Banks, S & L's Being Cautious

Money Supply Here No Different Than Elsewhere

Want to buy a house? A new car? Or add 100 head of livestock to your operation? Take heed. The supply of money in Wayne is scarce and is getting more so daily. The interest rate you'll pay is so uncertain that local financiers check weekly for its movement.

WHEN IT COMES to tight money, financial institutions in Wayne are little different from others around the state. Virtually everyone is feeling a money crunch.

But despite the money woes, compounded by inflation, rising interest rates and a state limit on usury rates, banks and savings and loan associations are honoring all existing commitments.

Savings and loan associations traditionally are involved in real estate loans; banks are geared to short-term financing such as automobile loans and farm loans. But both groups are feeling the tightness of money for the same reasons.

MIKE CARNEY, manager of Columbus Federal Savings and Loan Association, echoes sentiments of most financial institutions in the state by saying "money is very dear."

Two factors affecting the money supply for S & L's were explained by him as follows:

One, savings for the industry have been off since about May. In other words, savings deposits are not keeping up with the demand for loans. "The whole nation has felt this, and lending is almost at a standstill," he said.

Columbus Federal hasn't experienced a loss of savings, he explained, but the demand for money has exceeded the supply.

AND TWO, the Nebraska usury law makes it almost unprofitable to lend money. State law limits interest rates to no more than 12.5 percent on loans of less than $100,000 for home mortgages and some farm and commercial purposes.

However, market rates are as high or higher than legal limits in Nebraska. According to one legislator, this threatens the ability of Nebraskans to obtain credit for such things as financing business developments and homes.

Carney said the money problems here "are true of the entire association, and there are some very limited funds available."

Loan repayments are coming in, so there is a cash flow, he said. "We still have sufficient income to be solvent. We have a responsibility to protect our savers' investments," the S & L manager said.

REFERRING TO recent federal moves to make more money available for home mortgages, Carney said the action will free some money, "but in practical terms it doesn't do much."

Federal actions include allowing savings and loan institutions to reduce the amount of cash they must keep on hand to cover any withdrawals from 6 to 3.5 percent effective Nov. 1.

Another action, effective in about 45 days, will liberalize the current policy limiting outside borrowing by savings and loan firms. This effectively would about double the capacity of savings and loans to raise money from sources other than savings deposits.

And another action increases the amount of dividends paid by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to member S & L's which would bring in another $152 million.

DESPITE THE federal help, Carney said the basic problem will still remain: how to find money to lend at a rate that makes the loan profitable for the lending institution.

His advice to someone considering a major purchase is this: talk to the lender and see what the lender's particular attitude is. Carney said he would be reluctant to quote figures on rates and availability of money until each situation is looked at individually.

Banks suffer, too. While not involved with long-term home mortgage financing, Wayne's two banks are feeling the money crunch as well.

BILL DICKEY, vice president of First National Bank, and Bob Jordan, executive vice president of State National Bank, are taking similar conservative views in their day to day dealings.

"It's time to remain liquid and keep our expansion to a minimum," Dickey explained. "We're still lending to our regular customers, but we're trying to keep borrowing growth at a minimum," Jordan agreed.

Banks, as noted, also are limited to the state's 12.5 percent usury limit. But that is not their only problem as money continues to be in short supply.

Dickey said his bank has not experienced the cash flow from farmers as expected, and feels most banks in the Midwest are having similar problems.

BECAUSE there is no grain movement, farmers are unable to sell their crops as quickly as in previous years and consequently do not have the cash to repay loans as quickly as in the past.

Terminals are so filled up they can't take contracts for grain, Dickey explained.

Farmers have expected the money but elevators have been unable to honor the contracts.

This, Dickey feels, is a temporary problem since he has never known a contract not to be honored in the month it was to be honored.

JORDAN explained another aspect of the problem, noting that the cost of cattle has double over the last couple of years and inflation continues at a double-digit pace.

Agricultural expenses have risen at least 25 percent in recent years, and farmers are needing more money to cover these expenses. As a result, loan growth has exceeded deposit growth, Jordan explained, creating the tight money situation.

The majority of growth in total dollar volume has been in agricultural loans, he said. Money for these loans comes from checking and savings accounts and certificate deposits (CD's).

Dickey said First National is loaning up to the point where a particular borrower was last year. In other words, if a farmer borrowed $100,000 last year, then that is the limit this year.

THE PROBLEM resulting, he noted, is that 100 head of cattle two years ago cost less than today and the money crunch will have a negative effect on replacement herds for farmers.

"We're coming to a loaned up position," Dickey explained. His bank, as are other banks and S & L's in the area, is between the 80 and 90 percent level in loan capacity.

Jordan said the agricultural sector is where most loan growth is, noting that personal and commercial loans have remained mostly stable.

STATED IN simple arithmetic terms, the national prime interest rate is 15 percent, while the rate that can be charged by Nebraska financial institutions is limited to 12.5 percent. The regional prime rate is about 14 percent.

This results in a deficit situation and experts say a 2 percent margin is necessary for profit. There have been some instances where banks in Omaha have paid as high as 17 percent for its loans, Dickey noted.

Banks use the prime rate as a basis for setting interest rates on almost all commercial-industrial loans. Although the prime rate has little or no effect on consumer loan interest rates, it is viewed as an indicator of trends in interest rates generally.

Popular Area Speaker Stone Set for Banquet

One of the Midwest's most popular speakers, Sioux City banker Don Stone, will highlight the annual Farmers' Appreciation Night Dinner here Saturday, Nov. 10, at Wayne State College.

STONE's quarter century as a radio and television performer brought him wide

Sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, the event is held to show appreciation to Wayne-area farmers for supporting the Wayne business community.

BOB JORDAN, co-chairman of this year's event, said a social hour is set from 6 to 7 p.m. at the Wayne Fire Station. Tickets are free to farmers in the Wayne trade area, and may be picked up from any participating Chamber of Commerce member. This is a change from last year when tickets were mailed to each farmer.

JORDAN said tickets must be picked up before Monday, Nov. 5. For more information, contact him at the State National Bank, 375-1130.

Familiar face

A native of the area, Stone was born at Whitting, Iowa, was educated at Sergeant Bluff, Iowa, and attended Morningside College in Sioux City. He later served as president of the Morningside Alumni Association. As an elder of Morningside Presbyterian Church, he often is called to fill temporary vacancies in area pulpits.

He served as manager of KTIV television in Sioux City and is familiar to the area through his television appearances. He became known first as "Siouxland's Mr. Radio" and later as "Siouxland's Mr. Radio and Television."

AFTER infantry service in World War II, Stone returned to broadcasting, swinging into a wide variety of assignments, which brought national recognition through his appearances as substitute for Don McNeill, as emcee of the Breakfast Club, a program featured on ABC radio for nearly 40 years.

With his radio and television appearances now largely confined to assignments as "The Voice of Northwestern National Bank," he still maintains a schedule of personal appearances which total more than 150 annually.

