Carries All Four Wards

Write-In Candidate Marsh Mayoral Victor

The voice of the people in the Wayneland area was heard loud and clear Tuesday as a near record number of voters registered decisive mandates in the general election.

Some 3,173 of 4,928 registered voters in Wayne County cast their ballots Tuesday, representing a strong 65 percent turnout. In the last off year general election in 1974, 59 percent of the registered voters made their way to the polling places.

Several local and regional races, plus controversial constitutional amendments, were the main reasons for the large voter turnout, according to Election Commissioner Morris Weible.

Perhaps the most decisive victory was claimed by write-in candidate for Wayne mayor, Wayne Marsh, who won the city post over two announced candidates by a substantial margin.

Marsh collected a total of 986 votes in the four wards in Wayne. Walt Tolman received 325 votes and Lee Echtenkamp came up with 189 votes.

Wayne County voters followed the statewide tide in two of three constitutional amendments which were included in the general election. They favored Proposition 301, the so-called Bottle Bill by a vote of 1682-1421. They voted against 300, state aid to education by a vote of 1627 to 1308 and against 302, a spending bid petition with a vote of 1723 against and 1332 favoring the proposition.

On the city level, incumbent second ward councilman Carolyn Filter was returned to the governing body by a vote of 269 to 98 for Frank Woehler. Larry Johnson, fourth ward and Leo Hansen, third ward, ran unopposed. Johnson received 390 votes and Hansen polled 320 votes. Darrel Heier, appointed as a first ward councilman, ran See VICTOR, page 9

Puffers Abstaining

WAYNE COUNTY RESIDENTS are being asked to "kick the habit" for at least one day this month. Smokers nationwide will sign cards pledging not to smoke on Thursday, Nov. 16 during the Great American Smokeout sponsored by the American Cancer Society. Mrs. Donna Hansen, county chairman, said the Smokeout is to show smokers they can quit by taking one day at a time. In Wayne County, Smokeout booths will be set up today (Thursday) and the following Thursday, Nov. 16, at the First National and State National Banks and at Sav. Mor Drug in Wayne and at the Commercial State Bank in Hoskins. A booth also will be manned at Wayne State College by members of Blue Key. Several Wayne businessmen threw in their cigarettes early last week and pledged not to smoke on Nov. 16. Pictured from left is Wayne Marsh, Wayne business chairman for the American Cancer Society, who watches Roger Nelson, Gary Van Meter, Annie Reeg and Jim Marsh as they pledge not to smoke on Nov. 16. The men also received "survival kits" which included mints and chewing gum.

Record Prices

Midwest Land Company, Wayne, Tuesday sold unimproved dryland farms near Jackson at record prices. The five farms ranged from $2,142.85 per acre to $552.50 per acre.

Midwest attributed the prices to the pre sale work done with various interested bidders that gave them prior financing commitments and to the scarcity of land offerings of this type in the Jackson, Hubbard, Emerson and Willis areas.

Wayne State SID

With 17 seconds remaining on the clock Washburn kicker Mike Cassin missed a 26-yard field goal attempt giving the Wayne State College Wildcats a 7-6 victory over the Washburn Ichabods.

Both teams were held scoreless until late in the second quarter when Wildcat quarterback Rick Lade of Tekamah ran for five yards and a touchdown. The PAT attempt by Bart Emanuel of North Bend proved good and the Wildcats retired to the lockerrooms at the half with a 7-0 edge over Washburn.

Just minutes into the second half Washburn's quarterback Mike Atkins passed to split end Mike Keeley for 11 yards. Keeley then flicked the ball to Jim Rodden who ran for 35 yards and a touchdown.

The PAT attempt by Mike Cassin, who had made 18 out of 20 such attempts previously this season, failed, bringing the score to Wayne 7, Washburn, 6, where it was to remain for the final score.

Offensively, the Wildcats came alive in Saturday's game, accumulating 321 total offensive yards against the Ichabod defense. The Wildcat offense now averages 309.77 yards per game, compiling a total of 2788 yards in nine games.

The Wildcats' top receiver, Jeff Ingrum, matched WSC's all-time reception record of 41 receptions set in 1975 by Maurie Miniken, despite Washburn's tight rein on the junior from Sioux City.

Wildcat Bob Barry, a junior from Battle Creek, rushed for 168 yards in 40 carries for a team leading total of 1029 yards rushing. Barry who averages 114.33 yards rushing per game, needs only 101 yards to match his own single season rushing record of 1130 set last year. Teammate Rick Lade of Tekamah, leads in passing, compiling 1200 yards in 235 attempts with 106 completions this fall.

The Wildcat defense proved to be a tough opponent for Washburn. The Wildcats held the Ichabod offense to only 52 yards rushing and 132 yards passing in Saturday's game. The Wayne defense has held opponents to 2574 yards so far this season averaging 266 yards per game.

Leading the defense Saturday was middle guard Greg Welch of Norfolk. Welch has 39 solo tackles and 55 assists for the year.

The Wildcats, now 3-4-2 for the season and 2-2-2 in Central States Conference play, will travel to Emporia Saturday for their last game of the season beginning at 1:30 p.m.

