DAVID FOOTE, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Foote, takes a bite of some fruit his mother, Marsha, won by successfully completing a nutrition quiz. The quiz was sponsored by a subcommittee of the Wayne Community Council and was presented at Wayne-Carroll

School District parent-teacher conferences several weeks ago. The subcommittee is attempting to make more people aware of proper nutrition.

Yule Program Continues

Santa to Arrive Sunday

To help Wayne merchants with their Sunday afternoon shopping kickoff this weekend, old St. Nick himself will arrive at Wayne Municipal Airport about 1 p.m. Al Robinson, airport manager, will leave on a chartered flight Saturday for a trip to the North Pole to bring Santa Claus to Wayne. From the airport, Santa will be taken to Peoples Natural Gas Co., 208 Main St., for an afternoon of audiences with any children wishing to visit with him.

ARRANGEMENTS for the visit by Santa have been made by the Chamber of Commerce who also invites children and their parents to greet Santa at the airport and later shop in Wayne throughout the afternoon. Santa will be visiting throughout Chamber member stores during evening shopping hours over the next two weeks. Moms and Dads are encouraged to bring their cameras and kids for a per-chance meeting with St. Nicholas while shopping in Wayne. Shoppers in the area also are reminded of this year's Christmas benefits for shopping in Wayne, says Chamber of Commerce Executive Vice President Gary Van Meter.

"THERE'S A Winter Wonderland of shopping values right here in Wayne," Van Meter said. That, coupled with the cost of fuel, is a good reason to shop at home, he added. Nearly 60 participating Chamber of Commerce businesses are involved in this year's promotion, with the total value of gifts to be given away just short of $9,000.

THIS YEAR'S program will differ somewhat from previous years. There will be no coupons, tickets or handouts of any kind, the Chamber exec explained. All participating merchants are being asked to give away something special as a way of showing their appreciation to shoppers. The items will be on display in each merchant's store and will be given away Monday, Dec. 24.

PARTICIPATING stores can be identified by door stickers, window posters and counter cards all proclaiming the "Christmas Shop Wayne" theme. Employees also will sport lapel badges and ribbons wishing Wayne shoppers a Merry Christmas and a "Thank you for shopping in Wayne."

Businesses also will have a Christmas stocking filled with toys and candy for the youngsters. These will be displayed in store windows and also will be given away by registering in the stores.

Merchants will be advertising their Christmas values and the items they will be giving away in The Wayne Herald over the next three weeks.

AREA YOUNGSTERS also are being treated specially again this year. The Gay Theatre, along with local merchants, is sponsoring free Saturday afternoon movies for the kiddies. The remaining three movies begin at 2 p.m. and include the following: Dec. 6—"McHale's Navy Joins the Air Force." Dec. 15—"Change of Habit," featuring the late Elvis Presley and Mary Tyler Moore. Dec. 22—"Puffnut," featuring Jack Wild, Billie Hayes and Mama Cass.

MERCHANTS also are observing special business hours so everyone will have an opportunity to complete their Christmas shopping. These hours are listed on a "Christmas Schedule Calendar" also on this page.

ANOTHER Christmas related activity for the youngsters is planned Saturday.

Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity, Kappe Delta Gamma Sorority and TKE's auxiliary, Order of Diana, are planning their annual Christmas Party from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday at the City Auditorium.

Youngsters 4 through 12 years old are invited to attend. Cartoons will be shown, lunch will be served and a special visit by Santa Claus is planned. Admission is 50 cents per youngster.

Nutrition Winner Named

Marsha Foote, Wayne, is winner of a nutrition quiz designed to create greater awareness of health hazards in the modern American diet.

Mrs. Foote was awarded a basket of fresh fruit for identifying the most health hazards in what might be a typical breakfast for many Americans, says Sandra Elliott, chairman of the subcommittee.

HONORABLE mention went to Elaine Rump, Mrs. Bob Jenkins and Bess Baier, all of Wayne. These four were among more than 40 men and women who answered the quiz during recent parent-teacher conferences in the Wayne-Carroll School District.

Some of the criticisms-of-breakfast-items on display were as follows, reports Mrs. Elliott:

—A brand-name cereal with half-and-half (cream and milk) and sugar; the cereal is 50 percent sugar and also contains preservatives, artificial coloring and flavoring, which, in the research of Dr. Benjamin Feingold, have proved to be a major cause of hyperactivity in children.

SOME ADDITIVES in large quantities also are suspect as a cause of cancer. On the average, each American consumes five pounds of additives a year in the form of preservatives, coloring and flavorings.

The dairy product half-and-half, containing butterfat, can lead to obesity and cholesterol problems in some instances, Mrs. Elliott explained.

SUGAR ADDED to the already sweet cereal is dangerous not only to teeth, she said. The main problem is the danger in the sugar displacing foods with complex carbohydrates rich in nutrients. Sugar, which is consumed at a rate of 135 pounds a year by the average American, provides only empty calories, not vitamins and minerals needed by the body. (Americans spend $3 billion annually to correct tooth decay.)

—White bread toast, margarine and jam; whole wheat bread is a much better choice because it contains needed fiber and many more vitamins than does the white-flour bread which has been too highly refined, Mrs. Elliott explained.

MOST STORE-bought bread contains preservatives. So does margarine, as well as artificial additives of color. Jam is more refined sugar than additives.

—Fried bacon; bacon, ham, wieners and many luncheon meats are the subject of controversy because nitrates and nitrites used in their processing are suspected of being cancer-causing and have been banned from such use in many European countries, Mrs. Elliott said.

Pork producers have pointed out that the amounts used to cause cancer in animals are far in excess of what the human being would be consuming in meat, so this remains an area of confusion, she explained. Health food stores and some grocery stores carry brands of wieners, sausage and bacon which contain no nitrates or nitrites.

—ORANGE DRINK: again artificial flavor, coloring and much, much sugar, she said. Natural orange juice is a much better choice because of less sugar, no additives and it does contain many vitamins.

Coffee, cream, sugar, coffee, like cola drinks, contains caffeine which is dangerous to health at any age, she explained. Cream is high in fat and sugar again-provides empty calories.

MRS. ELLIOTT said in announcing the winner:

"We are pleased with the nutrition consciousness of the parents who answered the quiz. More and more people are beginning to realize the dangers of excessive amounts of sugar and fat, and that it is also wise to avoid highly refined foods with additives. It is frightening to consider that many of the leading causes of death in the United States—coronary artery disease, cancer, hypertension—are diet related. Also, research is showing that a 'bad' child is often the result of a bad diet."

College Board Sells WSC Land To State for Highway Widening

Wayne State College will sell about one-half acre of highway frontage on the northwest end of campus to the Nebraska State Department of Roads under an agreement approved Tuesday by the Nebraska State Board of Trustees in Lincoln.

THE DEPARTMENT of Roads will pay about $5,000 for a 30-foot strip of land that extends from 14th Street to the end of the WSC property line along Nebraska 15.

The land will be used for widening of a culvert near the Rice Auditorium entrance at WSC. The widening is expected to improve access to the entrance and to upgrade the pavement in the area.

THE $5,000 received for the land will be transferred to the state treasury for state use.

The board also approved a WSC request which will allow the college to accept a $6,100 grant from the Association of American State Colleges and Universities (AASCU). WSC was selected earlier this year as one of 10 colleges and universities in the U.S. to participate in a study of general education in colleges and universities. WSC will develop a general education study model which will be used by other such institutions of higher learning in examining their general education programs.

DR. ED ELLIOTT, WSC vice president for academic affairs, said the $6,100 is part of about $500,000 to be distributed among the 10 participating schools by AASCU.

"The receipt of the funds reflects the significance of the project," Elliott said. WSC has gained national visibility because the study is a significant undertaking. "A number of association member institutions as well as non-members have expressed an interest in being kept abreast of the study."

ELLIOTT added that an eight-member committee for the project has been appointed at WSC and work is expected to begin immediately. In other action, the board heard a report from the Council of College Presidents on the status of a travel expenditure study for the four state colleges.

THE COUNCIL reported that committees have been formed on each campus to develop plans for reducing state expenditures for travel. This study was requested by the board of trustees at the October meeting in Wayne. Further reports and recommendations will be made at future board meetings.

The board also ordered the multi-million dollar campus center at Chadron State College be shut down after an engineer's report that the building is structurally unsafe.

The board ordered the building be closed by 8 p.m. Tuesday. The campus center includes the college's cafeteria, snack bar, bowling alley, bookstore, ballroom, meeting rooms and some administrative offices. AN ENGINEER with Richard Weingardt Consultants of Denver inspected the building last week. Its report indicates that the building was structurally unsafe because of fatigue on some steel beams caused by improper settling around the foundation.

The settling problem is in the south half of the building which was built in 1961. The north half was constructed in 1966.

A PRELIMINARY report shows some of the building's walls have cracked and several windows have broken. There have been no serious incidents or injuries, a spokesman for Chadron State College said.

The architect said the weakness is not a recent problem but one that has developed gradually. Part of the problem, he said, was that the two halves were built on different foundations.

