

Production Underway at Heritage Homes

Wayne "Building Boom" Confined Under One Roof

A "building boom" has hit Wayne and it's all under one roof. Heritage Homes of Nebraska, Inc., has a work force of more than 50 employees constructing custom modular homes for residents in a two-state area. Within just a few months, the new company expects to expand into a four-state market area. Heritage Homes is using the modular building concept which, according to Rod Tompkins, president, capitalizes on an efficiency gain that is lost in homes built by conventional methods. Gov. J.J. Exon Saturday is going to take a close look at the newest manufacturer in Northeast Nebraska, one of the fastest growing areas in the state. Gov. Exon Saturday will take a tour of a model home, the first one to come off the Heritage Home production line, located at 11 1/2 Maple in Wayne. He will be presented with a "gold" key to unlock the door of the first unit and then will go on a casual in-depth tour of the home which, according to Tompkins, is representative of Heritage Homes. Prior to going on the tour, Governor Exon will address residents of the area at a location near Second and Main Street. The speech, which is reported to be centered around the expanding economy of the state through diversification of industry, is scheduled for about 1:45 p.m. The governor will be presented with a key to the city from Mayor Freeman Decker and a gift from the Wayne State Foundation from Wayne State College President Lyle Seymour.

Local, state and federal officials have been invited to inspect the model modular home with Governor Exon. A premier showing of the model home for the public will be held Sunday. Tompkins, the guiding force behind Heritage Homes, said he is excited and gratified with the way the new operation is being accepted and the way in which the community has responded to it. He said Wayne has lived up to all expectations. "We selected Wayne for our plant site because of the willingness of the community to work with and for new See BUILDING, page 10

Need for Zoning Changes

Recommend Complete City Plan Revamp

The city council in special session Tuesday night decided to completely update the city's comprehensive plan rather than just certain areas. The recommendation came after discussion with members of the City Planning Commission.

The present plan is 12 years old and is completely out dated. The plan was updated in 1973 but even that was not sufficient to keep up with the growth and changes in Wayne. The council also decided to invite seven planning consultants whose firms are based in Nebraska and three others based outside the state but who have done work in the state to meet with the council and the commission to determine procedure and cost of the project. Dan Sherry, chairman of the commission, said there is a different need to zoning to provide multi-family dwellings in the city. He also said the commission needs more zone categories with which to work. Sherry said there is need for new zoning for business, citing as an example two businesses which could not locate in Wayne because of the present zoning. "We're bogged down with the present zoning laws,"

Walt Moeller, a member of the commission, said the time has come when the highways through Wayne will have to be rezoned. He pointed out this is not a popular issue but one that will have to be faced. Recreation areas were also discussed with both the council and the commission members present and both groups decided there had to be adequate planning in the future to allow for recreational growth. The council and the commission said they were amazed as to the lack of recreational areas in Wayne after reading a comparative editorial in The See CITY PLAN, page 14

Twelve County 4-H'ers Visit Nation's Capitol

Twelve Wayne County 4-H'ers returned home Saturday from Washington, D.C., after completing Citizenship '78—a week long living experience in Citizenship at the National 4-H center. They were part of more than 40 4-H members from Northeast Nebraska and seven other states participating last week in the program designed to help young people understand the structure and function of our system of government, the heritage of our country's development and individual roles in the nation's future. Using the nation's capital as a "classroom" the program included a day on Capitol Hill to meet with members of Congress and see government in action.

The Nebraska group met with Rep. Charles Thone. Field trips to historical and cultural sites as well as visits to national agencies and organizations were among the most informative and exciting parts of the week. "At workshop sessions at the National 4-H center, young people discussed contemporary issues and concerns, and ways in which skills and knowledge gained during the week could be applied to the 4-H program here. One of the best parts of the experience was being able to share ideas with 4-H members across the country. Citizenship '78 is conducted by National 4-H council in behalf of the Cooperative Extension Service. See 4-H'ERS, page 14

Center Director Asked to Resign

A highly charged emotional non agenda item Tuesday night disclosed Mayor Freeman Decker and City Administrator Fred Brink Tuesday afternoon asked for the resignation of Jocell Bull, director of the Wayne Senior Citizens Center. Some 12 senior citizens, including Mrs. Virgil Chambers, president of the Wayne Senior Citizens group, told the mayor and council, who were meeting in special session, that Mrs. Bull was providing a badly needed service to the community. Mayor Decker said that he

Beer Request Turned Down

A request for an off sale beer license by Bill Lueders of Bill's GW Market, was turned down by the council meeting in special session Tuesday afternoon. There were four against the city's recommending that the request be approved by the State Liquor Commission and one yes. One councilman stepped down and did not vote. Lueders told the council prior to the vote the request for the license was to provide another customer service which he felt was needed. He also said he contemplated an expansion and would like to have off sale beer as a part of the service to be provided in the expansion. See REQUEST, page 14

Contact Local ASCS For Crop Loss Claim

In a special report to The Wayne Herald, Rep. Charles Thone said any farmer in the area whose crops were damaged should contact the local Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation office and file a claim. The representative also pointed out not destroyed crops should be removed from the fields until the ASCS appraisal has been made or the agency has given permission to leave representative strips, the First District Congressman explained. He said for those crops which are partially damaged, the extent of the federal disaster payments will not be finally determined until after harvest. Thone said those fields in which the crops have been totally destroyed by the hail, soybeans may be planted without the crop being counted in the calculation for disaster payment. He explained that before low cost loans can be made available to repair home or farm buildings, a county must be declared as a disaster area. If fewer than 25 pieces of property are involved, designation can be made at the Lincoln office of the U.S. Farmers Home Administration. In instances where more than 25 pieces of property are involved, Thone said the governor must request the Secretary of Agriculture declare the county a disaster area. After the disaster designation has been made, home owners, businesses and organizations within a municipality may seek low-cost loans to repair hail damage through the Small Business Administration, he explained. Thone pointed out the Farmers Home Administration provides low-cost loans to farmers for cost of replanting and for damage to homes, buildings, livestock and machinery. Thone also said the law provides for the possibility of refinancing a farm's long term financing in the event of disaster.

Ewe Name It; He's Got It

By PAT OSWALD
Winside Correspondent

Tom Frahm, Winside, was very much surprised when ewes he had purchased to lamb started producing off-spring resembling goats.

Even though it is thought to be impossible, this instance is beginning to show otherwise. The ewes, purchased from Jim Dahl, Madison, were to mate with a ram; however after a month they didn't. Dahl later had a Bavarian goat running with his ewes. He did not think they would mate, however, the ewes did become pregnant.

Dahl had purchased the ewes in South Dakota late last summer to breed. He feels they definitely must be crossed. The goat was bought at the Albion Sale barn and about three months ago he was sold in Wahoo. It was after the goat was with the ewes that they were bred.

The first ewe had a set of twins, but lost them. They were lambs. Since then, Frahm, has gotten three sets of twins and one single resembling goat. He also has a lamb from the same batch of ewes. Tom has five ewes left from Dahl to produce off-spring.

The babies resemble goats in every way. They are small featured, sturdy, cockle in the way they hold their heads and they have hair instead of wool. The hair is quite long and wavy; definitely not wool. All babies have buttons for horns to develop. Since the ewes do not have this trait, it must have come from the goat.

Colorings of the "go-sheep" are that of a goat. The older twins, now three weeks old, are a dark-brownish-gray with white faces. Others are white with brown spots or a roan coloring. One mother has a set of twins with white and brown spots and the other is dark brown with some white markings. Most of the births have been multiple births.

