Board Approves 1978-79 Budget An operating budget of more than one and one-half million dollars was adopted Monday night by the Wayne Carroll Community School District board of education. The total budget for 1978-79 school year is $1,551,460, representing an increase of $74,957 over the previous year's budget. It is less than a one percent increase over the 1977-78 budget. The average increase in the district's budget over the past three year's has been a 4.8

flons were signed that made LB 33 Inoperable and the Wayne-Carroll school received $70,000 rather than the $190,000.

Haun went on to explain the 1978-79 budget was prepared by using an anticipated state support figure comparable to the $70,000 that was received from the state this year.

The board also discussed the possibility of dipping into the district's sinking fund to fund new windows for the Middle School building. The ballpark figure for the project is $36,000.

City Clerk Bruce Mordhorst attributes most of the valuation increase to inflation. He said construction costs have risen dramatically since last year.
"Last year, buildings were valuated at 1976 standards," Wordhorst explatined, "white this year's list was valuated at the new 1978 standards."

Mordhorst pointed to a permit on the list that held as estimated value of $65,000. He said the same home would have cost between $55,000 and $56,000 last year."

He added that construction is moving ahead this year because people are hedging against higher building costs in the future by going ahead with construction now.

Beatrice, which dropped from Class A this year had little trouble reaching the finals. They outclassed Gering 7:2 and Holdrege 9:0 but they ran into a strong Wayne team which game them trouble.

I RETURNED EARLY Monday morning from a three-day vacation to Bearlice where the Wayne Midgets captured second place in the State Class B Midget Tournament.

The rest of the Herald start covered my duties Friday and Saturday.

Zeiss moved to third on the play and Mitchell advanced to second on the throw home. A strikeout ended the inning, however, with the game knotted.

Pitcher Zefs allowed only one hit in the first four innings but finally began to tire in the fifth. Pinkerton reached first on an error, Nitz walked and Rohlfing doubled to deep right-center field. Pinkerton scored easily and Nitz, a Junior Olympic to the control of the play of t or them. The players really appreciated the support they were given by their followers. A crowd of probably 50 fans traveled all the way from Wayne to Beatrice to back the team and played a major role in the club's success.

With the help of the crowd and a fired up group of reserve players in the dugout, the Wayne team played with more incentive and spirit than their opponents, which was a key to their success. Coach Hank Overin salid that the crowd was probably the largest following to ever support the team at a tournament. Many of the persons were parents of reserve players, and they knew their sons wouldn't play but they still showed their support.

WE DROVE DOWN to Beatrice in a caravan and only had one problem. Traffic signals and traffic itself, broke up the caravan in Beatrice and some of us

I had a car load of Midgets and we took a tour of the whole city before we found the diamond. When we stopped to east some pedestrians for directions, most of them asked which field we were tooking for. We didn't know, so we were sent to all corners of Beatrice to different diamonds.

Finally, in the far edge of town one kind old soul knew exactly where the field was and gave us directions which were right on the money. When we arrived, the O'Nelli team had already taken infield.

We found out we weren't the only ones to get lost but I'll omit the names of the other drivers to prevent embarasament. Anyway, we all remember where Ashley Street is, now.

CONGRATULATIONS to the Wakefield Juniors for capturing a state champion-ship. Coach Paul Eaton, the team and fans should all be proud of a tremendous season. Backed by a huge home crowd, Wakefield outclassed the other teams in the Class C tournament.

SAFE AT 3RD, Tim Thomas sildes in against Aurora in the semifinals of the state tournament. He scored on a single by Jeff Sperry.

Waterfowlers in four south-central Nebraska counties will have a chance to give ducks and geese a boost this fall, by using steel pellets instead of tead shot ir shotguns, accordinig to Parks Commission.

New regulations are scheduled to go into effect this fall requiring waterfowl hunters to use steel shot in 12 gauge shotguns in all areas of Clay. Fillmore, kearney, and Phelps counties; with the exception of the Platte River.

