West Husker Players Selected

Two Wayne athletes, Jolene Bennett and Lisa Peters, were named to the West Husker All-Conference first team at a conference meeting, Tuesday night. They join three players from Columbus Lakeview, two from Hartington CC, two from Madison on the first team.

Wayne was well represented on the honorable mention list, with three players selected. Julia Dorcay, Stacy Jacobmeier and Lisa Daniels were the honorable mention selections.

Senior Bennett was a key figure at the net for the Blue Devils, spiking the ball successfully 101 times in 121 attempts for 32 ace spikes. She also added 54 dinks and tips and blocked 14 shots.

Peters, the other tall spiker, was the team leader in most spikes and serving percentage, setting new school records. The junior completed 186 good spikes in 210 attempts for 41 aces and served with 96 percent efficiency.

Julia Dorcay, a senior who sparked the team all season with her setting ability, was overlooked on the first team selections but set a school record for most sets with 64 good sets in 672 attempts, for 95 percent accuracy.

The other two honorable mention selections, Stacy Jacobmeier and Lisa Daniels, are also seniors. Jacobmeier made 103 good spikes in 135 attempts and added 52 dinks and tips and 14 blocked shots to her statistics. Daniels served with 91 percent efficiency and played with consistency, often coming off the bench to help her team.

All Starters Return

Recruits To Help Lady Wildcats

Following a disappointing 6-25 record in 1978-79, Wayne State College women's basketball coach Helen Carroll decided several of her team's problems could be solved on the road.

In 1978 Carroll, who arrived at WSC the day before classes started for the fall term, was forced to use players already in the Lady Wildcats' fold because of a late start in recruiting. Carroll hit the recruiting trail early this year and landed four top prospects.

After her team shot a dismal 34.2 percent from the floor last year, Carroll made finding a good shooter one of her top recruiting goals.

"I've done a lot of recruiting trying to fill in a high percentage shooter and I feel like I've got several candidates that are excellent in that area," she said after the Cats concluded their opening day of practice Oct. 8.

Candidate number one is Lisa

Draper, a guard from Council Bluffs, Iowa, who averaged over 30 points a game in high school. Another top guard prospect is Lori Cadwell from Dallas Center, Iowa. The 5-7 freshman was selected most valuable player at Dallas Community High School last season. Lisa Curtis also from Council Bluffs, Iowa, could crack into the starting line up as a freshman.

"She (Curtis) will see more action in the forward position," Carroll commented. "She is an excellent shooter and a super aggressive ballplayer, she loves to take the ball to the middle."

Nebraska recruit Debra Emanuel, North Bend, averaged 8.4 rebounds per game last year while her high school team finished the season with a sparkling 16-2 record. The 5-11 freshman should provide the Cats with better front line depth. According to coach Carroll, team depth was a problem for WSC last year.

"We had some good ball players last year, but we just did not have the depth that we needed to keep going the entire game," she said. "This year I feel like a major difference will be the depth on the ballteam."

All five starters return for the Lady Wildcats, including the top rebounder in 1978-79, Julie Petronis, Sioux City. The 6-1 junior center averaged 12.5 rebounds per game last year. Sisters Lori and Karl Erwin, Concord, were the Lady Wildcats' number one and three scorers respectively last year and Larson a senior from Irwin, Iowa, averaged six points a game.

Rounding out the returning starters is Barb Bettin, a senior, Vinton, Iowa. Bettin was the number four scorer last season averaging six points a game.

Though Carroll's recruiting effort was geared towards offense, the second-year coach said defense will be the key to her team's success.

"We will be really quick this year. I think the people that watch us play are going to see some excellent defense," commented Carroll. "Of course from your excellent defense stems the fast break. The two go hand in hand. We are looking first of all to defense."

The Lady Wildcats open their season at the Missouri Western State College Tip-Off Tournament Nov. 17 in St. Joseph, Mo.

WSC Spikers Upset Iowa To Finish Season 17-23-6

The Wayne State College volleyball team closed out its 1979 season with a stunning upset and a 2-3 match record in the University of Minnesota Gopher Tournament last Friday and Saturday in Minneapolis.

