Demonstration Set Thursday

Two wrecked cars will be ripped apart tonight (Thursday) during a practical demonstration of the "Jaws of Life," a hydraulic rescue tool.

The demonstration will be staged by the Wayne Volunteer Fire Department in cooperation with the Wayne Lions Club. It will be held at 7 p.m. in the Sherry Bros. parking lot.

The new aerial ladder truck will be on public display during the demonstration. Wayne firemen will be on hand to answer questions about the truck and its capabilities.

Kenneth (Dutch) Sitzman, Wayne fireman and an instructor in basic firemanship at the State Fire School, will be in charge of the demonstration which will have a touch of realism as a volunteer "victim" will be rescued from a wrecked car.

The cars are being supplied by Wayne Auto Salvage.

Sitzman said some eight firemen will be certified in the use of the powerful tool which is being purchased by the Wayne Lions Club as a community service project.

Stan Hansen, chairman of the project committee, said the club is gearing up for an all-out mail solicitation to help raise the necessary funds for the badly needed piece of equipment.

Hansen said the tool and optional equipment cost $6,000. "The Wayne Lions Club has contributed $1,000 and there have been some other donations," Hansen explained, pointing out that the club is well pleased with the unsolicited response to the project.

Field Day at Northeast Station

ANNUAL Northeast Nebraska Experimental Station Field Day near Concord was held Tuesday with tours given of crop and livestock projects. Also viewed were the effects of various herbicides on soybeans. Leading this tour was Russell Moomaw (left), district extension agronomist with Northeast Station. Others were (from

Nebraska 15 to Concord, Transfer Station are Considered by Council

Several mildly controversial subjects were tackled by the City Council at its regular meeting Tuesday night. Including reconstruction of Nebraska 15 north and an increase in transfer station rates.

Tom McCarthy, district engineer for the Nebraska Department of Roads, told the council that "the only recourse is to let bids this winter and start reconstruction at the north edge of the city limits and proceed on to the Concord spur."

He said the Municipal Golf Course Board of Directors and state officials are "too far apart" on their figures involving damage to the golf course.

The state says damages will amount to less than $15,000, and a licensed golf course architect says it will cost more than $200,000 to repair damage if the road is widened from Wayne State College north.

"There is such a wide disparity in figures that I don't think there was anybody at that meeting (in July) who thought there would be any compromise," McCarthy said.

John Nigh, speaking as a representative of the golf course board of directors, said that on the basis of "reasonable play," considerable repair work would be needed if the road was reconstructed from WSC north instead of from the north edge of the golf course. The council indicated it was concerned with safety along the stretch of highway that goes through the golf course area. It traditionally has been a speedway for some motorists.

The council also indicated it wanted to examine the problem personally and review a study prepared by the golf course architect before it signed an agreement with the state.

The city of Wayne will be asked to pay for 25 percent of all costs that are incurred by the state for work done within the city limits.

Transfer station
On a split vote, the council decided to increase waste disposal rates in order to offset a deficit of more than $26,000 incurred at the transfer station in its first year of operation.

As reported earlier in The Herald, the transfer station is experiencing serious financial problems. As a result, the council is considering a number of long range alternatives that would bring the transfer station's operation into the black.

As a temporary solution to the size of the deficit, the council adopted recommendations of the city administration which should pump an additional $14,000 into the transfer stations' finances, thus reducing (but not erasing) the deficit.

Basically, the ordinance says that automobiles and station wagons without trailers will pay a fee of $1.50, up from $1; pickup trucks without sideboards, $2.50 per vehicle, up from $2; pickup trucks with sideboards, $4 per vehicle, up from $3; licensed Class A collector trucks, $2 per cubic yard, up from $1.

Vern Russell, one of Wayne's two Class A haulers, lectured the council for about 10 minutes on their actions. He predicted an increase of litter once these rates are implemented. Russell called the transfer a "dead horse" and said the city "ought to get rid of it" and seek other alternatives to garbage collection.

There are several other increases involved. Legal publication of the ordinance will appear in the Sept. 6 issue of The Herald.

In other action, the council also considered an ordinance which would double fees charged to Class A and B haulers. The proposed hike is $100 to $200 for Class A and from $10 to $15 for Class B haulers.

Class A haulers haul garbage, rubbish and waste. Class B haulers haul rubbish, trash and waste but cannot haul garbage. Voting against the ordinance title were Sam Hepburn, Carolyn Filter and Cliff Ginn. Voting in favor were Keith Mosley, Darrel Fuelberth, Darrel Heier, Larry Johnson and Leo Hansen.

On a motion to waive three consecutive readings of the ordinance, only Hansen and Fuelberth voted in favor. The council will consider the ordinance at its next meeting. It has the option of voting down the ordinance, approving it or asking for one more reading.

Petition

A petition signed by 14 property owners in the area of the 600 block of Grainland Road was presented to the council during public hearing on a conditional use request by the Wayne congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses.

Property owners claimed potential problems with dust because Grainland Road is gravelled, said parking was not adequate, the church would be detrimental to property values and the area in question is family oriented.

City officials assured the council that a building permit would not be issued if city codes were not met. According to preliminary plans, which were approved by the Planning Commission recently, there is adequate parking.

After a 10-minute recess, the council voted in favor of the conditional use request to applause by about 30 Jehovah's Witnesses present.

In other action, the council approved plans and specifications for Sunnyview Subdivision which is being developed by Vakoc Construction Co.

At the last council meeting, the council voted to require Vakoc Construction to comply with certain minimal construction standards. The plans and specs were amended and the council quickly approved them.

The action ends several months of haggling between the city administration and representatives of Vakoc Construction. Keith Mosley, district manager for Peoples Natural Gas, requested a utility easement from the council for extension of natural gas mains to the industrial site east on U.S. 35.

Subdivision regulations of the massive comprehensive plan, currently being reviewed by the council, were approved Tuesday night. The regulations will provide area developers with guidelines for developing subdivisions.

The council also approved a utility disconnection ordinance which changes the amount of time a customer has before his water or electric service is disconnected according to state law.

Under the new rules, utility bills become delinquent 12 days after they are issued. An additional 13 days are provided before a shut-off notice is sent to the customer and another seven working days will lapse before the utility is disconnected. All members were present and all decisions were unanimous unless noted otherwise.

