

Last-Minute Revision

Okay Final Assessment Plan

After a last-minute revision of an assessment schedule adopted April 25, the Wayne City Council Tuesday night passed a resolution levying assessments against Street Improvement District 76.

The revision, hurriedly prepared by Engineer Bruce Gilmore at direction by the council, amounted to an additional 72 cents per frontage foot to the schedule adopted by the council.

The schedule to be used for levying the costs is a combination of two of several schedules which have been prepared by the engineer.

The schedule to be used to determine the special assessments does not carry additional costs such as stairs, windows and basements to individual property owners, but instead prorates those additional costs throughout the district.

The only exception is where the stairway or window or basement is of direct benefit to the property owner.

The per front footage cost to be used to compute the special assessments is $2.76. The original schedule called for $2.04 per front foot but placed additional costs to some 18 individual property owners.

Phillip A. Lorenzen, bondsman, First Mid America Inc., Omaha, advised the council that the special assessment payments will be in ten equal installments with the first installment to come due 90 days from the date of the resolution (May 30).

He said property owners may pay at least ten percent of the installment with an interest rate of seven percent on the unpaid balance. In the event of a default or missed payment, the interest rate will be nine percent on both the principal and the interest.

The resolution gained majority approval of the council by Councilmen Darrel Fucelberth and Sam Hepburn, voting against it.

The decision to revise the schedule came after a statement by Bob Carhart, a member of the Downtown Improvement committee. He told the council it was the understanding of the committee that the special work for filling in basements extending under the sidewalks and the stairways and windows would be prorated throughout the district.

He said he and other members of the committee had property owners in the district this, in general, was the way the special assessment would be included. He said the schedule adopted by the council was contrary to what his committee was told.

He pointed out that he realized the council was attempting to work in the best interests of everyone concerned, but he said there were new council members now seated who may not have been aware of what the original council had decided when the improvement district was formed.

He said his committee held a meeting two weeks ago and decided the schedule adopted by the council abandoned the key concept of the assessment plan at the time the district was formed. The committee then decided to bring the matter before the council and defer to the council for final action.

Others who appeared before the council, which was seated as a board of equalization, included Ward Tolman who said he believed the widening of the roadway as well as the curb and gutter should be the concern of the individual property owners rather than being charged to taxpayers throughout the city.

Orval Brandtetter and Mel Elftson appeared before the board to request adjustments.

Councilwoman Carolyn Filter suggested the city send letters to each of the property owners in the district to determine the workmanship of the project. The council agreed and the letters will be sent and should be returned to the city clerk so that the engineer and contractor can check out any reported faults in workmanship.

Limits Budget Increase

School Board Opposes LID

The Wayne Board of Education voted unanimously to oppose the LID petition at a special meeting Tuesday night. The LID petition proposes to amend the Nebraska Constitution to set a limit on the annual budget increase for political subdivisions to five percent. If the petition gets enough signatures, a vote would be taken in the state on the amendment in November. If the amendment would pass, school districts would be limited to a five percent increase in spending, as would all political subdivisions, in Nebraska.

However, private enterprises would not be limited, reportedly the Board, and other states throughout the nation could make their own decision. Dr. Francis Haun, superintendent of Wayne-Carroll schools, will draw up a report with the Board's stand and reasoning on the issue.

The group agreed that the idea to limit inflation is a good one but only if the plan would affect everyone.

In other action, the Board voted to grant Alan Hammer a temporary transfer into the Wayne-Carroll school district for the 1978-79 school year. Hammer is presently in District 47 but would like to have his two children attend school in Wayne.

A Welcome Sight

WATER STANDING in lowlands isn't bothering area farmers much as they welcomed weekend rains which amounted to more than one and one-half inches of moisture. According to Don Spitz, county extension agent, the moisture is a real "plus" for the farmers as most of the planting has been completed. "The moisture will start germination and will activate herbicides." Rain Tuesday night reached a half inch, bringing the total for the month of May to 3.39 inches.

Freezing Extends Strawberry Season

The Nebraska strawberry season begins in June, but since it lasts just a few weeks, gardeners should take full advantage of their crop.

Teresa Shaffer, Extension food and nutrition specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, suggests freezing strawberries since most persons can't use all their produce during the short strawberry season.

"Freezing keeps berries more nearly like fresh ones than any other way of preserving them and it's simple and easy to do," she says. It's important, though, to use recommended freezing methods to maintain a high-quality product.

The specialist says to start by selecting strawberries for freezing that are firm, ripe and of high quality.

"Since strawberries don't ripen after picking, select berries that are bright red," she says. "Sort and wash small quantities carefully in cool water, handling them gently to avoid bruising."

Removing the caps after washing instead of before will help retain the berries' natural abundance of vitamin C, she adds.

Berries may be frozen whole or sliced and with or without sugar. "Most fruits, however, have a better flavor and texture if frozen with sugar," she says. Usually, one cup of sugar to four to six cups of berries is sufficient.

