How About The Wayne Marathon?

CAP PETERSEN (back to camera) along with two Wayne State students, chats with George Plimpton (center) following Plimpton's performance Sunday on the Wayne State College campus. Plimpton, who gained international fame for his unprofessional exploits in professional sports and the arts as well as authoring a best-selling book, presented an entertaining program. He was sponsored by the WSC Student Senate.

Set for Saturday

Spring Festival All-Day Affair

Spring will be heralded in Wayne Saturday with a Spring Arts Festival, sponsored by the Nebraska Arts Council and the Wayne Regional Arts Council. The events will be held from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the City auditorium, the Senior Citizens center and outside areas. The purpose of the festival is to introduce the Wayne Regional Arts Council to residents in the Wayneland area and to provide a means of display for area artists. Jane O'Leary, chairman, emphasized the word "regional" is an important part of the new arts council, explaining all residents of the entire area are invited to participate. The festival Saturday will include area Extension clubs with 15 display areas. There will also be high school dramatists, local artists and musicians, elementary school students and college students. Winnebago Indians will display art and craft works as well as music and dances. Wayne senior citizens will display their arts and crafts in the Senior Citizens center with their band performing in the City auditorium. One of the highlights will be three one-act plays involving Community theatre players. The plays will be presented in the First Methodist Church Fellowship hall.

Code 'Quirk' Hits Dealers

Because of a "quirk" in the city zoning regulations, Wayne auto dealers are not in compliance with the city code, according to an interpretation Tuesday night by the Wayne city council. The regulations read that auto dealers in the City of Wayne may "not" have open air display of new and used cars. However, the city attorney has been directed to draft an amendment deleting the "not" from the regulation. The proposed amendment is expected to be submitted to the council for consideration at its next meeting May 8. The apparent "mistake" was uncovered when a group of residents appeared before the council Tuesday night with a petition protesting a "Storage" lot for vehicles belonging to Arnie's Ford and Mercury. The lot is in the 300 block of Logan Street. The petition, which was instigated by Doug Tabor, a property owner in the area, carried the signatures of some 36 persons. The petitioners stated in their petition they have no objection to the commercial use of the lot, which is zoned B2 (business), but they maintain the open-air display of vehicles adversely affects the quality and harmony of the neighborhood. The petition was accepted by the council for review with recommendations to be made at the May 8 council meeting.

City Administrator Darrell Brewington said the rates have not been increased for some time and that the rate hike will help to take some of the burden off of the taxes for operating the pool. Gordon L. Emry, who recently was graduated from the University of Nebraska and will soon attend a medical school, was named pool manager.

The city council Tuesday announced a rate hike from 50¢ to 75¢ for single daily admission, $7.50 to $12.50 for individual season admission and $20 to $25 for family season admission. The council directed the city attorney to prepare and execute documents for the sale of the line.

The Wayne city council accepted a petition asking for condemnation of a building located between Dearborn and Nebraska. City Administrator Darrell Brewington said that before the council can proceed with condemnation, it must first get reports from police, fire and health departments. A determination will be made in the near future, Brewington explained.

Local VFW commander August Lorenzen and VFW auxiliary president Neva Lorenzen said everyone is encouraged to fly their flags on that day as a public reaffirmation of their loyalty to the United States and to the ideals and concepts of our forefathers. "Loyalty Day belongs to all Americans," said Lorenzen, adding that the nation today needs a daily display of good old-fashioned red, white and blue "I love America" patriotism. The VFW invites all veterans and their spouses to attend a social hour and program at the Vet's Club the evening of May 1, Loyalty Day. Hors d'oeuvres will be served at 7 p.m. and the program will begin at 8. There will be lunch afterward. Taking part in the program will be Wayne County Service Officer Wayne Denkiau, Voice of Democracy winner and Girls State representative Laura Lessmann, and Buddy Poppy girl Kelli Bartling.

Lorenzen will be presenting a new flag during the evening program for the Veterans Memorial Park plot at Greenwood Cemetery.

Area candidates for graduation are: Bachelor of Arts in Education — Martha Helen Cline, Wayne, elementary education; Roberta L. Hillman Engstedt, Wakefield, English and communication arts; Larry Paul Hewitt, Wayne, physical education; Judy L. Korn, Wayne, biology and earth science.

Dr. Joe Nichols, professor of education in the department of curriculum and instruction at the University of Northern Colorado-Greeley, will be the guest speaker. Dr. Nichols holds a bachelor and masters degrees from Kansas State Teachers College, Pittsburg, Kan., and Ed. D. from the University of Colorado, Boulder. He served as chairman of the division of education and director of teacher education at Wayne State from 1956 to 1960.

Small, but responsive crowd

Ploys by Plimpton prompts pleasing platitudes

BY RANDY HASCALL

George Plimpton, a man who as a journalist invaded the strongholds of professional sports to write accounts of his experiences, entertained a small crowd of about 120 persons Sunday night at Wayne State's Ramsey Theatre. Plimpton began his participation in sports when he wanted to work for the Harvard Lampoon and the editors told him to enter a marathon race. Plimpton entered the race, but not until the last one in a half block. He entered in second place and the leader turned his head and saw Plimpton closing in on him. Assuming he was a legitimate runner, the leader sprinted to the finish line to win the race.

After the race, Plimpton was asked to enter the press tent for an interview and it was discovered that he was an impostor. "The winner tried to pop me one," Plimpton said, "but fortunately he was too winded to get the job done."

Plimpton moved on to a job with Sports Illustrated and while writing with them entered many occupations. He was allowed to pitch in a major league all-star baseball game and faced such players as Richie Helmer, Willie Mays and Frank Robinson. Helmer popped out and Mays "popped out to deep center field," Plimpton said. Frank Robinson followed with a triple and Plimpton said he sensed his control was gone when the next batter hit "one of the longest home runs in the ball park." But, Plimpton added that he gave himself credit for an assist.

After major league baseball, Plimpton boxed. Light heavyweight champion Archie Moore, in a three round exhibition. After agreeing to the match, Moore was told that Plimpton was a collegiate champion who wanted to become a world champion.

I didn't like the looks of Moore when he entered the ring, Plimpton said. "I suffer from sympathetic response if I get hit. I weep and my nose bleeds."

Plimpton lasted all nine minutes of the fight and later was asked to fight an exhibition with Mohammed Ali. After contemplating the fight, Plimpton finally agreed.

The idea eventually caught my fancy, but I learned when Ali is scheduled to fight, he stores his opponent in a compartment in his brain," said Plimpton. "He called me up at 2 a.m. and said, 'You are going to fall in love.' PLIMPTON, page 9

SPEAKING OF PEOPLE

Wayne Woman's Club Will Observe 60th Anniversary

Objectives set by the Wayne Woman's Club when it met for the first time on March 21, 1919, have remained basically the same during the 60 years that have passed.

The women who first met 60 years ago set for themselves three goals: to improve their city, to contribute to the betterment of the nation and world, and to raise money for a community club house.

Of the women who chartered the club one, Mrs. Ralph (Joyce) Crockett still resides in Wayne and will be a special guest this Friday during a 60th anniversary luncheon and program. District and state officers have also been invited as guests.

Members of the Woman's Club and their guests will meet at the Stratton House for a noon luncheon, followed by a program at the Woman's Club room at 2 p.m.

