Net taxable retail sales for the second quarter of 1979 in Wayne County were 18.2 percent above the same period for 1978.

A report released last week by the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Nebraska at Lincoln also indicated sales were up 9.8 percent over the state.

According to the report, the state's strongest retail markets outside the metropolitan areas. Nebraska retail sales outpaced retail sales at the national level during the first six months of 1979 by a slim margin.

The increase in Nebraska was 11.6 percent while nationally the increase was 11.3 percent. The comparisons are with the same period in 1978.

Wayne County, part of the five-county Region 11, had retail sales of $10.9 million for the second quarter of 1979 as compared to $9.2 million a year ago.

Stanton County, also in Region 11, showed an increase of 13.7 percent over last year with retail sales for 1979 of $3.0 million compared to $2.6 million a year ago.

Pierce County in Region II showed a marked jump of 22 percent over sales of last year. The 1979 retail sales were estimated at $7.8 million, while last year's comparison was $6.4 million.

Cedar County, in Region 25, was among the gainers, showing an increase of 13.8 percent over last year. Total sales for 1979 in Cedar were $11.6 million and compare to $10.2 million a year ago.

Dixon County in Region 25 was the only adjoining county to actually show a drop in sales. With a 2 percent decline from a year ago, Dixon had retail sales this year of $4.2 million. For the same period a year ago, sales were $4.3 million.

Annual Christmas Chamber Kickoff Underway Friday

Men, women and children. Put the final touches on those Christmas lists, because participating merchants of the Chamber of Commerce are about to kick off the 1979 Christmas shopping season in Wayne.

"There's a winter wonderland of shopping values right here in Wayne," says the Chamber's executive vice president, Gary Van Meter. Merchants are making special efforts to provide Wayne shoppers with the highest quality merchandise at competitive prices, he added.

Van Meter said about 40 businesses will be participating in the program which carries the theme that there is a "Winter Wonderland of Shopping Values Right In Your Own Back Yard."

THIS YEAR'S program will differ somewhat from previous years, but promises to be one of the best in years. There will be no coupons, tickets or handouts of any kind.

All participating merchants are being asked to give away "something special" as a way of showing their appreciation to shoppers. The items will be on display in each merchant's store and each store will have a drawing Sunday, Dec. 23, for the merchandise.

The "Wonderland of Gifts" total $5,900 in value to date, with that figure expected to grow.

Participating stores can be identified by door stickers, window posters and counter cards all proclaiming the "Christmas Shop Wayne" theme. Employees also will sport lapel badges and ribbons wishing Wayne shoppers a Merry Christmas and "Thank you for shopping in Wayne."

"As you can see," Van Meter said, "Wayne businesses will be offering a great incentive to shop Wayne this year. They also will be carrying an excellent variety of merchandise. And with the fuel crisis it just makes sense to save the energy, time and money spent in driving further to shop."

Another added plus in this year's program will be the participation of several professional offices. "This program is for everyone," the Chamber exec said.

Ads appearing in next week's Wayne Herald will publish the total number and names of participating stores and offices.

PARTICIPATING stores also will have a Christmas stocking filled with toys and candy for the youngsters. These will be displayed in store windows and will be given away by registering in the stores.

Participating merchants will be advertising their Christmas values and the items they will be giving away in The Wayne Herald. Watch each issue for these values.

In observance of the holiday season, participating Chamber merchants will be observing special business hours. These are as follows:

Friday, Nov. 23, merchants will be open until 9 p.m. for shoppers to get a good start on shopping. Stores will return to regular hours until Dec. 6 and 7 when they will remain open again until 9 p.m.

Regular store hours will be observed Saturday, Dec. 8, and stores will be open Sunday, Dec. 9, from 1 to 5 p.m. Regular hours again will be observed Dec. 10 and 11, but stores will be open until 9 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 12. The 9 p.m. closing will continue through Friday, with stores observing regular hours again Saturday, Dec. 15, and from 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 16.

Businesses will open until 9 p.m. Dec. 17 through Dec. 21, and will observe regular hours Saturday, Dec. 22. Hours Sunday, Dec. 23, will be from 1 to 5 p.m. and stores will close at 4 p.m. Christmas Eve, Monday.

A CHRISTMAS calendar is located elsewhere on this page for easy clip-out. The calendar has the store hours for the participating Chamber merchants during the Christmas season.

In addition to the special values, youngsters will be treated each Saturday afternoon beginning Dec. 1 to free movies at the Gay Theater. These will begin at 2 p.m. and will include the following movies:

Saturday, Dec. 1: "Animal Crackers"
Saturday, Dec. 8: "McHale's Navy Joins the Air Force"
Saturday, Dec. 15: "Change of Habit"
Saturday, Dec. 22: "Puff n' Stuff"

THERE ARE several other Christmas-related activities planned in the area. These include the following:

The Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity and the Kappa Delta Gamma sorority and TKE's auxiliary, Order of Diana, are planning their annual Children's Christmas Party from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 8, at the City Auditorium.

Youngsters 4 through 12 years old are invited to attend. Cartoons will be shown, lunch will be served and a special visit by Santa Claus is planned. Admission is 50 cents per youngster.

ANOTHER Christmas event planned is showings of the traditional "Star of Christmas" planetarium show beginning Wednesday, Nov. 28. This event is held annually at the Dale Planetarium in the Carhart Science Building at Wayne State College.

The show features festive music and holiday scenes and focuses on the current winter sky. The program also brings the sky, just prior to the birth of Jesus, into view.

"Star of Christmas" retells the Biblical story of the first Christmas, showing the evidence the Bible presents to explain the special star of Christmas Eve.

THE FINAL portion of the show combines knowledge of the sky, Biblical scholarship and an understanding of the customs and beliefs of the people in the Christmas story.

The show is open free to the public and will run at 7:30 p.m. Wednesdays, and at 3:30 p.m. Sundays through Dec. 19. Reservations for special showings to groups and organizations may be arranged. The planetarium is located on the first floor of the Carhart Science Building at WSC.

COURTHOUSE CLOSED
Wayne County Courthouse will be closed Thursday and Friday in observance of the Thanksgiving holiday.
All governmental offices, banks, savings and loan associations and businesses will be closed Thursday for the holiday.

Student Loans Show Decline While Hundreds of Others Go Begging

Student loans are harder to come by these days because of rising interest rates and the unavailability of money.

This is a much different situation than last year when some types of loans went begging even earlier this fall, money was going unclaimed because people didn't know where to find the funds or they didn't qualify, says the director of the Student Assistance Council of America.

THE LOAN situation at Wayne State College and locally also is being affected by national money problems, according to Chuck Kay, director of financial aid at WSC.

Students are having to "hunt them up," Kay said Monday. On a more positive note, however, he added that "we thought the money supply was all dried up, but we've had reports of students getting loans, he said.

Kay explained that only student loans for students showing a definite need are made through WSC, while loans for other students are made by a local bank. The National Defense Student Loans are made through WSC and students applying for them have a "documented need," the financial aid director explained.

RESMAN for the local bank which makes loans said their program for student loans has changed recently because of the tight money situation. He added that banks and savings and loan associations throughout the country are facing money problems.

Several months ago, when the money was more available, the bank made loans to regular customers whether they were residents of Wayne or students. However, the loan applicant had to have an account with the bank and had to be a junior in college.

Now, the policy has changed. Loan applications are scrutinized much more closely than before and loans are given more on a need basis than in past months, the bank spokesman said.

BECAUSE THE Federal Reserve tightened money, the bank decided to sell its loans to a buyer such as Union Bank and Trust Co. in Lincoln. Several other such buyers of loans are available in the country.

However, just as the bank was completing plans to sell the loans, the buyer announced a lack of funds and cancelled the program. As a result, the bank has had to change its student loan policy.

WSC's Kay agreed that high interest rates were the major blame for the problem. However, he added that economic forecasters say interest rates will begin to decline in from 60 to 90 days and money once again will become more available.

"Until about three weeks ago we had no problem," Kay said. When the national prime lending rate hit 15 percent, then money tightened up and student loans became more difficult to get.

