Rain Slows Saturday Events

Huge Crowds Take In County Fair

A crowd estimated by fair officials at more than 5,000 persons attended the second night of the Wayne County Fair Friday for the annual big barbecue and stage show entertainment.

There was standing room only at the grandstand show featuring the Buddy Young Show and sound effects specialists Mahana & Jaspering. Both acts were well received by the crowd.

Jana Lamplot

In addition, 4-H and open class exhibits and the various livestock barns and the always popular carnival were viewed by hundreds of fair-goers.

Results and pictures of Saturday's and Sunday's activities will appear in Thursday's issue of The Herald.

Fair officials said the barbecue was one of the best attended feasts in recent memory. An estimated 1,850 pounds of meat were served along with 100 gallons of beans, 560 dozen buns (two pickup loads), 2,980 half pints of orange drink and 1,560 half-pints of milk.

Scattered showers moved through the area Saturday morning slowing activity at the Fair grounds. However, spirits were not dampened as the area has been in need of rainfall since mid June.

Beef champion

Brothers Barry and Brian Bowers, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Bowers of Winside, showed the grand champion steer and heifer at the 4-H beef show Friday afternoon.

Barry had the grand champion steer which weighed a little more than 1,100 pounds while Brian showed the grand champion heifer weighing in at more than 1,200 pounds.

Other beef show results will appear in Thursday's issue of the Herald.

Jana Lamplot, Thurston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Lamplot, was crowned Northeast Nebraska Feeders' Association Queen prior to the grandstand show Friday night.

Armyworm Threat Slowed

Armyworms are beginning to show up in central and Northeast Nebraska field crops and lawns, according to David Keith, extension entomologist in the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

But John Witkowski, entomologist with Northeast Station, near Concord, said despite earlier projections of a serious problem, the armyworm infestation ap pears to have fizzled in Wayne County.

"Based on the number of moths present earlier this summer, we were expecting a large infestation," Witkowski said.

Armyworms are still around, he said, but "are not anything like they should have been based on earlier predictions."

Apparently there have been a variety of natural factors which have helped limit the population and prevent any serious damage to crops, the entomologist explained.

Unusually heavy flights of armyworm moths the past few weeks set the stage for a potential outbreak of the insects in the state, Keith said. Widespread occurrence of herbicide failure because of dry conditions following planting resulted in many grassy corn fields, which are prime sites for armyworm egg deposits, he said.

Keith said farmers should check grasses closely and scratch around on the soil surface to find the worms, which hide during the daylight hours under soil clods and surface debris.

Armyworms are brown-to-gray caterpillars with brown heads and yellow or orange stripes down the side of the body, Keith said. If many are present and feeding is obvious on the lower leaves of corn, treatment is recommended, he said.

Several effective compounds are available for control. Most will need to be applied by air at this point, Keith advised. For corn, malathion, sevin, toxaphene, parathion, lannate or dylox can be used. For sorghum, malathion, toxaphene, parathion, and sevin are registered for use. For armyworms on lawns, malathion or sevin can be applied. Keith cautioned that parathion and lannate are to be applied only by certified pesticide applicators.

Insecticides applied in the evening just before the worms emerge to feed should be most effective, Keith said.

What's This? A Bug Invasion?

First, it was an invasion of armyworm moths several weeks ago. Now, it's an invasion by thousands of brown bugs.

However, there is nothing to be alarmed about. Entomologists with the Northeast Station near Concord say the little brown pests are only harmless ground beetles. The bugs do not eat foliage or clothing or any foodstuffs. They are predators and are in search of other insects.

The life-cycle is only about three or four days, and, like the armyworm moth, should be gone soon.

In the meantime, shoppers will have to tread carefully on sidewalks, in the streets and in the local businesses.

Threshing Bee On Area Farm

An old-fashioned threshing bee will take place from 1 to 5 p.m., Saturday, Aug. 11, on the Carl Johnson farm north of Wayne on Nebraska 15.

Three antique steam engines will be the star attractions at the exhibition along with a parade of equipment ranging from a hand-operated 10-bottom plow demonstration to binders and cutters and horse drawn vehicles dating back to the early 1900's.

Several displays also will be set up for the afternoon. The Mosley family of Wayne will exhibit their antique gasoline engine and a harness maker, Ed Leicy of Carroll, will be demonstrating his trade.

New this year will be the Lampke Brothers of Ponca who will be demonstrating the art of wooden wheel making and an antique wrench display from Randolph.

The show will take place on the Carl Johnson farm located at the first farm north of town on the west side of Nebraska 15. An old field has been kept standing for the purpose of demonstrating all phases of cutting, shocking, binding, threshing and then plowing under.