Mrs. Crockett, who joined the Woman's Club 60 years ago along with her mother in law, Mrs. Anna Crockett, was named chairman of the membership committee at the organizational meeting.

The first president was Mrs. J.G.W. Lewis and the following quotation is from an article that she wrote in 1927:

"The Wayne Woman's Club is really an outgrowth of the spirit of cooperation shown by the women of Wayne and vicinity in their work during the war. It was felt that this community spirit should continue to develop and so a meeting was held on March 21, 1919, to form an organization to which all women could belong."

A constitution and bylaws were drafted and the Wayne club was federated that same year. Thirty-six signed as charter members.

One of the first steps undertaken by the club was the purchase of the Opera House from the Britton estate at a total cost, including repairing and remodeling, of $8,500. The mortgage was burned in 1923.

The Opera House was sold in 1930 to a company which wished to use the site for a gas station.

In 1933, the mayor of Wayne asked the Woman's Club to help finance a city auditorium through the PWA plan. The club agreed to turn over $6,000 to be used for that purpose, provided that they have within the auditorium rooms sufficient for their needs. The result was the present Wayne Woman's Club room.

Through the years, the activities of the Wayne club have been varied and wide-ranging. For many years, the women gave Christmas baskets to needy families, served meals at the annual Crippled Children's Clinic, awarded scholarships, assisted Boy and Girl Scouts, and made donations to a long list of charities.

In 1945, the club sponsored the planting of 6,000 trees in Wayne County, including those in a memorial park honoring servicemen from that area.

The Wayne Woman's Club has promoted and sponsored a Little Theatre Group, the Wayne County Historical Society and Museum and, in 1960, the Wayne Hospital Auxiliary.

Members of the Wayne club have held every district office and all committee chairmanships. Among outstanding members of the local club in past years was Mrs. Grace Welsh Lutgen, NFWC poet laureate, whose song "Nebraska My Native Land" was sung throughout the state.

The local club reprinted the 1938 "History of Wayne County" as a bicentennial project. Each year the club gives two scholarships of $250 each to high school graduates who will attend Wayne State College. The club has given flags to the new hospital and to the library, and each year helps send a girl to Girls State. At Christmastime, the club is active in gift giving to shut-ins at the Wayne Care Centre.

The Woman's Club donates to many charities and has helped the American Field Service sponsor an exchange student.

In celebration of their 60th anniversary, the club members have voted to give donations of $1,000 to the Wayne Community Hospital Auxiliary, the Wayne

Why Is Johnny So Ornerly?

Kids do the darndest things. And often parents have no idea why.

It's not always easy for parents to understand why children do the things they do, especially when they misbehave, according to Dr. Ron Daly, Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources extension family life specialist.

Some parents, Daly says, turn to child development books for answers. They may conclude that the reason Johnny refuses to mind his mother is because, at the age of 3, he's trying to become more independent.

Other parents compare their children to others of the same age. They may decide that Johnny is simply acting like most other three-year olds.

While both of these approaches can be useful, Daly says comparing children to others — even within the same family — can get parents in trouble.

"Parents need to recognize the individual uniqueness of each child when deciding how to handle bad behavior," he says.

All children misbehave — usually because they're discouraged, according to the specialist. The problem is, a child's misbehavior often makes parents feel inadequate and they tend to react on those feelings rather than breaking the "cycle of discouragement."

When a child acts up, he's usually doing one of four things, explains Daly. He may be seeking attention, power or revenge, or he may be showing signs of inadequacy.

These patterns can be termed the "ABC's" of child behavior, says Daly. Generally, the ABC's say, "If I can't get your attention, I'll try to boss you around and if I can't boss you around, I'm going to try to counter-hurt you. And if I can't do that, I'll become disabled."

If a parent is annoyed by a child's behavior, the child is probably seeking attention, he says. "Most children prefer to get positive attention, but if all else fails, they'll accept negative attention rather than get ignored," Daly says.

In this case, parents should ignore the negative behavior and find ways to give the child positive attention and recognition, he advises.

If parents find themselves embroiled in a "battle of wills" with their child, the child probably is seeking power. Examples of power seeking behavior include disobedience, stubbornness, temper tantrums and bad habits such as thumb-sucking or dawdling.

When confronted with such behavior, parents often make the mistake of trying to exert their authority when they're better off not reacting to the child's behavior at all, he says.

After all, a child won't throw a temper tantrum for himself, Daly notes.

Children have numerous ways of getting even with parents, he says. For example, revenge may take the form of throwing a tantrum or making a scene when company is around.

The typical response is for parents to lose their tempers, but it's better to "walk out" or remove yourself from the child for the time being, says Daly. Later, look for ways to reinforce positive behavior in the child.

We need to give two positives for every negative word or action, he says.

Another form of misbehavior which can bring parents to the point of despair is the child who doesn't want to go to school or who refuses to try something new.

This kind of behavior requires a different response, says Daly. Parents need to help the child feel better about himself. He recommends spending some "one to one time" with the child, helping him feel special through both words and action.

When considering reasons for misbehavior and how to deal with it, Daly says parents need to keep in mind that all children have the following needs: to be loved and accepted; to be secure; to belong or be part of the group; to be approved of and recognized as a person; and to be independent to some degree.

To be enforceable, every real estate sales agreement must be in writing. The written clause, to be fair, must spell out clearly what is intended by both parties to the sale, the buyer and the seller. The property must be identified by its legal description, precise and exclusive.

The purchase price may be subject to the buyer's ability to handle the financing in terms of down payment, loan amount, interest rate and years required to pay off the loan. Appliances, carpets and drapes, plus anything that might be personal property should be identified and designated as to whether or not they will be included with the house.

Former Wayne State Athlete Brinkman To Carry Olympic Torch For Nebraska

While thousands of athletes will be preparing for the XIII Olympic Winter Games, a chosen 52 Americans will go relatively unnoticed as they carry the Olympic Torch from Yorktown, Virginia to Lake Placid.

Within this select group will be Julie Brinkman, a 1978 graduate from Wayne State College. Although she is originally from Rolfe, Iowa, Julie will represent Nebraska since she was a resident of Wayne when she applied to carry the Torch. She received a B.A. in physical education and biology from WSC.

Ms. Brinkman is currently a physical education graduate assistant at Emporia State College, Emporia, Kansas. She became interested in carrying the Olympic Torch when she was reading an issue of "Runners' World" and stumbled across an article concerning application of runners.

The 23-year old submitted an application. The year later received to write a paper on the Olympic theme, the Greek concept of the "whole man." On April 1 Julie was selected from the 6,000 applicants nationwide to carry the torch. One carrier represents each state with two other runners representing Washington, D.C. and Lake Placid.

"I felt greatly honored to be selected and was very surprised," Ms. Brinkman said. "I went to Denver where 10 runners met for interviews. Many had run in marathons."

Although Julie is not a marathon runner, she stays in excellent physical condition at Emporia State College and was twice named "female athlete of the year" while at Wayne State College. She will carry the Torch four stretches of five miles each for a total of 20 miles.

In a symbolic gesture to the ideals of ancient Greece, the torch runners have been selected to represent the original Greek concept of staging this premier sports event for the "whole man."