HE IS an honorary member of the 4-H Clubs of America, honorary Boy Scout, honorary Chief of Arapahoe Tribe, honorary member of Distributive Education Clubs of Nebraska and an Admiral in the Nebraska Navy.

NO MORE MEETINGS

Regular monthly meetings of the Wayne County Planning Commission have been cancelled until further notice as a result of county board of commissioner's action. Planning Commission Chairman Mern Nordhorst said the board recently tabled action on the county's zoning proposal and no more commission meetings are needed.

CLEAN WATER TOWER

The city of Wayne will clean and inspect its water tower Thursday and Friday, reports Public Works Director Vern Schetz. As a result, water users will notice a drop in water pressure most of Thursday and until about Friday afternoon. The work is considered routine maintenance.

The Last Bag of Leaves

five truck and trailer loads of bagged leaves from Wayne lawns and deposited them at the Korn farm. Other Jaycees who helped with the pickup were: Bren Stockdale, Bob Woelher and Norma Preston.

Council Hears Sewage Plant Update

Wayne City Council covered several items, most of them ordinances, at its regular meeting Tuesday night which, adjourned in near-record time about 8:30 p.m.

Although there was no action needed, one of the major topics of discussion was renovation of the city's sewer lagoon system.

DENNIS Hirschbrunner, an engineer with Bruce Gilmore & Associates, Columbus, presented the council with a final revised facility plan for the sewage lagoon. As a result of Environmental Protection Agency and Department of Environmental Quality regulations, the city is mandated to upgrade its sewage treatment system. The engineers have compiled a plan which must now be submitted to the EPA and DEQ for review, Hirschbrunner explained.

GILMORE & Associates has recommended one of four systems of sewage treatment for the city's particular circumstances. A bio-disc type of treatment plant will be constructed here primarily because of its long-term energy savings, Hirschbrunner said.

The bio-disc system is estimated to cost about $1.2 million, with the cost to local taxpayers about $150,000.

Hirschbrunner said the system will be able to handle up to three-quarters of a million gallons of sewage daily and is being designed to handle a projected Wayne population of 8,500. The present system is capable of handling about 400,000 gallons of effluent daily based on an estimated population of 6,300.

QUICK approval by the two environmental groups is expected, with bids to be let in early summer and construction started by next fall. Initial plans call for the new sewage lagoon system to be "on line" by late next summer (1980).

Mental health

The Rev. Kenneth Edmonds, representing a local mental health board, a satellite of a Norfolk mental health board, was present to request a $200 donation by the city.

Edmonds explained that the county and the city alternate from year to year in the $200 donation which is used for public information sheets, phone service, postage, and other incidentals.

THE COUNCIL said it would consider the request and place the item on the first agenda in November.

The council also approved vacation of a county road that will be affected by the expansion of the Municipal Airport.

The Airport Commission has received initial approval of the expansion project.

but is awaiting funding for a new north-south runway that will provide a longer runway and will allow small jet aircrafts to land. The proposed runway will intersect the county road.

THE ROAD in question is now abandoned and has been barricaded for several months. It is the former dump road and was reopened briefly this summer to allow for dumping at the old landfill while the city's transfer station was out of order.

The following ordinances were approved:

Procedures for recall of mayor and city council — this ordinance is a result of legislation approved by the last session of the Nebraska Unicameral. It simply institutes guidelines for recalling a community's mayor and any member of its council.

IMPROVEMENTS beyond corporate limits — this ordinance, also, was enabled by the Legislature last session. It provides that land outside the city limits — when a road or street is the boundary — can be included for a special assessment district.

Comprehensive plan — approval culminates months of study between the council and the city's planning commission. The comprehensive plan is an update of existing ordinances and regulations involving the city's plans for the future.

Zoning ordinance — this, too, is a result of several months' work by the two groups. It sets out zoning regulations for the city and was approved with the stipulation that a piece of ground south of Grainland Road remain industrial as it currently is zoned rather than changing the parcel to agricultural.

PERMITS for street excavation — this amendment to the present ordinance corrects the former ordinance which was found to be unworkable.

Garbage expense up

City Administrator Darrell Brewington read a letter from Community Refuse Disposal, Inc., Norfolk, which hauls refuse, from the city's transfer station to Norfolk for burial in its landfill.

CITING inflation, the Norfolk firm has raised its fee to the city for hauling the refuse from $1.78 per cubic yard to $1.98 per cubic yard. The city now charges $2 per cubic yard to Wayne residents for dumping at the refuse station.

The possibility of the city getting out of the garbage business and a private firm taking over the duties was discussed with the Norfolk firm, but no plans were developed as yet, Brewington said.

All members were present except Darrel Hejer and all actions were unanimous.

recognition, stature which he has maintained as marketing officer for Northwestern National Bank.

His affiliation with KSCJ and KTIV took him through all facets of broadcasting, including an assignment as manager for a television station.

The eighth annual event has been set for 7 p.m. at the WSC Student Center.

Allen Shooting Puts Woman In Dixon Jail

A rural Allen man, Mike Rooney, 31, remains in serious condition at Merian Health Center in Sioux City, Iowa, after he was shot in the abdomen about 11:15 p.m. Sunday at his farm home.

Authorities report his wife, 45-year-old Dorothy (Dottie) Smith Rooney, was charged Wednesday morning in a Dixon County attorney complaint with first degree assault. She is being held in the Dixon County Jail at Ponca on $10,000 bond.

Hospital spokesmen said Rooney, a disabled Vietnam veteran, underwent surgery for abdominal wounds and was in intensive care Tuesday afternoon.

Rooney, suffering from a 100 percent hip disability, was shot with a 12-gauge shotgun. He is a former Waterbury resident and was taken to Sioux City by the Dakota City Rescue Unit.

Committee Promises Fiscal Restraint

CAPITOL NEWS
 by Melvin Paul Statehouse Correspondent
 Nebraska Press Association

LINCOLN — Springfield Sen. Orval Keyes says he's thinking about sponsoring a bill to assure all those affected by reclamation district projects would be entitled to vote on proposals dealing with the district.

According to Keyes, present election procedures forestall the receiving of opinions from some persons who would be directly affected by a district project. And the Springfield lawmaker argues residents currently ineligible to ballot on such projects should have a right to vote if their land would be flooded.

The concern of Keyes has also been expressed by other landowners and organizations, including the Nebraska Agri-Water Council.

The council has advised a legislative committee that reclamation districts would incorporate only that land that would receive water from a district project "or be subject to any form of construction by the project."

A subcommittee of the Legislature's Government Committee is studying the election procedures for reclamation projects and other special-use districts. Among other things, the subcommittee is looking into the operations of natural resource districts.

The chairman of the Lower Platte South NRD, Ari Knox, said he does not go along with those who argue for a change in NRD directors. Under the current law, a prospective director must petition to have his name placed on the ballot for consideration in a general, at-large election.

Knox said he is also against proposals to make NRD elections partisan and to nominate NRD director candidates in a primary election and elect them from subdistricts in a general election.

There are, however, some who favor subdistrict elections. These persons have argued accountability and public education are needed to make sure voters know their representatives.