Business Development Center Wins Award

The Nebraska Business Development Center (NBDC), which has an area office at Wayne State College, has received the U.S. Small Business Administration's Region VII award for small business management training.

Rick Budd, district director of the Omaha SBA office, announced and presented the award to Dr. David Ambrose, state director of the center. Nell Swanson is director of the Wayne State College office; John Paxton is program coordinator.

The center combines resources of universities and colleges, business, and government to assist and support small businesses throughout the state. Other NBDC offices are located at Chadron State College, Kearney State College, the University of Nebraska at Lincoln, and the University of Nebraska at Omaha. NBDC will begin its second full year of operation in September, according to Paxton. The Wayne-area center includes counties in Northeast Nebraska.

Nebraska is considered the leader in the pilot program which includes eight states. The project is being expanded to 15 states this next year.

Paxton said the program is funded by the Small Business Administration and provides business assistance to small businesses who would otherwise not be able to afford it.

NBDC was cited for providing 129 workshops and seminars in 47 Nebraska counties, including many in Northeast Nebraska. These workshops and seminars, usually co-sponsored with Chambers of Commerce and commercial clubs, address a variety of topics pertinent to the needs of the small business person. They are taught by college business faculty.

SBA Region VII includes Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, and Nebraska.

White House Wins on Anti-Inflation Guides

By U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Although the anti-inflation guidelines have proved practically useless in combating inflation, the White House apparently has won the court battle to save them. The Supreme Court has decided not to review an appellate court ruling that use of executive orders to enforce the voluntary guidelines is legal.

Now it remains to be seen whether the government will use the authority to deny federal contracts to violators and what good this would accomplish. The exercise seems futile.

On the other hand, the appellate decision — and now the Supreme Court action — could move the nation "another step closer to mandatory controls." In the opinion of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Dr. Richard S. Landry, director of economic policy, commented further:

"Chamber analysis of the controls last fall showed three quarters of American business firms could not meet the wage, price and profits standards. Double-digit, cost-push inflation since that time, especially in energy prices, has further reduced the possibility of compliance."

Controls, according to the Chamber, simply treat the symptoms of inflation, the most visible signs — higher prices and higher wages — but fail to attack the underlying causes.

These causes include an expensive monetary policy; federal deficit spending, which heats up the economy and drains funds away from capital investment; the federal minimum wage law, which raises wages for millions without a comparable increase in output; higher Social Security benefits, which require higher taxes, and government regulation of business, which costs consumers, business and taxpayers upwards of $100 billion a year.

Does the average citizen understand the link between these government policies and inflation? Perhaps not, but we may all be in for a horrible learning experience. Gasoline rationing — government controls at their worst — could provide that.

Progressive farmers have been protesting gas lines, some motorists already are entertaining the idea of rationing.

"But what good would gasoline rationing do? Would it eliminate the shortage in supplies of gasoline or simply spread it around indiscriminately?"

Similarly, what good are wage and price controls? Do they eliminate the root causes of higher wages and prices? Or do they simply pretend to treat the problems in the same futile way rationing would deal with a gasoline shortage.

On all of the above, the answer is the same: Controls don't work.

Pay comparability
For years, federal workers, particularly in the nation's capitol, fought for, and in 1962, won "comparability," a pay system designed to keep their salaries on a par with pay for similar work in the private sector.

But now the shoe is on the other foot. Controlled by bureaucrats, the federal pay system has overtaken salary levels in the private sector.

Commented the "New York Times" in an editorial recently: "Now the law haunts the workers, for Government salaries generally have risen above the private industry and the principle of comparability has been established."

If anyone deserves "comparability" today, it is the worker in the private sector. For the umpteenth time, another survey shows personal income in Washington, heavily populated by federal workers, topped all urban areas in the nation in 1977. The newest data, compiled by the Bureau of Economic Analysis, U.S. Department of Commerce, reveals the Washington metropolitan area had a per capita income of $9,306, or 32 percent above the national average. It is expected to top $10,000 in the 1978 data — or an average of $8,000 for a household of four.

President Carter has started the process of achieving reverse "comparability" by proposing a new system that would bring government pay more in line with private pay by cutting federal pay $3 billion a year. Pay cuts would be avoided. Yearly cost-of-living adjustments would simply be smaller.

The White House plan confirms in many respects earlier findings of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, a leading public critic of the federal pay system.

Analyses made by the Chamber, using official data of the Department of Commerce, for example, showed average government pay running 42 percent higher than average pay in the private sector — $17,404 compared with $12,220.

