Fall Weather Roams Area

August Proves a Winner For the Best in Weather

The first real hint of fall weather flowed into the Wayne land area the first part of the week with nighttime temperatures dipping down into the 40's.

While the first part of September turned hot and dry, it followed a moderate month of August. Temperatures during August averaged from one to three degrees below normal throughout most of the state.

And precipitation was on the plus side.

The average daily maximum temperature in the Wayneland area during the month was about 84.5 degrees. The high temperature for the area came on Aug. 14 when the thermomter topped out at 94 degrees. The lowest reading came on Aug. 4 when it dipped to about 43.5 degrees.

The extreme maxima came in the southern half of the state where 100 plus degrees were recorded on one or more days. The highest temperature reported was 106 degrees at Curtis.

Table Proposed

Wayne County commissioners Tuesday tabled a proposed program for a safety study of traffic on Wayne county roads.

An official of the state department of roads met with the commissioners and proposed the project because Wayne County is 1 of 30 counties in the state with the highest accident rates on county roads.

The commissioners told the official they felt they could get the same information with less cost in less time through the county sheriff's office.

Norris Weible, county clerk, said the commissioners are aware of the areas in the county where the most accidents happen.

The commissioners appointed Frederick Mann to the board of directors of the Goldenrod Hills agency, replacing Jocelyn Bull.

Women of county extension clubs Wednesday morning toured the county offices and met with the commissioners to find out more about the operation of the county.

Can Be Prevented

Diseases Reported in Stored Grain

DON C. SPITZE, Wayne County Extension Agent
A number of Wayne County farmers have reported that their farm stored grain is being damaged by insects. This is a special concern this year because of the much larger than normal amount of grain stored on farms due to abundant crops, low market prices and government programs encouraging grain to be stored on the farm. Much grain is now being stored for a year or longer and this is especially a problem when grain is stored over the summer months when insect numbers can build up rapidly. If grain is handled properly, insect problems should be at a minimum for the first storage season under Nebraska conditions because the cold weather lowers the grain temperature so that insects can't reproduce and feed until the following summer.

Summary of 3 phase program for preventing stored grain insect damage.
1. Prevention — Grain bins should be thoroughly sprayed with malathion or methoxychlor before any grain is put into them. Treat grain as it is put into the bin with premium grade malathion. Also spray surface of grain with premium grade malathion. If Indian meal moths are a threat use methoxychlor instead of malathion. Hang vapona strips for prevention of Indian meal moths. Use aeration fans to reduce the temperature of the grain to 40 degrees F. Grain cooled to 40 degrees should not become warm enough for insect damage until the following summer.

2. Inspection — Check bins regularly every two to four weeks during warm weather and every four to six weeks during cold weather. Insects build up on surface during warm but you must probe down deep into grain mass during cold weather to find possible insect infestation.

3. Controlling Insects — If insects are found in enough numbers to be damaging use either a commercial fumigation company or treat it yourself with a fumigant.
For more detailed information on how to carry out the above 3 Phase Program read the following story.

PREVENTION

Clean Bins
Always thoroughly clean out the bins before putting grain into it. Never put new grain on top of old grain.

Residual Sprays
After cleaning the bin spray all inside and outside surfaces with malathion or methoxychlor two weeks before storing grain.

Use 2.5 percent premium grade malathion made by mixing 1/2 pint of 57 percent premium grade malathion emulsifiable concentrate per gallon of water.

Or use 2.5 percent methoxychlor made by mixing 1/2 pint of 25 percent methoxychlor emulsifiable concentrate per gallon of water.

Use a compressed air garden sprayer and spray surfaces to the point of run off. One gallon of spray will cover 750 to 1,000 square feet.

NOTE: Indian meal moths have become resistant to malathion. If you have had a previous problem with these insects use methoxychlor or pyrethrin plus piperonyl butoxide instead of malathion.

Suggests Real

Future Problems

While there are yet "no real devastating diseases" affecting the Nebraska corn crop statewide in 1978, two new diseases which showed up in widely separated areas of the state could pose real problems in the future.

This report was given by Dr. M.G. Boosalis, head of the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources Department of Plant Pathology, to the Nebraska Grain Marketing, Storage and Utilization Committee Sept. 14.

Dr. Boosalis said corn lethal necrosis, a disease caused by interaction of two types of viruses, has affected some 50 fields in Furnas, Harlan and Franklin Counties. First reported in Kansas, the disease was detected in only one Nebraska field last year.

The disease, which drastically cuts yields by preventing ears from developing, occurs when maize chlorotic mottle virus combines with either maize dwarf mosaic or wheat streak mosaic virus, both of which See SUGGESTS, Page 12

KWSC-Channel 10 Project New Look; Directs Programming at Community

Sporting new equipment and a new staff, KWSC-TV, channel 10 hopes to bring a new, fresh look to viewers as it opens its broadcast season this week.

Jeff Varner, manager of the Wayne State College operated station, said that in the past, KWSC had aimed its programming primarily toward the college students. This year, however, Varner said that much of the programming will be directed at the community.

With the help of new high quality, donated by KTIV-channel four Sioux City, and a new audio system, Varner hopes to have the station in full operating potential by next week.

Three new programs will deal with the community of Wayne directly. "Our High" will take a look at various areas of Wayne High School each week.

Produced by students, Ron Thompson, Phil Perok and Eddie Tang, "Our High" will interview members of the student body government, debate, speech, theatre clubs, music department, sports figures and any persons of special interest to the community. This program will be aired every Tuesday at 7 p.m.

Following "Our High" KWSC will broadcast direct coverage of the city council meetings every second and fourth Tuesday of the month.

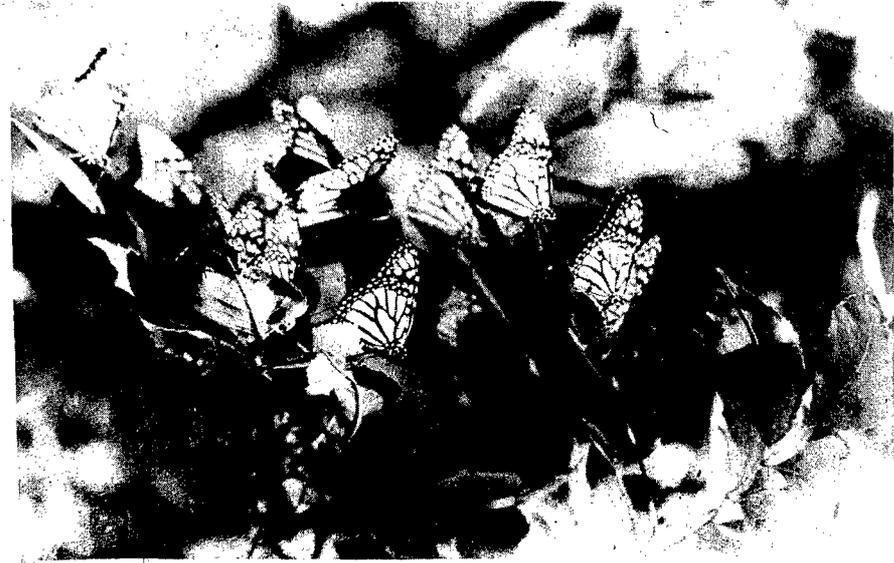

Gary Van Meter, of the Wayne Chamber of Commerce, will be the host of another new community show called, "Chamber Chats". Van Meter will select and interview businessmen from different areas of the community and discuss topics of importance in the area.

The purpose of the program is to promote community awareness and acquaint viewers with businessmen of Wayne. Brad Wieland is producer of the show which will be aired Thursdays at 6 p.m.

In addition to the three new community shows, the KWSC staff will be busy producing a faculty show. Wayne State faculty members will be interviewed about their interests and beliefs on this program which will fill Tuesday and Wednesday time slots.

Channel 10 will also cover See PROJECT, Page 12

Miss Gene Maxwell of Denver, Colo., a staff member of the Women's Division of the Board of Global Ministries, was the guest speaker.

In talking to the women, Miss Maxwell stated that God has given us a mind to make decisions and we should use it to give our life in mission and to live an abundant life.