One teaspoon of ascorbic-acid mixture also may be added to the sugar to help protect color and vitamin C content. These fruit-freezing mixtures are available in most grocery or drug stores.

Shaffer says to gently stir the berries until they are covered with sugar, then let them stand for five to 10 minutes. The juice will emerge and make its own syrup.

Package in an air-tight, moisture and vapor-proof container and freeze immediately at zero degrees or below. Berries are best when served while a few ice crystals are still present, she adds.

LET'S TALK IT OVER With DARREL FUELBERTH

There may still be some people who keep their money in an old sock under the mattress. They have the satisfaction of knowing exactly where their money is. ... but they have sacrificed any opportunity to have their money grow. At the end of each year, they have the same number of dollars they started with, but those dollars will buy less at the grocery store.

An investment in real estate tends to appreciate at a rate that offsets the inflation rate. As the costs of land and of construction rise, the value of real estate rises in proportion, resulting in an increase in a property owner's equity.

Chuck Ellis Tourney

Wayne, Wakefield Eliminated

For the past six years the first round of the Chuck Ellis Memorial Tournament in Wakefield has been rained out. This year was an exception. All four first round games and two of the second round games were played before the rain hit Sunday night.

The rain continued through Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday postponing the tournament and causing three teams to withdraw from competition. Lincoln East and Aberdeen both packed up their bags and O'Neill has unofficially withdrawn also. Creighton Prep replaces Lincoln East and automatically moves into the semifinals.

In first round action, Jono Kline slammed a three-run homer in the bottom of the seventh inning to lift Wakefield over West Point 6-4. Doug Starzl and Scott Hallstrom both walked and with one out Kline hit the sharp drive over the right field fence with his team trailing 4-3.

West Point scored two runs in the first inning to take an early lead but Wakefield came back with three runs in the fifth to establish a 3-2 lead. The lead didn't stay in Wakefield's hands long though as Scott Johnson hit a solo homer to put West Point back on top temporarily.

Wayne gave up 13 walks in their first round game against Sioux City North and as Coach Hank Overin said, after the game, "It's hard to win a pee wee game when you give up that many walks." Wayne lost 8-2.

North scored three runs in the second inning with a double and five walks. They padded their lead with two more runs in the fourth and built an insurmountable lead of 5-0.

Wayne finally got on the scoreboard in the fifth as Al Wisen walked, and Dave Schwaiz singled. North came back in the bottom of the fifth on a single and three walks to add two more runs.

The second and final run for Wayne came in the sixth when Doug Carroll, Tim Kall and Randy Davies all walked. Don Straight singled to bring Carroll home.

The final run of the game came as three more North players were walked and one scored on an error, to make the final score 9-2. Coach Overin said the team will use pitchers in practice instead of pitching machines so they can improve.

In other first round action Sioux City West defeated Norfolk 3-0, and O'Neill clipped Pender-Bancroft 4-3.

In the second round, Sloux Falls bombed West 14-3 and Heelan ousted Wakefield 7-2. Wakefield had only five base runners and could manage only two runs against the tough Heelan defense.

The key to the game seemed to be Wakefield pitching. Brad Jones, Rick Guy, Doug Starzl, and Todd Swigart all saw action on the mound for the losing cause. Wakefield trailed 4-1 after 5 1/2 innings when Doug Starzl pounded a solo home run.

First Round Results:
 Wakefield 4, West Point 3
 S.C. West 3, Norfolk 0
 O'Neill 4, Pender-Bancroft 3
 S.C. North 8, Wayne 2

WSC Shot Putter

Sue Fricke Places 3rd in AIAW

Sue Fricke of Monroe was the only one of four participating Wayne. State women's track team members to place in the AIAW Region VI track competition last week in Emporia, Kan.

Fricke, a WSC senior, placed third in the shot put event with a loss of 39' 8 1/2". She was the leading shot putter throughout the season for WSC.

Sally Schwede of Norfolk and Mary Jo Christen of Burwell made it to finals competition, but neither placed in her event. Schwede ran the 440 meter race while Christen ran the 100 meter hurdle competition.

The fourth Wayne State participant, Laura Peter of O'Neill, finished seventh in her heat in NINETEEN YEAR-OLD John Goeden, of Wayne displays the biggest large mouth bass known to have been caught at Izaak Walton League Lake. the 3000 meter run, but failed to place in the event.

Competition included 34 small colleges and 18 larger schools from Nebraska, Minnesota, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa and North and South Dakota.

WSC Interim women's track coach Linda Teach said she was pleased with the performance of the Wayne regional competitors, and with the overall team performance this spring.

"I think the season went quite well," she said. "This was our first year in the conference and we finished third in the conference meet. We didn't recruit our girls and most of them competed just because they loved it."

NENBL Teams Ready To Play

The N.E. Nebraska Baseball League will open play Sunday, June 4, with Newcastle at Wayne, Onawa, Ia., at Wakefield, and Ponca Idle.

These are only five teams in the League this year after late efforts to add a sixth team failed.

Problems began when Pender-Bancroft switched to the Dodge County League and Allen-Martinsburg and Dakota City couldn't find organizers. Then Homer dropped from the league to leave only four teams.