Simants to be evaluated

By the time this appears in print, Erwin Charles Simants will have been transferred to the Lincoln Regional Center for evaluation.

A Lancaster County District Court jury recently found Simants innocent by reason of insanity for the Oct. 18, 1975, shooting deaths of six members of the James Henry Keltie family of Sutherland.

Dr. Klaus Hartman, acting superintendent of the Lincoln Regional Center, said, "What we are concerned with now is just how he is now, not just when he committed the crimes in 1975. He may not be mentally ill at this point."

Nebraska law will require the Lincoln County Mental Health Board to make a determination on Simants' sanity and on whether he is a dangerous person.

In cases such as the current one, a county mental health board can commit a person to the regional center, which then has to make periodic reports on the mental condition of the person involved. The board also can determine the person sane and return him to society.

Hartman said Nebraska law provides for committing a person judged innocent by reason of insanity to the care and custody of the medical services director for up to 30 days.

Another requirement of the law is that the court certify the verdict to the mental health board and to order the board to determine whether the person is mentally ill and a threat to society.

Hartman says it appears to him the board "may want us to possibly evaluate this individual to see if we think he is mentally ill and dangerous."

The verdict in the Simants case triggered a number of editorials in the Nebraska press calling for changes in state statutes permitting persons found innocent by reason of insanity to go free eventually.

Simants was tried for the six slayings twice. He admitted the killings but pleaded insanity as a defense. He was found guilty after his first trial in North Platte, but that verdict was set aside by the state Supreme Court which said the Lincoln County sheriff, a prosecution witness, had had improper contact with the sequestered jury.

Judge Hugh Stuart, saying a story broadcast by KNOX-TV in North Platte made it impossible to empanel an impartial jury in Lincoln County, then moved the second trial to Lancaster County.

Fiscal restraint promised

The Legislature's Appropriations Committee apparently will be at light with the purse strings next year as it was this year. That's the word from Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly, committee chairman, who said recently his panel will probably adopt the same stance it had during the 1979 legislative session.

The committee will meet late in November or early in December to establish guidelines it will offer the Unicameral.

Warner said the committee's decision will be influenced in part by what the state Board of Equalization does when it meets Nov. 15 to establish the 1980 sales and income tax rates.

Another factor, Warner said, will be the demands for increasing state aid to local governments which some state lawmakers say is one way of relieving the burden on property taxes.

Early during the 1979 legislative session, Warner's committee adopted a policy to hold the state budget increase to seven percent, a move designed to prevent increases in state taxes.

Warner says there is no way state aid programs could be increased significantly while keeping the seven percent limit in the budget.

The status of the federal revenue sharing program will also have an impact on the state budget. If the money-sharing program is abandoned, or reduced substantially, it will necessarily affect the committee's spending blueprint.

Nebraska received $15.6 million in the revenue sharing funds.

Slate buying new plane

The state is buying a used 1978 twin-engine Duchess aircraft to replace the one damaged in a forced landing on Sept. 21, state Aeronautics Director Wayne Andersen announced recently.

The plane is being purchased from the Airway Services Inc. of Sioux City, Iowa, for $89,750.

The plane that was damaged, a Bonanza, was a single engine craft. After the forced landing, it was declared a total loss, and the Department of Aeronautics received $50,600 from the insurance company. Another $18,000 had been set aside for improvements on the Bonanza. That left $21,000 needed to buy the Duchess. That money will come from a state tax on aviation fuel and not from the state's general fund, Andersen said.

He said the Duchess was chosen from 17 different models that have single-engine capability, meaning it can function even if one engine fails. The department will use the plane mostly for inspection of airports but the craft will also be available for use by other state agencies.

OBSERVATIONS

Some Action Needed

A potentially serious problem has developed involving several of Wayne's youth that threatens to financially harm a local business and cause embarrassment to the youth and their parents.

Apparently for a lack of nothing better to do, a select few of Wayne's youth have begun to congregate in the parking lot of Wittig's Food Center, Sixth and Main Streets.

The problem has existed for more than the year that Wittig's has been located there. Reports indicate the problem was evident even when the First United Methodist Church used the lot for its parking.

According to the Wayne Police Department, the lot is considered private property and is to be used for customers only. However, such is not the case.

According to Al Wittig, owner of the supermarket, the youth congregate there in large numbers with their cars on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights. As a result, there are too few parking spaces for his customers who subsequently take their business elsewhere.

In addition, the youth have been seen drinking beer and littering the lot with empty cans and bottles. Many of the youth have used loud and abusive language to Wittig and his customers and have been a deterrent to potential customers.

Complaints have been made to the Wayne Police Department but because the lot is private property, the WPD has no authority. The police have made a token effort to rid the lot of the inconsiderate youth and their vehicles, but to no avail.

There have been reports that many of the city's elderly have been scared away from Wittig's and Griess-Roxall and have taken their business elsewhere.

This is a serious problem that should be dealt with as passively as possible. A simple explanation of trespassing laws might be needed here, or possibly some posting of signs by Wittig that the lot is off limits between certain hours.

We would like to see a concerted effort by the WPD, Wittig and possibly the Chamber of Commerce in arresting the situation. Not only is it growing in stature but it also is an eyesore to passing motorists.

Criminal prosecution of the youth is of course a last resort, but if normal channels of communication fail, then embarrassment to the youth and their parents might be the solution. — Dan Field

The Wisdom of Big Brother Persistent

Richard L. Leshar, President Chamber of Commerce of the United States

The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) seems to have forgotten about the Golden Rule. Last year, one of its employees attended the Computer Security Institute's Fifth Annual Security Conference in New York City. Two letters, three invoices, eight calls and nine months later, the IRS still had not paid its registration fee.

Feeling frustrated, John C. O'Mara, executive director of the institute, proposed an alternative. He suggested to the IRS that his firm at least be given an equivalent reduction in its federal income tax — to the tune of $491.67. This would cover the unpaid $430 fee, plus interest at 15 percent a month. The IRS told O'Mara to forget it.

But O'Mara would not forget it. He went public, blasted the agency, and observed that out of more than 600 conferees, the IRS was the only organization that had failed to pay its fee. Three days later a check from the IRS arrived in the mail.

Some people never learn

A federal Office of Education program which channels aid to the nation's developing colleges boasts a remarkable 14-year record. After spending nearly a billion dollars, not one of the 800 schools receiving the federal aid has managed to graduate from the program.

The General Accounting Office, the independent congressional oversight agency, has concluded the program is so "beset with problems (and so) largely unworkable" that Congress should consider abolishing it. Anybody remember the last time Congress abolished one of its programs?

Building for a better tomorrow

A Michigan community center, that cost US taxpayers $279,000 to build, collapsed barely three years after it was completed. Conservative Digest reports it had never been painted, furnished or used. A woodsman discovered the collapsed pile of timbers in a rural part of the state where the building had apparently been crushed by heavy snows.

