Suggested Controls

Local Look at Possible Hopper Threat

DON C. SPITZ
Wayne County Extension Agent

Grasshoppers have become a real threat in the western part of Nebraska, but so far this area has had comparatively little damage.

A survey of road ditches and waste areas taken July 13th showed that only an average of two grasshoppers were found per square yard. This is well below the number of grasshoppers needed to make it necessary to spray.

There are some fields in Wayne County that have a large number of grasshoppers and control is needed now.

Following are suggestions to determine when it's economical to treat for grasshopper control (economic classification, number of adult grasshoppers per square yard, treatment indication): Non-Economic; Field, 0-2; Margin, 5-10; No. Light, field, 3-7; Margin, 11-20; Questionable (dependent on size, species and crop); Moderate, Field, 8-14; Margin, 21-40; Probably Abundant, Field, 15 or more; Margin, 41 or more; Yes.

Most of the grasshoppers are quite small and easy to control. But since more are hatching every day the situation can change rapidly and farmers should watch their fields carefully.

Corn and soybean fields adjacent to grass waterways, pastures, and alfalfa fields should be watched and margins of these fields sprayed with an insecticide if the number of grasshoppers range on an average of over eight to ten per square yard.

Reports from other areas indicate that insecticides are killing 50-85 percent of the hoppers so more than one spraying may be needed. Most grasshoppers are quite small now and much easier to kill than when they get large. It takes about 40 days for a grasshopper to fully develop after it hatches.

Control grasshoppers in vegetable gardens with diazinon 25 percent or malathion 57 percent liquid concentrates diluted 2 teaspoons to 1 gallon of water. Malathion can be used 1-7 days before harvest, diazinon 1 to 14 days. The waiting time from application to consumption will be listed on labels.

Listed are the recommended insecticides for grasshopper control in fields:

CORN: (Material, Amount ACTUAL Per Acre, Pre-Harvest and other Restrictions and Approximate Cost Per Acre - Chemical Only).

Diazinon, 8 ounces, none. $3.35; Dimethoate, 8 ounces, 14 days. $3.01; Malathion EC, 1 pound, 5 days. $2.33; Malathion ULV+, 8 ounces formulation, 5 days; Parathion +, 8 ounces, 12 days, 48 hours re-entry. $1.08; Sevimol 4, 1.5 pounds, none. $4.72; Sevinol 4 Oil+, 1.5 pounds, none; Sevin WP, 2.0 pounds, none. $5.15; Toxaphene, 3.0 pounds. Do not feed treated forage to dairy or animals being finished for slaughter, or on dairy farms. $3.40

ALFALFA: (Material, Amount ACTUAL Per Acre, Pre-Harvest and other Restrictions and Approximate Cost Per Acre - Chemical Only).

Dimethoate, 8 ounces, 10 days. $3.01; Diazinon, 8 ounces, 10 days. $3.35; Malathion, 1 pound, 7 days. $2.33; Furadan Flowables+, 4 ounces, 7 days. $2.25; Sevin, 2 pounds, none. $5.15; Dibrom, 12 ounces, 4 days. $3.60; See THREAT, page 12

County Fairgrounds

Issues Call for Clean-Up New Livestock Auction Rule

Clean-up for the annual Wayne County Fair has been set for Monday, July 24, according to a call put out this week for volunteers by Fair Secretary Marilyn Koch.

Koch said it will be a general clean-up of the grounds and buildings. He said he hopes for a good response so the fair facilities will be shining when the gates are opened on the county fair July 27.

Koch added that volunteers will also be needed following the fair. He asked for a clean-up crew for Monday, July 31.

One of the highlights of the fair is the Wayne County 4-H Livestock Bonus auction which will be held Sunday, July 30, at 4 p.m. in the livestock arena at the fairgrounds.

Each 4-H'er who exhibits live stock is entitled to auction one pen of three beef or one market breed or one market hog or one market sheep.

According to the regulations, a businessman may bid a bonus on any animal going through the auction. In 1977, bids on single beeves averaged $46.13; pens of three beef, $85.83; hogs, $52.02 and lambs, $50.23.

Something new for the auction this year is that the bid for pens of three beef would be for entire pen and not multiplied by three as in past years. (Example: The bid is $70 on a pen of three. This will be the total paid for the entire pen.)

Officials said the bonus bid made is the amount the 4-H'er receives. The 4-H'er retains ownership of the animal and will pick up the bonus check from the winner bidder on a business day following the fair.