Trial Date Dec. 10

Ross Freed Monday After Arraignment

Michael Leroy Ross, 24, charged in the shooting death of 18 year old Karen Sunderman, walked away from the Wayne County Jail unescorted shortly after 1 p.m. Monday after he was released on $50,000 bond.

Ross was freed after being arraigned in District Court Monday morning on a charge of first degree murder. He entered a plea of not guilty and District Judge Merritt C. Warren, Creighton, set bond at $50,000.

The former Wayne policeman was released after the customary 10 percent of bond was paid, $5,000.

Also at the arraignment, a trial date of Dec. 10 was set. The trial is scheduled to begin at 9:30 a.m. in District Court at the Wayne County Courthouse.

The Monday arraignment came as a surprise to most officials involved and to news media. Arraignment had been scheduled for Wednesday, Sept. 5.

Ross is now remanded to custody of his parents who live in Sargeant Bluff, Iowa. The court order requires him to remain in Woodbury County, Iowa, until his next court appearance.

According to previous testimony and statements, Ross is charged with shooting Sunderman, 18, in the abdomen between 1 and 1:30 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 9, at the Elm Motel. Sunderman reportedly was visiting Ross at his motel residence when the gun he was handling discharged.

He was arrested soon after the scene, and charged with first degree murder. Ross was bound over to District Court by County Judge James Duggan at a preliminary hearing Aug. 17.

Prosecuting attorney is Wayne County Attorney Budd Bornhoff, and Ross is represented by defense attorney Sy Albracht and law clerk David Lathrop, both of the Omaha law firm of Lathrop, Albracht and Dolan.

Cal Comstock Retiring as WCCPD General Manager

After 20 years of service to electrical customers of the Wayne County Public Power District, Cal Comstock will be retiring effective Sept. 1.

Comstock, who has been general manager since he started with WCCPD in 1959, has more than 40 years' experience in the electric distribution business.

He moved to Wayne from South Dakota where he worked previously in electrical work. Comstock has been in the power business since 1938 except for three years he spent in the service during World War II.

New manager

Named as his successor is Edward A. (Sam) Schroeder, also of Wayne.

Schroeder was nominated by Comstock and approved by the board of directors as assistant manager effective Jan. 1 of this year to become General Manager Saturday. He will assume those duties when he returns from the Labor Day holiday.

A native Nebraskan, Schroeder attended Wayne State College and graduated in 1969 when he went to work as an electrification advisor for WCCPD. He has been involved with customer consultation over the years, but also has done some on-the-job electrical work.

Comstock said Schroeder brings with him a broad knowledge of the electrification system in Wayne County, and this will provide a better understanding of problems and programs and as they evolve.

Schroeder and his wife, Susan, have three children: Shell, 12; Shanna and Shawn, 5.

Comstock says his future plans as yet are undecided, but he plans to spend some time hunting grouse and fishing.

Major changes in the past 20 years include the subdividing of the power district with each district having its own director. The system has been improved considerably over the years with 54 miles of transmission lines and 1,100 miles of distribution lines included.

There are several sources of power for the district, while in 1959 there was one source.

WCCPD employs 19 persons.

EDWARD A. (SAM) SCHROEDER (left) will take over as general manager of Wayne County Public Power District effective Sept. 1. He replaces Cal Comstock who is retiring after 20 years in that position and after more than 40 years in the power business.

By Brian McBride

"The highest genius is the ability and willingness to do hard work..." H.S. MacArthur

The logic "genius" brings visions of an incredibly talented individual who finds immediate answers to problems that have plagued mankind for ages. Actual geniuses have a different idea.

Thomas Edison, a genius by any standard, said his "genius" was nine parts inspiration and 99 parts perspiration. Any genius who is considered for great accomplishments had not only a brilliant intellect but also the ability and willingness to work hard.

Chamber Coffee Honors Comstock

This week's Chamber of Commerce coffee will be held on Thursday instead of Friday to honor Wayne County Public Power District manager Cal Comstock. Comstock will be retiring at the end of this month after 20 years of service to the Rural Electrification District serving Wayne and a portion of Pierce Counties.

Why Thursday instead of Friday? Explained a Chamber spokesman, "Comstock is working his last day (Friday) as hard as his first one 20 years ago and will be in Columbus that day for a Board meeting."

All Chamber members are urged to attend from 10 to 11 a.m. at the WCCPPD building at 303 Logan.

DAV Unit to Visit Wayne

Free assistance for local veterans and their families will be available when a Field Service Unit of the Disabled American Veterans (DAV) visits Wayne on Sept. 17 at Second and Main Street.

The DAV Field Service Unit will be open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

A fully qualified and trained DAV veterans' benefits expert will man the traveling service facility. He can assist veterans and their families in filing claims for such federal and state benefits as disability compensation, pension, employment and job training programs, educational benefits, hospitalization and medical care, Social Security, death claims, and more.

Monthly Siren Test Friday

The city of Wayne will conduct the monthly testing of Civil Defense sirens at 1 p.m. Friday.

Sirens will be allowed to run only one minute with a three minute pause between each siren test. Sirens will be tested in the following sequence:

Alert (used for tornado or other natural disaster warning) — both high and low siren on for one minute. Pause — three minutes.

Attack — both high and low on for 10 seconds, off for 10 seconds, continuing for one minute.

Normal time sequence for each of the sirens would be a full three minutes. Since this is for testing purposes only, we will shut them off after one minute each so that the public can quickly determine the difference between test and an actual warning. If this were not a test, the public should immediately take shelter upon hearing either the alert or the attack signals given.

Editorial Thone Opposes Special Session

CAPITOL NEWS
By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association
In the statement released by his office recently, Gov. Charles Thone said he is "unequivocally opposed" to a special session of the Legislature.

Some of the state's lawmakers and lobbyists have been bringing the subject up repeatedly, arguing a special session could address the issues of taxlation and the cash surplus in the state treasury.

In his statement, Thone said, "Special sessions are generally bad sessions. A special session right now will guarantee more spending and a probable tax increase for the people of Nebraska and I don't want it."

Factoring in the thinking of those who think the unicameral should be called into extraordinary session is the growing balance in the state treasury. Last week that surplus had gone over the $90 million mark.

