Being Grown for Pickles

'Cool Cucumber Caper'

The" cool cucumber caper" is paying off but it's proving to be hot, hard work for Wayne County area families. A number of area families this summer are tending cucumber patches, ranging from a three-acre crop to a small garden plot. The cucumbers are being grown commercially to be used as pickles. Heading up this new agriculture effort is the Herman Luschen famility, who five southeast of Wayne. Some 30 other families are involved in the cooperative money-making effort.

This is the fourth year of growing cucumbers for pickles by the Luschen family. Thought for Today

By Brian McBride

Life is made up of countless "journeys." Not all are geographical; most, in fact, are philosophical. Before we can accomplish anything, we must take that all important first step. Nothing can get done until it has been started. Many good intentions have come to nothing solely because it was too easy to put off that single step that gets things started. For many of us, few things seem as difficult as that simple first step which could put us on the road to success.

You can be sure your wishes will be followed by making arrangements well in advance of need. We will be happy to explain the advantages. No obligation, call today.

Two Thousand White Amur to Be Studied This Month

Three thousand white amur fingerlings were imported to Nebraska this month from Arkansas, for the experiments in the control of aquatic vestation in Nebraska water vestation in Nebraska water. The White Amur, also called 'grass' carp,' has received a considerable amount of publicity, both good and bad. For the most part, the controversies or arising over introductions of grassical phave been emotional, in comparing the species with the common carp as an undestrable end of control phase in the common carp as an undestrable in the common however, the only if it is the common however, the only if it is in the species of the common carp is so carp and the common carp is so carp and the common carp is so commission. Which has shudled grass carp for 15 years, fost in fact, found no undestrable traits in the habits of the fish.

The fraits which give the common carp the ability to become a pest in some areas are, primarily. Its ability to spawn anywhere, its adaptations to muddly water (and for rooting which muddles the water) its general competition with our native fishes.

that grass carp do not root the bottoms of lakes, as do common carp, but feed on vegetation in open water. The white amur is a native of those rivers of Siberia, Manchuria, and China white runs onto the Pacific Ocean. It has been successfully introduced into a number of countries of Southeast Asia, and in Eastern Europe for the purpose of weed control and human food. The grass carp may be rated as one of the fastest swimming and strongest freshwater fish in the United States.

you harvest what you sow... Energy Planning works the same way.

In Agriculture,

How many acres you plant...what you plant and how you harvest it. You'd be stuck if you didn't plan

We have to plan, too. Because you, and the people who are customers for your products need more electricity every year. Chances are we both plan in the same way. We both want to conserve and do the best job with what we have. But we also don't want to come up short of a vital ingredient when we need more of it. Like producing electricity and getting it to you when you need it.

For us, this demands years of advance planningand a lot of understanding from you. We want you to have all the electricity you need and we want you to use what you need wisely. Most of all, we want your understanding. Because the planning and construction we must do for the future affects not only you but the more than 760,000 people we serve on the farms and in the cities throughout Nebraska. Thanks

EXTENSION NOTES

Shriveling may result from using too strong a vinegar, sugar, or sall solution at the shart of the pickling process. If very sweet or very sour pickles are decired, it is best to begin with a distale solution and gradually increase to the desired strength Overcooking or overprocessing also may cause shriveling.

Soft or slippery pickles usually Soft or stippery pickles usually result from microbial action which causes spoilage. Microbial action may be caused by too little saft or acid, insufficient heat treatment, moldy garlic or spices or a jar not being sealed airtight.

It may also be caused by not completely covering the cucum bers with brine during fermention or having scum scattered throughout the brine during fermentation. Always remove cusumber blossoms completely before fermentation, otherwise they may contain fungl or yeasts responsible for genzymatic softening of pickles.

Darkness in pickies may be caused by using iodized sall, using around spices, too many spices or overcooking. Minerals in water especially from or the use of iron utensits can also cause dark pickles.

Dull or taded pickles indicate the cucumber was over ripe when picked, was sunburned, or was a poor quality cucumber from the start.

Hollow pickles are usually a result of poorly developed pickles holding cucumbers too long before pickling, too rapid a fermentation, or the brine being loo strong or too weak.