"The 26 men and 26 women represent the best of America," said George Christian Orloff, Lake Placid Olympic Organizing Committee chief of ceremonies and awards. "They are well doctor, a minister, a lawyer, two military officers, a West Point cadet, four high school students, three law students, a college instructor, a high school teacher, and six college students.

Also included are four housewives, a lobbyist, a plumber, a banker, several corporate executives, a TV reporter, a theater technician, and an automobile factory worker.

One member of the team is a former Olympic bobsledder, and several of the torchbearers compete in marathons, but most run "just for the fun of it."

The torchbearers range in age from 16 to 65, and will each be required to carry the two-foot high, 30 pound Olympic torch between 18 and 30 miles during its 1,000 mile journey in the United States.

The Olympic flame, lighted every four years in a special ceremony at ancient Olympia in Greece, will be flown from Athens to Langley Air Force Base, Virginia, on Jan. 31, 1980.

From Langley, the flame will go by sea to Yorktown, site of the final battle of the War for Independence. From Yorktown, the runners will relay lighted torches all the way to Lake Placid.

There will be special ceremonies at Capitol Hill in Washington, Independence Hall in Philadelphia, City Hall in New York and the State Capitol in Albany.

The flame will also stop briefly at the tomb of George Washington, at Mount Vernon, and at Franklin D. Roosevelt's grave in Hyde Park, N.Y. Roosevelt formally opened the 1932 Olympic Winter Games at Lake Placid.

The flame will arrive in Lake Placid four days prior to the opening ceremonies, and will rest in a place of honor in the community before the final runner carries it into the Olympic Stadium.

Those joining Ms. Brinkman include a rounded people who are true Renaissance men. In addition to being good athletes and strong runners, they are involved with challenging professions and interested in music, art, drama and scholarship.

Orloff said the torch runners will demonstrate to the world that the "sports robot" has not taken over athletics in America.

Those joining Ms. Brinkman include a

Wayne State Football Varsity Faces An Alumni Team Saturday

About 60 veteran Wayne State College football players will once again play in Memorial Stadium in the WSC Varsity Alumni Football game, scheduled to begin at 12:30 p.m., Saturday.

The alumni, coached by retired WSC assistant and team manager Henry "Haine" Schmitz of Wayne, will take on the Wayne State varsity, under the direction of head coach Del Stollenberg.

The varsity squad is expected to be particularly sharp for the event. The squad began spring practice April 2 and will be led by senior tailback Bob Berry, who holds the single season rushing record of 1,161 yards for Wayne State. WSC lost only five players to graduation last season and is expected to be a tough opponent for the alumni group.

Coach Del Stollenberg said conditioning will be an obvious factor in Saturday's game. "That and the fact the varsity has had the benefit of practicing together since early April," Stollenberg said. "But we do know that in the list of alumni who are returning is an awful lot of talent."

Among that returning talent will be Stan Lewis, who played defensive end for WSC from 1971-74. Lewis has since played professional football for the Cleveland Browns, the Seattle Sea Hawks and for Saskatchewan in the Canadian Football League.

Added to the Lewis threat will be Reggie Smith, who holds the WSC single game rushing record of 224 yards, set in 1972 against Peru State College.

Also returning will be All-American Duane "Dewy" Carlson, who played linebacker between 1974-77. Carlson was a stand-out for the Omaha Mustangs last fall and has been asked to try out for the Denver Broncos later this spring.

Joining Lewis and Carlson will be former Omaha Mustang players Mike Schuster, who played defensive tackle between 1972-1975; Greg Walker, split end and wide receiver from 1967-1970; Mike Wynn, defensive tackle from 1968-1971; Rusty McAllard, offensive end between 1968-1971 and Pat Holston, defensive back from 1968-1972.

Expected to quarterback the alumni team are Dave Miller or Rick Benedetto. Both played as quarterbacks between 1972 and 1975. Miller holds the four-year passing record of 2,218 yards set during his career, while Benedetto added another 1,265 yards during those years, totaling 4,183 yards passing for the pair. Other returning for the WSC alumni team include Doug Barry, former WSC assistant football coach and financial aides director; Don Koentig, Wayne High School assistant football and head wrestling coach and Doug Radke, former WSC player and assistant defensive coach.

Others expected to return, who are now working as coaches or teachers include: Brent Moeller, 1971-74; Nick Danze, 1972-75; Marly Going, 1968-71; Dean Ott, 1972-75; Chuck Ross, 1968-71; Mitch McCann, 1974-77; Pat Holston, 1969-72; Bruce Cramer, 1968-71; Paul Stuart, 1972-75; Mark Anderson, 1972-75; J.D. Ritchie, 1974-77; Pat Ivers, 1968-71; Tracy Norris, 1974-77; John Vandembroucke, 1971-74; Monty Miller, 1968-71; Dale Pelland, 1972, 1977-78 and others.

Wildkittens Split With Kearney State

The Wayne State Wildkitten softball team began a busy week of action by splitting a double header with Kearney State Monday at Wayne WSC is now 15-8 on the season.

Kearney State took the first game 7-3 handing Pat Leshian (44) her fourth loss of the season. Wayne State came back in the second game behind Lynne Larson's pitching arm to win 3-1. The win put Larson at 6-4 on the season.

The Wildkittens scored all three of their runs in the first inning of the second game and hung for the victory with good pitching and good defense.

Pat Johnson opened the game with a triple, followed by a single by Renee Fernau. Robin Walsh got on base on a fielder's choice, driving in Johnson

Fernau after moving around to third on a ground out by Susan Plumb found herself in a rundown on a wild pitch between third and home and successfully out maneuvered the Kearney State players to score WSC's second run.

Walsh thus took advantage of the play and moved to third, to be knocked in later on a triple by Karen Heeny.

Larson only allowed two Kearney State hits while striking out 10 Lady Lopers.

WSC's Kittens committed eight errors in the first game of that double header. Both Wayne State and Kearney had five hits in the game. Sue Plumb had two hits in three trips to the plate, while Diana Hall and Robin Walsh each slashed a double and each knocked in a run.

Chace And Herbolzheimer Liven Wakefield Invite

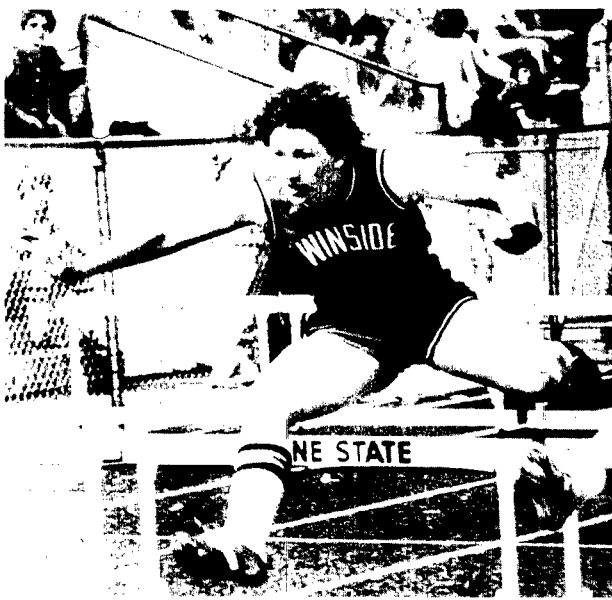

It was Paula Chace and Julie Herbolzheimer day at the Wakefield Track and Field Invitational, Monday, and the two athletes put on a show that will not soon be forgotten by the coaches, athletes and fans at the meet.

