Council Hikes Pool Fees

Swimming pool admission fees for residents and non-residents will be substantially higher this year after a special City Council meeting held Monday evening.

THE SPECIAL meeting was held to discuss and then approve new rates for the pool which, like many other programs of the city, is operating from year to year in a deficit condition.

The new rates as approved Monday are higher than those approved by the Council through a telephone motion last week. The rates also include a fee for pre-school youngsters, the first time toddlers will be charged for use of the wading pool.

The new rates also mark a substantial policy change in that different and higher fees will be charged to non-residents of the city of Wayne. The new rate structure is as follows.

RESIDENT Fees — 75 cents for children 5 and under; $1.25 for general admission; $18 for a single season ticket; and $40 for a family season ticket.

Non-Resident Fees — $1.75 for general admission; $25 for season single ticket; and $50 for season family ticket.

Last year's rates were 75 cents for general admission; $12.50 for a single pass; and $25 for a family pass. There were no "non-resident" fees last year.

City Administrator Darrell Brewington said there will be some problem in administering the fee structure because of the difference in resident and non-resident fees. However, Council members agreed there should be a difference in rates.

"PEOPLE who are not providing a tax support should be required to pay more," one Councilman said.

"We are faced with a situation that says we have some deficits and we need the additional revenue to keep it (the pool) open," another official added.

According to budget figures, the pool budget is about $25,000 annually. Yet, last year's pool income was only about $8,000, leaving a deficit of some $17,000.

THERE WAS some discussion — but no action — on reducing the number of hours the pool is open, eliminating the evening swim hour and cutting wages and/or staff. These will be considered more seriously prior to next year's pool season.

"It's a fact of life (that fees need to be raised), and people will have to get used to it," a Councilman said.

The pool opened Tuesday after city personnel recaulked joints in the bottom and sides of the pool. It was discovered last week that several thousand gallons of water were leaking from the pool daily because of poor seams.

Region IV Upholds Resident Change

Region IV Developmental Disabilities board of governors voted in regular session Thursday, May 22, to uphold a Feb. 28 decision to change residential services at the Wayne Children's Developmental Center.

EFFECTIVE July 1, residential services will be offered five days a week and the children will return home every weekend. Currently, children go home on alternate weekends. In making its February decision, the board cited cost considerations.

At its meeting last week, parents of children served in the Wayne program appeared before the board to argue in favor of leaving the program in its current format. The parents asked the board to reconsider its previous ruling.

After considerable discussion, a motion to rescind the previous action was defeated. Counties voting for the motion (or to rescind the previous action) were Antelope, Brown, Madison, Nance and Rock. Voting against were Boyd, Burt, Cedar, Colfax, Cuming, Wayne and Stanton counties. Not present were Platte, Thurston, Boone, Dakota, Dixon, Holt, Knox and Pierce counties.

IN OTHER business May 22, John Corcoran, Region IV executive director, advised board members of a study which has been undertaken to compare service costs of the Beatrice State Developmental Center and state regional mental retardation services programs.

This study will be conducted by the Touche-Ross accounting firm from Kansas City. Corcoran told the board that an accounting team will spend about two weeks examining financial matters in Region IV.

Results of the survey will provide information which will assist legislative and government officials with budget projections as well as with cost comparison figures. The executive director said he expects the firm to provide an objective, open study which will adequately measure service costs in each type of program.

GOVERNING board members expressed concern over the fate of the Norfolk Regional Center which Gov. Charles Thone has ordered closed. The board unanimously recommended that the Region IV executive director initiate contact with Gov. Charles Thone to indicate its (the board's) displeasure.

In other matters, the board:

- increased the mileage allowance from 17 cents to 21 cents per mile, following the state lead;

- received word that Region IV officials will meet with representatives of the State Office of Mental Retardation, the State Department of Public Instruction and Cherry and Keya Paha County personnel;

- heard a report concerning the preliminary 1980-81 operating budget;

- approved an additional expenditure for work on the new Adult Developmental Center in O'Neill;

- set June 20 as date for the board's annual meeting.

Kids Will Be Kids

SCHOOL IS OUT, can't you tell? Classes for the year had been out for only a few days when Bressler Park became the site of a time-honored water fight. Weapons ranging from ice cream buckets to paint pails to five gallon buckets were used for the confrontation between the youngsters.

School District Facing Cuts

The future of the Wayne Carroll School District appears to hold reductions in programs and staff. Supt. of Schools Francis Haun told Kiwanians Monday during their regular weekly luncheon meeting.

"THE DISTRICT is solvent, but in order to stay that way, we will have to make cuts in people and programs," he said. The board of education is considering five cuts in the budget including elimination of baseball and golf.

At the root of the problem, Haun said, is the rising cost of energy.

Another factor which has affected the district financially is the state imposed 7 percent lid limitation on budget revenues. "But the main problem is inflation," the superintendent said. "If it wasn't for inflation, we could live with the lid."

HAUN SAID interference by the state and federal governments also has caused the school district some headaches. "Many of the programs in a school are mandated by the Legislature," he noted. These include some physical therapy assistance, learning disabilities programs, and now pre-school children, for example.

Ten years ago he noted, the Legislature approved a teacher negotiations law which in effect allows the teachers to demand pay comparable to salaries in other school districts. Another factor which has affected a school district's finances is a court decision which says a district cannot plead hardship if teacher negotiations result in a settlement higher than 7 percent.

"THE LID LAW had nothing to do with teacher negotiations," Haun noted. Districts must reduce their budgets elsewhere in order to make up for salary packages that exceed the 7 percent.

The Court of Industrial Relations, which ultimately decides stalemates in the case of salary negotiations, is another example of local control loss, Haun said.

Inflation, the lid limit, energy costs, loss of local control and government meddling all have combined to create financial strains for the school district, Haun said. "There are no scientific methods or textbook solutions to solving these problems," he continued. "Nothing is sacred."

SOME OF THE programs that will be considered in reducing the budget are those which provide duplicate services such as golf and baseball, activities that generate no income such as music concerts, cross country, etc.; school programs with low pupil participation or a high pupil cost.

Haun said the district is governed by a lot of external factors which affect local control of finances. But, he said, there's only one way to meet the situation head on — and that is to cut.

He is convinced that a community like Wayne deserves quality programs within its school system. "I'm confident citizens will provide this type of quality," he said.

THE BOARD OF education Monday will discuss five proposed cuts in the budget. The suggestions, presented by Superintendent Haun at the May board meeting, are:

- Elimination of golf and baseball for a savings of $3,500; use of an Educational Service Unit nurse for a savings of $9,500; a reduction in force of four teacher aides, now serving grades 5 through 8 for a savings of $11,000, delaying purchase of a bus for one year for a savings this year of $21,000.

- A sixth suggestion — elimination of summer driver education — was approved at the last regular meeting, but was reinstated on a fee basis at a special meeting last month.

Total budget savings if all six changes are approved would be about $48,000.

Fund Drive Started To Help Fire Victim

A fund drive has been started for the girl who was briefly trapped in a fire Saturday morning that destroyed the Cal Ward home, 1037 Lincoln St.

PATTY SULLINS, who lived in a basement apartment in the Ward home, lost all of her belongings and escaped with only her night clothes shortly after the fire broke out about 3:30 a.m. The Wayne Volunteer Fire Department was notified about 4 a.m. and finally left the scene about 10 a.m.

Those interested in donating to the fund drive should contact the State National Bank or First National Bank. None of Sullins' belongings was insured.

INVESTIGATION continues into the blaze, with the State Fire Marshall's office looking over the scene Tuesday for a cause. Wayne Fire Chief Dick Korn said loss of the home and contents is estimated at more than $100,000.

Sullins was awakened by smoke and eventually had to climb out a basement window to escape. Smoke and heat blocked her other escape routes, according to reports. She finally aroused Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Olds who turned in the fire alarm.

Volunteers Are Key To Council's Success

by Mark Reinders

The Wayne Carroll School District board of education has an added feature to its effectiveness in the form of the Community Council.

THE COUNCIL works behind the scenes constantly to fulfill its goal of allowing children with special needs to utilize the skills that are necessary for independent living.

Volunteer recruitment, dissemination and research are the three major areas through which the council sees its goals achieved.

"WE WORK with the school board purely in an advisory capacity," Becky Keidel, past president of the council, explained. "The council is a separate entity from the board with volunteer workers from within the Wayne community."

At present, the council functions through five committees. Each has a definite list of objectives it strives to accomplish through its actions. Project Success, Project Predict and Prevent, Nutrition, Special Talents and Title Five are the committees that will be working in the system in the year ahead, Mrs. Keidel said.

PROJECT SUCCESS began 10 years ago with a grant from the federal government. The grant helped start the program which eventually aided in the schooling of students with learning disabilities.

"Through diagnostic testing in kindergarten and by recommendations from the teacher it is possible to pick out the student with a learning disability (LD) problem and try to correct it. The students are not mentally handicapped but simply have trouble learning from conventional teaching methods," Keidel said.

One method of aiding the LD student is through the use of sand trays. Sand trays are used on the first grade level to teach students basic phonetics.

COOKIE SHEETS filled with a layer of sand are the tools that help the LD child learn and apply phonetic sounds. Under direction of the teacher, the student draws the phonetic sound as dictated by the teacher into his sand tray, repeating the sound aloud to instill the sound into his vocabulary.