Onawa, once a member, joined to bring the total number to five. The NENBL tried to get Harlingen and a Sioux City team to join but was unsuccessful, and decided to play with five teams.

The League will use the designated hitter and limited substitution rules in order to hold player interest. Each will play a 12-game schedule.

Four Ball Golf Tourney Won in Sudden Death

The wet condition didn't seem to hamper the golfers in the Tour Man Best Ball Handicap Tournament at the Wayne Country Club Monday. Winning the tournament in a sudden death playoff were Stewart Cline, Ron Carnes, Bud Froelich, and Ted Ellis.

Tied for the lead before the playoff were Mike Perry, Bob Reep, Dave Schulte, and Dick Pflanz with a team score of 56. The playoff ended on the third hole when Froelich shot a par (net birdie with the handicap). Placing third were Gene Claussen, Dick Berry, Jim Marsh, and Del Stollenberg. A tournament similar to this one is scheduled for July 4. That tournament will include a Texas Scramble which will allow golfers to select the best ball position of the foursome. Then all four golfers will shoot from that position.

The Wayne Open Tournament scheduled for Sunday is full and there is even a waiting list for possible openings.

Randy's RECAP

According to Randy Hascall

THE CHUCK ELLIS MEMORIAL baseball tournament in Wakefield could have been a super tournament. Don't get me wrong, it's still a good tournament but it could have been so much better if Mother Nature would have kept her nose out.

I have lived on a farm all my life and appreciate good rains like the ones we had over the Memorial Day weekend, but these weren't the best timed rains as far as baseball is concerned. Because of the rain, three teams had to withdraw because of schedule conflicts.

With the withdrawal of the three teams, Creighton Prep was added to the tournament schedule. I don't think they should have been allowed into the journey after the first six games were played or placed into the semifinal round but somehow that happened.

Of course I would have liked to have seen Wayne and Wakefield make the finals or even the semifinals but that didn't happen.

Defending champion Sioux Falls is also in the semifinals and I think they'll defend successfully. They are a powerful team and when the baseball diamond is dry they should eliminate the other teams.

WHAT A SERIES the Washington Bullets and Seattle SuperSonics are having in the NEA Championships. Every game has been a thriller with the outcome being decided with the final buzzer. Tuesday night the Bullets evoned the series up 2-2 with a 120-116 overtime victory in the Seattle Kingdom, before a crowd of almost 40,000 fans.

This time it was Washington that came from behind erasing a 15-point deficit and winning the game with fine overtime play. Seattle won game three back in Maryland Sunday by one point after they witheld a Bullt rally. That game went down to the wire too with Bobby Dan-dridge missing a jump in the final two seconds, which would have won the game.

And the series is far from over. Washington will try to do it again in Seattle Friday night so expect another exciting game. A Seattle victory will probably clinch the title for the Sonics, but neither team will say die.

Wayne Scores

AL NISSEN heads home in action against Sioux City North during first round action of the Chuck Ellis Tournament in Wakefield. North won the game 8-2.

THE FUTURE of the Northeast Nebraska Baseball League after 1978 is uncertain. Only five teams are members of the conference this year and one of them is from Onawa, Ia.

Teams have dropped out of the league and apparently aren't interested in it anymore. Wakefield and Wayne are considering leaving the league next year if things don't improve. The two teams may make a bid for entry into the Tri-County League.

From what I hear, this league is a good one and would be better geographically than the present league. I don't know what the requirements are for entry into the Tri-County League but it might be an asset for Wayne and Wakefield to enter it. Look for that possibility next year.

Maps Permanent Fixtures at Middle School

By LAVON BECKMAN
 Dan Johnson has his seventh and eighth grade history students at Wayne Middle School at it again.
 The students recently completed drawings of two maps, one of the State of Nebraska and the other of the United States showing the original 13 colonies. The maps, however, weren't drawn at the students' desks with paper and pencil. Instead, the maps were painted on two cement slabs located just south of the Middle School.
 Nearly a gallon and a half of paint were used to complete both maps, which measure about 30 x 20-feet each.
 Seventh grade American history students worked on the map of Nebraska, while eighth graders designed the map of the United States. It took about a week and a half for both classes to complete the project.
 Johnson said the map projects enable students to get a more realistic idea of Nebraska and the United States. In addition, the seventh and eighth graders are better able to envision historical events of the past.
 "Hopefully," said the history teacher, "students in future classes will be able to paint additional material onto the existing maps."
 Four classes of 68 seventh graders included major rivers, trails and cities in their Nebraska map. In addition, the map points out important battles that took place and military forts.
 Some of Nebraska's rivers which run through the map are the Niobrara, Elkhorn, Cedar, Loup, Blus, Wood, White, Platte and Grand. Trails include the Mormon, Oregon, Long and Underwood trails.
 While seventh graders focused their attention on Nebraska, Johnson's 24 eighth grade students concentrated on a pictorial history of the entire United States up to the events of the Civil War.
 The United States map shows the original 13 colonies, the Great Lakes, and major rivers including the Snake, Columbia, Missouri, Colorado, Rio Grande, Arkansas and Mississippi.
 In past years, Johnson's students have been involved in projects such as writing letters to North Vietnam concerning prisoners of war, and cleaning the county's first cemetery, La-Porte, which is located two miles south and three and a fourth miles east of Wayne.
 Several years ago, youngsters in Johnson's class built a sod house which still stands in the southwest corner of the Middle School grounds. The sod house is in need of some repair now, and Johnson says he hopes to work that in as a project for next year's students.
 Two years ago, seventh and eighth grade students at the Middle School planned and presented a Chautauqua in honor of the nation's 200th birthday.
 In addition to taking field trips to various historical sites throughout the state, Johnson likes to involve the area's senior citizens with his teaching of American history. Students in previous classes have participated in a daylong program at