But Thone said the amount was not surplus when the uncertainties of the economic future are taken into consideration. The governor pointed to a projection by Don Leuenberger, state budget officer, that the balance at the end of the fiscal year on June 30, 1980, would be about $40.4 million, a reserve of 6.4 percent.

Leuenberger said the projection was based on estimates made after the 1979 Legislature adjourned. It did not take into account July tax revenues that went over estimates by 14 percent.

Thone's statement indicated rather strongly the governor has no plans for convening the state Board of Equalization before its scheduled November meeting to reduce sales and income tax rates.

State Tax Commissioner Fred Herrington earlier had suggested the board might be called together to cut the rates — if receipts continued to be considerably higher than had been anticipated.

Almost immediately after Herrington made that statement, some legislators argued such a development would break an understanding with the governor that he would not make a move to trim the rates. If the state budget submitted during the 1979 legislative session remained on the austere side.

Thone said if an excessive treasury balance is a reality in November, he then would support a tax reduction because "the best tax reform is a tax cut."

Sen. Frank Lewis of Bellevue, chairman of the Legislature's Executive Board, says there has been much discussion among his colleagues about a special session. It would take 33 senatorial votes to make the special session a reality. Whether the issue has that much support is not known, Lewis said, adding a session in October is possible.

Lewis also said if it appeared the Board of Equalization was getting ready to lower the tax rates, up to 35 senatorial votes would approve a special meeting of the legislators.

Thone said the state must be prepared to confront a recession, which a number of economic experts claim the country is already experiencing. The state faces the loss of $1 billion of dollars from reductions in the federal revenue sharing program, as well as from a federal tax cut bill last year that has the effect of lowering the state's income tax receipts, Thone said.

Governor charges "bungling"

Gov. Charles Thone, after accusing the state Revenue Department of the worst kind of "bureaucratic bungling," ordered the department to immediately withdraw a request to the attorney general for an opinion on a new anti-litter law.

Questions had been raised as to whether the law would require farmers and ranchers to pay a tax imposed under the new statute.

The questions centered around whether the legislation should be interpreted to mean farmers and ranchers are to be included among producers of food products for food or human consumption who are covered by the tax.

Thone, after telling the Revenue Department it was guilty of bungling, ordered the department to proceed with preparing regulations to enforce the law without taxing farmers and ranchers.

The governor said the department made an "asinine" move in bringing up the matter with the attorney general "and it was done without my knowledge or consent."

Several days earlier, Deputy State Tax Commissioner John Decker said he did not believe the law was intended to cover farmers and ranchers. But he said an attorney general's verbal opinion indicated a strict construction of the statute might bring them under the tax-paying provision of the legislation.

Decker had requested a formal opinion to clarify the matter.

Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh, chief sponsor of the Anti-Litter Act, said never was the Legislature's intent to have farmers and ranchers pay the tax. He added that if the state Justice Department decided they had to because of the way the law was written, he would move to have it revised so the farmers and ranchers would not have to pay.

New trial ordered

The state Supreme Court has ordered a new trial for a rural water district in Boyd County, which wants to take Holt County water and import it for residential use.

The ruling came in an appeal to the high court of Holt County District Judge Henry Reimer's ruling in favor of a group of Holt County residents who had challenged the proposed transfer.

Reimer enjoined the exportation of the water until a permit was received from the state water resources director.

In reversing Reimer's ruling, the Supreme Court said there were a number of material facts and issues that had to be resolved.

It noted Reimer based much of his decision in his finding that the rural water district was required to obtain a permit under the City, Village and Municipal Corporation Groundwater Permit Act before it could take and move groundwater off its land in Holt County to Boyd County. The Supreme Court did not rule directly on the case's merits but did say a rural water district is not a municipal corporation, even though it may be a public corporation.

Because of that fact, the court added, the requirements of the groundwater permit act, particularly one providing that a permit be obtained, would not be applicable to the rural water district.

YOU AND YOUR CAR

By the Automotive Information Council

What costs nothing (usually) and can save gasoline? Answer: Air in your car's tires.

Motorists are wasting precious and costly fuel when they neglect the air pressure in the tires, says the Automotive Information Council (AIC).

Underinflated tires increase the rolling resistance on the road surface and that condition makes the engine and transmission and other components work harder to move the car.

Survey after survey by tire companies and other sources show that up to 90 percent of the tires on the road are under-inflated, many to the point of being not only wasteful of gas, but of being dangerous.

And, ironically, air is free, although some stations have installed air coin-operated pumps.

"Perhaps if a motorist has to pay for air he will value it more than if it's free," said one tire official, only partly in jest.

Improper air pressure not only cuts into gas mileage by about 5 percent but it also reduces the life of a tire because of heat build-up caused by too much sidewall flexing.

Air is as important to the life of a tire as oil is to the life of an engine, points out AIC, and therefore they deserve better care than they receive.

Perhaps one of the reasons for tire neglect is that tires have become so reliable that they are taken for granted. Too often they are forgotten until one gets a puncture.

Some motorists also check the pressure by "eyeballing" them. That system won't work with radials, which have a natural appearance of being too low, so the car owner becomes accustomed to that look. But put one inflated to 24 pounds next to one with 16 pounds — a difference of one-third — and the tires will look virtually the same. That's why it's important to check the air pressure with a gauge, available at tire and auto stores for less than two dollars. Recommended air pressure is listed in the car's owner manual.

Two dollars and a few minutes to obtain free air will help the wallet by both saving gasoline and increasing the life of the tire, states the Automotive Information Council (AIC).

Polls Show Farmers High in Public Eye

In this era of poll taking to determine public attitudes and preferences, the American farmer generally comes out looking very well.

A recent consolidation of various poll samplings over the past year indicates the U.S. farmer and rancher has a large measure of public support and good will going for him — a fact that enhances his political clout far beyond the reality of his dwindling numbers and stands him in good stead when he has to battle for survival against government regulators, environmental critics, fuel allocators and taxing agencies.

The polls also indicate that a vast segment of the general public has very little understanding of agriculture and many favor governmental actions that are highly inconsistent with what is required to keep farmers and ranchers economically healthy.

On a sampling of continuation of the "family farm," 82 percent of those representing the general public gave clear-cut opinions that the "family farm" should be retained in preference to other types of investor ownership-management systems of farming. In this one, the farm comes through with an image as "virtually the last embodiment of the American ethic of honesty and hard work."