The White House plan calls for inclusion of fringe benefits for the first time in the pay studies, which means pay will be compared on the basis of total compensation. Salaries and fringes will be adjusted to different levels in different parts of the country, and comparisons with state and local government pay levels will be included in the comparability studies.

While endorsing the White House proposal, Dr. Richard L. Leshner, president of the Chamber, says it could be improved by including a larger number of smaller employers in the sample; broadening the types of jobs compared and — perhaps most importantly — by eliminating what is known as "grade creep," the mass reclassification of federal workers into higher pay grades without special reason.

Congress, which must act next, should look into these ideas.

Weekly gleanings.

NEBRASKA FARM BUREAU FEDERATION

By M.M. Van Kirk, Director of Information
The tighter supplies of fuels and the increasing cost of them in future years will force farmers to change farming techniques and turn more and more toward no-till and minimum tillage methods.

Progressive farmers have been experimenting with these energy-saving, soil and water conserving methods since the early 1960's so they are not new to them. But the high cost of fuel is an incentive to be more conservation minded than ever before, both on dryland and irrigated cropland. It is estimated that of 298 million acres now in crop production throughout the country, 228 million were still farmed conventionally last season. That left a total of 70 million acres that were in some type of reduced tillage system, but only 7.2 million acres, or less than 3 percent of the total, were strictly no-till last year.

Minimum tillage began as a means of conserving soil and available moisture. University of Nebraska Experiment Stations did a great deal of pioneering work with minimum tillage and then no-till and continue to experiment. Individual farmers adapted the practices to their own farming operations as they found best, some finding it paid to use more cultivation and discovering that more management was required to maintain their yields and cope with weed and insect problems.

But the disc and the chisel plow in Nebraska have pretty much replaced the moldboard plow.

They found real savings in making fewer trips across their fields and that mixing and leaving crop residues on the surface greatly reduced wind and water erosion and increased moisture penetration and retention.

A number of years of research at the North Platte Experiment Station have gone into an "ecofallow" system of farming that aims at helping growers to achieve greater yields in limited rainfall areas and conserves energy at the same time. Basically the system uses a combination of contact and residual herbicides to replace weed tillage operations and leaves the soil undisturbed until planting time. On wheat crops, for example, the stubble remains standing, trapping the snow and rain, reducing soil temperature and evaporation and storing moisture for the next crop. In the marginal areas where farmers achieve two crops of winter wheat in four years at best, it has been found the system stores more moisture during fallow periods, and for every one-inch of soil moisture, wheat yields will increase 2 to 6 bushels per acre.

In borderline areas, farmers have found they can use ecofallow to go with a winter wheat crop or milo fallow rotation to get two crops in three years. Corn yields of course do not compare to those on irrigated land but the grower doesn't have any where near the investment in his crop that the irrigated corn grower has.

During the run of severe drought years in the mid-1970's, some farmers in Southeast Nebraska counties used minimum tillage conservation methods to achieve near-average corn and milo yields. As one such farmer puts it, "My farming isn't pretty but it made the difference between having a crop or no-crop."

Irrigated farmers too are going to be looking toward further innovation in minimum tillage systems for their purposes to reduce their pumping costs and conserve their water resources.

On the basis of past performance, farmers will find ways and means to cope with the energy situation and maintain their production.

NEBRASKA

...the Good Life

One of the out-state branch museums operated by the Nebraska State Historical Society is the Neihardt Center in Bancroft. It memorializes Nebraska's late poet laureate and member of the Nebraska Hall of Fame.

In 1900, John G. Neihardt, 19, moved from Wayne to Bancroft, with his mother and sisters.

Young John was even then writing poetry, not a lucrative calling at the time, though it was to become his life's work. He needed a job to supplement the family income. In the summer of 1901, he worked as a reporter in Omaha for the "Daily News," but he was more interested in poetry than news writing. His part time job in the Calumet Cafe was also uninspiring, and he returned to Bancroft as a bookkeeper for Indian trader J.J. Elkin. There he met Omaha tribesmen, who introduced him to their culture. He sat in their lodges and teepees, ate their food, smoked their pipes, and held their babies. From these experiences he began writing short stories which were to be published in his book "Indian Tales and Others."

His close relationship with the Omaha Tribe also helped prepare him to write many years later "The Song of the Indian Wars and The Song of the Messiah," epic poems in "A Cycle of the West." In 1903, he became acquainted with Nicholas Black Elk, Sioux holy man, on the Pine Ridge, South Dakota, Reservation. Neihardt told Black Elk that he had known the Omaha Indians and many of the Sioux and had come to talk about old times. He was accepted as a "spiritual son" of the Sioux and became a confidante of the holy man, "Black Elk Speaks." Black Elk grew out of it relationship, was first published in '32, and it continues to be Neihardt's most popular work.

