate, we will need 1.5 times as many pancreas glands available for insulin production by 1985 as we use now," he said. "If the number of cattle slaughtered declined dramatically, it could sharply reduce the supply of insulin fairly rapidly."

But the pancreas gland, which also is rich source of proteolytic enzymes used to prepare proteins for food and medical uses, is only one of several important protein drugs derived from animal carcasses, Satterlee said.

Extracts from beef parathyroid glands are used to control chronic mineral imbalances following thyroid removal, he said. The pineal gland of cattle, calves, sheep and swine regulates mineral balance and occasionally has been utilized experimentally on retarded children to stimulate physical and mental development and to control schizophrenia.

Pituitary glands are a source of the wonder drug adrenocorticotrophic hormone (ACTH) used to treat rheumatoid arthritis, he said, as well as of a substance useful in easing childbirth. The thyroid gland from pork produces an extract used to completely overcome child "cretinism," which results in impaired physical and mental growth.

Satterlee listed several other animal byproducts utilized in human medicine. They include: Amniotic fluid, found in the sac surrounding the unborn calf that is used to reduce post-operative pain and nausea, as well as to enhance involuntary intestinal contraction in patients.

Carotid arteries from beef used to replace defective human arteries.

Bile from beef, sheep and swine, which because of its high desoxycholic acid content, is the most important raw material for cortisone synthesis, used by patients suffering from rheumatoid arthritis, bronchial asthma and certain skin and eye diseases.

Blood from beef serves as a thrombin source capable of clotting human blood in seconds and is used to control bleeding during surgery. Hydrolyzed blood also serves as an amino acid source that can be used for interavenous feeding.

Bone cartilage from cattle and calves used in surgery to repair damaged facial bones and bone marrow extract used to treat secondary anemia.

Brain substance from beef and sheep used to control bleeding during surgery.

Intestines and lungs used as major sources of heparin to prevent blood clotting in post-operative patients.

Spinal cord from beef used as a cholesterol source.

Stomach tissue from swine, which as a source of the proteolytic enzyme pepsin is used to hydrolyze proteins for food and medical use.

Satterlee said the use of animal fats will be expanded in the future to replace high-priced petroleum based products that also have pollution drawbacks.

Two of the biggest uses of animal fats will be as a replacement for the petroleum base in soaps and lubricants, which would help meet "the worldwide need for biodegradable detergents and soaps," and as synthetic lubricants, he said.

"The per capita consumption of animal fats has decreased continually, but the annual production of lard, tallow and inedible tallows and greases continues to rise, with the most significant increase occurring with inedible tallows and greases which have doubled since 1968."

Inedible tallows and greases have a variety of uses, he noted, with 45 percent returned into animal feeds, 25 percent used to produce soaps, 20 percent used as a fatty acid source for specific industrial uses, about 4 percent used directly as lubricants and the remaining 11 percent used in the manufacturing of pharmaceuticals, candles, cosmetics, leather goods, woolen fabrics and tin plating.

Currently, he said, animals rank third in the production of fats and oils behind oil seeds, such as soybeans, peanuts, cottonseed and corn, and oil bearing palm, olive and coconut trees. Commercial animal fats come almost entirely from pork, beef and lamb, he said.

"The tremendous growth" in the production of pet foods bodes well for the increasing use of other byproducts from livestock and poultry enterprises — feather meal, meat, bone and blood meal, Satterlee said.

"Blood, bone and meat meal obtained from the slaughter operation serve as excellent protein, mineral and fat sources for pet foods," he said. "The future will see animal byproduct meals being used chiefly as animal feeds and pet foods."

surface will hold moisture. Even sawdust can be used as a mulch if fertilizer with additional nitrogen is added to the soil. Black sheet plastic is sometimes used to control weeds and hold moisture, particularly for commercial production. The strawberries are planted in holes cut in the plastic. The plastic may have to be covered with a thin layer of straw to shade the surface and keep plants cool.

Newly planted strawberries should have the blooms pinched off for at least three months to allow development of strong plants. These then will put out runners to increase the number of plants.

"The superior moisture vapor transfer and insulating properties of leather and sheepskin have helped them maintain their position in the market place despite the advent of synthetic leather and sheepskin materials," he said.

With proper planning the home gardener can minimize the amount of damage experienced during the growing season.

There are several varieties that are resistant or tolerant to one or both diseases. They often are designated as VF in seed catalogs. The "V" stands for Verticillium resistance. The "F" for Fusarium resistance. The selection of one of the varieties designated as resistant, plus a good sanitation program and crop rotation, will minimize the amount of wilt.

GERANIUMS

Geraniums grow in the window box or in beds during summer, a moderately fertile friable soil is preferred over a very rich soil. Strong fertilizers should be avoided. Moderate growth produces the best flowers. Too much water and fertilizer during hot weather will also encourage growth of the foliage and will lower the quality and number of flowers.

Too much water either in the pot or in the foliage may cause spotting of the leaves. Geraniums will grow and produce flowers with a minimum of care, yet some attention to their requirements will be repaid with increased quality, size and number of flowers.