Americans are worried about inflation and 80 percent do not expect inflation to let up. A broad majority (81 percent) see food prices rising faster than prices in general. But the polls indicate that they are not blaming the farmer. Polls in May of this year indicate that 56 percent believe that farmers get less money than they deserve in terms of how hard they work and what they contribute to society.

Only 28 percent favor limiting farm profits but here is where the inconsistencies come in. The polls also show that 54 percent want the government to freeze food prices; 48 percent would halt food exports; 42 percent would stop government farm subsidies; 46 percent would limit the profits of food retailers; and 49 percent favor limiting the profits of companies that process and package food.

In other words, the general public lacks understanding of the American economic system and does not recognize that farm profits cannot be maintained while limiting farm markets and controlling prices.

In the matter of energy supplies and fuel allocation, a recent poll reported that among consumers, 91 percent expressed willingness to concede farmers priority in the allocation of fuels, at least to a broad degree. At the same time, 7 of every 10 persons (67 percent) rejected the idea that higher prices are needed by oil companies to develop new sources of natural gas, petroleum and other energy sources.

Americans pick autos (29 percent), chemicals (22 percent), and insecticides/fertilizers (16 percent) as the worst polluters, in that order. Less than 1 percent sees the farm as one of the worst polluters. About one-half feel the chemical companies advise farmers to use more chemicals than needed and fail to make them understand the dangers. The issue of what happens to the cost of food production or to the use of fuel as the result of stricter government regulation of farm chemicals is not confronted in the public mind.

The polls reflect the amazing inconsistency of the general public. They clearly indicate that Americans want more government benefits in the form of more spending for programs such as Medicare, Social Security, mental health, education, police and fire protection and farm price supports. But 91 percent favor a cut in government spending to help deal with rising food prices and 92 percent favor putting "lids" on the taxing powers of state and local governments. Seventy percent would limit federal spending by constitutional amendment.

For whatever reasons, in the minds of consumers the American farmer and rancher still comes through as "on the side of the good guys," and that's a plus for everyone who wants to keep on eating well and regularly.

August 25, 1949: Proposed transfer of the Northeast Nebraska Rural Power district headquarters from Emerson, to Wakefield has developed into an open feud between two northeast Nebraska towns. According to Emerson citizens, Wakefield seeks to obtain the headquarters because the community believes the change would help Wakefield obtain an all-weather road and a new post office building. ## OUT OF OLD NEBRASKA

The game of football was beginning to make its appearance on the plains of Nebraska in the 1890's. As usual, when anything new became the "rage," the school kids picked up the rules and the jargon readily. It was the elders who had trouble understanding it. For their benefit the "Grand Island Evening Times" of Nov. 29, 1893 (from the newspaper files of the Nebraska State Historical Society), published the following guide sheet:

"Kick Off to Touch Down... Information About Football for Those Who Don't Sabel."

"Grand Island is fast becoming a football town. You can scarcely find now in any part of the city a youngster who is not perfectly conversant with the game, but among the older generation the number who know the difference between a touch down and a kick off is quite limited. It is for the benefit of these whose education has been left so sadly incomplete that the following few essentials of the game have been detailed in order that those who attended the Thanksgiving day game at York may do so with greater enjoyment."

The game differs from nearly all other sports in that every man on the team is in every play. The field is 330 feet long and 160 feet wide. The goals are erected at the center of the end lines and posts are 18' apart with the crossbar at a height of 10 feet. The end lines are called goal lines and the side lines are called touch lines.

At the beginning of every match the captains of the opposing elevens toss up for a choice of ball or goal. The side having the ball takes it to the center of the field and its opponents must stand ten yards away toward their own goal. The ball is put in play by kicking it off in any direction and is usually rolled back with the foot to some man behind, who picks it up and runs with it, the rest of the team protecting him by running between him and the opposing players. The only man who can be tackled and held is the man with the ball, and when he is finally brought to earth and says down the ball is dead until put in play by the center rush rolling it back to a man of his own side, who in turn must pass it to some third man who can again carry it forward.

"Whenever the side having the ball fails to advance the ball five yards by three trials it goes to its opponents on the spot of the fourth down, but usually a team prefers to kick the ball as far down the field as possible toward its opponents' goal. Whenever a player carrying the ball crosses the side line the ball is at once dead and must be brought to the spot where it went out and put in play by carrying it into the field of play and putting it down for a scrimmage or by touching down on the line, and running with it or pass it back to one of his own side or throw it into the field of play at right angles to the touch line. The ball may go into touch from a kick and then it is put in play as above by the side first securing it."

Fouls occur when a man holds any player except the one having the ball during an advance, also for any tripping, throttling, slugging or any unnecessary roughness. The points that score in a game are, a touchdown, 4; goal from touchdown, 2; goal from field, 5; safety to opponent, 2.

"A touchdown is made when the players on one side carry, kick or pass the ball across the goal line of their opponents and there hold it or touch it down. After a side has secured a touchdown it is entitled to a try at goal, and a player from the side securing the touchdown carries the ball out at right angles from the point where it was touched down and holds it for some other man of his side to kick it. The necessity of holding the ball is from the fact that it is in play as soon as it touches the ground.

"A goal from the field is secured by kicking the ball over the crossbar by a drop kick... where the player drops the ball on the ground and kicks it on the short bound. The safety touchdown is never used except where a side by some accident is compelled to touch the ball down behind its own goal. This scores two points to its opponents... As an offset for the two points, it can then carry the ball out twenty-five yards and is entitled to a scrimmage, or a kick out, which is a place kick or a drop kick.

"There are two general styles of play, one by forming wedges in the line and then letting the player with the ball get inside of this, and all with a rush carry everything before them, and the other by opening up holes in the line and permitting the runner to go through protecting on either side and pushed by the quarterback. End running is always attractive, and is always successful if the team gives good interference."

OBSERVATIONS

Theatre Wants YOU

We support community theater in Wayne, but more than the helping hand of a newspaper is needed for it to survive and to flourish.

The Wayne Community Theatre is in its infancy, having been organized only last March. The upcoming production of "Carnival" Sept. 8 and 9 will be the theater's first major effort and we wish them all well.

As Dr. Helen Russell, professor of theater at Wayne State College, has noted, a play is nothing more than literature until it has an audience to play to. The same type of support is needed for the theater as a whole. A community theater is no more than a group of people until it can act as an asset to the community.