Together, these four countles comprise an area often referred to as the rainwater basin, an area with a past history of waterfowl lead poisoning. In most rivers and marshes in Nebraska, lead poisoning isn't as great a problem because of shifting sand or soft muddy;

hard mud bottoms in the basin areas of south-central Nebraska, according to Hytand. It has been conservatively estimated that two to three percent of the nation's waterfowl population dies each year from lead poisoning, and the main source is from areas similar to Nebraska's basin area. "From gizzard amples taken at Nebraska basins the last two years, we found 3.4 percent of all ducks had at least 1 lead shat pellet in their gizzard, white the percentage in mallards was slightly higher." says Hytand, one pitches the percentage in mallards was saightly higher." says Hytand, one pitches is enough to cause of the percentage in mallards was singlity higher." says Hytand, one pelletic is enough to cause of the percentage in mallards was singlity higher."

"and under the right conditions, or one pellet is enough to cause found in that a lounce load of steed death from lead poisoning."
Federal regulations were adopted in 1976 requiring the use of steel shot in certain problem areas of the Atlantic Flyway, effective at ranges of torty extending the zones into the Wississippi Flyway in 1973, and range where most ducks are into the two western flyways in 1978.

Mississippi Flyway in 1977, and range where most ducks are laken.

Steel shot is currently only available for 12 gauge shotguns, and the regulations will permit the use of lear shot in shotguns of other gauges for the 1978 season. This exemption may be short-lived, however, as a new tederal proposal would eliminate it for 1979.

A lot of misconceptions have arisen concerning the use of steel shot, and while some may have a certain degree of truth, most are exaggerated.

One of the most prevalent complaints is that the harder steel shot will damage shotgun barrets. Early experiments with steel shot resulted in barret damage in the form of scratching or choke expansion to some shotguns. The effects of the changeover should start appearing this year, he says, "Even though there are probably millions of pellets scattered over area marshes, the ones that are most recently deposited," he says, "and we expect reductions in losses due to lead poisoning beginning this year."

Pseudrabies Reviewed Extension Service and the farm

The Nebrasks Swine Health Committee has reaffirmed its support of controlling psuedorables in Nebraska in an action taken at a recent meeting in Lincoin where swine health experts and producers reviewed the spread of the disease in Nebraska and efforts to control it. Extension Service and the farm press. In addition to supporting the principles of pseudorabled control, the committee's resolution supported a continuation of the educational program of the cooperative Extension Service. This educational program on pseudorables has been led by Dr. Alex Hogg, IANR Extension Veterinarian, and Dr. Ahlschwede.

Dr. Clayton Kelling of the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources Veterinary Diagnostic Laboratory, reported that the numbers of samples positive for pseudorabies during the last winter and spring indicate an incidence and distribution of pseudorabies similar to the previous year. Developments and new procedures for lesting also were reported. The committe reviewed the federal pseudorabies gregulations currently being proposed and proposed procedures for controlling the spread of the disease. Dr. Bill Ahlschwede, IANR Extension swine specialist, said committe members indicated that sufficient knowledge of the disease was available for a control program in Nebraska. Ahlschwede said the objectives of a pseudorabies control program would be to slow or stop the spread of the disease, reduce the losses in the infected herds. Fall treatment works best for several reasons. For one, hemp dogbane is more susceptible in fall. At the same time it will also readily take up the herbicide and carry if through-out the root system.

An egg of a species of large mph, a -weight close to 300 fowl new to Nebraska was hatched recently at Game and Parks headquarters in Lincolb, according to latest reports from the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission. Dave Ruhler, who Is the manager for Lincolo Municipal Zoos, contacted Gersib last spring about the possibility of incubating nine eggs that were laid by the park's female ostrich. Of the total, only two eggs proved to be fertile, and one embryo died before hatching. According to Gersib, the ostrich eggs shared an incubator with duck and goose eggs from the Salt Valley Canada goose and wood duck restoration tlocks. Temperature requirements for hatching all birds were similar, but the fire pound ostrich eggs normally require a much lower percent humidity than that required for watertowl.

Zoo officials were willing to take the chance on the high humidity just to self the eggs word of the chance on the high humidity just to self the eggs word of the chance on the high hatchings are not uncommon, but very few, if any have been raised in Nebraska. Ruhter is optimistic abdot the chick's chances of survival, and says it will take at least 3 years before fully grown. The young outrich is on display at Orther Ager Memorial Zoo, according to Publer.