 Five years ago, Johnson wanted to prod his students into thinking seriously about their future and to impress on them the changes that occur over the years. He had his students bury a time capsule containing tape recordings by each student, important news events and facts. Those seventh graders were seniors this year and opened the capsule a few days before graduation.

 Johnson felt he proved his point and has had each seventh grade class since then bury similar time capsules. They too will be opened when the students are seniors.

An ice cream social was held at the Wakefield Health Care Center in the Extended Care Wing on May 21 in the afternoon. It was the climax of National Nursing Home Week which was May 14-21. Over 250 persons enjoyed homemade ice cream.
 The administrator, Russel Swigart, and the entire staff would like to say thank you to volunteers who helped with freezing, furnishing bars and cake and those helping serve.

Statistics Speak by Themselves
 Most people feel that their weekly community newspaper is a big part of their life.
 Over 78% of the people in Nebraska refer to their weekly newspaper for shopping information and 53% of the people refer to the newspaper for local sports information — as compared to 20% for television.
 A significant 65% of Nebraskans make buying decisions from advertisements they read in the weekly newspaper. This implies that advertisers who use space in the newspaper have potentially twice the advantage to gain customers over all the competing mediums together!
 "After all, you can't argue with statistics, because statistics speak by themselves."

Memorial Day The Appointed Day...

...For Remembering

Rain over the weekend hindered Memorial Day services in Wayne but didn't stop them completely. Several groups of persons braved the rain during a parade from Main Street to Greenwood Cemetery.

The graves of every veteran were decorated with an American flag, Sunday evening and remained until Tuesday. At noon Monday, the Vet's Club of Wayne held a dinner in honor of veterans to close out the Memorial Day services.

By ALLAN O'DONNELL Wayne State College Political Science Instructor (Speech to have been delivered during Wayne Memorial Day Services)

This is the appointed day for remembering — for remembering those grandfathers, fathers, husbands, and sons who died abruptly and too soon.

Today the sun shines over most of the country, making the present more real than the past. It is a holiday for most people. Those who have gone before us — in whatever war — are remembered today by our being here. They gave all. And they gave so that we can enjoy the freedom American democracy promises to us, to our children, and to our children's children.

Democracy is an attitude toward people. It is about the love of people. All people are equal in the eyes of God. And American Democracy teaches that men are equal in the one dimension that truly counts: each is a human being, infinitely precious because he is human.

Our democracy holds this beautiful view of man — going beyond his clothes, his wealth, his schooling — to the creature himself — to the warm, breathing, feeling, loving being with whom we all identify.

This attitude is the moral foundation for us all. Democracy does not turn its back on anybody. It is opposed to arrogance. It is the enemy of snobbery. It stresses the common humanity of all.

Because our democracy is an attitude toward people, its goals are unlimited. It is a personal experience; a process of learning and discovery.

And democracy is based on a profound insight into human nature: that all men are sinful, all men are imperfect, all men are prejudiced — no one knows the whole truth.

And this is why we need liberty, freedom and justice. This is why we have an obligation to listen to all men.

Democracy is a political system for people who are not sure they are always right.

Today we honor those who have died for their country, for American democracy. Yet, we all must be willing to live for our country; to care for others; to work with patience and fortitude to help those who need help; to forego hating one another; to make our most cherished common purpose prevail.

No nation, no people can achieve greatness unless it believes in something, and unless that something has the moral strength to sustain the people.

There is cruelty in our world, there is violence and injustice. Such things are contagious and know no bounds of race, religion, wealth, nationality, or age. And they threaten freedom.

In our own lives we must fight against such things. For those who have died in the fight for freedom will have died in vain if we — the living — do not continue the fight.

From the beginning of our nation, to this moment, we have proven time and again that all men are created equal. For we are not one land; we are all lands and all peoples. The blood of all people runs through our veins.

A Second Helping

Our immigrant traditions are one of our most precious possessions — the diversity and color, the rub of difference and discovery, has made America more than the sum of all its heritages.

As we read the names on the headstones in this cemetery we find German, Czech, English, Irish, French — and more — who have died for our freedom. They came from all parts of the world, and all parts of the nation.