Theater in Wayne has, by and large, been confined to high school and college productions. But neither involves the community, and organizers of the community theater here believe Wayne has the ingredients for a flourishing cultural entity.

Dr. Russell has pointed out that a theater production involves more than actors and actresses. Volunteers are needed for construction of sets, costumes and other necessary props. Persons interested in cosmetics and their application to the theater also are integral parts of a production.

There has been criticism in the past that community theater in Wayne is only an extension of the college. While college personnel may be involved, community theater is not an entity of the college.

Some members of the "Carnival" cast are employees of the college. They also are members of the community and are involved with the theater as members of the community, not as members of the college staff.

The Sept. 8 and 9 production marks the first time a dinner theater has been staged in Wayne. Special facilities are required to handle an audience of more than 100. The perfect setting is Wayne State College.

The theater hopes, in years to come, to have its own facility where one-act plays, musicals, melodramas or dinner theaters can be staged.

Yet this cannot become a reality unless the community puts its support into the Wayne Community Theatre. Organizers of the theater ask and need support of the areas as audience members and as integral parts of the production.

We suggest you make reservations early for a specially-prepared meal and production or just the play. Give the theater the support it needs. Wayne can be a major cultural center for Northeast Nebraska.

There is a void of culture in this area of the state, and Dr. Russell believes with the proper guidance that Wayne can be a major part of the arts in the area. — Dan Field.

Little Leaks Are Big Drains

A slowly dripping faucet can waste 15 to 20 gallons a day.

Faucets are the second greatest source of leaks. (Toilets are No. 1.) The American Water Works Association suggests you check all faucets in the house once or twice a year. Worn washers, the most common cause of leaks, are easy to replace.

Turn off the water supply line, then take apart the faucet. For more complicated fixtures, consult a good household do-it-yourself book.

Be sure that the new washer is the right size. The washer has to spread out to the edges of the valve stem when screwed down. If the faucet still leaks, you may need a plumber to find the problem.

Lever-controlled faucets are just as easy to disassemble and repair. Replacement parts can be found at hardware or plumbing stores.

Repairing drippy faucets is one of the simple things we can do to prevent unnecessary drains on our water supply—and on our budgets.

Ducks Unlimited Plans Meeting

Donations are tax deductible and provide ticket holders with a national membership and subscription to Ducks Unlimited magazine. ## Grand Champ Market Steer SUSAN ERWIN of Concord had the grand champion steer in the 4-H livestock judging at the Dixon County Fair.

Ground Beetle Abundance Continues

Killing Insects Could Alter Nature

(Editor's Note: Despite earlier predictions to the contrary by area entomology experts, those pesky little bugs continue to be a nuisance for area businesses and residents.)

Northeast Nebraska Experimental Station near Concord said the critters are common and harmless ground beetles and have a life cycle of only a few days. They also proliferate in masses.

The following is a story from the National Geographic Society News Feature Service entitled "Do Bugs Give You the Creeps? Think Twice Before You Swat."

For some people, the cockroach, scurrying into a crack behind the refrigerator when the light hits it. For others, it's the cricket, lurking out of a dark corner of the basement. Or it can be the whining buzz of an unseen fly or mosquito.

Just about everyone gets the shivers from one insect or another, and many people would like to avoid them altogether.

But the idea that the only good bug is a dead bug is not very intelligent, entomologists say.

"A world without insects would be a very unpleasant place," asserted Gary F. Hevel, insect collections manager for the Smithsonian's Museum of Natural History. Life might be fruitless.

Without pollination by bees, wasps and mosquitoes, there would be few flowers, fruits and vegetables, he pointed out. Insects fill the bellies of many birds, fish and mammals, and bugs such as cockroaches and crickets act as scavengers, clearing the environment of dead and decaying matter.

So what is it about cockroaches, for instance, that gives people the heebie-jeebies?

"I suppose that when a person wakes up at night and sees creepy-crawly things on the wall, he assumes they're up to no good," Hevel hypothesized.

The cockroach, one of the earth's oldest insects, is only one of hundreds of thousands of species that have been named. Some entomologists believe there are two million or more insect species in the world, compared with only about 6,800 kinds of birds. Many insects have been around since before the days of the dinosaur, and new ones are still evolving.

"We'll cause the extinction of many insect species without ever even meeting them," Hevel said.

Although they're in the minority, a few insects are harmful to people. Bees and wasps cause more deaths in this country than spiders and snakes do, a person who reacts allergically to a sting can die within 15 minutes. But bees and their ilk don't go around looking for people to bother. Like most insects that can hurt people, they attack when they feel threatened.

"Some insects bite, some sting, some do both, but there are very few aggressive animals, let alone insects," Hevel said.

Crawling stereotypes
Confusing harmful insects with the harmless ones results in a lot of unnecessary cringing, and such fears are catching, say entomologists.

"Children will play with just about anything that crawls, and parents inad-vertently pass on their fears about bugs to them, especially when the parents don't know one bug from another," said Dr. Roger Meola of Texas A&M University's entomology department.

It's silly to wince when a dragonfly swoops by, bug experts say, because it can't sting. Instead, it's probably flying around gobbling up insects that are pests.

But facts like that are lost on people who become irrational about insects. They are victims of entomophobia.

"We've had four insect cases — two bees, one cockroach, and a cricket," reported Dr. Robert DuPont, director of Washington, D.C., clinic to help people overcome phobias.

The patient who feared cockroaches, he said, refused to eat at home or let anyone else eat there for fear of crumbs drawing the bug.

For the woman afraid of crickets, a 29-year-old government employee, life had become dominated by fear. Believing a cricket was awaiting her on the sidewalk when she came home from work, she would sit in her car, gathering courage to walk five feet to her door. On summer weekends she hid out inside, thinking an army of crickets was waiting to kill her.

"I imagined crickets to be huge — too big to fit under my shoe if I stepped on one," she recalled. "I really believed that if I met up with a cricket, my heart would beat so fast I would die."

Face-to-face encounter
Therapy included a visit to the Natural History Museum's Insect Zoo, where after an hour of crying and trembling, the patient got up the nerve to confront the entomologist.

"I saw that it was just a little black thing that happened to hop," she said.