An Economic Development Administration spokesman, while expressing "regret" at the incident, was quick to see a silver lining. With smug satisfaction, he observed that the major goal of the project — providing more jobs — had been met. He did not say whether the government would provide still more jobs by assigning a new crew to clean up what remained of the first crew's work.

Federal fatties have more fun

Puffy federal employees are flying first class at taxpayers' expense despite a White House-ordered crackdown.

These cushy trips are allowed whenever bureaucrats present notes from their doctors stating their derrieres are too big for the standard seats in commercial aircraft. These seats are 17 1/2 inches wide, while first class seats are 20 1/2 inches wide.

The next time politicians promise us they will cut the fat from the federal budget, let's be sure to remind them to start cutting from the bottoms up.

What's wrong with a little poison?

Washington has been plagued with a near epidemic of hot air for years. Just recently this problem has dramatically worsened. It seems that the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), which supervises almost everything Americans eat, drink, breathe, or wear, has been spewing cancer-causing chemicals into the air from its own Washington laboratories.

FDA admits to discharging daily more than 38 pounds of toxic and carcinogenic chemicals into the air we breathe, but claims such amounts pose no threat to public health safety. Congressman Elliott H. Levitas isn't so sure and says: "I find it singularly out of character for an agency such as the Food and Drug Administration to say there's nothing wrong with a little poison." For your information, FDA also maintains laboratories in Philadelphia, Chicago, Seattle and Denver.

Local Pastor and Wife to Present Musical Message

The Rev. Edward "Eddie" Carter and Mrs. Ruth Carter, pastor and wife at the First Baptist Church in Wayne, will present four programs of special music and gospel messages at the Wayne church next week.

The public is invited to attend the "Music With a Message" programs at 7:30 p.m. nightly, beginning Sunday, Nov. 4, through Wednesday, Nov. 7.

Carters are native New Englanders and both hold A.B. degrees in Theology.

After over 29 years as itinerant evangelists and 11 months as Ministers of Music and Pastoral Assistant, the Carters assumed their pastoral duties in Wayne on Sept. 16, 1979. They are still available for occasional campaigns and crusades elsewhere to present the Gospel of Christ in an "in depth" ministry geared to reach all ages.

Pastor Carter, an inspiring song leader, presents a Christocentric message of the gospel. Mrs. Carter, an outstanding organist and pianist who served four years as an instructor of music after graduating from college, is the arranger of most of the team's instrumental and vocal numbers.

In addition to her ministry in music, Mrs. Carter also speaks to various women's groups.

Since 1949, Carters have traveled extensively east, west and north in the United States and Provinces of Canada, and in the Caribbean, and have been well received by the clergy and lay people of many denominations.

Performances by the gospel team have brought forth the highest praise from pastors, evangelists, youth and Christian leaders, with such statements as "Their message, both in song and word, is certain to go straight to the heart of anyone who hears." "Few groups of evangelical gospel teams can compare with the Carter team." To hear them is a never-to-be-forgotten thrill in Christian music."

Wildcat Defense Prevails For 7-6 Victory

STEVE ATAMIAN (31), Wayne State defensive back, knocks the legs out from under Emporia State running back Greg Zickfoose in action at the Wayne State-Emporia State football game, Saturday. The Wildcats' defense prevailed for a 7-6 win.

by Kevin Weiberg
Wayne State SID

Wayne State's young defense, with only one senior on the starting unit, limited Emporia State's high-powered rushing attack to 120 yards as the Wildcats defeated Emporia State 7-6 Saturday in WSC's Memorial Stadium.

Emporia State entered the contest the nation's (NAIA Division I) seventh best rushing team but failed to establish a consistent offensive attack against the stingy Wildcats. Still, WSC had to rely on a missed extra point by Emporia's Dave Winter for the winning margin.

Mistakes continued to plague Wayne State's offense as the Wildcats spoiled drives with five lost fumbles and an intercepted pass. WSC rolled up 357 total yards to the Hornets' 129.

Quarterback Rick Lade's 41-yard pass to Pat Maxwell put the Wildcats on the scoreboard first. The scoring strike capped a 77-yard drive and after Bart Emanuel's PAT the Wildcats led 7-0 with 5:46 remaining in the opening period.

Following the third Wildcat fumble,

Emporia State started its lone scoring drive from the WSC 44-yard line. On third and 11 at the Wildcat 22-yard line Hornet quarterback Pete Kriwiel was stopped at the line of scrimmage but a personal foul penalty moved the ball to the Wildcat 11-yard line and the Emporia drive had new life.

Four plays later, Kriwiel faked right and ran four yards around left end for the touchdown. Winter's PAT was wide to the right and the Wildcats held the winning 7-6 lead with 1:30 left in the half.

The second half was scoreless, however WSC moved inside the Emporia 35-yard line three times in the fourth period. Early in the period the Wildcats drove to the Hornet 5-yard line before tailback Bob Barry was stopped short of a first down on a fourth down run. Fumbles stopped the two other scoring opportunities at the Emporia 34 and 11-yard lines.

Wayne State's win, coupled with Kearney State's victory at Pittsburg and Washburn University's win at Missouri Western, kept the Wildcats alive in the race The Wildcats (4-3-1 overall) and Missouri Western are tied for second with 3-2 conference records while Kearney State and Pittsburg are both 4-1.

Wayne State should perhaps adopt the nickname Cardiac Cats since the four Wildcat victories have come by a combined total of seven points.

Wildcat quarterback Lade had one of his best games of the year rushing for 72 yards and throwing for 108. The 180 yards total offense moved Lade into second place on the Wildcats' all-time total offense list behind senior tailback Barry. Barry from Battle Creek has totaled 3,502 yards in his career while Lade has 3,228 yards in three seasons.

Cats Need A Win

Southern To Invade Wayne State, Saturday

Wayne State College head football coach Del Stollenberg says in some situations you have to root for someone besides yourself.

"You would like to think that you do your own job, but, there comes a time during the year where you have to be rooting for someone to help you out a little bit," he said. "Of course, this is now the case."

As the Wildcats prepare to tangle with Missouri Southern at 1:30 p.m. Saturday in WSC's Memorial Stadium another conference game will most likely be in the back of everyone's mind. That contest is a battle between conference co-leaders Pittsburg State and Missouri Western in St. Joseph, Mo. Should Missouri Western down Pittsburg the Cats could have a chance to go to Kearney State Nov. 10 with a shot at a share of the conference title.

Lions of Missouri Southern and that will not be an easy task. Missouri Southern (4-4 overall, 2-3 in the CSIC) is in the midst of a two game winning streak having downed Missouri Western 27-24 and Fort Hays State 17-16. Stollenberg says the Lions have suffered with injuries and are just now getting back to normal.

"They had a lot of early season injuries either before the first ball game or during the course of that first game that really hurt them and caused them to shuffle some people around," he said. "They were going with different units for three or four games and they simply didn't have the continuity that they needed to play the type of ball that you need to play in order to win in the Central States Conference."

The Lions are led by senior quarterback Dan Allison. The 6-2, 190-pounder has completed 76 of 189 passes for 896 yards and six touchdowns. Accuracy has been Allison's biggest problem in 1979 and the senior signal caller leads the CSIC in interceptions, having thrown 16.