Jones' Chip-in Wins Wayne Open In Sudden Death

Just as the sun set and the sky darkened making golfing difficult Sunday, Knox Jones, a freshman golfer at the University of Nebraska, chipped a 35 foot shot into the cup on the third hole of a sudden death playoff to win the Wayne Open Golf Tournament.

"I was playing with a couple of Santa Clauses," Jones said referring to his two opponents in the playoff. "It makes you feel good to win over these guys."

The two golfers to whom Jones was referring were Tom Anderson of Laurel and Scott Brandt of Omaha. The three young golfers played the final nine holes with John Fugelberth of Wayne before finishing three strokes ahead of the field.

Anderson was the leader after the first 18 holes with a two-under par 70. Brandt had a 71 and Jones and Fugelberth followed with 72s.

The foursome approached the ninth green and 27th hole with Anderson in the lead. He had some trouble on the final hole of regulation play and left a putt on the lip of the cup which would have given him a par and the championship. Jones shot a 33, Brandt a 34, Anderson a 35 and Fugelberth a 36 on the final round of regulation play.

Brandt had a chance to win the tournament on the first sudden death hole but his birdie putt rolled past the hole and the threesome headed for the number two tee box, followed closely by the gallery.

Anderson had another opportunity to win when he hit his approach shot on the second hole within 15 feet, but he left his birdie putt at the edge of the cup and the match remained even.

Finally, on the par three, third hole, Jones chipped his ball in from just off the back side of the green. Anderson had a chance to remain in the playoff but missed a 20 foot birdie putt. It was the first tournament championship for Jones, other than junior tournaments.

"It looked in all the way, but I was afraid it might stop short," Jones said about his chip-in.

Fugelberth had the low score for Wayne golfers with a 108, one stroke ahead of another Wayne golfer, Mark Schram. Seven local golfers won their flights and several others placed.

Sports

The fact that people die, have limited powers, and that life itself has limits and is uncertain in its duration, are all evident to the very young child. However, the five-year old cannot conceive of death for himself or his mother. Between 6 and 9 years, he comes to realize that death is not reversible. He considers death as a final and inevitable outcome of life for all.

Basketball Lessons At Free Mini-Camp

Northeast Nebraska boys will have an opportunity to learn basketball from some of the state's finest high school basketball players July 31 at the free Nebraska Coaches Association basketball mini-camp at Wayne State College. The mini-camp, held in conjunction with the North All Star

Basketball Camp, gives boys who will be entering grades six through nine the chance to work with northeast Nebraska all stars Mark Hiall of Fremont, Kevin Janala of Howells, Mark Kruse of Norfolk, Craig Wehrle of Madison, and Brad Williams of St. Edward plus seven other members of the All Star Basketball Team such as Paul Reinertson of Ravenna and Gaylen Holy Rock of Rushville, two of the state's top scorers this past year.

The free camp will be under the direction of North all star coaches Neil Nansen of Grand Island and Dale Sampy of Ansley.

Mini camp activities will begin at 1.30 p.m. at Rice Auditorium on the Wayne State campus. Participants should arrive sufficiently ahead of time to register and change clothes. Each boy is to furnish his own basketball shoes as well as athletic clothing. Locker rooms will be available.

The mini-camp will conclude at approximately 4 p.m. To participate, a boy need only have his parents' permission. Permission slips have been sent to each daily and weekly newspaper within a 30-mile radius of Wayne. Permission slips will also be available at the registrar tion table the day of the camp. Instruction at the mini-camp will include such basketball fundamentals as shooting, passing, defense, rebounding, screening, footwork, and body control. In addition, mini camp participants will be divided into teams for scrimmages with the all stars as coaches.

All Star director Merle Bauer of North Platte said the mini camps were started six years ago as a manner in which the all stars could show their appreciation for the hospitality they receive while at the North training camp at Wayne. About 1,000 boys have taken part in the mini-camps in the first five years.

The North all stars will be in Wayne from July 27 through August 2 to prepare for this year's all star doubleheader with the South. The games are August 3 at Mid Plains Community College in North Platte and August 4 at the University of Nebraska Sports Center in Lincoln.

A similar mini-camp will also be conducted at the South training camp at Kearney State College simultaneously with the North mini-camp.