"Finally, after seven weeks of therapy that were torture for me, I was running through parks barefoot, even looking for crickets."

The Insect Zoo is designed to put bugs in a positive light — in airy cages, colorful settings, and with lots of information, said Sheila Mutchler, the zoo's director.

There volunteers take insects from their cages and hold them out for visitors to fondle. It is often a child who first reaches out to touch a forbidding-looking horn worm, only to find it smooth, almost silky. "We use volunteers who seem to be calm, reasonable people, and they're trained not to reinforce negative reactions to the insects," Ms. Mutchler explained. "We've even had people volunteer to work here so they could get over their own particular fear."

When visitors aren't touching the bugs, they're gawking, especially at the tarantulas, walking sticks and giant katydids. Or they're standing quietly in a corner watching the leaf cutter ants, a society of so-called garbage collectors, gardeners, nursery tenders, scouts, soldiers and leaf cutters that work to build an environment out of chewed up leaves.

Visitors might learn that spiders — one of the most maligned "insects" — really aren't insects because they have eight legs rather than six. And, except for the black widow and brown recluse, most spiders shouldn't be feared. Their venom won't hurt people.

The spider that frightened Miss Muffer away probably wasn't after her — or her curds and whey. Spiders prefer insects. So sparing the life of one spider in the house might mean elimination of five or 10 flies, mosquitoes, or moths.

Bugs not so simple

Some showy insects, such as the firefly, have obvious attractions. But the unexciting looking bugs also are complex. For example, insects move five major mouth parts when chewing, a much more sophisticated system than that of vertebrates, which just move their lower jaw.

Even the flea has its interesting points. There are about 1,000 kinds, and each has a favorite organism for biting. Their ubiquity was recognized in the days of Jonathan Swift, who wrote in 1733:

"So naturalists observe, a flea Hath smaller fleas that on him prey, And these have smaller still to bite'em And so proceed ad infinitum business. Remember that since the filling is going between two slices of bread, you can afford a little bit more seasoning than usual.

Lettuce and other greens, tomatoes and pickles add zest to sandwiches, but lose their crispness and become soggy if left in a sandwich too long. Pack these items separately and add the trimmings at lunch time.

But why always pack a sandwich for lunch? Soups (hot or cold), salads or even kabobs (toothpicks with chunks of meat, cheese, fruits or vegetables) make good sandwich substitutes.

In place of coffee try milk shakes or favorite juices. For dessert skip the cupcakes and cookies. Try flavored yogurt or cheese with fresh fruit.

Do not forget napkins, condiments, disposable forks and spoons or even straws to make eating extra lunchbox treats easier.

EXTENSION NOTES

BROWN BAGGIN' IT

Off to school? Or just going hunting? You will probably pack a lunch. In fact, if you are like most Nebraskans, you carry a lunch with you to work or school, automobiling or hiking, and even to Big Red football games.

Tailgate lunches save many fens the expense of eating at concession stands just as sack lunches save the expense of eating in a restaurant at noon.

The brown bag meal can get pretty boring if it is the same old lunch all the time. Do not allow lunches to drift into the old sandwich - fruit - cookie routine. While daily lunch packing may seem a monotonous, endless chore, it need not always be the case.

The secret, of course, lies in putting "something special" in the lunch box. That something special could be new and unusual foods, different ways with sandwiches, surprise garnishes and relishes, dessert treats and so on.

The most important thing is that the carried lunch have that same just-made freshness the family always enjoys in their meals at home.

To start with, try various kinds of breads. Remember that rye, raisin and pumpernickel make delicious sandwiches. Even a hard roll or a favorite quick-bread could be a welcome change. Always cut sandwiches into sizes that are easy to handle and surprise the youngsters occasionally with sandwiches cut into special shapes with cookie cutters.

There is more time to think of novel sandwich fillings if they are prepared the night before and placed in the refrigerator until the morning rush. Fillings be garnished with fillings, but not so much so that they ooze out and make eating a messy

Inflation Causes Higher Federal Income Taxes

Because of inflation, many Americans pay substantially higher federal income taxes now than they did in 1965 for income of comparable purchasing power. In spite of several changes in federal tax structure that were billed as tax cuts.

"The last important real income tax cut occurred in 1964-65," according to Dr. Everett E. Peterson, professor of agricultural economics and extension economist at the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, Lincoln.

"Since then, many, if not most, American taxpayers have had real net increases in federal income taxes," the University of Nebraska staff member said.

Because of inflation, Peterson pointed out, income tax brackets have shrunk to less than half their size in 1965 in terms of real income or purchasing power. But as incomes rise, taxpayers have moved into higher rate brackets, causing taxes to rise faster than inflation.

As an example, a married couple with two children, filing jointly, with a 1965 income of $10,000, needed $20,846 in 1978 to have the same before-tax income, measured in purchasing power.

"Their tax bill in 1965 was $1,114. Given the changes that have occurred in the Consumer Price Index since then, an equivalent tax bill in 1978 would have been $2,322. But the family actually paid $2,736, mostly because between 1965 and 1978, they have moved from the 19 percent tax bracket to the 25 percent bracket," Peterson explained.

Single persons' taxes have increased less than those of married persons, he noted, but the increases have still been larger than they would have had taxes risen only as fast as the inflation rate. The single person who earned $10,000 in 1965 and whose income had just kept pace with inflation moved from the 28 percent tax bracket in 1965 to the 34 percent bracket in 1978. By 1982, with 7 percent per year inflation, that individual will be in the 40 percent bracket," Peterson predicted.

"Federal tax increases since 1965 are even greater if you include social security taxes, as well as federal income taxes," Peterson stated. "The social security tax rate has gone from 3 1/2 percent on the first $4,800 of income in 1965 to 6.5 percent on the first $17,000 of income in 1978. The maximum tax per worker increased from $174 to $1,071. Combined income and social security taxes increased during that period for people at all income levels. However, it should be remembered that social security taxes pay for survivors' insurance, medicare and retirement income," Peterson said.

Congress could change federal tax policy so that built-in tax increases from inflation do not exceed the rate of inflation, Peterson suggested. The federal income tax becomes less progressive when taxpayers who only stay even with inflation in real purchasing power are hit harder and harder with higher taxes, he added. The standard deduction, personal exemption and size of tax bracket could be based on changes in the Consumer Price Index. This would enable taxpayers with the same earning power to remain in the same tax bracket and pay the same proportion of their income in federal income taxes. Peterson concluded.