Still, the Lions like to throw the ball and they have one of the finest receiving corps in the CSIC. Tight end Brent Cook leads the Lions with 19 catches for 228 yards. Running back Fred Ford has hauled in 15 passes for 118 yards in addition to rushing for 567 yards, a team leading figure.

Perhaps the most dangerous Lion threat is senior wide receiver Vincent Featherston. Last year the 5-11, 175-pound speed star led the nation (NAIA) in kickoff returns. According to Wildcat mentor Stollenberg, "He is a threat any time the ball is thrown to him or he has got the ball in his hands."

Wayne State leads in the series between the two clubs with a 2-1 record. Last year the two teams battled to a 16-16 tie in Joplin, Mo.

Netters Lose

Final Matches

Wayne State's volleyball team dropped its final three Central States intercollegiate conference matches of the year Friday and Saturday in Joplin, Mo. Falling to 4-10 in the conference and 14-19 overall.

The Lady Wildcats took Fort Hays State and Emporia State to five games but could not capture the final game of either marathon match. Fort Hays defeated WSC 16-14, 9-15, 15-13, 10-15 and 15-7, while Emporia handled the Lady Wildcats 14-16, 16-14, 6-15, 15-13 and 15-11.

Missouri Southern avenged an earlier loss to the Lady Wildcats in Wayne by defeating the women spikers 15-11, 15-7 and 15-13.

Next up for the women spikers is the state tournament where the Lady Wildcats will open play at 1:30 p.m. today (Thursday) in Lincoln against Midland Lutheran College. Other teams in WSC's pool are Chadron State, Nebraska Wesleyan and Kearney State.

Blue Devils Lose Match

The Wayne Blue Devils had their ups and downs in a 8-15, 16-14, 6-15 loss to South Sioux City, Tuesday night in South Sioux.

"At times we played some of the best volleyball we've ever played and at other times we stood around," said Wayne coach Deb Bodenstedt.

Sandy Urecht sparked the Blue Devils, and Tammie Thomas played well in place of Jolene Bennett, who injured her ankle in practice. Lisa Peters was the leader at the net, spiking and blocking the ball well.

The varsity will take a 12.5 record into district action at Norfolk beginning Monday, Nov. 5. The Blue Devils will play Schuyler in the opening round of play at 7:45 p.m. Monday at Norfolk High School. Wayne's reserve team couldn't get itself going and lost a 1-15, 5-15 decision, to complete its season with a 5-4 record. The freshman Blue Devils rallied for a 3-15, 15-13, 15-10 win, finishing its season at 3-6.

Omaha Hosts Career Fair

More than 1,000 students from 12 Nebraska colleges will begin their career planning and job search in Omaha Nov. 1 and 2 of the second annual Career Fair, sponsored by NETCHE, Inc., a multipurpose consortium of Nebraska postsecondary institutions.

Kathy Hanrath, coordinator of NETCHE's Cooperative Placement Service, said graduating students, as well as undergraduates, will explore a variety of career opportunities with approximately 50 national and local employers.

Although no interviews will be held at the fair, employers will set future interview dates with students at NETCHE's central interview facility in Lincoln, she said.

In addition to meetings with prospective employers, students will attend workshops on decision-making, job search skills, resume writing and interview techniques. Career guidance counselors will be available to students also and a self-scoring inventory will aid students in identifying interests and abilities.

Colleges participating in the fair are: Chadron State College, College of Saint Mary, Dana College, Hastings College, Kearney State College, Midland Lutheran College, Nebraska Wesleyan University, Northeast Technical Community College, Peru State College, Union College, Wayne State College and York College.

The fair, scheduled for the Omaha Hilton from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursday and Friday, is co-sponsored by the U.S. Air Force, Army and Navy. There is no charge for student registration.

For further information contact Dick Cuffey 402-472-3611.

Too Few Women Are Involved

"There are too few women involved in making postsecondary educational decisions in the state of Nebraska," according to Rose Melie and Virginia Walsh, co-directors of the Center for Co-Equal Education at the University of Nebraska.

The center, which has been conducting a rural women's postsecondary project since 1977, has recently analyzed information about postsecondary decision-makers in Nebraska. The millions of dollars of public funds for postsecondary education in Nebraska 1979 were budgeted primarily by 86 individuals on boards or committees. Of these 86 Nebraskans, only seven (or 8 percent) are women.

"In view of the fact that more and more women are enrolling in community and state colleges and universities all across this state," Ms. Walsh commented, "it seems essential to have women participate in the decisions about educational policies. And the most effective way for them to participate is to be elected to the boards making the decisions."

The groups included in the listing by the center are: the nine member Education Committee of the Nebraska Unicameral, the University of Nebraska board of regents, the Nebraska State Colleges board of trustees, and the boards of governors of the six technical community college areas: Mid Plains, Central, Northeast, Southeast, Western and Metropolitan.

One of the purposes of the educational equity project has been to form task forces in non-metropolitan communities which have either a state or a community college. These task forces serve as a liaison between the colleges and the women in the community. Members have been looking at the educational opportunities for women in their own areas.

"One result of this survey of boards," said Ms. Melie, "is that the local task forces, armed with information about the state-wide picture, will be looking more carefully at the composition of their own local boards."

Fuel Efficient Ideas Are Given

Right or wrong? To save gas, it's best to turn on the air conditioner rather than open the car windows.

Warm up your engine for only 30 seconds before driving off. Right, on both counts.

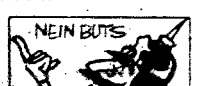

According to the U.S. Department of Energy, it's more fuel-efficient to turn on air conditioners in late-model cars rather than open the windows. At speeds of 40 m.p.h. or more, the wind drag from open windows results in more gas consumption than using the air conditioner.

Warm engines do perform best, but keeping an engine running for more than 30 seconds does no good. It takes 20 minutes of warming up to reach maximum efficiency. It's better to keep the engine only running a half-minute or so before you drive off. The engine warms up as you drive.

Short trips of five miles or less account for 15 percent of the mileage on U.S. cars, but consume more than 30 percent of the gas. Why? Because the trip is over before the engine begins to operate at peak efficiency.

In its drive for conservation, the Energy Department is sponsoring a traveling exhibit that will visit 125 cities over the next year. Visitors can climb into a car mounted on a special platform and follow audio-taped instructions that show how to cut gas consumption dramatically.

Conserving gas not only saves money but also curbs car exhaust, a major cause of air pollution, says the American Lung Association. To find out more about air pollution and its causes, contact the American Lung Association of Nebraska at 7343 Pacific, Suite 212, Omaha, Neb. 68114. It's a matter of life and death.

"All would be well if there were no butts." German Proverb plants, books, candy and other items.

A lunch counter will be open all day.

The Legion Hall will be open Friday and all bazaar and rummage items are to be brought to the hall that day for pricing. The hall will open Saturday at 9:30 a.m.