"The mission does not need to be a 'world mission,'" she emphasized, adding "mission work can be done in the home within the family, the church and the community."

"Our greatest mission can be when we help mend some broken heart," said Miss Maxwell, adding that we all must take time to rethink our lives and what we will do with them in closing, the speaker said it was an inspiration to attend a meeting where so many women were united in worship.

The Rev. Kenneth Edmonds, pastor of the local church, closed the meeting with the benediction.

A short business meeting was conducted. New officers for 1979 will be Becky Wilson, president; Vida Sulterland, vice president; Twila Claybaugh, secretary, and Marilyn Anderson, treasurer.

Chairmen are Marjorie Porter, mission coordinator; Christi Benson, Jociell Bull, supportive community; Donna Hansen, Christian social involvement; Gladys Tefman, Christian global concern; Vida Sulterland, secretary of program resources; and Sally Watson, membership.

Members of the nominating committee are Norma Ehlers, Della Mae Preston and Terri Headley.

GENE MAXWELL of Denver, Colo., a staff member of the Women's Division of the Board of Global Ministries, shares a moment with Mrs. Walter Tolman, vice president of United Methodist Women of Wayne. Miss Maxwell was guest speaker during guest day at the United Methodist Church in Wayne last week.

LET'S TALK IT OVER

With DARREL FUELBERTH

Home ownership offers so many advantages... the building of an estate, tax benefits and more... that you may wonder why any homeowner ever sells his house. Sometimes there is no choice. A change in employment or a transfer of work location demands that the family move to another location, perhaps in another city.

More commonly, people move to relocate in a house better suited to their current needs. Family sizes change up and down but houses stay the same. When the children are grown and gone, why should the parents maintain a too-large house when they would be more comfortable in a smaller, less expensive home?

Whatever your reason for selling, we suggest you get full information from us, without cost or obligation of any kind.

In Target Tennis

Zimmer Third In Nation

BY RANDY HASCALL
A 14-year-old tennis player has put Wayne, Nebraska in the state, regional and national spotlight during the past month. Keith Zimmer, freshman at Wayne High made headlines in newspapers and television and radio spots across the state as he continued his success in the Mr. Peanut Target Tennis competition.

Keith reached the ultimate plateau when he qualified for the national tournament in Boston. Now he's returned to Wayne as the third best target tennis player his age in the country. Zimmer surprised many people on his climb to the national tournament but he just kept going. Now with a third place finish, he has something he can always be proud of and so can the community. Zimmer said competition in the national tournament was exciting but much more stiff. "Playing in Boston was a lot harder," Zimmer said, "and we played on indoor courts." Keith responded to national competition with his highest score ever, playing against nationally ranked tennis players. Some of Zimmer's opponents had played in the national tourney last year.

The winner in the 14 years and under division was from Denver while the runner-up journeyed from his home state of California.

"The people in Boston were real nice, and they talked with weird accents," Zimmer stated.

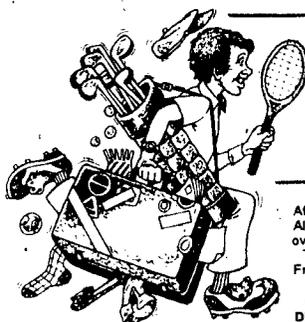

Zimmer competed during the World Team Tennis Finals Saturday.

"We got to watch Chris Evert, Ilie Nastase, Tony Roche and other pro players compete. Martina Navratilova was there too but she was injured and didn't get to play," Zimmer said. "The matches weren't as fast as they look on TV."

After winning a plaque, sweatshirt and shirt, Keith said that he was happy with third place but said next year he'll set his goal for a national championship.

Zimmer said that the support he received helped him in his quest for a national title. He credited the Second Guessers Club for their support and the Park and Recreation Association for presenting him a jacket with Wayne tennis lettered on the front.

Keith added that the target tennis people said he received the best coverage of any competitor. He was covered by the media statewide, especially because he is from a small community he said.

Randy's RECAP

According to Randy Hascall

After losing its season opener to Winside, Allen followed with one point victories over Wakefield and Bancroft.

The Eagles have a tough game ahead Friday night when they play Ponca.

CONTINUING ITS TOUGH SCHEDULE. Laurel faces the second rated team in Class D when they play at Walthill. Friday, Wakefield plays Hartington, ranked seventh in Class C-2, so the local teams maintain play against good competition.

THREE STRONG TEAMS still head up the NCAA Top Twenty after impressive wins Saturday. Alabama, Arkansas and Oklahoma seem to stand out above the other schools this early in the season.

It's quite a feat for someone to place nationally in any type of event and for Keith to place third in the national Mr. Peanut Target Tennis competition is really an accomplishment.

We expect to see more from Keith next year.

RATED NINTH IN the Omaha World Herald football ratings is Class D Allen.

ANY FOOTBALL FANS who missed the Baltimore-New England game on television Monday, missed an exciting, unique game. Just when one team appeared to have the game under control, the other responded with a touchdown or two. It was one of the craziest games I've seen.

Kittens Lose Opening Tennis Match To USD

Returning the top 4 players from a wildkitten tennis team with an 11:3 dual record, Coach Stu Glendenning was optimistic before their opening match this fall. Despite his optimism, WSC lost 9-0 Tuesday to a strong University of South Dakota-Vermilion team.

The wildkittens had rough matches throughout the event. Facing a team that is now 5-0 this fall.

Number one WSC singles player, Shari Bradix of Bellevue lost to USD's top player, Nancy Driggs, 7-6, 6-0.

Bradix led the WSC team last fall with a 12-2 record. She is also the defending Nebraska college conference singles champion.

WSC's number two singles player, Vicki Carsey, of Fremont also found USD's Karen Bernard a difficult opponent. Carsey, who compiled a 12-3 record last fall, lost Wednesday, 6-0, 6-0.

Glendenning said the S.D. team was definitely a rough opponent.

"They are the best team we will play this year," he said. "You can see by the scores they were just a super team. We had a lot of close games but we didn't win any."

Other action in the match saw WSC's number three player, Judy Janicek of Bellevue losing 6-0, 6-0; number four singles player, Sue Mayberger of Omaha, falling to Judy Patterson, 6-1, 6-4; Christy Marco of Omaha, WSC's number five singles player, losing 6-0, 6-1, to Julie Sibson; and Patty Whier, losing 6-1, 6-1 to Carol Nalevko.

In doubles action, Bradix and Carsey lost 6-2, 4-6 and 6-3. Janicek and Marco lost 6-0, 6-0 and Mayberger and Wetstone fell 6-0, 6-0.

Wayne State will face Northwestern (Ia.) College Monday, Sept. 25 at 3 p.m. for their home opener.

Punt, Pass & Kick Signup Open For Sept. 30 Date

Registrations for the 1978 Punt, Pass and Kick Competition sponsored locally by Arnie's Ford-Mercury continue to roll in. The contest, open to any youngster 8 through 13 years of age, seems to get more popular every year.

This year's Punt, Pass and Kick competition will be held at the Wayne State football field, Saturday, Sept. 30 at 1:30 p.m.

Any boy or girl meeting the age requirements who can punt, pass and kick a football or who'd like to try — will want to compete. Participants compete only against others their own age, and there is no body contact.

No special equipment is needed and participation does not impair a youngster's amateur standing. Each youngster competes in three categories — punting, passing and kicking. Judges score one point for each foot the ball travels on the fly, minus one point for each foot the ball lands to the right or left of the center lane.

Youngsters, accompanied by a parent or guardian, may register for PP&K at Arnie's Ford-Mercury. There is no entrance fee.

Pierce Runbacks Thwart Wayne JV Season Opener

Pierce used a good kick return game to end the Wayne Junior Varsity's hopes of an opening season win as they scored a fourth quarter touchdown to top the Blue Devils 14-8. Safety Stuart Nissen started the scoring as he recorded a safety in the second quarter. The next Blue Devil points were produced on a 35 yard touch down pass from Tod Heier to Jeff Brandt. A two-point conversion attempt failed.

Pierce scored its first TD on a kickoff return in the second quarter and ran in the two point conversion. The two teams went into the lockerroom at half-time with the game knotted 8-8.