The Lady Wildcats surprised Iowa University (AIAW Division 1) winning in three games 1-15, 16-14 and 15-12. WSC volleyball coach Bernice Fulton said the win was one of her team's biggest victories of the season.

In other matches on Friday the Lady Wildcats lost to the University of Northern Iowa 13-15, 8-15 and defeated the University of North Dakota 15-4 and 15-4. Closing out pool play on Saturday, WSC lost to the host Lady Gophers 5-15 and 11-15.

WSC's pool match record of 2-2 pitted the women spikers against Minnesota for a second time in the first round of single elimination competition. Wayne State almost came up with their second upset of the tournament but the Lady Gophers prevailed 8-15, 15-12 and 14-16.

Wayne State finished the 1979 volleyball season with an overall record of 17-23-6.

Farm Ag Productivity May Decline

For the remainder of the 20th century, agricultural productivity in the United States may stop climbing and start to decline, particularly if public spending on research and extension continues to lag.

THIS IS one of the conclusions of Dr. Marvin Duncan and Dr. Edward Harshbarger, writing in the September-October issue of the Economic Review of the Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City.

Gains in U.S. farm productivity have been phenomenal in the past, the two economists found, but they have slowed in recent years.

If productivity does continue its slow growth or begin to drop, it will mean further domestic food price inflation, and it may also result in U.S. farm products being priced out of export markets.

should look to encourage growth in agricultural productivity through research into ways to increase agricultural output, increased funding for extension activity and efforts to favor those farmers and ranchers who have shown an inclination to make use of cost-saving innovations.

Small farms have often been unable to adopt new technology because of risk of failure, the authors explain. Very large farms, on the other hand, have often tended to resist change since their huge capital investments and contractual arrangements with other businesses keep them from switching rapidly to new methods and techniques.

"If, indeed, family farms are more efficient in promoting and adopting technological change, the recent trends toward large-scale farming may need to be reversed," Duncan and Harshbarger concluded.

THUS, government policies

Time to Depopulate Hogs

With marginally profitable hog prices in prospect for the next six months to a year, now is the time for area pork producers with persistent health problems to consider depopulation as a means of getting diseases under control, says Mike Brumm, district extension swine specialist.

Depopulation, to be effective, according to Brumm, pork producers whose farms have a history of problems with bloody scours, atrophic rhinitis or my-coplasma pneumonia stand to gain the most from depopulation. These three diseases have a history of being difficult to control and the only sure way of elimination from a herd is depopulation.

Depopulation, to be effective, is a multistage program. Brumm states that the first stage involves selling off all the swine on the farm, including breeding stock. This serves to eliminate any carrier animals.

After depopulation, a thorough cleaning and disinfecting of the facilities is a must. A three-month waiting period is the minimum length of time to let the facilities stand empty and dry. This insures that any disease organisms that survived the clean-up have died off.

Repopulation is the most critical stage of the depopulation procedure since any preventative measures are useless if carrier pigs for the diseases in question are introduced into the herd. Only animals from accredited SPF herds or animals from reliable sources should be considered as replacement stock.

Brumm goes on to add that along with repopulation, pork producers should include a plan to prevent the reintroduction of these three costly diseases into the herd. This plan should include limiting outside traffic through the facilities and isolation of any new animals for 30 days.

Farmers Must Decide Fate of Soil

American farmers must decide soon whether to keep their soil tied down on the land or to allow an additional 60 million tons of it to wash or blow away this season, Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland said recently.

impossible to protect from soil erosion.

"The result was 60 million tons more soil lost on those nine million acres alone," Bergland said. "That was the bitter result of plowing from fence to fence."

million of dollars invested in soil conservation practices.

"Whenever farm prices are high, we see thousands of acres of cropland that should have never been plowed and the destruction of a lot of good conservation systems," he said. "Each farmer should ask himself if the chance in the short run is worth the risk of long-range damage to his farm."

need more conservation applied — especially in places like west Tennessee, where erosion runs as high as 30 tons of soil an acre each year." These farms need more contouring, more terraces, more conservation tillage," Bergland said.

He urged farmers to plant only the best, protected land to crops, and save the rest for future generations.