September, 1903, after ending his job with Elkin, Neihardt became part-owner and editor of the weekly "Bancroft Blade."

He gained editorial experience there and developed a journalistic style patterned after major newspapers. His newspaper experience was useful when he began to write book reviews and essays for the "Minneapolis Journal" and "New York Times" while living in Bancroft.

In January, 1905, Neihardt resigned from the "Blade" because he felt he was not meant to be a country editor. In 1907, he published a collection of love lyrics, "A Bundle of Myrrh." This book was well received by critics, but more significantly by a special admirer, Mona Martinson. She lived in New York but had been studying sculpturing in Paris under Auguste Rodin when she read the lyrics. She wrote a complimentary letter to the poet, and a stream of correspondence began to flow. On November 28, 1908, Mona arrived in Omaha. Neihardt met her at the train depot, and the couple was married the next day. They returned to Bancroft and purchased a home next door to one owned by his mother. Mona began focusing her life on her husband's literary career. After their children were born (one boy, three girls, Sigurd, Enid, Hilda and Alice) she devoted most of her time to her family, but still managed to devote some time to her art.

In the summer of 1908 just before his marriage to Mona, Neihardt floated two small boats down the Missouri River from Fort Benton, Montana, to Sioux City, Iowa, a distance of 2,000 miles. The story of his trip was published as "The River and I" in 1910. This book was followed by "The Dawn Builders" in 1911 and "The Stranger At The Gate" in 1912.

In the spring of 1912, Neihardt moved to Minneapolis, and became a book review columnist for the "Minneapolis Journal." Anxious to start writing "A Cycle of the West," the poet moved his family back to Bancroft in 1913. By 1913 "The Song of Hugh Glass" was published. This was followed by "The Song of Three Friends" in 1919. The poet also published a play and several novels.

In November, 1920, the Neihardt family moved to Branson, Missouri. During his residence there he was a sometime resident of St. Louis while filling the position of literary editor for the "Post Dispatch." In April, 1921, Neihardt was given the title of Poet Laureate of Nebraska by the State Legislature. He remained in this capacity until his death in 1973, making his reign the longest of any poet laureate in the world.

The Neihardt Center in Bancroft has a museum building, the poet's restored study, and a Sioux Prayer Garden. Neihardt Day is Sunday, Aug. 5, this year, and the Center gives a special invitation to visitors — John Lindahl, Curator, Neihardt Center.

Libraries Full of Several Success Stories

Americans are success oriented. Certainly we admire people who have made money by doing something they enjoy.

But even more to the point, we respect those who have carved out a special niche for themselves by being very good at what they do.

Success, in this context, comes close to what Aristotle defines as happiness: not just a passive state, but top-notch performance of an activity.

The American Library Association has called our attention to the fact that "the library is filled with success stories."

The library is indeed full of success stories, not just because the authors on its shelves represent the best achievements and aspirations of mankind but because those who have utilized the library partake well of both.

Lots of us have never thought that our library was in the success business, but it's not a bad way to look at the almost limitless resources available to all of us — free — to help us along the way to doing something very well.

Whether the goal we have is playing a better game of baseball, designing an airplane, understanding our economic system so that it works better for us, or just coping better with the hamster in house, the library has a good deal to offer.

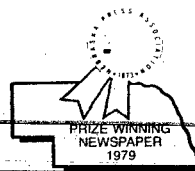

So, whether a school, academic or public library is closest to your age and stage in life, we pass along the reminder that the library is a good place to chart your own success story.

Diane Tullberg-Mike Row Wed at Salem Lutheran

Altar bouquets of orange gladioli and white daisies, and orange and white pew bows, decorated the Salem Lutheran Church in Wakefield for the July 15 wedding ceremony united in marriage Diane Tullberg and Mike Row.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Myron Tullberg of Wakefield and Mr. and Mrs. Paul D. Row of Carleton.

Guests, registered by Marcia Leonard of Omaha, were ushered into the church by Monty Grantfield of Carroll, Kirk Yeager and Doug Bartels, both of Lincoln, and Dick Hoppe of Central City.

Flower girl was Dorena Murfin and ring bearer was Jeremy Murfin, both of Wakefield.

The Rev. Robert V. Johnson of Wakefield and the Rev. James Elkenberry of Carleton officiated at the 3 o'clock double ring ceremony.

Michael Johnson of Oakland sang "Treasures" and "The Lord's Prayer," accompanied by Mary Boeckenhauer of Fremont.

Honor attendants were Connie Tullberg of Wakefield, sister of the bride, and Mark Row of Shickley, brother of the bridegroom.