And as we look at the young among us today, we pray that no more will have to go to war.

But we know that discrimination still exists in our world, that children are starving, that intellectuals go to prison, that many are dying in war even at this moment in Africa. And logic teaches that injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere.

Democracy is a shaping belief which men follow not from the enslavement of minds and bodies, but from the compulsion of the heart.

A man who is free knows how to laugh, he dreams of the future, but he never forgets the past.

And he pays homage to those who fought and died for the right to be free.

And this is what we do today. To those who have gone before us we say "Thank you. We will not forget."

Survey Set For Gas Mains

In a continuing effort to assure safe operation of the gas system, Peoples Natural Gas will be conducting an electrical survey on their bare steel gas mains in Wayne this coming month.

The survey will be performed by a five man crew led by Peoples Catholic Technicians.

Keith Mosley, district manager said, "We will be using electrical instrumentation and taking readings directly over the pipe at ten foot intervals. From the results of the survey we can determine the corrosive environment of the pipe and install cathodic protection where the pipe is subject to corrosion.

Cathodic protection is a means of reducing corrosion, thus greatly reducing the potential for leaks."

Mosley indicated that it would be necessary to frequently set up some of their equipment at various outside gas meters in the community, and that the crew would be easily identified by their white helmets and orange traffic vests.

Normal working hours will be from 7:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

In a joint statement, the Reegs said "we are pleased we have sold the business to a family that will serve the people of Wayne and the Wayne trade area in a qualified and efficient manner. The Andersons will be a fine addition to Wayne and we wish them the very best."

Arnie Reeg said one of the toughest things about leaving the store is that "we will miss the daily and weekly associations with our many fine friends and customers, some of whom have been our customers since day one, back in December of 1949."

Bill Reeg recalls putting on his first apron when he was ten years old at the hourly wage of ten cents. "It was either work or go without spending money," he said. He does admit to adding his hours a little as there was no time clock in the store.

Arnie Reeg purchased the store on Dec. 15, 1949. Prior to that, he served three and one-half years in the air force in World War II and was discharged in October of 1945. He sold life insurance for Lutheran Brotherhood for three and one-half years prior to purchasing the store.

Bill Reeg was graduated from Wayne State College in 1964. He served two years in the Marine Corps before joining his father in the business in 1968.

OBSERVATIONS

Controls not the answer

There is good basis for a recent Gallup Poll which showed that 50 percent of the American people now favor "having the government bring back wage and price controls."

Those polled included many who are elderly and on fixed incomes and who are battling inflation and those who are salaried and also are fighting the diminishing value of the dollar. They are justified in their thinking but they might as well face it... wage and price controls are a thing of the past.

Washington ought to do something about rising costs which daily are taking bigger bites out of the pay or pension checks. Many folks are at a point where they no longer can meet the costs of living.

But what should be done? We do not believe wage and price controls are any sort of an answer in a democratic form of government. In a rigorously totalitarian society, wage and price controls can be made to "work" in the sense that a man can be compelled, at the point of a gun if necessary, to accept any sum the government specifies for his labor or anything he creates by it. Another term is slave labor.

In a free society, control cannot work. Control can never achieve anything like the completeness it can attain in a totalitarian state. For one thing, only price controls are subject only to some sort of relatively gentle pressure like the British Labor government's toothless "income policy," to it, not even prices are controlled in total. Instead, large areas of economic activity are left uncontrolled while "selective controls" are imposed on a few key commodities.

The result is that the growing supply of dollars not related to increased production — i.e., the excess dollars that caused the inflation in the first place — immediately drives up the price of everything left uncontrolled and creates black markets.

As Richard Nixon put it so well in a moment of lucidity back in June, 1970, controls "may seem like the easy way out, but they are usually an easy way in — to more trouble, to the explosion and falling when you try to clamp a lid on the rising head of steam without turning down the fire."

Shifting to his alter ego, Nixon imposed wage and price controls in August, 1971, and then lifted the lid in 1973, after his reelection. The result started the snow-balling inflation.

Be that as it may, it's up to President Carter who must understand that deficit spending, and deficit spending alone, causes inflation. If this point does not come across to our nation's leaders, the only bulwark left between this nation and disaster is whatever self-restraining common sense still resides in the voters. — Chuck Barnes

German prince visits Nebraska

A German prince, who was an officer in the war against Napoleon, explored North America from 1832 to 1834 and has left a remarkable record of his explorations in the Missouri River country. Although it was then possible "to travel thousands of miles along the river without seeing a human being," in the narrative of his journey naturalist Prince Maximilian of Wied recorded his descriptions of both Nebraska and the Indian inhabitants.

His book, Travels in the Interior of North America, was written for Europeans, not Americans, and was first published in German. An English translation is in the library at the Nebraska State Historical Society. Its illustrations, drawings by Swiss artist Carl Bodmer, "represented the Indian nations with great truth" and added greatly to the knowledge of what the trans-Mississippi region was like before its occupation by the white men. Bodmer has accompanied Maximilian on the explorations, and "by cajolery, bribery, and rare patience secured sittings from famous Indian chiefs."