The final Pierce touchdown was set up by a punt return to the Wayne 20 yard line. Five plays later, a touchdown pass put the visitors ahead to stay 14-8 after the conversion attempt missed its mark.

Chip Carr was the leading Blue Devil rusher, piling up 66 yards. The Wayne defense was led in tackling by Steve Sorenson, Stuart Nissen, Bryan Aguirre, Paul Sutherland and Richard Glass.

While the game was Wayne's opener, it was the third game of the season for Pierce.

In 1933, the per bushel prices of wheat and corn in America were lower than they had been 300 years before.

Game & Parks Office Adopts 79-80 Budget

An operating budget of $14,955,309 has been adopted by the Game and Parks Commission to cover personnel services, operating expenses, supplies, travel expenses and equipment for fiscal 1979-80.

The agency's request for state general fund money in the operating budget was 6.3 percent above fiscal 1978-79.

Originally, the budget would have called for an increase in general fund money of only 4.9 percent. However, a study of state employee salaries ordered by the Unicameral showed the pay of state workers is at least 8.5 percent below that of workers on similar jobs in the private sector.

The State Budget Office instructed the commission to budget for the 8.5 percent salary increase, which added another 1.4 percent to the agency's need for general funds.

The commission also adopted a capital improvements budget of $7,543,150 for fiscal 1979-80, to cover costs of construction or major renovations of Commission facilities. General fund requirements under this budget are 52 percent below the previous budget.

Grouse Season Open Now

Grouse season opened Saturday, Sept. 16, and area residents have prospects of a good season this year, reports the Game and Parks Commission.

According to Norm Dey, wildlife management supervisor, breeding grounds surveys indicated a good number of breeding birds last spring. Although area biologists are reporting a drying trend, the moisture level in grouse country is still very acceptable.

Prairie chickens and sharp-tail are both species of grouse, but they are very different birds, Dey remarked. Chickens, he said, are primarily flat country birds. They tend to stay around the edges of alfalfa, red clover and cornfields. They loaf in open meadows, and sometimes seek shelter from midday sun in area shelterbelts.

Most prairie chicken hunting in the state occurs in very local areas, he continued, including northern Wheeler and southern Holt counties.

Sharp-tail hunters, on the other hand, can expect to find their quarry in rough, choppy Sand-hill pastureland. Hunters have best success after nine o'clock when the birds have moved off the roost, finished feeding for the morning and settled on loafing areas.

According to Dey, grouse choose hillsides for loafing areas. They seem to be affected by wind, and pick sites just under the brows of the hills to shelter during the day. Hunters walking with the wind seem to have best success.

One certain help for any bird hunter is a good dog, Dey said. And a good dog is best if he has had some attention before the season starts. A dog that has spent five months in the kennel will want to do nothing but run the first time he hunts.

Grouse hunters, like anyone else entering private land, must have permission from the landowner. It seems that hunters see the big, wide-open country characteristic of grouse country and it doesn't seem that anyone owns that. But those big expanses do belong to somebody.

It's a good idea to spot hunting places in advance, and talk to the landowner before the season opens. The good will with the landowner is rewarding in itself — and it also saves hunting time in the opening days.

Grouse hunters must remember that a Habitat Stamp is required in addition to the regular hunting license. Def-

165,000 Game Fish in Nebraska Stock

The Game and Parks Commission stocked more than 165,000 game fish in Nebraska waters during August, along with some 155,000 minnows and crayfish to establish food crops for fish.

The August stocking brings the total stocked since May to 1,690,000 game fish, plus some shiners, fathead minnows, bullfrogs, crayfish and freshwater shrimp.

Most of the fish came from Game and Parks Commission hatcheries, but a substantial portion, about 545,000, came from federal fish hatcheries.

Other sources included private and public Nebraska waters, private and state hatcheries in other states, and muskie fingerlings purchased by Nebraska Trophy Fish Unlimited.

Residence Halls Show Hike

The number of students living in Wayne State College residence halls this fall has increased over nine percent over the same time period last year, representing an increase for the fifth consecutive year.

Contracts for 1,300 on-campus students have been signed for this fall compared to 1,191 last fall, an increase of 109 students. This year's figure is the highest of an upward trend of students moving to campus housing at WSC.

A low of 719 students were reported living in on-campus halls in 1974. That figure increased to 917 in 1975; 1,109 in 1976 and 1,191 last fall.

"Our enrollment is up and there are more freshmen this fall," said Dr. Marv Beamer, director of WSC residence life. He said WSC requires freshmen to live on campus, but students beyond the freshman year are allowed to move off campus.

Beamer attributes the movement to campus housing to a variety of reasons, mainly the cost of private housing. He said a combination of food and transportation cost increases over the years have also contributed to the trend.

"We have had to raise our prices some, but we are still competitive," he said.

Beamer added that the halls are conveniently close to classrooms and tutoring and counseling services are available to students living on campus, making the residence halls more attractive.

Beamer said the increase this fall has limited the number of private rooms available. He said only residence hall advisers and college tutors, along with a small number of college seniors, will be allowed private rooms.

"We have enough 'no shows' this fall to allow some seniors private rooms," he said. "But my guess is there are fewer than 15 students other than RA's and tutors who have these private rooms."

WSC reopened two residence halls within the past two years to accommodate the increase in on-campus students. Terrace Hall, which was closed in 1972 because of a declining number of students choosing to live on campus, was reopened in 1976 as single room units. Pile Hall, closed in 1973, was converted into 18 student apartments and reopened last fall.

"I think we are having a continuation of students who live in the halls choosing to live on campus year after year," Beamer said. "We could have fewer freshmen and still have more people in our halls because students are choosing to live on campus beyond their freshman year."

PRINCIPAL STORED GRAIN INSECTS

For safe and effective use of insecticides, always identify the problem correctly.

Prepared by Extension Entomologists of the North Central States in cooperation with the Federal Extension Service, U. S. Department of Agriculture

- 1. Granary Weevil: Eggs are deposited inside kernels of grain. Larvae develop inside the whole grain. Adults cannot fly.
- 2. Saw-Toothed Grain Beetle: Feed on cereal products, broken grain and flour.
- 3. Red Flour Beetle: Red flour beetles and confused flour beetles are almost identical in appearance and habits. Both feed on grain debris.
- 4. Larger Cabinet Beetle: Larger cabinet beetles and related species called demestids, feed on grain and grain debris.
- 5. Lesser Grain Borers: Adults deposit eggs on kernels. The larvae bore into the kernel, destroying grain.
- 6. Rice Weevil: Eggs are placed inside kernels like granary weevils. Adults can fly. Adults have light orange spots on the wing cover.
- 7. Indian-Meal Moth: Common in stored grain. Larvae are surface feeders in grain bins. They spin webs around grain and feed within the webs. (Deep red coloration).
- 8. Caddie: Both adults and larvae feed on grain. Larvae will bore into wooden bins. Caddies are large insects and easy to see.
- 9. Flat Grain Beetle: Adults are very small beetles with long antennae. Adults and larvae feed on germ of grain, especially grains that are high in moisture or out of conditions.
- 10. Angoumois Grain Moth: Eggs are laid on the grain surface. Larvae bore into grain, leaving visible small holes in kernels.

malathion and methoxychlor are registered for use in storage bins for barley, corn, oats, rye, sorghum and wheat, but no soybeans.

GRAIN PROTECTANT

Dry, insect-free grain can be protected from most insects (except Indian meal moth) damage by using Malathion.

Apply premium grade malathion to the grain before, or as it goes into the bin. Mix one pint of 57 percent malathion with 2 to 5 gallons of water for each 1,000 bushels of grain. Apply to the grain stream as it is being elevated into the bin.

After binning is completed, level off the grain and treat all the grain surface with a protectant.

The grain protectant acts as a barrier, preventing insects from entering the grain and feeding on the surface. Each time the grain is disturbed the barrier is broken. Retreat disturbed areas with a grain protectant.

Use 1/2 pint of 57 percent malathion emulsifiable concentrate in 1 to 2 gallons of water per 1,000 square feet of grain surface. These chemicals are not registered to be used on soybeans.