The learning process for this series usually takes two years to complete. After this time, the student is "mainstreamed" back into the regular classroom curriculum. This involves placing the student back into the normal classroom situation.

Plastic milk bottles converted into "talk backs" also help students learn different phonetic sounds.

THE BOTTLES are cut into a shape that allows the student to place it around his chin and place the two ends over his ears. The child then repeats a phonetic sound and is able to hear his own voice making the sound.

It is volunteers of the council that construct the sand trays and the "talk backs". In addition to the time spent by the volunteers, money and supplies also come from the volunteers.

"We have no budget," Mrs. Keidel explained. "Much of the money used to make the materials comes out of individual pockets of the members of the council," according to Keidel.

DEDICATION and work are the types of efforts that helped the Wayne school system be recognized, after two years, by the federal education department with its approval of the program.

Five years ago another phase of the council took shape in the form of Project Predict and Prevent. This project zeroed in on pre-school children with such handicaps as Downs Syndrome, blindness, hearing loss, etc.

Focus of the project committee was to identify and avert problems of these children through volunteer work.

THE COMMITTEE decided to utilize the parent to be the teacher in this situation because the parent is the best teacher at this point in a preschooler's life," Keidel said.

Working with Educational Service Unit No. 1, the committee organized a system where parents could contact ESU if they felt their child might have a learning disability. The ESU and the council then could watch the child's progress and pick them up at grade school level to monitor their progress.

THE COUNCIL, in addition to its volunteer work, also works within the legislature to ensure educational progress. Recently, the council worked within the legislature in regard to the lid proposal.

The nutrition factor of the council has played a variety of roles in the past.

Last year during parent-teacher conferences, a display board and information were given to parents in hopes of informing them on methods of achieving better nutrition.

The committee also arranged a seminar featuring Marge Summers, who is in charge of the hot lunch program at the school. Summers spoke to the group about what it takes to make her job work smoothly, how she operates within a budget and federal regulations she must abide by. She finished her talk with a question-and-answer session.

The nutrition committee is also working on a booklet for National Hot Lunch Week this fall. The booklet will contain information on Wayne's hot lunch program, nutrition and snack recipes for the conscientious eater.

AN ADDITIONAL committee that is being set up for this fall is the special talents section. This committee, which is in the process of being formed, would search for academically talented students and give them the opportunity to accept further academic responsibilities.

"Research has shown that the educational system of today sometimes burns out the gifted student by piling on too much work," Mrs. Keidel said. "Our committee would rather see an enrichment program for these gifted students through field trips and other such activities," she explained.

"Our group proposes an alternate method. We would place volunteers with these students and work with them on an individual pace that they could handle," she continued.

THE COUNCIL also has been instrumental in forming new playground equipment on the elementary and middle school levels. With the assistance of Don Koehn, physical education instructor, and Pearl Hansen, WSC art instructor, work began on the construction of the equipment. The new equipment will enable students to use skills learned through some of their motor perception classes taught by Koehn.

The equipment is color coded to designate different muscles used for that particular piece of equipment. The new equipment incorporates motor perception with recreation.

The council's membership role currently numbers about 60 on the mailing list with about 30 members who regularly attend meetings. Interested persons who want to get involved with the council's work are urged to contact Kathy Schultz, current president of the council.

"Perhaps the philosophy of the council best describes its work and efforts to get the goals achieved, Mrs. Keidel said.

The philosophy is summed up in these words: "When parents, teachers and lay citizens work together and truly become one community, you can expect miracles to happen in the lives of children and youth."

Increase in Rabies Reports Brings Caution

There has been an alarming increase in the number of rabies cases reported in the area this year, reports Ken Liska of the Wayne Veterinary Clinic.

As a result, area residents are urged to be on the lookout for domestic and wild animals that might be carriers of the fatal disease.

A RABID STEER was reported on the Robert Shulthels farm last week, which Liska said was unusual. In all, the steer and five skunks have been found to be rabid in this area, and a rabid steer was reported near Wakefield several weeks ago.

Normally, only five or six cases of rabies are reported in a year's time, but that many have been found in this area in the first six months, the veterinarian said.

Liska said area residents should avoid and report any animals that exhibit abnormal behavior. This includes domestic as well as wild varieties. While all animals can be infected, skunks are the primary carriers of the disease.

THERE have been some reports of skunks chasing cars and machinery, of animals frothing at the mouth, of peculiar behavior and of animals showing no fear of humans - all characteristics of rabid animals.

A rabid skunk was shot in the vicinity of the Shulthels farm a few weeks before the rabid calf was reported, Liska noted.

Skunks are the most vulnerable carrier of rabies because they are a perfect reservoir for the rabies virus. The physiological makeup of a skunk makes it more susceptible to carrying rabies, Liska explained.

"AND I SHOULD point out that skunks are poor candidates for pets for this reason," he added.

The sudden increase in reported rabies cases shows the importance of vaccinating our door dogs. Besides, the veterinarian noted, it is state law that all dogs be vaccinated against rabies.

Liska said he believes there are more cases of rabies this year because the skunk population is higher than normal. When the number of skunks is high, the incidence of rabies tends to be high, he explained.

The disease can be transmitted through a break in the skin of any animal - including humans. The virus attacks an animal's nervous system by traveling the nerve trunks (rather than the circulatory system) to the brain.

THE INCUBATION period after being infected is from 10 to 50 days, but there are reports of animals living and carrying the disease for up to two years. Liska also noted that there is no known cure once the virus has reached the brain. However, if treated with vaccine during the incubation period, the disease usually can be halted.

Area farmers should be wary of livestock that are frothing at the mouth and that act as though they are choking. These are characteristic signs of rabies and a veterinarian should be contacted before touching the cow.

ANYONE suspecting that an animal is rabid should contact a veterinarian. A sample of the animal's saliva will be sent to the State Health Department lab in Lincoln for testing. Test results are determined in about 72 hours.

Boat Accident Injures Some

At least three Wayne residents were injured in a boating accident Sunday, May 25, on the Nebraska side of Lewis and Clark Lake.

Seven people in all were injured, with some of those from South Dakota. Three from Wayne injured included Tim D. Kell, driver of the Nebraska boat, who was treated and released; Susan Terwilliger, held for observation; and Steve Tunik, who received a broken jaw.

There were two other Wayne people injured, but Yankton hospital reports did not list the towns of those treated and released.

Yankton County Game Warden Bob Schuurmans said the collision occurred about 3:30 p.m. between the 17-foot Nebraska boat and a 16-foot South Dakota boat.

The Nebraska craft was carrying five passengers and was destroyed in the accident. Schuurmans said the South Dakota boat was carrying four people and pulling two water skiers and also was heavily damaged.

Schuurmans said the seven injured people were treated at a Yankton hospital. He said the Nebraska side of the lake was crowded with boat traffic the day of the accident because boaters stuck to the bluffs on that side of the lake to escape strong winds.

Regional Center Closing Angers Some

CAPITOL NEWS
By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

A number of state senators are perplexed, angry, disturbed and even incensed about the way a decision was made to eventually close the Norfolk Regional Center.

They think state executives, especially Gov. Charles Thone and state Institutions Director W. Ralph Michener, went over their heads and stepped on their toes. The discontent became quite evident during a recent hearing of the Legislature's Public Health and Welfare Committee, which is taking matters into its own hands by planning a June 10 tour of the facility and a special public meeting in Norfolk.

Sen. John R. Murphy of South Sioux City, among others, is mad about the way he was invited to a Department of Public Institutions meeting concerning the proposed shutdown. Murphy said the true intent of the meeting was never disclosed, possibly leading some senators to believe the session wasn't urgent so they didn't need to rearrange their schedules to attend.

Michener apologized for the vague invitation, but said it was important to avoid press leaks and hold private informational sessions before the announcement was made publicly.

Sens. Elroy Heimer of Coleridge and Tom Kennedy of Newman Grove also expressed displeasure with what they hinted was a two-man power play, possibly aimed at avoiding legislative intervention.

The senators noted that members of the Legislature, which established the Norfolk center in 1965, weren't even consulted during the decision-making process. They also noted that Thone, who they hope will back off the closure proposal, signed the center's budget bill shortly before events at the regional center led Michener to his decision.

Some senators have alleged that Michener and Thone took a back-door approach to closing the center by using Michener's "transfer" authority to close the center and leave closure as the only remaining alternative.

Meanwhile, a lawsuit has been filed in Lancaster County District Court challenging the proposed closure. A key legal question in the controversy is whether Michener overstepped his legal bounds and whether officials other than legislators can shut down the facility.

But Michener has brushed off some legislative criticism about the apparent haste of his decision. He stressed that the unexpected disclosure in mid-April that two of the center's psychiatrists were leaving forced him to act quickly. He added that $2.5 million annual savings was a consequence of the decision to close the center, and not the reason for it.

Still, the controversy goes on, with some senators seriously questioning Michener's reasoning. Should a facility be closed every time someone quits? They asked, suggesting a financial saving in itself might be a good enough reason for closure.

In addition to their June 10 tour and hearing in Norfolk, concerned senators have promised to keep a close eye on the pending lawsuit in Lancaster County District Court.

