Richard L. Lasher, President, Chamber of Commerce of the United States... People who argue endlessly about the federal government...

feature these three common elements: First, the program wastes large sums of taxpayers' money...

Well, what about OSHA's results? Has this massive regulatory effort at least translated into better protection for American workers?

OUT OF OLD NEBRASKA

CIRCUSES IN BROKEN BOW, 1904 The citizens of Broken Bow did not lack entertainment during August and early September of 1904.

The July 29 issue contains an article boosting the fair. "The people of Custer County should not be misled in the amusement line."

Who's who, what's what? 1. WHO was recently sworn in as Wayne's new clerk-treasurer? 2. WHAT are the Wayne residents excited about?

Although Gollmar Brothers Circus billed itself as a "show organized to please the people of the north," the Walter Main Circus advertised more extensively in Broken Bow.

Answers: 1. Norman J. Melton, 42, of Omaha. 2. Concord. 3. The Rev. Edward Carler. 4. An essay contest.

The area experienced its first killing frost of the season Friday night which pretty much puts an end to gardening for this year.

Although we were without a garden of our own, we were able (as we noted before) to enjoy produce from Dorothy Ley's garden while she was out of town.

Kathy and I discovered the pleasures of a couple of new vegetables this summer — okra and zucchini. The okra we've used in stew and the zucchini to bake in breads and cakes.

There are a multitude of ways to fix both, but fried okra and zucchini somehow just don't excite my gastric juices. We have enough of both frozen away that we'll discover several other delicacies this winter when the snow is chest deep.

My favorite by far is a chocolate zucchini cake with (obviously) zucchini, a basic chocolate cake (from scratch) with coco, chocolate chips and pecans. It is so moist and rich there's no need for frosting.

Needless to say, son Christopher and I took care of it in a matter of a couple of days. While the recipe isn't at hand, Kathy has it if anyone is interested. She found it in a Business and Professional Women's (BPW) cookbook from Shenandoah, Iowa.

Naturally, the visitor's stands were on the downwind side, so the stiff northwest wind was a problem for us spectators. But we managed to stay relatively warm in our winter duds and with a prolonged halftime stay in the car.

For those of you who are sports minded, my old favorite team in Red Oak, Iowa, (a town of 4,300 with a high school population of more than 500) has won only four games in three years.

A casual observation tells me Wayne-Carroll has much bigger and better players. I suspect the cold weather up here helps develop hearty players.

Now if we could just get Wayne State and my Missouri Tigers to keep on winning, I'd be a little happier.

What do you say about those thugs who have been destroying trees along Main Street and the side streets? Calling them names won't do any good. Catching them in-the-act and switching their behinds with the broken trees might.

We know of broken trees in front of Ward's and Sherry Brothers, and between State National Bank and the Wayne Herald. There are others for sure.

Such destruction is vandalism and might even be considered destroying public property. Full-time surveillance of the police is out of the question. Anybody have a solution?

Speaking of People

"You (as an individual) can make a difference in making your family better," Dr. Barbara Chesser told the more than 170 women attending the annual Home Economics Day for Homemakers in Lincoln Wednesday.

Dr. Chesser, University of Nebraska-Lincoln assistant professor of human development and the family, addressed the assembly at the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education. "Many persons find it easier to contemplate how to change the world than how to change oneself. But an individual can effect change within himself or herself and the family unit, while it is difficult if not impossible for one person to change even such small sociological units as a neighborhood or small town," said Dr. Chesser.

The home economics teachers and researcher enunciated eight conclusions which have been drawn from research conducted or reviewed by her and her associates over the past decade, which offer possibilities for helping make families better by individual self-improvement.

Dr. Chesser emphasized the term family to mean a close-knit grouping of individuals, not necessarily the "traditional" American biological family of a husband, wife and two children.

Noting that all individuals or families will face a crisis sometime, Dr. Chesser said research has shown that "we've come full circle in learning how to cope with crises." "We need to get back to the basics in interpersonal relationships," she declared. Her list of recommendations based on research include:

1) "Think Little" — It's the little day-to-day things in human behavior, response and relationships that make the difference.

2) "Other people need to know what your interests are." There is a real need to spend time with people close to you, doing things they perceive as important.

3) "Quit trying to change other people" — wives, husbands, sons, daughters, bosses, employees, etc. Sound relationships are built on recognizing strengths of another person, not weaknesses.

4) When a relationship with another person cools off, "shoot hot water psychologically" into it, by doing something small, as having a cup of coffee with them, sending them a card, or other personal attention.

5) "Brush up on being nice to yourself." Many persons, especially college students, are severe self critics.

6) The so-called Golden Rule is very valuable and works in interpersonal relationships, however many persons are not satisfied with it because it seems too simple.

7) "If you hurt, get help; if you see others hurting, help them."