Jackrabbits Protected By Season

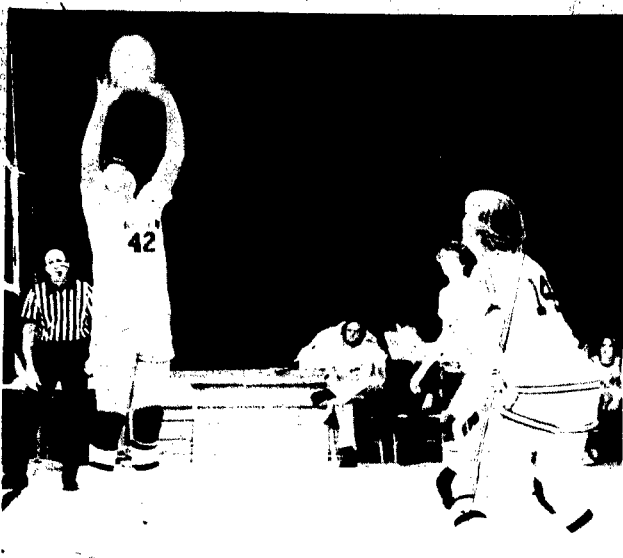

The Jackrabbit, once considered a varmint that could be shot all year long, is now granted the protection of a closed season and daily bag limits just like most game species, according to the Game and Parks Commission.

Ross Lock, the Commission's wildlife biologist in charge of nongame and endangered species, said that white-tailed and black-tailed jackrabbits are both legally recognized as "nongame species in need of conservation." The conservation program includes a year-round closed season in the eastern one-quarter of the state, and a three month season with a bag limit of four and a possession limit of eight in the rest of the state.

That three-month season began Nov. 1 and runs through Jan. 31. The year-round closed area lies east of Nebraska Highway 14, which passes through Niobrara, Albion, Central City, and Superior. Before gaining its status as "in need of conservation," jacks could be shot year round, in any number, and in all parts of the state.

According to Lock, about the only practical difference between the jackrabbit in its status as "nongame species in need of conservation," and a game species like the cottontail rabbit or pheasant, is that jackrabbits can be hunted by Nebraska residents without a hunting permit or habitat stamp.

Shelby Cuts Allen State VB Quest Short

SETTING THE ball up for Susie Erwin to spike is Beth Stalling in action against Shelby Saturday

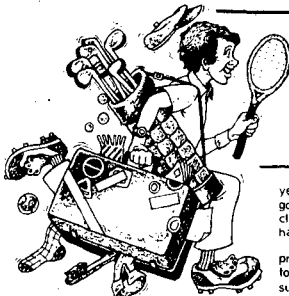

The Allen Eagles encountered a tough, aggressive Shelby team Saturday night and fell to the Huskies in two games 6-15, 9-15 in a regional playoff match at Howells.

The win qualifies Shelby for state playoffs while Allen drops to 13-4 for the season. Shelby took charge of the match in the first game and the Eagles couldn't come back. Lacking some of the spark that they had used to reach regionals, Allen kept picking at the Husky lead but couldn't eliminate it.

Shoot, Don't Shoot Tonight

"Outdoor Nebraska," the Game and Parks Commission's weekly television show on the Nebraska ETV Network, will deal with hunter safety on its program tonight (Thursday). The program will feature the film "Shoot, Don't Shoot," an excellent training aid for developing or brushing up on basic hunter safety skills, according to Dick Turpin, the Commission's hunter safety coordinator.

Outdoor Nebraska is broadcast weekly at 8 p.m. Thursday evenings on the Nebraska Educational Television Network

Randy's RECAP

According to Randy Hascall

I personally feel with all things going for you, there wouldn't have been a class B school in Nebraska who could have beaten you.

So again, THANKS for making me proud that I contributed a working body to your team — Congratulations on your super season and BEST OF LUCK to you girls in the future, especially you seniors who will be taking separate roads next fall. — Mrs. Ralph Barclay, Jr.

Thanks to Mrs. Barclay for expressing her views about a top volleyball season.

IT'S TIME FOR ALL of you Pistof Petes and Dr. J's to dust off your basketball sneakers and warm-up the shooting arm as adult recreation basketball season opens in Wayne.

Men of all ages and all facets of life will soon be fast-breaking down court in roundball competition at the City Auditorium.

The adult league will be separated into three age divisions and will open play Monday, Nov. 27. Men, age 25 and under will play on Mondays, ages 26-30 will play on Tuesdays and participants over 30 will compete on Wednesdays.

For more information on the men's adult recreation basketball league, read "Adult Rec Basketball Will Open Season Soon" elsewhere in the sports section.

NOW THAT VOLLEYBALL season ended for the Allen Eagles, most of the girls will make the shift from volleyball to girls basketball.

Winter athletic practice can officially begin on the first of November, so the girls only missed a few days of practice, after falling short in their bid for a state playoff berth.

Some of the other schools in the state will be set back much further. With state playoffs on Friday and Saturday, Nov. 10 and 11, schools in the playoffs will be especially late in opening practice.

Members of the state championship volleyball teams, who wish to compete in basketball won't be able to begin until Monday, Nov. 13.

Football players, who find themselves in the state championships will be in the same predicament. If a football player wishes to try out for wrestling or basketball, he will be starting practice much later than a non-football player.

Not only will this near two-week absence hurt the player's potential but it may also affect the team. I believe that state playoffs are a great thing but when athletic seasons overlap by two weeks, there is a flaw in the setup. Teams that are talented enough to play in state playoffs, shouldn't be penalized in basketball and wrestling.

Adult Rec Basketball Will Open Season Soon

It's that time of the year again when men around town and in the country are digging out their gym shorts and tennis shoes in preparation for the adult recreation basketball league.

Hank Overin has divided the league into three divisions. A league, age 25 and under; B league, age 26-30; and C league, over age 30.

