Reeg Wins Seventh Consecutive Title

Perennial golfing champion Bob Reeg added another trophy to his show case by firing a 113 to capture the championship of the club tournament at the Wayne County Club, Sunday. It was Reeg's seventh consecutive club title.

When asked if it gets old to win the title seven times, Reeg replied, "It never gets old." Reeg was challenged most closely by Sid Hillier, who finished two strokes back at 115. Ron Dalton claimed third place with a 116 and had a hole-in-one on the eighth hole to help pace him. Darrel Fuelberth finished fourth with a 118.

Reeg's hole-in-one was recorded on the eighth hole when he hit a four iron off the tee box and after searching for his ball, found it in the cup. This was the second hole-in-one in less than a week. Harold Schroeder aced number three on the previous Wednesday night.

With a 76, Reeg held a slim one stroke lead over Hillier after 18 holes but shot a 37 on the final nine to edge him for the championship.

Pests Fight Pests

Insect pests cause a heap of trouble — destroying crops and carrying disease. But the chemical poisons used to kill them can be just as harmful — to the air, the water, and to people.

There is a safer, more natural way to control insects, according to a new publication from the National Wildlife Federation. "Fighting Pests With Pests" — available free for the first copy and 20 cents for each additional copy — is designed to show children why more and more farmers in the United States are using the natural enemies of pests, instead of harmful chemicals, to help protect their crops.

"pest management" and relies on the "three P's" — insect predators, parasites, and pathogens. "Someday, pest management may make most poisons unnecessary," the eight-page illustrated pamphlet suggests.

Included in the National Wildlife publication is a chart that lists 34 common insects pests and natural ways to control them. For example, chinch bugs can be kept away from corn by planting soybeans nearby as a "trap plant."

To order copies of "Fighting Pests With Pests" write the National Wildlife Federation, Dept. FW, 1412 16th Street, NW, Washington, D.C. 20036.

 A lot of people are really going places in comfort and safety without using up a lot of expensive gasoline. They're going by motorcycle.

Motorcycles come in a wide variety of styles these days, including comfortable street cycles that can travel the roads to work, school or shopping during the week, and then take you off to the woods and trails on weekends, almost as if you're getting two bikes for the price of one.

Many people have found that getting around on a motorcycle is not only a great deal of fun, it's also a great deal.

Thought for Today

"The highest genius is the ability and willingness to do hard work."

H.S. MacArthur

The term "genius" brings visions of an incredibly talented individual who finds immediate answers to problems that have plagued mankind for ages. Actual geniuses have a different idea.

Thomas Edison, a genius by any standard, said his "genius" was "one percent inspiration and 99 percent perspiration." Any genius who is remembered for great accomplishments had not only a brilliant intellect but also the ability and willingness to work hard.

Wayne-Laurel Tennis May Pave Way For Future Meets

The Wayne Recreation tennis players competed against Laurel for the second time this summer in a meet at the college courts, Monday.

In the lone girls match, Kathy Swanson of Wayne defeated Lori Lindsey 10-6. Nick Zimmer shutout Tod Heitman 6-0, 4-0 and brother Keith Zimmer stopped Paul Lofquist 10-5.

Scott Brown defeated Troy Heitman, 6-2, 4-0. Layne Marsh shutout Jeff Saum 6-0, 6-0, and beat Tod Heitman 10-2, and Tom Perry edged Mike Granquist 10-7 and Jeff Saum 10-8 in other action.

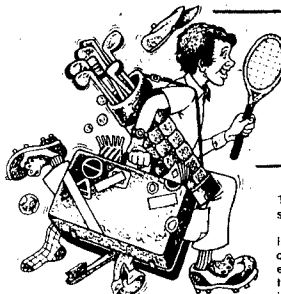

Laurel winners were Mike Granquist over Steve Keck 10-3 and Paul Lofquist over Glenn Elliott 10-1.

Players were permitted to choose either a best of three sets series or a pro set. Coordinator Tom Roberts was especially pleased with the play of Tom Perry who made his season debut.

Roberts said he hopes to schedule more meets with other area towns next year to give the players experience at tennis matches.

BODY ENGLISH does help and Steve Keck adds a little of that to his forehead in a tennis match against a Laurel opponent.