Thone hits the trail
Gov. Charles Thone has hit the road again, this time traveling to western Nebraska. The three-day tour during the last week of May, which was part of his pledge to keep in touch with the people, took him to Chadron, Alliance, Scottsbluff, Gering, Kimball, Sidney, Chappell, Ogallala and North Platte.

During one stop over, Thone said the best way to curb continued state spending is to form a united front to break the "iron triangle" of state legislators, special interest groups and state government bureaucracy.

Thone has set up a government improvement task force, which he sees as one way to find constructive suggestions on how to break that triangle.

Thone also took the opportunity to talk to his western Nebraska audience about agriculture, which he said is in a very desperate state and could hurt Nebraska more than the national economic downturn. Although the governor said he's sure the nation is in a recession, he predicted Nebraska wouldn't be hit too hard.

But Thone stressed that he's more concerned right now about current agricultural problems than the national recession because the financial woes facing the state's farmers and ranchers have a "hard and heavy" impact on Nebraska.

On another matter, Thone told followers during a tour of the Burlington Northern railroad's yards in Alliance that the rails offer a "great" industry for the Panhandle and western Nebraska.

And during his stop over in Chadron, Thone was forceful in asserting that Chadron State College is "an important link in Nebraska education."

Pitfalls in western roads
Civic leaders in the Panhandle communities of Scottsbluff and Gering don't like what roads are doing — or not doing — to the twin cities.

State Roads Director David O. Coolidge got an earful recently when members of the Scottsbluff-Gering Chamber of Commerce charged that substandard highways are stifling the growth of the twin cities, not to mention the entire Nebraska Panhandle.

To make its point perfectly clear, the Chamber has drafted and adopted a resolution that says the substandard highways prevent ready accessibility for tourism and marketing of trade products in the Panhandle.

Those concerns were voiced during a town hall meeting in Scottsbluff, attended by Coolidge, Deputy State Engineer Charles Nutter, District V Engineer Jim Jensen and state Highway Commissioner Paul Mohr of Scottsbluff.

The state officials heard pleas for the expansion of U.S. 26 into a four-lane highway to connect Interstate 80 at Ogallala with Interstate 25 at Dwyer Junction in Wyoming. The resolution, in calling for the expansion project, said the Scottsbluff-Gering area has been "outpaced by our neighbors, who are adequately served by highways and roads."

The same road-improvement plea can be heard statewide, and depleted road funds have many state officials worried. But Coolidge told Chamber members during the town hall meeting that chances for the project are slim. He said the current state project list would not be expanded until existing projects are completed in 1985.

Roll backs reappear
A number of Nebraska counties recently have taken action on their property values that may be illegal.

The Hall, Box Butte, Scotts Bluff, Greeley and Fillmore County boards of equalization have adopted reduced valuation figures, a move that state Tax Commissioner Fred Harrington says may be illegal.

The state Board of Equalization a year ago proposed major increases in property values statewide, a move that was aimed at finally achieving equalization across Nebraska. By August 1979, the board's order was final, and most of the state's 93 counties were handed substantially higher values.

Although a handful of Panhandle counties appealed the order to the Nebraska Supreme Court, where their challenges were pending, most other counties did nothing. But in the last month the number of counties deciding to roll back valuations has been increasing.

Hall County Supervisor Bob Boehm views the situation this way: "(The county) is an arm of state government, but when the state makes a blunder like they did, I think it behooves us to consider our own taxpayers and citizens."

The most recent roll backs, which are not necessarily unprecedented, likely will stir up considerable public discussion and may even prompt other counties to follow suit.

WAY BACK WHEN

30 years ago
June 1, 1950: The confirmation class at St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Winside, would confuse the experts. Out of the 15 members of the class, there are three sets of twins. The twins are Leo and Leon Asmus, Lorraine and LeRoy Heier, and Dean and Gene Klueder. Three Wayne flower "growers" took home a tri-color ribbon for particularly distinguished exhibits in the Wayne Woman's Club flower show Tuesday at the city auditorium. The tri-color award was won by H.H. Hahn, who swept the iris section of the show. Mrs. W.C. Coryell won the tri-color for a mantel or buffet arrangement of a bridge table.

25 years ago
June 2, 1955: Two Wayne volunteers left Thursday after enlisting in the Navy. They are Kenneth Kluge, son of Mr. and Mrs. E.A. Kluge, and Don Schulz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Schulz. They will be sent to Great Lakes Naval Training Station for boot training. A quarter section five miles west of Carroll, part of the late H.G. McCuskey estate, was sold to Rudy Vlasak at public auction last Wednesday for $159 per acre. The season's first tornado damaged several farms south and east of Wayne last Thursday but injured no one. Heavy rains followed in the wake of the wind, ranging up to two inches in spots. Striking about 5:30 p.m. the twister first hit the Elmer Harrison farm three and a half miles southeast of Wayne, then went to the Herman Luschen place, then continued its northeast path through the Mark Stringer, Harris Sorensen and Leland Herman farms northeast of Wayne.

20 years ago
June 2, 1960: The U.S. Senate this week confirmed the nomination by President Eisenhower of Carl J. Mann to be postmaster at Hoskins. Warren M. Rodgers, son of Mrs. Erma Rodgers, Wayne, was graduated from high school at Oklahoma Military Academy May 20. He will return to the school in the fall to begin his first year of college, majoring in business administration. Rev. Richard Cullec, Norfolk, was guest speaker at eighth grade commencement exercises last Thursday at St. Mary's Catholic School. Rev. William Kleffman presented diplomas to Judy Bilson, Cecilia Haberer, Margaret Haese, Sandra Whorlow and Carol Chance. Pay raises totaling about $3,250 annually were granted to Wayne city employees at a council meeting Tuesday night. The council approved across the board increases of $15 per month for each of the 18 municipal employees. The hike was the first for city workers since a seven percent raise in November, 1958.

15 years ago
June 3, 1965: Wayne may not have municipal tennis courts this year or even the next but the Wayne Lions Club is at least making a study of the situation. Cost is the first factor to be determined. Dixon is joining the group of Northeast Nebraska communities celebrating their 75th birthday this year. At a meeting recently, initial plans were made for the observance scheduled for Aug. 14, 1965. Wayne's accident free period lasted exactly two weeks. An accident May 15 was the last one reported in the city until two cars collided May 26. The Wayne Masonic Lodge has purchased land on which to build a new masonic temple. It may be as long as five years before construction actually begins. Land at Tenth and Pearl across from Bressler Park was purchased for the building.

10 years ago
June 4, 1970: Doreen Thomsen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Thomsen of Wakefield, was graduated from Concordia Teachers College at Seward Saturday, receiving the bachelor of science in education degree with a major in mathematics. The Lutheran Teacher Diploma was also awarded as an additional mark of acceptance as a minister of religious education in schools of the Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod. Dick Hammer and Mrs. Jerry Bosc were named Mr. and Mrs. Jaycee of the Year during the annual JC awards banquet Tuesday evening. Seven or eight bombs were thrown at two buildings on the Wayne State campus about 1 a.m. Wednesday morning, resulting in smoke and fire damage to both the administration building and the Student Union.

Senior Citizens Gain From State Acts: Thone

"Senior citizens of Nebraska gained more than $7 million in annual benefits from 1980 unicameral actions which had my support."

"The legislature did not provide as large an increase in property tax relief for those over 65 as had recommended, but with the help of Omaha Senator Bernice Labedz we hope to address this problem in the next legislative session."

"Before the 1980 unicameral met, there was an existing program to provide property tax relief to the elderly. The state, of course, does not collect any property taxes, but replaces with its funds the money lost to the local governments because of the state mandated homestead exemption for senior citizens."

"A 50 percent increase in state funds to allow expanded property tax exemptions for the elderly was proposed by me. The bill passed by the legislature provides for less than a 20 percent increase in such state funds."

"The legislature approved changing property tax forgiveness for those over 65 from the previous $25,000 valuation to $35,000. For the fiscal year beginning July 1st it is estimated that this additional tax forgiveness on $10,000 valuation per elderly home will cost the state $5 1/2 million. The $25,000 per elderly home exemption has an estimated cost of $28 million in the coming year, so the total state cost is expected to be $33 1/2 million."

"Nebraska has had two state homes for older veterans, but none in the most populous eastern part of the state. I signed into law a bill that will convert a former Douglas County building into a veterans' home at a cost of $1.4 million.

"In the coming year, state funds will for the first time help support local programs to provide services to senior citizens. This will require $232,000 in state funds."

A Letter From

Gov. Charley Thone

"For this next year, $431,000 is available from the federal government to help provide part-time jobs for the elderly. The funds are allocated at the direction of the Governor. In programs such as Green Thumb, senior citizens work to make community improvements. These programs not only provide a supplement to those who have inadequate Social Security benefits but also provide great benefits to communities, while giving a tremendous boost to the self-respect of those taking part."

"Much of what we all enjoy today was made possible by hard work and sacrifice of our senior citizens. State actions can help in showing citizen gratitude for those contributions."

Dear Editor:

I would like to thank the citizens of Wayne for making the Multiple Sclerosis Drive so successful.

Also, thanks to the members of the Wayne Eagles Auxiliary and Teen Eagles and their leaders for going door to door; Jan Gamble for being co-chairman and KTCH and The Wayne Herald for advertising the drive.

