Providence Medical Trying to Cut Costs

Providence Medical Center, Wayne, joins 6,400 hospitals across the country in observing National Hospital Week this week. Marcie Thomas, administrator, said the theme of the observance is: "We're working for you." She said this is meant not only in the traditional manner but in helping to curb the cost of health care.

She said the Missionary Benedictine Sisters, governing board, administration and all other employees of Providence Medical have been trying to cut costs this past year. Mrs. Thomas pointed out a purchasing group was joined by Providence Medical, which takes the cooperation of all departments and medical staff if it is to work.

She also said energy conservation measures have been initiated and there has been a voluntary cutback when the patient load is down. "These are only a few of the measures that have been taken at Providence Medical Center to reduce cost," she explained and went on to add, "they represent a start and we are all striving for a greater cost reduction next year that will ultimately be passed on to you as a patient in our facility."

There is a nationwide effort being made to cut health care costs. It was pointed out that patients can help with the effort by doing simple things, such as asking doctors to keep their hospital stays as brief as possible. A patient can ask their doctor about alternatives to a stay in a hospital for such things as pre-admission testing and one-day surgery.

Patients can take non-emergency problems to their personal doctor rather than an emergency hospital treatment. It was pointed out that probably the biggest thing that can help cut health care cost is by persons minimizing their need for medical care. See COSTS, page 8

Suggest Guidelines

Rain Storm Tuesday Slows Planting

A strong storm which swept through the Wayneland area Tuesday during the early morning hours, dumped more than an inch of rain, halting field work once again.

The heavy rain, which measured more than an inch, was followed by cool, cloudy weather with intermittent rain showers. Area farmers got a start on corn planting during a windy, but dry, weekend. While there is still adequate time to get the planting done, crop officials suggest some guidelines for efficient planting.

They cautioned against planting too deep in cold, wet soils. They stated corn begins to germinate slowly when soil temperatures are around 55 degrees. The germination picks up as the soils temperature warm with a 60-degree reading giving prompt germination with seedlings appearing in seven to ten days.

They also said planter calibration is important. They suggest calibration set to plant enough seeds per acre, figuring at least a ten percent loss in warm soils and a 20 percent loss in colder soils. The officials also touched on sprayer calibration, stressing that it is important to recalibrate every year to insure correct number of gallons per acre and that the right amount of chemical will be added to the tank. They suggest a pressure gauge mounted near the boom.

Checking each nozzle is important, they said, to make certain they all are discharging equally, especially with brass tips. They said the tips can be off enough even when new to cause crop damage when maximum rates are used.

The stainless steel type nozzle is more carefully calibrated at the factory, they said, and they (stainless steel) are the only type to use if applying liquid nitrogen.

When determining herbicide rates, producers should consider soil texture, organic matter and the soil pH. Rates are generally lower and chemicals last longer on low organic matter soils with pH levels above 7.0.

The officials also mentioned that a hard rain such as the storm which moved through the county Tuesday morning, could cause soil crusting. They suggest field checks after planting to find out if the young plants are beginning to leaf out below the crust. Rotary hoeing at this time increases emergence, they said, and kills seedling weeds and may help reactivate preplant or preemergence herbicides.

The event will begin at 10:30 a.m. with a pro exhibition clinic by sectional professionals who will demonstrate various golf shots and techniques, including trick shots and

Council Votes to Postpone Action on Sunnyview Plat

After nearly a year in the mill, the proposed Sunnyview Addition east of Wayne is still waiting for council approval of its final plat.

After a presentation by Ron Stenowitz, attorney for Vakoc Construction Company, the council postponed action on the plat until they have more information regarding plans and financing.

The motion for postponement ended in a tie with Mayor Wayne Marsh voting in favor of the postponement.

The council assured Stenowitz and Bob and John Vakoc, who were at the meeting, they would make every effort to expedite the gathering of information and would, if necessary, call a special meeting.

Stenowitz first proposed to the council that Vakoc Construction wanted to form its own Sanitary Sewer district (SID) under state statutes for the eastern 60 percent of the plat.

Under this action, Vakoc would finance all improvements, including dedicating land for a paved extension of Providence Road south to Highway 35 for better access to the hospital.

The SID would function as a mini-municipality and appoint its own boards for the See PLAT, page 8

Pilot Parents Program

Parents of Handicapped Child Now Have 'Friend'

Parents of handicapped children now have a friend in Northeast Nebraska.

A Pilot Parents Program, where parents of a handicapped child talk to a trained person who is also the parent of a handicapped child, has been initiated in the Wayneland area.

Sharon Corbit, Wayne, said a one-day workshop recently established the groundwork for the program which is designed after one in Omaha, reputed to be one of the best in the nation.

Mrs. Corbit, who took the workshop along with her husband, Bill, said referral persons who can be contacted by parents of a handicapped child are Mrs. Lawrence Hesse, 375 2243 or Mrs. Terry Magdant, 261 2714.

referred to the parents of a child with the same handicap as that of the child whose parents are calling. "They (the callers) will know the person with whom they will be talking has also 'walked the mile' and know what they are going through."

She said not all parents of a handicapped child are ready for the Pilot Parents program. "In order for the program to be effective, the parents of a handicapped child must have recognized and accepted the handicap and must be willing to do something about it."

Mrs. Corbit said it is a parent of a child with Down's Syndrome, said it is a very lonely feeling to be the parent of a handicapped child. "You look about you and see all your friends with healthy children. You can't really know how it feels to be the parent of a handicapped child until you are the parent of a handicapped child."

Getting back the program, Mrs. Corbit said the Pilot program basically is a program in which parents of handicapped children help parents who have recently learned their child has mental retardation, cerebral palsy, epilepsy or autism.

Pilot Parents have had the experience of learning their child is handicapped. They have asked many of the same questions that "new parents" ask.

Pilot Parents have learned, through their own personal experiences, that raising a handicapped child can be rewarding.

ability to grow, learn and develop to his fullest potential.

Doctors in the area are being made aware of the program. Mrs. Corbit said it is hoped the doctors will make reference to parents of a handicapped child, about the program and what it can do for them so they can do more for their child.

The Pilot Parent program is funded by a grant from Developmental Disabilities, Office of Human Development, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Region VII, serving Iowa, Kansas, Missouri as well as Nebraska.