Permission slips may be picked up at The Wayne Herald

Gansebom Leads Wayne To Win

Mark Gansebom hit a two-run single over second base in the sixth inning Monday night in a 4-2 win for the Wayne Midgets over Wakefield.

Vic Sharpe held Wakefield to two hits in seven innings and his team capitalized on errors to win their final Ralph Bishop League game. Both teams were shutout until the fourth inning when Wakefield took the lead. Sharpe, Dean Carroll and Gansebom combined for a double play in the second inning to end a scoring threat.

Brad Jones walked. Dean Sharp sacrificed him to second with a bunt and Jones scored following a Wayne error for the first run of the game. Wayne responded with four runs in the sixth inning to break open the game. Don Straight walked to lead-off and Zeiss popped up the ball to the short stop who dropped it. Zeiss was safe at first base but Straight couldn't get down to second in time and was forced out.

Zeiss stole second base and the ball was overthrown advancing him to third. With two outs, Doug Carroll hit a ground ball to lead-off and the ball got by him and went into the outfield, scoring Zeiss for the tying run. Kevin Murray was hit by a pitch and Sharpe walked to load the bases. Gansebom hit a ground ball past the pitching mound and through the hole for a base hit. Both Carroll and Murray scored on the play. Gansebom started to steal second base on the next pitch and drew a throw to second base.

In a rundown of Gansebom, Wakefield committed a throwing error enabling Sharpe to score, and Gansebom moved to third. Nissen walked and tried the same play as Gansebom, attempting to steal second. Nissen drew the throw from home plate but pitcher Jones threw the ball home when Gansebom attempted to steal and he was thrown out.

Trailing 4-1, Wakefield came back with one run in the bottom of the seventh inning. With bases loaded Sharpe was called for a balk and Jones was allowed to advance from third base scoring a run.

A grander to shortstop Gansebom ended the game when he threw the ball to Dean Carroll at third base for the final out on a force play. Brad Jones, who allowed only three hits suffered the loss.

Randy's RECAP

According to Randy Hascall

peting I'll post you on the results next week

GENEROUS MONETARY contributions for the Carroll Ball Park Fund have been received from the Carroll Fire Department, Milton Owens and the Cliff Bethune family in memory of their son and brother Randy. Anyone wishing to contribute to the fund may leave a donation at Ron's Bar and Steak House in Carroll.

THE WAYNE JUNIOR TENNIS tournament begins tomorrow and tourney coordinator Tom Roberts tells me it will be the largest tournament in this area.

There will be two or three of the top five players in the state competing in each category. Roberts said and a record number of players are entered. Matches will begin at noon tomorrow with 16 and 18 year old competition and continue Saturday and Sunday with younger players competing.

THE 1984 OLYMPICS are still in the news, and folks like the International Olympic Committee will look for some other city than Los Angeles to host the games.

The city of L.A. and the IOC apparently can't reach an agreement which is satisfactory to both parties so the Olympics will slip out of L.A. and probably wind up in some Communist country.

It'll be interesting to see how political the judging will be in 1980 with the Olympics in Moscow. The United States will have its hands full competing with the Russians and East Germans on their own ground. But more about the Olympics at a later date.

The problems, trends, and needs of natural resources in the Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District and Wayne County will be appraised and discussed tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Northeast Technical College in Norfolk. The concerns that individuals and resource-related groups express at this meeting will be used to design the future resource conservation programs of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District and the USDA Soil Conservation Service are sponsoring the meeting to fulfill requirements of the Resource Conservation Act which President Carter signed into law in November, 1977.

"People who are unable to attend the meeting will still have a chance to contribute their resource concerns. There will be an hour television program also on Thursday at 7:30 p.m. on the Nebraska Educational Television Network which will explain the Act.

The TV program will give examples of many resource conditions and ask for people's comments on the environmental concerns. In a similar fashion to the recent national driving tests. Questionnaires may be obtained from the local Wayne County SCS office to record concerns and comments.

Budget

jump, mainly because of needed equipment, especially new football helmets.

The senior citizen fund was up slightly because of increased costs in utilities and wages.

The street department asking is down from last year although Brink said there are plans to upgrade radio equipment. He said the city Tuesday morning received a bid of $26,000 on a new street sweeper (including trade-in) which was lower than anticipated which is making possible certain revisions in placement of monies in the street fund.