Monthly Recipe Winners Cash In Food Certificates

Women from Wayne and Wakefield were first place winners in The Wayne Herald's monthly recipe contest for March and April.

Mrs. Gus (Bertha) Stuthmann of Wayne received a $25 food certificate from Johnson's Frozen Foods of Wayne for her "Meatball Stew" recipe which appeared in the paper March 16. Her recipe was judged best of the 41 recipes printed in the paper during that month.

Winning $25 worth of groceries from Wittig's Food Center with her recipe for "Lime Delight Dessert" was Mrs. Neil (Bonnie) Sandahl of Wakefield. Mrs. Sandahl's recipe in the April 27 edition of The Wayne Herald won first place for that month. Thirty-four recipes appeared in the paper during the month of April.

A private music instructor and homemaker, Mrs. Stuthmann said she decided to enter her "Meatball Stew" recipe in the Herald's contest after a couple she served it to told her how much they liked it.

The dish, which is quick and easy, as well as tasty, turns ordinary ground beef into tasty meatballs in a stew of tomato soup, thyme, carrots, onion rings and potatoes.

Mrs. Stuthmann and her husband, who is a retired farmer, live seven miles south and one-half mile east of Wayne. In addition to giving private piano, guitar and organ lessons, Mrs. Stuthmann lists needlework and flowers among her hobbies. She is presently working on a hooked rug.

Stuthmanns have four children, including Neil of Leesburg, Va.; Mrs. Kenneth (Barbara) Koehlmoo of Pilger, Mrs. Ariel (Shirley) Gordon of Stafford Springs, Conn., and David of Wayne. There are four grand children.

Mrs. Sandahl, the first place recipe winner in the Herald-sponsored contest for the month of April, selected a refreshing lime dessert for her winning entry.

Mrs. Sandahl's recipe, which calls for two-thirds cup melted margarine in the recipe in the newspaper, is better if only one-third cup melted margarine is used for the crust. The two-thirds cup was a printing error of the newspaper.

When done, the dessert features a cookie crust and velvety lime filling garnished with whipped topping and grated chocolate. Mrs. Sandahl said she received the recipe from a good friend.

Mrs. Sandahl and her husband farm four miles east and one-fourth mile north of Wayne and are members of the Grace Lutheran Church in Wayne, where they are active in Duo Club. In addition, Mrs. Sandahl teaches Sunday school and is a member of the LWML Evening Circle. She is also a 4-H leader.

The couple's children are Anita, who will be a senior next fall at Wayne High School, Karen, an eighth grader, and twins Margo and Maria, who turned seven last week and will be in second grade.

In addition to the first place recipe winners, Mrs. LaVern (Arlene) Ostendorf of Wayne and Mrs. Eldon (Carol) Nixon of Wakefield will receive $10 food certificates for winning second place in the March and April recipe contests.

Mrs. Ostendorf's recipe for "Hot Sandwich Loaf," which was printed in the newspaper

March 2, was judged second best for that month. She and her husband live in Wayne.

Mrs. Ostendorf, who is a teacher at Rural School (District 4), and her husband, who is employed at the FHA office in Wayne, have five children, including Vicki, 19, Beth, 18, Rhonda, 15, and Rebecca, 12, who are all living at home. A son, Lane, 21, works in Greeley, Colo.

Mrs. Ostendorf, who lists reading among her hobbies, said she received the sandwich recipe from her sister-in-law, Dolores Hueffle of Eustis.

Taking second place honors in the monthly contest during April with her "Golden Penny Salad," was Mrs. Eldon Nixon. Her recipe appeared April 6.

Mrs. Nixon, who enjoys trying new recipes, said she received the recipe from her sister-in-law, Jan Stalling of Norfolk, who served it at a baptismal dinner.

Mrs. Nixon works at the Wakefield Health Care Center and her husband is manager for Gardner's Growers Poultry Farm near Wakefield. They live two miles east and a mile north of Wakefield. They are members of the Salem Lutheran Church in Wakefield.

The Nixon family includes three children, seven-year old Tysha, four-year old Thad, and seven-month old Tory.

The "Recipe of the Month" contest goes on, and all area cooks are invited to send their favorites to Recipes, The Wayne Herald, 114 Main St., Wayne 48787.

Winners for the month of May will be announced in next week's Wayne Herald.

Each Thursday edition of The Wayne Herald carries recipes from those submitted to the newspaper. At the end of the month, the best recipe, along with a runner-up, are selected.

Winner of the best "recipe of the month" will receive a $25 certificate to be cashed at Rich's Jack and Jill, Johnson's Frozen Foods, or Wittig's. The person whose recipe is runner-up will be awarded a $10 certificate.

There are no categories for the contest and no official entry blank is needed. However, all recipes submitted, should include a name, address and telephone number.

LET'S TALK IT OVER
With DARREL FUELBERTH

Because most homeowners have a sentimental attachment for the home, they tend to overprice it when they list it for sale. Having done the landscaping and added many of the improvements which he enjoys, the seller tends to overestimate the value of his property whereas a buyer will be more objective and see only the basics... the land, the building and the location.

When property goes on the market at an over-inflated price, it probably will not sell. Buyers are very well aware of what similar properties are bringing. After property has been on the market a few months, each new prospective buyer asks why, if the price is fair, it hasn't already been sold.

Our knowledge of today's market and of recent transactions permits us to give you a realistic idea of what your property is worth. It cost nothing to "Talk It Over" with us.

West Point Runs Stun Wayne

The West Point Town Team scored seven runs in the first inning, two in the second and two in the fourth to take an 11-0 lead over the Wayne Town Team Tuesday night and Wayne couldn't shake the huge deficit, losing 15-7.

After four innings, Wayne settled down and played good baseball but it was too late. Earle Overin relieved Mike Green on the mound and struck out five batters in the fifth and sixth to hold West Point scoreless in those two innings.

Bob Nelson and Marty Hansen scored runs for Wayne in the sixth with the help of a double by Dave Hix. West Point scored one run in the seventh, but the Town Team came back with two of their own in the bottom of the seventh. Fritz Weible led off with a single, Aaron Nissen reached when he was hit by a pitch and Hansen drew a walk to load up the bases.

Hix scored Weible on a sacrifice fly to right field and Nissen came home on a passed ball to make the score 12-4. Mike Meyer, Hansen and Hix added the final three runs for Wayne in the eighth and ninth.

Midgets Win Handily

Tim Pfeiffer and Jeff Zeiss teamed up to pitch a two-hitter and the Wayne Midgets seemed to score almost at will in 17-1 rout of Pender Monday night. Singles by Dennis Carroll and Kevin Nissen and a double by Tim Tomas combined with two walks and four Pender errors gave Wayne an early scoring spurt to take a 7-0 lead after one inning.

Navolny scored the lone run for Pender in the second, just before the local Midgets scored three more runs in the bottom of the second. A barrage of seven runs in the third put the game far out of reach at 17-1. Zeiss, Rick Meltzer, Doug Proett and Jeff Dion all collected hits for Wayne in the inning, and Pfeiffer scored his third run of the game.

Sports Injury Now Could Cause Arthritis Later

A passing sports injury to a joint today can mean a major arthritis problem much later in life unless proper early care is taken.

This warning was given during a panel presentation on osteoarthritis at the Arthritis Foundation's annual scientific meetings.

A physician, a nurse a physical therapist and an occupational therapist, all arthritis experts, agreed that tens of thousands of youngsters active in football and other contact sports are unwitting candidates for serious and painful difficulties with their joints when they get older, due to traumatic arthritis.