The Pilot Parent program serves all parents of all children with developmental disabilities. Those who took the workshop include Mr. See 'FRIEND', page 8

Your house... any house... should sell at a price equal to its "fair market value." This has been defined as the highest price a buyer will pay and the lowest price the seller will accept, when both are acting voluntarily, fully informed, in a free market without compulsion of any kind. From a practical standpoint, such perfect circumstances rarely exist. Sellers are both buyer and seller fully aware of all the factors that influence value. Trends in neighborhood characteristics, for example. Often a buyer may be under some compulsion to buy or a seller may feel he is to sell quickly, perhaps to take advantage of an employment opportunity. ## Bears Meet Wakefield Next

Laurel Eliminates Decatur

Led by Russ Gade and Joe Olsen, who went three for four at the plate and scored two runs each, the Laurel Bears came from behind to handle Decatur 14-7 in Class B district baseball at Wayne, Monday. The win ups Laurel's record to 4-5 for the season and advances them into second round action against Wakefield. Don Dalton and Shannon Hopkins, both all-conference selections, scored three runs apiece for the Bears. Laurel took an early lead of 3-0 in the top of the first inning, as Dalton, Hopkins and Doug Lute crossed the plate with a key hit by Olsen. However, Decatur scored five runs in the bottom of the second to gain the lead.

Gade singled and scored in the third on a triple by Olsen. Decatur got the run back in the bottom of the inning to hold a two-run lead. A run by Gade in the fourth brought Laurel within one run and a big fifth inning put the Bears on top to stay.

Scott Norvell, Mark McCorkindale, Dalton, Hopkins and Olsen scored in the fifth for a 10-6 lead. Two double plays by Lute, Brian Buss and Norvell helped check Decatur in the final four innings.

Dalton added his third run of the game in the sixth inning after singling, stealing second and third and scoring on a Decatur error. One Decatur run in the bottom of the inning made the score 11-7. Two base hits and six Decatur errors in the seventh inning, helped the Bears score three insurance runs by Gade, Olsen and Buss. Reliever Gade was credited with the win.

PONCA TO FACE WAYNE
A three-run fifth inning gave the Ponca Indians a 7-4 win over Bancroft in the other first round district game at Wayne. The Bulldogs scored two runs in the top of the first inning but Ponca tied it in the bottom of the inning. The Indians added two more runs in the second for a 4-2 lead. Two runs by Bancroft in the third, tied the game at 4-4 but Ponca took the lead 7-4 with three runs in the fifth and that was enough for the win. Bancroft added two final runs in the sixth and seventh innings but it was too little too late. Ponca's record is now 5-10 while Bancroft drops to 2-7. The Ponca-Wayne game scheduled for Thursday has been postponed.

Preparing For Districts

Wakefield Blasts Bancroft

In the final regular season game in the Northeast Nebraska Baseball League, Wakefield held Bancroft scoreless in the final six innings to earn a 9-2 win, Friday.

The Trojans assured themselves of a second place finish in the conference, completing their season with a 9-2 record. Wayne won the title with an 8-0 conference record. Wakefield will be involved in district play at a later date against Laurel, a 14-7 winner over Decatur Tuesday in first round action.

Rick Guy opened the game on the mound for the Trojans and allowed two runs on three hits and two walks in four innings. His team led 8-2 when he left the game. Mark Starzl pitched in relief of Guy and held Bancroft hitless and scoreless in the final three innings.

The Bulldogs scored both of their runs in the top of the first inning but Wakefield responded with two runs of their own in the bottom of the inning. Doug Starzl poked a two-run homer to tie the score. Three more runs in the third and three in the fourth gave Wakefield an un-stoppable 8-2 lead and raised Guy's record to 3-1. The pitching ace also collected two RBIs to aid the cause.

Tom Preston, Larry Soderberg and Joedy Sherer joined Doug Starzl with two hits each. Soderberg scored four of Wakefield's runs and Starzl added three more.

When asked how his team felt, losing the conference title to Wayne after one meeting between the two teams was cancelled due to rain, Wakefield coach Joe Coble said that his players were more disappointed than he was, but praised Wayne. "Wayne is very deserving of the conference title. They beat every team in the conference and they're a very fine team," Coble said.

WSC Kittens Finish With 18-13 Season

Coach Sue Kovar's Wildkittens ended the 1979 season at 18-13 with a 2-1 loss to Washburn University Saturday in CSIC Tourney action at St. Joseph, Mo. WSC had one victory and one loss earlier in the tournament, which was eventually won by Emporia State, Emporia, Kan.

The Lady Blues of Washburn were the defending tournament champions, and were aided this year by four WSC errors. Vicki Carsey scored the only Wayne State run on a sacrifice fly by Diana Hall in the third inning, giving the Kittens a 1-0 lead.

Washburn answered with one run in the fourth and added the winning run in the sixth inning, both runs scored by Brenda DeGroot.

In tournament action Friday, WSC downed Pittsburg State, 3-0, after an opening loss to Fort Hays State, 4-0.

Lynne Larson tossed a two-hitter in the 3-0 victory over the lady Gorillas of Pittsburg. The Kittens scored one run in the first as Renee Fernau knocked in Carsey on a single.

Carsey and Fernau both scored in the sixth on a triple by Robin Walsh to complete the scoring.

Wayne State slacked off for one inning against Fort Hays, but that was enough as the lady Tigers scored four runs on four hits in the third inning to put the game away.

Randy's Recap

According to Randy Hascall

IT'S TIME TO TALK about one of the fastest growing sports in recent years. Racquetball courts are springing up everywhere.

Facts show that the Nebraska Racquetball Association has more than 1,000 members now — an indication that the sport's popularity is already high. Wayne State College has some racquetball courts and I've played the game on and off for the past four years. I find it good exercise, fast moving and fun. The only problem I ever had was finding someone else who was interested in the sport. Now that's getting easier.

For people who aren't familiar with racquetball a brief description: two players compete with a hollow rubber ball and racquets similar to tennis racquets but shorter. The players hit the ball off of a wall, but within boundary lines, exchanging shots. It is almost a combination of handball and tennis. Just as in badminton, players can score only on their own serves.

THE METRIC SYSTEM — Is it really worth it? That's the question I keep running through my mind. I'm so set in our present sets of measures that I hate to see the metric system take over. Soon people will have to take calculators on grocery shopping trips to compare prices of liters with quarts.

But in track and field, the metric system is a little different. I have nothing against 400 meter tracks or races 100, 200, or 800, 1600 or 3200 meters in length. The things that bother me are the inconsistencies. The Omaha World Herald, for instance, doesn't recognize the Northeast Nebraska athletes who have recorded good times, because they run on meter tracks. They won't even consider the conversions.