All support was greatly appreciated.

Dear Editor:

Opinions are often printed to educate or discipline.

This one is to express the despair we felt concerning the condition of the place set aside for our loved ones, who are deceased. (The Wayne Cemetery).

Memorial Day should be a day to honor with dignity, their memory. It is a special day for many.

Volunteer services would have been offered to correct the situation. Many did the best they could on their own with such short notice.

To show such disrespect is unbelievable! An apology for this discourtesy by the persons responsible is in order.

However, it would be a poor substitute.

"Let us welcome those who may come to us from the outside world, to stop, perchance, for a meal or shelter over night. They will inform us of much that we are eager to know, discuss the world's events and hear another side to different questions, than those what we are familiar with and thus broaden our minds and be happier and more contented as the winter glides away."

HOW TO BE A CHRISTIAN WITHOUT BEING RELIGIOUS

Do you sometimes feel trapped into playing a game called "church"? Are you going through religious motions in order to please a God who probably isn't happy with those motions anyway? The Christian life is a rich relationship with God, not a religious treadmill — there is a way off the religious treadmill.

This is what we are considering in our new CHRISTIAN GROWTH CLASS on Sunday mornings at 9:30. Christianity is one of the world's greatest religions isn't it? Yes indeed. The greatest. But Christianity is more than religion because every religion has one basic characteristic.

Its followers are trying to reach God, find God, please God through their efforts. Religions reach up toward God. Christianity is God reaching down to man. Christianity claims that man have not found God, but that God has rescued man. To some this is a crushing blow. They prefer religious effort — dealing with God on their own terms. This puts them in control. They feel good about "being religious."

Christianity, however is not a religious striving. To practice Christianity is to respond to what God had done for you. The Bible simply and clearly reveals what He has done for us.

Prather Is 'Expert' Teacher at Emerson

Pat Prather's work at Emerson-Hubbard High School has been recognized as outstanding.

Mrs. Prather, whose husband, Frank, is the head of the math and science division at Wayne State College, has been cited as an expert teacher of composition by the Nebraska Writing Project of the University of Nebraska at Lincoln.

This honor brings Mrs. Prather a prize of $500, association with other writing instructors in the project workshop this summer, and the invitation to share her expertise with other teachers around the state.

The Nebraska Writing Project was established with funds from the National Endowment for the Humanities to identify and support excellent composition teaching.

First-rate teachers are invited to Lincoln to share instructional ideas and to work together on their own writing. They are encouraged to view themselves as writers as well as teachers, and to serve as models for other teachers of writing. After the workshops, the participants constitute a pool of experts who are called upon to make presentations to other writing teachers at project workshops around the state during the school year.

Professor Lee Whip, director of the project, said he is particularly happy Mrs. Prather decided to join the program. Her participation, he says, will strengthen the summer workshop and improve the service which professional English teachers can provide the Wayne area schools.

JEFF ZEISS scores a run against Sioux Falls in the semifinals of the Chuck Ellis Memorial Tournament as umpire John Torczon and the Sioux Falls catcher watch the action in the outfield. Wayne won the game with a seventh inning rally and advanced to the finals against Sioux City Heelan.

Legion Makes Way to Finals; Heelan Holds on to Win Title

The Wayne Juniors never gave up but came up just short in their quest to win the Chuck Ellis Memorial Tournament at Wakefield, Sunday night.

Wayne, which trounced Sioux City North and Sioux City West by identical 9-1 scores in earlier tournament action, took advantage of a story book ending to eliminate Sioux Falls but fell short in the finals, losing to Sioux City Heelan 4-3.

Three members of the runner-up Wayne Legion team were named to the Chuck Ellis All-Star team. Tim Pfeiffer, Kevin Nissen and Jeff Zeiss represented the locals on the All-Star list.

Wayne coach Hank Overlin was disappointed that another Wayne standout, "Herman" Carroll was not named to the select team. Carroll pitched a four hitter against West and collected three doubles and two singles in the tournament.

"Herman should have been picked to the All-Star team. Whoever picked the team must have been watching the other teams play," Overlin said. "Herman should have joined the players already named to the list. He had a good tournament."

The All-Star selections were not the only thing to go against Carroll. In the fifth inning of the final game, Carroll blasted a fly ball against the center field wall.

While rounding second base enroute to a sure triple, Carroll's leg popped and he fell down, barely able to retreat to second base. He was carried off the field and spent the final two innings lying on the dugout bench. No diagnosis was available on Sunday.

Wayne coach Hank Overlin reported on Wednesday that a doctor's examination revealed that Carroll's injury is a knee sprain. He is expected to miss about two weeks of baseball action.

The final game was a thriller which went down to the wire.

Heelan reached the finals by virtue of two extra inning games and one disputed game. The Sioux Cityans nipped Wisner 10-9 in eight innings, lopped Norfolk 11-6 in eight innings and played Omaha Creighton Prep to a 5-5 tie.

The Prep game was called because of rain after Heelan appeared to have scored the winning run on a disputed call. Because Prep's schedule didn't permit participation in Sunday's action, Heelan advanced to the finals.

Sioux City scored two runs in the bottom of the third on a two run double by Joe Mousal. Wayne rallied with two runs in the top of the fourth. Kevin Nissen and Pat McCright walked and scored on a two run single by Jeff Dion.

Heelan regained the lead with a run in the fourth and took a 2-2 advantage with another run in the fifth. Bruce Schafer scored Wayne's final run in the top of the seventh but the locals rally fell short. The final Wayne batter grounded out with bases loaded.

Overlin indicated that his team made too many mistakes on the basic fundamentals of the game and needs to work on the mistakes in practice.

Morris Pulls Through
Jere Morris drove in two runs with a clutch single to lead Wayne to a 6-5 win over Sioux Falls Blackbirds in Sunday's first game.

Trailing 5-4 in the bottom of the seventh and final inning, Jeff Zeiss walked, Kevin Nissen singled and Pat McCright was hit by a pitch. With bases loaded and two outs, Morris drove a single into left field to score the tying and winning runs.

Both Wayne Teams Win

Juniors Squeeze Past Laurel

A squeeze bunt by Jeff Dion in the top of the eighth inning brought Jeff Zeiss home with the winning run as Wayne's Junior edged Laurel 3-1, Tuesday night in Laurel.

In Midget action, Wayne topped Laurel 7-5. Both Ralph Bishop League opening games were originally scheduled to be played Monday night but were postponed because of rain.

In the Legion game, Kevin Nissen and Tim Pfeiffer teamed up to pitch a two hitter for Wayne and Paul Guern and Joe Olsen teamed up to toss a two hitter for Laurel.

After five scoreless innings, Wayne put a run on the scoreboard in the top of the sixth inning. Jeff Zeiss drew a walk, moved to second on a bunt single by Jere Morris, stole third and scored on an error.

Laurel tied the game up in the bottom of the inning. Brian Buss reached first base by virtue of an error, stole second, reached third on a passed ball and scored when Wayne attempted to pickoff Mark McCorkindale at first base.

The seventh inning was scoreless so the game went into extra innings. Wayne did the damage in the top of the eighth when Zeiss and Morris both scored. Zeiss and Morris walked and Tim Pfeiffer reached first on an error to load the bases.

After a strikeout for the first out, Dion brought Zeiss home with a bunt. Dan Mitchell and Pat McCright drew walks to bring in Morris for the insurance run. Shannon Hopkins collected both of Laurel's hits and Jere Morris made both of Wayne's hits. Eight Wayne batters and 13 Laurel batters struckout.

Midget Action

Wayne's Midgets scattered seven runs over six innings to stomp Laurel 7-5 in Tuesday night's opening game.

The visitors struck first when Jim Sperry scored in the first inning. Sperry reached base on an error, stole second, took third base on a passed ball and scored on a sacrifice by Al Lindsay.

Laurel responded to the threat with two runs of its own in the bottom of the first. Dave Marquardt scored on a base hit by brother Brian Marquardt and Brian scored on a one run single by Phil Martin.

Wayne jumped out in front as Jeff McCright scored in the second. Al Lindsay, Jeff Allen and Mark Hummel scored in the third and Todd Pfeiffer added a run in the fifth.

With a 6-2 lead, Steve Rethwisch scored Wayne's final run in the sixth inning. Trailing by five runs, Laurel managed to score three quick runs in the bottom of the sixth. Dave and Brian Marquardt and Phil Martin crossed the plate for the hosts.

For Wayne, Jeff McCright was the leading hitter with a double, a single and three RBIs. For Laurel, the Marquardt brothers and Martin collected two hits each.

THE SECOND PLACE trophy is accepted by the Wayne Juniors after their loss to Sioux City Heelan, Sunday night in the Chuck Ellis Memorial Tournament. Wayne dumped Sioux City North and Sioux

West 9-1, edged Sioux Falls 5-4 in the semifinals but fell just short of winning the championship against Heelan.

Fun Run Planned Sunday

The Wayne fun runners club is organizing another "fun run" for Sunday, June 8. The race is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. on the Wayne State College track.

The run will again be a "Name your distance, guess your pace" run, similar to the one that was held in May. Everyone is invited to participate in the event.