By whatever name, osteoarthritis is the most prevalent kind, affecting an estimated 15 million Americans. And the problem is increasing because the population is aging. People are living longer.

Dr. Colon H. Wilson, Jr., of Emory University in Atlanta, was first to sound the alarm, saying that the nation's passion for sports at all ages obscured the long term risks being taken by children.

"With youngsters it's different. There are about one and a half million boys who play football in their communities, in high school, or in college, sometimes in all three. Many of them don't have orthopedists as team doctors to watch over them and treat their injuries. Many don't have sophisticated equipment to protect them.

"Fifty to eighty per cent will sustain some injuries," Dr. Wilson continued. "Most of these will be minor. But a great many will require prompt early care if osteoarthritis is to be prevented from developing later."

Randy's RECAP

According to Randy Hascall spending part of his summer in California playing baseball. Mallette will travel out to the west coast with the Rapid City Macy team.

They will play semi-pro baseball along the west coast, especially in California, and will head north to play some tournaments in Canada and possibly Alaska. Last year the team placed fourth in the nation in a semi-pro tournament which qualified them for this year's national tournament.

ALL EYES are on the American League Eastern division of Major League Baseball. The AL East is sharpening up into the three-way race it usually becomes. The Boston Red Sox are playing red hot baseball and lead the division by about seven games.

The names heard most frequently are those of Jim Rice, Mike Torrez, Jim Palmer, and Ron Guidry. Rice is the powerful outfielder for the Sox who is dominating the league in home runs and RBI. Torrez, Palmer and Guidry are the hottest pitchers in the American Legion right now and are nearly unstoppable in pacing their respective teams.

The Orioles have played the hottest baseball in the pros during the past month but can't close in on the Sox much because they just don't lose either. I know it's still early in the season but I think these three teams will be in a dog-fight at the end of the year to determine the pennant winners.

Some of the lesser-known pitchers are keeping Baltimore's bid alive. The Orioles who have had poor batting for several years are depending on Mike Flanagan and Scott McGregor to provide good pitching and take a little pressure off of Palmer. The club wasn't expected to be in the running this year but then they weren't supposed to be last year either and finished only 2½ games out of first place.

A two ball mixed foursome tournament is scheduled for Friday, June 23 on the Wayne golf course at 6 p.m. Entry fees will be one dollar per couple in the event and prizes will be given. A pot luck dinner will follow immediately after the tournament.

Laurel Downs Winside Teams

In Ralph Bishop League action, the Laurel Midgets and Juniors were successful in upping their records by downing Winside. Scott Newell hit two doubles. Joe Olsen pitched a five hitter, and the Midgets showed fine fielding in a 17-2 win over Winside.

Laurel scored 9 runs in the first inning, and added to their lead with two runs in the second, one in the third, and five in the fourth. Winside scored their only two runs in the fourth.

The Laurel Juniors erupted for 10 runs in the fifth inning to break open a close game. Mike Martin went four for four and Steve Anderson popped a three-run triple in the fifth to start a Laurel rally.

Dalton Homers Not Enough

Don Dalton hit home runs in his first two plate appearances but Donnie Archer took away some of the glory by belting a grand slam homer in the eighth inning to give Homer an 8-4 win over Laurel in Legion baseball action.

Dalton put Laurel on top right away, leading off the game with a home run. Homer tied the game up in the second inning but Laurel took a 3-1 lead in the third when Dalton hit his second homer of the night. Homer came back with another two runs in the fourth to knot the game 3-3.

A run in the fifth gave Laurel the lead back again and it looked like they might hold on to win, but Homer sent the game into an extra inning when they scored a run in the seventh. In the eighth inning Archer blasted his grand slammer to give Homer the victory. Mike Martin was the losing pitcher.

In the opening Midget game, Laurel had a heyday, scoring 23 runs in the second inning to humiliate Homer 25-7, in a two inning game. John Dinkle led Laurel with three hits and three runs in three times at bat during the second inning alone. Lon Swanson went three for four to help the cause.

Goeden Single Trims Pender

Wayne Juniors nipped Pender 4-3 in an exciting extra-inning game Monday night. Wayne picked up the lead with three runs in the third inning. Dean Carroll singled, stole second base, and scored on two Pender errors.

Tom Ginn walked and Kevin Murray singled to pull runners on first and second and Doug Carroll slashed a double to score both Ginn and Murray. Pender got back in the game with a run in the fourth by center fielder Bring. Wayne threatened again in the sixth when Ginn led off with a walk and advanced to third base but couldn't score.

Pender tied the game up in the seventh and sent it into extra innings but nearly got the go-ahead run. Borgmann double and Harding singled to high-light the Pender rally, and Vic Sharpe walked in the tying run. Wayne couldn't get a runner on base and the game went into the eighth inning, tied 3-3.

Pender threatened to gain the lead in the eighth when Harris singled and tried to score on Boutlier's double into deep center field. Ginn, playing short-stop took the relay from Gensebom and fired it from center field into the plate just in time for catcher Murray to tag the sliding runner. He saved an earlier run with an almost identical play. Ginn got on base by an error of his pop-up to the shortstop and Murray lined a single to right field to advance Ginn to third. After Murray stole second, Wayne had runners on second and third and Coach Overin decided to go with the squeeze bunt. Doug Carroll popped up his bunt to the pitcher for the second out and he tossed the ball to third base for the third out as Ginn was charging home.

Tonjes started things off for Pender in the ninth with a slow grounder single but didn't get far. Murray picked him off at second base with a perfect throw to prevent the steal.

Wayne went out in fashion in the bottom of the ninth to win the game. Sharpe, who pitched all nine innings, walked to lead off. Nissen followed with a walk and Dave Schwartz laid down a perfect bunt single to load the bases. With no outs Jerry Goeden lined the game winning hit just off the tip of the glove of diving shortstop Tonjes to score Sharpe.

Jim Seward Accepts Position In Ohio

Jim Seward, 31, who has resigned as basketball coach at Wayne State College, was named the new head basketball coach and assistant professor of physical education at Ashland College, in Ashland, Ohio. It was announced Friday by the president of Ashland College.

JIM SEWARD

Ashland College is a progressive independent school which will join a conference in a year and last year compiled a 21-6 record, closing in the NCAA Division II national playoffs. Seward said Ashland has a similar type of offense compared to WSC. He will replace Joe Gottfried, who accepted the head coaching post at Southern Illinois University.

Ashland College has won at least 20 games in each of the last three years and has won several championships. They play such competition as Dayton University and a college in Florida. "I am very happy about joining this basketball program because it won't be a great transition for the players or the coaches," Seward said. "This is a unique situation for me, since I have always inherited situations which were losing and I had to turn them around. Now we must continue what Ashland has built."

Over the last four years under Seward, the Wayne State basketball team posted a 64-45 record and became a member of the Central States Intercollegiate Conference. His team scored 91 points a game this year to rank 14th in the NAIA national scoring statistics.

Coach Seward's duties will begin immediately working with the Ashland Camp of Champions, basketball camp. Seward, former basketball player at Hiram Scott College has compiled an overall coaching record of 96-64 including two seasons at Northeast Community College, in Norfolk.

Seward said that after four years at WSC, he felt professionally the need to move on. He said he was pleased over all with Wayne State and that they played the toughest competition possible. Two CSC opponents finished high in the NAIA national tournament — Kearney State (second) and Missouri Southern (sixth).

Seward, who hopes to move his family to Ashland in late July, would like to coach major college basketball someday.