Vapona Resin Strips
Vapona resin strips will control Indian meal moths in tight storage areas if they are hung above the grain. Use one strip for each 1,000 cubic feet of air space over the grain. The strips must be hung before moths begin to emerge in the spring. Strips should last 2 to 4 months. If strips are used, check grain once each month for insects. Replace strips if pests are seen.

INSPECTION
During warm weather, check bins every two to four weeks for insect damage. Infestations usually begin near the surface during warm weather so samples taken near the surface then will indicate whether or not insects are present.

In the winter, when the grain is cooler, sample grain every 2 to 6 weeks. During cold weather, infestations start near the center of the bin so samples have to be taken in the winter by probing the grain and determining if insects are present. Insects should be identified because not all insects found in grain are destructive enough to warrant control.

The picture of Principal Stored Grain Insects (above) will help you identify the insects. If you still are unable to identify the insects bring a specimen into the Wayne County Extension Office.

If one granary weevil, one rice weevil, or one lesser grain borer, or as many as five insects of other species such as flour beetles and saw-toothed grain beetles are found per quart sample of grain, fumigation of the grain is necessary to prevent further insect damage.

Special Problem — Indian Meal Moth
The adult is a moth about one-third to one-half inch long. The tips of the wings are dark red or brown with the basal one-third light gray. Full grown larvae are about one-half inch long, dirty white, sometimes with a pinkish or greenish tinge and a dark brown head.

The larvae feed only in the upper portion of the grain mass, unlike the other stored grain insects that feed throughout the bin. The top 1 to 2 inches of the grain is often webbed together by Indian meal moth larvae. Where the infestation is severe, a crust of webbing and trash will be very obvious. This crust hinders fumigant penetration and protects the larvae from contacting the grain protectant. The crust and damaged grain should be removed before treatment or before the grain is emptied.

The larvae prefer to feed on cracked or broken seeds, or weeds seeds, but will feed on the germ of whole kernels.

CONTROLLING INSECTS

If insects are found you will need to fumigate either by a professional fumigation company or yourself.

Farm grain storage liquid fumigants are mixtures of carbon tetrachloride mixed with carbon disulfide, ethylene dichloride, or ethylene dibromides, or combinations of these.

Aluminum phosphide (phosphine) are dry fumigant tablets that are inserted into the grain with special probes.

Fumigant Application
Use the amounts suggested on the labels of the fumigant containers. Use the maximum amounts suggested.

Fumigate on a mild, still day. Grain temperatures should be 65 degrees F. or above. Grain temperatures generally lag six to eight weeks behind air temperatures. Level the surface of the grain and make sure the bin is tight. Seal all cracks. If the bin has many openings that cannot be sealed, it's doubtful if fumigation will be effective. Leave at least 6 inches of space between the top of the bin so fumigant will not spill over the sides.

If the grain surface is uneven, the low spots will collect most of the fumigant, while the high spots will not be fumigated. Spray the fumigant as uniformly as possible over the surface of the grain.

Use a hand-type compressed air sprayer or bucket pump. The pump should have bronze fittings and a plastic or plastic-lined hose, because some of the materials are very corrosive. Stay on the outside of the bin. Tarps/layers placed over open bins, such as those found in barns, may help hold the fumigant in the bin.

The fumigated bin may be opened up and aired out after 72 hours. The grain may be fed at any time after complete aeration.

Follow manufacturers instructions for the use and aeration of Phostoxin.

Cautions — Use a gas mask approved by the U.S. Bureau of Mines for the particular fumigant you are using. Never fumigate a bin by yourself. Have someone else around to help if you should get into trouble. The helper should also have an approved gas mask.

If fumigant is spilled on your clothes or shoes, remove them immediately and wash the skin with soap and water. Otherwise severe blistering may result. Don't take chances. Fumigants can kill you as well as the insects.

Applicators must be EPA certified to apply fumigants, since fumigants are restricted use pesticides.

For more detailed information on fumigation and general information on insect control in stored grain obtain bulletin "Insect Prevention and Control in Farm Stored Grain" from the Wayne County Extension Service.

The extreme minima ranged down to the 30's at scattered sites. The extreme low was 31 degrees in Agate about 3 a.m. Aug. 19. The same morning, Sidney recorded 35 degrees, Brownlee, 36 and Harrison, 37. A little closer to home, Walthill came up with a low of 39 degrees on Aug. 4.

The area had just about an inch above normal in precipitation. The rainfall for the month of August in the Wayne area was about 3.75 inches.

Cumulative precipitation for the period April through August was above normal in all divisions except the Southwest and the South Central divisions.

have been identified in the state for many years.

The other disease threat is caused by a nematode which the root tips of corn and was observed in three fields in north central and northeast Nebraska this summer, causing heavy damage. It is the first time this type of nematode has been observed in this far north. Dr. Boosalis stated, "This nematode is a pest for this nematode pest he said, except for a nematocide that cost about $40 an acre to apply. The nematode has a wide range of hosts—plants in which it depends on to complete its life cycle — which adds to the difficulty of control. Because it 'loves sandy soils,' it may become a more widespread threat in north central Nebraska where center pivot irrigation has greatly increased corn production.

Dr. David Keith, IANR Extension entomologist, told the committee Nebraska "got off fairly lucky" by the end of the summer in terms of overall grasshopper damage to row crops. Wet weather helped hold the hoppers in the ditches and out of fields, he explained.

However, damage to some wheat newly-planted in western Nebraska can be expected, he said, unless proper spraying is carried out. Keith said USDA entomologist Jerold Bellis currently making a survey to determine potential for grasshopper infestations next year. Next year could be worse, he said, in areas where grasshopper numbers run 8-10 per square yard.

Keith summarized the current status of other insect pests:

Corn borers — The situation is much better than a year ago. Second brood borers did not develop into a serious threat as had been feared. A survey to be completed in about two weeks will yield more information.

Chinch bugs — They are present in significant numbers in 10 southeastern Nebraska counties. They were effectively controlled in fields sprayed earlier this season with recommended insecticides.

Cutworms — Several types of cutworms caused problems early in the season in Nebraska, but control was quite effective.

It is said that when English settlers and explorers arrived in Australia they were puzzled by a large pouched hopping creature. When asked about it, the natives replied "I don't know" in their native tongues, which sounds like "kangaroo."

A half-time combined performance with WSC Wildcat Marching band featured several popular march tunes and performances by the WSC Twirlers.

Trophies were awarded to the top four participating bands, based on playing and marching performances and general appearance. The Logan View High School Band, directed by Bruce Bartles, and the Plainview High School Band, directed by Alan Sipes, won first and second respectively in the Category I (Class A-B) competition. Logan View was selected for second place honors in competition last fall.

The Bloomfield High School Marching Band, directed by Randy Neuharth, was selected for second in Category II. Bloomfield is also a repeat winner in the competition, placing first in the 1977 event.

Dr. Ray Kelton, WSC music director, said the overall performance of the participating bands was very good.

"I think the level of competition was a little higher than in past years," Kelton said. "I think the day went very well."

Other participating bands included: Elgin, Verdigris, Butte, Wausa, Humphrey, Clarks, Emerson-Hubbard, Valley, Battle Creek, Creighton and Randolph. The Wayne High School Marching band participated, but was not included in the competition.

Thought for Today

"Don't squander time for that is the stuff life is made of..."
Franklin

Benjamin Franklin frittered away very few hours during his highly productive lifetime. However, it is doubtful that his words are an endorsement of a rigid daily schedule of all work and no play.

Leisure time, wisely and satisfyingly spent, is the welcome "unwinding" that we must sandwich between the work and responsibilities of the average day. This is not time squandered, for time so spent returns a dividend in a rejuvenating release from the tension and emotional stress associated with modern living.

'Election Fever' picking up

CAPITOL NEWS

By Melvin Paul

Statenhouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association
LINCOLN — During election years, the Labor Day weekend usually marks the beginning of stepped up politicking by candidates whose names will be on the General Election ballot.

This year was no exception, although some of the nominees for various offices had gotten close to a full head of steam by that date.