THERE WAS some talk by one state organization to issue 40 million in bonds to buy loans. However, that has "gone by the wayside," Kay said.

Despite the sudden pinch for student loan money, Kay said he "doesn't know of any student that has had to or will have to drop out of school" because of financial problems. Several students who have had problems getting money here, have turned to their hometown banks for assistance, he said.

The bank spokesman said his bank has not sold any loans to the outside organizations. Students are allowed up to 2,500 for each academic year, and cannot receive more than $7,500 during a college career.

STUDENTS BORROWING through the bank have a grace period of one year before an interest rate of 7 percent is added. The federal government picks up the remainder of the interest rate and picks up the entire amount the first year. Students are given up to 10 years to repay the loan.

The Student Assistance Council says people believe the myth that all scholarships and grants are based only on a student's financial need, class standing or test scores.

Millions of dollars in aid are available to people regardless of need or academic excellence, the SAC spokesman said. Total dollars available to students for college are some $500 million, he explained.

Substantial amounts of money are hidden behind strange eligibility requirements, little known trust funds, public and private grants, etc., he said. Since a student must apply to be considered, the trick is to find out about these funds. Matching scholarship sources to qualified individuals is not a job for amateurs, as a computer is required, he continued. Even student counselors can't know more than a fraction of the more than 250,000 available source items. The local bank spokesman agreed, saying there no longer are any restrictions on income for a student to get a loan.

SCHOLARSHIP Search, an arm of the Student Assistance Council, provides personalized research by computer that matches a student's eligibility factors to sources of funds for college which they are qualified to receive. The search guarantees to identify specific financial sources of "potential" funds for the subscribing student.

To help a student find out if he or she is qualified for a certain scholarship or grant, several questions should be considered before inquiring.

Have you participated in extra-curricular activities in school or outside of school?

Have you decided on a particular career or occupation? (Many scholarships are based on the student's interest in a major course of study or future occupation.)

ARE YOU or your parents affiliated with any union, religious or fraternal organization, community or professional group?

Were either of your parents in the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines or Coast Guard? Persons interested in finding out about available funding for higher education should write Student Assistance Council of America, Suite 627M, 1775 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10019.

State Tax Collections Suspended

CAPITOL NEWS
By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

As expected, Gov. Charles Thone has announced that the state tax commissioner will suspend collection of state income taxes during December.

In making the announcement, Thone said the move will put between 16 million and $17 million into the pockets of taxpayers "during this time when rumors of recession abound and there is such great economic uncertainty."

The governor reiterated the "tax holiday" was declared because of substantial over-withholding of income taxes by the state government. The state withholding is pegged to federal withholding rates which have been excessive because of the way the Internal Revenue Service interpreted the 1978 Federal Revenue Act.

Declaration of the moratorium triggered suggestions from two state senators for an investigation into the propriety of the governor's action.

According to Sens. Steve Fowler of Lincoln and John DeCamp of Neligh, the moratorium could become what they called "an unfortunate precedent affecting the laws and people of this state." The two lawmakers explained the moratorium may have violated the intent of the Legislature when it provided for regulatory authority in implementation of the tax laws.

Sen. Ralph Kelly of Grand Island, to whom Fowler and DeCamp addressed their concern, said the Legislature's Administrative Rules and Regulations Review Committee of which he is chairman would hold a meeting so other members of the panel could be apprised of the legal aspects of the situation.

DeCamp and Fowler questioned in particular the governor's waiving of a hearing before placing the moratorium into effect.

The state tax commissioner promulgates the rules and regulations under which tax collections are carried out. Any changes in the rules and regulations are supposed to have a public hearing unless waived in writing by the governor. Fowler and DeCamp said the statutory provision for the waiver includes the words "for good cause shown."

The two legislators said those words suggest a legal step of some kind may be necessary before a moratorium could be placed into effect without a public hearing.

Thone and Tax Commissioner Fred Herrington thought there would not be enough time for a hearing. If the moratorium was to become effective for December.

DeCamp said the commission is empowered to suspend rules or regulations not consistent or responsive to state law which allowed for their creation. But the committee must hold a public hearing and give the state agency involved 30 days to revise or repeal the rule or regulation being questioned.

In their letter to Kelly, DeCamp and Fowler said: "It appears to us that the entire existence, powers and justification for the Administrative Rules and Regulations Committee, which is the instrument of legislative oversight of the regulatory implementation of statutes, is challenged by the governor's proposed procedures in amending this regulation."

By the time this appears in print, the Kelly committee will have met to discuss the situation.

By that time the state Board of Equalization will also have met to set the tax rates for next year. Thone announced two days before the meeting of the board, which he chairs, that he will propose cutting the state income tax rate from 18 to 17 percent of a taxpayer's federal income tax liability.

Seek 15 percent raise
The Nebraska Association of Public Employees has requested a 15 percent pay boost for state workers.

Cecil Park, association board chairman, said "anything less couldn't be considered a respectable offer in light of the salary increases Gov. Charles Thone gave his agency heads."

Major agency chiefs were given nearly a 13 percent hike between the time Thone took office in January and July of this year. Rank-and-file state employees averaged 7 percent increases.

NAPE said Thone's defense of the raises for department heads insulted the intelligence of the remainder of the state work force. Thone said the higher raises for state executives were possible because the increased salaries involved a comparatively small amount of money.

NAPE also said the state workers' increase of 7 percent this year was 1.5 percent what the state Personnel Department had proposed. The department has declined to make a firm recommendation for next year. If it did recommend state employees be given a minimum of 5.5

percent to bring them closer to parity with private sector employees, plus an unspecified amount to help counter problems stemming from inflation.

Rules on school case

The state Supreme Court recently ruled a state law relating to compulsory school attendance and another statute regarding neglect of children should not be construed as dealing with the same subject matter.

The statement was in an opinion which upheld a Lincoln County District Court decision. In that case District Judge Keith Windrum said the parents of 14-year-old Leslie Sue Rice of Wallace had not been guilty of child neglect because they took her out of the public schools and continued her education in the Rice Christian Academy. Leslie Sue was the only student in the school, which was set up in the Rice home with the father as headmaster and the mother, who had only a semester of college, as the teacher.

Whether the Rice couple violated the state's compulsory school attendance law in doing what they did was not a question that was answered in the district and supreme court decisions.

The state didn't raise that point, choosing instead to argue that the parental action amounted to neglect of the child's well-being.

The Lincoln County Court, sitting as a juvenile court, agreed and ordered that Leslie Sue start attending a state-approved school.

Windrum overruled the juvenile court and noted a different law applies to cases that involve failure of parents to comply with school attendance requirements.

The Supreme Court concurred, saying the law the state was citing deals with parental actions that amount to neglect, abandonment or denial of care that could endanger the health, morals or well-being of a child.

The Rice girl's parents, Lesley and Dixie Rice, removed the girl from the public schools because they were not satisfied with the curriculum and textbooks because they were not religiously oriented.

The Supreme Court noted Leslie Sue was tested by a university professor of psychology who described the girl's education as "quite satisfactory." The court said another witness who qualified as an expert testified he found the subjects taught at the Rice Christian Academy were "comprehensive and adequate."

OUT OF OLD NEBRASKA

The machine age was making itself felt in Nebraska's range country in the first decade of this century, and motors began to replace draft animals. Home-grown entertainment was no longer sufficient to amuse the Nebraska Stockgrowers' Convention at Alliance in June, 1912.

Besides the usual cow-pony races, broncho riding, cow riding, and less strenuous women's events, officials scheduled auto races and the first appearance in Alliance of anything in the line of aeroplanes.

Aviator John D. Cooper brought his 60-horsepower Curtiss biplane to town to make flights on three days. His credentials were not published by the "Alliance Times" (see Nebraska State Historical Society files), but since he was pictured in his flight suit with U.S. Postmaster General Frank Hitchcock preparatory to flying sacks of mail it was assumed he was good. He did not disappoint the town:

"The first flight" occurred at about 5:30 o'clock in the morning and was a test flight to make ready for the exhibition flights later. He sailed about over the city, and many were the residents, who hearing the noise of the engine, put their heads out of windows in disabillite to take their first view of a birdman."