This really isn't fair to the individuals who have worked hard this season and have good times in meter races. Don't be surprised if some of these individuals sneak into the finals of the Nebraska Girls State Tournament this weekend. Paula Chace of Laurel is one example. Although she has lost only one race all year, she is unlisted in the best state times by the Omaha World Herald. And believe me, her times in the 200, 400 and 800 meter races are good. But she and other individuals will finally get their chance to prove themselves at North Platte.

Several ovals in recent years have gone to the metric system. Wayne State College, of course, is equipped with a metric track and many of the meets in this part of the state are held there. Fortunately, field events are still measured in feet and inches. I think that change over would be enough to really mess people up.

Assuming the change to the metric system becomes complete in all running events, what about the old records? Do high schools start fresh all over again, storing the old records in books where the individuals holding them will be forgotten and building new record boards with meter distances painted on? Then, runners will set new records in every metric event. Everytime someone improves, a record will be broken and we will have lost years of progress to get where we are today.

IT'S SOMETIMES DIFFICULT FOR a golfer to maintain his form through the long winter in Nebraska. Thus, when a golfer steps onto that number one tee box for the first time in the spring, an embarrassing situation often occurs. So was the case for one lady who opened her season last week at the Wayne Country Club.

The lady (she remains anonymous to prevent further embarrassment) teed her golf ball up on the first tee box just as a soft drink distributor drove up in his truck. The driver parked his truck on a gravel driveway near the clubhouse but not far from the women's tee box. The lady hit her tee shot smack into the back of the truck and among the cases of pop. Realizing she would encounter an unplayable lie, she hit another tee shot. The ball followed a flight similar to the first one and landed among the cans again. She hit another mulligan and, you guessed it — once again the ball flew into the truck.

I don't know what the course ruling is in a case (no pun intended) like this but I think I would have driven the truck down the fairway and parked next to the number one green. Then, I would have played the first ball from there.

I RECEIVED WORD that Bruce Smith of Winside High School has been awarded an athletic grant at Westmar College. He was given the grant to continue playing football at Westmar. He joins Kathy Thomas as 1979 Winside graduates who have received grants to the Le Mars, Iowa school.

WAYNE HIGH will have two more athletes enrolled in school next fall now that Ron Sladek of Council Bluffs has taken over a manager's position at the new First National Savings Company in Wayne.

One of his sons, Mike, is 6-6 and played on the Lewis Central basketball team in Council Bluffs. He will be a junior. His younger brother, Steve, is 15 and a 6-0 wrestler and football player.

FINAL NOTE for baseball fans: The Wayne Midget and Legion teams voted to compete in class B this summer.

Cold Wildcats Dropped From Tourney

Wayne State's hot streak was turned to ice in the CSIC playoffs as the Wildcats lost 9-1 to Emporia State Friday and 11-1 to Missouri Southern earlier in the day. Emporia was the eventual CSIC Playoff winner.

WSC will attempt a comeback at the NAA District 11 Playoffs at Kearney, today (Thursday) through Saturday. The Wildcats, 19-20, will open the District playoffs against Concordia at 12:30 p.m. today.

Former Wildcat Brian Pold-berg paced the Hornets — Emporia State with three hits in four trips to the plate, and knocked in four runs in the 9-1 victory over Wayne State late Friday night.

WSC's Mark Westergaard was responsible for eight of the nine Hornet runs, and was tagged with his fifth loss of the season. He pitched only three and two-thirds innings before being relieved by Neil Blohm.

The Hornets pushed across four runs in the second inning and four more in the fourth. Wayne State loaded the bases with no outs in the third and scored one run on an error which loaded the bases again, but could do nothing more.

Emporia State, defending national champion in the NAA, added an insurance run in the sixth to cap the scoring.

WSC opened the CSIC playoffs with a dismal 11-1 loss to the Lions of Missouri Southern, in five innings. The Lions scored their 11 runs on 11 hits, including three doubles and a triple, and were aided by three WSC errors.

Mom's Role Changing

Today, more than ever before the definition and role of a mother is greatly changing. A child might view a mother as someone who bakes cakes and cookies and then tells you not to eat them. A mother might compare herself to a quilt — trying to keep her children warm and comforted but not smothering them.

But whatever the definition, mom's role is changing.

A study at Purdue University found that more than half of all homemakers in the United States are now employed, numbering 18,770,000, while non-employed homemakers number 17,800,000.

According to study results, 63 percent of homemakers said their primary reason for working was self-fulfillment. Another 23 percent said they worked mainly for "independence and an income of their own," and only 14 percent reported working because of true economic need.

The study also found that with few exceptions, the husbands of employed homemakers don't help around the house much more than when their wife is not working outside the home.

Although husbands of employed wives are more likely to help in the kitchen, they are very much the same as other husbands with respect to other chores, including grocery shopping and child care.

When it comes to housekeeping, employed homemakers seemed no less concerned about poor housekeeping practices. In fact, they expressed more concern about an untidy house than other homemakers. However, they seemed to be less bothered by irregular cleaning schedules and other disruptions in homemaking activities.

Employed homemakers also were somewhat more likely to take shortcuts in preparing meals, although unemployed homemakers tended to eat-out and serve TV dinners and take-home foods almost as often.

The idea that today's working mothers devote less time to their children than their counterparts in former generations doesn't appear to be true.

Research shows that the working mother of today usually gives considerably more time and attention to each child because her schedule specifically allots time for high-priority activities.

On the other hand, when a mother had to carry in wood for fuel, pump water for the house and work without any electrical conveniences, she often had less time to pay attention to children.

Whether employed or non-employed outside the home a mother is warm and love and anger and hurt, she's human. Happy Mother's Day, Mom!

City Council Takes Action on Petitions

The city council Tuesday night acted upon two petitions which had been submitted at the April 24 meeting for review.

Darrell Brewington, city administrator, recommended to the council that a building in the 500 Walnut Street area, be cited as a public nuisance and condemned.

Brewington said the recommendation came after both the police and fire departments cited the structure as being a nuisance and a hazard.

City Attorney Ken Swarts said a suit will be filed in Wayne County district court if the owner, Alma Wierhauser, does not take private action to eliminate the alleged public nuisance.

Swarts said the court will decide whether or not the structure does, in fact, present a public nuisance. The findings of the court will be the final determination.

The council passed a resolution directing the city attorney to take appropriate action.

Another petition by residents in the 400 block of Logan Street, citing a car display lot as not being in compliance with the city zoning regulation and that because the area is essentially residential, the lot "adversely affects the quality and harmony of the neighborhood."

The area is zoned for business but because of an apparent error in the zoning regulations, open air display of automobiles is illegal in a B-1 district and is not provided for in a B-1 district.