Sewer maintenance shows a large decrease but this is mainly because the interceptor line, which is still under construction and will continue to be under construction during the 1978-79 fiscal year, was included entirely in the 1977-78 budget. The landfill and transfer station took a jump in budgeting because of operating expenses for the new transfer station which is now in a "shake-down" period and will be open to public use in the near future.

The fire fund was down substantially because a new aerial ladder truck was purchased last year. There are plans for new uniforms and other equipment.

The park fund remained about the same but the council did discuss possibilities concerning additional park space, especially for softball fields. They were told land east and north of the lagoon might be adapted to recreational use. No official action was taken. Brink told the council however, a new "Cyclone Slide" is included in the park budget for Ashley park.

Expenditures for the city auditorium and city hall were cut substantially but some discussion about little use of the city auditorium for income purposes.

Some $6,000 was put into the industrial site fund in the event money was needed to supply a firm industry with roads or utilities.

The city payroll reflects a six percent cost-of-living increase plus merit raises which amount to an approximate ten percent budge in wages for the coming year.

The water fund was down because no major improvements are anticipated during the coming year.

Before council approval was given to the proposed budget, Brink pointed out that the four budgets he has prepared have been with three to four percent of the actual expenditures. He added that "just because it's budgeted, it doesn't mean it has to be spent."

He said the overall increase in the budget is almost directly in line with national figures.

They explained there will be a pool that will be pro-rated among breeding beef and dairy exhibitors who do not have a market, animal going through the ring. The contribution to the pool is a minimum of $10.

The officials pointed out the pool is a special bonus for those 4-H'ers who will not take their animal through the auction.

Galen Wiser and Bill Dickey are co-chairmen of the auction with County Agent Don Spitzke assisting.

Members of the Livestock Sale committee will be contacting area business persons concerning the auction. The committee members will do the bidding for the businessmen if they wish they (the committee members) to do so, officials explained.

Property tax equity

CAPITOL NEWS

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association
LINCOLN — Many county officials believe corrective measures should be taken by the state Board of Equalization and Assessment to provide for property tax equity.

Some of the officials were in Lincoln recently to suggest a variety of ideas on how the board could help achieve the objective of tax fairness among the 93 counties.

The board held a day-long hearing, most of which was devoted to listening to a variety of proposals designed to equalize property valuations across the state. One recurring suggestion was that the board cancel rollbacks of property valuations. Such an approach would require all counties to return to actual values they had before taking the rollback action.

It was also suggested there be statewide rollbacks — a move that some said would abolish inequities that exist among counties with overlapping taxing districts.

Under a state law currently involved in litigation, all counties were mandated to revalue property and improvements by last Jan. 1. The law also provided for penalizing counties that failed to comply with the mandate.

The state's two largest counties — Douglas and Lancaster — failed to meet the January deadline. Douglas County officials have promised to do so by next January and Lancaster County has indicated it will also have completed its reappraisal by that time.

Some of those at the hearing were fearful they would be penalized for following the law's mandate.

A majority of the counties places, or were ready to place, their new values on the tax rolls by last Jan. 1. But county assessors said a "domino effect" occurred and uniform valuations were not achieved.

The assessors said when all of the counties did not start using their new valuations at the same time, inequities were caused among counties and between counties with overlapping taxing districts.

To get around the problem, 32 counties rolled back their new valuations to relieve some of the tax pressures on their residents.

Johnston County Attorney Tom Morrissey told the state board that it appears the board will be in "hot water," no matter what it does or doesn't do.

He said if the board acts to achieve equalization, it probably will be challenged in court. And if the board does not take some action, it might also face a court challenge, Morrissey said.

Petition Drives Success

There is little doubt Nebraskans will vote next November on whether to limit local government expenditures financed by property taxes.

Leaders of the petition campaign to place a proposed constitutional amendment on the fall ballot gathered and submitted nearly 78,000 signatures — well above the required 45,131.

Those signatures will have to be checked to make sure they satisfy legal requirements. Secretary of State Allen Beermann says the checking job should be completed by mid-August. There had been some fears by the chief leaders of the petition effort that they might fall short of collecting the needed number of names. But on the July 7 deadline, they submitted more than 30,000 new names and that apparently was more than enough to settle the issue.

It was noted by the secretary of state that day were more than 37,000 signatures of people who want the state to have a bottle control law.

They are proposing a mandatory five-cent deposit on bottles, cans and cartons that contain such things as beer and soda pop.