According to Addison E. Sheldon, late director of the Nebraska State Historical Society, Maximilian "had the trained eye of the German scientist and the imagination of the poet." Reading his stories and looking at his pictures, the Nebraska of 1833 rises before us:

"The steamer Yellowstone comes again from Saint Louis, beating its way up the Missouri River against the swift yellow current in late April and early May. The least buds break, the birds salute the silences, the flowers bloom, all the way along the Nebraska coast... Maximilian saw and felt the spirit of the West. The eagle's nest above the river, the ruined cabin in a dark valley, the angry wind storm, the moonlight on the Missouri, the faces and manners of the Indians and fur traders, the rich soil, the flowing streams, the forests where the steamer stopped to cut wood."

Sheldon served as a war correspondent in World War I, and in December, 1918, was with the American Army of Occupation at Coblenz on the Rhine. In his book Nebraska, the Land and its People, Sheldon describes his trip down the Rhine to the palace of Prince Maximilian at Neu Wied:

'Mom' says 'thanks'

Dear Editor:
I wish to express my appreciation to everyone connected with the Wayne Chamber of Commerce "Mother of the Year" award. This includes the retail committee, the participating merchants with all the lovely gifts, the judges of the contest, and our daughter, Anne. Thank you, all, very much. — Donna Liska.

"All the way down the river our automobile, carrying the American flag, was saluted by American soldiers posted along the highway. In Neu Wied we found the palace of the Prince. It was the brigade headquarters of an American command. Over it floated the American flag."

"The steward of the reigning prince showed us through the palace and other buildings. The library of Prince Maximilian was there. Many paintings of him and sovereigns of his travels in America were also there."

"Our special inquiry was for that rich collection from the Missouri River region which Prince Maximilian had assembled here and taken home with him to Germany. It was found that acting upon a hint from Kaiser William II, who desired to court the friendship of Brazil, most of this material, along with other material from South America had been set to Rio de Janeiro by the present Prince of Wied about 1910. When the steward of the palace was informed of the interest in this Missouri River collection here in Nebraska he presented a picture and a bust of Prince Maximilian which are now in the rooms of the Nebraska State Historical Society. (The bust is in the Bodmer Collection currently on loan to Joslyn Art Museum.)"

"Prince Maximilian died at Neu Wied, Germany, Feb. 3, 1867, less than a month before this part of the wilderness he so well described became a state. He left a great museum to his home city. To the world he left the record of a busy life well spent and to Nebraska the best stories and the best pictures of her early days. His name deserves to be better known in our state."

Supports, Rates May Spark Spiral

Higher farm commodity price supports and more liberalized low interest farm emergency loans may well spark a new spiral in farm and ranch land prices.

According to the USDA's annual farm real estate survey announced earlier this year, the average increase in farmland value across the nation during the past year was 9 percent as compared to an increase of 17 percent in 1976-77 and the lowest rate of gain since 1973-74. Nebraska was one of 5 states in which land values actually declined during the past year, with a drop of 4 percent.

The major increases in land values began in 1972-73, coinciding with a phenomenal run up in farm commodity prices that saw wheat prices top $5 per bushel and feed grain prices show comparable gains. A factor too was the alarming rate of inflation which has now resumed its upward thrust after a relatively brief slowdown.

The downturn in Nebraska land values this past year is attributed to the low level of farm commodity prices which have now shown a sizable rebound under the impetus of government support increases and more active demand from the foreign export market. Even before the most recent additions were made to the 1977 Farm Act, a Midwest agricultural specialist stated that price support programs will have an effect on land values, and will also perk up the trend toward more specialized, expansion minded farm and ranch operations. His reasoning also is that improved livestock prices and profits for both feeders and ranchers will encourage higher land prices, particularly in the range country.

A recent farm real estate survey by the University of Nebraska Lincoln Agricultural Economics Department reported among other things, that Nebraska land values ranged from an average of $1,643 per acre for gravity irrigated land in the East-Central area of the state to $116 per acre for non-irrigable grazing grassland in the Northwest area.

The survey reported that Nebraska farmland is still being held in "tight hands" and is still regarded as an excellent hedge against inflation. It expected that the two most frequently cited reasons for purchasing farmland in 1977 were: expansion of present farming operations and as an investment or hedge against inflation. Reasons given for offering farmland for sale included: estate settlements, retirement or health reasons, financial problems or debt repayment; and investment profit taking due to expected price declines.

The survey specialists, noting that land values had dropped off, indicated the pause might be only momentary and its length would depend largely on the price expectation for commodities.

As the additions to the 1977 Farm Act were passed by the Congress, new and higher target price levels could be implemented at the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture. New federal disaster loans through the Small Business Administration at three percent can be used for just about anything except buying more land and there is a rush reported to take advantage of them to pay off outstanding operating loans drawing higher interest.

The combination of the government assuming most of the risks and providing plentiful, low interest money are ingredients which can touch off a new spirit of expansion toward larger operations and higher land prices.