Randy's Recap

According to Randy Huscall

HOW MANY people remember Steve Heying? Heying was an All-American baseball player at Wayne State College in 1973. I didn't enroll at WSC until 1974 so I never did meet the man and don't really remember much about him.

The NAIA All-American is now a graduate assistant coach at Pan American University in Edinburg, Texas. Under head coach Al Ogletree, Pan American built a 61-16 record this season.

Heying is working on his master's degree at Pan American, a state university with 9,600 students. The Broncos won 29 straight games, the second longest winning streak in NCAA Division I history. They lost in the NCAA playoffs at Austin, Tex. to the University of Hawaii, 8-4 and to the Texas Longhorns, 7-4. Hawaii is now in the driver's seat to win the College World Series.

"Steve Heying is a real fine coach," said Ogletree, who has led Pan Am to the NCAA playoffs 10 times in 11 years. "We're real fortunate to have Steve here as a graduate assistant. He's an All-American and he works real hard. He played third base and right field in pro ball and he works with both our outfield and infield." The former WSC standout lives in Edinburg with his wife Pat and son Scott. He is originally from Granville, Ia. and coached in Iowa and New Mexico before becoming grad assistant at Pan Am.

IF HEYING'S last name sounds familiar but you don't recognize his first name, that may be because younger brother Randy was a fine pitcher at Wayne State this past season.

Randy, a freshman, completed the season with a 3-2 record and a 3.29 earned run average, second best on the team.

DOUG BARCLAY, brother of Wayne State football coach Ralph, may be making his movie debut this summer. Barclay, formerly a coach in the Wayne area, was filmed in a Steve McQueen movie earlier this year. If the footage is used in the McQueen movie, Doug will be on the big screen.

Doug was filmed in a chase scene, a scene where he leaves in an airplane with McQueen and one other scene. When I asked Ralph about his brother's movie debut, the WSC coach jokingly called his brother "a dummy". According to Ralph, Doug framed the check he received as payment for being in the movie. Ralph said he should have taken a picture of the check, framed the picture and cashed the check.

WAYNE STATE WON'T have to worry about facing Morningside pitcher Mike King again. King, one of the best collegiate pitchers in the country, was the fourth draft choice in Tuesday's major league free agent draft of amateurs.

King had haunted Wayne State batters and batters and nearly every other team he faced throughout his three year career at Morningside. The Oakland A's selected King in the first round.

The Morningside junior has one year of college eligibility remaining but will pass it up to accept the professional challenge. Pitching in 26 games for the Chiefs, King posted seven no-hitters, five one-hitters and six two-hitters. He threw a no-hitter against Big Ten champion Michigan State in 1979.

King will be worth keeping an eye on when he joins the A's. The only other Morningside player to reach the majors was Paul Splittortel, the career win leader for the Kansas City Royals.

QUOTE OF THE WEEK comes from the Chuck Ellis Memorial Baseball Tournament at Wakefield, Sunday evening.

On one particular play in the Sioux City Heelan-Wayne game, Heelan first baseman Wally Emerson and Wayne catcher Dan Mitchell made contact in a close play at the plate. Emerson has signed to play fullback at Wayne State and Mitchell has signed to play as a WSC linesman.

An inning later, when Mitchell singled and reached first base, Emerson said "I'm glad I've got you blocking for me next fall."

Return to 'Land Down Under' Next Move for Winside's Reeves

When Doug Reeves accepted a coaching position at Winside High School two years ago, he brought with him some goals which were never achieved.

Now Reeves hopes to reach his goals and to do so, he plans to return to Australia.

Reeves, a native of Spencer, Ia. and his wife Kristi who is from Waterbury, Ia. attended college at the University of Northern Iowa. The couple learned about teaching opportunities in Australia when visiting the college placement bureau.

Both were selected for interviews in Australia and since neither had any strong ties, they loaded up and flew to the land "down under" with 500 other teachers.

Reeves said the Australian schools were similar to American schools and wages were comparable or greater. Students studied the same subjects but athletics in school were not as important, Reeves said. Each school had morning and afternoon tea breaks.

The Australia school year runs from mid February for 12 or 13 weeks, takes a two week break, continues for 12 or 13 more weeks, takes another two week break and then continues for 12 or 13 more weeks. Christmas time is similar to summer vacation, Reeves pointed out.

While in Aussie, Reeves was active in wrestling and track and field. He was a super heavyweight wrestler and qualified for state and national tournaments. He also threw the weights for a track club in Australia, weight events include the 16 pound shot, 24 pound shot, the caber, the hammer and the javelin.

As an athlete, Reeves broke his club javelin record, won a bronze medal in the shot put and set records in the Highland Games.

Reeves' main goal is to participate in the Pan American Games as a wrestler. "I'm a lock for life and I still have some personal goals to accomplish before devoting my life to coaching young people. I set my goals high and before I come back (to the United States) I hope to participate in the Pan Am Games. I also think I can qualify for the Commonwealth Games," Reeves said.

Reeves explained that caber throwing involves throwing a weighted bar end for end so that it lands as close to a perfect vertical position as possible. Other interesting events include throwing a 56 pound weight with one arm, a hammer throw and something similar to a vertical shot put, in which the contestant tries to clear a horizontal bar.

Discussing his two year term at Winside, Reeves said, "I really enjoyed my two years at Winside although I regret that we lived so far away (an acreage near Allen). There is a lot of scholastic and athletic talent at Winside and I hope the kids can recognize it and use it. Coaching there was a good experience that I don't regret."

"I'd like to thank the Winside community and the students and athletes who I had the privilege of working with. I hope I taught them the importance of goal setting and hard work to achieve their goals."

Reeves stated that he has mixed feelings about returning to Australia. When he and his wife left two years ago they obtained a re-entry stamp, enabling them to return Australia. They must return this year or the stamp will expire, Reeves explained.

The couple plans to return to the Melbourne area where they had lived previously and find jobs.

According to Reeves, Australia is Americanized and very similar to the U.S. but 5 or 10 years behind. Reeves said he can't wait to see the ocean, scuba dive, snorkel, travel and eat squid, shark and muscles. The Reeves family hopes to stay in Australia at least one or two years before returning to the states.

At Australia, Reeves was a club track and wrestling coach. High school athletics are not important or well organized so athletes participate in clubs, he said.

As a wrestling coach, Reeves said he coached 13 state place winners, four of whom qualified for junior nationals. In track and field, Reeves had one "super athlete who was blind in one eye and suffered from cartilage problems from a quick growth". He set five state records.

"He could hardly stand the pain but he set state records. I have to respect those types of individuals," said Reeves. "So many kids don't have the tools but are ambitious. Others have the abilities but don't use them."

Four Area Wrestlers Qualify for Nationals

Four Wayne area wrestlers qualified for the AAU national junior tournament by placing at the state meet, Saturday and Sunday in North Platte.

The junior tourney is open to wrestlers who are no older than 14 years of age. Nationals are scheduled Saturday and Sunday, June 14 and 15 in Bentendorf, Ia.

Kevin Koenig and Tim Book each placed second in their respective weight classes. Koenig wrestled in the 14 years and under 155 pound class. Book wrestled in the 12 and under heavyweight class.

Other qualifiers were Jon Jacobmeier and Chad Janke in the 14 and under age division. Jacobmeier placed fourth in the 100 pound class and Janke finished fourth at 80 pounds. Each age division was divided into 12 weight classes.

"These individuals did one heck of a job," said coach Don Koenig. The qualifiers did not represent a particular school in the state competition.

Midgets Sweep

The Wayne Recreation boys swept a doubleheader from Homer Thursday night at the Wayne ball park. The reserve Midgets won 8-4 and the varsity Midgets topped their counterparts 4-2.

In the nightcap, Todd Pfeiffer went three for three at the plate, collecting all of Wayne's hits. He drove in two of Wayne's four runs. Jim Sperry fired a one hitter to gain the victory.

Wayne scored in the first inning when Pfeiffer singled to drive in Jeff Allen. Eric Brink added a run in the second and Pfeiffer drove in Allen for the third run in the third. Pfeiffer then scored the final Wayne run in the fifth inning.

Homer scored its two runs in the top of the sixth.

Todd Pfeiffer and Steve Overlin led the hitting attack in the first game as Wayne rallied to an 8-4 win. The hosts scored all eight runs in the first inning to put the game out of reach early.

Pfeiffer led off the game with a single. Overlin doubled him home. Todd Schwarz laid down a sacrifice bunt. Tim Heier doubled. Steve Rethwisch reached

Legislation May Provide Solar Aid

Legislation agreed to by House and Senate conferees will provide major incentives for home and commercial use of solar energy, Congressman Doug Bereuter said this week.

"The compromise agreement, designed mainly to spur development of synthetic fuels, also provides for subsidized loans and grants to help homeowners and owners of commercial buildings install solar equipment," Bereuter said.

The legislation earmarks funds for increased synthetic oil and gas production and for alcohol-based fuel, solar energy and conservation measures, with the goal of reducing U.S. dependence on imported oil.

Bereuter made his remarks as he viewed an experimental solar water heater being tested by the Lincoln Electric System (LES). The heater's 80-gallon tank is designed to feed water heated by the sun into existing hot water tanks in homes. Officials at LES expect that future use of the solar water heaters will significantly reduce electric power loads during peak summer periods.