Brewington stated that because of the error, all of the auto dealerships in Wayne are not in compliance. He pointed out that Dick Wozniak, city planner who helped draft the regulations in 1965, has stated in a letter the regulation was in error and that Bill Phelps, city planners with Kirkam, Michael and Associates, which is updating the city comprehensive plan, concurred that the error should be corrected.

The council approved a resolution to have the city attorney draft an amendment to the regulation correcting the error.

Swarts said the City Planning Commission would first have to make the recommendation and hold a public hearing and then the council would also have to hold a public hearing before the error can be corrected.

Council Sam Heppburn, 1st Ward, submitted a two-page letter, defining his views and presented a motion that the council seek input from Phelps before taking action. The council approved the resolution.

4-H Judging Contest

A Dixon County Livestock Judging Clinic will be held at the Northeast Station on Tuesday, May 15 at 7 p.m.

Steve Pritchard will be in charge. Planned program is live hog judging.

All Dixon County 4-H members and leaders interested in livestock judging are invited to attend, reports Stan Starling, county extension agent.

purpose of taxing and assessing.

Because of a lack of information concerning financing and engineering regarding particularly the providing of electricity to the eastern part of the planned subdivision, the city agreed to the postponement.

Prior to taking the vote, a five-minute recess was called and Vakoc conferred with his attorney regarding the city's apparent tendency to use a standard improvement district procedure. Vakoc said they would go along with such a plan.

They contended the only reason they wanted to form their own SID was to get things moving as rapidly as possible so they could sell lots and construction on houses could begin this fall.

Mayor Marsh told Vakoc and counsel that he felt there were too many unanswered questions and he recommended to the council they postpone action.

Not as severe as led to believe

CAPITOL NEWS
BY MELVIN PAUL
STATEHOUSE CORRESPONDENT
THE NEBRASKA PRESS ASSOCIATION
LINCOLN — The diesel fuel shortage is making itself felt across the state, but the shortage apparently is not going to be as severe as Gov. Charles Thone had been led to believe.

He and William Palmer, director of the state Energy Office, recently issued an alarming report that there were indications the state in May would receive more than 40 percent fewer gallons of diesel fuel than during the same month a year ago. The estimate was that gasoline supplies would be only two-thirds of what they were in May 1978.

In less than a week, however, the governor and Palmer said the outlook had brightened considerably.

One contributing factor, Palmer said, was that several major suppliers had amended upward their estimates on how much fuel they would have for Nebraska. Several other suppliers were late in filing their monthly reports and that also had made the picture gloomier than it in reality was.

Several representatives of the U.S. Energy Office also came to Lincoln to report Nebraska would receive 90 percent of the gasoline it did last May and that diesel fuel amounts would be down only about 15 percent from last May.

Despite those favorable reports, at least some of Nebraska's state senators remained dubious.

Sen. Tom Kennedy of Newman Grove told the governor many farmers in his area were tapping diesel fuel tanks that had been filled for later irrigation pumping needs, and Sen. Howard Lamb of Anselmo said he had been advised fuel distributors in his area had about a five-day supply of diesel on hand.

Sen. Erloy Hefner of Coleridge, who is in the fuel business, said the pipeline serving his business had been dry occasionally.

The three senators said demand for diesel fuel would rise sharply once farmers got into the fields following a late, wet spring.

One reason the shortage hasn't been noticed more, Hefner said, is that farmers weren't able to get into the fields early this spring. He and Kennedy said after the weather becomes more favorable, many farmers will want to run their tractors close to 24 hours a day.

GROUND IS BROKEN
 Gov. Charles Thone recently presided over the ground-breaking ceremonies marking the start of construction of a new maximum security prison that will be built on the site of the penitentiary at Lincoln's southwest edge.

It is estimated the facility, which is targeted for completion in the fall of 1981, will cost more than $14 million.

Thone told those attending the ceremonies that his administration is committed to formation of a criminal justice system "second to none."

That type of program will demand not only modern buildings but also good staffing of the various penal institutions, he said.

Among others participating in the ground-breaking was Lt. Gov. Roland Luedtke, who played a prominent role in the Legislature in working for penal reform legislation.

Luedtke praised lawmakers who during the past 10 years worked for reforms in the criminal justice system and voted for appropriations that were needed to make various improvements a reality.

The lieutenant governor also commended former Gov. J. James Exon for working for a construction program and for supporting appropriations required for getting prison projects built.

Thone said he is striving for a "humane" system that will offer a better chance of prisoner rehabilitation because of the job training, job release, education and drug treatment programs that will be offered.

VET BILL MOVES
 A bill authorizing the University of Nebraska Board of Regents to enter into an agreement with two or more states in construction of a regional veterinary college has gotten over its first hurdle in the Legislature.

If the legislation is eventually passed and signed by Gov. Charles Thone, and if some other conditions are met, Nebraska would have to put up more than $6 million of the $28 million construction cost.

The bill stipulates the federal government would have to furnish at least half of the building costs.

Thone, who has said it would be a plus for the state to have the college in Lincoln, has not promised to sign the legislation. On more than one occasion, the governor has said the "bottom line" will be the money involved in erecting the facilities and in staffing the school.

It was interesting to note that all five Lincoln state senators voted against the bill. They argued some other university operations might be adversely affected if the veterinary college were built.

Rural senators gave the bill solid support and there was also some backing from Omaha senators.

Thone has said approval of an amendment that would provide for private donors to put up $3 million of the building costs would make the measure more appealing to him.

Opponents of the bill centered their arguments on claims no real need has been shown for the school. Various statistics have been cited on this point during recent months. Some of the data show there will be an over-supply of veterinarians by the time the school would begin graduating students.

Some of the state lawmakers also said current contract and reciprocal agreements with other states that operate veterinary schools keep an adequate number of new veterinarians coming into Nebraska.

Several senators who favor the bill said all Nebraskans would benefit from improvements in livestock production and from disease control in livestock—if the school were constructed in Lincoln.

AID BILL KILLED
 A bill that would have based state aid to schools strictly on the head count in every school district was killed recently by the state's lawmakers.

Sen. Tom Vickers of Farman, who sponsored the bill, said per pupil aid is the other fair method of distributing the state dollars.

But Sen. Gerald Koch of Raiston, long one of the most active supporters of increased state aid, said not one other state uses the system Vickers advocated.

Vickers said the current aid formula is unfair to small districts and that per pupil payments vary by up to $300 with the larger districts getting the most favorable treatment.

Koch is the sponsor of another aid bill under which all districts would receive basic payments that would be based on student numbers. But the Koch formula also provides for equalization payments for districts unable to meet their commitments because their per pupil property values are lower.