'Good' Iranian Students Here Are Threatened

Threats of an undisclosed nature have been received by at least one of the four Iranian students at Wayne State College.

Although officials at WSC are reluctant to discuss the students, The Wayne Herald has learned that the threats came about two weeks after the crisis in Iran unfolded.

ACCORDING TO a source who requested anonymity, the students received threats in the form of a letter or letters. The evidence was destroyed, leaving law enforcement authorities with little to go by. It is not clear whether the threats were of a violent nature or not.

Dr. Bartholomew Ciampa, director of graduate studies and general studies at WSC, said the students are maintaining a low profile. He said the four are in compliance with immigration laws. President Carter recently ordered that Iranian students whose credentials are not in order be deported.

DR. CIAMPA said the WSC Iranians, who are "good students," went to the immigration authorities in Omaha for clearance. Foreign students' credentials are checked carefully by WSC personnel to ensure proper compliance with the immigration laws, he explained.

Dr. Ciampa said the four Iranians here are concerned about their safety. "They are students trying to get an education, and they are good students," he explained.

ANOTHER college spokesman asked that publicity involving the students be kept to a minimum for their protection.

Although Dr. Ciampa is in charge of the graduate program, the Iranian students are full-time undergraduate students. He also coordinates the program for international students.

Water Problems, Solutions Statewide Concerns

Capitol News
By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

The statewide water plan, transbasin diversion of water, and results of what a survey showed Nebraskans think about water problems and their possible solutions were in the news in recent days.

The Legislature's Appropriations Committee was told by a member of the state Natural Resources Commission the statewide water plan apparently will be a detailed study that will sit on the shelf rather than being an action blueprint for managing the state's water resources.

That testimony was given by George Kleen of Franklin, a member of the commission. He said the extensive study would not provide the kind of data the Legislature will need to arrive at answers to water problems.

Testimony during the hearing indicated the commission was devising a program it thought the Legislature wanted, but Sen. Don Dworak of Columbus said the lawmakers were trying to get new information, instead of a compilation of old studies.

Kleen proposed allocating funds and personnel to address specific questions rather than broad policy. He also suggested one agency, preferably the commission, be authorized to undertake the project.

Sen. Peter Hoagland of Omaha said outside experts from other states should be brought in to assist Nebraskans investigating water management problems, and Dworak questioned whether a natural resource district can effectively deal with dropping water tables. He said having NRD members tell their neighbors they can't irrigate is probably not possible from a political point of view.

The transbasin diversion question was in the news in the form of 261 pages of arguments filed with the state Supreme Court.

The arguments were against the Little Blue Natural Resources District's request to utilize Platte River water for irrigation in the Little Blue River Basin.

Among those filing briefs with the high court were farmers, cities, irrigators, natural resources districts and environmentalists.

State Water Resources Director John

Neuberger has denied a diversion application, and the Little Blue NRD is appealing that denial.

According to Neuberger, he lacks authority to approve the application because of a 1936 case in which the Supreme Court refused to permit transbasin diversion.

In a brief filed several months ago, the Little Blue NRD's attorneys argued the case is extremely important to the future of the state. Forbidding transbasin diversion has shaken water resources management, those attorneys said.

While the transbasin diversion question was being fought out in the courts, the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's Bureau of Sociological Research was conducting a survey which showed more than two out of every three Nebraskans believe there is a shortage of water in their state or there will be a shortage soon.

In its 1979 Nebraska Annual Social Indicators Survey, the bureau included questions on water policy.

Researchers found one-quarter of a randomly selected sample of 938 Nebraskans believe there is a water shortage in Nebraska. Three-quarters of the sample did not believe that is the case, but 59 percent of this group think there will be a shortage by the time the year 2000 rolls around.

In dealing with a water shortage, a majority of Nebraskans favor some regulation for industrial, business and household use. Regulation by limiting supplies to users or by requiring more efficient use of water were more acceptable alternatives than regulations through taxation or artificially high prices.

The survey showed farmers are slightly less likely to favor regulation for household use, but are little different than city residents in favoring regulation for business and industrial use.

The researchers said the data compiled indicates Nebraskans "overwhelmingly favor government regulation rather than high prices as a means of dealing with water shortages." But the researchers added: "Whether these sentiments are deeply felt is impossible to know. When the government becomes more serious in dealing with the water policy issue and specific proposals are put forward, undoubtedly each group (surveyed) will be in favor of regulation — for someone else."

First medical loans awarded

Loans for the 1979-80 school year have been awarded to seven students from the University of Nebraska Medical Center.

The students, who received their checks from Gov. Charles Thone in a special ceremony, are the first recipients of loans authorized by the 1979 Legislature.

The loans are to be awarded annually to students enrolled in or accepted for enrollment in the Nebraska and Creighton medical schools.

To qualify, a student must specialize in primary care medicine and agree to practice in a medically underserved area in Nebraska for one year for each year he or she received a loan.

The low interest loans are worth up to $7,000 for up to four years of medical education.

The Nebraska Commission on Rural Health Manpower selected the recipients.

A total of 20 loans will be awarded next year. In 1981 there will be 30 and beginning in 1982, 40 will be awarded annually.

The first recipients were Judith A. Basart Butler of Superior; Tom A. Christensen of Minden; Curtiss D. Farrell of Gibbon; Max L. Farver of Nelson; Norman L. Crosbach of Enders; Peter J.

Hohnstein of Hastings, and David D. Hull of Wausa.

Butler and Christensen are second year medical students. The other five are freshmen.

A year to prove worth

The state athletic commissioner's office is scheduled to cease existing next July 1, unless the Legislature votes to keep it going.

The appropriations Committee has recommended giving the office another year to prove it is worth retaining as a state agency.

The committee indicated it could not come up with a decision because the laws under which the commissioner's office function are so mixed up it is difficult to determine how well the office is performing.

Members of the panel said they need at least another year to study the conflicts both in state law and the agency's rules and regulations. Another recommendation was that the Miscellaneous Subjects Committee review the laws and that the Administrative Rules and Regulations Review Committee take a look at the agency rules and regulations.

OBSERVATIONS

The Good, The Bad, and . . .

First, the good news: Wayne County, through September, had an unemployment rate of an unbelievably low 3.6 percent.

That figure says a number of things. One is that the work force here is hard working, diligent, conscientious and still believes in the solid, Midwestern work ethic.

Generally, workers in the Midwest are proud to be a part of the strong economy and feel they have an obligation to their employers and to the economy as a whole. However, particularly on the East and West Coasts and in the metropolitan sectors, such is not the case.

Many states (including Iowa until about a year ago) had unemployment compensation laws which actually promoted unemployment. It was easier and legal to sit back and draw unemployment checks of up to $130 a week, tax free, for up to 27 weeks. Special extensions also were available and many, many workers qualified for these.

But in Wayne County, such is not the case. Workers want to work. There is little apathy in the job force here.

Now for the bad news: there aren't enough workers to go around.

This doesn't come as a shock to local manufacturers and other major employers. Help is hard to come by in these parts. Why? There appear to be a couple of reasons.

First, the rapid retail expansion the area has felt in recent years has soaked up available employees. Second, the area is not attracting new workers to fill those gaps.

The loss of the Job Service Office here will not help alleviate this problem. Because of a statewide cutback in Job Service personnel recently, Wayne's office was phased out. One of the reasons given for the closing was a lack of prospective workers registering here.

There is some feeling by employment experts that if the economy does worsen and a recession does make its presence felt here, then the job market will loosen up through layoffs. An unfortunate way to provide more workers, but effective.

As Ken Boyer, manager of the Norfolk Job Office pointed out, that kind of situation can backfire and too many job openings can result.

Boyer said his office is making an honest attempt to recruit workers for the Wayne area. But this burden also should be borne by local officials.

We applaud efforts by Wayne Industries Inc. to attract new business to Wayne. Most manufacturers, however, will be reluctant to build here if workers are not available. It is rare that a firm brings its employees along.

The employment picture here is bleak, and, according to Boyer, there is little relief in sight.

Wayne County finds itself in a Catch 22 type of situation. In striving for low unemployment, prospective workers are soaked up. But to attract new manufacturers and/or retail businesses, more workers are needed, and the unemployment rate, at least temporarily, increases. — Dan Field.

Holiday Meal Preparation Easier With Preplanning

The big holiday season is upon us and with it — holiday meal preparation.

Teresa Shaffer, Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources extension foods specialist, offers some tips which may help make food preparation easier.

"It's not too early to think about doing things ahead so the holidays will be less hectic and more enjoyable for the hostess," says Ms. Shaffer, adding that this is traditionally the time to be putting away Christmas fruitcakes so that they will be at their flavor peak for Christmas giving.

Fruitcake, however, isn't the only thing that can be made ahead. Many other holiday specialties, including homemade bread and rolls, freeze nicely and can be made now and held in the freezer until they're needed.

Homemade "brown and serve" rolls can be made by baking a favorite yeast roll recipe for 20 minutes at 275 degrees F. Cool and package the rolls in foil or plastic bags, label and freeze them quickly.