The pending legislation would establish a Solar Energy Development Bank to finance up to 50 percent of private investment costs for installing solar equipment, according to Bereuter. Financing - in the form of grants or interest rate subsidies for loans - would total $25 million over a three-year period, beginning in fiscal year 1981. The maximum subsidy for a single family house would be $5,000.

"These subsidies will greatly encourage widespread use of energy saving equipment, such as that being tested in Lincoln," Bereuter said. "I predict that the conference report on the legislation will be passed soon by the House and Senate and on the President's desk by July Fourth."

Lynn Holm Compiling Wakefield's History

Lynn Holm, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marilyn Holm, is in the process of compiling a history of Wakefield.

Miss Holm hopes to have the book published for Wakefield's centennial celebration next year. Persons with items of interest are asked to contact her.

Miss Holm began the project last December in conjunction with an independent study course at Midland Lutheran College in Fremont. The paper she turned in at Midland was based on the years 1881-95.

In searching for material for the paper, she visited the Historical Society in Lincoln, talked to some 20 longtime Wakefield residents, and spent many hours searching the Wakefield Republican files.

Miss Holm said pictures of Main Street, old business places and historical highlights of the community are being sought for her book. Persons with photos they would like to loan for use in the book are asked to contact Miss Holm or leave them at the Wakefield Republican office. All pictures will be returned to their owners in their original condition.

dolls for Christmas or for the annual Hospital Auxiliary. The club will not meet again until Sept. 24 at 1:30 p.m.

To Organize
 There will be a meeting at 8 p.m. Thursday, June 12, at the fire hall for persons interested in forming a women's group for Wakefield's centennial celebration.

Mrs. Kenneth Thomsen, chairman, said the public is invited to attend with lots of ideas to help the committee. She said suggestions also are needed for a name for the group.

Trend Leans Against Flood Protection in Parts of State

In future years there may not be as much floodwater protection built in some parts of Nebraska. Recent trends by people who favor more land treatment than dams, rising construction costs and interest rates may cause the reductions, according to Soil Conservation Service officials.

"People are now favoring more conservation work, flood plain zoning and flood proofing of buildings rather than constructing dams," said Benny Martin, SCS state conservationist.

Historically, many floodwater retarding dams built on agricultural land, have been part of a watershed protection plan. A watershed includes all the land within a given drainage area. Most watershed plans normally consist of a combination of soil conservation practices and structural measures installed to reduce erosion and improve the infiltration of the water.

A recent change in SCS policy permits the federal natural resources planning agency to allow for increased land treatment and no flood control dams in the watershed plans.

"Land treatment watersheds won't give a high level of flood protection but they will normally benefit more people," said Martin. "Another benefit to land treatment in these watersheds is that large terrace jobs or grade stabilization structures are not subject to the $3,500 limitation per person," he said. Some federal soil and water conservation cost-sharing programs are normally limited to $3,500 per landowner each year.

While the flood control dams are entirely paid for by the government, the land treatment practices will only have a percentage of the cost paid by the government. That percentage will be based on the other federal cost share rates in the county for the given practice to be installed.

Some of the measures eligible for cost sharing may include terraces, grade stabilization structures, grassed waterways, field windbreaks, terrace and windbreak renovation, sediment basins, waste storage ponds, waste treatment lagoons and certain water conservation practices that improve existing irrigation efficiency.

"Another big change is that participation in the program is entirely voluntary. Landowners don't have to take part if they don't want to. With the dams, if the majority of people wanted the structure, the individual landowner wouldn't have much choice because the natural resources district could use eminent domain.

"It also saves the natural resources district some money because now they don't have to obtain any land rights for construction," Martin said.

Land treatment watersheds can usually be planned much faster too. If the federal cost-share for construction of the land treatment is less than one million dollars, the plans can be approved by the state conservationist. This change cuts several years time in getting the plans finalized.

Bone Creek Watershed in Butler County is the first watershed planned with land treatment only. Recently, the sponsors of the Steven Callahan Watershed near Lincoln elected to go with more land treatment also.

"I don't think this means we've seen the end of watersheds with flood control dams, but I do believe the land treatment only watersheds could benefit many areas of Nebraska when the people don't want the larger structures," said Martin.

CAN YOU OUTGROW YOUR NEED FOR MILK?

"Milk is just for kids. I don't need it anymore?"

Sound familiar? It's a common misconception that we only need milk while our bones are growing. Actually, you never outgrow your need for calcium, and milk is our most practical source.

Research shows that as we grow old, we naturally lose some of the calcium in our bones. The result often is a bone weakening ailment called osteoporosis.

At least 10 percent of those over age 50 suffer from senile osteoporosis severe enough to cause bones to break, according to researchers. Osteoporosis is six times more common in women than in men.

Studies indicate that consuming recommended amounts of dairy foods can largely prevent osteoporosis. Most subjects studied with osteoporosis had a history of eating a low amount of dairy foods. As a result, they didn't get enough calcium in their diet.

Early in life we need calcium for bone growth. Then we need it to keep our bones strong. But after age 40, these studies show that eating dairy foods daily is still very important.

Following the recommendations of the Food and Nutrition Board of the National Research Council, nutritionists recommend that adults drink two or more glasses of milk daily. Young children should drink three 8-ounce glasses daily while teenagers, pregnant and nursing women should drink four or more glasses.

Many persons avoid milk and dairy products because they think they're fattening. Yet in 1976, only 11.2 percent of the calories in our food supply were contributed by dairy products (not including butter).

If you don't like milk, you can substitute other dairy products. An ounce of cheese roughly equals a glass of milk. Other excellent sources of calcium are yogurt and milk-based puddings. Calcium also is found in ice cream, soft cheese and cottage cheese.

The reticulated python of southeastern Asia has been known to grow to 28 feet.

Health Systems Agency Will Consider Projects

The Greater Nebraska Health Systems Agency's Northern Subarea Committee will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday in Norfolk.

Thirty committee members representing 21 counties in North-east and North Central Nebraska are expected to attend the meeting at Northeast Technical Community College's Community Room on Benjamin Avenue.

Louise Jenness, the director of nursing at Providence Medical Center, is Wayne County's provider representative.

Jane Jeffrey, co-owner of Jeff's Cafe, holds the consumer position on the committee.

The agency has approval or disapproval power over federal funds for health programs. The review criteria are approved by a governing board, which includes seven members from the Northern area.

Projects to be reviewed at the Monday meeting include:

- A request for $95,751 for Elk Horn Valley Rural Health Service, Inc. to establish, equip and staff a Rural Health Initiative clinic at Tilden with a satellite clinic at Battle Creek.

- A request for a one year grant of $98,723 for Burt Washington Home Health Care to establish a satellite home health care program at St. Francis Memorial Hospital in West Point.

The committee's recommendation on the project reviews will be forwarded to the Governing Board for final action on June 26th at the Holiday Inn in North Platte.

Welfare Abuse Hotline Active

A statewide toll free hotline for reporting suspected abuse or fraudulent use of Nebraska's welfare system officially was implemented May 16.

The Welfare Fraud Hotline is operated by the Department of Justice's Fraud Control Unit in cooperation with the Department of Public Welfare. The toll free number is 800 742 7398.

The hotline system, operating on a 24-hour basis seven days a week, is connected to an automatic answering service, permitting the caller to leave a recorded message.

The caller is not required to give his or her name, but the caller's identity, if given, is kept strictly confidential.

The caller should give the name and place of residence of the person suspected of abusing the system and the reason why abuse or fraud is suspected.

Bernard L. Packett, assistant attorney general who heads the Fraud Control Unit, said the purpose of the hotline is to encourage citizens to report suspected welfare abuse or fraud, whether involving recipients or providers of services to recipients.

The Nebraska hotline is patterned after a system used by the state of Washington. The Fraud Control Unit works with the Department, but will have primary responsibility for the investigation and preparation of fraud cases for legal action by county attorneys.

Welfare officials estimate more than 99 percent of Nebraska's welfare recipients and food stamp participants legally deserve assistance. The hotline is seen as a tool that can be used in the detection of the less than one percent who abuse or defraud the system.

Farm To Hold or to Sell Grain

Editor's Note: This is the fourth in a series of several articles developed by the Cooperative Extension Service in Lincoln. The articles provide some practical advice for making the best of a bad situation. The articles will deal with farm management practices, cropping decisions, marketing and financing.

Hold or sell grain?
To date, it appears many Nebraska grain producers have elected to hold rather than sell grain. The Jan. 1 stocks report shows an 11 percent increase in corn, a 13 percent increase in sorghum and a 51 percent increase in soybeans as compared to a year earlier. Wheat stocks were 4 percent lower.

The large stocks of grain are the result of a record 1979 crop plus low prices. At current price levels, few farmers can recover their total cost of production. As a result, many producers are deferring sales in hopes of higher prices later. Producers who are storing grain should consider the following:

1. Added storage costs.
2. Maintaining the quality of grain stored on the farm.
3. Available storage space for the 1980 grain crop.

With the sharp increase in interest rates, the cost of storing grain is much higher this spring. This is particularly true for those producers who have not sold their 1979 crop and are experiencing cash flow problems at planting time. The interest cost on production loans will be 18 percent or higher for many producers. At current price levels, the monthly interest costs associated with storing grain are:

Corn	3.3c/bu.
Wheat	5.1c/bu.
Soybeans	7.9c/bu.
Milo	5.6c/bu.