OSHA inspections ineffective

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Through its official publication, MANDATE, the National Federation of Independent Business (NFIB) polls its 570,000 members every six weeks on five issues of concern to small and independent business. On the third page of this release is a copy of the question on OSHA safety regulations as it was presented to NFIB members. Also included are voting results by state.)

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) should prioritize its limited resources by conducting the majority of its safety inspections in large businesses and in businesses which are traditionally "hazardous," according to the National Federation of Independent Business (NFIB). The small-business community believes that small businesses which are not involved in hazardous work, such as heavy manufacturing or construction, should be exempted from OSHA safety inspections.

These findings result from a recent, nationwide survey of NFIB members. Eighty-eight percent of the respondents favored an exemption from OSHA safety inspections for small businesses in non-hazardous industries. Ten percent of the respondents opposed the idea, and two percent were undecided.

NFIB is a non-profit, nonpartisan organization representing the interests of small business. With more than 570,000 current members — individuals who own small or independent businesses — NFIB membership surveys reflect the pulse of small-business opinion in America.

The well-documented safety record of small firms and the questionable value of workplace inspections as a means of preventing accidents were reasons cited for the heavy vote in favor of granting a blanket exemption to traditionally non-hazardous small businesses.

Under current procedures, OSHA relies on workplace inspections to prevent accidents and deaths in all industries. The method used to determine the relative safety of a particular industry is a rating called the "injury-illness incidence rate." Industries with a rate of 9 per 100 workers are classified as "hazardous." Very small business — generally those with 20 or fewer employees — have an injury-illness incidence rate of only 3.5 per 100.

Studies of OSHA operations and results including a recommendations report by the Interagency Task Force on Workplace Safety and Health, indicate that employee behavior is a major component in accidents. Only about 25 percent of all workplace accidents are preventable by inspections, according to the report.

"Accidents occur largely due to behavioral problems with employees," explained Sally Douglas, a legislative specialist in NFIB's Washington, D.C. Research Department. "The height of a fire extinguisher — this is one of the physical components checked by OSHA inspectors — is not nearly so important as the attitude of the employee who might need to use that fire extinguisher. And what do you do about the guy who refuses to wear a hardhat on hot days or who 'doesn't believe' in safety shields?"

"There's only so much that most employers can say, and do to protect employees," Douglas continued, "but employers in small firms tend to work closely with their employees, and this creates a positive working environment. The outstanding safety record of small firms means that virtually all their OSHA inspections are incredible wastes of taxpayer money." Douglas concluded, "OSHA can't watch every business in the country, so it makes sense for OSHA to sort out priorities and watch those businesses which are statistically hazard-

Caution--work is hazardous to child's health

RICHARD L. LESHNER, President
Chamber of Commerce
of the United States
WASHINGTON — Has it ever occurred to you that government seems willing to expose our children to everything — except work? Consider, for example, what recently happened in Fort Worth, Texas, where two teenage businessmen found themselves paralyzed by the protective clutches of Big Brother.

The two young entrepreneurs, Donald Woodward and his younger brother and assistant, Blake, have been busy building their own business selling advertising for the (Ft. Worth) News Tribune. Donald classified himself as an independent advertising account executive. And, like so many of their counterparts, these two Texans were gettogethers — talented, ambitious, hard-working and very successful.

A bit too successful it seemed, for their activities caught the attention of a compliance officer from the Department of Labor stationed in the Fort Worth area. The officer, Joe Noriega, felt that the Woodward brothers' persistent self-initiative meant the News Tribune was acting as an employer in violation of "Child Labor Requirements in Nonagricultural Occupations under the Fair Labor Standards Act."

But after amazing clarity, patience and grace, and with the help of a Webster's Dictionary which somehow triumphed over the Department of Labor booklet, younger Donald seemed to convince older Joe that he really was self-employed. Well, not quite. For apparently Joe believe he was on a mission of mercy, and he was determined to carry out his rescue. Here is a sprinkling of the ensuing conversation as reported by Madeline Williams, who covered the story for the News Tribune.

Joe: "Now Donald, I am here to protect you."
 Don: "Against what?"
 Joe: "...The government recognizes that certain classifications of employees need protection..."
 Don: "I'm not an employee. And what do I need protection against?"
 Joe: "H.O., what the Department of Labor calls 'hazardous occupation.'"
 Don: "There's nothing hazardous about selling advertising unless you make a prospect so mad he throws you out of the office, and I don't."
 Joe: "The government protects you as a salesman. It is conceivable you could work all day and not sell an ad and then you wouldn't get any money for your work."
 Don: "It is not conceivable, sir."
 Joe: "Nevertheless, the government wants to be sure you do not work for nothing... as an outside salesman, you are entitled to $4.35 an hour."
 Don: "I don't work by the hour."
 Joe: "But that's what you are to be paid when you spend your time and don't make any sales."
 Don: "Do you think I would accept money for something I didn't do? I wouldn't take it. That's an insult."
 Joe: "Now, Donald, that's the law."
 But Donald refused to believe that law applied to his own case. And he prevailed... sort of. After executive consultations, Mr. Noriega returned to declare Donald an independent agent. But the government wanted everyone to be aware that both Donald and the citizens on the streets face hazards when the young man drives his car during work hours. And as for brother Blake, he was not to be permitted to work more than three hours a day, nor after 7 p.m.

Of course, the attitude of bureaucrats in Fort Worth merely reflects the larger problem nationwide. I was reminded of this while recently hosting the weekly Chamber public affairs radio program, "What's The Issue?" My guest was George Allen, the very successful NFL football coach for 12 seasons, and now national chairman of the Summer Jobs for Youth Program being run by the National Alliance for Business.

George got into this program when he saw how wasted summers were leading to the loss of careers, and even lives. And he's done a fantastic job. This year he's aiming for 270,000 jobs — jobs that will provide needed experience and the invaluable lesson that hard work and a good attitude can lead to success and transform drifters into achievers.

The problem is, every time the minimum wage increases as it just has, the marginally profitable firms are compelled to lay off workers or stop hiring. Programs like Summer Jobs for Youth are hurt. To me, that's criminal, especially when you realize that youth unemployment is running about 18 percent, and for minorities it's about 35 percent. At the very least we need a youth wage act, a point on which most economists agree.

We must solve this problem and arrest the smothering of our traditional work ethic. Unfortunately, the solution will probably come in spite of, rather than in cooperation with, the federal government.

Tempest over profits

The U.S. economy expanded at a fast rate, creating some 3.2 million new jobs last year. Consequently, it should not have come as a shock that 1978 turned out to be a good year for corporate profits.