Getting a considerable part of media attention was the U.S. Senate race between Gov. J.J. Exon and Don Shasteen. The headline-grabbing stories were triggered by a Shasteen allegation that the governor's office might have been used to influence equipment purchases from Exon's office supply firm.

The charge was made by Shasteen during a debate in Columbus before a state editors' meeting — and was promptly and strongly denied by the governor. During the exchange Exon told Shasteen the Republican nominee was going to "get beat and beat bad" in the November balloting.

A few days later, the governor asked that the attorney general, the Lancaster County attorney and the U.S. district attorney look into the allegation, arrive at conclusions and then publicize them quickly.

Exon, who owns 70 percent controlling interest in the J.J. Exon Co., said he has not been involved in the business affairs of the firm since becoming governor.

At this writing, Exon said Shasteen had not yet provided any documentation of his allegations and accused him of "using the news media in an attempted character assassination."

The governor added his opponent was using "the big lie technique" but that he did not believe the people of the state would be fooled by it.

Shasteen said he had raised a legitimate point about which he had received so much information it could not be ignored. He said he had received a copy of a letter because a number of Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service employees felt they were pressured politically to buy copying machines from Exon's firm.

He would not say from whom he received a copy of the letter, except that it came from a third party. But he said the letter indicated wrongdoing by the governor's office supply company.

Several days after the debate with Exon, Shasteen released a statement which said, "Should the evidence establish that the letter which I distributed... was mailed to county ASCS offices soliciting business for the J.J. Exon Co. under the office of the state ASCS director, Glenn Kreisler, Gov. Exon should resign and withdraw from the Senate race."

Shasteen earlier had also said purchases made by banking and architectural firms from the J.J. Exon Co. might have been attempts to influence Exon administration decisions. These charges were also flatly denied by the governor, as well as by several prominent members of his administration.

Prominent Republicans asked to comment on the matter said Shasteen had to back them up with solid evidence or lose his credibility. Several said the Republican candidate was level-headed and that they doubted he would have made the accusation without something to back it up.

The governor said affidavits denying his office was ever involved in efforts to influence equipment purchases were taken from seven employees of his business firm. Exon said those seven persons are the only ones involved in any way with sales

Safety Director Resigns

Severiano "Sam" Franco has resigned as director of the State Highway Safety Office.

His voluntary resignation was submitted after he was arrested following an alcohol-related traffic accident.

Franco said he could not "in clear conscience, ask people not to do what I do, but do what I say. The only credible thing to do was to go ahead and resign."

Franco headed the highway safety program since June 1972.

He was arrested in Crete on charges of driving while intoxicated and not carrying a driver's license.

Dennis Oelschlaeger was named to succeed Franco, according to a spokesman for the state Department of Motor Vehicles. Franco will remain with the department until the end of September in another capacity, the spokesman said.

Reformatory Will Be Issue

It appears the proposed Omaha reformatory for men will be a prominent issue for Nebraska's lawmakers next year.

Sen. Jerome Warner, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, said if the designated site along the riverfront in Omaha isn't under construction by January, the Legislature may have to re-consider its decision to place it there.

Warner said he wants the reformatory unit — one of two authorized by the lawmakers several years ago — to remain in Omaha but not if it will mean an additional $1 million a year for inflation and acquisition for the site.

If the facility is moved out of Omaha, the only feasible location for it would be Lincoln, Warner said.

Gov. J.J. Exon and Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan have already gone on record in favor of the site switch. Exon has always wanted a single new reformatory in Lincoln and believes the Legislature will come around to his point of view.

Whelan said costs and delays make it advisable to move the site of the proposed Omaha unit to Lincoln. He says The Capital City, which has had state prisons for 100 years, is the only city that will accept them.

Whelan's Republican opponent for governor, Charles Thone, has not flatly endorsed moving the facility but said the long delayed construction amounts to a mess and something must be done.

Sen. Roland Luedtke, speaker of the Legislature, said he doesn't know what should be done but admitted the problem is serious.

He said the philosophy of having smaller prisons as a riot preventive and as a method of keeping prisoners closer to their homes is valid.

Luedtke said he opposed placement of the reformatory in Omaha.

Part of the site wanted in Omaha is tied up in court action. The case is expected to go to trial Oct. 2 but just when a final decision will be reached is unknown.

When the lawmakers were arguing about building two reformatory units, Exon predicted costs would be higher than expected. Now he says his prediction has become a reality.

Cost of the structure to house 175 men at Omaha was originally set at $4 million. But the size was later expanded to accommodate 256 prisoners. A total of $10.2 million has been appropriated for the Omaha unit. The Lincoln reformatory for 320 prisoners is expected to cost nearly $9.2 million. Initially it was slated to house 200 men and to cost $5 million.

Most of the highly steeper cost for the Omaha unit was attributed to inflation. Inflation wasn't a factor in Lincoln because construction contracts were signed and carried out on schedule, according to Jack Falconer, deputy director of the state Corrections Department.

OBSERVATIONS

We must be aware

Sometimes we wonder (and worry) about the average John Doe in the United States.

Network television companies and radio networks are expected their regular programming Sunday night to air a new special concerning Mid-east accord for peace negotiations.

"Battlestar Galactica" was nudged off the tube by the newscast and one Omaha television station received about 270 telephone calls from unhappy viewers who expressed their opinion that the new TV show was more important than the apparent first tie toward binding traditional enemies into a cohesive relationship that could lead to peace in the Mid-east.

This one piece of possible international "togetherness" is perhaps the most important positive step to world peace to come about since the end of World War II.

We believe the news break was warranted. We believe world peace is important. And we feel that U.S. citizens must be aware of what is happening in the world or they may find themselves in a "sull of armour" complete with sophisticated military hardware in what would be World War III.

These are not scare tactics. We believe President Carter explained the situation when he appeared before the joint session Monday night. What is happening in the Mid-east is important to world peace. If the United States had not intervened and been a "middleman" in the negotiations, the two Mid-east countries would be at each others throats and major countries in the world would be considering which of the two they will, perhaps touching off an international conflict of proportions undreamed of in warning history.

Citizens of the United States cannot afford to hide their heads in the sand and let "big brother" take care of them. In order for a government such as we know to continue it must have the knowledgeable support of its constituents.

We must make ourselves aware of what is happening in this world of ours. This is the one thing that makes a democracy work. Citizens who demand their elected representatives express the opinions of those whom they represent. And the only way the representatives can know what their constituents are thinking is through a vocal response to certain situations.

"Battlestar Galactica" is entertaining but unrealistic. The world today is very real and we should, as responsible citizens, pull our heads out of the tube long enough to find out what is going on around us. — Chuck Barnes

Election Preview

(Editor's Note) Nebraskans will be voting on ten issues when they go to the general election polls on Nov. 7. So that voters can better understand these important issues that would change the State's Constitution, the Nebraska Press Service in cooperation with the Wayne Herald, has prepared a series of news reports on each of the ten proposed issues. Each story in the series concentrates on a single phase, briefly defining the issue, explaining its purpose and finally stating the arguments for and against the issue.

"Constitutional amendment to provide that cities and villages may acquire and develop substandard or blighted property, issue bonds or other evidence of indebtedness for the redevelopment and pay off such bonds by the receipt of additional property taxes from new valuations on property in such project."

Purpose: To encourage the redevelopment of blighted property in downtown areas. It would work like this: Suppose there is a run-down section of your town, on which the landlord pays $2,000 a year in property taxes. If the property qualifies under definitions in the Nebraska Community Development act, it could be redeveloped under a tax increment financing system.

The city would buy it, tear down the old buildings and prepare the site for new construction. The city would borrow money to handle its costs under the system. Then it would sell the site to a private developer, who would finance and build the new facility.

Once the new structure went on the tax rolls, the property taxes would rise, say, to $10,000. Local governments would continue to receive $2,000 of that amount, as they had previously. The city would use the remaining $8,000 to repay its debt. When the debt is retired, all $10,000 would go for the support of local government.

Support: Backers include cities, community development groups and chambers of commerce. They have described it as a crucial downtown development measure for large and small communities alike. Without it, they contend, potential developers are more likely to buy property on the outskirts of town, where real estate prices and taxes may be lower. Marking downtown sites competitive would help halt the deterioration of central business districts, they say. About 30 states have similar systems.