The first exhibition flight at the grounds occurred at 5:45 in the evening. Weather conditions were ideal, the wind blowing gently from the northeast. Cooper made two circuits of the grounds at a distance of five or six miles, sailing gracefully over the grandstand and alighted without difficulty. After a stay of about 10 minutes on the ground and inspecting the apparatus carefully, he again took to the air.

The first flight Mr. Cooper made he was in the air about 15 minutes, the second flight being about three minutes longer. During the minutes he was in the air he was traveling at an average rate of speed of 40 miles an hour. Owing to the light atmosphere here, Mr. Cooper experiences considerable difficulty in gaining a high altitude, and also finds the guiding of the machine rather ticklish business in making the turns, the atmospheric pressure being so light that he finds it necessary to make his turns much longer than would otherwise be necessary.

"He estimated the highest point reached yesterday at 1,200 feet from the ground, this being when he was some four or five miles northeast of the city."

Cooper had to decline requests to take passengers aloft, despite "some nice money offers." His plane, a "one-passenger" machine, carried only the pilot.

On each of the three evenings Cooper flew his plane: "Friday evening, he made two long and very successful flights, which were eagerly watched by many people. Saturday evening, somewhat later than the previous night, he made a flight which was the longest of any made here, making a circle or two of the city, thence going out over the sandhills east of here. While on this flight he estimated that at one time he reached an alavation of 3,000 feet."

About the car races the "Times" said: "(It is) safe to say that none of the other events except the flights aroused the enthusiasm of the crowds as did this event. Many of the races were contributed, and for those that were not, the purses were so small as to be entirely out of proportion to the amount offered for the horse races, when the amount of money invested and the risk involved was considered, and it is probable that automobile owners will ask better purses be offered for races in the future."

In a five-mile race for 30 hp. cars, first place was won by James Keeler, driving an Overland; second place to W.F. Kientop, driving an EMF; and third place to Lewis, driving a Carter Car. Another five-mile race was won by Riley of Oskosh in a 40 hp. Oakland; second by Keeler in a 30 hp. Overland Roadster; and third by W.F. Kientop in a 40 hp. Oakland roadster. In yet another five-mile race, Keeler and Kientop were one-two with E.L. Hishop taking third in a Marion touring car.

Still, most of the time was taken up with horse and cowboy events. Purses went as high as $125 in the one-mile dash won by Gold Nugget, DePriest Bros., of Mud Springs. The $500 cleared by the cattlemen at their races was added to the fall fair fund.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Barker wore a long double knit in powder blue, and the bridegroom's mother chose a floor-length dress of rust velour.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hale of Allen greeted the 65 guests who attended a wedding reception in the church basement following the ceremony. The guests were registered by Erma Johnson of Wayne, sister of the bride.

Got the Turkey?

What Next?

Everyone is getting in the spirit of Thanksgiving and the cook is checking over the grocery ads and rushing to buy the biggest, best and least expensive turkey. What next?

Cooking a turkey for the first time can be a harrowing experience. It's a large piece of meat and generally is 10 to 30 pounds, frozen.

Three Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources specialists have had some close encounters with the holiday birds and recognize some of the possible pitfalls.

Dr. Glenn Froning, extension poultry specialist, says that each pound of whole carcass turkey will serve one person. So if you're having the whole family over and about 16 people, you'll need about a 16-pound turkey. The larger birds may provide a little more meat per pound of whole carcass turkey, he added.

Unless you have purchased a fresh turkey, you'll probably be among the majority who have a frozen one. There are several ways to thaw a turkey. The first point here is to start thawing it in enough time.

One method of thawing involves wrapping the packaged turkey with newspaper and thawing overnight at room temperature — but make sure the bird is completely wrapped and never leave it uncovered. Another technique involves thawing a turkey in cold running water (never use warm water). If you're really in a rush, cook the bird from the frozen state by putting it in the oven at 325 degrees F for about an hour. Then remove the giblets and continue cooking.

Dr. Dan Bigbee, extension poultry specialist, says the best guide to a quality frozen turkey is the USDA grade shield. Look for the Grade "A" label with the USDA shield. Fresh dressed turkeys usually don't carry a USDA grade if purchased from a local farm or processor.

If you buy a fresh bird, look for the "E" — Bigbee said — Flething, Finish and Freedom from defects.

A well-meated bird (flething) will be wide across the front of the breast and carry that width well to the rear of the keel. Also, the musculing will stand above the edge of the keel bone. There are feather tracts on either side of the breast. The skin between these tracts should be filled with fat (finish) so the dark color of the flesh cannot be seen through the skin. A well dressed bird will not have cuts or tears in the skin, large bruises or broken or disjointed bones.

Froning and Teresa Shaffer, extension foods specialist, both have tips on cooking the bird. Serving a turkey that's completely done depends on several factors, including the amount of fat cover in the bird, and how cold it is when you begin to cook it. If it is still frozen or just barely thawed, it will take longer to cook than a completely thawed bird, Froning said.

Froning and Shaffer agree that using a meat thermometer is the best way to determine doneness. Any other techniques are rough estimates. The bird should be cooked to 180 degrees F with the thermometer inserted in the thick portion of the thigh. The deepest part of the breast should be 190 degrees F, Shaffer added.

Turkeys should be cooked slowly at an oven temperature of 325 degrees F in either a deep or shallow pan. Shaffer said the shallow pan is coming into wide use but a V rack should be included if it is used. A deep pan requires slightly longer cooking times to get the thighs done and usually requires a cover or foil tent during part of the time to get uniform breast and thigh doneness.

Both Froning and Shaffer recommended not stuffing the turkey. Cook the stuffing in a separate pan and drizzle it with turkey juices to give it the same flavor as it has when cooked in the turkey. The reason for cooking the stuffing separately, Froning says, is that the turkey may be overcooked before the stuffing is adequately cooked, which may cause poor stuffing and a possibility of food poisoning.

Shaffer says cooking time may be speeded up with oven film covering the turkey, while a foil tent slows down the cooking somewhat. Following is a rough time chart of cooking times, based on using thawed turkeys baked in conventional gas or electric ovens at 325 degrees F.

Weight	Approximate Cooking Time
8 lbs.	3 hours
12 lbs.	3 1/2 hours
16 lbs.	5 1/2 hours

Ladies Elect Officers

New officers were elected when the Grace Lutheran Ladies Aid met Nov. 14 at the church.

Mrs. Marvin Victor was elected to the president's office. Other newly elected officers are Mrs. Robert Thomsen, first vice president; Mrs. Tom Mendenhall, second vice president; Mrs. Ronald Penlerick, secretary; and Mrs. Marilyn Koch, treasurer.

Hostesses for the November meeting were Mrs. Esther Stoltenberg, Mrs. Alvin Temme and Mrs. Fritz Temme. Forty-seven members and a guest, Mrs. Gilbert Dangberg, attended.

Mrs. Robert Thomsen had opening devotions on Thanksgiving. Mrs. Alan Thomsen had prayer, followed with group singing of "We Praise Thee O God."

It was announced that five new double knit tablecloths have been made for the church. One of the tablecloths was on display at the meeting.

Three members of the Ladies Aid traveled to the Wakefield Health Care Center recently to honor the 91st birthday of Mrs. Bertha Utecht. Mrs. Utecht, who has been a member of the Aid over 50 years, was presented with a plaque and a straw flower arrangement. Making the presentation was Mrs. Harold Ekberg, accompanied by Mrs. Henry Retfwisch and Mrs. Ron Penlerick. Mrs. Mendenhall presented the topic at the November meeting, entitled "My Time, My Task." Seated at the birthday table were Mrs. Marilyn Koch, Mrs. George Reuter and Mrs. Fredrick Janke.