Bridesmaids were Valerie Row of Hebron and Michelle Row of Carleton, both sisters of the bridegroom, and Linda Grantfield of Carroll, the bride's sister. Groomsmen were Dennis Tullberg and Gary Tullberg of Wakefield, both brothers of the bride, and the bridegroom's brother, Jeff Row of Carleton.

For her wedding day, the bride chose a semi-pearl gown of candlelight ivory organza and Chantilly lace. Large gathered ruffles at the neckline formed the empire style bodice. Three tiers of ruffles, accented with Chantilly lace and satin ribbon, edged the hemline of the long skirt, with an attached chapel length train. Her fingertip veil was held in place by a headpiece of Chantilly lace and pearls, and she carried a cascade of orange roses and white daisies accented with baby's breath and streamers.

Her attendants wore long, cotton frocks of a light orange floral design. The peasant-style fashions featured spaghetti straps and were trimmed in ivory bridal lace and ribbon, with a ruffle at the hemline. Each carried long stemmed orange silk roses.

The bridegroom wore an ivory tie and tails with a silk orange rose boutonniere, and his attendants were attired in rust tuxedos with rust ruffled shirts.

Mrs. Tullberg selected a pink polyester knit in floor length for her daughter's wedding, and Mrs. Row chose a light orange polyester and cotton gown designed with a lace overlay on the skirt.

Mr. and Mrs. Larry Murfin of Wakefield and Mr. and Mrs. Max Sissel of Danversport greeted the 120 guests who attended the reception in the church basement following the wedding ceremony.

Gifts were arranged by Jan Lehman of Concord, Anita Bartels of Lincoln, Joni Paul of Omaha and Marcia Goeller of Pilger.

The wedding cake was cut and served by Ruth Beckman of Pender, Delores Lehman of Wakefield, Janice Newton of Wakefield, and Milja Tullberg of Wakefield and Harriet Becker of Ponca poured and Mr. and Mrs. Max Dowdy of Carleton served punch.

She is an art teacher at the Stromsburg Public Schools. Wakefield Into Finals, Laurel Ousted, In Class C Legion District Baseball Action

It was a battle of Ralph Bishop League teams as Wakefield dumped Winside 7-1 in the Legion division of the Class C District 3 Baseball Tournament in Coleridge, Wednesday night. Wakefield hurler Rick Guy pitched a no-hitter but watched his shutout bid slip away in the seventh inning on a walk, a balk and an error. Wakefield advanced into second round action against Randolph, Friday night. Winside was eliminated from the tourney.

Guy struckout 14 batters and allowed only three batters to reach base. Rick Anderson and Tom Anderson both reached on walks and Mitch Pfeiffer reacted on an error. The lone Winside run was scored in the top of the seventh when Tom Anderson drew a base on balls. He advanced to second on a balk by Guy.

Anderson, then scored from second base when Pfeiffer hit a hard grounder toward second base. Anderson ran in front of the ground ball and headed to third base while the ball was mishandled by the shortstop. The throw to the plate was too late as Anderson slid in to ruin Guy's shutout.

Winside pitcher Rick Anderson pitched a five-hitter and fanned eight batters but suffered the defeat on Winside errors and key Wakefield hits. Joedy Sherer, Blaine Nelson and Tom Preston put Wakefield in front 3-0 with Todd Swigart driving a two-run double.

Four more runs in the fifth put the game out of reach as Guy stunted Winside's attack. Nelson, Preston, Swigart and Larry Soderberg scored the Insurance runs to preserve the win. Swigart was the game's leading hitter with a double, a single and two RBIs. Guy singled in a run in the fifth and Scott Hall-

Randolph's Juniors scored three runs in the sixth inning to hand Laurel a 5-1 loss in the first round of the Class C District 3 Baseball Tournament in Coleridge, Wednesday night. The loss eliminated Laurel from the tourney.

Laurel managed only two hits off of Randolph's fastballing pitcher Lenhoff. Mark McCorkindale singled in the second inning and losing pitcher Russ Gade doubled and scored in the fourth for the only Laurel run. Eleven batters struckout for Laurel.

Laurel recorded 10 base hits and scored five runs off of Gade, who pitched the full seven innings. The first run came in the first inning but Laurel tied the game when Gade scored in the fourth. Paul Guern was credited with the RBI. Two base hits in the top of the fifth led to a 2-1 Randolph lead. Nine consecutive Laurel batters were retired to end the offensive threat—and Randolph scored three runs in the sixth for the final 5-1 count. Laurel committed four errors in the game. Their record falls to 7-10 for the season while Randolph moves to 12-5.

In a preparation game for the Class B, Area 3 Baseball Tournament, the Wayne Legion baseball team trimmed highly rated West Point 4-1, Wednesday night.

