Mrs. Lonnie Fork baked and decorated the anniversary cake. Guests included Mrs. Edna Milligan and Shelli and Christi Milligan, all of Wayne. Darin Billheimer of Laurel, and Mr. and Mrs. George Jorgensen of Carroll.

Mr. and Mrs. George Jorgensen visited last Thursday evening in the Milligan home in honor of the 15th birthday of their grandson, Troy.

Does it not seem rather odd
How some Christians serve their God?

Ken Anderson's poem suggests that some people take their relationship to God rather lightly. Maybe they do not realize the balance of privilege and purpose. It is great to be in the Family of God (privilege), but if that is all there is to the relationship then it will be topkicked. Purpose is the balancing factor. At the First Church of Christ we are making specific efforts to bring this balance into reality. We read the Apostle Paul's message that God reconciled us back to Himself through His Son (privilege) and that we are to be His ambassadors of that message (purpose). (See II Corinthians 5:17-20).

If your Christian life is lacking something you feel lagging, maybe our efforts will help you. You are invited to attend:

Spring Wedding Rites Unite Greve-Leonard

A spring ceremony June 7 at Salem Lutheran Church in Wakefield united in marriage Deb Greve, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Greve of Wakefield, and Roger Leonard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Leonard of Emerson.

Candelabras and rainbow colored altar flowers and pew bows decorated the church for the 6:30 p.m. double ring ceremony. The Rev. Robert V. Johnson of Wakefield officiated. Mrs. Robert Oberg of Allen sang "Wedding Song." The Lord's Prayer and "Evergreen," accompanied by Mrs. Loren Bartels of Wakefield. Candles were lit by Joel Greve of Wisner and Kevin Fendrick of Pender.

The bride appeared at her father's side in a white Chantilly lace gown designed with Gibson Girl lace sleeves with button cuffs. The bodice was styled with a Chantilly ruffle that curled to the back below shoulder netting. The long skirt was trimmed with three tiers of lace upwept at the side and draped softly into a full cathedral train. Her bridal illusion fingertip veil was edged in Chantilly lace and was attached to a Juliet headpiece of handclipped appliques and seed pearls.

The bride carried a cascade of bridal pink roses, butterfly or chids, stephanotis and greenery. The bride's honor attendant was Kim Greve of Wakefield. Bridesmaids were Penny Roberts of Wakefield, Nancy Welke of Ewing and Kris Leonard of Emerson, and junior bridesmaid was Linda Greve of Wakefield.

Their long chiton gowns were in rainbow colors pink, green, yellow, peach and blue and featured a lace yoke and mandarin collar. A ruffle of fabric and lace formed the bodice and cap sleeves. They wore matching picture hats and carried multi-colored colonial bouquets of miniature carnations, daisies, baby's breath and greenery with satin streamers.

The bride's personal attendant was Mrs. Greg Simpson. Mrs. Roy Leonard and Mrs. Henry Greve were in charge of flowers. Flower girls were Tanya Thomsen of Akron, Colo. and Sharon Bach of Wakefield.

Best man was Terry Klinger of Atkinson, and groomsmen were Charlie Leonard of Lincoln, Mike Leonard of Wayne, Rick Giese of Norfolk and Wes Greve of Wakefield. The men in the wedding party wore light gray tuxedos with shirts and carnations to match the bridesmaids' dresses.

Ushers were Steve Greve and Chuck Bach, both of Wakefield, Jeff Greve of Wisner and Jeff Surber of Emerson.

The mother of the bride wore an angel mist mint green sleeveless gown designed with a modified blouson waistline and sunburst pleated skirt. The bridegroom's mother selected a teal blue sleeveless gown styled with a ruffled bodice and gathered skirt.

A reception was held in the church parlors following the wedding ceremony. The 200 guests were registered by Kelly Greve of Wakefield. Gifts were arranged by Mrs. Raymond Prokop and Mrs. Robert Fendrick, both of Pender. Gift carriers were Cindy Glissman and Rhonda Fendrick, both of Pender, and Terri Surber of Emerson.

Hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Merlin Greve of Wakefield and Mr. and Mrs. Norman Surber of Emerson.

The wedding cake, which was baked and decorated by Mrs. Kenneth Thomsen, was cut and served by Mrs. Thomsen and Mrs. Charles Bach, both of Wakefield, and Mrs. Dennis Ronspies of Pierce.

Mrs. Eugene Bartels of Wakefield and Mrs. Leroy Giese of Boemer poured, and Mrs. David White and Mrs. Mike Leonard, both of Wayne, served punch. Working at the serving table were Mrs. Webb Hyde of Norfolk and Mrs. Jim Thomsen of Akron, Colo. Dining room chair man was Mrs. James Leonard of Emerson.

Waitresses were Vickie Thomsen and Marci Greve, both of Wakefield, and Toni Surber of Emerson. Rice bags were distributed by Julie Greve of Wakefield and Pam Ronspies of Pierce.

The newlyweds are making their first home at 207 S. Main, in Pender.

The bride is employed at Cindy's Hair Fashions in Pender. She is a 1978 graduate of Wakefield High School and a 1979 graduate of Norfolk Beauty College. The bridegroom, a 1977 Wakefield High School graduate and a 1980 graduate of Northeast Technical Community College, Norfolk, works as a mechanic for the State of Nebraska in West Point.

Seniors Brighten Corner

MRS. HARRY WERT KNOWS YOU CAN'T plant a garden or produce a beautiful bed of flowers without getting some dirt under your fingernails. Mrs. WERT, pictured above, was among several members of the Wayne Senior Citizens Center who gathered their gardening apparatus Thursday morning and set out to plant a variety of flowers in the corner lot at Wayne City Hall. The flower bed has been an annual project of Wayne Senior Citizens since they moved in to their new center in the basement of the City Hall building four years ago. In just a few short weeks the flowers will produce an array of colors, attracting the attention of motorists and other passers by. Helping Mrs. WERT plant the flowers were her husband, Harry, and Irv Jones, Ann Lage, Virgil Chambers, Shirley Wagner, and center director Mrs. Jociell Bull. The flowers were courtesy of Kent and Lois Hall, owners of the Wayne Greenhouse, and include geraniums, giant marigolds, purple and white petunias, purple and white alyssum and dusty miller.

Registrations Due Today

Mrs. Joyce Reeg, chairman for this year's Farm Ladies Appreciation Luncheon, reminds area farm wives and women that today (Thursday) is the last day to register for the annual event. Mrs. Reeg said tickets will no longer be available after Thursday.

"I think sometimes we forget who is responsible for making this luncheon possible," said Mrs. Reeg, adding that the Chamber of Commerce merchants who bought tickets to the luncheon and who serve as the hosts also finance the decorations, speaker and food. "These Chamber merchants sponsor the luncheon each year to show their appreciation for rural contributions to the welfare of the area," said Mrs. Reeg.

Women may register for the luncheon at any participating Wayne business. The free luncheon will be held Thursday, June 26, at 12:30 p.m. in the South Dining Room of the Student Union on the Wayne State College campus. Featured speaker will be World Herald roving reporter and photographer Tom Allen. Entertainment will include a men's quartet, comprised of Jim Marsh, Bill Dickey, Gordon Nedergaard and Keith Kopperud. In addition, there will be hundreds of dollars in door prizes contributed by various Wayne merchants.

'Goona Goona'

"GOONA GOONA," A FAMILY MUSICAL, will be presented by the Omaha Magic Theater on Sunday, June 22, at the Wayne High School auditorium. The public is invited to attend the 8 o'clock performance, which is being sponsored by The Haven House Family Services Center of Wayne in cooperation with the Nebraska Arts Council. Tickets for the performance are $2 for adults and $1 for students and will be available at the door. "Goona Goona" is a musical, slapstick comedy about modern American family violence. Jan Stalling, coordinator of Haven House Family Services Center, said the actors portray the family in conflict by gymnastically tumbling, rolling and falling throughout the two-act play. Pictured in a scene from the play, from left, are Eve Feider as Gaga Goona, and JoAnn Schmidman as Dr. Granville Goon.