The Ladies Aid is planning a 12:30 p.m. carry-in dinner for the Dec. 12 meeting. Each member is asked to bring one dozen cookies to pack for shut-ins. The free will offering will go to Camp Luther.

Hostesses for the December meeting will be Mrs. Gus Stuthmann, Mrs. Bob Thomsen, Mrs. Alan Thomsen and Mrs. Melvin Utecht.

The largest Catholic church in the United States and the seventh largest church in the world is the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington, D.C. Built for the whole Catholic community of the U.S., its architecture, sculpture, windows, inscriptions, mosaics, even its smallest ornaments, are primarily the fruit of American imagination, skill, contributions and devotion.

Missouri Tourney Action-

Lady Wildcats Grab Third Place

Wayne State's Lady Wildcats captured third place in the Missouri Western State College Tip-off Tournament last Friday and Saturday in St. Joseph, Mo. The Cats lost in the opening round to Murray State 92-78 but rebounded on Saturday in the consolation game and defeated William Jewell College 67-60.

Against Murray State, the Lady Wildcats trailed by as much as 10 points early in the game before they roared back to grab a 47-44 halftime lead. WSC extended its lead to 10 points about halfway through the final period before the Murray women put together a furious rally that carried them to the 14 point victory. Lynne Larson paced the Lady Cats with 16 points on 7 of 16 shots from the floor and two free throws.

In the consolation game WSC jumped to an 8-0 lead and never looked back. The Lady Wildcats held a 48-20 halftime margin.

William Jewell made the game interesting in the end, however, as they pulled within seven points thanks to a stingy pressing defense. Lori Erwin, last year's leading scorer, paced the Lady Cats with 24 points on the strength of 9 of 21 field goals. WSC head coach Helen Carroll said she felt her team had a mental let-down in the second half of both contests.

"I think it was a good lesson for the girls to learn," she said

"If you're not ready to play ball every minute then any team can come back and beat you."

The Lady Wildcats take their 1-1 record on the road this week as they traveled to Sioux City for a game against Briar Cliff College Tuesday and were on to the Midland Turkey Tournament in Fremont, Friday and Saturday.

A 7 p.m. tip-off is scheduled in Sioux City Tuesday as the Lady Wildcats meet the Briar Cliff women in the Jackson Career Education Building. Coach Carroll indicated that all 14 players could see action against Briar Cliff.

"Since their volleyball girls are going to nationals they will be playing with a limited squad," she commented. "So, what I really hope to see is that game is a lot of action from all 14 of our girls."

The Midland Turkey Tournament will provide the Lady Cats with their first look at a Central States Intercollegiate Conference (CSIC) opponent. CSIC foe Fort Hays State will meet Northwest Missouri State at 8 p.m. Friday following the WSC Midland Lutheran contest at 6 p.m. The winners from both games advance to the championship game at 8 p.m. Saturday while the losers meet in a consolation game at 6 p.m.

Last year Midland handily defeated Wayne State both times the two teams met. The Warriors downed WSC 81-48 and 85-61. This year Cat mentor Carroll said she feels her team can win.

"They (Midland) have a lot of new freshmen in this year," she said. "I really believe that we can get them. We're going to have to play all 40 minutes tougher than we did this last weekend but I believe the girls realize that. We have to go with a couple of adjustments on our set-up offense and on our zone defense and we should be ready to play them."

Wayne State Men, Women Are Both Tabbed Seventh

The Central States Intercollegiate Conference announced the results of their annual pre-season coaches' basketball poll Monday, Nov. 12 at a CSIC media luncheon in Topeka, Kan. Kearney State and Emporia State were selected as pre-season favorites to win the men's and women's titles respectively. Wayne State College was picked seventh in both polls.

Defending conference co-champion Kearney State should be tough to stop in 1979-80. The Kearney men were 25-9 last year and earned their third straight trip to the NAIA National Tournament in Kansas City. Kearney cage coach Jerry Hueser said his team should be a national contender again this year.

"Our players have been defeated by the national champ the last two years there," he commented. "Right now they think they are going to win the national championship."

WSC head men's basketball coach Bill Ivey said he feels his team is better than their seventh place predicted finish.

"I have fine young men on the basketball team and I believe in them," he said. "Therefore I don't believe we are going to finish seventh."

The Wildcats are placing a lot of their hopes on the play of North Carolina duo Zake Lorick and Willie Summers. The two backcourt performers should be at the front of WSC's fast breaking offense all season.

Other CSIC schools and their predicted conference finish were: (2) Missouri Western, (3) Missouri Southern, (4) Washburn, (5) Fort Hays State, (6) Pittsburg State and (8) Emporia State.

The Emporia State women should be a national power again in 1979-80. Last year Emporia State finished with a 25-7 overall record, captured the CSIC championship with a 13-1 mark, the Kansas AIAW championship, the AIAW Region VI championship and competed in the AIAW national small college tournament. Emporia returns four starters including 6-0 center Judy Becker and 5-10 forward Laura Schroer, both juniors. Only one letter-winner was lost off last year's Lady Hornet squad.

In contrast Wayne State's women are hoping to rebuild after a disappointing 6-25 record last year. The Lady Wildcats will be relying heavily on the play of four freshmen, Lisa Curtis and Lisa Draper from Council Bluffs, Iowa; Lori Cadwell, Dallas Center, Iowa and Debra Emanuel, North Bend.

Top returning starters for the Lady Wildcats are guards Kari and Lori Erwin of Concord and 6-0 center Julie Petronis, Sioux City, Iowa.

Other CSIC women's teams and their predicted conference finished were: (2) Missouri Southern (coached by former Wayne State mentor G. I. Willoughby), (3) Kearney State, (4) Fort Hays State, (5) Pittsburg State, (6) Missouri Western and (8) Washburn.

Dunklau, Johnson, Mitchell Honored

Three Wayne High School football players were named to the 1979 West Husker Conference All-Conference team announced last Tuesday evening. Randy Dunklau, Rick Johnson and Dan Mitchell were all first team selections. No Wayne players were named honorable mention.

Dunklau and Johnson are repeat selections from last year's team while Mitchell was named honorable mention last year. The three Wayne athletes join 22 other players from Emerson, Hubbard, Columbus Lakeview, Hartington CC, West Point CC, Madison and Wisner-Pilger.

from Lakeview, was named this year's player of the year. Wayne's Brad Emry was co-winner of the award last year. This year's coach of the year award was presented to Don Schmidt of Lakeview, a team which reached the Class B State playoff semifinals.

Dunklau was named as linebacker, Johnson as defensive end and Mitchell as offensive tackle. All are seniors.

Men Open Recreation Play Next Week

Men's Recreation basketball is scheduled to begin in Wayne during the last week of November.

The adult league will again be divided into three age divisions. The A league, for men ages 19 through 25, won't open its season until Monday, Dec. 3 because the city auditorium will be rented Monday, Nov. 26. High school graduates who are not yet 19 are still eligible.

The B league, for ages 26 through 30, will begin on Tuesday, Nov. 27 and the C league, for ages 30 and over, will start Wednesday, Nov. 28.

Players should bring equipment with them on the opening nights and be ready to play. Persons who did not play in any league last year should meet at 7 p.m. on their respective night. A second session will begin at 8:30 p.m. Overin will notify people to play in the later session. If a person is not notified, he should attend the opening session.

Anyone who cannot attend the leagues during the week of the 26th or the week of Dec. 3, should contact Overin, so he can place them on a team.

Eligible players include men from Wayne and the surrounding rural areas. College students are not eligible unless they are graduates of Wayne High School or played in the league last year.

Several changes have been made in the basketball league this season. Teams will practice only two weeks before the season actually begins and will have a two-week layoff during Christmas and New Year's holidays.

Basketball season will end in the last week of March this year and the tournament at the end of the season will be single elimination instead of double.

Summers, Rhoda Named Wayne State Co-Captains

Willie Summers of Hamlet, N.C., and Wattie Rhoda, Elizabethtown, N.C., have been named co-captains of the Wayne State College basketball team for 1979-80.