Opposition: Similar proposals have been rejected by voters in the past, as recently as 1976. Opposition has not been organized, but the complexity of the issue is believed to alienate some voters. Other objections to the plan include charges that it uses tax policy for private benefit, creates an unfair advantage for downtown landlords and developers, and causes taxpayers to indirectly subsidize increased service needs of the area during the time the bonds are being retired. Critics in the Legislature objected to a phrase in the amendment that says a city or village may utilize tax increment financing "notwithstanding any other provision in the Constitution, and, without regard to charter limitations and restrictions."

Safety items date back

Believe it or not, automotive safety was not invented in recent years in Washington.

Safety has always been a strong concern of the automakers, long before Federal standards were initiated in this area, says the Automotive Information Council (AIC).

Back in 1900, when cars were still called "horseless carriages," the steering wheel replaced the rudder-like steering stick, adding safety as well as convenience to the new type of motor vehicles.

In the next decade the industry introduced the all steel body, rear view mirror, shock absorbers and the electric horn.

Steel wheels, two beam headlamps, laminated windshield glass, four-wheel hydraulic brakes, balloon tires and windshield wipers revolutionized automobiles produced in the Twenties.

The Thirties brought improved steering gears, power brakes, defrosters and seated beam headlamps, while the Forties introduced double hood latches, padded instrument panels and self-adjusting brakes. An innovation early in this period was turn signals — a decided improvement over the practice of hanging one's arm out the window to indicate direction.

As the population of automobiles mushroomed in the post-war Fifties, safety became an even more important factor. Seats belts, head restraints, energy-absorbing steering wheels and impact-resistant door latches were added.

After the Fifties came dual braking systems, collapsible steering columns, wear indicators for various car parts, side impact beams, plus others initiated by Federal law.

The AIC notes there now are 50 National Highway Traffic Safety Administration standards directly affecting vehicle safety.

NEBRASKA FARM BUREAU FEDERATION
By M.M. Van Kirk
Director of Information

Farm people have said for many years that something should be done about the deluge of beer and soft drink cans and bottles tossed into the roadsides along their farms and into their fields. Finally they have a chance to do something about it.

They can vote for Proposition 301 on the November ballot to require a minimum five-cent refund on all beer and carbonated beverage containers sold in Nebraska. If the bill passes, Nebraska will join Oregon and six other states which have chosen this method of reducing the throwaway can and bottle litter problem effectively without cost to the taxpayers.

Of course this is not just a farm problem, it's everybody's problem. The can and bottle litter fouls city streets and parks, urban dwellers' curbsides, lawns and gardens. A successful majority decision for Proposition 301 will need favorable votes from all segments of the state's residents. The farm and ranch based for the measure, by all logic and based on years of frustration by the problem, should be overwhelmingly in support. The proposed bill has the backing of the general farm organizations.

In Nebraska an estimated 550,000,000 throwaway bottles and cans were sold last year reflecting the nationwide trend by beer and soft drink manufacturers to market their products in throwaway containers. This trend has been pushed during the past 20 years by the container and bottling industries without regard for the environmental damage and nuisance aspects of the situation.

The bill proposed by petition in Nebraska is similar to the Oregon bottle law which was approved some years ago and is credited with reducing beverage container litter along Oregon highways by 83 percent. Similar laws have been passed by voters in Michigan, Vermont, Iowa, Delaware, Connecticut and Maine. In all cases, the beer, beverage and container industries have spent millions to head off a favorable vote, claiming that it would result in loss of employment and increased costs to consumers, along with many other dire contents.

Experiences of the states where such legislation has been enacted all refute such contentions. Use of returnable containers has actually increased employment and solid waste disposal requirements have been reduced. And a 28-city nationwide survey on comparative price indicated soft drinks sold in refillable bottles cost five cents less and beer eight cents less than in throwaway cans and bottles.

For many years, similar legislation has been introduced in the Nebraska Legislature and rarely has even got out of committee because of the intense lobbying by the beer, soft drink and container industries. This is typical of the experience of the other states. Legislators simply won't pass the legislation... money talks in terms of political contributions. As one brave senator in the Nebraska Legislature declared before a vote that doomed the proposal for another year, "The only ones who want this legislation are the people."

Opponents of such legislation have spent millions in other states to defeat the proposal and to influence the vote by confusing the issues and using all kinds of misleading arguments to discredit support for the measure. It is estimated that they will spend some $350,000 in advertising alone this fall against the proposition. Supporters, mostly rank and file people, have no such resources at their disposal, but must rely almost entirely on the good sense of Nebraska voters to see through the arguments of the special interest groups. Proposition 301 is a vote by the people and for the people and so far the polls indicate the people have that pretty well figured out. Hopefully they won't let themselves be confused on the issue between now and election day.

Art Display

By WSC Students

Art works by two Wayne State College senior art students will be on display Sept. 18 through 20 at the Nordstrand Visual Arts Gallery in the Fine Arts Center.

The exhibits are part of the "senior exhibit" requirement for WSC art majors. Included in the displays are drawings, sculptures, prints, paintings, quilting and other art works by the students.

The displaying works will include Dave Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald E. Smith of Omaha. He is a 1975 graduate of Burke High School and a senior art major at WSC.

Kim Willis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Willis of Shelby. She is a 1974 graduate of Shelby Public High School and a senior art education major at WSC.

Possible Aid For Grad Work

Qualified Wayne State College seniors interested in attending graduate school may be able to get financial assistance for next fall through the Danforth Foundation of St. Louis, Mo.

Inquiries for the Danforth Graduate Fellowships, to be awarded by the Danforth Foundation in April, 1979, are being accepted through Dr. James Phifer, Wayne State College liaison officer and chairman of the Division of social sciences at WSC.

The fellowships are open to all qualified persons having a serious interest in college and university teaching careers and in studying for a Ph.D. in a field common to the undergraduate liberal arts curriculum in the U.S.

About 60-65 fellowships will be awarded to college seniors who are nominated by campus liaison officers throughout the U.S. Another 40-45 will be awarded to post-baccalaureate persons applying directly to the Foundation.

Applicants for the baccalaureate awards must be college seniors and may not have taken graduate level classes beyond their college level work.

The fellowships are one-year awards, renewable until completion of the advanced degree or for a maximum of four years. Stipends are based on individual need but will not exceed $2,500 for single recipients and married students with no children. Married recipients with children can receive up to $3,500. The fellowships also cover required tuition and fees.

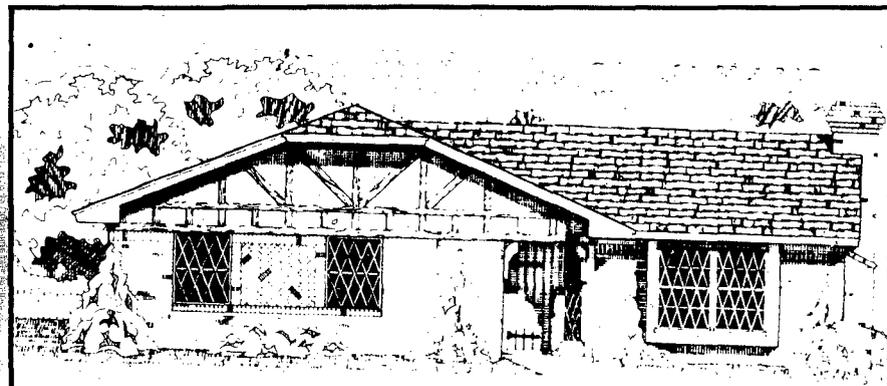

Those WSC seniors interested should contact Dr. James Phifer of the Social Sciences Division before Sept. 22.

Should be Enough Grain Storage

Mathematically, there should be enough storage in Nebraska, off-farm and on-farm, to contain anticipated grain stocks as of October 1, as well as to accommodate an all-time, overall record harvest of corn, sorghum and soybeans this fall.