Leaders of the bottle bill proposal swung into action after the 1978 Legislature refused to pass a bottle bill, even though the lawmakers had been warned a drive to place the issue on the ballot would be started. The petition supporters also told the Legislators they had no doubt they could easily round up the signatures required to force a vote on the question.

Jerrison of Lincoln was chairman of the bottle bill campaign.

Beermann said he expects only about two percent of the signatures collected in each drive will be invalidated, which would guarantee both the bottle and tax spending proposals will be on the November ballot.

Declares Grasshopper Emergency

Prompted by reports that the grasshopper problem appears to be as serious in some parts of the state as in the 1930s, Gov. J. James Exon recently declared a state disaster.

The declaration made available up to $500,000 from the governor's disaster fund to pay for spraying along roadsides and on public lands.

The governor said the money could not be used to finance spraying on private property because of constitutional problems involved in use of the money for private purposes.

He and other state officials said they hoped the state program would prod landowners into using pesticides during a meeting with officials of the departments of roads, agriculture, game and parks, the Co-operative Extension Service, the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, and attorney general's office.

State Agriculture Director Roger Sandman went to Washington in an effort to persuade the Environmental Protection Agency to permit use of restricted chemicals to fight the grasshoppers. Sandman was not successful — at least initially.

Exon said he considered calling a special legislative session to deal with the emergency but that issuance of a disaster declaration was faster and accomplished the objective he sought.

State agricultural officials said the hopper infestation was the worst in the western half of the state and in some northern counties.

Named DAS Chief

Starting Aug. 14, Jon Oberg will become chief of the state Department of Administrative Services and will also continue as acting director of the state Office of Planning and Programming.

Stan Matzke recently resigned as head of the DAS to take a position with Southeast Community College. Oberg became acting director of the Office of Planning and Programming a year ago following the resignation of W. Don Nelson, who took a job with the Wyoming state government. There has been speculation that Oberg, 35, might be selected by Gov. J. James Exon to go to Washington as an aide, if Exon is successful in his bid for the U.S. Senate.

Crash Cause Undetermined

Col. Lloyd Johnson, chief of staff for the Nebraska Air National Guard, says the cause of a Nebraska Air National Guard plane crash last November could not be determined and probably never will be.

The crash killed the pilot, Capt. Nolan C. Volght, and the weapons system operator, Capt. Raymond C. Hesse.

Johnson said the two were among "the most qualified pilots in the squadron." He said there were thunderstorms at the time of the crash and the moon and horizon were invisible. The plane was 1,000 feet too low, Johnson said.

Inspection of the wreckage indicated the plane was in good mechanical condition, Johnson said.

A happy group

Dear Editor: Several times each week for nearly two years I have attended the many and varied activities at the Wayne Senior Citizens Center. The people I have met there are happy and congenial. I have never been aware of any trouble what so ever existing within the center. We are a happy group and want to keep it that way. Come down and visit and see for yourself what a nice place it is. — Viola M. Lawrence.

Equal rights

Dear Editor: I would like to respond to name withheld by request. He or she wrote a letter to The Wayne Herald published in last Thursday's paper. My comments are in reference to name withheld's comments on family planning agencies. First I would like to say that planned parenthood does not endorse or encourage abortion. They do not recommend abortion as a method of birth control. Abortions have been a fact of life since time began. Pregnant women are going to have abortions whether it's legal or not. Isn't it better that those procedures are performed under safe and sterile conditions, or do you want to send our wives or our daughters back to the backstreet alleys, clothes hangers and button hooks. Teens are going to have sex, and teens are going to get pregnant. The women of yesterday and today are scripted from the moment they are born to be wives and mothers, to be subservient and dependent. It's no wonder we end up with such a poor self-concept. If a girl or a woman doesn't feel good about herself and isn't independent in her own right, she will not have the capability to handle her own sexual feelings, or be responsible for their sexual behavior. Until the women of today have equal rights and equal opportunities, there are going to be mass problems in the areas of domestic violence and child abuse. Pregnant teens are counseled to give up their babies for adoption if they aren't competent to raise the children themselves. Then they are given birth control information and advice. The primary goal of the family planning clinics is to give information and advice, and devices, before a pregnancy occurs. There are millions of couples, and many competent singles who want to adopt babies. The problem is, the girls will not give them up. Even in Wayne, there isn't much of a social stigma to keeping an out-of-wedlock child. Many times the girls want and plans to get pregnant. She wants something to love, something that is completely hers. What she doesn't realize is (because she is a child herself) that cute little bundle of sweetness screams, wets, eats and throws up.