Local Composer Writes"For People"

Editors Note: Antony Garlick is a prolific composer, besides various choral works, plano pieces, and small ensemble pieces, he has just completed the music for his second symphony. Garlick, a nalive of England, studied music in Italy. England, and Canada before becoming a teacher at Wayne State College. He teaches music theory and music history as well as giving organ and plano lessons. He is also nee of the few people in the world who has a pipe organ in their living room. In Italis interview with Wayne Herald reporter Mark Cramer, he talks about his works, and how he feels about the contemporary music scene in general.

What composers do you like?

(Finnish Composer) Sibelius. I think he combined a very clever amount of feeling with 20th century technique. He has many points about his writing that I admire vymuch. This symphony (Garlick's first) is somewhat like that. It's not ''ar out."

bid you stay with the more or less ''traditional' symphonic form?

On yes, it has four movements (sections) that go from fast, slow, sast, slow in tempo. The object of all the writings I do is for people, for students. If I can persuade the student body to play them, well then I have a body of performance. If one tries to write for the Philadelphia Symphony Croselra's they're wasting helr time. because they're not going to waste their time with somebody who hasn't been dead for at least a hundred years. (laughs) sart it quite a chore writing out all the parts for the instruments?

Oh it is, it takes months and months, plus the fact that it you make any mistakes, you have to scrap it all and

It you make any mistakes, you have to start again.
Why did you entitle your first symphony "simple symphony?"
Oh, I suppose because it's just a beginning, something ... Just a Deginning, something not complex as far as forms or development, we you talked with anyone about having this work ned?

performed?

Not really, not yet. I sent it to Minneapolis. There is a sort of a composition contest going on up there, but whether they'll do it or not. I can't say. Obviously they take their time. In a couple of years or so they'll let me know. You say you write in the more fraditional forms, what do you think about the 20th century "Avanti Garde" their time. In a couple of years or so they'il let me know. You say you write in the mofe traditional forms, what do you think about the 20th century "Avant Garde" composers?

They are people who basically don't understand what music is all about. In other words, I think music is first of all for entertainment, enjoyment, at whichever level you happen to find yourself. If you are still at the rock-and-roil or country music level, well, that's one level you can achieve your success of ear, your satisfaction, but there are other levels, other types of music you can listen to as well. The avant garde people aren't alming their music at people, they are alming their music at some sort of mathematical sound cluster, which doesn't appeal to anyone, except perhaps a very small group of disciples. They produce sound any good stage manager could produce. Music like this is used in graduate schools to torture the students. (laughs)

What do you think of popular music?

I think that there are a tew ideas that will withstand time, but in the main, i think the Elvis Presleys of the day will go down as those who, thought they were giving the people what they wanted to hear.

You see popularity, wealth, and fame does not necessatily mean you have made a milestone in music. If you look at history, there have always been "Elvis Presleys." but the Mozarts, Haydens and Schuberts, particularity Mozarl and Schubert (who died paupers). These are the people whose music is being listened to, hundreds of years after they have died. Telemann (a contemporary of BAch) was very popular in his time, but his works aren't played munch today.

Most people don't like orchestral music, they like the small goe groups that play rock, country, soul, and other lypes of popular music.

Yes, that's a shame really that they limit themselves to only that, when there are so many other forms. You see, the radio and T.V. don't hep, They think of themselves a representatives of the people, so, consequentially, they are commercial enterprises. They give the artist. He has a good mixture of both. Then there are movies like "Fantasia" or "2001" that used all that great music. All of a sudden people are saying "I like this" and the music becomes popular. So you see the public is not incapable of enjoying orchestral music.

People like learning new things, and your AM_radio stations won't enlighten them.

What contemporary music do you like?

I sort of admire film composers, I think they're very clever.

Clever You mean people who write movie scores?

You mean people who write movie scores?

Yes. like the fellow who wrote the music for "Star Wars." His writing is very clever. Now his writing is basically lonal, but he uses a lot of modern styles, lad some electronic effects. And of course, the fellow who write the music of "Close Encounters" is a very clever writer too.