Chace scored all 40 team points for fourth place Laurel when she won four gold medals. Herbolzheimer won the 1,600 meter run and anchored the winning 1,600 and 3,200 meter relay teams. But, the big race of the day was the 800 meter run.

Herbolzheimer jumped out in the lead in the 800 meter race but Chace stayed right on her heels for the first 600 meters. Chace, then, made her move and the two girls ran stride for stride over the final 200 meters with Chace collapsing across the finish line first by an inch. Both girls were clocked at 2:19.5 for a new meet record.

In addition to winning the 800, Chace won the long jump with a leap of 16.7, the 200 meter dash in 28.2 and the 400 meter dash in 60.7 seconds. Her team placed fourth.

WINSIDE'S Ann Mann finished second in the 75 meter hurdles

WAKEFIELD'S 800 meter relay team placed second in the Wakefield Invitational

Wakefield boys track coach and meet coordinator John Torczon termed the meet "tremendous" and was especially impressed with the Chace-Herbolzheimer finish. He said that the two girls can run the 800 in 2:14 if conditions are positive and the wind is calm.

Emerson Hubbard went away a double winner, claiming first place in both the boys and girls divisions. After a 200 meter dash, he shot put by Linda Mable with a loss of 44.9; the 4-by-400 relay team from Hartington in 4:19.5; Hartington 4-by-800 relay team in 10:29.3; Paula Chace, 200 meters in 26.2 and Chace and Herbolzheimer.

Softballers Winning

The Wayne State College softball team came from behind to win the second game 7-4 and gain a split with the University of South Dakota in action Tuesday at Wayne. USD captured the first game 5-2 with a three run seventh inning.

The Kittens were down 3-1 going into the bottom of the fifth inning. Pitcher Pat LeVinh (5-4) helped her own cause by lashing out a triple and then scored on a single by Vicki Carsey.

Carsey moved to second on a sacrifice bunt and then to third when Teri Rademacher singled. Sue Plumb singled to right field driving in Carsey and moving Rademacher over to third.

Renee Fernau replaced Plumb on first base in a strategy moved by coach Kovar. Fernau immediately got caught in a rundown between first and second which allowed Rade-macher to score from third before she was put out.

The Kittens added an in-advance run in the sixth to win the game 7-4.

With two outs in the top of the seventh of the first game, USD exploded with four hits to score three runs. Lynne Larson (6-5) was tagged with the loss.

The Kittens are now 16-9 and were scheduled to play Concordia at Wayne yesterday.

WSC SWEEPS CREIGHTON In action on the road Sunday, Sue Plumb singled to right field driving in Carsey and moving Rademacher over to third.

Donna Grote, went 2-3 from the plate in the second game, and scored on a single by See Softballers, page 8 the ring during instructions. Then I met him one time as I was getting off an elevator. He was standing there with a bare chest and clenched fists. I closed the door and went up to the 16th floor."

The fight between Ali and Plimpton was cancelled after Ali broke his jaw in a fight with Ken Norton.
After his short boxing career, Plimpton wrote several professional football letters and asked to play as last string quarterback.
The Detroit Lions took him on their team and in four plays, Plimpton lost 34 yards. He wrote a best-selling book "Paper Lion" about his association with the Lions.
Plimpton later joined the Baltimore Colts and gained 22 yards in four plays-15 on a roughing the passer penalty.
From football, Plimpton went on to professional basketball where he joined the Boston Celtics. He said that in one game, coach Bill Russell thought his team was so far behind that the game was out of range, so he pulled out John Havlicek and inserted Plimpton as a power-forward.
According to Plimpton, his teammates must have played harder to make up for Havlicek's absence, because the Celtics closed the gap to three points with three minutes left. Havlicek went back into the game and the Celtics lost.
Plimpton joined the National Hockey League with the Boston Bruins as a goalie. He said his teammates described him as "the only player to check himself."
In five minutes of play with the Bruins, six shots were taken on goal and Plimpton only let one score but said that the other five bounced off of him.
In one instance, an opposing player was awarded a penalty shot which is a one-on-one situation. Plimpton skated out to cut down the angle. Knowing he wasn't a good enough skater to stop on the ice, Plimpton hoped that the opponent wouldn't

Speaking From Experience
POINTING OUT the location where the 93rd Bombing Group flew missions over Germany in World War II is Wayne State communication arts professor Dick Manley. Manley and WSC president Lyle Seymour were special guests of Wayne High's World History class, Tuesday. Both told their experiences in the war. Seymour was a pilot in the 95th bombing group and attacked Germany from Great Britain in a B-17. Manley described Hitler as a madman and said that if anyone in history should have ever been assassinated it was Hitler. He flew the B-24 bomber. Many other guests from the Wayne area are invited to speak to the class next week. The students contact persons who are veterans of World War II and invite them to class as a project. Instructor Ron Carnes said he really appreciated the guests taking time to speak to the class.

Lois Mendlik, who has taught in the Allen schools for the past two years, has not announced future plans.
Registration Underway
Wayne High School is now registering students for a summer advanced drivers education program.
Interested individuals should register as soon as possible, according to instructor Ron Carnes, because only 12 students can enter the class.
Two hours credit will be awarded for completion of the course, which will begin June 4.

Tax Delinquent May 1
Leon Meyers, Wayne County Treasurer, this week announced that the 1st half of Real Estate tax will be delinquent May 1 and will be assessed 9 percent interest.
He also requested that persons send their statement when sending their check.

Laurel Youngsters Anticipate Kindergarten

Pre-schoolers of the Laurel community got their first glimpse of what kindergarten will be like next year when they attended kindergarten round-up April 18.

The prospective parents of the graduating class of 1992 met Miss Kathie Miller, who is the kindergarten teacher at Laurel. During round-up the youngsters were able to acquaint themselves with the school surroundings. They also learned new songs, took part in story time, and were treated to a puppet show by Mrs. Dave Felber and Mrs. Brian McBride, who emphasized the importance of being immunized. Eileen Patefield, a speech therapist from Educational Speech Unit 1 in Wakefield, was on hand to evaluate the youngsters' speech and hearing.

Parents of the youngsters were welcomed by principal David Rokusek, superintendent James Lofquist, and school nurse Mrs. Lynette Joslin.

The 31 youngsters who registered for kindergarten next fall, with their parents' names in parentheses, were Jake Armour (Robert), Kami Billheimer (Ronnie), Diane Boyesen (Milton), Stephanie Carson (Leiland), Susan Cornett (Gary), Jon Dybdal (Laurence), Michael Hoopner (Jerome), Charly Jacobsen (Leander), Lucia James (Roger), Melanie James (Greg), Jeremy Clausen (Roger), Darin Lubberstedt (Keith), Kory Macklin (Darrell), Stacy Nixon (Lionie), Melissa Schoeber (Terry), Jennifer Schrieber (Terry), and Jennifer Stevens (Rabe Mord).

Scott Taylor (Lyston), Wendy Carstensen (David), Jenny Felber (David), Tina Granquist (Rolle), Carol Hansen (Gordon), Monica Hoffart (Roger), Travis Kramer (Richard), Jason Kvoils (Jim), Rachelle Lammers (Leander), Amanda McBride (Brian), Larry Osborne (James), Lynne Poppe (Kenneth), Rynae Reiffenrahn (Darryl), and Keith Schulte (Steve).