Kill a tree for clean air

President Chamber of Commerce
Of the United States

WASHINGTON — We are constantly reminded by environmentalists how grateful we should be for trees and other greenery because of all the nice things they do for our air supply. I hope it will come as a considerable shock to these environmentalists to learn that our air quality laws are now so extreme that compliance with them can actually require cutting down a forest.

It works like this: Say you want to build a new coastal port facility to bring in Alaskan oil (to help solve the energy problem). This facility would have to be located in what the Environmental Protection Agency calls a "nonattainment" area, because of high oxidant levels (smog) in the air there. Since the new port might make some small contribution to the problem, it cannot be built until the amount of pollution that it will add is "offset" by a greater reduction in existing sources of pollution in the area.

In an urban area, the required offset may be achieved by measures such as buying up and closing down sources of hydrocarbon emissions (from which come oxidants) like gasoline service stations and drycleaners, an unfortunate expedient for those who need the services of these establishments. But what if the area in question is rural, not urban?

As a matter of fact, most hydrocarbon emissions in our coastal areas come from trees, swamps, and marshlands — all high in ecologists' esteem. Therefore, obtaining an offset sufficient to build your port may require cutting down a grove of trees, or filling in a marsh or two.

Let anyone think me excessively hypothetical, I want to make it very clear that this situation has actually occurred in the full compliance with, and because of, the laws of the United States of America.

The case I have described involves just one of the major forms of controlled air pollution. There are five of them. And a "nonattainment" area is one of many classifications, each of which has slightly different regulations. As you might suspect, when you put it all together it is difficult to find any part of the country that is not in some way threatened by EPA's regulatory ax.

For example, we usually associate "particulate" (dust) pollution with heavily industrialized areas. But the biggest particulate problem is out on the midwestern plains, where windstorms whip up natural dust clouds. Oddly enough, EPA will allow for the natural pollution of dust in the West, but will not allow for the natural pollution of vegetable hydrocarbons anywhere.

The net result is a nonsystem that overprotects underpopulated areas, gives environmental considerations primacy over social and economic considerations, treats differing parts of the country inequitably, and actually encourages destruction of the environment to "protect" the environment.

I modestly suggest that a form of pollution generated in abundance by nature can not pose a substantial threat to mankind, otherwise we would long since have vanished from the planet. Further, the ecological cost of trying to suppress such pollution is quite likely to surpass whatever damage it does. And if you concede these two points, then what is the rationale for forbidding desirable commercial or residential development that would make, at worst, a minuscule addition to whatever mother nature is pumping into the air?

The complexities and contradictions of our pollution control regulations are far greater than I am able to convey in this limited space. Worse yet, they can be invoked in the name of "motherhood" issues like "clean air," while the accompanying excesses and red tape remain hidden from the typical citizen until local enforcement begins — something most of us still have to look forward to.

OBSERVATIONS

A source of service

There is no way you can avoid the plaintive fact that we are constantly growing older. This aging process doesn't really become of any great concern until the mid-forties when we start looking over our shoulder to see if we might have lived our lives differently. Officially, at 55 we become a part of an every increasing segment of society known as "older Americans."

We had the pleasure of meeting some of the "older Americans" in the Wayne area who took part in a monthly business meeting of their Senior Citizens Center located in the basement of city hall in Wayne.

While there were about 24 persons present, they all took an active interest in what is happening at the center, what is being planned for the center and what can be done to make the center a better place for the city's senior citizens.

The center has come under fire during the past few months. The city administrator has given notice if the center isn't utilized more, there is a possibility the center will be closed.

The first uproar came when the center's director, Mrs. Jocell Bull, was terminated by Mayor Freeman Decker and City Administrator Fred Brink. The action caused vocal concern and after reconsidering and placing certain stipulations on the scope of authority and duties of the director, Mrs. Bull was reinstated.

The center has been given a little more permanency with the implementation of a 7 1/2 program for congregate meals to be served in the center. This program will be operational in November.

While this program will represent positive utilization of the center, it is far from the basic purpose of the center. The central purpose of the center, as we understand it, is to provide a central location where senior citizens can meet and conduct activities so they can maintain an active role as a part of society.