Summers is a 5-11 senior guard who averaged 12.3 points per game last year. At 6-5, 210 pounds, senior center Rhoda is one of the Wildcats' biggest players. Last year the East Bladen High School product was WSC's second leading scorer with a 13.35 average despite having missed three games due to injury.

Rhoda and Summers are two of five North Carolina natives that dot the Wildcat roster. Head coach Bill Ivey is also originally from North Carolina.

Wayne State opens its regular season schedule Nov. 26 with a home match-up against District II opponent Bellevue College. The Wildcats have already dropped an exhibition game to the Uruguay Olympic Team 74-61, Nov. 9 in Wayne.

G & P Land And Water Grant Deadline Extended

The Game and Parks Commission announced that it is extending the deadline for submission of Land and Water Conservation Fund grant applications. Historically, the Commission has closed the application period on Dec. 31 for new projects to be considered the following spring and funded during the next fiscal year.

Del Whiteley, Chief of the Commission's Planning and Programming Division, said the new deadline for applications to be funded in fiscal year 1981 will be moved ahead to June 30, 1980. The June 30 deadline will remain in effect for future years.

Whiteley said the change was prompted by Congressional delays in appropriating federal funds for the program and inability of the Commission to act on the applications until funds are appropriated by the Congress.

Appropriations have not yet been made for the Land and Water Conservation Fund program for fiscal year 1980, although the Commission selected project applications to be funded more than six months ago. Municipalities are the primary applicants for these outdoor recreation grants, which provide 50 percent federal plus, in most cases, 25 percent state funds for local park and recreation improvements.

The Land and Water Conservation Fund is in its 15th consecutive year and is administered on the federal level by the Heritage Conservation and Recreation Service, Department of Interior.

Randy's Recap

According to Randy Hascall

FOOTBALL SEASON boils down to its final week of play this Saturday for most major colleges and universities and the bowl picture should be somewhat clearer after those games. As everyone knows, the Nebraska Oklahoma winner gets to play Florida State in the Orange Bowl.

The Floridians are having a fine year and should be worthy opponents for either of the Big Eight powers. In fact, the Big Eight champion might have trouble getting mentally ready for Florida State. Nebraska could be mentally ready to play Alabama in a day. But not this year.

The Big Eight (or perhaps Big Two is a better term this year) runnerup will play in the Cotton Bowl against the Southwest Conference champion. And beware! That conference plays high caliber football and proved itself as the most powerful conference in the country this season. Let's hope that those cotton pickin' Oklahomans get to play Arkansas while the Big Red is basking in the sun at Miami.

Unfortunately for the Huskers, they could beat Oklahoma and Florida (two tough major accomplishments) and still not win the national championship. However, if they win both games the Nebraska fans will know who is number one.

IF ALABAMA wins its game against Auburn, the Crimson Tide will be playing in the Sugar Bowl against another Southwest Conference team. If they want to finish as national champs they must win both games. Personally, I don't think they can beat Texas or Arkansas.

Ohio State, the Big Ten champion, gets a trip to the Rose Bowl, probably to play against Southern Cal. The Trojans should be able to handle UCLA this weekend and earn their berth. No matter who represents the Pac Ten, USC or Washington, I'll be cheering for that team. If Ohio State gets knocked off that eliminates another title contender.

The pessimistic point is that if USC should win convincingly over UCLA and Ohio State, they also have a shot at the national championship. Although the Trojans tied a weak Stanford team, they are still a favorite of many voters in the polls, especially since they were preseason poll favorites.

THE BIG EIGHT CONFERENCE has only two bowl representatives this season while the Big Ten and Southwest conferences have four teams each. Ohio State, Michigan, Purdue and Indiana will represent the Big Ten while Texas, Arkansas, Houston and Baylor will play for the Southwest.

Other than the big four bowl games (Orange, Cotton, Rose and Sugar), there are 11 minor bowl games scattered across the nation.

There aren't even enough decent teams to be distributed to the minor bowls this season. Temple, McNeese State, Syracuse and Tulane aren't exactly common everyday football powers. Yet those teams will be playing in bowl games this season. Also competing in various bowls will be Penn State, Wake Forest, North Carolina, South Carolina, Clemson, Tennessee and Louisiana State. All of these teams have either gotten clobbered by an opponent or lost games while playing a weak schedule.

ONE FINAL NOTE on collegiate football: Charles White of Southern Cal will win the Heisman Trophy. Billy Sims, last year's winner, has had a good season but isn't deserving of another Heisman. Even 282 yards rushing against Missouri doesn't qualify him for that honor.

Tough Schedule, Inconsistency Led To Laurel's 3-6 Season

The Laurel Bears had their ups and downs this past football season, finishing the year with a 3-6 record with a tough schedule putting extra blemishes on their record.

A total of 25 athletes lettered during the campaign which saw the Bears win three straight games after losing their first three of the year.

Offensively, Laurel relied much on the rushing of Mark McCorkindale who carried the ball 142 times for 620 yards. Shannon Hopkins was the second leading rusher with 326 yards in 68 carries. Dennis Anderson complemented the rushing game with 244 yards in 69 carries.

Clark Maxon and Joe Olsen shared most of the passing duties compiling 448 yards in the air. Maxon completed 22 passes in 59 attempts for 246 yards and Olsen attempted 41 passes for 14 completions and 202 yards.

The leading receiver for the Bears was Jamie Johnson who made 19 receptions for 283 yards. Bryan Buss made 11 catches for 109 yards and Steve Stark gained 63 yards by air to account for most of the other passing yardage.

Leading scorers were Jamie Johnson with 30 points on six touchdowns, Mark McCorkindale with 20 points and Dennis Anderson and Clark Maxon with 12 points each.

Defensively, the Bears had 12 players with at least 15 unassisted and 17 assisted tackles. Jamie Johnson made 38 unassisted tackles and 26 assists to lead the way. He also recovered three fumbles and made four interceptions. Lon Swanson was right behind with 37 solo tackles and 23 assists.

Other defensive standouts include: Steve Stark, Bryan Buss, Arnie Christensen, Jeff Anderson, Clark Maxon, Scott Norvell, Randy Martinson, Dennis Anderson, Todd Twiford and Dan Luhr.

Onward, Upward

CONSTRUCTION of the new Thies-Brudigan Inc. (International Harvester) building east on U.S. 35 is well underway with projected completion sometime in February. Boasting a total area of nearly 18,000 square feet, the facility will include a shop area of 60 x 150 and an office and parts display area of 90 x 80. In addition, there will be a dock area and receiving room. The new plant will be more than double the size of the current building which is 8,000 square feet. A spokesman for Thies-Brudigan said the facility will provide better service since the present facility is lacking in adequate space. Two persons in the sales department will be added and four in the shop area. In all, there is a total of 23 acres for display of equipment.

Ag Exports Reach High

U.S. agricultural exports reached a record high of $32 billion during fiscal year 1979, Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland has announced.

He said that the export total for the fiscal year which ended Sept. 30 was up $4.7 billion, or 17 percent, from fiscal year 1978 and record high for the tenth straight year. At the same time, he noted substantial gains in export volume for such key items as feed grains and soybeans and products.

Bergland also noted that the value of agricultural imports for the year rose by about $2.3 billion to $16.2 billion, which means that U.S. agricultural exports were $15.8 billion greater than imports.

"That represents a $15.8 billion positive contribution to this nation's total balance of trade, which is vital to the strength of the dollar," he said. "It's a record high, but this contribution by agricultural trade has exceeded $10 billion for the past six fiscal years."

The figures, released today, show export values increased for all commodity categories except dairy. Leading value gainers were grain and feeds, valued at $13.6 billion, $1.9 billion more than last year, and oilseeds and products at $8.7 billion, up $1.2 billion.

The volume of feed grain exports rose by four million tons, reaching 59.5 million, and soybeans and products shipments increased by 1.2 million tons to 27.3 million. Wheat and flour exports declined slightly to 32.2 million tons, off 600,000 from fiscal 1978.