Men interested in participating in the A league should meet at the City Auditorium Monday, Nov. 27. Likewise B league participants should meet Tuesday, Nov. 28 and C league on Wednesday, Nov. 29. Play will continue on these nights until about the first week of April.

Anyone who lives within the city limits can participate free of charge, while persons outside the city limits must pay a $10 entry fee. Persons who played last year and failed to pay the fee must pay last year's charge as well as this year's before they will become eligible to play.

College students are ineligible unless they are members of the faculty or live off campus and hold a part-time job of more than 30 hours a week.

If persons are eligible to play in the A league but haven't played much high school or college intramural basketball, they are welcome to play in the B league according to Overin.

Overin is hoping to organize six teams in each league with no more than seven players on a team. With this arrangement, everyone on a team must play four minutes of the first three quarters and two minutes of the last one. Quarters will be eight minutes long.

All games will be played at the Wayne City Auditorium.

Kittens Close 21-11 Season With State Loss To Midland

The Wayne State College women's volleyball team closed its season with a winning 21-11 regular season and 9-5 in Central States Conference action.

The Wildkittens concluded their season on Saturday losing to a tough Midland Lutheran College team in state finals held at Nebraska Wesleyan 15-7, 0-15, and 7-15.

Coch Coach Bernice Fulton said, "We tried our best and tried very hard but it just wasn't enough to win."

WSC was seeded third going into the tournament and defeated the College of St. Mary's of Omaha and Creighton in first round action on Friday.

Despite the loss at state several individual spikers had good seasons.

Senior Wildkitten Deb Bishop of Fullerton finished the season with 1127 total points including 735 assists, followed by senior Karen Heeney of Hubbard with 956 total points. Heeney also led service with 375 total points.

Freshman Cheryl Abris of Dix on also had a good season finishing with 912 total points. Abris led the team with 274 total offensive points.

Leading blocker for the Wildkittens was Marilyn Strate of Norfolk with 44 points.

Coch Fulton, who said she is anticipating a great start next year, went on to comment, "I am really proud of the girls this year."

Hurley, Milks MVP's In WSC Home Finale

Defensive end Tim Hurley and offensive tackle Bill Milks were named by coach Del Stollenberg as the Wayne State College "Players of the Week" for their performances in the Wildcat's 7-6 victory Saturday over the Washburn Ichabods.

Hurley, a 6-3, 210 pound junior from Omaha, contributed only one solo tackle and two assists Saturday, but had three important quarterback sacks. He has baffled opponents this fall with his aggressive play, gaining a total of 67 tackles, including 11 quarterback sacks.

"Tim gives the defense a good pass rush with some good quarterback sacks," Stollenberg said. "He is also a good leader for our defense."

Milks, a 6-5, 235 pound sophomore from Springfield, played an

WS Harriers End Season At Districts

The Wayne State College cross country team will travel to Kearney Saturday for the District 11 NAAIA tournament beginning at 11 a.m. which will conclude the WSC harriers' season.

On the road for WSC will be Dave Hauser, Ron Keegan, Mark Baumel, Gerry Steinauer and Scott Schreiner.

The Wildcats visited Emporia last Saturday for Central States Conference action but lacked enough entries to place due to Dave Hauser's absence because of illness.

The remaining four harriers finished the tournament as follows: Ron Keegan, 23rd with 29:08; Mark Baumel, 26th, 29:28; Gerry Steinauer, 29th, 29:52 and Scott Schreiner, 29th, 32:04.

Winning the CSC match was Fort Hays with 25 total points. The remaining three teams finished as follows: Emporia, 50; Kearney, 77 and Pittsburg, 81.

important role in blocking for the WSC offensive backfield, which gained 321 yards total offense, including 168 yards gained by running back Bob Barry.

Pat Donohoe, an assistant WSC coach, said Milks has been playing very well this fall as a sophomore.

"He is doing a very consistent job," Donohoe said. "He is a pretty aggressive ball player and is improving every game."

Wayne State, now 3-4 overall and 2-2 in Central States Conference play, will travel to Emporia, Kan., for their final game of the 1978 season.

Hall Inductee

INDUCTED INTO the Hall of Fame at Wayne State College was Virgil Y. (Joe) Lindahl, a 1941 graduate of Wayne State. Lindahl was inducted at halftime of the Wayne State-Washburn game Saturday, as the first of 13 former athletes to be inducted into the Hall this year. Lindahl, who was a three time Little All American at WSC, is now athletic director at the University of Northern Colorado.

Pheasant, Quail Season Opens With Good Hunting Saturday

Nebraska's pheasant and quail season opened on an optimistic note Saturday, with hunters in most parts of the state reporting most ringnecks available than in past years, even though they had some trouble bagging them.

The wind and dry weather made the birds quite spooky, causing them to flush well beyond scattergun range in many instances. Some hunters, however, sheepishly confessed to poor marksmanship as the reason for their relatively light game bags.

Check station statistics and conservation officer observations point to south-central Nebraska as one of the hotspots. Wildlife biologist Jim Hurt, operating a check station in the south central area, had 101 hunters with 148 ringnecks by midday, including 22 limits. He speculated that the average would top two birds per hunter by sundown, when hunters would be reporting the results of a full day afield. One officer in the area reported that most hunters had two ringnecks by 11 a.m., and several other officers reported an average bag of well over a bird per hunter by 1 p.m.