An additional 2 cents per month storage cost would be added to the interest expense for grain stored in commercial elevators.

As a result, a significant price rise will be required for producers to benefit from continued storage. The price for corn would have to increase 20 cents per bushel to cover the interest cost for storing until September. If the corn was in elevator storage the price would have to increase 32 cents per bushel. For a producer who is borrowing money at 18 percent interest and has stored corn in an elevator, a price of $2.20 per bushel today is equal to $2.52 received in September. The cost of storing wheat and soybeans will be even higher.

Large losses can result from grain going out of condition in on-farm storage. As a rule of thumb, grain stored into May and June must be no more than 14 percent moisture, depending on the type of grain. A recent sample of Butler County farm-bins showed 12 of 31 bins had damaged grain due to the presence of insects or mustiness. None of the bins inspected in a Wayne County survey passed quality requirements on all counts, with many showing high moisture content. Farmers are urged to check grain periodically — perhaps as often as every two weeks this time of year. If possible, probe grain for moisture content and evidence of insects and molds. If you suspect a problem don't hesitate to ask for help. Out-of-condition or sample grade grain may sell for less than $1 per bushel or be a total loss to the producer.

Deferring sales of grains, particularly corn, until late summer or early fall could result in even lower grain prices at that time. A similar situation occurred during late August and September 1977 when corn prices fell to $1.40 to $1.50 per bushel. At that time producers began selling to provide space for new crop grain. It will also be necessary to make space available for 1980 new crop grain, feed grains in particular. Producers should avoid bunching these sales just prior to harvest time.

Producers should make a serious effort to compare bid prices among local elevators. A comparison of corn prices bid by 29 Nebraska country elevators on Oct. 18, 1979 showed a difference of 43 cents per bushel. There was a 14 cents difference between the bids of two elevators in the same county. Availability and quality of rail service, quantity of grain storage and drying services available, presence of train load ship pers who supply their own rail cars, local feed demand, volume of production and the degree of competition all contribute to differences in bid prices between local grain elevators.

It does cost money to truck grain, but a recent study suggests farmers can afford to haul grain an additional 15 miles for an extra five cents per bushel. Due to time limitations, many farmers are not willing to haul long distances at harvest. During other periods of the year hauling to more distance elevators may be a profitable alternative.

Old Alfalfa, Grass Stands Are Sought

Alfalfa and grass researchers are looking for old stands of those two crops this summer.

If you know of an alfalfa stand 25 years or older in your area, the Northern Great Plains Research Laboratory would like to hear from you. And it may be that grasses growing in that old country cemetery nearby could make a contribution to the turfgrasses of tomorrow.

The two searches are on-going but independent efforts of researchers in the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources and other scientists. In both cases, the researchers are seeking plants which may have undergone adaptive genetic changes as a result of natural selection.

In the case of alfalfa, the effort to find old stands is a coordinated one being conducted in the northern Great Plains region and several Canadian provinces. The USDA's Northern Great Plains Research Laboratory in Mandan, N.D. is heading up the project. The search is an attempt to "take advantage of what Mother Nature has done for us," says Bill Kehr, USDA research agronomist stationed at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. It takes years for nature to sort out what's best adapted to a given area, explains Kehr, who's also chairman of the National Alfalfa Improvement Conference Committee on Preservation of Germplasm. "We want to find out what older fields trace to, what seed was planted. We want to know what natural selection has occurred in individual environments."

Old alfalfa found through the search will be evaluated for the contribution it might make to improving varieties, according to Kehr. Superior pest resistance or winter hardiness could be desirable characteristics found in the old alfalfa.

But the process isn't necessarily a quick one. For some old alfalfas, researchers will be lucky to collect a thimbleful of seed. That seed must be increased to have enough for evaluation and eventual distribution to alfalfa breeders. Kehr points out that alfalfa stands should contact their county extension agents who have received forms for recording pertinent information about the stand and its location. A collection team will be in the field this summer to collect seed and document as much information as possible about the site and its history.

The search for the old grasses is a more informal one, according to IANR turfgrass breeder Terry Rjord. Rjord began looking for different clones of turfgrasses in summer '78 and the search continues today. Old cemeteries are some of his prime collection sites.

"Again, the old grasses may have characteristics such as greater drought or heat tolerance which could be combined with the more esthetic qualities of some of the new turfgrasses," Rjord explains. Such new varieties might use a little less energy in terms of fertilizer and other inputs.

Rjord is mainly interested in species of grasses that could be used for turf purposes, but that could include a wide variety of grasses such as native buffalograss. He collects vegetative samples rather than seed, then plants the grasses at the NU Field Laboratory near Mead for increase.

Grass samples collected in 1978 may have planted only a single row in the first year, but now the seed has been increased enough to plant a normal turf test plot. These new plots of the old grasses will be evaluated this summer while Rjord continues his search for other old grasses.

Rjord also visits other locations such as golf courses in his search for plant materials. But he notes that cemeteries and the stories they tell are often more interesting.

Green Thumbs Harry
I'm starting a special newspaper column called Green Thumbs Harry. This column will be devoted to a single subject of interest to home owners. It will appear on the farm pages of this paper each Thursday I hope you enjoy it.

Mushrooms in the lawn
Wet weather these past weeks has stimulated the growth of mushrooms in a number of lawns.

Mushrooms are the fruiting structures of various kinds of fungi. They grow from an underground network of mycelium that utilizes decaying organic material in the soil as a nutrient source. Mushrooms are commonly found on tree stumps, dead roots, decaying logs, buried boards or any area having a high content of organic matter. The caps develop following a rain and may remain visible for quite some time or at least until hot, dry weather occurs, depending upon the species of mushrooms.

Since mushrooms commonly form on decaying or buried organic matter, elimination of these fungi from a lawn is not an easy task. Complete control is almost impossible until the organic base upon which they are growing has been completely decayed. In some cases it may be feasible to dig up the pieces of rotting wood or other debris in the lawn or remove large tree stumps on which these fungi colonize. If this is impractical the best method may be to break or mow off any mushrooms. This should be undertaken when the mushrooms are relatively young to reduce further release of their spores.

Under conditions of mild, wet weather, their spores germinate and with time generate new mushrooms.

Groups of mushrooms in the lawn should be dug out before they have completely formed. These control measures may not totally rid the lawn of mushrooms within one or two seasons, but with a little patience most problems in lawns can be overcome.

Black spot of roses
Black spot of roses is caused by fungus that remains alive throughout the winter in partially decayed plant residue. As springtime temperatures become warmer, the fungus produces spores which will infect this year's foliage.

This disease continues to develop throughout the summer. Symptoms appear as black spots which have a "feathery" var margin. These lesions may vary in size from small dots to spots one half inch in diameter. The infected leaves tend to turn yellow and drop, often causing extensive defoliation. When this occurs, the plants are weakened and become subject to winter injury and other diseases. Defoliated plants will also produce fewer blossoms the following years.

To prevent an outbreak of black spot, begin control in the fall. Remove old leaves and refuse surrounding the plant to help decrease disease potential.

Phallan or Benlate are the preferred fungicides for black spot control because they also control powdery mildew. Any product containing Maneb, Zineb or Captan also will give good control of black spot but not mildew.

Geraniums
For geraniums to be grown in the window box or in beds during summer, a moderately fertile soil is preferred over a very rich soil. Strong fertilizers should be avoided. Moderate growth produces the best flowers. Too much water and fertilizer during hot weather will also encourage growth of the foliage as well as lower the quality and number of flowers.

Too much water either in the pot or on the foliage may cause spotting of the leaves. Geraniums will grow and produce flowers with a minimum of care, yet proper attention to their special requirements is repaid with increased quality, size and number of flowers.

Blossom end rot in tomatoes
Blossom end rot occurs wherever tomatoes are grown. The rot first starts as a small water-soaked spot on the blossom end of the tomato. The spot enlarges, darkens and becomes sunken and leathery. Blossom end rot is most prevalent during prolonged dry periods that occur while the plants are making vigorous growth. It may also occur after periods of unusually abundant rain. Heavy applications of nitrogen fertilizers and extreme fluctuations in moisture favor the disease.

To control the disease, avoid excessive use of nitrogen fertilizers. Also apply moisture evenly over the growing season so moisture stress does not occur.

Blossom-end rot some years is a very important disease in Wayne County. So any precaution you take to avoid the disease will be helpful.

Fertilizer perennials and shrubs
The following recommendations specific to different types of plants that are used to maintain the soil in a fertile state and assure that seasonal requirements are met.

Perennials — one pound of 10-20-10 or two pounds of 6-10-4 or comparable amount of similar fertilizer per 100 square feet scratched into the surface in April or July.

Shrubs — two to four pounds of 10-20-10 or comparable amounts of similar fertilizer per 100 square feet under branches in April or late October.

Help Save Energy Through Proper Turf Management

Homeowners can save their own personal energy as well as their country's with efficient management of the home turf.

According to Art Bruneau, integrated pest management specialist in the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, the use of pesticides can be reduced through sound management of the home lawn.

Energy efficiency begins with the use of improved grasses adapted to the location. Seed, sprigs or sod should be clean and free of crop and weed seed to help prevent later problems. Bruneau said. Getting turfgrasses established properly by preparing a good seed bed also is important.