Randy's RECAP

According to Randy Hascall

This probably brings back memories to some readers.

In the article, Stull said that an athlete is fighting a lot of things by just walking on. He said that he had to fight preferences and coaching bias to make the team. Stull was the second leading hitter in fall practice but got cut from the spring practice team because the coach told him that certain people "had to play."

Stull didn't give up on the uphill battle against favoritism and is trying to make the coaches admit that they overlooked somebody during their scouting. He said, "There's a lot of cut through — I just want a chance."

AFTER READING the Stull article, I can realize what some of the walk-ons at other colleges must go through. With all the football players trying out at Nebraska University, I imagine some of the walk-ons must be overlooked, although many make the varsity team.

THE NEBRASKA CHAPTER of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, is sponsoring an 18 hole golf exhibition at the Applewood Golf Course in Omaha, Sunday, Sept. 10.

Mark Dorcay, executive director of the foundation, dropped by the Wayne Herald office this week with some information on the exhibition. Professional golfer, Gary Player will present a clinic at 12:30 p.m. Sunday and will then play an 18 hole exhibition on the Applewood Golf Course.

A reception is scheduled from 7:30-9 p.m. at the Old Mill Holiday Inn. Gallery tickets are $10 each and are available at all Brandeis ticket outlets and the Wayne Country Club pro shop.

THE ZIMMER BROTHERS, Nick and Keith, will travel to Kansas City to play in the Mr. Peanut Target Tennis competition Saturday. The pair had their pick of the regional tournament in Minneapolis or the one in Kansas City and chose KC.

You will be able to read about their experience in Kansas City in a Wayne Herald article after they return.

SOMEWHERE, SOMETIME, SOMEONE said that good things come in pairs. I don't think golfers Harold Schroeder and Ron Dalton could agree more. You may remember reading in my column about Schroeder recording a hole-in-one at the Wednesday night league play last week. This week, it was Dalton's turn.

On the eighth hole of the Wayne Club Tournament Sunday, Dalton teed off with a four iron and knew he hit a good shot. As his foursome approached the green, they couldn't see the ball on the putting surface.

They searched in front of the green and then behind it but had no luck. Finally, one of the golfers saw a ball mark on the green in front of the hole and they decided to check the cup.

Sure enough, the ball rested in the cup for an ace. The only setback for Dalton was that he had to buy drinks for a lot of people, just as Schroeder had to do the previous week. That's the price you have to pay for success.

THE LAUREL TOWN TEAM defeated the Norfolk Royals 7-4 Friday in the first game of a two-out-of-three series. The second game of the playoffs was scheduled for Wednesday evening at Laurel.

EXAMINING NEW MEDICAL EQUIPMENT are people who will use it, and those who bought it. They are (left to right) Sister Salvina, Louise Jenness, the cardiac monitor, the spectrophotometer, Auxiliary President Mrs. Robert Benhack, Treasurer Mrs. Wilmar Marra, and Technician Corrine Maltson.

Part of Program

Providence Auxiliary
Purchases Equipment

The Providence Medical Center Auxiliary recently brought two new pieces of equipment for the Providence Medical Center. Through money raised by the auxiliary's gift shop, color T.V. rental, and annual bazaar, they purchased a cardiac monitor, and a spectrophotometer. Auxiliary president, Mrs. Robert Benhack, said the cardiac monitor costs $3,610 and the spectrophotometer, $6,714.80. Head Nurse, Louise Jenness, explained that the cardiac monitor is a portable unit used to keep track of a patient's heart rate during surgery. The spectrophotometer is a bit more complicated. Lab Technician, Corrine Maltson, said that the machine consists of two parts, an analyzer and a print out unit. The analyzer is used to determine chemical substances found in the blood, and the print out gives the results of the analysis.

She added that having a machine like this at the medical center will permit doctors to diagnose some diseases three days earlier than they could previously. "Now they won't have to send samples all the way down to Omaha," she said. Mrs. Benhack said the auxiliary is planning to buy more equipment in the future, and that Mrs. Jenness already has made up a list of future needs.

Nixon Tops Froeschle In Closest Contest

Just as Nixon edged out Cole Froeschle in a sudden death playoff to win the boys 11-13 year old division at the Kiwanis Junior Golf Tournament, Monday.