There's also a let also.

There's also a lot of good writers on T.V.; like the afternoon thrillers meant for the local housewife, "Edge of Night" and such. Now these, if you don't look at the plot, which is enromously bornously, bernouslis is quite good, which is enromously bornously, bernousling? Allow you ever tried this, like writing for a play or something?

Have you ever tried this, like writing for a play or something?

Not really, because I've never been given the opportunity, no one has ever asked me to do it for them. To get not something like that, you have got to know the right people.

Gustav Mahler (a German composer) once said something to the effect that, "to write a symphony is to write a complete world." Do you agree?

No. I don't have visions before my eyes, or have apparations come to visit me, none of this. I just feel that it's a job I must do and I do it.

It's interesting that you feel that you must write.

Well, I have to write. I teel "well, I've started this thing, I might as well get to the end."

I don't feel people get inspired, just enthusiatic, like when you write a letter, you start out small, then you say, "well of course, I can say this and this, or add this, and I should do this" and the more you get into it the more "inspiration" you pick up.

Richard Strauss ("Also Sparach Zarathustra") said that, "the melody is divinely inspired, and the rest is just darn hard work," and of course, It is.

How long have you been writing?

Forever. (laughs)

Despite President Carter's ambitious undertaking to make the language of proposed bills understandable to us common folk, the bill writers insist upon going to their law dictionaries of big words to lay down a smoke screen. And the sad part of it is, is we're letting them get away with it. The populace has been given a "whitewash" for so long, they accept a lotally technical bill as a matter of lact. If fact, the consensus seems to be the more complicated the wording the better the bill. Wrong!

We feel it's time for fewer bills in common, everyday language designed to be in the best interests of the majority. # Civil Service reform goes away

President Chamber of Commerce
of the United States

WASHINGTON — With the American people firmly of the opinion that federal employees are too numerous and too well-paid now, with illegal publicemployee strikes disrupting life all over the country, and with congresional rejection of the AFL-ClO's "union organizers' act," you might think that giving federal employee unions more power would be the last thing on the minds of your senators and representatives.
You would be wrong.
Civil Service Reform, which started life as a promising youngster, has grown horns and a tail.
President Carter's initial reform proposal looked good, and we said so. His stated objective was for make the bureaucracy more manageable, more efficient, and more responsive to the texpayers.
To do that, he proposed to replace the Civil Service Commission with an Office of Personnel Management and a Merit Systems Protection Board: establish a Senior Executive Service for top-echelon managers; create efficiency-promoting incentives for supervisors: establish better measures of performance, productivity and output; limit veterans preferences; and set up a research program for personnel policy.

Reduced to its simplest terms, the President wanted a means (or: (1) identifying the dead wood: and (2) pruning it out.

The thought of anyone accomplishing such objectives alarm the federal employee unions and their allies, so they have been maneuvering to reverse the effect of the reform legislation.

The union strategy is two phased.

effect of the reform legislation. The union strategy is two-phased. First, they want to make it all but impossible to prune anything. And second, they want to strengthen the pollitical power of the federal unions, to facilitate attainment of their future objectives. (Also, to guard hier rear against the threat of Proposition 13-type economy moves.)

To gain the first union objective, the reform bills in the House (H.R. 1128) and the Senate (S. 264) would create and the Senate (S. 264) would create a Federal Labor Relations Authority, patterned after the National Labor Relations Board. It could be counted on to frustrate any presidential attempts to achieve greater efficiency at the peril of a union sinecure. Both bills would also expand the powers and jurisdiction of the federal employee unions. The House ver-

To gain their second objective, the unions want to repeal the Hatch Act, something they tried — and falled — to do as recently as last year.

The Hatch Act is actually a protection for the federal employee, since it prevents him from being pressured by his superiors to engage in political activity on behalf of the candidates of the party in would allow.

Right now, Hatch Act repeal is a feature of the House bill, but not the Senate's. However, this legislation has undergone so much change in its progress to date that it is risky to guess what it will look like when it finally what it will look like when it finally emerges.