The center could be a binding link between "growing old" and "growing with the community and the times." For the center to function as it is intended to function, it must receive the wholehearted support of all of "older Americans" in the community.

The center can be a source of pleasure and production. It is essential that our senior citizens feel they are lending something to society rather than being a burden on society. The center can provide the resources but it is up to the senior citizens to avail themselves of these resources and make the center a focal point of positive living.

Thought for Today

By Brian McBride

"To accept good advice is but to increase one's own ability..." — Goethe

It's only natural that we are reluctant to be advised. There is an inference that we are falling or are about to fall to do something that is expected of us. The one who offers advice seems to be telling us that we need help, that we can't make it, unassisted.

It takes a well-adjusted person with considerable intelligence to realize that he can increase his own ability by profiting from another person's experience. Such a person will not only accept advice, he will solicit it. Even if he doesn't act on it, he will have the benefit of having at least considered another point of view.

We are able to assume responsibility for most of the burdensome details which must be handled promptly in the event of a death. Your first call should be to us.

Three Pests Can Ravage Home Gardens

Nebraska homeowners and gardeners should be on the war path against three pests currently moving in on evergreens and cabbages and related crops (broccoli), Brussels sprouts and cauliflower.

That's the word from Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources Extension entomologists David Keith and Robert E. Roselle.

Of greater economic importance is the threat of bagworms, which in the millions heavily damaged evergreens in eastern Nebraska last summer.

These caterpillars construct a protection home around them from silk and bits of the tree or shrub they are feeding on. If severe damage continues, evergreens, especially small junipers, can be killed as the eaten foliage does not regrow, the insect specialists said.

The small bagworms, those which hatch from eggs which have overwintered in bags built last summer — can be controlled with several kinds of sprays.

The bagworms have now hatched, and the small larvae have begun to feed and to construct a protective bag of their own. When small bags, about 1/4 inch long, are detected, spraying should be carried out. Full size bags will protect the worms from chemicals and the elements when they reach about an inch in length.

The suggested materials are diazinon, Cygon, Dylor. Or there are several commercial mixtures containing Bifolol, Dipel or Thuricide. Labels should be checked for dilution recommendations. It may be advisable to re-spray in 10 to 14 days, as eggs do not hatch simultaneously, and insecticides are effective for only a few days.

Keith and Roselle said.

Dipel or Thuricide are names for bacterial insecticide which contains spores of Bacillus thuringiensis that slowly kills caterpillars after they have eaten sprayed foliage. In other tests, the disease agent has given better performance on larger bagworms, Keith stated.

Dipel or Thuricide also are effective against two kinds of caterpillars that attack cabbage and related crops.

Since the spores in the insecticide may be killed by sunlight, application to infested cabbage plants should be made late in the evening. Worms do not feed immediately, but will stop feeding soon after they have had a bad taste of the bacteria.

Other insecticides that can be used are Sevin, malathion or diazinon. If these are used, there is a 3 to 14 day waiting period from time of application until harvest of cabbage and related crops treated. There is no waiting period on B. thuringiensis. Insecticides containing this material are short in duration, so reapplication is usually required every 7 to 10 days.

The NVMA says fly and dust control can aid in the prevention of the disease. Local treatment to the eyes of infected animals and/or surgical intervention are recommended.

Pinkeye Is Increasing

The incidence of pinkeye in Nebraska cattle is on the increase. According to the Nebraska Veterinary Medical Association, the disease is very contagious and can spread rapidly from animal to animal.

Hot dry weather encourages the problem which can be especially costly to cattle producers and feeders, causing loss in efficiency and slower weight gains.

Farm Mishaps Level Off

Despite a leveling off of farm fatalities in Nebraska the past few years, now is the time for complacency, an Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources Extension safety specialist said this week.

Commenting on preparations for the upcoming National Farm Safety Week, July 25-31, Rollin D. Schrieder said the Nebraska fatality count from farm mishaps was 35 in 1977. The annual rate for the past years — 37, 42 and 35, for 1976, 1975 and 1974, respectively — is low compared to the fatality rate in the 1960's and early 1970's, when more than 50 persons died annually, Schrieder said.

Schrieder, who also serves as secretary of the Nebraska Farm Safety Council, said much of the reduction comes from a drop in tractor associated fatalities. The drop in tractor-related fatalities, in turn, is attributed to a good tractor educational safety program and rollover protective devices on tractors, he said.