The Nebraska Grain Marketing, Storage and Utilization Committee reaches this consensus at a meeting here Thursday, (Sept. 14): "But as always, the harvest and grain storage situation is much more complex than indicated by that oversimplified analysis, the committee warned. The locations of available storage and large amounts of grain do not coincide throughout the state, continuing to make transportation an all-important piece of the puzzle. One serious storage-deficient area is in north-central Nebraska, Holt-Keota-Paha-Brown-Rock Counties.

And the weather, while now not as crucial in determining final row crop yields, will have a heavy hand in the next four to six weeks in dictating harvest conditions and grain moisture content which must be dealt with in short and long-term storage.

The committee, headed by Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources Extension agronomist Dr. D.G. Hanway, and composed of representatives of state and federal agencies, IANR and the grain industry,

Now's the Time For Lawn Rust

Have your shoes been turning a rusty color lately after mowing the lawn? If so, your lawn is already infected with a disease known as "rust." The red color is caused by the large number of rust spores which are present.

This disease usually develops in late summer and early fall. The environmental conditions favorable for the development of this disease normally are present at this time.

Lawns heavily infected with rust have a reddish-brown or rusty appearance. Upon close examination of the grass blades and leaf sheaths, there will be rust-colored spots which will rub off easily onto your fingers. Continuous heavy infection causes many of the grass blades to turn yellow and die. Severely infected lawns may winterkill.

Bluegrass varieties vary in their susceptibility to rust. In the past, the Merion variety of Kentucky bluegrass was more susceptible to rust than the common Kentucky bluegrass. Zoysia grass, a relatively new turfgrass in this area, may have serious rust infections. Some of the newer ryegrasses also are severely affected by rust.

Rust may be controlled by spraying with a recommended fungicide as soon as the disease is detected. Effective fungicides are Zineb, Maneb, Tersan LSR, Daconil 2787 and DRYRENE. Follow the directions on the label and add enough wetting agent to prevent runoff. Good coverage of the leaf surface is necessary if good control is expected. For best results, the fungicide should be applied at seven-day intervals following mowing and removal of clippings.

based its projections on Sept. 1 estimates supplied by the Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service:

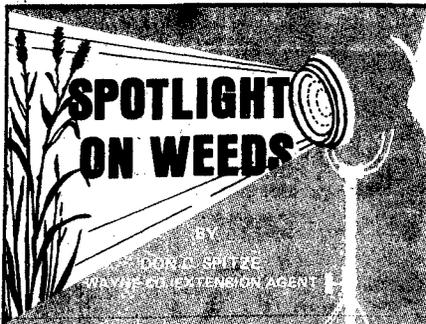

Corn—Production of 674.1 million bushels, which would be 7 percent over last year's total. The per-acre average yield of 107 bushels, (from 6.3 million acres) if realized, would eclipse the previous record of 104 bushels harvested in 1972.

Sorghum—Total production forecast at 43.2 million bushels, 7 percent below last year, projected per acre yield of 74 bushels is a record high (one over the 73 bushels held in 1969). Acreage for harvest at 1.9 million is down 11 percent from a year ago.

Soybeans—Total production of 43.2 million bushels would be up 8 percent from last year's crop. The forecast yield of 34 bushels per acre would equal last year's record yield. But the 1.27 million acres of soybeans is nearly 5 percent above the previous record.

For the first time, Dr. Hanway commented, soybeans appear to be moving into second place behind corn in Nebraska in terms of income, ahead of wheat and sorghum.

There should be a good crop of all three grains over most of Nebraska except the southwest portion, the committee agreed. Warmer than normal temperatures in September may shrink some kernels and make some corn chaffy, but should not greatly affect overall yield totals. The balmy weather also is hastening grain toward maturity, and each day lessens the danger of frost damage, Hanway said. If good weather holds to permit rapid early harvest with a few loads of new grain already reported during the week — storage problems would be eased to the extent that not. See STORAGE, page 7

Description

Canada thistle is a perennial, reproducing by underground rootstocks and seed. The plant has somewhat flashy underground rootstocks, which send up new shoots every eight to twelve inches. In the fall, the plant produces a rosette of basal leaves that are three to six inches long and have wavy spiny margins. In the spring, a flowering stalk two to four feet high is produced. The plant does not produce seed in all the heads. The seeds are smooth, light to dark-brown color, oblong, slightly flattened and slightly curved.

Control

In pastures or waste areas, use one quarter 2,4-D plus one pint Banvel in fall rosette stage or early bud in spring. If Canada thistle is treated in corn fields use 1/2 pint 1,4-D amine plus 1/4 pint Banvel per acre. Avoid tillage five weeks before and one week after application. Plan to treat for several consecutive years.

Special Remarks

Fall developing rosettes of Canada thistle can be treated in the fall after harvest or crops like soybeans and silage corn using 1 quart 2,4-D plus 1 pint Banvel.

Roundup may be used as a spot treatment for Canada Thistle in barley, corn, oats, sorghum and wheat.

1. It is a "spot" treatment only. Roundup will kill the crop in the treated area also. Take care to avoid drift outside target area.

2. Treatment must be made prior to headings of small grain and sorghum, initial pod set on soybeans, and silking of corn. Do not apply when the crop has set seed.

3. For control of perennials, the weeds should be treated in the optimum stage of growth. The best time to treat Canada Thistle is in late June or when plants are in early bud stage. Weeds should be growing actively, but prior to drought stress.

4. Roundup should be applied at the rate of 1 gallon per 100 gallons of spray solution. According to the label only hand held and gun equipment can be used.

5. A copy of the label must be in the possession of the user at the time of Roundup application for spot treatment.

Real Possibility

Exchange of Scientists with Russia

LINCOLN—An exchange of scientists between the Soviet Union and Nebraska within the next few years is a real possibility, according to Dr. Martin A. Massengale, Vice Chancellor of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Massengale returned recently from a trip to Russia "primarily to look into the possibility for future scientific exchange scientists—particularly agricultural scientists. In some areas they have done excellent research work in agriculture and natural resources and in other areas we are far ahead," he said.

The Aug. 9-19 trip included four days in Moscow, then a longer time in the Ukraine and Russian Republics. He spent "a lot of time" in the Crimea Region in southern Russia, which is surrounded largely by the Black Sea, and in the Kubon Region near Krasnodar.

"If we can exchange scientists and ideas and each know how the other lives and works in their own countries, we can have a better understanding. We can do this for the benefit of the people of both countries," he said.

The Vice Chancellor, whose background is in agronomy, said that the Soviets have done good work in minimum tillage because much of their agricultural region is in a low rainfall area. Another topic which deserves attention by Nebraskans is in soil suppression. "Their people indicated that they had been pretty well able to dissipate hail, thus causing much less crop damage," he said.

Some of the areas of plant breeding—for example, drought tolerance and winter hardiness in cereal crops—have been studied thoroughly by the Russians and "I think they're leading the world in sunflower breeding and certain of the oilseed crops.

"By the same token, we have a number of packages of information that we could provide them on management techniques. They have not refined these as much as we have," he added.

The Soviets have made progress in the last few years, but they are not generally as advanced in agricultural production as the United States.

"One thing I noticed was that their machinery tended to be large and not as miniaturized as ours and not as precision-oriented as many of our pieces of equipment here," he said. The Russians have some natural handicaps to overcome in their agricultural production—which the U.S. does not, such as less favorable temperatures because Canada or further north; fewer areas of good soil types and a lack of Nebraska's plentiful water supply.

For Nebraskans interested in the water quality of their groundwater supplies, a new resource atlas is now available. Titled GROUNDWATER QUALITY ATLAS OF NEBRASKA, the 9" x 14" Resource Atlas No. 3 published by the Conservation and Survey Division of the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources is the first of its kind produced in the state.

Fourteen maps depict the area extent of different concentration ranges of the major chemical constituents of the state's groundwater. A fifteenth map shows the sampling site for seven trace constituents: discussed in a final section of the atlas. A page of interpretive text accompanies each map. In certain cases, land use activities are mentioned in relation to various concentrations of some constituents. Because irrigation is a major use of groundwater in Nebraska, the quality of the water used for irrigation is emphasized in the atlas.

Since all but two Nebraska communities having public water supply systems derive part or all of their supply from groundwater, the new publication should be useful to most communities in the state. For this reason, the authors—R.A. Ehlberg of the U.S. Geological Survey and R.F. Spalding of UNL's Conservation and Survey Division—have emphasized public health standards and limits in the discussion of each constituent.