O'Donnells Back Telethon

For the fifth consecutive year, the Allen O'Donnell family, 802 Lincoln St., will sponsor the Jerry Lewis Telethon for Wayne and the surrounding community. "It has been an honor for my family to sponsor the telethon in Wayne every year," O'Donnell said. "After all, I have five healthy children and one very healthy grandchild — and this is a way of helping others," he said.

O'Donnell pointed out that any youngsters from the Wayne community, or other communities surrounding Wayne, should come by his home at 802 Lincoln to pick up their badges and cans "if they wish to go door to door on Labor Day."

Also, there will be signs going up in the windows of various business establishments calling attention "to the Jerry Lewis Telethon — which is going to be extra special this year," O'Donnell pointed out.

"For the past two years we in Wayne broke the $1,000 pledge mark. We have definite hopes of doing it again this year. Who knows, we may hit $2,000," O'Donnell said.

Grand Champ Market Lamb

COLETTE KRAEMER of Allen had the grand champion market lamb in the 4-H livestock judging at the Dixon County Fair.

Proper Produce Storage Needed

Storing home-canned produce properly is just as important as using the correct canning method in the first place, according to the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources extension foods specialist.

Teresa Shaffer said canned food must be stored in a cool, dry place. "This rules out cupboards above ranges and shelves or closets near a heat source, such as a furnace or hot water heater," she warned.

Studies show that when canned goods are stored at 45 degrees F (7.8 C) for a year, the nutrient loss is insignificant. But at 85 degrees F (29 C), the nutrient loss totals 30 percent or more, Shaffer pointed out.

On the other hand, you don't want to store food where it is so cool it might freeze," she said. Freezing can make foods expand and cause the seal to break, making foods unsafe to eat. As a result, basements may make a good summer storage place for canned foods, but avoid them in winter if there is a chance the food could freeze.

The ideal storage place also should be dark, clean and dry according to the University of Nebraska-Lincoln specialist. This cuts down on the chance of rusts and molds developing in the containers and eventually contaminating food.

If foods are canned and stored properly, they should be safe for eating for at least one year, Shaffer said.

Gospel Chapel Plans Dedication

The Gospel Chapel in New-castle will conduct a dedication service for its new building Sunday at 1:30 p.m. with an open house following from 4 to 6 p.m.

This year marks the 30th year of the church's existence. In January, 1949 a group of families met in various homes for Bible study and prayer. Six pastors have served the church including the Rev. Chester Simpson, 1951-53; the Rev. John Meyers, 1953-55; the Rev. Edwin Eioe, 1956-62; the Rev. Weston Hamilton, 1962-64; the Rev. Burton Brush, 1966-72; and the Rev. Jerry McMahan, from 1973 until the present.

The first dedication was in 1953. Expansion was necessary in 1972.

Wheat Planting Date Important

The date farmers seed their winter wheat is one of the most important decisions related to growing the 1980 crop because seeding dates can have an effect on yields, incidence of disease and insect damage to the crop.

Wheat producers should seed near the optimum period for their area, according to Duane Foote, extension agronomist in the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources. That optimum date varies from about Sept. 1 in parts of the Panhandle to about Oct. 1 in the southeast corner of the state, he said. Foote suggested seeding dates from Sept. 1-15 in western Nebraska, Sept. 15-25 in the central part of the state, and Sept. 25-Oct. 5 in eastern Nebraska.

"Yield during any one year may not be the highest when seeding on or near the recommended date, but over a period of years, planting during the optimum period has produced highest yields," Foote said.

He noted that growers tend to seed their wheat too early. Early planting encourages root and crown rots, increases potential for wheat streak mosaic and may deplete soil moisture reserves because of excessive fall growth, he said.

Proper planting date is also important to avoid possible infestations of Hessian flies, particularly in central and eastern areas of the state. If wheat seeding is planned before fly-safe dates issued for certain counties by the IANR department of entomology, producers should use one of the resistant or tolerant varieties, Foote said.

Moisture conditions at seeding time will influence seeding date, he said, adding that delayed seeding because of either wet or dry seedbeds may limit plant and root development going into winter. In general, however, more problems result from seeding wheat too early than too late, Foote said.

Fuel Stockpile Danger Continues to Increase

Fuel stockpiling is becoming more and more common as fuel costs increase, according to an Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources agricultural engineer, and with stockpiling comes the dangers of storing the fuel and fuel waste, said Al Rider.

Many people are aware of the dangers of storing large amounts of fuel, but few realize the waste that occurs, he added.

Rider pointed out that fuels spoil within a specific length of time, and that farmers buying enough diesel fuel in the fall to last through irrigation next year should be forewarned that its quality may deteriorate before then.

He said that after the fuel has spoiled, using it can create problems with the injector system, the carburetor, the intake manifold and the valves. These can cause unfavorable engine operation and excessive engine wear.

Proper cleaning of storage tanks is one way to prolong the quality of fuel, according to the expert. Others include fuel additives to prevent oxidation and gum formation and proper storage equipment.

These additives are usually available through local fuel dealers, Rider said. However, they are expensive and make storing the fuel more expensive.

Instead, he suggested not storing gasoline more than 45 days in the summer and three months in the winter. Diesel fuel can be stored three months in warm weather and up to six months during colder weather. These figures are for above ground storage, he added, and usually can be doubled for underground storage.

One problem, fungus growing in the fuel, has been occurring with increasing frequency, Rider reported. He said this usually is caused by dirty tanks or improper cleaning of storage tanks.

Fuel losses also can occur through evaporation. This can be alleviated by examining all fuel filler caps and correcting leaks that may occur at the connections between the tank

Rape Seminar Set in Norfolk

Rape is the fastest growing crime committed in our society. In the United States alone, a rape is reported every six to eight minutes and estimates show that at least four sexual assaults occur for every one that is reported.

A one day program, entitled "Sexual Assault," will be offered on Saturday, Sept. 8, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Community Services Room at Northeast Technical Community College. The college, the Northern Nebraska Comprehensive Mental Health Center, and the Norfolk Police Department in cooperation with the Norfolk Task Force on Domestic Violence are sponsoring the program for law enforcement personnel, physicians, nurses, counselors, EMS personnel and potential victims.