But it we are going to enact laws making our public "servants" self-regulating, and self-perpetuating, then perhaps we should also amend the Constitution to give them titles more in keeping with their station: Holders of rank from 65 7 to 8 would be known as knight (or dame, as appropriate). Those in 65 grades to and 11 would be called baronets. 65 12s, and 13s would be barns, 14s and 15s viscounts, and 16s and above, earls.

This is, after all, the age of truth in labeling:

A lesson about grasshoppers

NEBRASKA FARM BUREAU FEDERATION By M.M. Van Kirk Director of Information

By M.M. Van Nirk
This summer's destructive plague of grasshoppers in Western Nebraska and in other states serves to highlight the dependence of high agricultural production on the wise development and use of agricultural chemicals if the nation's and the world's growing populations are to be adequately fee her plague is a spectacular example of the need for available pesticide controls, but there are many others. Corn rootworm, green bugs, affalfa aphids, Mexican bean beetles, chinch bugs, cotton boil weevils, cattle grubs, etc., etc., pose an endless array or pests that if uncontrolled could easily cut the nation's food and tiber supply by half or more.

Dr. Francis Mulhern, director of the USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection. Service, recently said in an interview about the need for the public to understand the benefits as well as the dangers

In many cases, fear has been injected into the issue, thus eliminating objectivity. The younger generation is being given this "fear" information in the schools. I don't know of any group or individual that is teaching our young people of the benefits derived from chemicals and that they can be used safely. The balance of information just isn't there to my knowledge. How can you change public opinion and tack knowledge? I don't know."

If may be surprising to many people to hear that all of us are far less likely to suffer from toxic exposure-than did our hear that all of us are far this study to suffer from toxic exposure than did our fathers and forefathers. Lead and arse-nate, frequently teatmed in lead arsenate sprays, were applied almost universality as crop protectants until in 1933, a sensa-tional best seller, "100,000 Guinea Pigs," revealed the dangers of lead and arsenic poisoning to the general public. Today, farmers have less hazardous products than lead and arsenic to use against pests and the people of technolo-gically advanced countries are guarded better from accidental poisonings than any others in history. Laboratories are now able to measure contaminants in parts per trillion, and toxicologists have carned to identify potential hazards before new products are released for non-persistence.

House and Senate conferees are pre-sently meeting to resolve differences in bills passed by both houses of Congress to provide some needed changes in the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act to make it more realistic and practical and less subject to whims of the Environmental Protection Agency.

Perhaps the grasshopper plague will dramatize to the general public that there must be continuing development and use of agricultural chemicals to control and prevent such situations from developing, and laws and regulations must be sufficiently flexible to permit it.

Cut taxes or spending?

President Chamber of Commerce
Of the United States
WASHINGTON — We live in interesting times. For years, economic conservafives have opposed lax cuts, saying cuts are not appropriate when the tederal budget is billions of dollars in the red.
Now that the conservatives have dedued tax cuts might help get the pudget budget is billions of dollars in the red. Now that the conservatives have decided tax cuts might help get the budget out of the red. It's the liberals who oppose the cuts. Same grounds, different team. So the conservatives favor cutting taxes and the liberals favor cutting taxes and the liberals favor cutting the deficit. I have two comments about that situation:

First, 1 want to congratulate the liberals for noticing that the size of the federal deficit is a problem.

And second, 1 would like to propose-an obvious compromise; Let's do both. Let's cut taxes and trim tederal spending.

Without substantial cuts, both taxes and government spending can be 'expected to increase by 10 percent to 12 percent in fiscal years 1979 and 4980. For the average family, that means a federal percent in fiscal years 1979 and 4980. For the everage family, that means a federal 19x increase of $700 jn 1979, even if the President Carter's modest "that relief" proposal passes, and a $950 increase if it does not For 1980, the increase would be $1,100.

At the federal level, spenders tend to win and laxpayers to lote. You can see this process in operation with a quick review of some recent history:

In January of this year, the President proposed a 528 billion spending increase and $25 billion in tax relief for fiscal year and $25 billion in tax relief for fiscal year and $25 billion in tax relief for fiscal year and tax of the proposed season and the congress accepted a still-higher $47 billion. By June, both the President upped in the proposed $25 billion in tax relief was trimmed back to $15 billion. Thus, once again, the penders emerge victorious and the tax-payers get the bill. Obbouolty, the news of the laxpayers revolf has not penetrated very far into the Inner councils of Washington.