Zeiss, Starzl, Plambeck All-State Selections

Jeff Zeiss of Wayne, Doug Starzl of Wakefield, and Doug Plambeck of Bancroft were among the players selected to the Nebraska Baseball Coaches Association's all-state baseball team.

Zeiss, only a sophomore, was the lead-off hitter for the Wayne Bluedevils during the baseball season and batted .286. His defensive play in the outfield was one of the main reasons. Zeiss was selected to the elite 12 man team. He made only one error during the entire season and from the outfield, threw out three runners going home. The Bluedevils had an 11-3 record.

Starzl was named as utility man and Plambeck as catcher. The tree will be honored with all of the all-state players at a winter clinic sponsored by the Nebraska Baseball Coaches Association.

Thought for Today

By Brian McPride

"A boy expects much from his father. Fathers want sons to be what they themselves cannot be; it also works the other way..."

Sherwood Anderson

Not only boys but girls, too, want their fathers to be something very special. We all want to be proud of our fathers, to feel that they are well-liked and respected in the community.

Until we grow up, we probably have little idea of why old Dad may have fallen a little short of our expectations. He was kept fully occupied earning a living for us, trying to insure that we had every advantage he could give us and giving us what spare time was left to make our lives more pleasant.

Is your father an "unsung hero"? On Father's Day, let him know you understand what he tried to do for you.

Wiltse Mortuaries

Ticks Cause Problems

Insects are prevalent when the weather warms, and now is the time to be on the alert for one of the most dangerous of them — ticks.

There are only two types of ticks common to Nebraska, the American Dog Tick (wood tick) and the Brown Dog Tick, according to Bob Roselle, Extension entomologist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. The Brown Dog Tick is confined to dogs, but the wood tick can transmit Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever, he says. Ticks are normally found in wooded or grassy areas, or where large rodent or rabbit populations exist. The parasite is transferred from grass or trees to the clothing of a passerby and also will attach itself to an uncovered portion of the body.

Repellents can be used to prevent tick attachment, Roselle says, but the substances are not totally reliable. Careful examination of the body, particularly hairy regions, is the best method to prevent tick bites.

As a further precaution, protective clothing, such as tight-fitting leggings can be worn, and the outside of a home can be sprayed with an insecticide, notes the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources specialist. "Don't be alarmed if a tick does attach itself to you though," he says. "Remain calm and remove by grasping it with tweezers close to the skin and gently removing."

The head and sucking mouth should be completely removed, and a piece of skin should accompany the parasite to signify the head has been freed, he says. After the tick has been removed the wound should be treated with an antiseptic.

Even if the head has been completely removed, a disease can still be contracted. The wood tick can transmit Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever, for example. Spotted fever normally appears 2 to 12 days after the tick bite and symptoms include fever, sudden chills, headache, general aching and a rash which begins around the wrists and ankles.

Reported cases of spotted fever in Nebraska are very rare; however, The Disease Control Center of the State Department of Health reported only four cases in Nebraska from 1974 through 1977. If symptoms should occur, contact a doctor immediately.

Another disease, tick paralysis, can be transmitted while the tick is attached, Roselle adds. The paralysis, caused by a toxin produced by the tick, can be fatal, but usually disappears soon after the tick is removed from the body.

Some animals, particularly dogs, are especially susceptible to tick paralysis, according to Alex Hogg, UNL Extension veterinarian. The animals can be protected by checking regularly for ticks, and spraying with insecticides. Pills containing small doses of insecticide also may be given to the animals.

Although ticks don't normally spread disease to dogs, the parasites are a nuisance, Dr. R.L. Ebers, a veterinarian at the Capital Animal Clinic, Lincoln, adds. Flea collars, powders, shampoos or dips should be used to treat dogs for ticks, and the treatment should be repeated every five to seven days, he advises.

Livestock problems caused by ticks are rare in Nebraska, Hogg says, and most animals do not have to be sprayed or checked.

EXTENSION NOTES

SUMMER CLOTHING PROBLEMS

The old problem of mildew, and the newer problem of pesticides adhering to fabric surfaces can cause homemakers some concern during summer months.

Mildew often occurs during warm, muggy weather. Cleanliness, dry air and good ventilation can prevent this problem. Grease and soil in fabrics provide good fuel for developing molds and mildews.

Closets and drawers may be left open periodically to discourage accumulation of moisture. Clothing in a closet should be hung loosely so air can circulate. Shoes and luggage, which are highly susceptible to mildew should be stored on a shelf instead of on the floor.

A low wattage electric light in a closet will often provide enough heat to dry the air and prevent mildew from starting. Pesticide residues which remain on skin and clothing can enter the body through the pores and can be dangerous. Most laundry procedures will remove a high percent of residues from work clothes, but some precautions are still worth taking.

Do not mix pesticide-contaminated clothing with other laundry. Contaminated clothes should be washed in hot water (at least 140 degrees F) with a heavy-duty phosphate detergent. It's also a good idea to add one-half cup of ammonia or chlorine bleach to each load.

Since children's skin is more sensitive than adults, do not wash baby or children's clothes with contaminated clothes, or in the next load. Pesticide residues which may cling to the inside of the washer can be removed by running the washer through a complete cycle using detergent but not clothes.

In case of over-exposure to pesticides, take the labeled container with you to the doctor. Every home should also have the toll free number for the Poison Control Center posted near their telephone. The number is 800-642-9999.

Cedar Trees Can be "Weeds"

With widespread concern about the removal of trees in many areas of the state, these cedar trees dotting pastures and waterways should be a welcome sight.

Both foresters and agronomists in the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources report numerous inquiries on how to deal with cedars encroaching upon fields or pastures.

Dennis Adams, UNL district Extension forester stationed at Lincoln, says despite the cedar's relegation to weed status by many landowners or operators, it is one of the most valuable trees in the state because of its hardiness and adaptability.

The cedar is widely used for protection purposes, Adams said, particularly in wildlife habitat, windbreaks and shelter belts. In 1977, more than half the trees sold in the Clarke-McNary free distribution program were cedar, he said. (1.8 of 3 million trees sold.)

Because cedars are prolific seeders, they can take over larger areas which have been overused, limiting grazing potential, Adams said. The trees can dominate road ditches and river banks in addition to fields and pastures.

Mowing the cedar below the foliage before it reaches 18 inches in height is the easiest and most effective control measure, Adams said. Chemical control is not very effective, but Tordon will work moderately well and allow most grasses to survive. The key to avoiding a "weed tree" problem is to control unwanted trees when they are young, he concluded.

 industry." Tompkins added that it was somewhat like coming back "home" as he attended Wayne State College for two years.

Tompkins has an extensive background in the home building industry. He joined the Ted Reeder Construction Company in 1967 and worked with the Omaha based contractor until 1975, serving in several capacities, one as a vice president of the company.

His last two and one-half years with Reeder were spent starting World Homes, a modular manufacturing company located at Gretna. He started the company from "scratch" and when he left in 1975, production was up to one home per day (the average home costing $20,700). All homes were presold before production.

Tompkins started Tompkins Construction Company at South Sioux City in 1976. The company concentrated its market in the Sixland area, splitting its volume of home construction, 40 percent in South Sioux City and 60 percent in the rural area.

The Heritage president said when production is at full capacity, the new company expects to turn out one complete modular home a week. "We are not at that production pace now because we are stilling hiring and training personnel."

He said he expects to continue adding personnel to the point where the plant will employ some 180 persons. "That is down the road a ways," he said, "as it takes time to train the people to construct the quality product which we require."