Rolls also can be frozen without baking. After shaping, place them on a baking sheet and freeze them quickly. Store in a plastic bag in the freezer. To allow time for thawing and rising before baking, be sure to remove them from the freezer in plenty of time before the holiday meal, Shaffer said.

Some fully cooked vegetable dishes, such as baked beans and candied sweet potatoes, will stay in excellent condition in the freezer. Most other fully cooked vegetables lose flavor rapidly unless they are frozen in a sauce.

Pies are part of the holiday menu, but they don't need to take away time from family and friends, she said.

Double crust fruit and mince pies as well as single crust coconut, pecan, pumpkin and similar pies may be frozen, baked or unbaked. The filling for pies to be frozen should be slightly thicker than usual because starch tends to break down slightly during frozen storage. Freeze the pies before packaging, and then wrap them in aluminum foil or place them in tightly sealed plastic bags for storage.

Selections to be presented Sunday morning by the 75 voice choir include "Der Geist Hilft Unsrer Schwachheit Auf" or ("The Spirit Also Helpeth Us") by Bach; "O Heiland, Reiss Die Himmel Auf" or (O Savior, Throw the Heavens Wide") by Brahms; "Glory Be to God" by Berger; "The Gate of Heaven" by Thompson; "Speak to One Another" by Berger; and "O Day Full of Grace" by Christensen.

Selections by the Madrigal Singers include "Glory to God in the Highest" by Schutz; and "The Yorkshire Carol," entitled "Here We Come A Wassailing."

The service will close with "Alleluia Chorus" from Handel's "Messiah," accompanied at the organ by Anthony Garlick.

Christmas in German

MEMBERS OF THE German Club at Wayne High School, under the guidance of Mrs. Inga Atkins, presented a program of German Christmas carols and narratives at the Wayne County Historical Museum Tuesday evening. Over 60 Wayne area residents gathered for the program.

German students, who earlier selected a tree for the museum and decorated it with authentic German candles and handmade ornaments, also decorated other rooms of the museum with familiar German ornamentation. Above, Mrs. Atkins leads her students in a traditional German carol. At left, nine-year-old Joel Pedersen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Randy Pedersen of Wayne, looks over a nativity scene which is on display at the museum during Christmas. The scene, which belongs to the Atkins family, comes from Germany and is handcarved of wood.

Depth Prevails

Lady Cats Pound Midland

JULIE PETRONIS (42) steals a rebound from a Midland College player as Deb Emanuel (52) boxes out another Midland player. The Lady Wildcats won the home contest by 13 points and were never threatened.

The Wayne State College Lady Wildcats displayed their overall team depth with five players scoring in double figures enroute to crushing Hastings College 81-68 in Wayne, Tuesday night.

Wayne State opened an early 10 point lead with the game less than seven minutes old. At halftime, the Lady Cats had expanded that margin to 20 points 43-23. With 15:37 left in the game, the Lady Wildcats grabbed their biggest lead 54-27 on a driving 10 foot jumper in the lane by freshman guard Lisa Curfiss.

Hastings rallied from that point however behind the shooting of 5-2 Kathy Mettenbrink. She had second half scoring spurts of six and eight points and finished the night with 28 total points.

Two freshmen led the scoring for WSC. Deb Emanuel and Curtis both had 13 points. Julie Petronis, the Lady Cats', six foot center, scored 11 points and hauled down 15 rebounds. WSC dominated the boards grabbing 61 carems to Hastings' 28.

The win moved WSC's record to 4-2 and the Lady Wildcats are on the road Friday against the University of South Dakota in the Dakota Dome before returning home to open conference play against Mo. Western at 5:30 p.m. Monday in Rice Auditorium.

Three starters return for the Laurel girls' basketball team and fifth year coach Ev Jensen says he is optimistic at the present time.

Junior Kay Anderson who was the leading scorer on last year's team, joins seniors Roxie Kraemer and Paula Chace as the nucleus for this year's squad. According to Jensen, four other girls are fighting for the other positions.

"Seven or eight girls should be able to play. Kay Anderson could turn into a pretty good ball player this season," said coach Jensen. "And some of the sophomores may be pushing for starting spots by mid-season."

Some of the top candidates for starting positions at this time are Janet Walton, Dixie Manz, Jan Cooper, Lori Carlson, Debbie Thompson and Donna Lotquist.

What the Bears lack in height, Jensen hopes his team can make up for with quickness. "We don't have any size at all. If we run up against a team with a big girl I'll hurt," Jensen stated. "We plan to run a pressing game and take advantage of our quickness."

Looking ahead to the upcoming schedule, Jensen pointed out that Allen, Wayne, Hartington Cedar Catholic and Hartington High will probably be the strongest opponents. "We should find out early how good we are," he said.

Laurel is scheduled to open its season Thursday, Dec. 6 in the home gym against Crofton. Dwight Iverson is the assistant coach this year.

Midland Hands Cats Loss

Midland Lutheran College opened an early 10 point lead and was never seriously challenged as the Warriors posted a 79-49 victory over the Cats Dec. 1 in Fremont.

WSC's senior center Wattle Rhoda had his best night of the season as he scored 23 points and pulled down 10 rebounds. The Wildcats trailed by as many as 20 points midway through the second half before staging a late rally behind the inside play of Rhoda and 6-7 freshman Grady Hansen, who finished with nine points.

The Wildcats slipped to 1-2 on the year while Midland is now 3-3.

Led By State Wrestlers

Wakefield Is Ready For Action

Two returning senior state qualifiers will head the largest Wakefield Trojan wrestling team ever, this season. Mark Schopke, who placed fifth in Class D last season, is back in either the 167 or 185 pound class. He is joined by state qualifier Blaine Nelson in the 138 pound class. Nineteen wrestlers are competing for positions on this year's team for coach Lyle Trullinger in his 11th year as head wrestling coach. That is the largest squad he has ever had. All weight classes except the 98 pound class will be filled. Two other seniors will join Schopke and Nelson this season. Von Portwood switched over from the basketball team to wrestle, probably in the 167 pound class. He will compete in that class against George Mansalve, a transfer from Chicago. The lower weights will probably be filled by underclassmen. Dirk Carlson, who just missed qualifying for the State Tournament last year, will fill the 112 pound class. At 105 is Mark Borg, a freshman. David Stelling, a junior, is listed at 119 and junior Doug Carlson and sophomore Jon Pretzer will compete in the 126 pound class. Joedy Sherer, another junior, will be wrestling at 132 and the 145 pound class should be filled by the first meet, Tuesday.

The Trojans are scheduled to open their season on the road Tuesday against Wisner-Pilger. They have moved up into Class C this year.

"We hope to break even in dual competition this season. Then, it'll be a successful year," said Trullinger. "We have a tough schedule but if our season is tough then districts will be easier."

Wakefield's team has been holding long practices, working on conditioning for two full weeks. Trullinger hopes that once the wrestlers are conditioned, practice sessions can be shortened.

Composing the rest of the team are: sophomores John Barge, Jerry Roberts and Doug Verplank and freshmen Mike Muller, Paul Schopke, Jonathon Stelling, Ted Tullberg and Brent Vanderveen.

"Interest is picking up and the individuals really want to wrestle," said Trullinger. "They're coming along alright and don't have to cut much weight. We've got many new kids out."

Eagles Will Again Be Winners

Winning has become a tradition for the Allen girls basketball team and new head coach Dale Jackson is hoping the tradition holds up again this season. Jackson is taking over the head coaching job after former coach Steve McManigal took a similar post at Wisner-Pilger High School. The 26 year-old Jackson spent the last two years coaching junior high basketball at Palisade. Before that, he was assistant coach at Spencer. He is a 1977 graduate of Dakota State College.

Jackson will be inheriting a young team along with the winning tradition. Of the 17 girls trying out for basketball, only two are seniors. Five lettermen return from last year's team which completed its regular season undefeated at 12-0.

Seniors Lisa Wood and Stacey Koester will join junior Lisa Erwin and sophomores Des Williams, Beth Stalling and Janet Peterson as the returning lettermen. Koester at 5-9 and Erwin at 5-10 were the leading scorers last season and Wood was a leading rebounder. At 5-11, Peterson is the tallest player on the Allen team and Williams is a top ball handler. Stalling will add depth.

"I don't think we'll be undefeated but we will be competitive. The girls will probably get off to a slow start under a new coach," Jackson said. "Shooting and height will be to our advantage. We aren't fast but we're working on that."

The Eagles are scheduled to open their season Tuesday when they host Laurel. The next two games pit Allen against Bancroft and Homer. "If we get through our first three games, we should be alright," said Jackson. "Bancroft beat us in districts last year."

Some of the other teams that Jackson figures to be strong are Decatur and Walthill. The first year coach named Erwin, Koester and Williams as three of his best players and added that others may surface during the season including freshmen and sophomores who may help the offense.

Defensively, the Eagles will probably open with a zone and try a man-to-man defense when possible. On offense, the team hopes to run and gun. Gary Troth is assistant coach.