In general, bag statistics and hunter reports told of excellent pheasant numbers south of the Platte River and from Seward, Saline, and Gage counties west. However, hunters in the extreme southwest were not able to take full advantage of the situation because of the wind. Other pockets of good hunting were also evident from field reports. One or two areas of the Panhandle were producing pheasants on Saturday. And, east-central Nebraska reports told of several large parties with limits of ringnecks.

In Southeast Nebraska, pheasant hunters were also pleased, although not to the extent of those farther to the west. In the southeast, much attention is traditionally devoted to quail hunting, and early reports indicated rather good success. However, an accurate picture of the southeast's bobwhite hunting will take biologists a bit more time to compile.

In Northeast Nebraska, pheasant numbers appeared to be in good supply. Game warden officers reported fewer hunters in the field, but they were finding more birds than in recent years. As with other parts of the state, dry conditions, spooky birds and sloppy shooting were the main aitches.

The horseshoe crab is thought to be virtually unchanged from its form 300 million years ago.

A British journalist, who writes internationally about men's fashion — even evolutionized what the English man wears and who ranks high among British journalists will visit Wayne State College Friday.

He is Rodney Bennett England currently on tour of the United States to lecture at several major universities. In Nebraska this week he is visiting several colleges, including Midland, whose journalism department arranged his appearance. The Wayne Stater, WSC's newspaper is the sponsor of his visit here.

Bennett-England will talk to journalism classes in the afternoon before a 6 p.m. dinner in the Student Center Birch Room. Following dinner, he will talk about British affairs to an audience of students, faculty and townspeople. "It's open to the public. In the Birch Room, An ex-Fleet Street man, Bennett-England wrote for the Sunday Express, one of Britain's largest newspapers, for seven years. He left the Express to write free-lance and has contributed to more than 300 publications worldwide.

The world of male fashions ranks among his favorite topics, but he also writes about grooming, food, drink and antiques. He recently completed his own cookbook. Two books have been printed internationally: "Dress Optional — the Revolution in Menswear," and "As Young as You Look."

He also has been a BBC broadcaster, lecturer, P.R. consultant and ad agency boss. He served three years on the Church of England governing board, and he is in demand as a member of numerous British media councils.

At age 27 he was elected chairman of the London district of the Institute of Journalists, Britain's oldest journalists organizations and held the post three years — the first person in nearly a century to do so. Then he spent a record three years as vice-chairman of the institute.

Not surprised at appointment

CAPITOL NEWS

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent

The Nebraska Press Association
LINCOLN — A number of prominent Republicans said they weren't surprised at all after Gov. J.J. Exon announced the appointment of a chief justice of the Nebraska Supreme Court.

The governor's choice was his close political ally and legal advisor, Norman Krivosha, a 44-year-old Lincoln lawyer, who was one of eight persons who applied for the most prestigious legal position in the state.

Exon asked Krivosha to assume his new duties as soon as possible, and Krivosha said he would try to wind down his legal practice as quickly as that could be accomplished in an orderly fashion.

The day after his appointment he met with the six other judges of the Supreme Court. He said he planned to take a brief vacation before stepping into his new role.

The new chief justice was arguing a case in Lancaster County District Court when Exon announced the appointment. Krivosha was advised of his selection during a court recess and told reporters he was "speechless."

That, he acknowledged, was unusual for him — and the silence didn't last long.

Queried by newsmen about how he would react to sure-to-come statements that his selection was based on politics, Krivosha responded he was one of eight nominees presented to the governor for consideration. And he noted the eight were nominated by a bipartisan nominating commission made up of Democrats and Republicans and lawyers and non-lawyers.

"I would hope the public will afford me an opportunity to display my talent in the legal profession before making a judgment," he said.

The reaction to the appointment within the Nebraska Bar Association was favorable, as it was among members of the judiciary.

Daniel Jewell of Norfolk, NSBA president and a member of the nominating commission that recommended the field of eight from which Exon chose, said Krivosha is "highly regarded within the bar."

While there was Republican criticism that "cronyism" was involved in the appointment, not one of the GOP hierarchy who commented criticized Krivosha as being ill-equipped for the position.

Krivosha said he would describe himself as a middle-of-the-road lawyer who believes in deciding each case on its own merits.

He is 1958 graduate of the University of Nebraska College of Law. A Detroit native, he first thought he would become a scientist but early in his collegiate career decided to study law.

Exon said any one of the eight nominees for chief justice would have made an excellent head of the court.

"I have known him (Krivosha) well for the last 20 years and have complete confidence in his professional abilities, sound judgment and people-oriented philosophy," the governor said in a prepared statement.

He noted Krivosha, "at 44 years of age, has an opportunity to serve a long tenure in this position before mandatory retirement."

The date when Krivosha will be sworn in couldn't be determined immediately.

Tax Receipts Up
Sales tax receipts in Omaha and

Lincoln are higher than had been expected — and they apparently were higher in August for the state too. If adjustments are made for a tax rate change.

The rate for the state sales tax dropped one-half percent the first of the year. State Tax Commissioner William Peters said preliminary revenue reports for August indicate a decline of 6.4 percent in sales tax revenue in comparison with figures for the same month a year earlier.

But Peters said if adjustments are made for the tax rate change, the figures indicate a 9.2 percent increase over last August.

He added individual income tax revenues during August also indicated an increase over the same month a year ago.

Corporate income tax receipts for August indicated a 3 percent gain over the previous August while total miscellaneous general fund taxes rose 10.7 percent.

In Omaha, the municipal sales tax receipts were about 8 percent more than had been projected, and in Lincoln they were running 9.7 percent above anticipation during the first two months of the Capital City's fiscal year.