Tompkins said production is now presold into September. He said sales representatives will be contacting builders in the four-state area to make them aware of the Heritage Home concept of home building. He cited Vakoc Construction Company, Wayne, as the type of contractor he hopes he can introduce to Heritage Homes.

Other officers of the company include Steve Gullit, vice president; Paul Donaldson, secretary; and Louis Fowler, treasurer.

White Tompkins is in the home-building business, he settled for a prior-owned home when moving his family to Wayne because of the time element.

Tompkins and his wife, Lorela, are the parents of three children: Dana, 15; Jill, 12 and Nathan, 5.

The oldest known murals on man-made walls have been found in southern Turkey. They date back to 5500 B.C.

Powerful Tractors Catch Farmer's Eye

The need to perform field work quickly on larger farm units, a reluctance to hire farm labor and an accompanying shortage of farm laborers are continuing to fuel a 10-year trend of farmers purchasing larger, more powerful tractors. That is the observation of Dr.

Louis Leviticus, engineer-in-charge of the University of Nebraska, Lincoln Tractor Testing Laboratory, who reports tractor models tested have increased in size and horsepower during the past four years. Dr. Leviticus said he does not yet see a limit to the growth in size or power of farm tractors.

While farmers have been buying both two-wheel and four-wheel drive tractors, the trend seems to be toward the four-wheel drive models, Leviticus commented.

The Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources engineer said OSHA regulations probably have contributed to a move away from hiring farm labor and has contributed to increased usage of larger tractors.

Larger tractors are now reaching ever increasing levels of horsepower, Leviticus said. Most larger tractors have reached a level over 300 horsepower.

Tractors with larger engines would theoretically be noisier, but Leviticus said the implement companies have been working to reduce the noise levels. According to Leviticus the OSHA regulations have been a factor in encouraging companies to reduce engine sound in order to comply with the rules.

The reduction of noise levels and a move toward power shift gears contribute to the comfort of the big tractors. Most of the gear shift mechanisms are installed for comfort only. The gears are now being standard in many models, but the gears are expensive and do result in a loss of fuel, he said.

Farmers have been able to work longer hours in greater comfort due to air conditioned tractor cabs which protect the operator from the elements.

Due to the comfort of modern tractor cabs a farmer may tend to lose sensitivity of the tractor's movements and impending problems a tractor may encounter. "There might be a loss of contact with the outside," because of the artificial environment within the tractor cab, Leviticus said.

Aside from financing, the bigger tractors can cause other problems, Dr. Leviticus said. One common problem is mismatching the tractor with implements. Some farmers purchase implements to load the tractor to its full rated capacity but any overload will increase wear and result in more frequent, costly tractor repairs.

With larger tractors come increases in power and speed. An increase of four miles per hour (MPH) will increase wear on the machine. And an increase in speed of 50 percent may increase wear more than that percentage and result in needed repair sooner, Leviticus warned.

If a tractor is run at full capacity at a very low speed, there may be undue wear on the transmission.

A tractor run at full capacity can be very efficient and energy-saving if well-maintained and well-tuned. But a tractor operated at less than full capacity will be performing at a drastically reduced efficiency, Dr. Leviticus said. A drop in efficiency can result in wasting a significant number of gallons per hour, he added.

To determine the size and capabilities of the tractor required to permit needed work to be done comfortably and completed on schedule the farmer needs to consider, among other things:

— The size of fields to be worked with various operations.

— The speed and time needed to complete a seasons field operations.

— How much leeway is needed for bad weather and down time.

Safety Sense

The sun's core is, in effect, a huge thermonuclear reactor that creates power by fusion. If this energy were released raw into the atmosphere, it would destroy life. But after fighting its way through the sun's, 300,000-mile-thick gases and interacting with other particles, according to a recent Saturday Review article, it changes into X-rays and ultraviolet rays. Some of the beams that finally reach earth can harm your skin, but you can protect yours with Sundown brand sunscreen from Johnson & Johnson, a highly protective product that stays on for hours in the sun, even when you are in and out of the water.

Water Safety Important Swimming Skills Best

By all accounts, water is still the nation's number one recreation medium.

The most recent study of recreation activities conducted by the international marketing research company, A.C. Nielsen, revealed that swimming is America's favorite form of outdoor recreation, with an estimated 103 million participants. Fishing was ranked third.

Statistics from 1976 indicate that over 50 million people enjoyed boating that year, and sales of scuba diving and water-skiing equipment are among the fastest growing in the sporting goods industry.

It is not hard to see, then, the importance of knowing water safety and survival techniques. Most swimming is done in swimming pools, and according to the National Swimming Pool Institute, statistics show that public and private pools are the safest place to swim.

But boating, waterskiing, scuba diving — even camping and hiking require water safety skills in more hazardous conditions.

The American Red Cross and the YMCA agree that basic swimming ability is the best and most practical skill for handling emergencies in the water.

Swimming lessons are available at almost all public pools. The NSPI says, and anyone who wants to learn to swim need only call a municipal or other public pool or their local Red Cross, YMCA, YWCA, Boys Club or Girls Club to find out the types of lessons available.

In addition to the fundamentals of swimming, many programs include lifesaving courses, as well as swimming instruction for tots and handicapped persons.

Most also teach methods of managing the body to take advantage of its natural buoyancy in emergency conditions. Called "drown-proofing" or "survival float," these skills can be used to stay afloat for up to several hours in an emergency.

NSPI cautions that families who plan to swim or participate in any activity on or near water, should first see that every family member knows the basics of water safety by taking advantage of the skilled instruction and careful supervision available at a public pool.

About 8:40 p.m. Saturday, June 17, a car owned by Albert A. Grasshorn or Donna F. Grasshorn, slipped out of park and coasted from the parking pad into the corner of their patio.

A car-bicycle accident was reported at about 4:56 p.m. Saturday in the 100 block of West 6th St. An auto driven by Ronald G. West of 816 Pine Heights Road was eastbound when a northbound bicycle exited the alley and was unable to stop and struck the car.

On Saturday, a car-motorcycle accident occurred in the 600 block of Main Street. A car driven by Robert L. Gulliksson of 410 Walnut was behind a motorcycle driven by James A. Ester of Omaha southbound in the 600 block of Main. When the motorcycle slowed down to turn east on East 6th Street, the car struck the rear end of the motorcycle.

Who says no one reads the public or legal notices?

Some folks think people don't read public notices.

These people are wrong.

Notices about what's going on in state and local governments have a high readership, higher than most states. A recent survey has revealed that 95.8% of Nebraskans read one or more newspapers regularly. Of this high percentage, 84.2% read the public notices as published in Nebraska's weekly newspapers. That shows people are concerned. They're concerned about government spending, school board meetings and legislative decisions.

To reach this large and interested community, place your public notice in Nebraska's weekly newspapers.

Wayne Herald. Moeller said he had visited Orange City, Ia., a smaller city than Wayne, and "they had twice the recreational areas as Wayne." Both the council and the commission stated they wanted to work more closely with the revamping of the comprehensive plan so that it not only provides for the present but for the future growth of Wayne as well. Federal funds have been made available for part of the cost of re-doing the plan.

Ewe

Area veterinarians have never experienced such an incidence and aren't ready to say if they are crossed or not. One reliable source, with many years experience, says he will not say it can't happen. After so many years of practice he has seen many peculiar things happen. All the same, he thinks they look like goats. An expert at the University of Nebraska in Lincoln doesn't think it is likely the animals crossed and hopes to check them at the end of July to come up with an answer. There is the possibility in previous years the ewes were mixed with the hair like sheep and this is a genetic trait carried through generations. From all checkings, it doesn't appear to be this way. Frahm, who purchased the ewes as a hobby and to keep grass down on his acreage says he has mixed feelings about these babies. First thought was, what to do with them and will they be of any value. Even now, he doesn't know what will happen but has to admit they are cute and different. Though a hobby, it has grown to be a big mystery to area residents and even a bigger one to Frahm.