Potemkin Village bill

President Chamber of Commerce of the United States

WASHINGTON — Grigory Aleksandro vich Potemkin (1739-1791) served Empress Catherine the Great of Russia in a number of capacities, not the least delicate of them being very close friends.

So concerned was he for her happiness that he arranged for the Empress to hear only good news from her subjects. To assure this, he built phony peasant villages along her routes of travel, and stocked them with "happy" peasants.

Potemkin achieved a certain immortality in the process, since "potemkin village" has now passed into the language of political science to describe artfully contrived displays of popular sentiment.

The temptation to build potemkin villages can be found in every government, including our own. But here, the approach is more subtle.

Suppose, for example, that you have a high staff position at one of our federal regulatory agencies. And suppose you have a pet idea — or a whole flock of them — that you'd like to see adopted by the agency. Wouldn't it be nice if you could find some dependable "peasants" who agree with your point of view, and then pay them to come to a public hearing and say so? That way, there need never be an embarrassing gap between what the agency wants and what "the people" want.

There's potemkin village legislation in Congress right now. It's called the Public Participation in Federal Housing Proceedings Act, numbered S. 270 in the Senate and H.R. 8798 in the House.

This legislation would authorize federal agencies to pay attorney's fees and other costs of participation incurred by selected witnesses in proceedings concerning rulemaking, ratemaking, licensing, health, safety, civil rights, environment and consumer issues. The argument advanced in favor of such arrangements is that representatives of the public are badly outgunned by big business in official agency proceedings, since business has the money to subsidize its witnesses.

This argument has a seductive appeal if you overlook one very important fact. The federal agencies themselves, with all of their budgets and all of their staffs, are responsible for representing the public interest! They were established for that purpose by the elected representatives of the people in Congress. Their members are appointed by the President for that purpose, and those appointments are reviewed by Congress with that purpose in mind.

In reality, it is business that is out-gunned. When a business appears before a regulatory agency, it is usually trying to defend its private property rights against an assault backed by the majesty (and unlimited funds) of the federal government. It is dangerously naive to suggest that it's the government which needs more help.

True, the costs of participation may be a burden to some self-appointed "representatives" of the public interest, just as they are a burden to many businesses. But what legitimate claim do these groups have to public funds?

We have an established procedure for determining who represents the public. It is called an election. Other so-called representatives are just private parties speaking for themselves and, perhaps, the members of their organizations. The Russian people did not benefit from the potemkin villages. Quite the reverse: They prevented Catherine from learning the true feelings of her people. But there was a beneficiary: Potemkin. He amassed a great fortune and remained a favorite of Catherine's to the end of his life.

COW-CALF MANAGEMENT

The spring season is over, but now its time to start working on the 1979 crop. During breeding season is a very critical time for cow-calf producers, and the time to aim for a 100 percent conception rate in females.

The normal estrus cycle for a cow is 18-21 days. If you are going to turn a bull in with the cows for 40 days, you will have a 60 day calving season next year. It is very important to keep this season short.

Many producers use June 1 as a starting date for the breeding season. If yearling heifers are to be bred, turn the bull in with them 20 days before the older cows are bred. When these heifers calve next year they will have more time to recover between calving and rebreeding.

While cows are open and before the bull has been turned out, cows should be vaccinated for vibriosis, petropisosis and IBR (infectious bovine rhinotracheitis).

If you are considering purchasing a new bull you should remember that a performance tested bull may add pounds and profit. Here is an example: Bull A has a yearling weight of 975 pounds. Bull B, 1,125 pounds or a difference of 150 pounds. If you breed Bull B to 25 cows each year for four years, then sell his calves at an average price of 45 cents a pound, you will find that you can pay $1,000-$1,400 more for Bull B than for Bull A and still make a profit.

POISON IVY
The best way to avoid poisoning by poison ivy is to learn to recognize and avoid the plant. It is a perennial weed and its leaves are always divided into three leaflets. There is an old saying, "Leaflets three, let it be." The leaves are often dark green and shiny. During the summer it forms clusters of green berries which turn whitish in the fall. In the fall the leaves turn scarlet and are very showy.

Poison ivy can be grubbed out by persons who are resistant to the toxin. This is hazardous because the resistant individual may become sensitive and be severely poisoned. It is usually best to kill the poison ivy with a weed killer.

Two of the best chemicals for killing poison ivy are Omelrole C (sold as Amino Treatole, Weedolol and Poison Ivy Killer) and silvex.

You can apply amitrole and silvex anytime after the plants have made their early spring growth and the leaves have reached full size. Do not attempt treatment after the leaves have turned yellow.

If used carefully and strictly according to directions on the label, amitrole and silvex are not considered to be hazardous to the applicator or to the environment. Silvex will not kill grasses. Amitrole, being non-selective, will kill all plants exposed to the spray.

Stockmen, consumers and other interested citizens are invited to an open house at the U.S. Meat Animal Research Center near Clay Center on June 11, according to Dr. Robert R. Otjen, MARC director.