The Lincoln Finance Department estimated Lincoln will collect $8.3 million in sales taxes during the fiscal year that began in September.

In Omaha, the city sales tax rose on July 1 from 1 percent to 1.5 percent. In a third quarter report, the Omaha Finance Department said collections totaled $13.3 million, compared to the $12.6 million that had been projected.

Predicts Large Turnout

When this appears in print, it will be known how close to the mark Secretary of State Allen Beermann was in forecasting a voter turnout of 540,000 for the general election.

About 10 days ahead of the balloting, Beermann said he expected 540,000 Nebraskans to go to the polls. That's just about 65 percent of the eligible voters.

The record turnout for a Nebraska election was way back in 1934 when 578,704 Nebraskans cast ballots. That was in the middle of the depression when a lot of folks were unhappy and apparently hoped the candidates they were supporting would be able to turn the economic woes around.

Beermann said a number of hotly contested races this year, along with several extremely controversial ballot issues, would help trigger a high vote.

There are seven constitutional amendments plus a local government spending bill, a bottle bill and a referendum on state aid to schools on the ballot.

In addition, half of the Legislature members were up for re-election, as were most county officials.

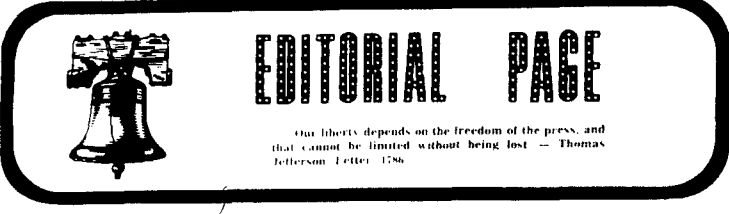

All in all, Beermann said, there appeared to be sound reasons for expecting a heavy voter turnout this fall.

Cheapest Place To Live

The American Chamber of Commerce surveyed 208 communities across the country and found that Nebraska's Falls City was the cheapest place to live.

Falls City, with a rating of 84.1 percent, compared very favorably to the average cost rating of 100 for the 108 cities surveyed.

White Plains, N.Y. was found to be the most expensive with a rating of 136.3. Stamford, Conn., was close behind with 135, followed by New York City with 116.6 and Huntington, L.I., with 114.7.

Can Carter deflate inflation?

President Chamber of Commerce of the United States

WASHINGTON — Will President Carter's anti-inflation program work? I'd give it a very qualified maybe.

As most Americans outside of the government understand, inflation is primarily the product of big federal budget deficits year after year. Wage and price changes are symptoms of the disease, not causes.

The President acknowledged some government responsibility for causing inflation, and he pledged to do something about it. That's good. To the extent that he does actually cut the deficit, his program has a chance of succeeding.

But up till now, Jimmy Carter's record on government spending is not praiseworthy. Although he ran for office on an anti-Washington platform, his first two years have been very much in the established Washington tradition. The federal budget has grown by 25 percent during his administration. For the first fiscal year of his term, the deficit was $51 billion. For the second it is an estimated $39 billion.

By now, you probably know how the inflation cycle works, but it's worth reviewing for those who don't.

When the federal government runs a big deficit, it must borrow from the banking system to cover it. The Treasury keeps the job of raising the money. To keep interest rates low for the Treasury, the Federal Reserve System creates new money. The new money doesn't represent real economic growth, so it dilutes the purchasing power of the money supply. That's inflation.

One part of the President's program could actually contribute to this inflationary cycle. That's his proposal to protect workers in groups which keep their annual increases in wages and benefits to seven percent or less. Workers who qualify would get a tax refund if consumer prices rise more than seven percent. Thus, if inflation for the year runs eight percent, an eligible worker would get a check equal to one percent of his wages, and so on.

The potential problem with this system is that if inflation does run much over seven percent, the Treasury would have to pay out a lot of money — billions and billions of dollars, perhaps. Unless the federal budget is running a surplus at the time, an unlikely event, the Treasury will have to borrow the money. And that gets us right back where we started.

Except for the President's admirable desire to reduce government regulation and increase competition, the rest of his program is show biz, it's an attempt to command the tide not to come in, while keeping a scapegoat handy to blame when it comes in anyway.

If the government isn't inflating the money supply, competition will keep prices and wages in line. If the government is causing inflation, then wage and price increases are inevitable. Even in noninflationary times, inflation wages and prices change continually to reflect changes in supply and demand. There is no way to interfere with that process without causing shortages and other serious economic inefficiencies.

The President was right when he said we all bear a part of the responsibility for inflation. But he is wrong to imply that the source of the problem is producers raising prices or workers demanding higher wages.

The trouble is, we each tend to think we can get more from the government than we are willing to put in. That's where the $51 billion deficits come from. Inflation is the tax we pay for the privilege of believing that you can get something for nothing.

Headlines people like

A federal agency that makes the kind of headlines people like to read is the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress.

The reason people approve of GAO is that it looks at government programs and determines how well they are working and whether they are worth the cost — subjects that opinion surveys show are much on the public's mind. Very often a General Accounting Office report points either to ways of saving millions, or billions, of dollars, or to ways of making the expenditures of those sums make the effects intended.

According to the Nebraska Society of Certified Public Accountants, much of GAO's work comes under the heading of operational auditing, also called management or performance auditing. An operational audit looks beyond the financial audit of an entity's balance sheet and profit or loss statement to the operation itself: How it is functioning; how efficiently and economically it is doing what it is supposed to do; what the results are, not in dollar terms alone, but also in terms of cleaner air or mended limbs or salvaged stumps or whatever the assignment may be.