That deafness in Washington is especially unfortunate, because the federal government is steadily becoming a bigger part of the problem. For example, in both 1918 and 1979, the feds will account for nearly two-thirds of the total annual -tax increase, with states and localities sharing about one-third. And by 1980, the federal share of the increase will have grown even larger.

Drastic slashes are neither necessary nor advisable. What we must do is reverse, the direction of the trend. A moderate, sustained slowdown in the growth of spending and taxes can be accomplished without any reduction in our standard of living and with continued high levels of employment.

creases are limited to the rate of inflation for the next three years (7 percent a year), then the economy would profit from tax relief on the order, of $25 to $30 billion each year.
Indeed, 4 non-third of the tax cut is targeted to stimulate job,creating and capacity-expanding investment, then the following benefits ban be expected by 1981:

following penetris war well of the service of the s

— It is a fact that taxes are higher now than they have ever been, and getting worse.
— It is a fact that the American people demand lower taxes.

The planting of heat tolerant lomato varieties is also a good gardening practice.

Soybeans in Demand

Unprecedent world soybean demand and smaller-than-expected diseed production in some parts of the globe have reduced carryover soybean stocks and caused soybean prices to sear to a "relatively high lovet," according to an institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources specialist.

There is a strong demand for soybeans and soybean products—a demand which has caused saybean prices to rise—because availability of Brazilian soybeans has declined, carryover stock is small and a new crop will not be available until October. This word comes crom of agricultural exonemics at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Strong soybean prices and demands are expected to extend into the 1978-79 marketing year, ne said.

"Producers can expect to see soybeans hold around the current $6 price level through January, although there might be a slight decline during harvest period. After January, the market with depend largely upon what happens to the Brazil soybean availability," Lutgen said.

An estimated 64 million acres of soybeans -including 1,300,000 in Nebraska—have been planted by the nation's farmers this year, Lutgen noted This is a 5 million acre increase over 1977.

"But because the 1978 planting season was wetter than usual and seeding was delayed, the outcome of this year's crop will depend on growing conditions in late July and August." Soybean crop yeild is not known, forecasters still expect a modest increase in U.S. soybean crush—soybeans crushed for meal or oll—and exports during the 1978-79 marketing year, he said. "Increased oil and meal demand, a weak dollar abroad and reduced 1978-crop soybean availabilities out of Brazil are providing the increased trade and reduced trade and reduce

Attends Conference

ANNA BORG, Dixon, is greeted by Roger Sandman, director of the Nebraska Department of Agriculture at the seventh annual Nebraska Agricultural Youth Institute in Lincolin. The week long conference was aimed at keeping Nebraska's young rural leaders involved and interested in agriculture. Gov. J. James Exon highlighted the conference with a keynote address at the State Dinner. The Institute was sponsored by the Nebraska Department of Agriculture and conducted in cooperation with the Nebraska Agricultural Youth council.

Agriculture, Energy and the Economy.

No two ways about it. Agriculture is the heart of Nebraska's economy. Hard working farmers and ranchers have helped to make our state a worldwide giant in agriculture, but they had some help putting Nebraska in its position of leadership. Not to be overlooked is the far-sighted planning done by the utilities to meet their electrical needs.

What does electricity have to do with agriculture? Plenty. Your Nebraska Public Power District believes agriculture and energy go hand in hand. For without electricity, today's modern methods of farming would be impossible.

Nebraska's agriculture depends on electricity for irrigation, grain handling, drying and feeding-almost everything you do on your farm or ranch. And in the years to come, demand for electricity will continue to increase. NPPD is ready to meet your needs without getting in your way. Agriculture, electricity and the economy. In Nebraska they all go together to give us the good life.

On the retail side, the cumulative rise in retail pork prices during 1978 over 1977 will probably be 12 to 13 percent, Wellman said, with a 14 percent boost registered during the first half of this year.

A virtual plateau in pork production during 1978 has flattened out prices for slaughter hogs at seven major markets, the University of Nebraska-Lincoln economist commented.