Budd Bornhoft, representing some 14 to 16 licensed off sale, beer distributors who were also present, said he could not detect any public demand for the off sale beer by Bill's GW. He asked the council not to recommend the request. He also pointed out if the request for the license was granted, other businesses would be making the same request. Charles McDermott, attorney for Luaders Inc., said the granting of the license would make Wayne a better town by providing an additional convenient customer service.

was going to stand by his decision because he had received too many complaints regarding Mrs. Bull's performance at the center. "This is the hardest decision I've had to make during my four years in office," Decker said. He added that the city may have to "eat their own words" if proven wrong about releasing Mrs. Bull but the complaints were such "they can not be ignored." Mayor Decker also stated it was his personal opinion the center was not presently being used to the extent it ought to be used. He also stated he felt there should be more senior citizens involved with the center and its activities.

AN OPEN INVITATION

You are cordially invited to attend an Open House for our first Heritage Home finished at 116 Maple Street, here in Wayne.

This beautiful home was the first home built in our new manufacturing plant. It was delivered to the Builders foundation May 25 and the builder has now finished the site work, such as the basement mechanical work, basement finish work, and the attached garage. Completely furnished, draped, and decorated by the builder, Vakoc Construction Co., you'll want to see this home for yourself.

The home is 28' x 50' (1400 sq. ft.) and was completely finished and carpeted here at the plant. We have used superior quality materials throughout the house, and some special new energy efficient features.

Our new 45,000 sq. ft. plant is now complete and we are under way building homes. The plant will hold 7 homes which are custom built to order only. We now employ 53 people and are increasing the number each week as training permits.

We sincerely believe that we are building a first quality home — and at affordable prices.

Please come out Sunday, June 25, and tour the first Heritage Home. We're proud of our homes... and we're proud to be building them in Wayne.

Spending lid top topic

CAPITOL NEWS

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

LINCOLN — Nebraska's lawmakers convened their special session on June 8 and stayed just long enough to allow the introduction of more than a dozen bills designed to place spending ceilings of one kind or another on local governmental units.

The senators then recessed for almost two weeks after making arrangements to hold public hearings on the bills that had been submitted.

In so doing, they ignored the wish of Gov. J. James Exon who had requested the legislators to approve his version of a seven percent spending lid on local governments.

During his address to the Legislature, Exon again warned he would not sign any legislation that would be "less than forthright and effective."

He also told the lawmakers he believes the current petition drive for a five percent budget lid will be approved and will give voters an opportunity to ballot on that question in the general election.

Also on the November ballot will be LB 33, which would increase state aid to schools. Exon suggested the Legislature approve a resolution in opposition to higher aid to schools if the legislators "are seriously concerned about holding or reducing state spending."

The special session was called to make sure Nebraska's criminal statutes remain in effect until the new criminal code goes into effect next January 1.

The governor said he included the spending limit subject in his special session instructions because he had detected "a substantial change" on the part of many senators on the merits of the Exon spending lid proposals, which was defeated in the Unicameral last February.

The governor advised the lawmakers to pass his spending restriction measure with the emergency clause, making it effective immediately. Such action, he said, would give the voters a choice in November between that bill and the stricter limits that are proposed in the petition drive.

But the committee chairmen later decided to hold public hearings on the various lid bills. There was hope the measures could be combined into several bills that could then be forwarded to the Legislature for debate.

The Exon legislation would restrict local government spending to seven percent annual increases but would allow voters to approve higher budgets.

Other pieces of legislation introduced would provide for spending lids but would allow ways of getting around the limitation.

Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh sponsored a proposed constitutional amendment that would roll back property taxes to the levels of 1974-77 or 1977-78, and Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly introduced a bill that would permit local governing boards and people in local taxing districts to decide if any spending ceiling should be adopted.

There were other bills to tax owner-occupied property at a lower rate than other property, to limit the property tax to a certain percentage of the property, to stop local government budget increases through special elections, and to impose a five percent lid on state government spending.

The governor had hoped the lawmakers would wind up the business of the special session in ten days, but most legislative observers doubted from the start that could be done.

Speaker Roland Luedtke of Lincoln, Republican candidate for lieutenant governor, said Exon's "wide-open" special session call caused the introduction of many bills that will have to be given public hearings.

Sen. Orval Keyes of Springfield, the Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, said the special session stemmed from Luedtke's error in the criminal code act in the recent 2:1 vote in California to make drastic cuts in that state's property taxes.

Invite County Officials
The state Board of Equalization and Assessment has invited county board members and assessors to recite their tax woes to the board during hearings July 13, 14 and 15.

One of the members of the board, Secretary of State Allen Beerman, said he expects the group to be in for a long three days.

Crete Mayor Norman Behrens may have given a hint of the type of testimony that will be presented. He warned the California tax revolt is moving eastward across the country.

Behrens said the reason the citizen campaign to sharply reduce the reliance on property taxes in California was so successful was that elected people no longer are running their own governments.

Instead, said the Crete mayor, bureaucrats are making public policy and spending decisions. And, he added, bureaucrats are "dedicated to giving us a utopia we cannot afford."

The Board of Equalization met recently to adopt rules and regulations to govern procedures when it sets sales and income tax rates, equalizes property assessments and assesses railroad property.

Beerman invited county officials to bring their records to the mid July meeting because he had received so many letters from local officials who demanded action to equalize values.

Beerman said having the county officials on hand by invitation — instead of subpoena — would prove they are also committed to the reevaluation of property.

An attempt nine years ago to force statewide equalization failed after most of the revisions were thrown out during a court test.

Hiring Practices Criticized
A Federal study criticized a number of state agencies, including those in Nebraska, are failing to set the proper example in the hiring of minorities and women.

The study, released by affiliates of the US Commission on Civil Rights, said private industry often does a better job of guaranteeing equal job opportunities in Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas and Missouri.

Members of minorities and white females are not properly represented in most agencies in the four states and no state has a comprehensive plan for hiring, promoting and protecting the rights of these persons in the government job market, the study said.

It added that the federal government is also too easy in its demands on the states to make up for past discrimination and to make sure there is equal access to jobs.

The report, compiled by the four states' advisory committees to the federal commission, said morality and law require the states to be leaders in developing effective affirmative action programs.

It singled out Nebraska for being unique in that its governor failed to issue an executive order establishing an affirmative action plan.

After the report was issued, Governor Exon said he had not issued an order because he felt civil rights had been well-handled in the state. He also said affirmative action groups only infrequently have anything good to say "because if there were something good there might not be a need for jobs and federal payrolls under which they exist."

State Personnel Director Roy Gardner said carrying out a single affirmative action program is difficult because many departments are authorized by the constitution to hire and fire anyone they wish.

Michael Adams of Omaha, head of the commission's state advisory committee, said state government employs about the same percentages of minorities and women as are hired in all public and private jobs.

But Adams said most of the employees are in relatively few agencies, mostly health and welfare.

In upper level jobs, the report said, only 11 of 33 agencies had minority males, only four utilize minority females adequately, and only five adequately utilize white females.

Several Nebraska agency heads said they had tried with little success to recruit minorities.