By no means is operational auditing practiced only by the General Accounting Office, says the state CPA organization. The effectiveness of this kind of audit has been such that Congress now almost routinely attaches to every appropriation

Love affair with autos

The Automotive Information Council recently asked those who had fond memories of once-held cars to write to AIC about their "automobile love affairs." The letters rolled into the offices of the organization in Southfield, Mich. Here are a few excerpts.

T.M. Domick of Roanoke, Va. said "I could not put her (1959 Oldsmobile) out to pasture so I covered her with a plastic sheet and locked her in the barn. Someday a stranger will lift the plastic sheet and ask 'Why?'"

"My favorite was a 1924 Ford Coupe, my first new car," wrote Ira H. Bedenhausen of Gower, Mo. "I did my courting in it. I got the girl and we celebrated our Golden Wedding last year."

"My 1955 Chrysler Imperial which I bought new and still drive to work every day. I got Teddy Wilcox of Sacramento, Calif. In 1956 she and her two children drove it to Alaska where her husband was working. I had to leave the car during one whole winter, buried under snow. I wouldn't sell it for anything."

It was the 1927 Nash with a rumble seat for Mrs. Thomas Regan of Olyphant, Pa. "We still look at the pictures of Lizzie and always remember the good times with her, when we were young and so was Lizzie."

The three great loves of my life are memories, my wife, a 1929 Dodge and a 1941 Dodge," wrote George A. Surkey of Sacramento.

His father's 1955 Chevrolet station wagon is well remembered by G.J. Paenagon of Sacramento because it was a great dating car. "What memories it had! Wonder where it is now and are more adventures being lived?" He added that it made a beer-hiding container attached to the undercarriage. His father caught him when he spotted water dripping under the car from the melting ice.

Warren Morissette of Carmichael, Calif., raves about his 1932 Auburn phaeton. "What a roar with that straight-eight making a hundred miles an hour." He bought it in 1940 for a 1932 Chevy and $55. He still keeps a picture of the car in his wallet. He added, "Please print I'd like to find the present owner."

Harry Osborne, also of Carmichael, recalls that in 1938 when he was a teen-ager he bought a 1926 Model T for $2. Later he bought a 1933 Ford phaeton for $90. "How, or why, I ever parted with it I will never know. I loved it as if it were mortal. What would I do if I had it now? I'd park it in the bedroom."

Irene Johnson, now of Lake Worth, Fla., said her 1955 Buick, which she bought in 1964 for $175, was the best she ever owned. She sold it in 1973 in Connecticut and feels "Old Betsy may still be roaming the hills of Connecticut and the envy of those who see her sail regally by."

Fred Schmidt of St. Joseph, Mo., had a 1966 Chrysler which had been a police car. He said it had the power "to pull down buildings." He said he once had it up to 130 miles per hour as a test. He sold it with 80,000 miles on the odometer and now regrets not having kept it in storage. "Knew where I can buy a good 1966 Chrysler with a 400 CID engine?"

A 1911 Ford Model T roadster was purchased in 1917 by George Prussing of Santa Monica, Calif. It had been remodeled with a brass bound chest, wire wheels instead of wood, and a 30-gallon brass tank on the rear. "Mr. Ford would not have approved!" wrote the 87-year-old Prussing.

Robert W. Wheeler of Tonawanda, N.Y., is sorry he sold his Kissel Speedster, 1927 or 1928, when he went into the Army in 1942. "It sold for $25 and was in perfect condition." Earlier he had owned a 1915 Packard, a Moon and a Jordan, each of which would be worth a fortune today.

The Pink Lady, a 1950 Dodge, left Rose F. Benker of Buffalo, N.Y., with only one regret: "that she didn't leave us any grandchildren."

Another Pink Lady is the 1957 Thunderbird formerly owned by Relta G. Anderson of Citrus Heights, Calif. She sold it in 1968 to a collector in Massachusetts. "The purchaser keeps me informed every Christmas about where the car has been, or will be, shown."

Alfred Bernard of Auburn, Calif., had a 1932 Franklin but had to sell it because "mechanics in those days didn't know how to work on air-cooled motors."

Patrick Bedard, editor at large of "Car and Driver" magazine, in a column talked about his 1953 Studebaker Loewy Coupe, which he drove through college. "Probably the dumbest thing I ever did was let it go for $125 when I graduated. Twenty times that amount wouldn't replace it now. But how was I to know that I was driving a historical artifact?"

John E. Peterson, Washington correspondent of the "Detroit News" wrote, "I still regret not keeping my '56 Covair convertible — an all-back, frisky, fun-mobile that made driving joyous even in the rush hour."

Stephen Rose of Rapid City, N.D., was 12 when his uncle bought a Chevrolet coupe with a rumble seat in 1932. He and his cousin rode in the rumble seat regardless of the weather and loved it.

"Old cars will become even more popular in years to come as the government increases its stringency on automotive companies," said Clifford J. Lockrow, Jr., of Hamburg, N.Y. He called the regulations, "senseless." Today's cars someday will evoke the same type of memories, says AIC.

Killer on roads

More than 52,000 persons died as a result of traffic accidents in 1977. Approximately 26,000 of these persons — half the total number of accident fatalities — died because of a drunk driver.