The occurrence, distribution, and range of concentrations of the following chemical constituents of Nebraska's groundwater are depicted: dissolved solids, hardness (calcium and magnesium), sodium plus potassium, alkalinity (bicarbonate and carbonate), sulfate, chloride, fluoride, silica, boron, iron, manganese, selenium, phosphorus, and nitrate. To these is added a section on such trace constituents as arsenic, cadmium, hexavalent chromium, copper, lead, silver and zinc.

The constituents mapped were chosen on the basis of their relative abundance in the state's groundwater, aesthetic considerations, public health significance, and availability of data.

"Nitrate, the constituent most likely to exceed public health limits in Nebraska, is of special concern to most Nebraskans," write the authors. "Since nitrate is derived from a variety of sources, it is impossible to map nitrate by use of the zoning techniques applied to other constituents. Therefore, only locations of sampling sites and locations of two known problem areas have been included on the nitrate map."

Copies of the Resource Atlas No. 3 are available at $3.00 each (plus sales tax for Nebraska residents) from the Conservation and Survey Division, 113 Nebraska Hall, Lincoln, NE 68588. Orders may be telephoned to (402)-472-3471.

Resources Map of Nebraska

An updated version of a map showing the mineral resources of the state of Nebraska, recently published by the Nebraska Geological Survey, Conservation and Survey Division, Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

The new map replaces an earlier version first published in 1973, copies of which have been out of stock. Added to the revised edition are the following: a graph showing the annual values of oil and gas and of total mineral production in Nebraska; the location of peat pits in the state; and a general revision of the location of sand and gravel pits, sandstone pits, silt of siltstone pits, clay or shale pits, limestone quarries, oil fields and gas fields.

Copies of the new map, titled MINERAL RESOURCE MAP OF NEBRASKA, are available at $1.50 each (plus sales tax for Nebraska residents) from the Conservation and Survey Division, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, 113 Nebraska Hall, Lincoln, NE 68588.

COVERING TRENCH SILOS
Visible top spoilage on trench and stack silos may not appear to be great enough to justify a plastic cover. But look at the results of a USDA study where silo losses of covered and uncovered trenches were compared.

With excellent packing, the difference in top spoilage on alfalfa silage was not great enough to justify covering with plastic. When unseen losses (gaseous and seepage losses) were evaluated a weighted plastic seal proved to be an excellent investment.

In addition to preserving more silage, sealing resulted in a silage that was more palatable. Dairy cows fed the sealed silage ate more silage and produced more milk than those fed silage from the unsealed silo. The difference in the quality of the silage was not detected by either chemical analysis or digestibility studies.

Sealing saves approximately 10 pounds of dry matter per square foot of surface (1.8 pounds of this reduction was top spoilage and 8.2 pounds unseen losses).

CORN SILAGE TIPS
For best corn silage, harvest at 35 per cent dry matter, use an air-tight silo, do a good job of compaction and chop your corn plant as fine as possible.

The higher the dry matter, the lower the seepage. Anything under 30 percent dry matter in an upright silo will have a seepage loss, usually about 10 percent dry matter and consisting of ash, organic acids and some nitrogenous material. All except ash is material the animal can use.

Spoilage losses will vary with the height of the silo, type of cover put over the pack and degree of compaction. These losses will vary with the tightness of the silo, type of cover put over the pack and degree of compaction. These losses will run seven to 10 percent of the dry matter.

Start harvesting when kernels are in the early dent to late dent stage. At this time, dry matter of the plant is about 30 to 40 percent while the kernels will run from 50 to 65 percent.

To eliminate excessive seepage dry matter in tower silos should be about 35 percent and in bunkers 30 percent.

Another plus from harvesting at this stage: yield per acre increases until the plant reaches approximately 35 percent dry matter or until the first killing frost. Then it levels off for five to 10 days and begins declining at a rapid rate. That's because its losing leaves and tassels and, in the case of lodging, the entire stalk.

Corn silage should be chopped at 1/4 to 3/8 inch irrespective of the stage of maturity or dry matter. Fine chopping improves palatability and fermentation, increases the amount of dry matter stored per cubic foot and reduces the amount of oxidized losses during storage.

Storage

as much grain would need to be dried.

The estimated total 1978 feed grain and soybean production of approximately 857.9 million bushels, along with 426 million bushels anticipated in storage October 1, equals upward of 1.3 billion bushels, which, on paper, would fit into total storage capacity now estimated at about 1.4 billion bushels.

The two factors which have made the matchup of grain stocks and storage more attainable are unprecedented construction of on-farm storage by grain producers, and a larger than anticipated disappearance of grain stocks over the summer, especially sorghum.

Harold Rademacher of the Nebraska ASCS office, said a surge of applications for on-farm storage facilities has bushed the estimate on total storage capacity from 1.2 billion bushels to 1.4 billion bushels.

An estimated 80 million bushels of new bin storage have been built on Nebraska farms since April, he said. The ASCS storage facility loan program is much bigger this year than in 1977, Rademacher stated, commenting that "I've never seen as much activity in building bins on farms."

However, the ASCS official cautioned that some storage may not be ready when the grain is harvested. A shortage of concrete has forced some farmers to put up bins without concrete floors. These unfinished facilities could account for 10 to 20 million bushels of grain. Asphalt—as scarce as cement—and polyethylene sheets are being used as substitute floors.

Noting that "we're working day and night to move sorghum out of the state," Rademacher said the estimate on disappearance of grain from existing stocks has been boosted from 190 million to 205 million bushels. Most of the sorghum is moving to storage in states south of Nebraska.

Rademacher and grain industry officials reported much grain stored on farms for a year or two is coming out of bins in bad shape. Rademacher said many farmers "are taking a beating" on grain being delivered. He said the ASCS is stepping up its inspection program of on-farm storage, and hopes to inspect every farm with grain reserve storage by Oct. 14.

Dr. Hanway said the buildup of grain stocks is making the handling and storage of grain by farmers a continuing, long-term proposition. The ability to keep grain in condition will become a "new component of farm management," he predicted. The IANR agronomist said the Nebraska Cooperative Extension Service has created a task force to deal with the challenge of grain storage and handling as an educational program to extend over many years.

Hanway, making a report given to him by the Nebraska Grain and Feed Dealers Association, Rademacher and Richard Sanne of the Nebraska Public Service Commission, painted a more drab picture on transporting grain.

Union Pacific Railroad has reported catching up on the demand for grain cars; Chicago and North Western is supplying current demands; but Burlington Northern reports a "bad" situation on cars. BN figures show 6,500 cars short of filling needs in Nebraska and surrounding states. The railroad said it could handle 600 cars a day but has only 250 cars available a day, including those owned by private shippers.

The committee was told 50 million bushels of 1977 grain must be moved prior to or during the upcoming harvest. Rademacher said "150 million bushels of grain could be moved tomorrow if we had transportation."

Despite some bleak aspects in transporting grain, the committee was told Nebraska is fortunate compared to heavy-producing grain states, such as Iowa, in terms of storage. Rademacher said Iowa "is in terrible shape" in storage capacity.

Looking toward the 1979 harvest, the committee saw little prospect of increasing domestic use of feed grains through livestock. A fairly favorable world grain picture, trade barriers by such countries as Japan and the inability of some countries needing grain for food to pay for it were cited as deterrents to increasing U.S. grain exports.

William W. DeWitt, grain and livestock producer and agricultural leader, said "we've got to quit producing grain or find a market for it."

INTRODUCING BUTTER-NUT EXTRA MEASURE COFFEE

Extra Measure says it saves you money...

Because of our special roasting and grinding process, only 12 ounces of Extra Measure brew as many full-flavored cups as a pound of most ordinary coffees. That's nice. What's nicer is Extra Measure is 100% pure coffee, packed fresh, while it's still warm. So it has all the good, fresh taste Butter-Nut is famous for.

Whether you use an automatic drip coffee-maker, or any kind of coffee-maker with a filter, use this 35¢ coupon to try a great new coffee.

Extra Measure says it saves you money...