In the most even match up of the tournament, Froeschle and Nixon were tied at 45 after nine holes. Nixon claimed first place with a bogey five on the first hole to nip Froeschle by one stroke.

Doug Rose shot a 44 for the low round on the day and won the 14-15 age division. Jess Zeiss, age 7, captured the first place trophy in the 10 and under age group by shooting a 74 for nine holes. Kelly Ditman won the girls division with a 112.

Rowan Wittke, tournament director, said he was pleased with the turnout and, considering the tournament was played late in the year, the tournament is scheduled for the first week in August next year. "We've doubled the number of little kids (10 years and under) playing from last year and that's what this tournament is all about," Wittke said. "The whole idea is to give kids a chance to play in a tournament like the adults do."

The Southern part of the state carried the blint of hot weather during July. Beaver City, for example, had 17 days when temperatures were 100 degrees or higher.
The average daily maximum temperature in the Waynland region was 87.1 degrees with the average daily minimum approximately 62.5 degrees.
The average temperature for the month for the region was about 75 degrees which was just less than one percent lower than normal for the month of July.
The lowest nighttime readings came on July 10 when 49 percent were recorded and July 23 the temperatures dropped to 33 degrees.
Precipitation for the month was about five inches which represented about two inches above normal.
The month of August has cooperated with area farmers with hot weather and precipitation.

Potato Water Buns

1 cake Yeast
1 quart Lukewarm Potato Water
1/2 cup Sugar
1 teaspoon Salt (good measure)
1/2 cup Sweet Cream (or butter)
Flour

Soak yeast in lukewarm potato water at noon.

In the evening, add sugar, salt and sweet cream. Before retiring, add flour to make soft sponge, and let rise in a warm place overnight.

In the morning, add enough flour to handle well (about as soft as biscuit dough). Let rise very light. Then put on a floured bread board and roll out to 1-inch thickness. Cut with biscuit cutter, greasing the pan and between the buns and on top. Let rise very light and bake 15 to 20 minutes in a fairly hot oven. Makes about 30 buns.

For making rolls: Add 1 egg to the sugar and cream (or butter). When ready to roll, spread out to 1/2-inch thickness and spread butter, sugar, cinnamon and raisins on if preferred. Roll as a jelly roll. Cut off slices and let rise until light. Bake in a 350 degree oven for 15 to 20 minutes or until a very light brown. These are good.

Sees Increase In Dairy Prices

Current low commercial dairy inventories, weakening milk production and strong dairy demands indicate wholesale dairy prices and farm milk prices will rise above government price support levels this summer and further seasonal rises are likely this fall, according to an Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources specialist.

Milk and dairy sales rose more than 4 percent — equivalent to two million pounds of milk — during the first five months of 1978, said Dr. Michael Turner, professor of agricultural economics at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. The nation's farmers earned an average of $10.10 per 100 pounds of milk in July (Nebraska producers received approximately $9.80 during the same period in comparison with $8.95 in July 1977) up over 4 percent from a year ago, he said.

With the expected rise in farm milk prices and higher marketing costs, the seasonal rise in retail prices this summer and fall probably will be substantial, he said. For all of 1978, retail dairy prices will likely average 5 to 7 percent above last year.

Strong gains in cheese and butter sales and small increases in milk sales have led to the overall gains, Turner explained. With a brisk commercial demand for American cheese and a merely adequate commercial butter stock, the demand for dairy produce will add to wholesale price strength this summer, Turner noted.

However, potential butter price advances will be limited due to the availability of large U.S. Department of Agriculture stocks of butter at 110 percent of the support purchase price, Turner said.

Although income conditions for dairymen have remained favorable, milk production has declined considerably since last fall, he said, which may indicate a slight downward readjustment after the sharp boost in production during the preceding two years. "Milk production is expected to stabilize at a level below last year's accelerating output, and the 1978 total may be about 1 percent below 1977's 123 billion pounds."

Spring milk output declines could have resulted from sharpened declines in milk cow numbers and almost no increase in output per cow, he said. "The reduction in cows has been more

Computerized Farming Still Seems Unlikely

Extensive use of mini-computers — private, desktop sized computers — by Nebraska farmers seems unlikely, at least for the present, according to three University of Nebraska Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources (IANR) staff members.