Wood heating has gained popularity with cooperators of the Small Farm Energy Project as the cost of energy rises. Although many of these farm families never discontinued wood heating after gas and oil first came into use years ago. A variety of equipment is used in wood heating, including some home-built versions.

Wood heating safety
An important aspect of wood heating is that it requires specific safety procedures to avoid serious fires. Chimney fires can be avoided if chimneys are kept clean of soot and creosote. The best way to accomplish this is to burn only dry wood — never green, wet wood — and to sweep the chimney periodically. A chimney should have no cracks and it should be lined.

Lenox Quartet Scheduled Here

The Lenox Quartet, a musical ensemble that has performed in concert, on television and on radio and recordings throughout the United States and abroad, will perform at 8 p.m. Monday, Nov. 26, in Ramsey Theatre of Wayne State College.

The group, founded in 1958, consists of four accomplished musicians, including Peter Marsh, a violinist who has studied with Hans Letz, Scott Willis, Emanuel Zellin and Eva Heinitz. He has received Fromm Fellowships for the performance of contemporary music at Tanglewood and Princeton and is currently Professor of Violin and Chamber Music at Ithaca College, N.Y.

Warwick Lister is also a violinist with the quartet. His credits include study at the Eastman School of Music and Boston University and study under Millard Taylor, Raphael range according to the quality of construction and size of the wood heater. In addition, other accessories will be required for handling wood, including saws and splitting equipment. As with other types of alternative energy used in space heating, insulation of the home is important. Tax credits have been considered for wood heating equipment as with solar devices, but the date few credits are available for wood heaters.

A user of wood has a responsibility of replenishing trees so that wood can indeed be a renewable form of energy. A long term supply in the plains region can only be assured if the users of wood make sure that more trees are planted.

A variety of wood equipment
Today, there are literally a hundred different makes and models available on the market. Probably the most popular innovation among Energy Project cooperators are the supplemental wood heating stoves which make use of existing gas or oil furnace air ducts and chimney. When the fire dies down the regular gas or oil furnace will provide the heat, and therefore the wood furnace doesn't completely replace the existing furnace.

Another innovation that has become popular is the construction of wood stove from barrels or other materials. Martin Kleinschmit, an Energy Project cooperator, solved his shop heating problems by using two 50-gallon hot water tanks. He placed them one on top of each other using the bottom tank for the fire box and the top one as a heat exchanger. The same can be done with barrels.

Fireplaces generally have low efficiencies in providing heat to the home. Many fireplaces may remove more heat from the home than is provided for space heating, due to the draft created. Newer designs of fire places incorporate improved combustion efficiencies. As with other wood heaters, consideration should be given to utilizing air from outside the house for combustion air, therefore lowering the draw on the heated interior air.

Wood water heating
Commercial wood heating devices are also available for heating water with wood. In addition, various ideas have been utilized by the "do-it-yourself" enthusiasts, including wrapping coils of tubing carrying water around the flue or in the firebox of the wood heater. With a tank separate from the conventional water heater, the wood water heater can function on the convection or "gravity" principle, if the tank is located above the wood heater.

More information
A variety of plans, books and other resources are available for constructing wood stoves and for utilizing wood as a fuel. For more details, write the Energy Project at Box 736, Hartington, 68739. Ask for Project Focus No. 6. Cost is 25 cents.

Soybean Price Differences Confusing

The difference between soybean prices at the local elevator and on the Chicago futures market is around $1 a bushel these days, so what's the best course of action for Nebraska producers with beans to sell?

Lynn Lutgen, extension economist in the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, said the difference between the local price and the futures price — called the basis — has been caused in part by transportation problems. "When the transportation situation eases, we can expect the basis to narrow to 50 to 75 cents," he said.

A "harvest slump" has also depressed prices offered for beans now, Lutgen said, because soybean production has increased 18 percent over last year. He noted that U.S. Department of Agriculture reports show production of five major oilseed crops (sunflower, flax, cotton, peanuts, in addition to soybeans) is up 20 percent over last year, which also is depressing prices.

Producers need to also keep in mind other factors influencing supply and demand for soybeans, Lutgen said. Demand for soybean meal and other bean products remains strong, he said, and right now, "American producers are the only major exporters with beans to sell until South America comes into the market next spring." Still, the South American influence could be felt as early as January, as reports of weather and yield prospects there start to come in.

Lutgen added that lower prices create more exports and therefore a larger quantity of demand, which helps to hold prices or put slight upward pressure on prices.

Carryover stocks of soybeans, currently at about 173 million bushels, could double by next year's Sept. 1 reporting date, he said. But at the same time, domestic crushing is ahead of last year and beans are disappearing at a faster rate than in '78, he added.

So, what should Nebraska producers do with their beans? Answers depend on how producers view the situation and outlook, Lutgen said. Recognizing that each farm situation is different, he suggested three examples:

"If the current price looks good to a producer, he may want to sell now. But he needs to keep in mind we normally have a harvest pressure situation as we do now. This producer might compare fall and spring prices and he might want to use the futures market or a forward cash contract and deliver the beans later."

A second producer — one with bills to pay — who's undecided or feels prices should remain strong and possibly improve, might sell part of his crop now and use the futures market or forward cash contracts for the rest, Lutgen said. "Producers need to keep storage costs in mind if they sell for future delivery," he added.

A third producer who isn't under the gun to sell because of bills coming due, might sell his crop on the cash market if intervals if he feels demand will remain strong or become stronger, the economist said.

Lutgen suggested a simple calculation which might help farmers in making selling decisions. If the current local selling price is $5.40 per bushel and the May futures price is $7.05 per bushel, a producer might calculate like this: From the $7.05 per bushel, subtract 60 cents to account for the narrowing of the basis as transportation eases; subtract 10 cents for handling charges; then subtract 35 to 40 cents to cover storage and interest costs. This leaves a price of around $6. If the producer likes the price, he might consider forward pricing his beans, Lutgen concluded.

PCB Problem Topic At Poultry Meeting

The "PCB Problem" confronting livestock and poultry producers will be one of the prime topics for discussion at the annual meeting of the Nebraska Poultry Industries of the Holiday Inn in Columbus Dec. 5-6.

PCB is a chemical compound which contaminates feedstuffs and is toxic in the food chain. Because of the human health consideration, meat or milk animals (and egg layers) which have consumed PCB-contaminated feed are ordered destroyed, at a cost of millions to affected producers.

PCB's are widely used as fire retardants, heat transfer fluids, lubricants and for other chemical uses, and have been called "the most widespread chemical contaminant known to man." Between 1930 and 1970, more than a billion pounds of PCB's were manufactured. Three characteristics of this chemical substance are of particular concern to the food industry: It is fat soluble, extremely toxic and not biodegradable.

Dr. Earl Gleaves, Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources extension poultryman, will moderate a panel including Dr. S. H. Grettebeck, Dawes Laboratories, Burlington, Wis. and Dr. Norman Schneider, veterinary toxicologist, IANR Department of Veterinary Science.

Other speakers during the two-day meeting will include:

Dr. Emmett McCune, University of Missouri-Columbia College of Veterinary Medicine, on poultry disease problems.

Dr. Dan Bigbee, IANR extension-poultry specialist, on Nebraska's poultry youth program.

Lee Campbell, Poultry & Egg Institute of America, Arlington, Va., "The PEIA Washington Hotline."

Dan Gardner, Millton G. Waldbaum Co., Wakefield, on "World's Food Fair" at Cologne, Germany, at the annual banquet the night of Dec. 6.

During the convention, Nebraska Poultry Industries and its component organizations will elect new officers and conduct other business.

Firewood

Firewood has more value for home use than commonly thought. When compared with other heat sources, a standard cord of dry, dense hardwood provides as much as one ton of hard coal, 165-200 gallons of fuel oil or 24,000 cubic feet of natural gas.

The presence of substances such as oil, resins in wood has a tendency to change heating values for various woods. For example, resinous woods such as pine, larch, and spruce have a higher heat value per pound than many of the non-resinous woods such as hickory.