In fact, criticism of improved profits has always been so predictable that the Wall Street Journal anticipated it in an editorial, "Pray for Profits," which was published a few days before the official profit figures for the fourth quarter of 1978 were announced.

Commenting on the year's strong finish, the Journal said: "The first thing to say is that the President's economic aides should be thanking their lucky stars that corporate earnings registered such healthy gains from a year earlier."

Nevertheless, criticism came on strong. But once placed in proper context, corporate profits were good but far from "outrageous." A lot of it was "funny money," profits exaggerated by misleading statistics and by inflation.

Depending upon the choice of "numbers" or statistics, profits for the year rose sharply or modestly. A headline on the front page of a major metropolitan newspaper reported fourth-quarter profits rose at an annual rate of 44.8 percent. This figure was arrived at by multiplying the compounded rate of increase of 11.2 percent for fourth-quarter profits times four. This approach assumes that the fourth quarter was representative of all 1978 quarters, which few analysts would contend. It also overjokes the effect of inflation on profit figures.

To take inflation into account means that adjustments should be made to cover the cost of replacing inventories, which went into goods and services a business sold and which must be replenished at greater cost, and for capital expenditures and structures, which must be replaced in inflation dollars. When these adjustments are made, the profit rise for 1978 is reduced to 9.7 percent. With inflation running over 9 percent, hardly anyone but AFL-CIO President George Meany would call that "profit gouging."

An outcry also came from anti-inflation strategists at the White House, who feared that the big labor unions would use profit figures as a pretext to break the 7 percent wage guideline. But, here again, careful analysis showed profits were not the culprit for rising prices.

The outbursts from the inflation straigists were headed off by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and its chief economist, Dr. Jack Carlson, whose analysis was based on costs per unit of output and profits per unit of output last year. It showed:

Inflation-adjusted profits per unit of output increased only 2.7 percent last quarter of 1978 and actually declined 1.5 percent in 1978 from 1977. Profits per unit are the difference between what it costs in inflation-adjusted dollars to produce an item and what it sells for in inflation-adjusted dollars.

Employee compensation per unit of output — a major item in the cost of producing goods and services — rose by 8.1 percent last 12 reported months, or three times faster than unit profits.

Federal corporate tax liability per unit of output from the fourth quarter of 1977 increased 22.1 percent, or eight times faster than unit profits.

Production as measured by the Gross National Product rose sharply at the finish, by 6.9 percent, producing huge dollar profits from a greater volume of business, not higher prices. These are the dollars for future jobs.

"The profits data," said Dr. Carlson, "clearly show that profits growth has lagged behind inflation and the performance in past business recoveries."

In fact, corporate profits averaged less than a citizen could make in interest on a government bond or note.

"The profits data cannot be used as a scapegoat for bad government policies that are causing inflation," Dr. Carlson concluded.

Let's thank our lucky stars for profits — and those 3 million new jobs.

Neckties and Profits
 An economist says the simplest way to understand true profits is to think of a necktie, then lots of neckties.

If it costs $5 to produce a tie that sells for $5.50, one hundred ties will bring in $50 — for a profit of fifty dollars, or a rate of 10 percent.

But if the cost of producing the tie goes up 30 percent to $7.50 (due to inflation) higher taxes and higher wages) — and you keep the same rate of profit — one hundred ties will bring $82.50, for a profit of seventy-five dollars or 10 percent.

But if you compare your dollar profits of $50 and $75, your profit rate has increased from 10 percent to 50 percent.

When economists talk about dollar profit per unit of output, they are talking about the rate of profit on a single tie, not how many ties you sold.

According to the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, dollar profit per unit of output in 1978 declined 1.5 percent from 1977. Fortunately, dollar profits rose sufficiently to make 1978 a good year overall for corporate profits.

Increased Soybean Yields Supply World With Protein

Efficient crop production and increased profits per acre are the long-range challenges facing soybean growers and researchers, according to Ralph Raikes, a soybean grower from Ashland and chairman of the Nebraska Soybean Development Utilization & Marketing Board.

"Farmers raise soybeans for a profit," he said. "In the past, we've been able to plant more acres or doublecrop to increase acreage. There's a limit to these expansion methods, so we must place increased emphasis on the other ways of increasing yields and lowering production costs. The place to start is in development of better soybean varieties and cultural practices." Soybean production in the U.S. has more than doubled in the past 12 years, largely because of the strong world-wide demand, he said. More than 63 million acres of soybeans were harvested last year, compared to slightly over 35 million acres in 1965.

"It's not a question of producing too many soybeans," he said, "but of being able to supply the increasing world demand for protein in the next five to 10 years and beyond."

"If soybean exports continue to reach record levels like last year, the export volume in the 1980's bound to go beyond the present projections. We can't continue to expand acreage, so we must depend on research to come up with new solutions for increasing production."

One area that holds the most promise for improvement, according to Raikes, is soybean yields. While soybean acreage has almost doubled since the mid-sixties, average yields per acre have improved by only about five bushels per acre, from an average U.S. yield of 24.5 bushels per acre in 1965 to 29.6 bushels per acre in 1977.

"Sixty percent of the increased yields in soybeans can be attributed to new varieties developed through basic research," he said. "So can many of the cultural practices that we use as proven methods of increasing profits for soybeans, like narrower rows and better weed and pest control practices."

To unlock the soybean yield barrier, research needs to tackle several basic questions, he said.

"We need to develop soybean varieties that are better adapted to low moisture and water stress conditions and find out why the soybean plant blooms heavily but aborts up to 75 percent of the blossoms, even under optimum conditions."

The use of plant growth regulators is another area where few applicable results have been discovered for soybeans, but one that holds great potential for boosting soybean yields in the future.

SOIL CONDITIONERS

The following information comes from Louis Daigger, District Extension Specialist.

Additives such as surfactants and/or adjuvants are being marketed as a means of increasing crop yields and improving soil conditions. These products are materials used to help emulsify, disperse, spread and wet liquids.

Some companies marketing these materials claim that they will increase water usage by the plant, improve fertilizer efficiency, aid in water permeability of the soil and/or improve size of plants as well as increase yields. Often technical terms are used to describe the beneficial effects of the product.

TESTS ON SOIL CONDITIONERS

University researchers from several states have not increased yields with the use of these materials on soils as recommended by the sellers. Two trials conducted at the University of Nebraska South Central Station applied one product at recommended rates on corn.

All treatments were supplied with 220 pounds nitrogen. Under the conditions of the experiments, there was no significant influence on grain yield nor nitrogen, phosphorus or potassium content of the ear leaf.