Drinkers consume a lot of alcoholic beverages. It's estimated that 95 million Americans drink. Some "hold their liquor" better than others. Nowhere near that total number are alcoholics, but, unfortunately for us all, a sizeable number are social drinkers who sometimes don't stop after the "one for the road" or parties or the "stop for coffee" on the way home from work. These people can create deadly traffic conditions for all of us.

How can this problem be solved? "Understanding alcohol and the effect it can produce, and knowing one's limits. There is a very large part of the answer," says a spokesman for the Alcoholic Beverage Commission.

Alcohol is not digested. It is absorbed directly into the bloodstream and carried to all parts of the body, including the brain. This explains why impaired judgment and slack physical condition occur after drinking to excess.

Concentration of alcohol in the blood depends upon several factors: the amount of alcohol consumed, body weight, time elapsed since drinking began, and also quantity and types of food in the stomach. No two people will react the same to alcohol; each individual must know his or her limitations.

Is it ever safe to drive after drinking? If enough time elapses, yes. The body disposes of alcohol through elimination (5 to 10 percent) and oxidation (90 to 95 percent). Oxidation takes place in the liver — at a fairly constant rate. The decline in blood-alcohol averages one ounce an hour.

Intentionally misled

LINCOLN — Nebraska Agriculture Director Roger Sandman this week said that a political advertisement which appeared in the Oct. 21 issue of the "Nebraska Farmer" intentionally misled farmers.

"The advertisement, which was paid for by the Trade Fair Governor Committee, misrepresented the Nebraska Department of Agriculture," said Sandman. Sandman, who has recently returned from a trade promotion mission to the People's Republic of China, said that "it implies that the Department of Agriculture does nothing but regulate agriculture in Nebraska, and that's a long way from the truth."

Charley Thone obviously is not aware of the functions of the State Agriculture Department or its marketing achievements," Sandman said. Sandman pointed out that the Department's Marketing Division has participated in three international trade shows this year and that the Department has been involved in sponsoring 14 foreign trade teams to the state.

Sandman said that in terms of foreign marketing, the Wheat Division alone represents Nebraska wheat producers through 10 foreign offices. The Department of Agriculture also works with both the Nebraska Soybean Board and the Nebraska Corn Board to administer their programs, which each serve to develop foreign markets for Nebraska farmers.

Sandman also stated that other areas of service have been instigated within the Department of Agriculture in the last eight years. Included in these areas are education and promotion areas for young people in agriculture in both high school and the young farmer level. Also various promotion programs for Nebraska agriculture in both high school and the young farmer level. Also various promotion programs for Nebraska agriculture have been implemented including the new combined agricultural exhibit at the State Fair.

Sandman said, "The Department of Agriculture is no longer only a regulatory agency. For several years now we have been actively involved in service-oriented programs to benefit Nebraska agriculture. I am sincerely disappointed that Charlie Thone did not take the time or effort to look at what the Department is accomplishing."

Determine Success Of United States Export Growth

Several factors are weighing heavily in the United States' success in maintaining its current rate of export growth, including the fact the U.S. spends relatively far less on market development than its major competitors do.

Foreign demand for agricultural products is growing, but so is competition with the U.S. to meet the demand. In addition to the impact of market development programs, other influential factors include domestic and international policies, international trade and commodity agreements, international monetary fluctuations and U.S. market intelligence efforts.

Here's a rundown on the present situation regarding the major determining factors:

Domestic Policies — Increased interdependence in the world food situation means domestic farm income and price policies have a larger impact internationally than ever. National programs that go too far to help farmers' income in the short run, for example through sharply higher loan and target prices, are likely to make U.S. farm products less competitive on world markets.

Though local farm prices would be higher, the longer term effect of reduced export demand would be a lower volume of sales and ultimately little change in farm income.

Domestic income and price policies must be delicately balanced to keep U.S. farmers in business and maintain their competitiveness in world markets. The key to current policy is the farmer-owned grain reserve that offers farmers incentive payments to pull excess supplied off the market. In addition to bolstering domestic prices with minimal government intervention, the reserve enhances U.S. reliability as an export supplier and moderates world price fluctuations.

International Policies — Closely related to the domestic reserve program is U.S. participation in efforts to establish an international grain reserve. The reserve would modify price variations, which in recent poor crop years has priced some of the lowest income nations out of the world food market. It would also guarantee supplies in event of extreme shortfalls. Unfortunately, talks in the United Nations' International Wheat Council have stalled because of disagreement of price levels and on reserve size and location.

Meanwhile, the U.S. is moving to establish on its own a six million ton international emergency grain reserve that would be tapped only to provide supplies for critically food-deficit areas.

International Trade and Commodity Agreements — The United States is participating in forums such as the Multilateral Trade Negotiations and the General Agreement of Tariffs and Trade to reduce international barriers to agricultural trade. Progress in the multinational groups has been slow. The participants are committed to trade liberalization but few seem willing to make significant concessions.

The most progress in trade liberalization is being made bilaterally. The U.S. has entered long-term agreements with Russia and Japan that specify minimum and maximum yearly export levels for the major commodities. We have also set up less formal purchase arrangements with Poland, Israel, Taiwan, and Norway. The bilateral agreements are beneficial in that they guarantee markets in years of oversupply and help stabilize world trade.

The benefits of some international commodity arrangements are less clear cut. A trend in the developing world toward establishing marketing groups for commodities such as coffee and sugar could benefit those nations economically in the short run but such agreements retard progress toward trade liberalization overall.