Primarily responsible for the less-than-encouraging prospects are the INAR Agriculture Computer Network (AGNET) and the shortage of farm-use software, or programs, for the mini-computers, said Dr. Wilfred Schutz, Dr. Thomas Thompson and Douglas Ducey.

"There's very little use of mini-computers at this point in Nebraska because of AGNET," said Schutz, head of the IANR Biometrics and Information Systems Center. With AGNET, farmers can have access to a computer to help with management decisions without owning, renting or leasing their own mini-computer.

AGNET, developed by Drs. Thompson and James Kendrick, is a unique system designed for use by persons with no previous computer experience. By typing in a single word on one of AGNET's typewriter-like terminals — there is one in most Nebraska County Extension offices — a farmer or county agent can have access to one of a number of management programs.

The computer then leads the user through the selected program, asking questions concerning his farming operation. For instance, on the least cost ration analysis program (FEEDMIX), the computer would ask what type of animals are to be fed, what feeds are available and at what costs.

Then the computer calculates and prints out the most economical ration that meets the necessary nutritional needs, and a cost analysis showing when other feedstuffs would be used if their prices drop.

The biggest advantages of AGNET over mini-computers are this simple, easy-to-use format and the many, up-to-date programs available, said Thompson, one of the AGNET co-leaders.

The lack of commercially available software for farm use inhibits the use of mini-computers. Without the software, "the farmer is going to have to be a computer programmer and operator," Thompson explained. Another hitch is that if the farmer should have trouble programming his computer, help is hard to obtain.

This is in contrast to a HELP option available in AGNET. If the user doesn't understand one of AGNET's questions, he types "HELP" and the computer responds with explanations and

Strong Price Strength Seen for Beef

LINCOLN — A continued decline in beef slaughter and beef production for several more years, accompanied by strong live cattle prices and somewhat higher beef prices to consumers has been predicted.

That's the analysis gained by studying the U.S. Department of Agriculture's July cattle inventory, which had some significant news for beef producers, an Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources Extension economist said this week.

Dr. Al Wellman said the July report showed total U.S. cattle numbers were down as expected, but beef cow numbers and beef replacement numbers were down more than expected.

The cattle inventory for Nebraska as of July 1 was estimated at 6.8 million, down 3 percent from a year earlier. Beef cows were put at 1.96 million, down 5 percent from 1977.

Some of the significant cattle figures at the national level: — Total U.S. cattle and calves estimated at 121.6 million, down 7 percent from a year earlier and 13 percent below the peak of July 1, 1975.

— U.S. beef cows estimated at 37.6 million, down 9 percent from a year earlier and 20 percent below July 1, 1975.

— Beef replacement heifers, down 8 percent from the 1977 figure.

— U.S. calf crop down 4 percent from a year earlier.

— U.S. milk cow numbers down 1 percent from July 1, 1977, with heifers for milk cow replacement down 2 percent.

In addition, the numbers of steers and heifers over 500 pounds not on feed or held for herd replacement was down 9 percent from July 1, 1977. Cattle under 500 pounds and not on feed dropped nearly 10 percent from a year earlier.

All these figures indicate that U.S. cattlemen are continuing to cut back on their cow herds, Wellman said. Both cow numbers and total cattle inventories may drop to a lower level than expected, he noted. He cited the 20 percent increase in heifers on feed, revealed by the July 1 cattle-on-feed report, as further evidence that cattlemen are not yet starting to rebuild their cow herds.

Wellman made these further predictions, all relating to the July 1 cattle inventory figures:

— Total cattle slaughter this year will be around 4 percent below 1977. Even with slightly larger beef imports, per capita consumption will drop to about 119.5 pounds carcass weight (88.5 pounds retail), down from 126 pounds in 1977.

— Beef consumption is likely to drop even further in 1979 and 1980; perhaps to 110-112 pounds per capita in 1979 and to the 104-105 pound range in 1980.

— The general trend in cattle prices should be higher during this period. Beef prices also will be influenced by supplies of pork and poultry, consumer buying power, farm-to-retail margins and potential consumer and government reaction to higher beef prices.