Height, Depth Should Improve Trojans

The Wakefield girls' basketball team will feature height, some speed and good athletes according to new head coach Dennis Wilbur.

Wilbur, a 1976 Wayne State College graduate, is taking over the head coaching job which was vacated by former coach Ellie Studer. The 31 year old was assistant boys coach at Curtis Medicine Valley and taught two years at West Sioux Hayward Junior High School. The Iowa native is married and has two children.

Six players who started in at least one ball game return for the Trojans this season. Kelly Murphy, Jolene Bartels, Jackie Lueth, Donna Kleckhafer and Kathy Gustafson are the returning senior lettermen and Joan Miller is the leading junior returner.

"Everyone is back, more or less, from last year," Wilbur said. "We will have depth with 12 people playing and if players get tired we will move them in and out. Our three leading scorers are back. Bartels averaged 10 points a game, Gustafson averaged eight points and Murphy averaged seven or eight points per game."

Wilbur cited turnovers as the culprit in last year's 5-11 season and said he hopes his team will be able to handle pressure and make fewer mistakes this year.

"I think we should have a respectable team and we should play well," said Wilbur. "We have a good carry-over from a fine volleyball season and will play many of the same athletes on this squad." However, Wilbur was quick to add that his team could be in trouble if it doesn't work out its problems and improve ball handling. "Ball handling dictates the whole offensive and defensive game," he emphasized.

Wilbur stated that four players can rebound well and two are good ball handlers. He predicted that if his team can work the ball inside, the girls can score 50 percent of the time. The Trojans will open at home Tuesday against Osmond and host Emerson Thursday.

"We will bring the ball down court as quickly as we can. Offensively, we hope to work the ball down low to our best shooters. We have to get the ball inside where we have the height," Wilbur pointed out. Assistant coach this season is Cheryl Pueggel.

Randy's Recap

According to Randy Huscall

THE MAIN TOPIC of the discussion at the Second Guessers meeting last Thursday (as many crippled up men limped in the door) was Men's Recreation basketball which got started a couple of weeks ago.

The Recreation sport involves men from ages 19 and up, allowing them to get extra exercise and have fun in so doing. Some of the men said they had a long ways to go to get rounded into shape for the regular season.

TWO WAYNE STATE women athletes were honored at the Second Guessers meeting. Julie Petronis who is averaging 11 rebounds and 10 points per game for the basketball team and Kari Erwin, who is averaging 11 points and three assists per game, were given certificates as athletes of the week for the Lady Wildcats.

The Lady Cats are averaging over 75 points per game and shooting 42 percent from the floor. Both Erwin and Petronis have been instrumental in the team's success thus far.

AWARDS IN RECOGNITION of Second Guessers who participated in the Wayne

Turkey Trot were also awarded at the meeting. Ed Elliott was the top finisher of all. Second Guessers who competed, Pat Gross, who is missing some hair on his head, received a hat with an egg on it to protect his bald head. Commented Gross when he found the cap to be about four sizes too large. "Does anyone have a cap shrinker? The last time I had a cap like that was at boot camp."

Ralph Barclay, defensive coordinator of the WSC football team and swimming coach, was announced as best dressed Wayne State coach because of a flashy new pair of tennis shoes he was wearing.

And the other quote of the day was made by Barclay. When new wrestling coach Blaine Gorney told the Guessers about an upcoming wrestling tournament which pitted WSC's Wildcats against wrestlers from Ohio State, Iowa and other NCAA powers, Barclay snapped, "We haven't gotten his (Gorney's) IQ test results back yet."

NOW I'LL TRY my hand at predicting outcomes of the bowl games. In the Orange Bowl, undefeated Florida State, which had close calls against Florida, LSU, Virginia Tech and Southern Mississippi, will suffer its first loss to powerful Oklahoma.

Southern Cal will end Ohio State's national title hopes by nipping the Buckeyes in the Rose Bowl. Alabama will also have its national title hopes washed away from Southwest power Arkansas.

Nebraska will recover from a season ending loss to Oklahoma by edging powerful Houston in the Cotton Bowl. The Huskers will have their hands full, though.

Getting down to the big bowl games (choke, choke), I predict that Temple will defeat California in the Garden State Bowl, Syracuse will drop undefeated McNeese State (who?) in the Independence Bowl, Brigham Young will whip Indiana in the Holiday Bowl, Tulane will edge Penn State in the Liberty Bowl, Texas will stop Washington in the Sun Bowl, Wake Forest will slip past LSU in the Tangerine Bowl, Pittsburgh will romp by Arizona in the Fiesta, Michigan will defeat North Carolina in the Gator Bowl, Missouri will barely handle scrappy South Carolina in the Hall of Fame, Baylor will upend Clemson in the Peach Bowl and Purdue will trip Tennessee in the Bluebonnet Bowl.

WSC Opens Its CSIC Season On Road Friday

Wayne State opens its 1979-80 Central States Intercollegiate Conference schedule when it meets the Missouri Western Griffons Friday night in St. Joseph.

The Griffons are 3-3 thus far in 1979-80 but have played some stiff competition. In a recent west coast swing Missouri Western dropped two games losing to San Jose State 58-54 and the University of California at Santa Barbara 72-62. Western is led by 6-7 sophomores forward Kenny Brown. Through the Griffons' first five games, Brown was averaging 17.8 points per game.

Wildcat head coach Bill Ivey indicated that he feels his club has been going too fast against the zone defenses that the Cats have faced through three games.

"I think our players realize that they are better talented players than the other teams that we have played," he said, "and yet we just don't have the patience because we want to hurry things and go ahead and win. I think that this is the biggest problem psychologically; it could be even unconsciously that we have this feeling."

Money Guidelines Change

If you're saving your small change diligently as the only possible way to afford your youngsters' college education, you might be encouraged by some words from an Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources family economics specialist.

"It may be impossible for most families to save for their children's college educations," said Kathy Prochaska-Cue, adding that inflation and higher costs are making it all but impossible.

Prochaska-Cue recommends letting your youngster borrow the money when it comes time for them to go to college. Then they'll repay their loans with cheaper dollars once they've gotten jobs, she added.

Another finance myth for families to cope with is the idea that a woman's job can't be counted on as a permanent contribution to the family income. Chances are that if she's working now, she'll be working for a large part of her life and family investments can be made on that basis.

In these inflationary times, people are finding that some of the old sayings about saving and spending money no longer apply. One of those is that if an investment offers a very high return, be cautious because it may be risky, says Kathy Prochaska-Cue. This is not always true, in light of the treasury notes and bonds which yield 10 percent and more and are very safe investments.

With inflation rising at about that rate, money which is earning less in a savings account would contribute more to the family income in an investment with higher earning power.

And now might be the best time to get into the housing market, even though the old adage about "never spend more than 25 percent of your salary for housing" still rings in your head.

Prochaska-Cue said the old 25 percent rule may now be replaced with a new "1/3 of your income" guideline. That figure includes payment, insurance, maintenance, utilities and repairs, as well as monthly payments on other long-term commitments.

The reason for replacing the old rule is the current inflationary spiral, the specialist said. With higher interest rates thrown in, many prospective home buyers may find that the price of the home they want will keep going up until it's completely out of reach.

Instead of saving up for one or for a large down payment, get plugged into the housing market by buying a house you can afford rather than waiting for your dream home.

Thought for Today

By Brian McBride

"Don't squander time for that is the stuff life is made of..."

Franklin

Benjamin Franklin trifled away very few hours during his highly productive lifetime. However, it is doubtful that his words are an endorsement of rigid daily schedule of all work and no play.

Leisure time, wisely and satisfyingly spent, is the welcome "unwinding" that we must sandwich between the work and responsibilities of the average day. This is not time squandered, for time so spent returns a dividend in a rejuvenating release from the tension and emotional stress associated with modern living.

At a time of need, you can depend on our patient, friendly council and advice. We provide fully personalized service to everyone who comes to us for help.

Consumers Usually Save When Purchasing Generic Drugs

GENERIC DRUGS are usually lower in cost because the company has no need to recover heavy research and development costs," the University of Nebraska-Lincoln specialist says. "Laws that permit the substitution of generic drugs, then, can mean lower consumer drug prices with no loss of quality."

Consumers can take advantage of the situation by asking their physicians if a generic substitution is appropriate when they receive a prescription. "If so, then ask your pharmacist to fill the prescription with the lowest-priced version of the drug," Wilson suggests. "SAVINGS ARE substantial when choosing the least expensive brand," she adds. Under the FTC ruling, pharmacists may substitute generic drugs on their own, providing the doctor does not specify there should be no substitutions, she adds.

Consumers also can save on drug expenses by asking their doctor to prescribe a drug in quantity if they'll be taking it for a long time, Wilson says.

FINALLY, SHE advises comparison shopping, either by phone or in person. "You'd be surprised to find out how much drugs vary in cost from store to store," she says, adding that persons over 65 years of age should ask about special discounts available to the elderly.

Although the substitution of generic drugs for brand-named prescriptions has been allowed by the Federal Trade Commission (FTC), most consumers aren't taking advantage of the price savings available.