Heat value can be increased if the firewood is cut early in the year and given ample time to dry. Any excess water that may be present in the wood will reduce the amount of available heat. A portion of the total heat must be used to evaporate the excess water during burnage. A standard cord of freshly cut green firewood will yield about 80 percent of the available heat of a standard cord of properly seasoned firewood.

Care of Amaryllis

Amaryllis can be flowered indoors from January through April. They should be placed in bright light, which should include at least four hours of direct sunlight each day. The optimum day temperature is around 70-75 degrees F. with night temperatures at 60-65 degrees. The soil should be kept uniformly moist, but not wet. Very often the flowering stalk appears first, which is then followed by the strap-like leaves. The blooms generally last three to four days, opening in succession, therefore providing continuous color for more than a week.

The amaryllis resents much root disturbance. It is common practice to grow it for relatively long periods in the same pot or at least one of the same size. If the plant needs a larger pot, after blooming is a good time to make the shift. The soil mixture should be well-drained. Do not allow the roots to dry during transplanting. Pot with one-half of the bulb above the soil to reduce early flowering.

Red Winter Wheat Program Affected by Funding Cuts

The internationally known and respected Nebraska hard red winter wheat breeding program may be in serious jeopardy because of eroding support from key funding sources.

This concern was emphasized strongly in a talk delivered by Dr. Virgil A. Johnson, north central regional wheat research leader, Agricultural Research (AR), U.S. Department of Agriculture, at a meeting of the Nebraska Council on Public Relations for Agriculture here.

Johnson, one of the key members of the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources wheat team, noted that a 13-year continuous contract with the Agency for International Development (AID), U.S. Department of State, which has resulted in the development of an international winter wheat evaluation network, will expire on Dec. 31 of this year.

A temporary reprieve to the end of work now currently being financed by AID is coming from the Science and Education Administration of USDA, which has provided funds of a temporary basis to permit continuation of wheat protein research and the international wheat evaluation network, Johnson disclosed.

The network is important, not only in screening wheat varieties produced worldwide to identify superior varieties for the continuing effort to meet world food needs, but also in "providing enormous visibility" for the Nebraska wheat research program, Johnson stressed.

Johnson said he is most concerned with what he perceives as "complacency among wheat producers and processors about our wheat research program," a complacency which he says "may even extend to some of our own university administrators."

He warned of the dangers of an assumption that "because we have had for many years and have now good research here at the university, there is little need for concern about the future."

"The need for vigorous promotion of a strong continuing program of research is as great today as it was 25 years ago," Johnson stated. "Good research doesn't just happen, nor does it continue of its own momentum."

he declared. The help from all segments of the Nebraska wheat industry will be required to keep the program rolling, he said.

The researcher observed that "contract and grant funds are fine until they end (such as in the case of the AID contract supporting in-depth study of wheat protein and amino acid composition) and frequently painful adjustments must be made."

Firm funding or so-called "hard money" identified in institutional operational budgets is the usual answer to continuity not provided by "soft money" provided through grants. And Johnson said "operational support for wheat research from the University (of Nebraska) continues to be dangerously inadequate."

Johnson praised the "research climate" for the wheat breeding program within the IANR Department of Agronomy and Nebraska Agricultural Experiment Station, citing administration, quality of faculty and supporting staff, support, cooperation, perspectives, sense of mission and effective communication as important contributing factors.

He also credited wheat industry support, especially Nebraska wheat growers, with key support which made possible establishment of the Nebraska Wheat Quality Laboratory, which he termed "perhaps the best small laboratory in the country." This and other projects within the wheat program were made possible by passage of state legislation in the 1950's for a 1/4 cent tax on wheat at the first point of sale to provide funds for wheat development, utilization and marketing.

Johnson pointed out that AID-supported research could not have taken place during the 13-year duration of the contract without funds from the Nebraska Wheat Committee to establish the lab and support initial protein research.

He acknowledged the new plant science greenhouse complex completed on the UNL East Campus in 1978 as "a tremendous facility," but reminded that "we (the wheat team) also were aware that our decision to construct low-cost temporary greenhouses 20 years ago has been critical to the success of our wheat program."

The 25-year modern era wheat breeding program centered at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln has resulted in average wheat yields in the state moving from 21.2 bushels per acre in 1965 to 34.2 bushels per acre in 1978, a 63 percent advance from the period 1940-1965 and a 96 percent increase from the 1921-1940 period. Nebraska developed varieties by 1969 comprised more than one half of the Kansas wheat acreage and nearly one-quarter of the entire U.S. wheat acreage.

A research objective in recent years has been to increase protein content in wheat to enhance the potential of bread wheats for improved human nutrition. The Nebraska-released Lancota variety has genetic potential for higher protein combined with excellent yield and field resistance to stem and leaf rust.

The joint efforts of Johnson and Dr. John Schmidt, IANR professor of agronomy, have produced 19 wheat varieties released to Nebraska producers. In the case of Centurk, seven other states joined Nebraska and the USDA in the release. While a number of other IANR professional and technical staff make up the overall wheat team, Johnson cited the contributions of Prof. Paul Mattern, cereal technologist in charge of the Wheat Quality Laboratory and Dr. Rosalind Morris, nationally recognized wheat cytogeneticist.

While wheat in Nebraska is a distant second to corn in acreage, and in 1978, had a total value of less than that of either corn, sorghum, or soybeans,

"world wide, wheat is indeed king," Johnson emphasized.

Together, wheat (360 million metric tons annually), and rice (320 million metric tons) are a dietary mainstay for nearly two thirds of the world's people.

"Nutritionally, wheat is an excellent food — much more so than many food faddists would have us believe," Johnson said. Persons who eat enough wheat to satisfy their caloric requirements also will be provided enough protein and essential amino acids for their nutritional needs. Wheat is inadequate as a sole protein source only for infants and lactating mothers, he said.

"If world population continues to increase at its present rate, there will, of necessity, be even greater reliance on wheat, rice and the other cereals to feed people, because they are more efficient producers of calories and protein than is livestock," Johnson concluded.

Sorghum Can't Be Withdrawn

Sorghum may no longer be withdrawn from the farmer-owned grain reserve without penalty since the national average market price is $4.03 per hundredweight, 21 cents below the $4.24 reserve release level, according to Ray Fitzgerald, executive vice president of Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC).

Fitzgerald said this decision was made following a review by CCC of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Prices report released here at 3 p.m. today.

Fitzgerald said reserve barley remains in call status and release will continue through Nov. 30 for wheat, corn, oats and rice. On Nov. 30 the national average market prices of these commodities will again be reviewed to determine their reserve status.

Fitzgerald said the national average market prices for the commodities remaining in release status (with the reserve release levels in parentheses) are:

Oats $1.30 per bushel ($1.29); rice $10.20 per hundredweight ($8.96); wheat $3.90 per bushel (3.29). Corn was released in October and therefore is not subject to review until Nov. 30.

Storage earnings will continue uninterrupted for sorghum. No storage payments will be made for barley, rice or wheat. For oats, storage will continue to be earned in Michigan, Nebraska, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Pennsylvania, South Dakota and Wisconsin where the market price is below the release level.

Data used by CCC in determining the release and call levels include five-day average prices as reported by the department's Agricultural Marketing Service which show prices bid by buyers at selected markets, as well as the month-end report of prices received by farmers issued today by the department's Economics, Statistics and Cooperatives Service. This end-of-month report shows the previous month's average price and the current mid-month price.

Pesticide Recertification

Pesticide applicators certified in the Industrial, Institutional, structural and public health category can participate in a recertification program here Dec. 13 to update their skills and maintain their certification to use restricted pesticides.

Emery W. Nelson, pesticide training coordinator in the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, said the day-long session is approved by the Environmental Protection Agency for recertification purposes. EPA representatives will attend to register participants. About 250 Nebraskans are certified in this category, Nelson said, and most will need to participate in a retraining session soon because they are approaching the end of their initial two-year federal certification.

While no formal examination is involved, applicators must attend and participate in an EPA-approved retraining session every two years, Nelson said.