— If choice steer prices average near $55 per hundred-weight at Omaha for the rest of this year, the 1978 average will be about $53 compared with $40 in 1977. A 1979 average in the high $50's to around $60 appears to be a reasonable expectation at this time, with further rise likely in 1980.

WaterCenter Workshop Set

LINCOLN — The Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources' Nebraska Water Resources Center will sponsor a Grantsmanship Training Workshop Sept. 18-22 at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln East Campus Union, according to Don A. Wilhite, water resources management specialist with NWRC.

Wilhite said the week-long workshop is designed for nonprofit organizations, state and federal agencies and foundation executives. It will focus on three major areas: program planning, translating project goals into funding proposals and locating and approaching government and private funding sources.

The workshop will be conducted by the Grantsmanship Center, nonprofit education organization from Los Angeles, Calif., which has trained more than 5,000 persons since its inception in 1972. In a recent sampling of 700 "alumni" of the Center's workshops, more than $100 million in new grants for their organizations were attributed directly to the Center's program, Wilhite said.

The Grantsmanship Center has developed a program planning and proposal writing guide with a current circulation in excess of 250,000. It also publishes a bimonthly magazine, The Grantsmanship Center News, which has been dubbed the "Whole Earth Catalog of Funding," and has a readership of more than 50,000.

Tuition for the workshop is $325, Wilhite said. Enrollment is limited to 25 persons. The NWRC staff member said all Nebraska colleges and universities, numerous community service organizations and a wide array of potentially interested parties in Nebraska and neighboring states have been notified of the workshop.

The Nebraska workshop is one of 12 scheduled in September and 64 being given around the country during the last half of 1978.

Sulfa Levels Watched in Pork

Nebraska is moving into Phase II of the Swine Sulfonamide (Sulfa) Residue Reduction Program, an educational campaign in which the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources' Cooperative Extension Service will lead an effort to disseminate information to all segments of the pork industry.

The goal of a 3-pronged industry-government "self-help" program kicked off earlier this year is to eliminate the problem of sulfa residue violations, allowing producers to continue using the drug compounds to control diseases and improve production efficiency and still provide consumers with a continuing supply of wholesome pork products.

Under laws administered by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA), it is illegal to send live animals to market if any contain drug residues above established tolerances. The allowable tolerance for sulfamonomides in pork liver, kidney and muscle tissue is 0.1 part per million (PPM), or 1-40th of a teaspoon in a ton of pork. Under the Federal Meat Inspection Act, meat cannot be sold for human consumption if it contains drug residues above the tolerance set by the FDA.

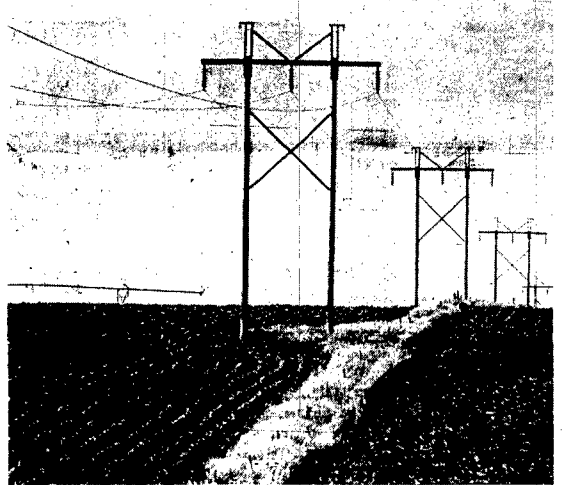

The various sulfa drug compounds have been used by the industry for more than 20 years, either prescribed or as an ingredient of medicated feeds, to aid in controlling such diseases as atrophic rhinitis, pneumonia and dysentery. By some estimates 75 percent of the hogs marketed in the U.S. have received some form of sulfa during their lifetime.

The widespread use of these sulfa compounds in recent years has resulted in levels of sulfa residues that were higher than the extremely low levels allowed showing up in hogs going to slaughter.

Vodka is distilled from rye, barley, oats, corn or potatoes and contains up to 95 percent alcohol, though this is usually diluted to 50 percent before consumption.

It takes electricity to farm today.

It will take more tomorrow.