White sediment in the bottom of the jar is not harmful. It is the result of not using pickling or canning saft, the temperature not being controlled, or from hacteria forming during fermentation, which as the sure to use pure canning or pickling salt for all canning and pickling. Check your vinegar bottle tabel for the activity level.

should be 4-6 percent. Also

It should be 46 percent. Also check the label to see if you are to dilute it or use as is. Processing using the boiling water bath method is recommended for all pickle products to assure a good seal. Start counting the processing time of fermented cucumbers and fresh pack dills as soon as filled jars are placed in actively boiling water. This will prevent development of a cooked flavor and loss of liquid.

For other pickles start counting the time as soon as water returns to boiling. Using standard jars, a boiling, Using standard jars, a boiling, better it illed also helps assure a good sealed product.

WEEKEND

Wet Basement

Preventable

The Wayne (Nebr.) Herald 11

Hot, muggy Nebraska weather can lead to damp, humid base-ments. This can make it uncom-fortable in a basement, as well as provide an ideal place for mildew to grow. According to Jerry Bodman, Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources Extension looking for the source of the problem. Homeowners should first make certain there is good drainage around the outside of the house. The test is to see if any puddles are standing next to the house. After a ratin. In addition, soil should slope away from the house and downspouts should normally be extended five feet from the foundation, and as much as 10 to 15 feet in heavy clay soil since this holds moisture longer than sandy soil does.

Natural Resources Extension agricultural engineer, damp basements are a-common protiem in many parts of the state. Before attacking the symptom by investing in a dehumidifier, however, he recommenda looking for the source of the problem.

Another common cause of excess humidity in an airconditioned basement is an airconditioner which is much larger than then home requires, when the unit is turn on, it chills the air and then shuts off again before it's had an opportunity to adequately dehumidity the air."

evously denumidity the air," he explains.

A vented dryer in the basement, an aquarium, a shower or even a lot of green plants also can add excess molsture to the air, Bodman notes.

If none of these factors is contributing to basement moisture and the problem is strictly one of uncontrolled moisture moving in from the ground, Bodman suggests other methods of attack.

For non-air-conditioned base-ments, the least expensive solu-tion is to use windows and doors to good advantage. Keep win-dows and doors closed during the hottest, mugglest hours of the day, then open them when outside temperatures cool down at hight. outside t at night.

After a rainstrom, when cooler, drier air is blowing, atso is a good time to open windows and let air circulate in basements.

Best results are achieved when doors and windows are opened on opposite sides of rooms to create an air flow, he adds.

A dehumidifer is another way to solve basement moisture problems. To make certain it's working at optimum potential, though, keep the door to the upstairs closed at all firms. If upstairs closed at all firms. If upstairs air can circulate to the basement, the dehumidifer will have to work twice as hard and won't operate as efficiently.

Also, if the dehumidifier drains moisture into a pan, Bod-man advises emptying the pan man advises emptying me per often. Or, position the dehumidi fier over a drain or attach a hose that leads to a drain.

Fees for diagonstic services

CAPITOL NEWS
By Malvin Paul
Statishouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association LINCOLIN—Beginning Sept. 1, the waterinary diagnostic laboratories of the institute of Apriculture and Natural Resources will charge fees for diagnostic service.
The reason is that the University of Nebraska Board of Regents stipulated last spring that fees must be charged.
Dr. Earl Dickinson, head of the department, said the fee schedule will cover most tests performed by the laboratories.
An exception until Sept. 1, 1979, will cover
most tests performed by the laboratories.

special requests."
There is another provision specifying to be interpreted as a "de-emphasis on law enforcement."

He said the agents were told to visit establishments where problems might have been occurring to advise the license holders how to avoid the problems. That's a better approach, he said, then having the Inspectors sit outside waiting for violations to occur and then citting the licensees.

Under policy Thanges Micek recommended was one stating agents could utilize lengthy stakeous of liquor establishments only as a last resort.
At this writing, Micek was also proposing the elimination of the position of administrator of field activities, including law.enforcement. He said the 5 percent spending increase limit the governor has mandated for all agencies means the commission is going to have to cut back on some of its activities.

Income is Up State Tax Commissioner Wijliam Peters reported preliminary sales tax figures for May indicated a growth rate of 7.6 percent over the same month last year.

Peters said fiscal year-to-date growth was 17 percent. The comparable growth rate for May of last year was 5 percent.
Individual income tax revenues in May rose 12.6 percent, down for the 16.1 percent during the same month a year cariller.