Randy's Recap

According to Randy Hascall

THE STATE OF Nebraska may possibly be the home of a semi professional basketball team. That decision was announced Monday by James Drucker, commissioner of the Continental Basketball Association.

Nancy Hansen, general manager for the proposed club, arrived in Lincoln during the weekend to review Nebraska basketball fan support and arrange financial support for the proposed club. The name "Nebraska Pioneers" was chosen to represent the team.

For persons who aren't familiar with the CBA, it was formerly known as the Eastern League, comprising teams on the East coast as well as Hawaii and Alaska teams. The league has officially been accepted by the National Basketball Association as a semi pro league and is planning expansion in 1980-81.

The CBA would be divided into an eastern division and a western division. The eastern group would consist of the Rochester Zeniths, Maine Lumberjacks, Lehigh Valley Jets, Pennsylvania Barrons, Lancaster Red Roses and Utica Olympics.

The western division would include the Hawaii Volcanos, the Anchorage Northern Knights, two expansion teams and the proposed Nebraska team.

Managers of the proposed Nebraska ball club say they have checked with former Kearney State players Tom Kropp and Loren Killian and former UNL star Chuck Jura about joining the team and have received interest.

IT'S REALLY DISTURBING to see and listen to a bunch of fans who sit up in the stands and criticize their own players and yell at the umpires all the time.

Yet, it happens in every sport, every time of the year. There is one person responsible for telling a player what to do and questioning an umpire's call. The coach. That's right, the coach not the fan or the parent in the grand stand.

In recent American Legion baseball action at the Wayne City ball park, some individuals acted in a poor sportsmanlike manner. Many of the loud mouths were from the opposing team and weren't adult enough to accept a loss.

However, there were also some Wayne fans who yelled from the stands instructing the players what to do, criticizing their play and complaining at the umpire's calls. Now, how is this going to help Hank Overin teach his athletes through a very successful recreation program?

This year's Midget team is young and not as experienced as teams have been in the past years. They have quite a bit of potential but they're going to lose some games. It certainly won't help if their fans get down on them.

Hank tries to inform his players what to do in a ball game situation. Then, during the game, someone from the stands yells instructions at a player—usually instructions that are incorrect. It's confusing to the player and disturbing to the coach.

Ask Hank about it. He and I discussed the situation and he wasn't pleased with the behavior shown by a few of the fans. It's time these people started watching their behavior and giving proper representation to this fine community.

FAREWELL to Wayne football coach Stew Cline. Cline will be moving to Rockport, Missouri to take over a similar coaching position. Best of luck to Stew

Greens 7, Blues 5
Pete Warne and Dan Heikes collected two hits each to lead the Greens past the Blues 7-5, in Tuesday night's second game.

The Blues took the early lead when Tim Fleming scored in the first inning.

The Browns rallied in the second when Dan Heikes and Rick Haase crossed the plate. Bob Sherman and Mark Creighton drove in the two runs.

Fleming singled and scored again for the Blues in the third inning to tie the game at 2-2. Kevin Maly's sacrifice fly ball brought in the run.

Against Osmond, Brain Marquardt's sacrifice fly drove home Phil Martin in the bottom of the seventh inning to give the Midgets their second win.

Dave Marquardt and Ron Hirschman each had a pair of hits for the winners. Both players rapped triples and Hirschman drove in three runs.

Most of the damage was done in the fourth inning when Laurel scored eight runs.

Bereuter Outlines Plan That Would Revitalize Economy

Congressman Doug Bereuter has outlined a four-point plan to revitalize the economy and "once again make America a leading producer in the international marketplace."

"My prescription for revitalizing our economy begins with a national productivity effort," Bereuter said in an address before the Congressional Action Committee of the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce. "I believe there are several basic steps that can lead this nation toward economic recovery and restore pride and confidence in American products."