Surfactants are already present in most herbicide formulations and are important for good performance of postemergence herbicides. Additional surfactants should not be added to commercial herbicide unless indicated on the label.

Adding an additional surfactant may have no effect, it may decrease herbicide performance, or it may increase herbicide performance and crop injury. Another point is to read the herbicide label and determine if the manufacturer does not suggest the addition of a surfactant and you add one, you may void the label guarantee. You will have no recourse to the herbicide manufacturer warranty if you have crop injury.

SELECTING SILAGE CORN

Can you assume that when comparing two corn silage varieties that the variety that yields the greatest tonnage per acre is the better variety to plant? The answer is no. Select a variety that will give high grain yields and have a lot of plant structure.

Think in terms of energy produced per acre, not just dry or wet yield. The grain portion will have half again as much energy as the stem and leaf. Normally, we feel the good grain producing varieties in an area are the good silage varieties also.

Family Farms Not Likely To Survive?

The scramble for ownership of farm land plays a larger part than farm product prices in the trend toward fewer and larger farms, according to an Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources extension agricultural economist.

This trend is well established, said Dr. Duane A. Olsen, and is aided by tax laws which lift land values out of the reach of younger farmers. The University of Nebraska-Lincoln staff member noted that "unless young farmers can enter, family farming is not likely to survive as part of our rural tradition."

Farm numbers have declined 45 percent in Nebraska since 1945 and 55 percent nationally during that period, Olsen said, but many small farms remain. While two-thirds of all farms sold less than $20,000 in agricultural products in 1977, however, these small farm operators produced only 11 percent of the value of all farm products sold that year.

million large farms, or those reporting agricultural sales of $40,000 or more in 1977, produced 78 percent of total agricultural sales.

Olsen noted that the traditional family farm, defined as one with little hired labor, with most land owned by the operator and with at least a minimum acceptable level of living for the farm family, "is in some jeopardy."

He cited preservation of the freedom of entry and flexibility of owner-operated farms as common problems.

Urbanization and inflation also have been dominant influences, he said, and agriculture has been unable to restrict supplies, raise prices and generate adequate profits for its capital requirements.

Two choices remain open to the farmers: to suppress family living or to surrender equity, usually in land, to obtain operating capital, the economist said. And because of its expected duration, inflationary increases in land values promise to dwarf and increase in profitability brought about by wise investment or prudent operation.

A conference designed to examine concerns of small farmers recently was held in Lincoln, Olsen added. Participants included farmers, teachers and researchers from across the nation. Ultimately, he said, participants plan to formulate recommendations concerning federal policy and programs as well as projects at the state and community level.

Sierra Club To Look At Rural People's Image

How do urban people look at rural people? How do rural people look at themselves? What kind of image do rural people want to project?

"Rural Image" will be the focus of the regular monthly meeting of the Elkhorn Valley Group of the Sierra Club on Tuesday, May 15, at 8 p.m. at Commercial Federal in Norfolk.

Leading the discussion will be Dave and Cindy Goeller of rural Pilger, Nebraska's core couple for the American Farm Project.

The project includes young farm couples from 23 states and is sponsored by the National Farmers Union and funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities.

A special guest night will also be held to mark membership month of the Sierra Club, a national organization of individuals interested in the preservation, conservation and enjoyment of the environment and natural resources.

Membership in the Elkhorn Valley Group is open to anyone in Northeast Nebraska.

For more information contact Iris Watchorn Chambers, Berry Hall, Wayne State College.

The public is invited to this special guest night.

gallon of fuel per acre. Two trips with a partial load require more fuel than one trip with the tractor loaded to a greater degree.

3. Practicing conservation tillage can result in on-farm fuel savings of two gallons per acre per year. For example, one chisel plowing and one disking operation will use less fuel than one moldboard plowing operation. Farmers are advised to avoid tillage of the soil to excessive depths to save energy and additional loss of soil moisture.

4. "Shift up (to a higher gear) and throttle back" when pulling light loads. Nebraska Tractor Test Reports show differences in fuel efficiency at partial load between full and reduced throttle conditions. Degree of savings is dependent on a particular tractor.

5. Match tractor size to a particular tillage task. Over-powered tractors use more fuel on light tillage, cultivation and

Farmers Can Prepare For Fuel Shortage

In the face of an apparent shortage of diesel fuel for farming operation — perhaps becoming more serious later in the cropping season — farmers can carry out several sound and proven practices to reduce fuel consumption without adversely affecting production levels.

This advice is offered by Allen Rider, Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources extension agricultural engineer, who pointed out that field operations use approximately 17 percent of the fuel that is consumed for direct production agriculture in Nebraska.

"This is second only to the amount of energy used for irrigation," Rider noted.

Rider outlined eight methods to reduce on-farm diesel fuel consumption:

- Cutting out unnecessary tillage trips across the field can result in savings of 1/2 to 2/3 gallon of fuel per acre.
- Combining operations to utilize more tractor power capacity can potentially save up to 1/2

Stable Fly Annoys Cattle

A "stable fly" is not necessarily one that is reliable, steady, calm and uncomplicated. It is a fly that operates in and around stables — or at least around cattle — which usually don't spend much time around stables.

And the stable fly is, for certain, an expensive pest that annoys cattle enough to cause reductions in meat and milk production. Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources extension agricultural engineers, with the help of a $77,000 grant from USDA, are undertaking a two-year study to develop and test integrated systems that use a minimum amount of pesticides along with parasitic wasps to control stable flies.

MILKWEED

spot treatment for milkweed in barley, corn, oats, sorghum and wheat.

1. It is a "spot" treatment only. Roundup will kill the crop in the treated area also. Take care to avoid drift outside target area.
2. Treatment must be made prior to headings of small grains and sorghum, initial pod set on soybeans, and silking of corn. Do not apply when the crop has set seed.
3. For control of perennials, the weeds should be treated in the optimum stage of growth. The best time to treat milkweed, is in late June or when plants are in early bud stage. Weeds should be growing actively.
4. Roundup should be applied at the rate of 1 gallon per 100 gallons of spray solution. According to the label only hand held gun equipment can be used.
5. A copy of the label must be in the possession of the user at the time of Roundup application for spot treatment.

Description
Common milkweed is a perennial reproducing by seed and from long spreading rootstocks. Stems stout and erect, two to four feet tall, covered with short downy hairs, with milky juice. Leaves opposite, oblong, rounded, four to eight inches long with prominent veins. Upper surface smooth, lower surfaces covered with short white hairs. Flowers sweet-smelling, pink to white. In large, many flowered, ball-like clusters at the tips of the stems and in the axils of the upper leaves. Seed brown, flat, oval, with tuft of silky white hairs attached to the tip.