Wet Corn Can Be As Effective As Dry

Wet corn at harvest can cause big problems, yet wet corn can be stored and fed as effectively as dry corn. In some instances, wet corn has more value than dry corn, states Vernon Krause, beef specialist at Northeast Station near Concord.

It appears that high moisture shelled corn fed whole has about 5 percent more value than dry shelled corn in rations with less than 15 percent roughage. In rations over 15 percent roughage the wet corn probably should be coarsely cracked, states Krause.

Wet ground ear corn also appears to have more value than dry ear corn and since ear corn has plenty of roughage a firm pack at ensiling is not a big problem. Storage of shelled corn is a problem since it doesn't pack, states Krause. Generally, the only solution is to grind or roll the corn. Here a firm pack is very important, not just for keeping in the silo, but when feeding, the face of the silo needs to stay upright. If the face slides, excessive spoilage will occur.

High moisture shelled corn can be ensiled effectively at moisture ranges of 22 to 30 percent. Ear corn will ensile well at 25 to 35 percent moisture, cites Krause.

At feeding, about two to three inches of the face of the silo should be fed each day during the warm weather to prevent spoilage. It is important to tear off only what is needed.

This and That...

PROTECTING CONCRETE
Air-entrained cement should be used for exposed concrete. Salts, fertilizer, milk, manure and silage acids, plus continued exposure, all can cause rapid wear on concrete.

Driveways, sidewalks, feeding slabs, alleyways, water platforms and milkhouse and barn floors are typical examples. In addition to the use of airentrained cement, a low-cost surface treatment will seal and protect the concrete from deterioration. This is especially important for concrete poured in cool fall weather.

A 50-50 mixture of boiled linseed oil and turpentine provides an economical surface treatment. Boiled oil dries more rapidly than raw oil. A second coat of linseed oil over this further extends the life of the treatment, which should protect the concrete for about three years. Another treatment recommended by the Portland Cement Association is a 50-50 mixture of SAE No. 5 oil and Stoddard's Solvent.

Concrete poured during the fall must be protected against freezing. To develop near maximum strength, conventional concrete must be cured for at least 28 days at temperatures of about 70 degrees F. With temperatures near the freezing mark, it takes considerably longer for concrete to reach maximum strength. An outdoor concrete feeding slab poured in cool fall weather would not attain full strength until perhaps a year later.

It is important to keep a concrete slab surface damp for a minimum of one week. This permits the concrete to "cure" and prevent a too-rapid water movement out of the concrete which results in weak concrete. Be sure to keep floors damp or covered with plastic if a heater is used to keep a building warm for construction. The heater dries out the air which causes the fresh concrete to dry and become dusty and weak.

Selling Less Helps Boost Hog Prices

If each producer would sell his market hogs 10 pounds lighter, the pork supply would be reduced by four percent, which could mean more than a $2 per hundred-weight boost in the price of slaughter hogs, an Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources extension economist said this week.

Al Wellman said hog prices are down because of a 20 percent-plus increase in hog numbers since last year and no sign of hogmen slowing down production. Around two million hogs are being slaughtered each week, up considerably from year-ago levels.

Because of the supply-price picture, now is the time to start marketing hogs at lighter weights, Wellman stated. But he pointed out that normally, hogs go to market at heavier weights this time of year because new crop corn is available and farmers are too busy with harvest, storage and marketing to think about shipping hogs. A continuation of selling hogs at heavier weights will cause hog prices to drop even more, Wellman warned.

Wellman termed the hog price picture for producers "bleak" in the near future. The economist said he does not see much relief in sight from low hog prices until mid-1980. While low cattle numbers are helping to support hog prices, there are "just too many hogs" to warrant optimism, Wellman said.

Most Crops Treated With Chemicals

Of approximately 15 million acres of major crops grown in Nebraska in 1978, nearly 10 million were estimated to be treated with herbicides and nearly six million with insecticides.

Of approximately 15 million acres of major crops grown in Nebraska in 1978, nearly 10 million were estimated to be treated with herbicides and nearly six million with insecticides.

wheat received some form of chemical weed control. Oats, barley and rye also received similar treatment. 2,4-D esters were the most common herbicide on wheat and small grains.