"A 'Girl In The Garden' quilt will be given away during the afternoon of the festival. The quilt is on display at Viker's Store. Drawings for other articles also will be held.

Mrs. Eleanor Park and Mrs. Alfred Benson are serving as this year's chairmen for the event.

Mrs. Olson Hosts
Eight members of the West-side Home Extension Club met Friday with Mrs. Harold Olson. Mrs. Raymond Paulson was a guest.

Roll call was a favorite quotation. Members had a show and tell of crafts and finished the yearbook.

Residents Raising Funds For New Center

Members of the Allen Senior Citizens Center Fund Raising Committee, working towards the remodeling of a new center, met last week to discuss plans for a fund raising drive in Allen.

The group will be conducting a door-to-door campaign in an effort to raise money needed for the project.

According to a spokesman for the committee, the city has received a federal grant providing 75 percent of the estimated cost. The remaining 25 percent, or $6,000, must come from the Allen area.

Several Allen clubs and organizations have already donated money for the project.

The committee also plans to raise money during an auction on Dec. 1 of items contributed by area residents. Persons who have articles to donate can store them in the Paul Koester building.

The remodeling of the two rooms in the back of the Legion Hall for the new Senior Citizens Center will begin soon. Completion is expected around the first of the year.

Pleasant Hour

Several members of the Pleasant Hour Club met Oct. 23 in the home of Genevieve Larson and traveled to the Wakefield Health Care Center.

The club presented a large print Bible to the Care Center in honor of the club's deceased members and to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the club. Vicky Hingst had charge of entertainment at the center, and the club served cookies and coffee at the close of the program.

The club returned to the Larson home for the October meeting. Newly elected officers are Bess Chapman, president; Ella Isom, vice president;

Sophie Lockwood, secretary; Dorothy Kjer, treasurer; Genevieve Larson, news reporter; and Sandy Pettit, sales chairman.

The club voted to donate $150 towards the remodeling of the Senior Citizens Center in Allen. Betty Chapman will be the November hostess.

Rescue Unit Called

The Allen-Waterbury rescue squad was called Friday evening to a pickup accident on old Highway 20 between Allen and Waterbury. Two employees of the Fertilizer Plant construction crew upset their pickup in a ditch. Both men escaped without injuries.

The squad was called about 11:15 p.m. Sunday evening to the scene of a shooting at a farm home east of Allen. The victim was taken to the St. Joseph Unit of the Marian Health Care Center in Sioux City. Further information about the shooting appears elsewhere in this issue of The Wayne Herald.

On Wednesday last week the rescue squad was called to take Earl Emry to St. Luke's Medical Center in Sioux City.

Farewell Held

About 60 persons attended a farewell open house reception Sunday for Ezra and Alta Christensen at their home.

The event was hosted by Jim and Norma Warner, assisted by Joyce Benstead.

Soot Captures Sunlight Heat

Of all the ingenious new ways to generate energy, using soot to capture the power of sunlight is one of the most startling.

This spring, the Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory, part of the University of California, developed a technique to use soot to attract enough heat from the sun to run large electric generators. The technique can result in solar heating that soars to temperatures and pressures corresponding to those in a jet engine.

Fine particles of carbon have black, nonreflective surfaces that absorb sunlight. The

Plans Meeting

Wayne County American Legion Irwin L. Sears Post No. 43 will meet at 7:30 p.m. Mon. Nov. 5th at the Wayne Veterans Club rooms.

Regular Wayne county business pertaining to the American Legion and the election of officers for the coming year will be the main program for the evening.

Department Commander Donald J. Cozier of Sergeant and District No. 3 Commander Harvey Reitz of Emerson plan to attend. Each will have new and interesting information regarding the American Legion program for 1980.

greater the surface area the more rapid the absorption rate. When suspended in air, the carbon particles are an ideal medium for heating sun-lit air.

In the laboratory, tiny specks of carbon, comparable to the finest soot, are produced continuously from a carbon arc and then suspended in air passed through a solar focusing device. The device uses mirrors to concentrate and focus sunlight in a heating chamber where the carbon specks are suspended. The sunlight rapidly heats the particles to a temperature at which they vaporize and transfer their heat to the air around them.

According to researchers, a solar plan using carbon-particle heating would consume only 30 pounds of carbon an hour to power a generator producing enough electricity for a community of 10,000 people.

The prospect of using soot to capture sunlight is exciting, as is the prospect of removing soot and other pollution from the air we breathe, says the American Lung Association.

To find out more about air pollution and the use of pollution-free energy, contact the American Lung Association of Nebraska at 7363 Pacific, Suite 212, Omaha, Neb. 68114. It's a matter of life and breath.

'Iowa Corn' Now Being Used in Romania

If you want "good old Iowa corn," you don't have to go to Iowa to get it. Try Romania instead.

One of two Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources staff members who recently returned from a study tour of Romania said one of the more interesting things he saw there was a corn field with seed corn being grown for a well known Iowa-based company.

Dr. Stan Farlin, extension beef cattle nutritionist, traveled with Dr. Alex Hogg, an extension veterinarian, to the Balkan country. Farlin said it is possible for the seed company to grow corn for use in the U.S. because Romania's climate is very near to that of Nebraska's. The two University of Nebraska-Lincoln faculty members spent seven weeks touring swine installations and beef feedlots in Romania as part of a scientific exchange sponsored by the State Department's International Cooperation Administration.

Hogg, who spent much of his time at the Pasteur Institute of Bucharest, said the two countries (U.S. and Romania) are interested in doing joint research in various agricultural areas.

Farlin said since agriculture is Romania's largest industry as is Nebraska's, it may be possible to exchange ideas and work in agriculture-related fields.

"It also gives us the opportunity to get more involved in production and research with them," he said.

Hogg said the swine facilities in Romania are much larger than any in Nebraska. One swine production unit slaughters 1,000 market hogs for meat every day, and produces more than 360,000 hogs annually at one facility.

"This is unique to Romania," Hogg said. The largest swine operation in the U.S. produces 200,000 head per year, but not in the same unit.

Romania produces more than 23 million pigs per year, according to Hogg, and although Nebraska is 2.3 the size of Romania, Nebraska only produces about 5 million swine annually.

He said the Romanians are still battling with hog cholera, a disease which has been essentially eradicated in Nebraska.

"They (the Romanians) are very interested in finding out how we got rid of the disease," he said, "since it gets expensive for them to vaccinate as many hogs as they have."

"On the other hand," Hogg said, "the Romanians think they have come up with a system to eradicate pseudotuberculosis without depopulating the whole farm."

Nebraska is still plagued by pseudotuberculosis outbreaks and the number is increasing every year, according to Hogg.

Farlin, who toured beef farms and worked with beef scientists, said he is impressed by the level of knowledge of the scientists in Romania. However, he added that the technology there is far behind what it is in the U.S.

Farlin commented that there are many differences in Romania beef production compared to Nebraska beef production.

One of these differences is Romanians feed only bulls for meat, and no steers. In addition, all of the beef cattle are kept in confinement barns and are fed very little grain. Instead, they are fed silage and roughage.