Corporate income tax revenue in May rose an estimated 9.3 percent, and total miscellaneous, general, fund faxes generated an estimated increase of more than 9 percent the tax commissioner said. The individual income tax revenue of $10.3 million was almost $1 million more than was paid into the state treasury during the same month in 1977.

The miscellaneous tax receipts totaled about $1.6 million more this May than a

Reasonable Effort Required
The state Justice Department has issued an opinion saying employers have to make reasonable attempts to accommodate the religious beliefs and practices of employees but do not have to assume under her arigious beliefs and practices of employees but do not have to assume under herashaps?" to do so.
The opinion was requested by Lawreice R. Myers, asceutive director of the Nebraska Equal Opportunity commission with which a complaint had been filled by a woman whose employer would not give a woman whose employer would not give needed the time away from her job in anarting the state of the second three the time away from her job in anarting the second of the employee had been advised she could her employee had been advised she could her employee had been advised she could her which she would have the opportunity on her job.
Instead, she immediately filed a complaint with the state Equal Opportunity Commission.

The attorney general's office noted Nebraska courts had not addressed the specific questions posed by the case. But the opinion said the federal courts had and ruled in a similar action in another state that employers must make reasonable efforts to accommodate the religious beliefs of workers but not at the cast of undes burdens. The attorney general's office said the employer in the Nebraska case hee made sufficient afforts to take care of the woman's dilemma and that the nursing home could not be held (sailly responsible of any wrongdoing.

Rollbacks Approved
The State Board of Equalization has given 3-2 approval to rolling back property valuations in 39 counties and to raising them in 14 in an effort to achieve statewide equalization.

statewide equalization.
Voting with the majority were Gov.
J.J. Exon. State Tax Commissioner WilHam Peters and State Audroff Ray A.C.
Johnson. Secretary of State Allen Beermann and State Treasurer Frank Marsh voted in opposition to the proposal.
The board rejected on a 32 vote a suggestion by Beermann that 32 countiles be leff with veluations that were tentatively agreed to by the board during an sariller meeting.

Bearmann also wented to increase values in 61 counties, arguing earlier proposed adjustments were incomplete because 35 counties had failed to make or use recent apprecials or reepprecials as required by law.

But Exon responded the "Critical matter" facing the board was fairness and equity for the taxpayers. He also noted most county spokemen at valuation hearings agreed with what the board proposed to do.

Peters did receive approval to have Brown. Cheyenne, Kimball and Otoe counties removed from the list of 43 for which rollbacks had been approved several weeks earlier.

Representatives of those four counties had uriged the board not to tamper with their valuations because they felf actions they had taken in arriving at their values would help them achieve equalization with surrounding counties.

Otoe County had tentatively been give a 17-6 percent reduction. Chevenne County had been decreased 15-6 percent, and Kimball and Brown counties 30 percent.

OBSERVATIONS

Why Norfolk?

We offer congratulations to Norfolk for being selected as a site for a new Goodyear Rubber company plant.

This is said with a tinge of jealousy as we would have liked Wayne to be the site of the new plant which is expected to hire some 230 employees.

But what is good for Norfolk is good for he entire area. Wayne and the Wayne-land area will benefit from the jishnott' from the plant in that if will be another job market which can be explored by Wayne's workforce.

We will be the first to admit we don't like to see our people go to another community to work. We would much rather see them employed right here in Wayne and if things go right, there is a strong possibility they may have an opportunity to secure a job locally.

There are other side benefits to be gained from the announcement of the explant, One of the most important is the answer as to "why" Goodyear decided to place their plant in Norfolk.

The answer is relatively simple: The nile Norfolk, congrantly, hed-at-"all together" when it came to presenting the community as a possible plant site.

A top-ranking Goodyear official said the entitusiasm and cooperation of Norfolk leaders and the industrial commissions of Madison Country and the State of Nebraska were instrumental in Goodyear's decision to locate its new plant in missions of Madison County and the state of Nebraska were instrumental in Good-year's decision to locate its new plant in Norfolk.

John H. Gerstenmaler, Goodyear's vice president and chief operating officer, said that a Goodyear evaluation team seeking a plant site had surveyed a number of Midwest communities before deciding on Norfolk.