Titling Day Nets $1100

The first annual Titling Day netted Wayne area churches an unexpected Easter nest egg last week. Sponsored last Tuesday by over a dozen participating Chamber of Commerce merchants, the titling of 10 percent of all cash purchases resulted in a total of nearly $1,100 being distributed to some 40 area churches in 20 nearby communities.

Merie Riese, retail chairman, termed the promotion a success full one adding that the response of many customers will prompt the event to be an annual one.

Riese added that the promotion also gave Wayne merchants the opportunity to show appreciation to the area communities for their patronage throughout the year.

Appointment triggers opposition

CAPITOL NEWS
By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent

The Nebraska Press Association LINCOLN—The appointment of former state Sen. Richard Proulx of Omaha as one of four deputy directors of the state Department of Welfare triggered immediate and strong opposition from advocates of women's rights.

The selection of Proulx, a 10-year veteran of the Legislature who is now a professor at the University of Nebraska-Omaha, ranked women's rights promoters who remembered the key role Proulx played in rescinding Nebraska's ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment.

Sen. Steve Fowler of Lincoln said it was ironic that the leader in that decision would be named to a position that deals so closely with women.

Proulx, an attorney who worked for many years for Mutual of Omaha, will start his new job May 14 and will be paid $23,544 annually.

One of his chief duties will be keeping the Department policy in line with rules and regulations of the federal government.

A statement released by state Welfare Director John E. Knight when the Proulx appointment was revealed noted the appointee had led a legislative fight for money to build a women's physical education center at the University of Nebraska. Proulx himself noted he has record of strong support for the provision in federal law mandating equal opportunity for women in scholastic athletics.

Despite that, Kaspie Weber, president of the Nebraska Coalition for Women, said Proulx's position on ERA was evidence of his opposition to women's rights. His appointment was especially disappointing, she said, because most of the department's constituents are women.

Six years ago, Proulx and Knight served together in the Legislature. The Knight was actively involved in welfare issues. Proulx has said he did not sponsor any welfare legislation during his 10-year stint in the Unicameral.

According to Ms. Weber, Proulx's non-involvement was another demonstration of his lack of concern for the welfare of Nebraskans.

Gov. Charles Thone was aware of the selection of Proulx for the job but did not interfere, according to Randall Moody, administrative aide to the governor who said Knight had the authority to do the hiring.

There has been a strong supporter of affirmative action in Nebraska and is backing a legislative bill proposing creation of a special affirmative action office in government. At this writing that bill was awaiting final approval in the Legislature.

Reiterates Funding Concern

For three weeks in a row, Gov. Charles Thone told his weekly news conference he continues to be concerned about second- and third-year funding obligations in the capital construction bill reported to the floor by the Appropriations Committee.

He told reporters he was keeping a close watch on what was going on as the lawmakers headed into what he called "the crunchy part of the session, especially regarding appropriations."

The governor indicated he will lean heavily on the expertise of Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, when pondering his budget decisions.

Both men have said they are concerned about committing too much money for construction projects in the immediate years ahead because the economic indicators for that period are not very favorable.

During his latest news conference, Thone also repeated that he is worried the federal revenue sharing program may be eliminated and that it might happen as soon as this year. The state annually receives about $15 million in revenue-sharing funds and the loss of that sum would have a very significant impact on Nebraskans, Thone said.

Gets Bill Changed

Sen. John Murphy of South Sioux City was successful recently in getting an elections bill changed so that names gathered during petition campaigns to change Nebraska laws or the constitution would have to be verified for validity.

The bill had a provision that verification of the names could be waived if signatures on the petitions exceeded the required number by 12 percent.

Murphy's amendment wiping out that section of the measure was adopted on a 26-0 vote.

Siding with Murphy, Sen. Dave Landis of Lincoln said the bill without the Murphy amendment said: "Just make sure you have a lot of names on petitions. Beat the required number by 12 percent and the county clerks have no obligation to check the signatures."

Another who agreed was Sen. Ron Cope of Kearney who said the verification of names is not required. It's unbelievable what would happen."

Disagreeing was Sen. Shirley Marsh of Lincoln. She argued that when an extraordinary number of signatures are submitted to put a proposition on the ballot, it should be sufficient to check only the every third sheet of names. Each sheet has room for 20 names on it.

Bingo Change Approved

Nebraska Lawmakers, on a vote of 47-1, recently passed and sent to the governor a bill that makes significant changes in the bingo law.

The key change was one that would limit the number of games in any one building to two a week.

Sen. Vard Johnson of Omaha, who steered the legislation to passage, said it was aimed at "casino-type operators" who threaten to run small operators out of business.

There was considerable pressure on the lawmakers to do something about the big operators.

The legislation would still permit big games with a maximum prize of $1,000 for one game. There is also a section in the bill that authorizes city councils to allow more than two bingo sessions a week in one building if other structures are not available.

Johnson, while the bill was being debated earlier, said that provision was inserted for small communities that may have only one building suitable for bingo but may have more than one organization wishing to run games.

The bill included an emergency clause, meaning it would go into effect immediately upon the governor's signature.

A representative of the governor's office indicated the governor probably would sign the measure.

Alaska--Explore, don't ignore

WASHINGTON
RICHARD L. LESHER, PRESIDENT
CHAMBER OF COMMERCE
OF THE UNITED STATES

WASHINGTON—Nationwide, it's not a pretty picture—lengthening lines at gasoline service stations, spiraling prices and official economic forecasts which seem to grow gloomier by the day. And through it all, the United States is more dependent today upon unreliable foreign energy supplies than ever before. Many Americans seem ready to give up increasingly, they are asking, what, if anything, can be done?

In a word, plenty. The Congress will very shortly be considering one of the most important pieces of legislation this year—H.R. 39, or the Alaska Lands Bill. Passage of that legislation could have a dramatic and positive impact on two of our most pressing problems—Energy security and inflation.

I say could, because depending upon which version of this bill is passed, we will either be seizing the opportunity to fully develop our economic potential in an environmentally responsible way, or be lying down, trying our hands behind our backs and placing ourselves at the mercy of the rest of the world. The choice really is that clear. For the economic treasures contained within the Alaska lands are almost too spectacular to believe. And all this wealth remains almost entirely unexplored and unutilized.

Alaska is estimated to hold up to 40 percent of all the undiscovered oil in the United States and huge quantities of natural gas. Yet the federal government has not issued a lease for any oil or gas exploration since 1965. We should undoubtedly consider it a special blessing that Prudhoe Bay was located on state land.

A study by the Stanford Research Institute has identified seven mines which, if allowed to operate, could produce more than one billion dollars worth of critically needed minerals each year and provide about 40,000 jobs. These minerals are now imported.

Alaska boasts a supply of coal which alone, could provide for the energy needs of the lower 48 states for the next 100 years. This coal is not being mined.

Southern and Southeast Alaska also offer fantastic timber supplies. And millions of untapped acres within the lower 48 states are being planted with trees, the potential to produce barley and other grains of exceptionally high protein content.