OBSERVATIONS

Cost, service and compensation

Maybe we're just a mile south about the increase in mail rates, but to turn the other cheek and have it slapped is going one cheek too far.

The Wayne Post Office beginning July 1 will close its lobby on Sundays and holidays. This means no distribution on those days and backorders will not be able to pick up their mail on those days.

Wilbur Giese, Wayne postmaster, said the cutback on service came after a survey was made on the Star routes for moving mail. He said there wasn't enough mail being moved on Sundays and holidays to justify keeping the post office open.

Survey or not, it goes against our grain to have to pay more to have a letter delivered and then have a cutback on service.

We aren't disputing the survey regarding the Star routes. But we're fairly certain that people do not stop writing letters to be processed through the U.S. Postal service, just because it's a week end or a holiday.

Perhaps those in charge of the major postal distribution points scattered here and there have decided their people should have a "long" weekend every weekend and twice on holidays and letters being processed through the proven inefficient postal service can wait a day or two longer.

This is pure conjecture on our part but there is a touch of validity. Postal service employees seem to have lost whatever motivated the long accepted, "the mail must go through," steel, hail, rain and snow notwithstanding.

We feel the 15c charge for mailing a letter first class is totally uncalled for. Rising cost has been labeled as the reason for the increase. Rising costs are everywhere in all sectors of the economy. They are not just confined to the postal service.

One means being used in the private sector to combat rising costs is to cut overhead. We have long felt postmasters throughout the nation are among the many civil servants who are over-compensated.

Postmasters serve a vital service. They are a major cog in a system that is in need of a major overhaul. And one of the areas that should be investigated is the money paid to postmasters in relation to services rendered.

The inequity in this area is most evident in the smaller post offices which handle comparatively a small volume of mail. The salaries of postmasters in post offices which provide only box service and no delivery are totally out of line with the service being paid for by those who use the postal service.

We do not advocate doing away with small volume post offices. But we do believe a hard look should be taken at the cost factor needed to operate these post offices. A realistic overview of the operation of these post offices should provide the incentive to re-examine the salary schedules of postal employees and bring them in line with services rendered.

If something isn't done to slow the escalating cost of postal service and a determination made to balance service with cost, the day might come when it will cost $1 to send a first class letter... and the nation's post offices can cut their workweek to one day — or less. — Chuck Barnes.

Bucks the system

RICHARD L. LESHER
President, Chamber of Commerce of the United States

WASHINGTON — Bill Barlow is not a titan of industry or the head of a large special-interest group. He's just a small businessman in Pocatello, Idaho. But he had guts enough to insist that the federal government obey the Constitution in its dealings with him. On May 23, the U.S. Supreme Court said he was right.

The case arose back in 1975, when Barlow refused to allow inspectors from the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) to enter his plumbing and heating company without a search warrant.

OSHA had long maintained that it could ignore the strictures of the Fourth Amendment where a mere business was concerned. According to one report — which OSHA disputes — the agency once even went so far as to insist on inspecting a refrigerator in a private home, because the homeowner who ran an adjoining business, permitted his employees to keep their lunches in it.

The Court, however, ruled that a warrant is required for OSHA's inspections in all cases where the employer demands it. The Chamber took part in the case, on Barlow's side.

For two reasons, this victory is more one in principle than in practice.

First, the Court made it easier for OSHA officials to get search warrants than would be the case for the police in a criminal investigation. A criminal warrant must go into detail about the reason for the search, showing specifically that the police have "probable cause" to believe that a crime has been committed. OSHA need only show a judge or magistrate that "reasonable legislative or administrative standards for conducting... an inspection are satisfied with respect" to a particular business. In other words, the Court may have authorized rubberstamp search warrants.

Second, that phrase "where the employer demands it" could be a source of trouble. It would be completely easy for OSHA to harass an employer who dared to insist upon his rights.

Even so, the Barlow decision — coming right on the heels of the Bellotti case, which affirmed a corporate right to free speech — is a significant blow for freedom.

Governments, whether democratic or totalitarian, have a tendency to talk themselves into believing that they are always doing what's "in the best interest" of the governed. God help the governed if ever they lose the right to define for themselves what's in their own best interest.

We have come perilously close to losing that right in this country. In the passion of the reckless 1960s, we created a host of new federal government agencies whose mission was to banish evil and assure the triumph of righteousness. Some old ones we revitalized, to the same end.

As a result, we got a pack of bright-eyed and bushy-tailed young bureaucrats dedicated to saving us from ourselves, and to hell with the Constitution.

Fourth Amendment rights yielded to OSHA and its brethren.

Fifth Amendment rights — "nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation" — were ignored in favor of the excesses of the Environmental Protection Agency, and various "land use" schemes.

In short, we saw one after another of the precious safeguards of the Bill of Rights overturned by a government crazed by its self-righteousness.

Now the Court has partly remedied the wrong that the Constitution applies to all, whether butcher, baker or candlestick-maker.

That reminder came at an appropriate time, just a few weeks before the citizens of California sternly reminded their own politicians that the people who earn the money have some right to it, too.

Inflation: Direct and indirect

HENRY HAZLITT
Introductory remarks by Robert H. Goldsborough

Inflation is a dirty nine letter word which is every consumer's and business-man's concern. It boggles the mind while it empties the pocketbook. Labor blames Business, Business blames Labor. The Government blames both. For many years, only conserva- blamed the government. Most every lower Keynesian economist promoted deficit spending (and hence inflation) as a cure for everything short of ingrown toenails. They warned that economics and inflation were too complicated for the average American to understand. This was to keep Joe and Mary Public in the economic dark with "Keynesian wool" pulled over their eyes.

Ever since Harry Hopkins advised FDR to "tax, tax, spend, spend, and elect, elect", some politicians have bought the hidden-tax idea of inflation. However, the mood of the public seems to have changed. History will record that the first shot of the 20th century American revolution against taxes and inflation was the victory of Proposition 13 in California. That was only the beginning. If the past several politicians don't get the message now, they will certainly get the message on election day. — blah, taxes and inflated government budgets are going to be a thing of the past.

Henry Hazlitt, the noted economist, writer and lecturer has provided us with a very simple to understand explanation of inflation and its cause. Here is Hazlitt's statement:

1. Inflation is an increase in the quantity of money and credit. Its chief consequence is soaring prices. Therefore inflation — if we misuse the term to mean the rising prices themselves — is caused solely by printing more money. For this the government's monetary policies are entirely responsible.

2. The most frequent reason for printing more money is the existence of an unbalanced budget. Unbalanced budgets are caused by extravagant expenditures which the government is unwilling or unable to pay for by raising corresponding tax revenues. The excessive expenditures are mainly the result of government efforts to redistribute wealth and income. In short, to force the productive to support the unproductive. This erodes the working incentives of both the productive and the unproductive.

3. The causes of inflation are not, as so often said, "multiple and complex," but simply the result of printing too much money. There is no such thing as "cost push" inflation. If, without an increase in the stock of money, wage or other costs are forced up, and producers try to pass these costs along by raising their selling prices, most of them will merely sell fewer goods. The result will be reduced output and loss of jobs. Higher costs can only be passed along in higher selling prices when consumers have more money to pay the higher prices.

4. Price controls cannot stop or slow down inflation. They always do harm. Price controls simply squeeze or wipe out profit margins, disrupt production, and lead to bottlenecks and shortages. All government price and wage control or even "monitoring" is merely an attempt by politicians to shift the blame for inflation on to producers and sellers instead of their own monetary policies.