"The city's excellent industrial atmosphere and the efforts of your leaders convinced us that the people of Norfolk mellow work and take pride in accomplish ments." Gerstemnater stated when the plant site was announced Friday. "This important point, we believe, is that the attitude of the people who live and mork in Norfolk was as equally important as the other aspects considered in making the decision. While a small number of persons are directly involved in bringing industry into community have an important of play in the play in the play in the prospective industry.

a community, the residents of the community have an important role to play in helping to land the prospective industry. Wayne residents should make their own evaluation of the community and decide for themselves why industry should tocare in Wayne. If their decision is what we hope it will be, the chances of borthoping new industry line wayne greatly enhanced.

If the residents of Wayne are convinced that Wayne is the best place possible for certain types of industries, they should make their decision known so that when a "stranger." who might be a member of an evaluation team, asks about the Wayne community, the answer will be positive. And that positive arithude may be just thig thing to light be scales in favor of Wayne. — Chuck Barnes.

The Law was written to guarantee that rain species, in danger of extinction, be protected. The concern was for such things as the proud symbol of America, the bald eagle, and the rapidly disappearing, whooping crane. Who could argue with such a lotty goal?

But just to make certain, Congress closed some loopholes. Swepring powers were legislated to protect all species in danger of extinction in the plant and animal kingdoms. That includes "without limitation any mammal, issh, bird.

When the current act was passed in 1973, $10 million a year was budgeted to run the program Sy this year, the figure of species listed as endangered to increased dramatically. By the first week in July 1978, there were $31 endangered species, with another 190 under consideration. More than 1,800 endangered plants and also been tisted. Fifty three species had made it to the threatened list. The law is all inclusive. The snall darters of Tennessee won their case because their habitat was threatened. They could not swim back upstream through the flood gates of the new Tellico. Dam to their normal spawning grounds. The Supreme Court ruled their man fellico. Dam to their normal spawning grounds. The Supreme Court ruled their man prot be closed unless Congress rewrites the basic law or orders an exemption.

In determination whether an area is a critical habitat, government sclemitist are to consider only the needs of the species, not the effect that federal intervention might have on the human population or the economy. In a case in Houston Texas, some sections of the city have been declared a critical habitat because the rare Houston toad may still five in the area. This means that federal funding for construction of highways through the area is cut off, and even Federal Housing Administration loans for homes in the area will be denied. The powerful, law, written by Congress in a mood of crists, is now being revised after 5 years of enforcement, to make it more workable and realistic. It serves as a classic example of the absurdities which can and do develop frequently from alt-inclusive legislation and regulatory powers backed by zealofs who feel that government must provide the enswers to all things.

Phony tax cuts

President Chamber of Commerce
Of the United States
WASHINGTON — There's one very important point to keep in mind white valuating the tax-cutting performance of your representatives in Congress: Inflation is raising your laxes automatically at the rate of $35 billion a year (equivalent to $600 a year for the average American family).
Inflation raises your tax bill in two ways. First, inflation is liself a kind of tax, arising primarily as a consequence of excessive federal deficits and other federal policies. And second, inflation causes dollar income to rise, while purchasing power stays the same. Thus, you wind up-in a higher income tax bracket without having the higher standard of fiving that should go with it.
It you deduct the effects of this automatic tax escalator—which Congress understands very well—then the "generous" tax cuts Congress is talking about ont seen so generous at all. In fact, allowing for inflation and next years higher Social Security tax, the $16 billion cut passed by the House of Representatives wouldn't be enough to keep us even. What we need are federal fax cuts on the rader of $25 to $30 billion, plus spending limits.

The spending limits are essential. If limits. The spending limits are essential. If Congress can't manage to live within a budget, then tax relief alone would increase the federal deficit enough to cause still more inflation. Some federal politicians really don't want to slow the double-digit growth of your tax bill because that would give them less money for buying votes. What they want is to pass enough tax relief to make you think you're getting something, without damaging the automatic escalator that will let them repeat the whole process before the next election. It's a neat system. They get the credit for tax relief and avoid the blame for tax increases.

But the worst is yet to come. It upsets the liberals to know that you still think you're entitled to some of your own money, so they are busy devising theories to correct that problem.