Dr. Otjen said there are now 32 scientists and about 220 support persons working on various phases of research with beef cattle, sheep and swine. Development of the 35,000 acre facility began in 1966, and when complete, will result in a comprehensive research program involving 100 scientists and 500 support personnel, Dr. Otjen added.

Ultimately, the Research Center will provide "an unusual opportunity" for major contributions to the solution of problems facing the beef cattle, sheep and swine industries, the USDA administrator said. Development of new technology will benefit consumers by enhancing production efficiency and product quality, he said.

At MARC, Dr. Otjen explained, investigators will look at total life-cycle production systems for meat animals. MARC research programs are intended to expand and supplement studies being conducted by other USDA agencies and the state Agricultural Experiment Stations, he said.

During the open house from 1 to 5:30 p.m., guests will be given guided tours of the main office-laboratory complex, meat laboratory and engineering building. They also may tour activities and research projects in outlying areas in their private vehicles.

Special highlights will be tours of the newly constructed meats research facility and the newly completed engineering building. Eleven research projects or activity sites will be open for inspection by visitors.

MARC headquarters can be reached off Highway 6 from the north, or by Highway 74 from Fairchild.

Termites - - Slow Eaters

Can be Eaten Out of House, Home

The discovery of termites may conjure up visions of your home being demolished beneath your feet, but there's no need to panic. The pesky chewers aren't likely to eat you out of house and home.

Fall Field Days Set

The schedule of summer and early fall field days has been announced by the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources. The field day events are designed to bring farmers, ranchers and other interested citizens up to date on new developments in crop and livestock agriculture.

Field day dates and locations: June 9 — Wheat tour, Northwest Agricultural Laboratory, Alliance; 22 — Weed control tour, Panhandle Station, Scottsbluff; 27 — High Plains Agricultural Laboratory Field Day, Sidney.

July 27 — Tractor Power and Safety Day, Field Laboratory, Mead.

August: 2 — Sandhills Agricultural Laboratory Field Day, Tryon; 3 — Panhandle Station Field Day, Scottsbluff; 16 — Sorghum and Millet Field Day, High Plains Ag Lab, Sidney; 18 — South Central Station Field Day, Clay Center; 29 — North east Station Field Day, Concord.

September: 24 — North Platte Station 75th Anniversary Open House, North Platte.

"Termites are slow eaters," says Bob Roselle, Extension entomologist, University of Nebraska-Lincoln. "Even a well-established colony of 60,000 workers eats only a fifth of an ounce of wood a day."

The increasing use of wooden structures and central heating has made subterranean termite damage more common in the northern states, Roselle says. These termites need warm, moist conditions and a direct link with the ground to survive.

Drywood termites, common only along the southern rim of the United States, need no contact with the soil to live. They enter the home through cracks, attic vents or under shingles and can be eliminated by fumigating.

The termites themselves are seldom visible, but they leave obvious signs of infestation in your home, notes the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources specialist. Earth tubes between the soil and a wooden structure are one such clue.

"Hollow, honeycombed wood under a finished surface is the symptom most people associate with termites," he says. "Emergence of winged forms and termite wings on window sills or other finished wood also indicate infestation."

Any area where wood structures of the house come in direct contact with the soil is a potential pathway into your home for termites, Roselle warns. The most frequent danger areas are:

— Cracks in concrete foundations and concrete porches with earthfill underneath which comes in contact with wood framing. Wooden porch steps in contact with soil literally offer termites a stairway to your home.

— Posts set in concrete which come in contact with the soil below the concrete.

— Trellises and other wooden ornaments which provide a direct link from soil to wood.

— Wooden forms or debris left in place in concrete or under the soil. These can support a termite colony until it becomes large enough to attack the house itself.

— Planters built against the foundation can allow direct access to siding or cracked stucco. Brick or stucco veneer carried down over a concrete foundation also can permit hidden entrance between the exterior and the foundation.

— Leaking pipes which keep the soil moist, as well as paper (made from wood) collars around pipes.

— Too-low foundation walls or footings which permit soil to contact the wood.

— Shrubby which blocks the air flow through vents, causing the air under the house to remain warm and moist — the ideal climate for termites.

The specialist notes that the danger can be reduced by moving soil away from the wooden members of the house. Builders usually treat the soil near the foundations with a termite toxicant, however, so if you move much soil, have the remainder treated again.

"If you suspect termites, don't panic," he says. "Take your time and get two or three cost estimates from an established, reputable firm before hiring one."

Deer Creek Valley

The Deer Creek Valley 4-H Club met the evening of May 24 in the Jim Bush home with all members present but one. Roll call was "My Favorite Teacher."

Randy Dunklau conducted the business meeting and Kevin Loberg led the flag pledges. The group discussed a club tour to Norfolk.

A demonstration on "Making Muffins" was given by Ruth Loberg. Valerie Bush gave an illustrated talk on "Keeping Your Room Neat."

The next meeting will be June 15 in the Mrs. Darlene Dunklau home. Demonstrations will be See 4-H, page 7