THAT'S THE word from Janet Wilson, Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources extension consumer education specialist. Wilson says there appears to be confusion among consumers as to what generic drugs are and when and how to ask for them.

When a new drug is developed, she explains, there are usually two names associated with it — the generic (or chemical) name and the trademarked (or brand) name.

THE ORIGINAL developer of the drug has exclusive patent rights for a certain number of years, during which no other manufacturers are allowed to produce the trademarked drug, Wilson says. However, when patent rights expire, other manufacturers are allowed to produce the trademarked drug.

Essentially "carbon copies," these drugs are chemically the same as the original trademarked drug and are known as generic equivalents. Companies who duplicate the original formulation may then sell the drug under their own brand name or sell it to pharmacies under the generic name.

Proper Estate Planning Can Avoid Unnecessary Taxes, Legal Expenses

More than 50 percent of Americans who die each year do not have wills, according to William Mooney Jr., chairman of the Attorneys-Trust Officers Committee, the Nebraska Methodist Hospital Foundation, Omaha.

Mooney said people don't realize just how much difference a will can make in an individual's estate.

"Persons who have not been involved in estate planning, should do so immediately," said Mooney, adding that persons who currently have a will should review them periodically, particularly if the will was written before the revised tax legislation of 1976 and 1978.

Mooney said that any time circumstances change, people should also review their wills to make sure they are up to date. Some of those circumstances include the following:

- 1) Moving to another state.
- 2) Birth of children or grandchildren.
- 3) Beneficiaries change.
- 4) Purchase of new life insurance or home.
- 5) Investment values have changed.
- 6) Retirement or new business venture.
- 7) Change in tax laws.

A will is a means of designating how your property is to be distributed at your death, and properly planned, can avoid unnecessary taxes and legal expenses. It is also a means of furthering personal goals by assisting charitable organizations during your lifetime.

Mooney said that in 1978 alone, over $2.6 billion dollars was given by bequest to charitable organizations.

Persons who would like further information on planning their will can contact the Nebraska Methodist Hospital Foundation. Write or call the Foundation, Nebraska Methodist Hospital, 8303 Dodge St., Omaha, Neb., 68114, or telephone 402-397-3000, ext. 3879.

Reality of 'Recession' Upon Us

The party which has been on during the summer is now at an abrupt end and the bills are arriving, says Dr. Donald E. Pursell, director of the Bureau of Business Research in the University of Nebraska-Lincoln College of Business Administration. The August statement by treasury undersecretary that "the recession is half over" set off a consumer buying spree for durables, clothing, housing and the like. This statement encouraged the so-called Volcker stock rally for everyone wanted to get in before the recession had bottomed and stocks had started up. The Federal Reserve, under its new chairman, accommodated the economic binge by increasing the money supply to expand at 11 to 12 percent on an annualized basis, Pursell noted. "Then came harsh reality in October. The summer of easy living came to a halt. The bills for the party began to arrive in the form of higher inflation rates and a double bottom to the recession. The bill collectors will arrive in January, 1980," he said. Pursell said recent action by the Federal Reserve in raising the discount rate and pushing the prime rate to 14 and a half percent is sufficient to push the economy further into the recession.

Real economic output dipped during the second quarter of 1979 but turned positive during the third quarter of 1979. Real output will decline during the fourth quarter of 1979 and the first quarter of 1980.

"The outlook for the economy in 1980 is not too cheery," Pursell said. He predicted that the worst part of the year will likely be the first half, when real output will decline. If the recession is brief and mild as most observers now expect, output should pick up during the last half of 1980. On balance, the economy will show little gain for the year, with the last-half gains of setting the first-half declines.

Pursell, in his review of the national economy predicts: "The decisive factor determining when the economy will turn up is real Disposable Personal Income (DPI)—personal income after income taxes and social security payroll taxes. Real DPI has declined since the second quarter of 1979. The slide has been steep at times and shows no sign of abating. The economic expansion has been carried by the consumer since the second quarter of 1975. Their spending patterns will be important in 1980.

If consumers receive an increase in real DPI, they more goods and services will likely be produced and the economy should resume real growth. However, the prospects for an increase in real DPI during the second quarter of 1980 are not as good as they might be because of the social security tax increase on January 1, 1980, high rates of inflation, and the possibility of high heating bills due to a cold winter and higher oil prices.

The outlook for inflation is not encouraging. Double-digit inflation will occur again in 1980. The producer price index (former wholesale index) continues to surge forward month after month, with the most recent increase at 1.4 percent. On a compound basis, prices at the producer level are increasing at nearly 18 percent a year and this can be expected to be transmitted into higher consumer prices during 1980. Unfortunately, the increase in the producer price index was strong in all sectors—finished goods, goods in an intermediate stage of production, and goods in the first stages of production.

Inflation may begin to abate somewhat during the last half of 1980 if the recent rise in interest rate is successful in slowing the economy, but a real lowering of inflation will be postponed until 1981. Inflation for 1980 will likely average more than 10 percent, with the rate running around 12 percent during the first half of the year and dropping to near 9 percent during the last half (annualized basis).

Interest rates are likely to work higher before declining very slowly. With the prime rate at 14.5 percent and the discount rate at 12 percent, many small and marginal borrowers are going to be restricted out of the market. Particularly hard hit will be new business ventures and smaller borrowers. Larger more credit-worthy borrowers will be able to secure financing that they require, but the price will be exceedingly high. Higher interest costs mean increased costs for the consumer.

Over the short term, 90 to 180 days, the prime rate likely to go as high as 16 to 17 percent, with the discount rate likely to go as high as 14 percent. Rates should stabilize at this level before beginning to turn down during the second or third quarters of 1980. The upcoming year, of course, is a presidential election year, so political pressures to reduce rates may send them downward sooner than economic policy might dictate. Despite the election, interest rates will decline little in 1980. A prime in the 13 to 14 percent range is likely at the end of 1980.

The economy could be forced into a deeper slide in 1980 if oil prices were raised in December or if the winter should prove extremely disruptive. An oil price hike would absorb additional consumer income for heating and leave less to spend in other areas. If the winter is extremely cold, heating costs will rise even more, absorbing a larger proportion of consumer income. There may be temporary disruptions in production because of weather-related issues, and this could cause the recession to deepen during the winter quarter.

In summary, Pursell described the U.S. economy for the balance of 1979 as rather bleak, with the first half of 1980 probably offering little improvement. Inflation will run at a double-digit level and the recession will have a double bottom, with the second trough of the recession occurring during the second or third quarter of 1980. Short-term interest rates may begin to decline during the second half of 1980, but that is hardly exciting since they will be at historic levels.

China Bakery Planned in '80

Rapid progress is being made in plans to build a commercial bakery in the Peoples Republic of China with a target for completion of July 1980, reports Erv Friehe, chairman of the Nebraska Wheat Committee.