Farlin said that hand labor is plentiful in Romania, which makes it possible to handle large numbers of cattle in barns and confinements.

Twenty-three million people live in Romania, which occupies 93,000 square miles. Nebraska's 77,000 square miles are home to 1.5 million persons.

Farlin said he was surprised to learn that Romanians slaughter their beef at a lighter weight than Nebraskans do.

"The Romanians slaughter at 880 to 910 lbs. whereas we wait until about 1100-1200 lbs. for comparable breeds," he said.

"This may be a mistake," he added, "since it does not take much longer for the animals to gain that extra weight."

He said he thinks the Romanians would like to grow their cattle a little heavier, but this may not be possible without using more grain. Grain is not used for beef cattle feed in Romania, Farlin said, because of the socialist government policies which prohibit it.

Farlin said that bull meat is accepted in Romania, but the people in Europe aren't as concerned about high quality beef as Americans.

He said he can see many ways in which the U.S. can help Romania in agricultural areas and hopes the exchange program can be continued and some cooperative research can be started.

N-SERVE

George Rehm, district Extension agronomist, reminds us that there is no justification for using N-Serve (a product of Dow Chemical) with all applied anhydrous ammonia on non-irrigated fine textured soils. Some experiments have indicated that N-Serve applied in the fall may increase yields on irrigated silt loam soil.

LICE ON BEEF CATTLE

If you're feeding cattle you can't afford to feed lice. Heavily infested animals can lose as much as one fourth pound per day. That's the same as losing one 800-pound animal per month if you are feeding 100 head of cattle heavily infested with lice.

Early fall spraying controls lice populations best. Hair coats are still short so spraying is easier and the louse population hasn't had a chance to build up.

Don't wait to control lice in the winter. Freezing temperatures often prevent spraying, dusting has never proven highly effective under Nebraska conditions and the systemic pour on treatments either are not registered for louse control or they give erratic results.

Here is a list of recommended chemicals for beef cattle only: Co-Ral, Delnav, Korean, Lindane, Malathion, Methoxychlor, Ruelene and Toxaphene. Use the dosage given on the label and observe these points:

(1) Use a sprayer that will develop enough pressure to penetrate the animal's haircoat (200-400 pounds per square inch)

(2) Spray all the animals in the herd. Get complete coverage of each animal sprayed. Untreated or poorly treated animals can reinfest the entire herd.

(3) Use a hand gun with a nozzle that puts out a coarse spray. Such a spray penetrates considerably better than a fine mist spray.

(4) Treat no more than eight to 10 animals at a time so the spray operator can treat all animals thoroughly.

(5) Remember that most of the insecticides that are approved for beef cattle are not approved for producing dairy cows.

Extension Clubs In Dixon County Tell Program

Extension clubs in Dixon County will be featuring a program on "International Textiles Through Travel" at their annual Achievement and Recognition Program at the Northeast Station near Concord on Monday, Nov. 5. Registration will be at 1 p.m. with the program beginning at 1:30 p.m.

Thelma Thompson, extension clothing specialist, Cooperative Extension Service, UNL will be guest speaker. Ms. Thompson has traveled in Asian countries and she plans to show Indonesian batik and apparel from China and Japan.

Home extension council members and club presidents will be recognized for their leadership in 1979, and the 1980 council members will be installed. Musical entertainment, a skill, and refreshments will also be parts of the program.

Hostess clubs for the Achievement Day are Hillcrest and Sunshine Extension Clubs. Mrs. Joe Pfister and Mrs. Paul Millie, presidents of the hostess clubs, are co-chairmen of the planning committee.

The public is invited to attend the program.

DEER CREEK VALLEY 4-H CLUB

The Deer Creek Valley 4-H Club met Oct. 22 in the Jim Bush home with eight members present.

Fall Drought May Harm Trees

Nebraska is experiencing a fall drought that may mean serious injury to trees if it continues into winter, warns Dennis M. Adams, district extension forester in the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

"All trees transpire water during normal metabolic processes. During the growing season, when trees are in full foliage, large amounts of water are transpired through their leaves. But even during winter months, when the leaves are gone or non-functional and photosynthetic (food production) processes have ceased, trees transpire water to a lesser extent from exposed bark, twigs and buds," Adams explained.

However, sometimes this loss of moisture exceeds the amount of water the roots can absorb from dry, frozen soil. "Desiccation or drying of tissues is the result of the tree being unable to replace water lost through transpiration," he said. Winter drying injury occurs most frequently during warm, dry, windy conditions. This is especially true of evergreen trees because they lose much more water through their foliage, he added.

"Symptoms of winter injury usually do not appear until the following spring and summer. When this occurs, it is natural to think the tree is suddenly dying when actually the damage was done several months before."

Damaged trees may exhibit only a few dead twigs or entire branches may die, depending on the severity of injury. In several cases the entire tree may die, he warned.

The side of the tree facing the prevailing winds is most susceptible. Light brown, dry appearing needles are typical of winter injury on evergreen trees. This type of injury is usually temporary and most evergreens will recover rapidly as the growing season progresses.

To help prevent winter drying injury, trees should be thoroughly watered in the fall, Adams advised. "Fall watering may not be necessary when soil moisture is adequate, but when soil moisture is lacking, like this year, fall watering may be critical to help the tree survive the winter."

Usually large, well-established trees can tolerate temporary droughts without injury, but young trees are more susceptible to drought injury. They do not have the extensive root system to draw moisture from the soil and need supplemental water during the dry conditions.

Relying on the lawn sprinkler to supply your trees' water needs isn't a good idea, he cautioned. Trees should be watered before the ground freezes. "The soil should be thoroughly soaked to a depth of two to three feet before the ground freezes. This is equivalent to apply about 50 gallons of water to small trees."

Surface irrigation is an easy and efficient method of watering trees. A garden hose allowed to run slowly for several hours will run sufficient water. A watering basin, two to three inches deep and three to four feet in diameter, constructed around the base of young trees will hold water until it can percolate into the soil, Adams suggested.

"Water can also be applied directly to the tree's root zone using a watering needle. This is simply a pointed, closed-end section of pipe, two to three feet long with outlet holes at the pointed end." The needle is connected to a water hose, worked into the soil at intervals around the drip-line of the tree, and allowed to run slowly for 10 to 15 minutes.

The loss of trees from winter drying is unnecessary and

Marketing Plan Meeting Topic

There's more to marketing crops and livestock than simply selling them. Producers need a marketing plan to take advantage of pricing opportunities.

Nebraska producers will have an opportunity to learn about marketing plans at a site around the state, from late November through early January. Lynn Lutgen, extension economist in the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, is coordinating the 14 one-day workshops, sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service.

What's the big advantage of a marketing plan? "A plan trains us to be more aware of changing conditions. It keeps us thinking ahead and helps evaluate alternative pricing opportunities as market conditions change," says Lutgen.

The one day workshops will include discussion of what a good plan should include, and what it will do for you. Cash markets, hedging on the futures market and forward cash contracting are among topics Lutgen will discuss.