There is talk of a wheat exporting nations' answer to OPEC. But such an arrangement is untenable morally, or practically, because of availability of other food sources and untapped potential in many areas.

Programs — On the basis of percent of farm export earnings, Israel spent 15 times more and Australia 11 times more than the U.S. in 1976. Funding for market development comes mainly from the private sector, and has risen 15 percent in 1978. The Agricultural Trade Act of 1978, now before Congress, would increase government expenditures on export promotion.

A less direct support of market development comes from our international technical cooperation programs. The production assistance we give poorest developing countries tend to increase local productivity and income, reduce dependence of food aid and builds demand for commercial imports. Taiwan and South Korea are examples of food aid recipients that grew into major commercial markets.

JOINING THE ARMY RESERVE WONT INTERFERE WITH COLLEGE.

In the Army Reserve's Split Training Program, you can split basic and advanced individual training into two consecutive summers. You'll earn full Army pay during the summers away plus Reserve pay during the rest of the year. For more details, call your local unit. It's listed in the white pages under "U.S. Government."

U.S. Market Development

World Trade Changes Challenge Export Rate

Changes in world agricultural trade patterns are confronting the United States with severe challenges to maintain a high volume of exports to our traditional markets. To increase exports to growing markets in less developed and centrally planned areas; and to achieve more stable growth in exports of ag products.

The U.S. position of the world's largest producer and exporter of agricultural products is not likely to be seriously threatened in the immediate future. But important changes occurring in world agricultural trade have significant implications for U.S. agriculture.

Exports have become increasingly important to U.S. farm income, with the production from one of three harvested acres in the U.S. going to other countries. Farm product exports generate domestic employment, stimulate income and have contributed more than $10 billion to the U.S. balance of trade in each of the past four years.

The U.S. generally accounts for more than half the world's trade in coarse grains and soybeans, though it produces less than a third of the world's coarse grains and only 40 percent of world soybeans; two-fifths of cotton and wheat trade, but only a sixth of world production; and 20-30 percent of rice trade, but only two percent of world output.

The United States also holds a fourth to a half of all world grain stocks. It accounts for about 44 percent this year — much more than policymakers believe prudent for the U.S. to hold.

Accompanying a sharp rise in the volume of U.S. agricultural exports over the past decade have been subtle transitions in the sources and composition of foreign demand for U.S. farm products.

The three major shifts: —White the volume of U.S. wheat shipments to developing countries has increased by more than a fourth since the early 1960's, there has been a remarkable shift in the mix of commercial sales and concessional sales. Two-thirds of all our wheat exports to the developing countries during 1961-65 were under food aid programs, compared with one-tenth during 1971-75.

—Food products have continued to account for half of U.S. agricultural exports since the early 1960's, but the composition of the remainder has changed radically. Cotton and tobacco made up a fifth of our exports of during 1960-64, as did feedgrains and soybeans.

Since then, cotton and tobacco's share have dropped 50 percent, and the feedgrain and soybean share has nearly doubled. Expansion in exports of soybeans and feed grains accounted for nearly half the growth in U.S. farm exports — from about $5 billion in 1960-64 to nearly $27 billion in 1978.

—U.S. exports to some markets, particularly the Soviet Union and the Peoples' Republic of China (PRC), have grown in importance but have fluctuated tremendously. The Soviet Union bought $18 million worth of farm products from the U.S. in 1970, $12 million in 1971, $954 million in 1973, $410 million in 1975 and $1.1 billion in 1977. China went from $800 million in 1975 to $44,000 in 1976 to $64 million in 1977.

Human beings are the only animals that regularly invite others to share their food.

New Pork Producers Queen

THE NEW Northeast Nebraska Pork Producers Association Queen is Cheryl Roebber (left), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Merle Roebber, RR 2, Wayne. She was crowned Sunday night at the annual meeting of the association which was held in the Student Center at Wayne State College. She is being congratulated by Laura Hagemann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ervin Hagemann, Jr., Wayne, who served as this year's queen. The judging for the event was held Sunday afternoon.

Corn Storers Supply Livestock

A lot of dollars in the form of good feed will remain in Nebraska fields after the grain is harvested from more than eight million acres of bumper yield corn and milo, an Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources Extension specialist reminded this week.

Dr. Paul Guyer said corn and milo stovers (plant residue after harvest) may contain 70 to 100 percent the value of prairie or bromegrass hay for growing cattle and beef cows.

"How these (corn and milo stovers) can best be utilized depends on the livestock, equipment and other roughages available," the beef specialist said.

Constalks can be grazed or harvested as dry stover and/or made into stalklage, Guyer advised.

If harvested soon after corn has been picked, water may need to be added, he said.

If stalks are harvested for stored feed, there still will be considerable grazing available in forage and grain not recovered, Guyer said.

mum recovery of lost grain, leaves and shucks," Guyer emphasized. "The way most corn combines tear up stalks, the opportunity for grazing is limited after the first heavy snow," he commented.

Milo stover usually can be grazed most times during the winter before spring thaws because it usually stands upright and snows seldom cover it completely. It also is well adapted to storage as silage since it normally contains 50 to 60 percent moisture for some time after the grain is harvested, the livestock specialist said.

"If (milo stover) makes the most nutritious silage when harvested soon after grain harvest or frost, whichever comes last. The stover gradually loses nutrients and becomes less nutritious each day following the first killing frost — this is also true for corn silage," Guyer stated.

Milo stover silage works well for supplying forage needs after cornstalk grazing or after spring thaws when cattle need to be kept out of milo and cornfields, he concluded.