Program content at the meeting will emphasize the safe use of pesticides, new pesticides and new pests, he said. Registration begins at 8 a.m. Dec. 13 in the Columbus Holiday Inn. The program begins at 9 a.m. and continues through 4 p.m., Nelson said.

The recertification training is sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service of IANR and is being held in conjunction with the annual meeting of the Nebraska Pest Control Operators.

In addition, team members recommended that Indonesia increase its investment in research and technology to underpin its current agricultural industry and its future development. "Much crop production is based on empirical knowledge or 'hand me down' experience from one generation to the next," Massengale said. More research in plant breeding to develop crops adapted to Indonesia's environmental conditions would be invaluable, the team said.

Massengale commented that Indonesia has a "pretty good structure in place" for its agricultural research, but more coordination between research, extension and teaching — as in Nebraska — would be helpful in getting needed information to the individual farmer.

Ag Research In Indonesia May Change

Agricultural research, training and extension programs in Indonesia may take a different direction in the next five years, thanks to a Nebraska agricultural leader and other prominent American agricultural scientists.

Dr. Martin A. Massengale, vice chancellor for Agriculture and Natural Resources, was one member of a five-man team asked by the State Department's Agency for International Development to advise Indonesia on its crop and research educational and extension programs. The team traveled to the island country for a two-week advisory trip and returned Oct. 4.

Rice is the country's principal food crop, Massengale said, in part because Indonesia has made a significant effort to improve rice production. Massengale and the AID team concentrated their review and recommendations on non-rice food crops — sorghum, corn, soybeans, sweet potatoes, cassava and peanuts.

Individual team members visited different islands and provinces to survey the country's agriculture. Massengale explained that Indonesia has a transmigration or resettlement program to move families from the principal island of Java — which has a population of five hundred to six hundred persons per square kilometer — to the other islands. Resettlement will allow more farming and more intensive farming, Massengale said. Although very successful in rice production, Indonesia is also a rice-importing country, he said, because of the large population. The country's oil production allows Indonesia to maintain a favorable balance of trade, he said, so foreign ag products can be purchased.

Crop growing conditions in Indonesia are diverse, the vice chancellor said. Uplands are concentrated more in the eastern islands and are mostly rain-fed while western island lowlands are more highly irrigated. Oil and rubber production are highly concentrated in Sumatra, he said. As with many developing countries, "they have a very big agriculture, very labor intensive. It's rare to see a machine but if you do, it will probably be a small backyard garden type. Bullocks pulling a small plow are still common," Massengale explained. Individual farms are very small, he added, averaging one-half to two hectares.

Because of its rice production, the country doesn't have significant soil erosion problems, he said. "So much of the land area is set up for rice with terracing and paddies which help to save the soil."

Indonesia is beginning its third five-year development program to improve its agricultural production, Massengale said. He and other team members recommended more diversification of food crops for variability in the diet and so Indonesia is not so vulnerable to insects and disease as it is by having a very large number of its acres devoted to rice. The country should also provide more training in its colleges and universities for students relative to non-rice food crops, the team would be invaluable, the team said.

Massengale commented that Indonesia has a "pretty good structure in place" for its agricultural research, but more coordination between research, extension and teaching — as in Nebraska — would be helpful in getting needed information to the individual farmer.

Exporting of Products Is Additional Potential

(Editor's Note: This is the fourth in a series of articles on small business in America. Small businesses face unusual challenges in all times and serious challenges in these days of inflation. Rick Budd, district director of the Small Business Administration, has provided these columns to help benefit the small business.)

Dear Mr. Budd:
The idea of exporting my small business products interests me from time to time. But I don't know where markets overseas exist for my products. I need information on how to finance, ship and sell. Can you help?

The idea that one's own small business has the world rather than one's own backyard or country as a potential marketplace is indeed foreign to many of the nation's small business people.

Like you, they don't know where to go for help in becoming more export-oriented. But the fact is there are many government services available to increase America's exports.

For starters, your local Small Business Administration (SBA) office has a new publication, "Export Marketing for Smaller Firms." The publication is free and can prove invaluable in helping you acquire the basic data necessary for you to decide whether or not exporting really is for your firm. The publication describes an organized method for deciding whether foreign markets warrant an investment of your company's resources, and furnishes a step-by-step approach so that you can isolate the most attractive markets for trade.

And if you've already gotten your feet wet in exporting, the publication gives a handy overview of pricing and promoting products and getting them to overseas buyers.

You will learn how to measure your firm's potential for export — the chances for success, what you have to know about your industry abroad and what your performance within the industry should be. Your marketing approach can be explored and you can make an evaluation of your firm's particular resources.

Just getting export data is a chore by itself. So the SBA publication tells what statistical data is available and where, and how to get help from outside experts and government agencies.

The publication discusses how to estimate the number of buyers in a foreign market; how you can evaluate competition; and how to price, promote and distribute your product.

Of course, the key to success in exporting is to make the right product available at the right time in the right market at a price which the buyer can afford and which will return an acceptable profit. It's the same criteria that is a must in your local and national marketplace.

Your local SBA office can provide assistance in directing you toward other sources of help. From time to time, SBA, the U.S. Commerce Department and other Federal agencies conduct export marketing symposia and workshops.

If you need information or assistance, please contact us at the SBA office in Omaha, at the Empire State Building, 19th and Farnam Streets. Telephone 221-4691.

SS Recipients Planning Trip Should Notify

People who receive social security checks and plan to go outside the United States for 30 days or more should notify social security, Dale Branch, social security district manager in Norfolk said recently.

Special provisions apply to people outside the U.S. and people should keep them in mind when making their plans, Branch said. These provisions are fully explained in the leaflet, "Your social security check... while you're outside the United States." Free copies can be obtained at most social security offices.

People who plan to be outside the U.S. for fewer than three months may find it more convenient to have their checks deposited in this country. For stays of three months or longer, the checks will generally be mailed to where the person is living.

Branch said people should know that if generally takes longer to receive checks outside the U.S. because of longer distances and extra handling needed. Delivery time varies from country to country.

Although social security benefits are not taxed in the U.S., foreign governments can and often do tax social security benefits. For more information about a particular country, a person should check with that country's embassy in Washington D.C., Branch said.

In addition, social security checks are figured in U.S. dollars and there is no provision for increasing or decreasing them because of changes in international exchange rates.

For more information about getting social security checks in other countries, call, write, or come into the Norfolk social security office.

Food Prices to Feel Effects of Market Costs

Rising costs for producing as well as processing and marketing food in 1980 are likely to keep upward pressure on retail food prices to consumers. At the same time, such pressures will put many agricultural producers in difficult cost-price squeeze, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The Agricultural Outlook, to be released by USDA's Economics, Statistics, and Cooperatives Service, points out that the rising costs will mean further increases in consumer food prices. Retail food prices in 1980 should rise 7 to 11 percent. Most of the rises will be caused by increases of about 10 percent for labor and packaging and continued sharp increases for energy used in processing and marketing. Transportation costs also will be significantly higher.

Gross farm income should increase slightly from 1979 record levels. Continued strong demand — especially for exports — is expected to increase cash receipts from crops. Cash receipts for livestock and livestock products will be nearly unchanged, reflecting increases in the value of cattle and milk marketings and steady to lower receipts from hogs, broilers and turkeys.

Although gross receipts will continue high next year, the rising costs of farm inputs likely will mean a drop in 1980 net farm income from this year's level of $30 to $32 billion. The projected 11-percent upswing in total farm production expenses includes boosts of about 20 to 30 percent for fuel and fertilizer and 10 to 15 percent for operation, repairs and machine hire. With a rise of this magnitude, net farm income could decline substantially — perhaps by a fifth.

While factors underlying agricultural income for the first quarter of 1980 are fairly well established, the rest of the year is a question mark. Farm prices and income during the last half of 1980 will be largely influenced by worldwide crop prospects and harvests.

For further information on Agricultural Outlook approved by the World Food and Agricultural Outlook Situation Board, contact Robert E. Olson 202-447-7330.