Three Wayne pitchers—Jerry Goeden, Jeff Zeiss and Dennis Carroll combined to pitch a three-hitter, handing West Point its third loss in 25 games this season. Norfolk and Blair are the only other teams to beat West Point.

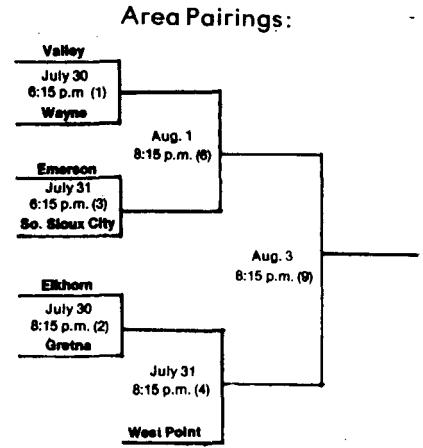

Wayne gave up the only West Point run in the first inning on a triple and an error. The hosts rallied to tie the score in the bottom of the inning when Jeff Zeiss walked and later scored on a passed ball.

Goeden shutout the invaders for the next two innings while yielding a double. Zeiss and Carroll held West Point scoreless for the final four innings. Tom Ginn put Wayne on top in the third inning with Dan Mitchell and Goeden rapping singles.

Two more runs in the fifth inning gave Wayne its final margin of 4-1. Ginn singled and got into scoring position on an error. Dean Carroll, then lashed a base hit to score Ginn from second. Carroll scored two plays later for the fourth Wayne run. The win avenged an earlier 4-0 loss to West Point on July 3.

Wayne Wins Cross-County Game

TAKING A good cut at the pitch and driving the ball through the infield is Wayne's Teresa Ginn in 18 years and under softball action against Carroll. The Carroll catcher, who is awaiting the pitch, is Holly Rees.

In a cross-county rivalry, the Wayne Recreation girls' softball team used consistent scoring to defeat Carroll 11-3 in a seven-inning game at the Wayne ball diamonds last Monday.

Wayne got off to a 4-0 lead in the bottom of the first inning when Lynn Surber, Teresa Ginn, Jolene Bennett and Pam Nissen scored for the home team. Bennett came back with a two-run triple in the second inning, driving in Surber and Ginn for a six-run lead. She made the score 7-0 when she scored from third base.

Carroll got its offense clicking in the third as Shelly Davis and Holly Rees put the visitors on the scoreboard with Marci Milligan earning an RBI. Surber and Tammie Thomas scored runs in the bottom of the fourth to put Wayne back in front by seven again at 9-2. Ginn tripled but was thrown out trying to stretch her hit into a home run.

Eddie scored the final Carroll run in the top of the fifth with Davis driving her home with a sacrifice bunt. The Wayne girls finished up their scoring in the fifth inning when Nissen and Kris Proett scored the 10th and 11th runs for a 11-3 final score.

Leading batters for Wayne were Ginn, Bennett and Nissen with two hits apiece. Bennett was the RBI leader with four, followed by Jill Zeiss with two. Carroll was led by Rees with two base hits.

Energy Tax Credits Available

As supplies of traditional energy materials dwindle, it makes sense not only to try to conserve energy but to find alternative sources as well. Many people are taking such steps in an attempt to save on their utility bills. And now, for the first time, there's help in the form of a new income tax credit for qualified energy investments.

As a result of recent legislation, homeowners and renters can claim a total tax credit of up to $300 for energy conservation devices installed between April 20, 1977, and Dec. 31, 1985.

Energy-saving devices that qualify for the credit are: insulation, storm or thermal windows and doors, furnace replacement burners, weather stripping and caulking, flue-opening modifications to improve heating systems; an electrical or mechanical furnace ignition system which replaces a gas pilot light; clock thermostats, and meters which display the cost of energy usage.

The credit amounts to 15 percent of the first $2,000 of qualifying expenses, to a maximum of $300.

While the credit cannot exceed your tax liability, it is allowed each year you install qualifying energy saving devices until you reach the $300 maximum. If you move to a new principal residence, the $2,000 expense limitation starts again.

Let's say you had some insulation installed in your home, at a cost of $800. Fifteen percent of $800 is $120, so your credit is $120, provided you have a tax liability of at least that much. But you haven't used up the total credit. Therefore, if you spend an additional $700 installing storm windows and doors next year, you can claim another credit of $105. You would still have a credit of $75 to spare, so you could continue to claim the credit until your total amounted to $300. You cannot claim a credit less than $10, on either a separate or joint return.