In recent years, around the U.S., farm related accidental deaths have numbered approximately 1,900 while 190,000 persons have received disabling injuries.

The 35th observance of National Farm Safety Week has the theme of "Manage to Prevent Farm and Ranch Accidents."

Safety authorities are calling on farmers to take a leaf from the book of industrial organizations in implementing cost-effective safety programs. Beyond the costs in terms of human suffering, grief and hardship, authorities say nearly $4 billion is being lost annually through farm and ranch accidents.

One of the thrusts of the National Safety Council is a three-year program to bring about more extensive use of personal protective equipment, such as hard hats, goggles, and hand-toed shoes. The Council is convinced that widespread adoption of this special clothing and equipment would substantially reduce the number and severity of disabling work injuries on farms and ranches.

Tractor Day to Feature Walls

Pre cast concrete insulated wall panels for agricultural buildings will be featured for the first time at Tractor Power and Safety Day, to be held Thursday, July 27 at the University of Nebraska Field Laboratory near Mead.

"The insulated walls help reduce problems of winter condensation and sweating and also reduce floor drafts," according to E.A. Olson, Extension Agricultural Engineer in the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Concrete is one of the basic construction materials using Nebraska's resources — sand, gravel and cement. This makes for rapid construction of durable and economical agricultural buildings.

"The pre cast wall panels will speed up construction for the producer who needs a building in a hurry," he added. Several swine buildings have been built during the past few months and according to recent reports, more than 20 additional buildings are under contract.

Both insects feed in cabbage heads, making control difficult.

PLANTING FALL COLE CROPS

Now is the time to start many cole crops from seed in the garden.

Cabbage and broccoli are the easiest to grow in this area. Cauliflower and brussels sprouts are more difficult to grow but will do well with proper care. Later maturing strains of these cole crops are best suited for the fall garden.

Seed an area previously planted to lettuce, peas, spinach or snap beans with any of the cole crops. Fall cole crops should not be planted in areas where radishes or vine crops have been harvested.

ONIONS

Many people still believe that breaking over the tops of onion plants will result in a larger onion.

Breaking over the tops will not increase bulb size and may prevent bulb enlargements. After the tops are broken over, onion bulbs increase in size as sugars are manufactured in the leaves and are translocated to the bulb. If the tops are broken over, this process stops, thereby preventing further bulb enlargements.

ROSES

The care that hybrid tea roses receive in July and August will go a long way in producing beautiful flowers in September and October.

Always be sure that roses have a sufficient amount of water. A good thorough soaking at least once a week, if there is no rain, should provide the moisture needed. Try to keep the water off the leaves to lessen the danger of leaf disease. Watering in the morning is recommended.

The next thing to do is to give the roses a feeding of 10-15-5 fertilizer. This is spread around the base of the bushes and worked into the soil very lightly. Be sure to spread it evenly and not leave the fertilizer in clumps.

In order to produce more blooming wood on hybrid teas, cut the plant back by about one third in July. Cut branches work into the soil very lightly. This July pruning will leave the plants without blooms in August, but the September and October blooms will more than make up for it.

Lye Improves Digestibility

Several technical papers describing experimentation with sheep and cattle aimed at improving the digestibility of fibrous feedstuffs such as wheat straw and corn cobs have been reported by University of Nebraska-Lincoln Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources scientists.

The researchers reported at the 1978 joint meeting of the American Dairy Science Association and the American Society of Animal Science at Michigan State University July 9-13.

Professors T.J. Klopfenstein, R.A. Britton, J.K. Ward and I.G. Rush working with graduate assistants C.W. Acocok, L.L. Berger and J.A. Paterson fed corn cobs and wheat straw that had been treated with sodium hydroxide, commonly known as lye, to both sheep and cows. Previous experiments had shown that when such treated fibrous materials were tested in laboratory devices which simulate the digestive processes of ruminant animals that digestion was improved by as much as 30 percent.

The action of the sodium hydroxide is to break the chemical bond between the lignin and cellulose contained in such feeds with an increase in digestibility. The additional sodium which is ingested by animals fed on such treated fiber, however, may cause some problems of mineral imbalance and can result in excessive water consumption, diarrhea and other complications.

The work at Nebraska has shown that these problems can be corrected by mineral supplementation and the addition of alfalfa to the diet. Use of these measures brought about improved digestibility of sodium hydroxide-treated fiber and was reflected in better gains and feed efficiency in both species used.