8) You need to build bonds and store away happy memories and good feelings in your "emotional" or "psychological piggy bank" for an inevitable crisis. Strong families can weather a crisis, weak families begin to disintegrate in a major crisis such as the sudden death of an infant.

"Life will hand you a lot of lemons. Learn how to make lemonade out of them," Dr. Chesser closed.

Devilish Defense Shuts Down Central Catholic

WAYNE DEFENSIVE players Rick Johnson (33), Hugh Jager and Randy Dunklau see to it that this Catholic player goes nowhere.

The Devils limited the West Point team to 86 total yards

The pieces of the puzzle fell together Friday night and the Wayne Blue Devils used a devastating defense to hand West Point Central Catholic a 14-0 West Husker Conference loss. The Blue Jays gained more yardage on penalties than they did on total offense, in a game which contained more flags than the United Nations Building.

Wayne's defense was fired up for the conference matchup and limited Central Catholic to 86 total yards. The Blue Devils were penalized for 95 yards, with several calls causing controversy from the Wayne spectators and bench.

The inspired defense dominated West Point from the early going until the final seconds of the game. Although it was a total team effort that won the game, several individual performances stood out. Leading tacklers were Randy Dunklau, Bryan Aguirre, Rick Johnson and Tim Thomas. Kevin Nissen, Dunklau and John Kluge made key interceptions although Kluge's was called back because of a penalty.

The win ups Wayne's record to 2-4 and drops Central Catholic to 3-7. Their only previous loss was to Class C power, Fremont Bergan. Offensively, three individuals deserve special credit.

Steve Koll, making his first start as offensive tackle, played a fine game. Randy Dunklau moved into the lineup as offensive end and caught a touchdown pass. Running back Rick Johnson rushed for 154 yards on 23 carries.

The Blue Devil defense held the Blue Jays on, the first two series of the game and lacked the West Point punter on a bobbled snap to take over the ball at the Central Catholic 29 yard line. Wayne moved the ball but ran into a sticky situation on a fourth and three play at the 11 yard line.

Johnson rammed the ball through the defensive line to the seven yard line for the first down. He scored the touchdown four plays later from two yards out with about 10 minutes left in the half. The point-after attempt failed and Wayne led 6-0.

The Devil defense stymied Central's offense for the remainder of the second quarter and held on to a six point lead at the half. Wayne opened the second half in identical fashion, stopping the Blue Jay offense.

Rich Johnson broke through a hole in the offensive line and galloped 85 yards for a touchdown but a clipping penalty caused the play to be called back.

The Blue Devils retaliated early in the fourth quarter when quarterback Jeff Dion lofted a pass to Dunklau for a 38-yard touchdown. Johnson scored the two-point conversion for a 14-0 lead. Interceptions by Kevin Nissen and Dunklau ended drives late in the game. Chip Carr added 22 yards rushing to Johnson's 154 yard total.

Wayne is scheduled to play at Emerson Hubbard Friday in West Husker action. The Blue Devils stand 2-1 in the conference race.

Randy's Recap

According to Randy Hascall

IT'S WORLD SERIES time again and who could ask for a better matchup. The Baltimore Orioles, winningest team in the Major Leagues this year against the second hottest team, the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The matchup is a replay of the 1971 Series when the Pirates defeated Baltimore in seven games. This year's Series could be another seven game matchup. The first two games proved to be exciting although both ball clubs made mistakes, leading to their losses.

The weather at Baltimore was anything but ideal. With rain, snow, cold and wind the two teams had to battle more than their opposition. From the sound of the weather reports, Pittsburgh may not offer any better playing conditions. Which leads me to one question

"Why not shorten the baseball season by two weeks?" This might not make a big difference in weather conditions, but the cold should not be quite as severe in late September as in October.

ANOTHER PROBLEM is the designated hitter rule. I still haven't decided whether I'm for or against the rule but I do have one opinion. The American and National Leagues should both either abide by the rule or eliminate it as a rule.

With the designated hitter rule in effect in the American League, pitchers have not batted in years. Now with the National League rules in effect during the 1979 World Series, the AL is at a disadvantage.

In other words, the Oriole pitching staff which is unaccustomed to batting, will be stepping to the plate hoping to reacquaint themselves with the pleasure of getting on dase.

True, I am an Oriole fan and I have been since I was seven or eight years old. I'm not one of the fans who jumped on the band wagon this season when the Orioles were winning the AL East title. But, regardless of which team represents the American League, we no designated hitter rule is a thorn in that team's side. Both leagues should adopt the same policy, one way or the other. It's as simple as that.

I RECEIVED a press release from York College, informing me that Vic Sharpe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Sharpe of Wayne is enrolled as a sophomore at the two-year liberal arts college. He is a member of the intercollegiate basketball and baseball teams at York. Last spring, Vic pitched for the baseball team.