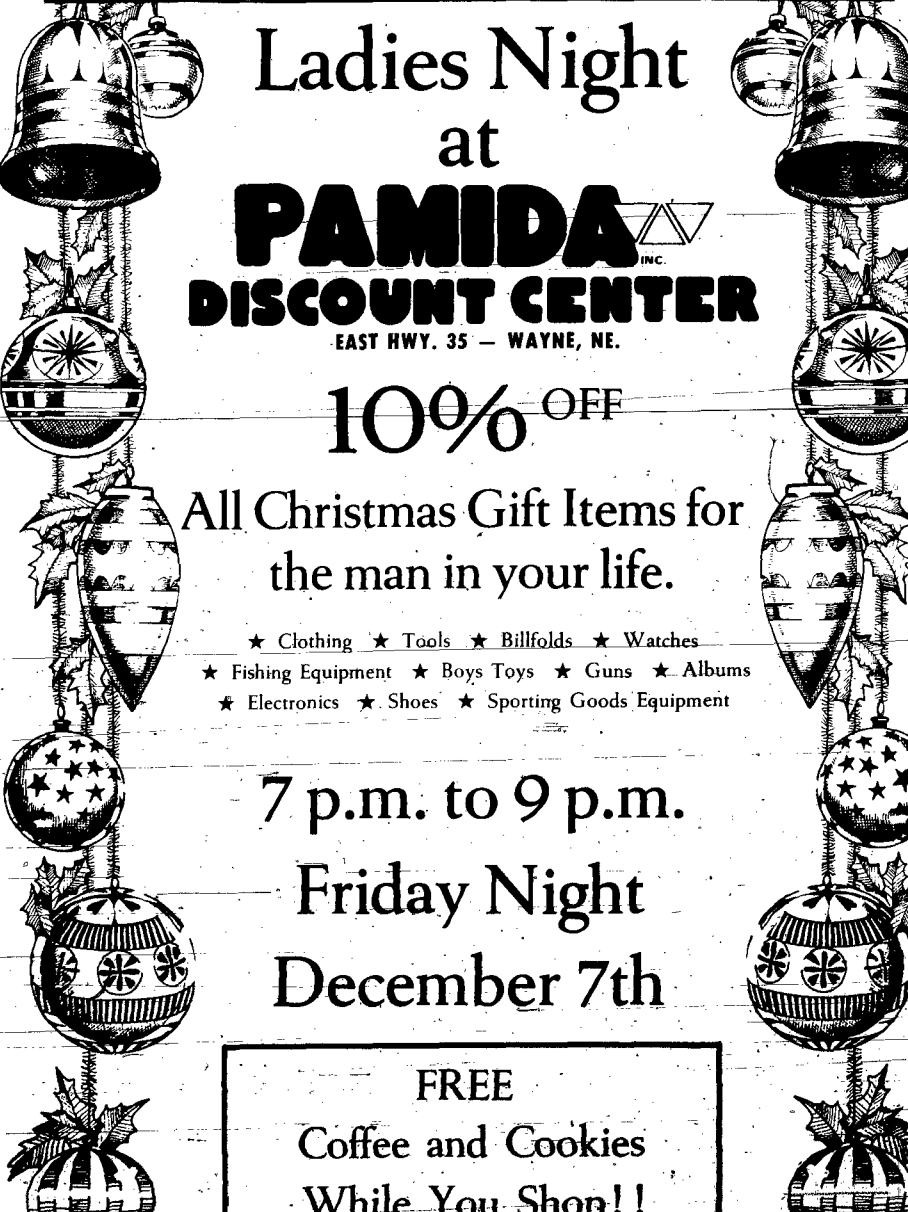

Friehe, a member of the board of Western Wheat Associates, says proposals of WWA were approved in principle by the Ministries of Commerce and Light Industry in Peking and wheels were set in motion immediately to plan the construction of the model bakery and to implement a series of programs to develop the baking industry in China.

"The next step planned by WWA is a meeting with baking machinery and equipment people to lay out plans for the bakery and to estimate costs," says Friehe, "and later we propose to offer training for four Chinese Technicians at the American Institute of Baking, to sponsor a Chinese team to the U.S. to observe bakeries and visit baking machinery manufacturers and to provide the services of our baking consultants."

"Our efforts in establishing this bakery and the follow-up service thereafter are aimed at both increasing U.S. wheat exports and building a long-term market for U.S. wheat producers," concludes Friehe. The Nebraska Wheat Committee supports Western Wheat Associates with wheat check-off funds.

Farm

Many Consider Biogas System

With current government emphasis on alternative fuels, many farmers are considering on-farm biogas production.

"Biogas contains about 65 percent methane and is similar to natural gas which is about 99 percent methane," said Elbert Dickey, extension engineer in the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Biogas also contains more than 30 percent carbon dioxide and small amounts of hydrogen sulfide, water vapor, ammonia and other gases, Dickey said.

The rate of production of biogas from animal manure is somewhat dependent on the species of animal, he said, but on the average the daily production is about 40 cubic feet per 1,000 pounds of beef, dairy or swine.

He said 40 cubic feet of biogas is roughly equivalent to 25,400 BTUs. Dickey noted that some of this energy, about 30 percent on the average, will be needed to heat the biogas digester.

Temperature control is one of the important factors in biogas production, he said. "Biogas production from organic materials is severely limited below 68 degrees F and above 130 degrees F." He said the optimum temperature for on-farm production appears to be about 95 degrees F. The anaerobic bacteria that produce biogas are sensitive to temperature fluctuation, he said, and cannot tolerate more than a 10 degree variation in 48 hours.

Toxic elements such as antibiotics or disinfectants also can be harmful to the bacteria, he continued. Organic waste which contains relatively high amounts of ammonia will also inhibit the production process, he said. If high concentrations are present, such as in poultry manure, he said, dilution water will be necessary.

"Not all livestock operations are suited for methane production," he said. "The manure used for digestion should be fresh, free of dirt and debris and contain about eight percent solids. He said open dirt lots have limited biogas production potential and livestock pens with flushing gutters would need a liquid-solid separating device before methane could be produced efficiently.

"Another very important factor in producing biogas is the rate at which the digester is loaded," Dickey said. "Low loading rates result in low production rates, but high loading rates will result in an over load digester which will inhibit or stop biogas production."

Another point to keep in mind is that methane is highly explosive," he continued. "Biogas producers must take extreme care when producing, storing and using methane as an energy source," he said.

One of the best uses of biogas is for space heating, Dickey said. But because the heating season is relatively short, he said, maintaining full use of the gas in the summer may be difficult.

He said one potential use is for spark ignition engines which can be connected to electrical generators. However, "to reduce problems, the biogas must have the hydrogen sulfide and water vapor removed prior to burning in a spark ignition engine," he added.

Dickey said using manure for biogas production will not cut down trips to the field with the spreader. He said the volume of manure is relatively unchanged in the digestion process and the amount of manure originally hauled to the field will still need hauling. Adding water to lower ammonia concentrations will increase the volume handled, he pointed out.

And as far as nutrient content, he said, aerobic digestion will cause a slight decrease in nitrogen, but the amounts of phosphorus and potassium will be relatively unchanged.

Dickey said there are definite economic advantages associated with larger operations, but technically, methane production is feasible for the small farmer

Food Stamp Fraud Rules Are Tightened

People who obtain food stamps fraudulently will have to pay them back under a rule proposed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Currently, people convicted of fraud are dropped from the food stamp program for 3 to 27 months. The new proposal would require them to either repay the value of the stamps in cash or agree to have their food stamp allotment reduced until the amount is recovered before they can join the program again.

The proposed rule would implement legislation passed by Congress in August (Public Law 96-58). The final regulation is scheduled to go into effect in May 1980.

In addition to the repayment provision, the rule will allow states to keep 50 percent of all money they recover from fraud claims to help defray their costs.

Recovered funds presently are returned to the federal government. "We expect this change will be a significant incentive to states to prosecute fraud more vigorously," said Assistant Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman.

The rule also requires food stamp applications to obtain and furnish social security numbers for all household members. Foreman said this will deter fraud by enabling states to use social security numbers to crosscheck food stamp applications with other wage and benefit records.

The department put other legislative reform into effect earlier this year to tighten eligibility standards and reduce abuse. Income eligibility limits were lowered to the poverty level; the number of deductions allowed from gross income was cut from eight to three; and households are now dropped from the program if the breadwinner voluntarily quits a job. The legislation also increased the federal reimbursement to states for fraud investigation from 50 percent to 75 percent of their costs.

The new proposal also requires states to promptly reduce food stamps benefits to people receiving annual cost-of-living increases in social security and supplemental security income (SSI). This requirement would save between $30 and $50 million a year beginning in fiscal year 1981. Each additional dollar in SSI or social security benefits reduces food stamps by 30 cents.

"In the past, it has often taken states a number of months to reduce food stamp benefits when SSI or social security recipients' incomes rose because of cost-of-living increases. Now states will have to make these adjustments immediately, or, if they lack this computer capability, within three months," Foreman said.

The rule was published in the Oct. 31 and Nov. 2 Federal Register. The 45 day comment period will end Dec. 14.

Comments should be submitted to Alberta Frost, acting deputy administrator.

Pig Care Topic Swine Meeting

The care and management of pigs at and after weaning will be the subject of two swine meetings to be held in December, announced Don C. Spitzer, Wayne County Extension agent.

The first meeting will be Tuesday, Dec. 11, at 1 p.m. at the USDA Service Center meeting room at Wayne. Mike Brumm, district extension swine specialist, will discuss nutrition and management, problems with weaning, minimizing stress of weaning of nursery pigs, and early versus late weaning.

Mike Brumm also will discuss nursery buildings including temperature requirements, slotted floors, floor and pen arrangement and flooring material.

He will discuss the same subjects at the Hoskins Firehall at 1 p.m., Friday, Dec. 14. These meetings are sponsored by the Wayne County Extension Service.

Farm Women's Role in Ag Is Topic of Survey

A nationwide survey and a study of farm women and their role in agriculture were announced recently by Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland.

The survey and the study are parts of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Farm Women's Project, established recently to look into the status of farm women in relation to USDA programs, the program management procedures and job structure.

"The intent of the survey is to provide a record of farm women's experience with USDA services and farm programs and their perceptions of the department," the Secretary said. "It will also provide us with a knowledge of women's roles in making farm management decisions. This knowledge will help the department better serve the needs of farm women who can and do use USDA programs, and it will help identify opportunities where women can participate in USDA farm programs at management and advisory levels."

The survey will be conducted next summer by the National Opinion Research Center of Chicago, under a cooperative agreement with USDA. Total cost of the survey will be $305,000, of which USDA's share is $280,000.

The Farm Women's Project will also report on a study of the legal rights of farm women in relation to USDA programs and services. USDA programs, services and funds for which farm women are eligible will be identified. The study will also determine the current rate of participation by women in USDA farm programs; USDA jobs for which farm women qualify; and the present job participation by farm women in such positions; and the involvement of farm women in farm program management by USDA agencies responsible for administering farm policies.

Carol Forbes, who is directing the project, said the Farm Women's Project is soliciting ideas and suggestions from farm women in regard to both the survey and the study. Comments and requests for information may be made to: Farm Women's Project, 1548 South Building, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C., 20250. The telephone number is 202-447-2582.