Good watering, mowing and fertilizing practices can contribute to energy efficiency. Over watering and over fertilizing waste resources as well as promote lush succulent growth which is prone to infection. Watering infrequently but deeply promotes deep rooting to reduce effects of heat and drought stress as well as incidence of disease, he said. Homeowners should avoid "scalping" the turf by mowing too low. This, too, can make turf more susceptible to invasions by weeds and diseases. If weeds are a problem, consider removing them by hand if there aren't too many, Bruneau suggested.

Feeder Group Planning Tour

The Northeast Nebraska Feeders Association will hold its summer tour starting at 6 p.m. on June 11.

The first tour stop will be at the Albers' feedlot located 10 miles south and four miles east of Wayne, or 12 miles south and four miles west of Wakefield.

Albers uses both growing and finishing programs based on alfalfa silage and hay, corn silage and high moisture or dry corn. Albers also limit feeds cattle on pasture. Albers is a recognized leader in the state and national feeders' associations, having served as officer and director and as chairman of many state and national committees.

The second tour stop, at the Herman Dinklage, Jr. feedlot, will feature confinement feeding, but many other unique innovations can also be seen. One such innovation is the form which Dinklage uses to make his own fenceline feed bunks. Using these forms, cost of bunks can be cut 60 percent.

Fly control will be a topic at the Dinklage feedlot.

pesticides according to label directions and at the time they're most effective. Apply correctly and safely at the proper rate, Bruneau said. Some pesticides can become ineffective when applied at excessive rates.

As a preventive measure, it's also a good idea periodically to reduce the thatch in your turf. Thatch is undecomposed organic matter, comprising dead root stems and leaves. It can reduce pesticide effectiveness or increase injury to turf, harbor pests and prevent fertilizer and water from reaching the soil. Power raking or coring can be done for this purpose when turf is actively growing and when thatch is more than one half inch thick. If thatch is deeper than a half inch, remove it in two or more treatments, Bruneau said.

The healthiest lawn — and the most energy efficient — is one with a vigorous turf that resists many kinds of pests, weeds and diseases, he concluded.

Velvetleaf Becoming Major Area Problem

Velvetleaf is increasing in row crops over much of Eastern Nebraska and it's a hard weed to control. Its large seeds can germinate as deep as three inches, making control with soil-applied herbicides difficult. And the seeds are exceptionally long lived — in one experiment, 38 percent of velvetleaf seeds germinated after being buried in the soil 38 years.

Velvetleaf grows from four to seven feet tall under favorable conditions and has heart-shaped leaves. The stem and leaves are covered with fine hairs and the leaves feel soft and velvety. Flowers are a bright orange-yellow.

According to Alex Martin and John Furrer, extension agronomists in the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, velvetleaf can be controlled more completely in corn and sorghum than in soybeans. Although it's too late for preemergence control of the weed on 1980 corn, the agronomists said atrazine applied at the maximum labeled rate is the most effective soil-applied herbicide, but even it may not give complete control. Full rates of atrazine may cause injury to sensitive crops planted the next year.

The most effective postemergence control for velvetleaf in corn or sorghum is 2,4-D, with the ester form more effective than the amine form. Velvetleaf plants which are less than 12 inches tall can be controlled essentially 100 percent with 2,4-D ester. Furrer and Martin said. Crop injury from 2,4-D can be minimized by correct timing of the application and by avoiding hybrids known to be sensitive.

Atrazine and oil also is effective as a postemergence treatment in corn and sorghum except under dry conditions, they said.

For velvetleaf control in soybeans, Sencor and Lexone are the most effective soil-applied herbicides, but they are not as effective as atrazine in corn. Three way herbicide combinations of either Sencor or Lexone plus Amiben, plus a grass herbicide, are more effective, the agronomists added.

Another possibility for controlling the weed in soybeans is a combination of Vernam with either Sencor or Lexone. This combination has fair activity against velvetleaf, but also potential for early season soybean injury. Prowl plus Sencor or Lexone also would be effective.

For postemergence control, Basagran is effective against velvetleaf as long as plants are less than five inches tall and are not under drought stress. Thorough spray coverage is essential with Basagran.

Velvetleaf will continue to increase unless control measures are improved, Furrer and Martin emphasized. But the program to control this weed will be a longrange one because of the longevity of velvetleaf seed

Did you ever go out to your garden and find your favorite tomato cut off at the ground? The villain was probably a cutworm.

These nasty little creatures may climb up on your plant at night and eat leaves and then bur-

Variegated cutworm.

row into the soil during the day. When they are larger they cut your plant off at its base. (Depending on size and type of cutworm.)

If you find cutworm damage, dig around in the soil and destroy any critters you find. Make a collar of stiff paper or cardboard and place around plants. Collar should go an inch or two into the soil.

One of the better controls now on the market for cutworms, sowbugs, crickets, millipedes and grasshoppers is a 5 percent Sevin bait with apple pomace. It's usually found under the trade name of Hopkins 5 percent bait. It's a new product so I don't know if local dealers are carrying it yet.

If you can't get the bait use 2 tablespoons of 50 percent Sevin wettable powder in a gallon of water and spray the soil around the transplants. Good Luck!

National Productivity Sought By Bereuter

Congressman Doug Bereuter has called upon all sectors of American society to "launch a national productivity effort."

In remarks before the New Car Dealers Association state convention here, Bereuter said that the decline and fall of American productivity was a basic challenge facing every individual, business and government.

Noting that the U.S. now trails eleven major industrial nations in productivity growth, Bereuter said that "with leadership, organization, dedication and not a little patience, we can reverse our decline in productivity. For the sake of our own freedom, we must do it."

Bereuter said he was pleased with remarks recently made by Treasury Secretary William Miller to the Joint Economic Committee, in which the Secretary favored future tax cuts to promote productivity.

"I hope the Secretary not only means what he says, but follows through with support for tax cuts," Bereuter said.

Feeding Bean Hulls Feasible

A University of Nebraska-Lincoln research project to study the feasibility of feeding soybean hulls as a protein-high, energy supplement for ruminants has been selected for funding by the American Soybean Association Research Foundation (ASARF).

The research is expected to show whether or not soybean hulls are superior to grain as an energy source for ruminant animals on a roughage ration. If the research proves the theory correct, the result of the study could be a new market for soy hulls which could increase in their selling value by as much as 20 percent.

Dr. Terry Klopfenstein and Mike McDonnell of the animal science department, at the UNL Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources will head the project, which is being funded by a $25,830 grant by soybean producers over the next two years. The study is one of the 17 research projects being funded by ASARF in 1980.

The problem with using grain as an energy supplement is twofold, according to researchers.

First, as the amount of grain being fed increases, it makes the forage less digestible. Second, care must be taken in feeding grain to assure uniform and equal intake by each animal and to prevent overeating. Since soybean hulls are high in cellulose and are one of the most highly digestible sources of cellulose found in nature, the researchers theorize that soybean hulls would be superior to grain as an energy source for ruminants on roughage rations. Soybean hulls also contain 13.14 percent protein which, with the addition of soybean meal, could provide a superior ration for livestock.

Klopfenstein and McDonnell will conduct their studies on calves fed rations based on forages such as crop residues or grass hay. Calves will be tested on both grain and soy hulls to determine rate and efficiency of gains as well as feed intakes. The protein in soybean hulls will be evaluated for rumen degradability and in its effect on the growth of the animals.

In the past eight years, ASARF has supported over $2 million of soybean research. Projects selected by funding by ASARF are submitted by researchers across the nation and reviewed by specialists in soybean production and utilization. A nine-member board of soybean producers makes the final selection of projects to be funded, based on the recommendation of the review committee.

Proposals are selected for funding based on their potential for reducing production costs for the farmer and improving or finding new uses for soybeans and soybean products. Funds for investment in soybean research are provided by soybean producers through their state grower investment checkoff programs and by support from private corporations.

First, as the amount of grain being fed increases, it makes the forage less digestible. Second, care must be taken in feeding grain to assure uniform and equal intake by each animal and to prevent overeating. Since soybean hulls are high in cellulose and are one of the most highly digestible sources of cellulose found in nature, the researchers theorize that soybean hulls would be superior to grain as an energy source for ruminants on roughage rations. Soybean hulls also contain 13.14 percent protein which, with the addition of soybean meal, could provide a superior ration for livestock.

Klopfenstein and McDonnell will conduct their studies on calves fed rations based on forages such as crop residues or grass hay. Calves will be tested on both grain and soy hulls to determine rate and efficiency of gains as well as feed intakes. The protein in soybean hulls will be evaluated for rumen degradability and in its effect on the growth of the animals.

In the past eight years, ASARF has supported over $2 million of soybean research. Projects selected by funding by ASARF are submitted by researchers across the nation and reviewed by specialists in soybean production and utilization. A nine-member board of soybean producers makes the final selection of projects to be funded, based on the recommendation of the review committee.

Proposals are selected for funding based on their potential for reducing production costs for the farmer and improving or finding new uses for soybeans and soybean products. Funds for investment in soybean research are provided by soybean producers through their state grower investment checkoff programs and by support from private corporations.

The problem with using grain as an energy supplement is twofold, according to researchers.