5. Prolonged inflation never "stimulates" the economy. On the contrary, it unbalances, disrupts, and misdirects production and employment. Unemployment is mainly caused by excessive wage rates in some industries, brought about either by extortionate union demands, by minimum wage laws (which keeps teenagers and the unskilled out of jobs) or by prolonged and over generous unemployment insurance.

6. To avoid irreparable damage, the budget must be balanced at the earliest possible moment, and not in some sweet by-and-by. Balance must be brought about by slashing reckless spending, and not by increasing a tax burden that is already undermining incentives and production.

Obvious implications

NEBRASKA FARM BUREAU FEDERATION
By M.M. Van Kirk
Director of Information

Implications of the political considerations which prompted President Carter to increase imports of foreign beef by more than 200 million pounds to "stabilize the beef market" should not be overlooked by grain producers who have been putting their faith in new government crop support programs.

It is ironic that segments of U.S. agricultural producers have been actively supporting and testifying at Senate hearings for passage of S.2626, the Consumer and Agricultural Protection Act of 1978, which would establish a powerful National Board of Agricultural Governors composed of representatives not only from agriculture, but also from consumer groups, organized labor and business. Such a board, to be appointed by the President, would have broad authority to determine the cost of production, establish loan rates, allocate the amounts of crops that farmers may produce and allocate the amounts of permitted production that may be marketed.

As presently written, S.2626 would give labor, consumers and business equal representation with producers.

It is illogical to believe that such a board would ever have permitted cattle prices to reach $63 (100 percent of parity) as they did recently, regardless of the economic and well-publicized facts of life about the beef industry and the losses which beef producers have sustained in the last 4 years. Political considerations rule and whether the Administration is of one party or the other, the temptation to appease consumers and labor and business interests become overwhelming.

The history of government intervention to control agricultural prices says that the Carter Administration or any other

Administration would react to impose embargoes if export and domestic demands pushed the cash market of wheat to $5.50 per bushel, corn to $4 or soybeans to $12 as they did a few years ago. Consider these precedents:

1975 — The Ford Administration (in response to a scare campaign by the baking industry that the price of bread would go to $1 per loaf, plus a grain loading boycott by Longshoremen and the Maritime Union against grain sales to Russia) embargoed grain shipments to the Soviet Union and Poland for a 3-month period. The action was opposed by then Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz who lost the decision. Grain stocks were ample for all domestic and export needs and prices headed downward.

1973 — The Nixon Administration, despite advice by Secretary of Agriculture Butz, responded to consumer complaints and boycotts, and "froze" wholesale beef prices for an extended period. It also halted delivery of soybean orders to Japan, an action which not only reduced soybean prices, but encouraged a vast expansion of soybean production in Brazil which has become a major competitor.

1970 — The corn bill reduced U.S. corn production and when the price of corn reached $1.60 per bushel, the government dumped 60 million bushels of Commodity Credit Corp. corn on the market to halt the price increases.

1946 — Drought in India and other areas created a world demand for wheat. The Johnson Administration and then Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman raised wheat allotments by more than 20 million acres and called for top production. Wheat prices in Western Nebraska dropped from a high of $1.65 in the fall of 1968 to less than $1 per bushel by the fall of 1967 and the "wheat surplus" was back.

The U.S. beef industry can survive. Which beef producer's recent example of politically-motivated intervention which will do little for consumers and simply aggravates and discourages cattle producers. But if cannot survive if Congress turns over the livestock industry, along with the rest of agriculture, lock, stock and barrel to complete government control and management.

Cutworms Reported

Several reports of extensive cutworm damage have been received, reports Stan Startling, Dixon County Extension Agent.

Once again, farmers are reminded to watch fields closely for evidence of small holes in corn leaves indicating small, foot-feeding cutworms. Digging around plants will usually expose the culprits. Small cutworms can be controlled by pesticides when proper soil and moisture conditions exist.

Large worms over an inch long are generally beyond treatment. Drying and heating of the soil surface will usually cause cutworms to move deeper into the soil and result in less plant destruction. Continued hot weather may make treatment inadvisable, but producers are cautioned to check fields regularly. Sevin, Dylax and Tokaphene sprays have all been used with success. In addition, Lorsban has given good control on small cutworms, but was not stocked by all dealers this year, and may not be readily available.

SPOTLIGHT ON WEEDS
BY DON C. SPITZE
WAYNE CO. EXTENSION AGENT

FIELD BINDWEED

Description
Field bindweed is a perennial, reproducing by seed and underground rootstocks. The plant produces underground rootstocks which spread in every direction from the plant. The true roots penetrate to depths of twenty-five to thirty feet. The stems are slender, two to seven feet in length, and have a prostrate or twining habit of growth. The leaves are ovate oblong, with acute basal lobes. The flowers are white or pink, funnel shaped, about an inch across. The capsules bear one to four dark-brown, coarsely-roughened seeds, which usually have one convex and two flattened sides.

Control
In non-cropland areas, use one quart 2,4-D plus one pint Banvel during vigorous fall growth or bud stage in spring. Avoid tillage five weeks before and one week after application. Plan to treat for several consecutive years.

In crops such as corn, bindweed can be treated at the bud stage in early summer with 1/2 pint, 2,4-D amine, plus 1/4 pint Banvel per acre. If corn is removed for silage, fall application of one quart, 2,4-D plus 1 pint Banvel per acre should be effective. Field bindweed can also be fall treated after removal of soybeans.

Special Remarks
Roundup can also be used on field bindweed in the fall after row crop harvest, or in noncropland. In some tests, Roundup has been no better than 2,4-D plus Banvel for field bindweed control.

Roundup may be used as a spot treatment of Field Bindweed in barley, corn, oats, sorghum and wheat.

It is a "spot" treatment only. Roundup will kill the crop in the treated area also. Take care to avoid drift outside target area.

Treatment must be made prior to headings of small grain and sorghum. Initial pod set on soybeans and silking of corn. Do not apply when the crop has set seed.

For control of perennials, the weeds should be treated in the optimum stage of growth. The best time to treat field bindweed is in late June or when plants are in early bud stage. Weeds should be growing actively, but prior to drought stress.

4. Roundup should be applied at the rate of 2 gallons per 100 gallons of spray solution. According to the label, only hand held and gun equipment can be used.

5. A copy of the label must be in the possession of the user at the time of Roundup application for spot treatment.

Trained Applicators Increase

As the 1978 growing season gets into full swing, more than 43,500 Nebraska ranchers and farmers have been trained and certified to use the more hazardous pesticide products that are being classified for restricted use only by or under the direct supervision of certified applicators.

Emery W. Nelson, Extension Pesticide Training coordinator at the Nebraska UNL Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, said that the EPA is in charge of restricting the more hazardous pesticide materials that require special equipment or knowledge for safe use.

To date EPA has classified for restricted use 23 basic ingredients that are used in approximately 2,000 of some 35,000 pesticides. The agency currently is reviewing additional ingredients.

Nelson pointed out that most pesticides used by homeowners and home gardeners are not expected to be restricted since they can be used safely by the public if label directions are followed.

Information on specific products, which are restricted, is available from county Extension agents, he said.

Following EPA classification of a pesticide product for restricted use, manufacturers are allowed several months for re-labeling, and such products can continue to be purchased until ratabled.

THE EPA estimates that about 5,000 farmers and ranchers and about 500 commercial applicators remain to be trained and certified in the state.

In Nebraska the training has been carried out under Nelson's leadership by the Cooperative Extension Service.

Nelson said that training sessions will be offered again this fall and that information about times and places may be obtained later in the summer or early in the fall from county extension offices.