Now, consider how the different versions of H.R. 39 would seek to reconcile the conflict between environmental beauty and economic development. One version—the Hucksby substitute—offers a balanced approach that insists on protecting Alaska's "crown jewels," while permitting access to these much-needed resources.

The Hucksby substitute is truly a sweeping environmental bill. It calls for setting aside acreage equal in size to all of England and the Middle Atlantic states, and reserving that land for parks, wilderness areas, conservation areas and special management areas. But the bill also recognizes that the world's second largest molybdenum deposit, the finest of the United States onshore oil and gas prospect and the largest of the world's uranium find should not be designated as total wilderness. The Hucksby substitute is being fought by the Administration and many self-proclaimed environmentalists.

A second version—the Breux substitute—would set aside even more acreage than the Hucksby bill. However, this bill insists that certain lands be made more accessible for resource exploration and mineral development and it is also opposed by the Administration. I should point out that both the Breux and Hucksby substitutes would only permit energy exploration under the strictest environmental safeguards, including full reclamation of lands. But these bills aren't good enough.

What is? The Administration has given its support to the so-called Udall version of H.R. 39. The Udall approach places virtually all its emphasis on protecting the environment and almost none on encouraging economic development in effect. Alaska's natural resources would be so restrictively classified, that they would be virtually locked up to any development. But Udall would go even further. He would even lock up large portions of those few areas now being developed.

Result? Approximately 50 percent of Alaska's timber industry would be shut down, throwing thousands of people out of work. But we would also pay a dear price for this environmental extremism. Housing prices could literally shoot through the roof, gasoline and heating oil prices would become more expensive, and could even dry up during critical periods, like the middle of the winter. That's not the kind of future Americans would voluntarily choose.

Thomas Jefferson once observed that any civilized nation expecting to remain ignorant and free expects what never was and never will be. But of course Jefferson never doubted the instinctive wisdom of working Americans. No, the people who made him nervous were those in government, in Washington, where then, just as today, common sense was not always to

Dear Editor:

We would like to make a reply to some recent letters concerning the Wayne High vocal department. Before anyone can pass judgment on this subject, complete facts should be obtained.

We feel that any educator can run their class without Crude Vulgarity. We're sure that there is not one parent among you who would like your sixth grade students exposed to this type of language, as in several incidents they were, (or high school for that matter).

When comparing the language of the vocal instructor to the other faculty member everyone keeps referring to, we could at least print the words he says in this article. We think most of you would be offended to hear some of the remarks that have been passed around at rehearsals by our instructor.

Concerning the statement about students being ruthless, the cooperation was not there but the discipline was not. Therefore the students are not to blame for disorganization or lack of discipline on the instructors part.

One letter states that Wayne High choir "has not been void of progress. We definitely have been this past year — if anything we have regressed. Apparently these people don't know what progress is. It does not mean the director has to give less concerts, have less practices, turn down more opportunities for the swing choir to perform than they actually did, and cancel the musical."

As long as we can remember, Wayne High has had an annual musical. It's too bad that this tradition has been broken after all these years.

Another point we would like to bring up is the fact that this teacher resigned before the administration took action against her. Besides, what sensible administration would fire a teacher because one family was upset? None, there are a number of concerned parents who don't like the things that were going on and they voiced their opinions. If anything, we the students encouraged them because most of us as seniors, felt that this year in choir was by far our least progressive year, and we didn't think it would be fair to let this pass and have next year's choir go through the same disappointments and frustrations we have. After all, how many responsible teachers allow students to smoke in the high school, as was the case this year, let alone in the lecture hall where no smoking is allowed at any time by anyone.

There was mention of the swing choir members and how they felt they were too good to practice. Almost half of the members in this year's group have been members ever since the group formation when we were freshmen. A lot of pride and close friendships have developed through this group and maybe it does make them feel important, but that just goes along with the pride they once had in this group. Furthermore, there were several times when the group was ready to practice and the teacher was in the lounge, or didn't bother to show up without informing us of a canceled rehearsal. Even the day before the annual district music contest she placed her priorities into watching another group perform ahead of attending our rehearsal.

With increasing emphasis on each individual's concern for their health, we feel this is an exciting new medium to remind people of their personal responsibility for their good health. Mrs. Karrer said we want to make people more aware of what they can do something to help insure their own good health.

With the great cooperation we are getting from the Nebraska Motor Carriers and companies such as Lincoln Equipment, we feel the potential is there to reach millions in Nebraska alone.

There is also national interest in the project. Over the next few months lots of other states, and national groups, will be watching to see how our Nebraska program is done. Eventually, we hope many national trucking firms will have our health message mud flaps installed on their trucks."

Mrs. Karrer said her group has several other concise health messages ready to offer if the idea becomes as popular as early interest indicates.

'Flaps for Fitness' campaign

The campaign is being sponsored by the Nebraska Medical Association Auxiliary in cooperation with the Nebraska Motor Carriers Association. Duane Actie, president of the Carriers, will participate in the presentation, along with Tom Larsen, President of Lincoln Equipment Company.

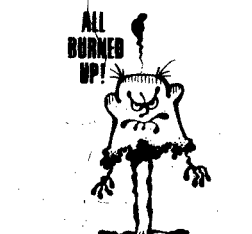

Jackie and Larsen helped develop plans and guidelines for the campaign. Others participating will include Mrs. Harry D. Shaffer, Lincoln, president of the Auxiliary, and Mrs. William (Diane) Hansa, Omaha, an originator of the idea for the campaign.

The Nebraska Medical Association is supporting the project.

Mrs. Karrer said the flaps will go on sale immediately at four locations: the Crete Carriers office, Lincoln; Shoemakers Truck Stop, Lincoln; and at Lincoln Equipment Company offices in Lincoln and Omaha.

Mrs. Karrer will also present a set of flaps to Don McMorris, the chairman of the board of the American Trucking Associations, at the Nebraska Motor Carriers Association spring conference in Kearney on Thursday, April 26.

Measures Prevent Livestock Poisoning

A recent accidental poisoning of livestock in central Nebraska emphasizes the need for increased precautions in handling and storing pesticides.

Emery W. Nelson, Extension pesticide training coordinator, Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, said exacting measures should be taken by every pesticide user to preclude potential accidents.

Nelson emphasized that "proper application of pesticides to control crop pests does not harm the environment or pose any risk to either man or livestock." He emphasized the required 100-fold safety factor in the tolerances established for pesticide residues in food for human consumption and in agricultural products to be used as livestock feed. Those tolerances will not be exceeded when label instructions for pesticide application are followed.

One misconception about the recent accidental poisonings is a concern that some of the pesticide applied to a field might have been picked up in harvesting a silage crop, he said. According to the extension specialist, the possibility of such an occurrence is negligible.

Nelson said most poisoning accidents have resulted from putting pesticides in improper containers and storing them with grain. Both procedures, he noted, are poor practices that not only can result in great losses, but also are contrary to federal regulations governing pesticide use.

The extension specialist listed a variety of precautions which should be observed both to conform with federal regulations and preclude accidents:

Store unused pesticides in a dry place that can be locked. Avoid places where flooding is possible. Make sure water sources won't be contaminated and drainage is adequate. Wind directions also should be considered in selecting a storage site.

Structures should be dry, well-ventilated, easily accessible, designed to prevent fire, and separated from other structures or rooms which may contain food or feed. In addition, the dry place should be posted with warning signs.