Every year Nebraskans demand more electricity. The demand for electricity supplied by Nebraska Public Power District was up 9.6% over the year before. Agriculture is one of the largest users of electricity in Nebraska. And no wonder. Agriculture is the state's largest industry. More and more electricity is needed every year to keep it number one.

As farming methods become more sophisticated, agriculture will demand even more electricity. That means more construction of electrical generating facilities and power lines. NPPD is dedicated to bringing you enough energy at the lowest cost possible and with the least amount of impact. Agriculture and electricity have been compatible in Nebraska for years. In fact, without electricity today's modern methods of farming would be impossible.

So next time you wonder if another power line is necessary, think what your life would be like without it. Agriculture and electricity do go together.

Protein Supplement Important

CLAY CENTER — Recovering methane gas from beef cattle manure by fermentation leaves a high-protein residue that might replace other protein supplements in sheep and cattle rations, studies by the U.S. Department of Agriculture indicate.

The residue or effluent (3 to 4 percent solids) has a crude protein equivalent of about 60 percent. Composition of amino acids making up the protein in the effluent compares with that of soybean oil meal, says Dr. Ronald L. Prior, nutritionist of USDA's Science and Education Administration. Almost half of the nitrogen in the effluent is ammonia nitrogen.

Centrifuging and drying the effluent at the U.S. Meat Animal Research Center here has produced biomass cake with a crude protein equivalent of about 17 percent in preliminary trials. Ammonia nitrogen and some soluble protein in the effluent is removed with liquid when producing the cake. Biomass cake has an amino acid composition comparing favorably with that of alfalfa hay, Dr. Prior found.

He is one of a federal research team that is determining what place conversion of manure to methane and feed supplement might have in the livestock industry. The process now appears practical only of large feedlots, but an economic evaluation planned later should provide definite conclusions.

Before then, Dr. Andrew G. Hashimoto and Dr. Yud-Ren Chen, USMARC agricultural engineers, must identify optimum fermentor design and operating procedures for recovering methane from manure.

Fermentation in an environment free of oxygen, termed anaerobic, occurs naturally in such places as a cow's rumen and pond sediment, as well as in sewage-disposal systems. Two groups of coexisting bacteria carry out fermentation. One group converts organic compounds in manure to materials that other bacteria then reduce to methane and carbon dioxide. The protein in the effluent is primarily of bacterial origin.

The pilot-scale fermentor, a closed 200-cubic-foot vat, operates at about 130 degrees F. The high temperature, or thermophilic, system recovers more methane from an equal amount of manure than systems operating at lower temperatures and also minimizes transmission of disease via the effluent.

Dr. Prior evaluated the nutritional quality of both biomass cake and total effluent as a protein supplement for sheep fed individually 21 days.

In the first study, dried biomass cake made up 5, 10 or 20 percent of a balanced ration.

Proportion of biomass cake did not significantly affect digestibility of the total ration other than for a slight decrease in ration digestibility when cake made up 20 percent of the ration, Dr. Prior found.

Relative inefficiency in utilization of the minerals in biomass cake could be a problem in using it as a feedstuff, this study suggested. The dried cake had a mineral content of 24 percent, but the minerals had a digestibility of only 11 percent. In contrast, minerals in the remainder of the ration were 59 percent digestible.

Utilizing the total effluent as a protein supplement, as in his second study, would have the advantage of retaining the soluble nitrogen lost in removing liquid to produce biomass cake, Dr. Prior points out.

In this study, he adapted sheep to a ration including fermenter effluent by gradually increasing the proportion of effluent over 7 days. Getting sheep to eat a ration containing effluent was difficult if it was not introduced gradually, Dr. Prior found. Daily gains were comparable on rations with effluent or soybean meal as protein supplement.

A cattle-feeding study is underway at USMARC comparing total effluent and soybean meal in rations with moisture content similar to that of corn silage.

The research project is supported in part by the U.S. Department of Energy and the National Science Foundation.

But with rising wholesale prices, support purchases of butter and cheese probably will be very small this summer, although purchases of nonfat dry milk could continue, he said. During the first half of 1978, the U.S. Department of Agriculture removed the equivalent of 1.5 billion pounds of milk from the commercial market which was a reduction of more than a third from a year earlier.