Control
In non-cropland areas use one quart 2, 4-d Plus 1/2 pint of Banvel at bud to bloom stage for seasonal control.

Roundup is very effective on milkweed where it can be used in the crop production cycle. For example milkweed in small grain stubble can be treated with Roundup. Roundup can also be used on young milkweed before a delayed planting of crops like soybeans and grain sorghum.

Special Remarks
Roundup may be used as a

Cost And High Market For Beef May Force Cattle Weight Rise

The current high market for beef and the high cost of feedlot replacement cattle may cause feedlot operators to take cattle to heavier weights by keeping them on feed longer, an Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources extension livestock specialist said this week.

Dr. Stan Farlin noted that feedlot cattle performance worsens as cattle are fed longer. The effect of longer duration feeding on profits depends on the market, he pointed out, and with a rising fat cattle market, (prices remaining high because of smaller beef supply), it may be profitable. "The decision on whether to carry cattle beyond the typical weight and time on feed will depend on the cost of gain and the market situation," Farlin stated. Under current beef economics, the decision can mean more profit for the owner; in a different economic situation, it may cost the owner.

A higher cost of gain in the feedlot is brought about by slower gains and poorer feed conversion for animals fed for long periods.

Farlin cited the following example of the effect of feeding an additional 35 days on cattle feedlot performance and cost of gain by comparing cattle normally fed for 140 days to those carried on feed for 170 days.

Besides getting fatter with the possibility of producing carcasses with an undesirable yield grade of 4 or 5, which is now discounted by packers, the cattle eat less, gain slower and the cost of gain is higher. "On a typical set of cattle used to test the effect of time on feed, consumption decreased 5.5 percent from the period of 106-140 days on feed to the period 141-170 days on feed."

Gain dropped from 1.89 pounds per day to 1.6 pounds, for a 15.3 percent decrease. Gain for the entire 140-day period was 2.67 pounds per day compared to 2.49 pounds for cattle fed 170 days, for a 6.8 percent decrease (which includes a 4 percent pencil shrink).

The most important factor in cost of gain is feed conversion, Farlin emphasized.

Feed required for gain increased from 12.0 pounds of feed per pound of gain for the shorter period (106-140 days) to 13.41 pounds for the longer, period (141-170 days), an 11.8 percent reduction in feed conversion.

Cost of gain for the last 35 days of the longer feeding period was $60.35 per hundredweight compared to $54.05 for the preceding 35-day period (106-140 days), an 11.7 percent increase in cost of gain. Cost of gain for the period 71-105 days was 24 percent lower than the 106-140-day period.

"This represents a 35.7 percent increase in periodic cost of gain from the 71-105 day period to the 141-170 day feeding period. Cost of hundredweight gain for the first 140 days was $42.14, compared to $44.17 for the total 170-day feeding period, for an increase of 4.8 percent," Farlin continued.

"Cattle feeders must be aware of these changes in cost of gain brought about by keeping cattle on feed longer than required if they are to be in a position to make profitable decisions on how long to keep cattle in the feedlot," Farlin stressed.

ETV Program Focuses On Teachers

Thousands of Nebraskans are part of "the other school system." They are the volunteer teachers, parents and leaders who work with pre-school and day-care programs, scout troops, 4-H clubs, church schools, camps and others.

All of these volunteers have a common goal - to help children and young people develop their full potential.

"The Other School System" is a new 12-part TV series which began May 3 on the Nebraska ETV Network. Shows may be seen on Saturdays at 9 a.m. with repeats on Mondays at 11:30 a.m.

Program topics focus on many aspects of teaching and education which are of concern to volunteer teachers. Such topics as learning development, goal setting, discipline, and group communications are explored in the 30-minute programs hosted by Art Linkletter and Jane Jayroe, a former Miss America. During May the program topics will be "The Volunteer Teacher," "Children as Learners," "Learning Environments," and "Story Telling Techniques."

Fire Department Tours Care Centre

Members of the Wayne Volunteer Fire Department were given a tour of the Wayne Care Centre Tuesday night by the administrator, Timothy Boyle.

The system was designed and installed to protect the residents of the Wayne Care Centre from the dangers of a fire or explosion.

The system's installation cost the Care Centre approximately $20,000 and construction included bringing a six-inch water line under Main Street. This work was done by Swinney Trenching of Wayne.

Interior work was done by the Universal Sprinkler Company of Omaha. The system includes an automatic signal which sounds the alarm at the police station any time of the day or night.

Troop 175 Holds Court

Members of Boy Scout Troop 175 held a Court of-Honor April 30.

Receiving badges were Jim Fairchild, merit badge; Bryan Anderson, Lance Corbit and David Phelps, tenderfoot patch and mother's pin; Brian Cattle, star patch and mother's pin; Matt Baier, Mark Doring, and Blaine Johs, patrol leader patch; Ben Cattle, senior patrol leader patch; Jim Fairchild and Ravi Johar, junior assistant scoutmaster patch; Richard Glass, quartermaster patch; and Brian Cattle and Jim Fairchild, leadership corp patch.

Awards at the Spring Camporee went to Mark Doring, first place in the football kick; and Bryan Anderson, second place in compass.

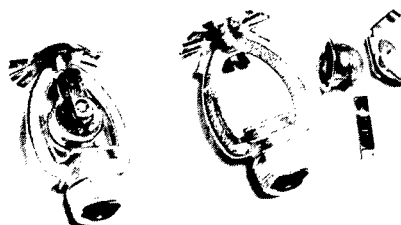

Receiving camporee patches were Bryan Anderson, Matt Baier, Brian Cattle, Mark Doring, Mitch Doring, Bob Fairchild, Tom Malin, Dave Phelps, Don Cattle and Vern Fairchild.

Lucille Fairchild received an award for her assistance at the Spring Camporee.

It was announced that Kory Leseberg sold the most tickets in Troop 175 for the Scout-O-Rama held recently in Norfolk. Helen Barner and Donnell Cattle received cups in recognition of their help at the Scout-O-Rama.

A Scout-O-Rama ribbon was awarded to the troop for its participation in the event.

PUTTING A FLAME near a sprinkler attachment which is designed to extinguish possible fires, is Tim Boyle, Wayne Care Centre coordinator. Boyle explained and demonstrated to members of the Wayne Fire Department, how the newly installed system works. The sprinklers are placed in the ceiling and when the temperature reaches near 130 degrees F, the heat causes the water valve to open and distribute water on the fire. When Boyle placed the flame near the sprinkler, it shattered, as pictured at right, which would allow passage of water.