If pesticides will be stored through winter months, use an area where freezing temperatures will not occur. Some emulsion type pesticides break down chemically in freezing temperatures and would be ruined by that weather extreme.

Other procedures should include maintaining complete and up-to-date records of all pesticides in storage, regular inspection of containers, and regular inspection and monitoring of the surrounding area to detect contamination. An advance plan of action and necessary materials should be provided for dealing with spills.

Where large quantities of pesticides are stored, it is a good idea to provide police, fire and public health departments with a floor plan and records of the location and nature of pesticides and containers.

Discard unlabeled or empty containers and any pesticide materials unfit for use. Bury at least 18 inches in the soil in an area where the water table will not be contaminated or surface runoff will not contaminate nearby streams, ponds or lakes.

Large pesticide containers (30 and 55 gallon drums) can be returned to some pesticide supplier for repeated use. Pesticide drums should never be used as livestock watering troughs, storage tanks for other materials, charcoal grills, or as floats for rafts.

Musk Thistle

Description — Musk thistle is also known as nadding thistle. The deep reddish-purple flowers are large and attractive. The head is solitary on the end of the stem and nodds or hangs down as it grows in size. The thistle is primarily a biennial.

The deeply cut (segmented) leaves are dark green with a light green midrib. There is a grayish-green area at the outer edge of each spine tipped leaf segments. The leaves extend onto the stem giving it a feathery appearance. The plant is relatively free of hairiness. Plant height varies between two and seven feet.

Musk thistle may produce as many as 20,000 seeds and germination may run as high as 95 per cent. Blooming starts with the terminal head the first week in June and continues until mid August.

Control — Use 1.5 to 2 quarts of 2,4-D per acre. Treat rosettes in late fall or spring before flowering stalks lengthen.

Special Remarks — Never let a plant go to seed because of the extremely high seed production. Mowing present seed production must be done within two or three days after the beginning of flowering in terminal heads. Spraying has limited effect after musk thistles bolt (flower stalk elongation) so timing of spraying is very important. This year musk thistle should be sprayed before May 15th.

Sleeping Sickness Vaccine Available

Even though vaccines are readily available to protect horses against equine sleeping sickness — encephalitis — many horses in the United States are not protected against this disease, a U.S. Department of Agriculture veterinarian said.

Ralph Knowles, veterinarian in charge of the department's equine health services, said horses need yearly vaccinations for protection against sleeping sickness. It takes two injections before the mosquito season, he said.

"We estimate the horse and pony population of the United States at eight million animals," Knowles said. "Our figures show that only a million doses of vaccine are being produced each year, which means the vast majority of horses are not being vaccinated."

Knowles said combination vaccines are available for all three types of equine encephalitis — eastern, western and Venezuelan. Eastern and western types occur seasonally in many parts of the U.S. Although the Venezuelan type has not appeared in the U.S. since 1971, veterinarians with the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Services recommend horses be vaccinated against it because it has several hosts other than horses and could reemerge at any time.

All three sleeping sicknesses affect humans as well as horses. Birds usually carry eastern and western virus. Mosquitoes transmit the disease from the birds to horses or humans. With Venezuelan, however, the virus can multiply so rapidly that mosquitoes biting infected horses at certain disease stages can pass the virus to nonvaccinated horses or people.

The disease is often fatal to horses. It may initially cause hyperactivity in the animals followed by abnormal drowsiness, tremors, lack of coordination and loss of weight. The animal may chew excessively, have difficulty swallowing, and show impaired vision, reduced reflexes and irregular gait.

Sheep Shearing Clinic Planned

A sheep shearing school will be held at the fairgrounds 4-H Building in Sidney May 4-5, according to Dr. Ted Doane, extension sheep specialist in the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Applications should be sent by April 30 to Doane at 211 Marvel Baker Hall, East Campus, University of Nebraska-Lincoln, 68582, or to Howard Henschel, Cheyenne County Extension Agent, Box 256, Sidney, NE 68142.

The school is open to both beginning and experienced shearers and the fee is $15 per person, Doane said.

Program Improved Farm Safety Assists Farmers

By DAWN SCHWEITZ

If you saw someone caught in a power takeoff, would you know how to help him?

Ten years ago, few Nebraskans knew proper extrication procedures, but that has changed, largely because of a program developed by an Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources extension safety specialist.

Rollin D. Schrieder has presented his lectures and demonstrations to more than 150 Nebraska rescue squads since 1977. His audiences also have included those attending 1977 and 1978 Tractor Power and Safety Days, emergency medical technicians and rural residents.

He said the idea for such a project came in 1966 when a Lancaster County farm wife asked him what she could do if her husband was involved in a serious farm accident. Schrieder said the question made him realize that many Nebraskans had little information about machinery accidents.

He gave his first program in 1977 for the Palmer Rescue Squad and 10 other rescue units. He invited the Palmer squad to demonstrate the proper procedure for extricating a victim caught in a post-hole digger at the 1977 Tractor Power and Safety Day before approximately 5,000 spectators.

By summer 1979 Schrieder said he will have spoken to groups in every part of the state.

Schrieder said he lectures and shows slides of farm accidents for the first two hours of his program. The lecture includes a description of early rescue procedures, since rescue people and the sheriff usually have an initial contact with the victim.

He also likes to have a local physician help at the lectures because of the integral role doctors play in dealing with farm accidents. Dr. Chuck Gross of Cambridge worked with the specialist and rescue squads at meetings in McCook and Arapahoe.

He noted that it is as important to look out for the rescuers' safety as it is to guard the victim from further harm.

"This is especially true in electrical accidents," Schrieder said. "Never touch a person who is in contact with an electric power source. Push or pull him away with a dry stick or with some other type of insulated material."

He noted that the stick should not contain sap that may conduct electricity. A dry rope may be used and the rescuer always must stand on dry ground.

"Attempt this rescue only if you are willing to accept grave risk to your own life," Schrieder said.

Victims should not be rolled over or moved without a backboard or partial backboard because of the danger of puncturing internal organs if any bones are broken, Schrieder said. The backboard acts as a splint for the body, he explained.

He noted that each tractor overturn is different, but basic extrication techniques can be applied to most accidents of that type.

Power machinery accidents pose different problems, Schrieder warned.

"Farm equipment power drives do not revolve backward," he said. "Therefore, you can't back a victim out of a power takeoff or a baler."

He said that in many instances, the machinery must be disassembled to remove the victim. However, there is a new combine model that has a reversing drive on it, he said.

Everyone attending the lecture and demonstration receives a packet of materials, including posters, safety statistics and safety tips.

After the lecture, Schrieder said he simulates a couple of common types of farm acci-

Honored At Ceremony

State officials, poultry industry spokesmen and University of Nebraska-Lincoln officials joined in paying tribute to Frank E. Mussehl, former head of the UNL department of poultry science, in building dedication ceremonies last Thursday.

The ceremonies surrounded the dedication of the former poultry science building as Mussehl Hall on UNL's East Campus.

Governor Charles Thone paid Mussehl tribute for his many years of service to Nebraska's poultry industry, noting that poultry is currently a $2 billion cash item in Nebraska today, thanks largely to his leadership.

Mussehl joined the university staff in 1971 as poultry science department head and poultry professor, retiring in 1957. During those years, he had a positive influence on the "lives, careers and futures" of countless UNL students, noted UNL President Ronald Roskens.