In addition to Lutgen, other presenters at the workshop will include Mike Turner, professor of ag economics, and Al Wellman, extension economist, both from the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources. County agent hosts at each site will moderate a panel discussion between a livestock producer, a grain producer and an ag credit representative. Outlooks and new development in livestock marketing — such as electronic auctions — will be discussed. And that old bugaboo, transportation, will get a fresh look, too.

Participants can register for the workshops on the morning they begin. All will start at 9 a.m. There's no registration fee, but a charge will be made for a luncheon to be served at sites marked with an asterisk. *Marketing Days in 1979, include Nov. 30, West Point, City Auditorium.

costly, not only in monetary terms, but in intangible values such as shade, protection and beauty, the forester said. "If droughty conditions continue, deep watering trees this fall may mean the difference between live and dead trees next spring," Adams concluded.

A favorite Assyrian myth recorded on a stone tablet claims the gods drank sesame seed wine at a gathering held just before they made the earth.

VA Announces Hike In Rates

The Veterans Administration has announced an increase in the maximum interest rate on mobile home loans from 12 to 12½ percent.

These loans have been worth more than $330 million. Smith said the agency can guarantee up to $17,500 or 50 percent of the loan, whichever is smaller. The Veterans Administration recently increased its interest rate on GI home loans from 10 to 10½ percent. That rate change does not affect existing VA home loans, he said. Those eligible for these loan guarantees include veterans with service since Sept. 16, 1940, certain unmarried surviving spouses of such veterans, spouses of servicemen listed as missing in action or captured for more than 90 days, and active duty military personnel who have served more than 181 days.

IRS Announces New Service

On Oct. 1, the Internal Revenue Service office announced a new service for Nebraskans — new telephone lines for forms-only requests. The intent of these lines is to speed up service to taxpayers who need forms or publications only.

The volume of calls has been small even though these lines are open 24 hours a day, seven days a week, according to Barbara Baird, acting public affairs officer for IRS. Only five or six callers a day take advantage of the new lines. According to Ms. Baird, the IRS had anticipated "at least 10 times the volume now, steadily increasing as the tax season nears."

The new telephone numbers to call for ordering tax forms or publications only are: Omaha — 221-3321 and elsewhere in Nebraska — 800-642-8278. Taxpayers requesting other services should continue to use the telephone numbers as shown in their local telephone directories.

Marines and former marines and their wives from throughout Northeast Nebraska are invited to attend. Reservations may be made by writing or calling Lyle Juracek, 887-4735 or Jim Bauman, 887-4201, Neligh.

Soil Samples Deadline Set

Farmers who sample soil in December need to get those samples to the Soil Testing Laboratory by Dec. 17 to avoid an unusually long delay in getting test results back.

Delno Knudsen, supervisor of the lab and an extension agronomist in the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, said the deadline is necessary because the lab and other facilities associated with the University of Nebraska-Lincoln will be closed from Dec. 24 to Jan. 4. Ordinarily, turnaround time from receipt of a sample is five to seven working days, depending on the tests to be run, Knudsen said. But with the holiday closing, as much as two weeks' wait could be added if samples were received while the lab was closed.

Results Show Expanded Use

A search for expanded uses of whey, a byproduct of cheese production, has resulted in its use as a human protein source and as a source of alcohol.

In September, the House Agriculture Committee approved a bill which calls for expanded research to identify and develop agricultural commodities such as whey, as potential alcohol sources.

"Because of the recent increase in cheese production, billions of pounds of whey are generated every year," said Dr. Khem Shahani, professor of food science and technology in the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources. "Nearly 30 billion pounds of liquid whey or two billion pounds of whey solids are produced in the United States every year, Shahani said. Half of the whey is processed for human or animal use and half is dumped down the drain, he noted.

In Nebraska, nearly 700 million pounds of whey are produced yearly but only 130 million pounds are used. The extra 570 million pounds could be fermented to produce 1.0 million to 1.4 million gallons of alcohol in Nebraska alone, he said.

In the United States, Shahani said, "Only a part of the whey is used and approximately one billion pounds of whey solids are wasted every year, representing not only a pollution problem but also a loss of valuable nutrients."

"Several methods of whey utilization have been developed and implemented," he continued. "These have resulted in whey's use in animal feed, for human consumption, as a substrate (base) for protein production, and as a growing medium for the bacterial use in cheese making, Shahani said.

"All methods together utilize only a small portion of the whey produced. The remainder impose a biochemical demand on waste water treatment plants as well as a loss of potential energy source," he said.

"Concern with wasted whey, its disposal and the rising cost of energy and gasoline have increased interest in the fermentation of whey to produce industrial alcohol for use in gasoline, a 10 percent alcohol-90 percent gasoline mixture," Shahani said.

"Fermented whey would provide the dairy industry with a marketable product rather than the economic liability that they currently represents," he noted.

Before the alcohol production process can begin, lactose, the primary constituent of whey, is broken down by lactase enzyme or lactase-producing yeast, Shahani said. The result of this process, the hydrolysate, then can be converted into alcohol.

In order to optimize the economics of the process, Shahani said, fresh whey can be subjected to ultrafiltration to recover whey proteins. Whey proteins are highly nutritious, and are suitable for both animal and human consumption, he said.

After ultrafiltration, the resulting whey liquid can be used for alcohol production.

In addition, Shahani said the process developed by the IANR laboratory is applicable to fermenting whey and grain mixtures. The whey replaces a part of the water required in the preparation of the grain mash, he explained.

Shahani's process for the fermentation of corn and whey would permit the substitution of whey for about 15 percent of the corn.

"The amount of corn required is reduced in proportion to the quantity of whey sugar to corn starch in the process," he added.

There is no equipment modification required other than the addition of the whey handling device, Shahani said. And the whey solids left after fermentation constitute part of the distillers dried grain, used as a supplement in animal feeds.

A feasibility study is under way in Wisconsin to use Nebraska whey in a whey grain mixture for a 21 million gallon per year alcohol plant. Based on the saving of 15 percent of the corn requirement, Shahani estimated that the total saving may exceed $5 million per year or nearly 14 cents per gallon of alcohol.

Will your family inherit what you own?

Without a clear-cut estate settlement plan your family could lose your share of hard work.
Even if you specified in your Will that a member get a specific part of your estate it may never happen. Estate taxes can run into six figures and force your heirs to sell what you own to raise needed cash.
In addition inadequate financial planning can seriously limit the accumulation and conservation of estate assets.
How can you prevent such losses? Come to a free seminar on financial and estate planning and learn how. We'll show you Financial and Estate Planning — a practical slide presentation produced by PRG Inc., a resource of Investors Overseas Services.
The program is an informative, easy to understand explanation of financial and estate planning. You'll learn about:

- Wills and estate inventories
 - Forms of ownership
 - The effects of the Tax Reform Acts of 1976 and 1978
 - Avoiding shrinkage of your estate
 - Benefits of financial planning
 - Tax-saving ideas and much, much more
- We invite you to attend. Just send the coupon to reserve your seats. See you there!