These theories are built on a concept called the "fax expenditure." What it means is this: "When the government decides not to take some of your money, it has, in effect, decided to "spend" that money on you. Such generosity is known as a lax expenditure.

money on you. Such generosity is known as a tax expenditure.
Underlying the tax expenditure theory is an unspoken assumption that all money belongs to the government and that each citizen must therefore justify what he is allowed to keep.
An interesting attempt to institutionalize this philosophy is currently underway in the Senate. Senator Glenn has announced plans to amend 5. 2, the Program Evaluation Act of 1977, to bring tax expenditures (deductions, credits, exemptions, etc.) under the sunset pro-visions of that Act.
Sunset laws are a good thing. They exemptions, etc.) under the sunset provisions of that Act.

Sunset laws are a good thing. They provide for periodic review and possible termination of government programs, so that programs die a natural death if a good case cannot be made for renewing them. We have long supported, the concept in general and we support 5. 2 in particular.
But the Glenn amendment is a clever perversion of sunset principle. Whereas a normal sunset law eliminates claims on the taxpayers' money when those claims become indefensible, under the Glenn amendment, the process would be reversed: Taxes would go up 'unless the taxpayer could show that they should remain where they are: How convenient for our legislators. Once again, and in yet another way, they would be spared the distastful taxe of volting openly for higher taxes, while fully enjoying the proceeds.

Reminds me of that old Q&A routine about the difference between a fax collector and a faxidermist. The difference is, the taxidermist leaves the nide.

View pro-management

Dear Editor:
I feel the need to express a slightly districted view point from the editorial by R.L. Lesher in your August 10, 1978 edition.
Mr. Lesher's article was totally promanagement and anti-labor union and management and anti-labor union and federal employee. The federal employees need a Federal Labor Relations Authority and a reform of the Hatch Act. Federal employees need not be second-class citizens. There is no real reason why we should not enjoy the same political rights as every other citizen.

clitizen. There is no real reason why the federal employee should not be able to bargain for rights the same as any other block of employees in the United States. Why should we be humbled into the position of going "hat-in-hand" to beg for

Why should we be humbled into the position of going "hat-in-hand" to beg for a reasonable cost-of-living raise to the President and the Congress each year? Again this year, we are being told to "set an example" and to "flight inflation" by accepting a very small cost-of-living raise, while private industry asks for and gets the larger inflationary cost-of-living raises. And we have to accept what we can get or go back to that private industry. And there are federal employees taking that route back to a more reasonable standard of living for their families.

Mr. Leisher seems to scorn the dedicated public "servants" and makes jests about giving them titles in keeping with their stations. How many "dames" or "knights" so you know? How many live right here in Wayne? Just whom is Mr. Leisher discussing? Perhaps some of your neighbors. Do you consider them "dead wood in need of pruning?"

This "dame" is proud of her position as federal employee and the title of 2nd vicepresident of local 771. AFGE.

Nebraska schools for the first time in 1977 78, are doing better on an average than the average of all WSC teaching graduates between 1974-78, according to Deryl Lawrence of the WSC career planning and placement services office.

A WSC survey of school super intendents, principals and other supervisors from 82 school districts in nine states, indicates that although WSC graduates of other years were rated high, recent graduates now teaching show better "Initialive and resourcefuless."

The new teachers screed 3.2 (on a 4 point scale) in that area, compared to a file-year average.

"These ratings of first-year teacher performance were made by school supervisors, not us," Lawrence said. "It would be interesting to compare our figures with other colleges nationally, but I don't know of any other schools that do this type of study."
Lawrence said the survey received a .high response to a variety of performance related questions. Over 94 percent of those surveyed refurned the questionalizer. Results of the survey, when compared to similar WSC surveys over the past 20 years, show WSC graduates scoring well. "I think the high response rate reflects the fact that school officials are concerned with having quality teachers," Lawrence aid. "They know that one way to help achieve that is to provide feed back" to Wayne State." Survey, responses rated first year WSC graduates high in "Attitude Toward Out-Octass Duties." The new teachers received an average of 3.0, .11 above the 3.19 overall-average received by teaching graduates between 1974-78.

Other above average ratings were received for "Discipline," Oh to 3.03 and "Loyalty-Cooperation," up. 30 to 3.34. Other averages based on survey responses include a 3.04 for "Personal Grooming", a 235 for "New off Grooming", a 235 for "New off Grooming", a 235 for "New off Grooming", a 235 for "Msowledge of Subject Matter" and 3.29 for "Purcusality," Lawrence said he thinks the increases reflect a "greater commitment for the deaching career one to the survey responses."