Representing the poultry industry was Dick Earl, president of Hill Hatchery in Lincoln and a former Mussehl student. He pointed out that Mussehl was ahead of his time in the field, offering on-the-job training for students "long before internship programs were popular."

"In 1939, he told us that flocks would be larger, there would be fewer producers and marketing would be the key to survival," he said. "Even today, some of his research is being used daily."

In a keynote address, John Skinner, poultry science professor at the University of Wisconsin, recounted Mussehl's research contributions in such areas as incubation, vitamin D in feedstuffs, calcium and phosphorus requirements of turkeys, artificial insemination and feed intake.

His vitamin D work on radiated feedstuffs was pioneering work important to the present-day medical field in preventing such diseases as rickets, Skinner said. Mussehl was at the forefront of the many changes that have taken place in the poultry industry since the early 1900's when "eggs were 34 cents a dozen... there were 17 million head of chicken on Nebraska farms and backyard chickens and kerosene incubators still presented a fire hazard."

"In a multitude of ways, Mussehl helped take chickens out of backyards... and make poultry into one of the country's greatest agricultural industries," he said.

Also speaking were UN Regent Ed Schwartzkopf, another former Mussehl student, and Dr. Martin Messengale, vice chancellor for Agriculture and Natural Resources, UNL.

Messengale noted that when Mussehl came to the university in 1917, there was no poultry science department and that he was instrumental in founding it.

"I think we can safely say that the greatness of our state and nation has occurred in part because of the high quality of our food and fiber... developed through technology based on research" such as Mussehl's, he said. "Each of us in the state of Nebraska is a little better off today than we might have been without him and his 40 years of service to Nebraska."

FHA Creates Employment

"Over $6 million has been approved by Farmers Home Administration for guaranteeing business loans this fiscal year," announced Leonard T. Hanks, State Director for FmHA. Of this amount, approximately $2 million has gone to women in business. These funds have created 86 new jobs and assured that 257 more will continue to exist.

The State Director recently held meetings throughout the state to explain FmHA guarantee programs to lenders, community leaders, and other interested parties. Over 250 persons attended. Comments received from the participants since the meetings reflect an excellent potential for continued growth of the Business and Industry Program.

Since its inception under the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act of 1972, the Business and Industry Program has been developing, creating, and maintaining employment and improving the economy and environment in rural communities.

Mr. Hanks explained that the program guarantees loans made by private lenders to businesses in areas of up to 50,000 population. Priority is given to projects in areas of less than 25,000 population and to those creating employment and improving the environment.

Ten percent of this year's funding is set aside for women and minorities in their private businesses. If approved, FmHA enters into an agreement to reimburse the lender for up to 90 percent of any losses that may be sustained. This allows larger loans by the lender as they need only count the unguaranteed portion of the loan against their lending limit.

Farmers Home Administration's state office is in Lincoln. There are 36 county office and 8 district office locations through out the state available to provide information and to administer its programs.

anything," Schneider said.

When the demonstration is repeated, Schneider said the rescue workers move much more quickly, and by the fourth run-through, the demonstration moves like "clockwork."

"This is the purpose of a practice: to speed up the reaction processes and make certain rescue techniques automatic," Schneider said.

The feedback Schneider has received about his program is "tremendous."

The number of Nebraska farm fatalities fell from 70 in 1965 to 30 in 1978. Tractor overturn fatalities have decreased from 26 in 1965 to six in 1978.

He said the programs have had a ripple effect, with many rescue squads he has addressed presenting programs in their own communities. Schneider said that 600 to 700 people view the Ceresco Rescue Squad's extrication drills at the town's July 4 celebration.

These sessions build up the squads' sense of pride," Schneider said. "Many of the groups have adapted my program to their own geographic locations."

He pointed out that different areas of the state are prone to specific types of accidents. For example, baler accidents and falls from windmills or horses are common in the Sandhills.

"Overall, power takeoff mishaps have replaced tractor overturns as the most common farm accidents," Schneider said.

During the last three months of the year, there are several accidents involving livestock feeders when heavy clothing gets caught in machinery such as grinders, auger wagons or self-unloading wagons.

Schneider said that about an equal number of men and women attend his programs.

"It's especially important for farm women to know the procedures because the farmer might be away working and can't be reached immediately in case of emergency," Schneider said. Having both the husband and wife aware of safety procedures also has a rub off effect on the rest of the family."

Schneider said he "wasn't being conceited" when he called the Nebraska extrication training program the best in the United States, but it still can be expanded.

He said he is helping to prepare an extrication manual to replace the packet that is given to participants. The publication, which should be complete in 1979, includes accounts of farm accidents and names the causes and proper extrication procedures for each.

He said he would like to have 60,000 to 70,000 copies of the manual distributed nationally.

He also is working with an emergency medical technician (EMT) instructor in the hope of adding extrication training to the EMT program. Many rescue squad members have EMTs.

In April, Schneider will address more than 1,200 people at the American Medical Association's 32nd National Conference on Rural Health in St. Paul, Minn. His program will include two classroom sessions and demonstrations.

He has received requests from extension members in Virginia, New York, Illinois, North Dakota, Nevada, Montana, Missouri and Kansas to help develop programs like Nebraska's extrication program.

NIGHT CRAWLERS
 There is no available registered insecticide for earthworm control since chlordane has been removed from the market.

Collecting at night after rains will help reduce numbers. They make excellent fish bait!

If soil temperature information is not available, an average of the 7:00 a.m. and 12:00 noon air temperature. Since daily temperatures can vary greatly, trends in temperature over a week or 10-day period may be used.

SOIL TEMPERATURE
 There's a better guide than dates for planting corn, soybeans and grain sorghums — it's soil temperature. Optimum dates for planting do not fall the same every year, but when soil reaches 50 degrees, you know you are ready for corn, at 60 degrees for soybeans and at 70 degrees for grain sorghum.

A good time to plant corn is when the soil temperature at two inches reaches 50 degrees early in the morning, even though there may be some killing frost in the days ahead. Research shows that corn seed will not germinate when temperatures are below 50 degrees, so 50 degrees is actually the minimum temperature for planting corn.

The best planting time for top yields of soybeans is when soil temperature at a two-inch depth reaches 60 degrees. This is usually about May 20 to 30. Soybean seeds put in colder soil are very apt to rot, resulting in poor or uneven stand. If for some reason soybean planting is delayed, it is still wisest to stay with the adapted variety recommended for your area.

The best time to plant grain sorghum is when the soil temperature is 70 degrees.

SHELTERBELT REPAIR
 Winter storms can damage evergreens in shelterbelts. Snow can strip all of the branches from pines and cedars. Most of the time the pines retain their leaders, but the cedars may be entirely squashed.

When the evergreen leader (the very top-most branch) has been broken, drive or tie a stake near the center of the tree and tie with cord the most flexible remaining branch to the stake. It will become the new leader, and provide the tree with height growth.

Where branches have been broken, pruning the branch flush with the main stem or trunk will result in early healing.

In some pines only the leader will remain, or just some tufts or needles. Leave this tree alone to let it recover in the way best suited for itself.

Damaged shrubs or deciduous trees can be severely pruned and make an excellent recovery in just a few years.