Tenant stockholders in cooperatives and members of condominium management associations also may claim a share of the credit for their organizations' qualifying property, as long as the cooperative or condominium is their principal residence.

Something else to remember is that the credit may be claimed only for the costs of devices installed in your principal residence, and it must be located in the U.S. Construction of the residence has to have been substantially completed before April 20, 1977. Vacation or summer homes do not qualify. And note you must actually have installed the conservation devices; merely purchasing them will not qualify for the credit.

You can also claim a tax credit if you install renewable energy source property, such as solar, geothermal or wind energy equipment, to heat or cool your residence or to heat water for your home. Keep in mind that this credit is 30 percent of the first $2,000 in expenses, plus 20 percent of the next $8,000 spent, to a maximum credit of $2,200, based on expenditures made between April 20, 1977, and the end of 1985.

Credits for energy conservation expenditures are entered on line 45, Form 1040.

You must be the original user of the equipment, which has to have a useful life of at least five years. Here again, the equipment must be installed, and not merely purchased, for your principal U.S. residence. This credit is cumulative until you reach the $2,200 maximum, and cannot exceed your tax liability in any one year. However, unused credits may be carried forward.

Therefore, if you installed solar heating equipment at a cost of $6,000, your credit is 30 percent of the first $2,000 of costs, or $600, plus 20 percent of the remaining $4,000, or $800, for a total of $1,400. You would still have $800 to use up before 1986.

Because both types of expenses are claimed as credits, rather than deductions, you do not have to itemize deductions to take advantage of these new provisions, but you must use the 1040 form. And as with any other credit, the amount you claim is subtracted directly from your tax liability. You also must compute the credit on a new Form 5695, "Energy Credits," and attach it to the Form 1040. Form 5695 appears in the 1040 tax package and is also available at many banks, post offices and from local IRS offices.

Special rules apply for computing the energy credits if more than 20 percent of the use of the item is for business purposes. Only that part of the energy saving expenses allocable to the residential portion can be claimed as a credit.

Some Injury In Accident

Only scratches resulted from an accident about 2:10 a.m. Saturday 7.9 miles west of Wayne on U.S. 35 at an intersection with a county road.

John J. Maslonka, 18, Homer, received only minor scratches after the pickup he was driving struck a car driven by Todd J. Petersen, 18, Carroll.

According to the report, the Maslonka pickup was passing the Petersen car as Petersen was making a left turn. Damage to both cars was estimated at more than $250.

The Sequoia tree is named for Sequoyia, an American Indian who developed an Indian writing system suitable for printing.

Such an attitude may be called selfish, and some folks squeam about selfishness. Outwardly, at least.

But others practice it regularly by trading at home where each dollar they spend gets about the same goods as anywhere else, plus 33¢ worth of upkeep for their own community. And normally it stays around to buy $4 or $5 worth of goods and $1 or $1.50 of community services for neighbors and themselves before it has to leave for Washington, Detroit, Japan or Arabia.

Ground Water Levels Stable in Northeast Nebraska

Spring 1979 ground water level information for fourteen counties in Northeast Nebraska is summarized in the above table. The data were compiled from water level measurements made by the Lewis and Clark, Lower Elkhorn, and Middle Missouri Tributaries Natural Resources Districts (NRD's). In Dodge, Colfax and Platte counties, the data include measurements taken only from the parts of the counties within the Elkhorn River Basin. Data for only the eastern half of Knox are included.

Spring 1978 - Spring 1979

In seven of the fourteen counties average water levels declined from Spring 1978 to Spring 1979 with Colfax County having the largest average decline of .94 feet. Of the remaining seven counties where average water levels were higher in Spring 1979 than in Spring 1978, Burt and Dixon counties had the highest average rises of 1.16 and 1.23 feet, respectively. Forty-three percent of all the wells monitored (327) had water level rises from Spring 1978 to Spring 1979. Less than 9% of the wells had declines greater than 1 foot.

Spring 1976 - Spring 1979 —
Three years of available data on many of the wells, allows for comparison of the Spring 1979 water levels to Spring 1976 levels. In 5 counties (Burt, Cedar, Dixon, Stanton, and Thurston) average water levels were higher in Spring 1979 than in Spring 1976. Average water level declines occurred in the other 9 counties with the highest average decline being 3.76 feet in Colfax county. Dakota, Knox and Wayne counties also had average declines greater than one foot over the 3-year period. Sixty-seven percent of all the wells monitored had lower water levels in Spring 1979 than in Spring 1976, while thirty-three percent had higher water levels. Forty-five percent of the wells had declines greater than one foot and eight percent had declines greater than three feet. The average water-level change for all wells monitored from Spring 1976 to Spring 1979 was a decline of .69 feet.