Culling pig losses

It is estimated that 25 percent of the pigs that are farrowed die before they are weaned and that tears into potential profit for producers. Many of these pigs could be saved by a little extra care.

Here are 10 tips that will help cut those baby pig losses:

Keep newborn pigs warm, dry and free from drafts. Chilling may trigger several later problems including starvation, scours and unthriftiness. The baby pigs' ability to regulate its own body temperature increases slowly from birth to two weeks, so it is critically important that farrowing quarters are kept at a room temperature of 60 to 70 degrees and that the zone heat provided in the pig area be from 85 to 95 degrees.

Be there when the pigs farrow. Assisting the pig to nurse the first time, removing mucus from the pig's mouth, drying off the pig to prevent chilling and placing the pig under the supplement heat source can be big steps toward saving the pig.

Clip the naval cord of the newborn pig two to three inches from the body. If it's still wet, treat with a tincture of iodine diluted to seven percent. If excessive bleeding occurs from the naval, tie the naval with a piece of string about an inch from the body in order to cut off an easy avenue for bacteria to enter the body.

Use side cutting pliers to clip the needle teeth. Take care not to injure the gums of the pig.

Ear notch to identify which animals are the most productive at weaning time. Cull those that are not.

Adjust litter size for the number of functioning teats or milking ability of the sow. Pigs of uniform size will perform better than a litter of varying sizes.

Cut tails one-half to one inch from the body with side cutting pliers. The crushing action of the pliers helps to stop bleeding. Disinfect the tail stump with a good antiseptic.

Prevent iron anemia by iron supplementation. One recommendation is to inject one 100 mg shot of iron dextran in the flank or neck when the pig is between one and four days old.

Castrate boar pigs before they are two weeks old to minimize stress. Pigs at this time are easier to handle, and they will heal faster. Use a clean, sharp instrument, make the incision low to promote good grainage and use antiseptic procedures.

Prevent scours. Orally administered drugs are usually more effective than injection. Periodic sensitivity tests should be conducted to determine which drugs are most effective. Of primary importance in reducing scours is providing a dry, warm, draft free environment.

Dixon 4-H's Seek Members

The Dixon 4-H Junior Leaders group will have a membership drive swimming party on Sunday at Rice Auditorium, Wayne State College.

"All 4-H's, age 14 or over as of Jan. 1, are eligible to join junior leaders," says Val Schellepeper, area extension agent.

The membership party will begin at 4 p.m. with a short business meeting. The agenda will include a report on the junior leader activities, haunted house, and the 1980 Citizenship Short course and deciding a date for the January potluck supper meeting.

From 4 to 6 p.m., the group will have a swimming party at the pool in Rice Auditorium. Contact the Dixon County Extension Service, phone 584-2261 for more information.

The song "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," first published in 1843, has the same tune as the English song, "Britannia, the Pride of the Ocean," popular at the same time.

Fireplaces Operate With Energy Loss

Ordinary fireplaces operate with a net energy loss in homes with central heating when outdoor temperatures drop below freezing. This is due to the use of heated inside air to fuel the fire and to the loss of air during cool down after flames die down.

Rich Gooding, UNL safety specialist, suggests efficiency can be improved by using cold outside air to fuel the flames. Best results come from installing an air intake directly into the firebox. If intakes can't be placed in the firebox, locate them as close to the fire as possible. Air intakes also improve safety by reducing the danger of reverse draft in furnace or hot water heater chimneys.

Forced air heat exchangers improve fireplace efficiency both during burning and cool down. Tightly fitting glass doors enclosing the fireplace also give some improvement, but are not tight enough to prevent room air flowing up the flue, especially when the flue is still hot. Glass doors do not replace dampers and fireplace owners are reminded to close dampers in unused chimneys.

Despite their inefficiency, there is still some special warmth we seem to get from a fireplace. A warmth that seems better described by poets than engineers, so, if you have a fireplace, just back up to its glow on special occasions and remember your ancestors.

Nebraskans Say Water Shortage Real

More than two out of every three Nebraskans believe that a shortage of water is a reality in Nebraska today or will be in the near future, according to the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's Bureau of Sociological Research.

The bureau included questions in its 1979 Nebraska Annual Social Indicators Survey (NASIS) in regard to Nebraskans' and water policy and released part of its findings recently. The report deals with awareness of water shortages and views concerning regulating water for household and business use. A coming report will discuss the views of Nebraskans on regulation of water for agriculture use.

The NASIS survey on water policy, authored by Susan Welch and Gordon Kissel of the UNL Department of Political Science, was supported in part by funds provided by the Office of Water Research and Technology of the U.S. Department of the Interior.

The researchers found that one-quarter of a randomly selected sample of 938 Nebraska residents believe there is a shortage of water in Nebraska today. Three-quarters of the sample did not believe there is a shortage, but 59 percent of this group think there will be a shortage by the year of 2000.

When it comes to dealing with a water shortage, a majority of Nebraskans favor some regulation of water for both industrial and business use and private household use. Regulation by limiting supplies to users or by requiring more efficient use of water were seen as more acceptable alternatives than regulation through taxation or artificially high prices.

About three-quarters of Nebraskans favor requiring water conservation equipment and limiting the use of water for "non-necessary" purposes. More than 50 percent favor limiting the amount of water business and industry can use, but only a quarter of the sample favor dealing with the water shortage problem by increasing the price of water.

The researchers said less than one-quarter of the sample favored the most extreme solution — encouraging people to move away from water-short areas.

Younger people are slightly more likely to favor regulation than middle-aged or older people, while persons from Southeast Nebraska and the Panhandle are most likely to favor regulation of industrial and household water use. Those from the Omaha area and Northern Nebraska were least likely to favor regulation. Farmers were slightly less likely than others to favor regulation for household use, but are little different from their city counterparts in favoring regulation for business and industrial use. Rural-non-farm people were the most supportive of such regulation.

"Nebraskans overwhelmingly favor government regulation rather than high prices as a means of dealing with water shortages," according to the researchers.

"Whether these sentiments are deeply felt is impossible to know. When the state government becomes more serious in dealing with the water issue and specific proposals are put forward, undoubtedly each group will be all in favor of regulation for someone else.

"Still, these opinions lead one to suspect that most Nebraskans would support policies seeking to deal forthrightly with the possibility of a future water shortage," the researchers concluded.

Pocket Gophers Elusive Creatures

Ask a rancher to describe a pocket gopher and chances are his description will differ from what a city dweller might tell you.

Confusion about the identity of the pocket gopher is common, according to Ron Case, associate professor of wildlife sciences in the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources. The rancher may never have seen one of the creatures and only knows him by his effects, and the city dweller may actually be thinking of a ground squirrel or other urban rodent, Case said.

"There's a lot we don't know about pocket gophers," he added, largely because the creatures spend most of their lives underground. But Case and other Nebraska researchers are trying to find out more.

"For example, we think pocket gophers reproduce between March and June, but we're not sure," Case said. The number of young born each year is another mystery. "When we capture gophers for our research here, we send the reproductive tracts to Chadron State College for analysis. Researchers there are trying to determine when the gophers reproduce, and they can count placental scars to find out how many young a female had."

much affected by the presence of gophers, with production about 20 percent less than in a comparable site without gophers. But in range sites, loss of production was 45 to 50 percent in the gopher areas.

Gophers do not necessarily account for lower productivity in an entire range, however, Case warned. "Gophers are seldom uniformly spread across a range and most often are found in discrete populations. Their presence may affect range yields in the area they're in, but not on an entire range," he explained.

As with other wildlife, there are some benefits to be realized from gophers, he added. "They loosen and mix the soil and add nutrients through burying vegetation and their wastes," he said. They also aerate the soil, causing increased water infiltration rates.

"This is a slow process, though, measured in tens and hundreds of years, while the detrimental effects of gophers are immediate and obvious — you can see plants dying and see the weeds coming."

Case and other researchers are now trying to determine economic thresholds for gopher control to find out what levels of populations are necessary to make controlling the animals feasible.

"We're trying to determine how concerned we should be about pocket gophers. So much of Nebraska's agricultural area is in grassland, that even a one percent reduction in forage yields is significant," he pointed out.

Currently poisons provide 85 to 90 percent control of a population but retreatment every couple of years may be necessary since populations tend to rebound in that length of time, he said.

A machine called a "gopher getter" or "burrow builder" is useful for control on the flatlands where it can be used, he said. The machine makes an artificial tunnel and drops poisoned grain into it and "for some reason — we don't know why — gophers are attracted to soil disturbances." Gopher attacks on buried cable have long been a problem for telephone companies, he added.

Case cautioned against indiscriminate control of the rodents, however. "We want to control, not eradicate, pocket gophers," he emphasized. "We don't know yet how they fit into the ecosystem, so we don't want to wipe gophers off the face of Nebraska."

One thing that is known about gophers is that Nebraska is home to more than one kind. The northern pocket gopher inhabits a small area in the state's northwest corner and in the Panhandle. The Plains pocket gopher is more prevalent, and in fact, two different species are found in Nebraska.