According to Lydia Drda, allied health coordinator at NTCC, the program is designed to promote an awareness of the myths, motives and psychological factors of sexual assault. Ms. Drda said that the program will deal with the emotional and physical needs of the victim/patient during the medical examination following a sexual assault and with the necessary information as evidence for successful prosecution or defense.

Program topics will include: "Sexual Assault — Myths, Motives and Psychological Aspects," "The First Responder," "The Physician as Detective and Healer," "Nursing Implications," "Sexual Assault — A Prosecutor's Viewpoint," "Area Helpers (professional or non-professional), and "Incest — Is It Still the Family Secret?"

Cost of the one-day program is $8, which includes breaks. Participants will lunch on their own.

To obtain more information or to pre-register, interested persons may contact Lydia Drda, Allied Health Coordinator at NTCC, 801 E. Benjamin Ave., Norfolk, 402-371-2020.

HEMP DOGBANE

DESCRIPTION
Hemp dogbane is a member of the milkweed family and may be confused with common milkweed during the vegetative growth stage. It is a perennial and reproduces by roots and seeds. Hemp dogbane initiates growth each year from crown buds or from roots. The above ground portions are the results of one year's growth.

The foliage is bright green in color during the growing season changing to a yellow brown in the fall. The tough, smooth stems are erect and branches near the top give the plant a bushy appearance. Smooth, oblong leaves are opposite on the stem, and have very short petioles.

Small greenish white, bell shaped flowers are produced in dense clusters which generally are at the ends of the branches. Flowering occurs from late June through August. Each flower produces two brown, slender, sickle shaped pods which may be two and one half to four inches in length. The pods produce about 200 small, spike-shaped, reddish brown seeds which have a tuft of soft, silky hairs at one end.

CONTROL
In corn fields, use one quarter of 2,4-D plus 1/2 pint of Banvel after Sept. 10 until dogbane leaves turn yellow. Dogbane in small grain stubble can also be treated in September.

SPECIAL REMARKS

Dogbane is difficult to kill so plan to treat two or three years in a row. 2,4-D is much more effective with the Banvel. When dogbane leaves have turned yellow, treatment will be of little value.

Roundup may be used as a spot treatment for hemp dogbane in barley, corn, oats, sorghum and wheat.

It is a "spot" treatment only. Roundup will kill the crop in the treated area also. Take care to avoid drift outside target area.

Treatment must be made prior to heading of small grains and sorghum. Initial pod set on soybeans, and silking of corn. Do not apply when the crop has set seed.

For control of perennials, the weeds should be treated in the optimum stage of growth. Weeds should be growing actively.

Roundup should be applied at the rate of one gallon per 100 gallons of spray solution. According to the label only hand held gun equipment can be used.

A copy of the label must be in the possession of the user at the time of roundup application for spot treatment.

Phone Growth Continues Up

As of Jan. 1, 1978, the world telephone population was growing faster than the human population. The telephone growth rate was over 6 percent above 1977, nearly twice the rate of world population growth over the same period. This comes out to 24.9 million more phones in use, for a total of 423 million telephones in the world.

"The World's Telephones," a booklet published annually by AT&T's Long Lines Department, is the source of these and other facts and figures. Statistics are requested by AT&T from more than 230 countries, and reflect the status one year ago, the time required to gather the information.

The United States led the world with 162 million telephones, a 4.4 percent increase. Nebraska claimed 7 percent, or 12 million of the U.S. total. Thirty-three states had more, with California's 18 million topping the list.

Japan was the world's second with 50.6 million telephones, followed by the United Kingdom with 23.2 million. West Germany with 22.9 and the Soviet Union with 19.8 million.

Countries experiencing a substantial rate of growth were Brazil, expanding the phone system by 16.6 percent, and Turkey, where a 21.9 percent increase occurred.

Worldwide, there are around 10 phones for every 100 people, but 17 cities have more telephones than people. Twelve of those cities are in the U.S., the top three being Washington, D.C. (150 phones per 100 people), Southfield, Michigan (143) and San Francisco, California (111). Outside the U.S., the principality of Monaco is tops with 123 per 100.

Japan was again second in calling volume, placing 46.2 billion calls, followed by France's 39 billion calls. The U.S. not only has the most phones, but makes the greatest use of them.

Some Payments Non-Taxable

Federal and state conservation cost-sharing payments to farmers would not count as income for federal tax purposes under proposed regulations announced by Acting Secretary of Agriculture Jim Williams.

In calling for public comment on the proposal, Williams said the Secretary of the Treasury also must make a separate determination that the payments do not substantially increase the farmer's income for the exemption to qualify.

The proposed rule would apply to payments received after Sept. 30.

Conservation payments which are proposed for exemption include those to conserve soil and water resources, protect and restore the environment, improve forests or provide habitat for wildlife.

Today's proposal also would define state programs so that payments received under programs of substate entities such as natural resource districts and counties would also be excluded from gross income.

Comments should be sent by Sept. 24 to Arnie Miller, room 117-A, Administration Bldg., USDA, Washington, D.C., 20250.

Earnings Near Income Limits

This is the time of year when earnings of many working people who receive social security benefits are approaching the point where their benefits may be affected, Dale Branch, social security district manager in Norfolk, said recently.

Once a person's earnings exceed the annual limit, $1 in benefits is generally withheld for each $2 of earnings. The 1979 annual limits are $3,480 for people under 65 and $4,500 for people 65 or over.

Many people getting benefits plan to earn no more than the limit but for one reason or another, their earnings exceed it and they have to repay benefits that were incorrectly paid. That is the reason, Branch said, people should take a little time to review their earnings for the first part of 1979 and make sure of where they stand.

One thing people should keep in mind is that gross earnings, not just take home pay, count toward the annual limit. Remembering this point will keep many people from going over the limit, Branch said.

Another important point is that it is when wages are earned, not paid, that decides whether they should be counted. For example, wages earned late in 1979, but not paid until 1980, count toward the 1979 annual limit. By the same token, wages earned late in 1978 but not paid until 1979, do not count toward the 1979 limit.

More information about how earnings affect social security benefits can be found in the leaflet, "If you work after you retire." Copies can be obtained at the Norfolk social security office at 1310 Norfolk Avenue. The telephone number is 1-800-642-8310.