LOWER Elkhorn Natural Resources District personnel monitor ground water levels before and after each irrigation season since 1976.

The ground water (well) monitoring program is carried on by Natural Resources District's across the state, in an attempt to discover problems in ground water quantities before they become critical. In areas that do have ground water quantity problems, Natural Resources Districts may request permission from the Department of Water Resources to manage the resource for the good of all. This is known as a Control Area, and would enable the Natural Resource District to set up practices for the conservation and more efficient use of ground water.

The above table appeared in the December 6, 1978 issue of Cornhusker Economics and has been updated by Dr. Leslie Sheffield in May 1979.

The estimated energy costs in this table are based on May energy prices for pumping irrigation water using center-pivot irrigation with four alternative energy sources at 600 and 1,200 hours of operation. Based on 130 acres irrigated, 325 ft. of total dynamic head, 800 gpm, 65 psi at pivot, 110 continuous brake horsepower engine or 100 hp electric motor, and 75% pumping plant efficiency. Any differences in pumping conditions would naturally change the cost per acre of irrigation. As the cost of fuel increases, the cost per acre will also continue to rise. Irrigators may calculate their own costs by plugging fuel cost and inches of water applied into the table.

This points out the need for each irrigator to have irrigation scheduling equipment including a flow meter, soil probe, soil moisture blocks and moisture meter. Guidance is available from several sources including Natural Resource Districts and the Cooperative Extension Service for setting up an irrigation scheduling program. Private consultants are also available.

Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District and local Cooperative Extension Offices provide crop water use information to assist irrigators with scheduling programs. When used in combination with the scheduling equipment this information can reduce the labor involved and increase the accuracy of an irrigation scheduling program.

Crop water use information is given on these radio stations:
WJAG - 0780 AM - Norfolk, 7:30 a.m. Monday-Saturday
KTCH - 1560 AM - Wayne, 6:35 a.m. & 12:50 p.m. Monday-Saturday
KHUB - 1340 AM - Fremont, 12:45 p.m. Monday-Saturday
Irrigation scheduling continues to be the best answer to increasing production costs, narrow profit margins, and concern over water conservation.

AIN'T LOAN MONEY CONFUSING?

FHA; FmHA; FLB; PCA; Savings & Loans; Purchase Money Mortgages; Private Loans; Bank Loans; Contract Sales????

CAN YOU TELL WHO WILL LOAN HOW MUCH ON A FARM OR HOME?

DO YOU KNOW THAT —

- Banks are NOT a prime source for real estate loans.
 - Insurance companies make farm loans.
 - FHA applies to one type of loan and FmHA to another.
 - Some governmental loans have deferred funding or delayed closings.
 - One farm loan lender will also make home loans in certain towns.
 - That savings and loan associations still make the bulk of the home loans.
 - That rates and terms vary on all of the above loans.
- Unconfusing Buyers and Sellers of Real Estate Has Been Our Business for Over 22 Years. We Can Help You, Too.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH from

What is a simple and effective way to cool off on hot days? Just immerse your hands and wrists in cold water. Part of the effect may be psychological, but part may be due to cooling of blood passing thru the wrists and hands. It works! Naturally, a cool shower or a swim will be more effective, but taking this cool water on hands and wrists will bring welcome relief.

Lawn-Care Is Seminar Topic

Lawn care professionals and turfgrass researchers will gather Aug. 1 for the fourth annual Turfgrass Field Day at the University of Nebraska Field Laboratory near Mead.

Turfgrass Field Day is designed to acquaint golf course superintendents, sod producers, lawn care industry people and garden center personnel with the latest developments in turfgrass research. The event is sponsored by the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources Cooperative Extension Service and the Nebraska Agricultural Experiment Station, along with the Nebraska Turfgrass Foundation.

The program begins with registration at 9 a.m., followed by a tour of test plots from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Plots feature different varieties of grasses, native buffalo and blue grama turfs and ground covers. Plot research examines the effects of difference management practices: the use, timing and application rate of fertilizers and pesticides; and different watering and mowing practices.

A low-maintenance Kentucky bluegrass study and a plot showing effects of repeated mowing with a dull blade are two of the research projects.

New lawn-care equipment from numerous manufacturers will be demonstrated following a luncheon. Many new models feature reduced gas consumption or use of diesel fuel.

University of Nebraska-Lincoln specialists in plant pathology, horticulture, entomology, agronomy and other areas will discuss their research and answer specific questions participants may have.

The field day is open to all lawn care professionals. There is no registration fee, but a charge will be made for those attending the luncheon.

A lawn day for homeowners has been added to the field day program this year and is scheduled for the following day, Aug. 2.