Nearly one million acres of range and pastureland were treated at least once with an herbicide in 1978. The majority of pasture and rangeland treated received applications of either 2,4-D ester or 2,4-D amine. Spot treatments of such land is common, Johnson stated, making estimation of pasture and range acreage treated and the amount of chemicals applied difficult to validate.

"A partial explanation is that manufacturers' recommendations are typically in terms of a broadcast rate per acre, while a substantial amount of the treated acreage involved banding which reduced the per acre requirement," Johnson said.

"However, it may also be true that some producers believe the desired degrees of weed control can be attained with more modest rates of chemical treatment."

The survey indicated rates of application on grain sorghum tended to be closer to the recommended rates than were corn treatments. "Because of lower crop tolerance, the recommended rates for grain sorghum are less than for corn," Johnson explained. "As a result, the range of deviation of actual usage from the recommended levels is smaller."

These were among findings of a statewide mail survey of Nebraska agricultural producers questioned about pesticide use on corn, grain sorghum, wheat, other small grains, alfalfa and pasture and rangeland.

More than 5,000 agricultural producers were contacted and nearly half responded to the questionnaire, developed by the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources (IANR) agricultural economics department of cooperation with other IANR departments, the Nebraska Department of Agriculture and the Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service. The purpose of the survey was to assess the economic significance of agricultural pesticides to Nebraska's farming sector.

"The bulk of the insecticide treatment also was on corn. Of the 5.6 million pounds of active ingredient insecticides applied to Nebraska farmland last year, 80 percent was applied to corn.

Corn rootworm was the primary target of the insect control, with European corn borer, wireworm and armyworm receiving lesser treatments.

"Furadan and Dyfonate were the most commonly used insecticides on corn, with Counter and Thimet ranking third and fourth, respectively," Johnson said.

"Because of the common cultural practice of spot treatment associated with range and pasture weed control, the acreage which actually received treatment may be less than the amount reported," Johnson explained.

Most of the pesticides applied to Nebraska's cropland — 83 percent — was applied by the producer. Broadcasting and banding were the most common methods of application.

The majority of the respondents said they disposed of the empty containers by burying them, hauling them to the sanitary landfill or returning them to the chemical dealer.

NEARLY 500 persons were served during the annual Farmers'—Student Union. The event is held each year to show appreciation to area farmers for their support of Wayne's business community.

USSR In Market for Considerable Wheat

The USSR is again in the market and purchasing considerable quantities of U.S. wheat.

"With this in mind, it is noteworthy to review the record of the large Soviet grain purchases between July of 1972 and August of 1974," says Dan McGuire, Nebraska Wheat Division chief.

"According to the USDA's Foreign Agriculture Service and the Office of the General Sales Manager, the Soviets purchased U.S. grain worth $1.3 billion," says McGuire. "Of this total, $751 million went for cash purchases and the remaining $550 million was extended through lines of credit under the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC). All payments were made in dollars and on time, using the prevailing commercial interest rates, which at that time varied between 6 1/2 percent and 9 1/2 percent. The last payments, including principle and interest were made in March, 1977, three years after the final shipment of the U.S. grain purchases went forward to the Soviet Union. The USDA officials emphasized that the Soviets were prompt in repaying the loans, which totaled $550 million in principle and $71 million in interest accrued over the three year period."

As for Export-Import Bank loans, none have been extended to the Soviet Union for the purchase of grain commodities since the Bank extends loans primarily for industrial imports. With the passage of the 1974 Trade Act, however, the Soviets are no longer eligible for either EX-Im Bank or CCC credit financing.

"The Nebraska Wheat Committee recognizes the importance of wheat exports to any customer since exports have such an impact on the price wheat producers receive," says Erv Friehe, Wheat Committee chairman. "We also recognize that all sectors of our society benefit from wheat exports because exports create jobs, fight inflation and help the U.S. Balance of Payments by paying for oil and other imports," adds Friehe. "Furthermore, without exports U.S. farmers couldn't afford to produce like they do and would have to cut back which would reduce supply and raise prices to consumers at home."