"U.S. highway 281 in the eastern part of the state forms a sort of dividing line for the two genera. East of the highway you'll find big, dark brown gophers weighing about a pound," he said. West of the line, gophers are a lighter, sandy brown color and weigh in at about three-fourths pound.

Case is particularly interested in population dynamics of pocket gophers. Knowing age and sex ratios and life span will permit him to predict the size of a population and problems which might be associated with a particular gopher settlement.

Gophers are easily trapped, as Case's collection of 500 preserved gophers can testify. Eyes and ears of the rodents are poorly developed because the gopher has little need of them underground. But the gopher's digging equipment is very well suited to subterranean life. "Gophers loosen soil with their teeth which can be used with the mouth closed so they don't get dirt in their mouths," he explained. Claws are also used to loosen soil and the feet kick the dirt out behind the animal as it burrows. Gophers can also move backward quickly. "They're like little bulldozers," Case said.

And though little is known about the gopher's lifestyle, much can be said about his effects on the land, Case said. Gophers are solitary and "pugnacious," he said, getting together only to mate. Each individual may have several hundred feet of branching tunnel complete with nest chambers and food caches. Tunnels may reach depths of six feet since gophers are active the year around and need to be below the frost line in winter.

"Tunneling reduces plant vigor by destroying roots and some vegetation is smothered by the mounds gophers push up when they dig," Case explained. In addition, those mounds make good seed sites for weeds. In rangeland studies cited by Case, poor rangeland was not

Apply Early For Social Security

Anyone who expects to need a social security number should apply six to eight weeks before the number will be used. Dale Branch, social security district manager in Norfolk said recently.

Evidence of a person's age, identity, and citizenship status is required at the time of application. In addition, anyone 18 or over must apply in person at a social security office.

The best evidence of a person's age and citizenship status is a public or church record of birth recorded before the fifth birthday, or a baptismal record recorded before age 5, Branch said.

Many different documents can be used to provide identity, such as a driver's license, voter's card, some sort of ID card, club membership card, or similar items showing signature and personal information.

People born outside the United States should show their citizenship papers or immigration documents.

Photocopies cannot be used. The original of all documents should be submitted and all documents will be returned.

A leaflet, "Applying for a social security number," gives more information about evidence than can be submitted. Free copies can be obtained at the Norfolk, social security office.

THE ARMY WILL HELP YOU SAVE $14,100 TO $17,100 FOR COLLEGE.

In the Army, you can take advantage of the generous Veterans' Educational Assistance Program (VEAP, for short).

The program works like this:

You can enroll in VEAP when you join the Army. You contribute between $50 and $75 of your pay each month. The government then matches your savings two-for-one.

If you enlist for 2 years — you accumulate up to $1,800 of your own savings plus as much as $3,600 in the government's matching funds. On top of this the Army adds an ADDITIONAL $2,000 EXTRA giving you a total of $7,400 for only 2 years service.

If you enlist for 3 years you could qualify for an ADDITIONAL $4,000 contributed to your fund. The total then: $12,100 for your education.

If you enlist for 4 years instead of just 3, you're eligible for up to $2,000 more (which means $6,000 added to the basic fund). The maximum total: $14,100 which can finance a lot of education.

The new programs together with existing Army cash bonuses of up to $3,000 for training in certain skill areas, make it possible to earn up to $17,100 in cash and educational bonuses.

Coupons Really Save Money

Using coupons and sending in box tops can save you money in the long run. Industry spokesmen estimate the current average refund is worth about $1.25.

Refunds generally are offered only on nationally advertised brands. These items, however, may cost more than store brands or generic products so it's important to compare the price differences, warns Janet Wilson, extension consumer education specialist in the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Manufacturers spend an estimated $1 billion annually for cash refunds, and merchandise give-aways to consumers. That total reflects an increase in the numbers of coupons being used, as well as an increase in their monetary value, Wilson explained.

According to the survey, most coupon users are between 31 and 59 and live in a household of four or more members. It was also found that more people respond to offers included in the product package than to advertised or point of purchase offers.

Wilson said most refund offers run for at least four months and require no more than three proofs-of-purchase that are returned.

To help consumers keep track of all the available refund offers, a number of private individuals have started publishing refund bulletins which give information about the offers and include a section of tips for beginners as well as an exchange column.

It's important to remember that coupons and refunds aren't worthwhile if you won't use the product itself. Get into the habit of only clipping coupons for products you can use.

Buying something just to get the box top defeats the purpose of the coupon-and-refund plan, Wilson said.

Be Careful In Selecting Toys, Gifts

Christmas shopping is in full swing, and children clamor for toys of all kinds.

Before buying toys, ask yourself a few questions about the intended purchase, the Cooperative Extension Service says.

- Will it cut? A toy may have sharp edges, hard plastic or metal tabs.
- Will it come apart? Remember small pieces can be swallowed by a younger child.
- Will it bruise? Some toys are too heavy, awkward, or large for small children to handle.
- Will it strangle? A toy might have ropes, loops, or cords that a child could wind around his neck.
- Will it puncture or stick? Projectile toys, arrows, guns that fire can damage children's eyes. Suction tips on some toys can be removed too easily.
- Will it shock? Young children do not understand the dangers of electricity and should not be given electrically operated toys.
- Does common sense warn you about the safety of the toy? If there's any possible danger, don't buy it.
- The toy you buy should also encourage the child to be creative. It should last for several years. Above all, ask yourself if the toy is suitable to the child's age, his level of development and his range of interests. Toy buying is a serious business.

4-H Clubs Reorganize In Winter

Most 4-H clubs will be reorganizing during December and January. Now is the ideal time of the year to join 4-H. Any youngster who will be eight years old by Jan. 1, and not over 19 years of age is eligible for membership.

Anyone interested should contact a local 4-H leader or call the Dixon County Extension Office located in the Northeast Station near Concord and talk with Stan Starling or Val Schellpeper, 584-2261.

Interest has been expressed for formation of a new 4-H club in the Ponca area, with special emphasis on projects which are suitable for youths living in town or on small acreages. A meeting for families interested in knowing more about this club and some of the 4-H projects is to be held in Ponca during January, and those families expressing interest in the 4-H program will receive a special invitation to attend. Upon request, a similar program will be conducted in any area of Dixon County where it is needed.

During 1979, Dixon County had 260 boys and girls, ages 8-19, enrolled in the regular 4-H program. Many additional youth were enrolled in the special interest projects offered through the schools.

4-H is one of the largest youth organizations in America. It is pledged to develop the head, heart, health and hands. 4-Hers enroll in projects and participate in activities so they learn by doing. There are over 100 projects from which to choose, including topics related to foods, clothing, swine, beef small animals, small engines, woodworking, garden, child care, entomology and many more.

The only cost of membership is willingness on the part of the boy or girl to perform a piece of work according to their best ability using the resources available at home. There are no entry fees. Project and record books are provided. Projects such as making a dress, baking a cake, raising crops and livestock, or photography take some financing. These costs must be provided at home, but the product belongs to the member or his family.

4-H is one of the educational programs of the Cooperative Extension Service, Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, University of Nebraska-Lincoln, cooperating with the counties and the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Extension agents in Dixon County working with 4-H are Stan Starling and Val Schellpeper.

PACE Plans Poetry Readings

Wayne State College's Program for the Arts in Communities and Education (PACE) will sponsor poetry readings by six poets through the WSC Plains Writers' Circuit during the 1979-80 academic year. The readings are open free to the public.

The PACE group serves to promote the arts in Northeast Nebraska communities. The Plains Writers' Circuit brings writers with Midwestern backgrounds to the WSC campus in an effort to introduce contemporary poetry to students and the general public.

The coming readings are open free to the public and will each be held at 7 p.m. in the KWSC TV Studios in the Val Peterson Fine Arts Building.

Gary Gildner was the first poet to visit WSC under the 1979-80 PACE program. He gave a reading at WSC Nov. 13. Other poets scheduled to visit include:

Color for Fireplace Effective

Few people use a fireplace these days because of its inefficiency. But in case you're planning to open it up for a special holiday effect, you may want to add a little color.

Dennis Adams, UNL forester, has prepared a list of chemical solutions which can be used to treat evergreen cones, wood blocks, rolled newspapers or sawdust. Chemicals, with their corresponding flame color are these:

Potassium chloride (purple); copper chloride (blue); sodium chloride (yellow); copper sulfate (green); calcium chloride (orange); lithium chloride (carmine); strontium chloride (red).

Adams advised to soak the fuel materials for one day or more in a solution containing one pound of chemical per gallon of water. Mix in a wooden pail or earthen crock since the chemicals may damage metal containers. Fuel may be kept submerged by placing in a mesh or porous bag and weighting down.

As a note of caution, Adams says use rubber gloves, keep solutions away from children and pets, and do not use chlorates, nitrates or potassium permanganate.

The tiny island of Iona in the Scottish Hebrides is known as the "Blessed Isle" because it was the center of Celtic Christianity.