"A national productivity effort can turn the economy around and once again make America a leading producer in the international marketplace, where we now lag behind all other major industrial nations in terms of productivity growth," he said.

Bereuter outlined the following four-point plan:

- 1) Reduce federal spending and thereby reduce the federal deficit. "It is a sham to balance the budget by raising taxes, and I will continue to oppose budget proposals that do just that. Our long-range goal should be to scale down the role government plays in nearly every sector of American life, and thereby make room for private enterprise to prosper."

- 2) Allow businesses better depreciation allowances with an efficient, equitable and simple capital cost recovery system designed to encourage growth and modernization through increased capital investment. "By changing the current tax structure for depreciation, we can encourage businesses to replace outmoded equipment and build new plants, with a boost in productivity the result."
- 3) Adjust or "index" individual income tax schedules to offset the effects of inflation, which pushes taxpayers into higher and higher tax brackets. "Bracket creep" discourages Americans from saving and investing, which in turn discourages capital formation."
- 4) Revise the federal regulatory process, with special attention paid to the impact on small business. "Government overregulation clearly has stifled growth in our economy. Too often scant attention is given to the needs or special circumstances of small business, which today bears a disproportionate burden imposed by regulatory and reporting requirements." Federal agencies should be required to analyze costs and benefits of proposed regulations, especially as they affect small business. Agencies should then be required to choose the least costly and effective alternative and to allow small businesses maximum flexibility in meeting requirements. Furthermore, Congress should have legislative veto power over deemed excessive and counterproductive.

"I do not suggest this as a comprehensive strategy or cure all for our economic problems," Bereuter said. "But I do consider my suggestions to be specific, positive steps to boost productivity."

Old Fiddlers Plan Concert

The Nebraska Old Timers Fiddlers will present a three-hour concert at Stuhr Museum on Sunday, July 6, from 1 p.m. until 4 p.m. in Grand Island.

The Lincoln-based group will present a program of old time music. Included in the program will be demonstrations of fiddle sticks, fiddle duets, fiddle imitating bagpipes, seconding on fiddle, fiddle trio, cross tuning, the difference between fiddle and violin and a dozen or more fiddlers playing together. The "Arkansas Traveler" skit will be presented.

Among the instruments being played will be fiddles, harmonica, banjo, guitar, mandolin and piano.

Tunes performed will be from 50 to 600 years old. Fiddling style is the old time fiddling style mostly as found in early Nebraska and neighboring states. Stories about the tunes will be told as well as a background of Nebraska fiddling.

Fiddlers in the "Nebraska Old Time Fiddlers" range in age from 8 to 82. The Nebraska Old Time Fiddlers Association is in its 16 year. Bring lawn chairs or blankets to sit on the ground for an afternoon of old time folk music.

Employment in State's Private Sectors Climbs

Employment in the private sector of Nebraska's 93 counties totaled 462,783 in March, 1978, an increase of 23,449 over the March, 1977, figure. And, first quarter and annual payrolls of $1,080 million and $4,733 million respectively of the counties also showed increases over the year before.

These figures appear in the Census Bureau's recently issued County Business Patterns, 1978 Nebraska. The bureau is a part of the U.S. Department of Commerce.

The report shows, as well that Douglas County had the state's highest employment in 1978 — 181,674 — an increase of 6,752 over the figure for the year before. The county's first quarter and annual payrolls were $495 million and $2,126 million respectively.

The 1978 County Business Patterns reports is the 25th in a series presenting first quarter employment and payroll statistics for all of the states and their counties. The reports provide data by detailed industry on most of the major economic divisions of the 1972 Standard Industrial Classification (SIC) codes, including agricultural services, mining, construction, manufacturing, transportation, public utilities, wholesale trade, retail trade, finance, insurance, real estate and selected service businesses.

About three-fourths of all the business and manufacturing employees in the United States are covered in the reports for the 50 states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico. Not included are employees of federal, state and local governments, self-employed persons, farm workers and those employed in domestic and certain transportation services.

The detailed reports are useful for analyzing market potential, measuring the effectiveness of sales and advertising programs, setting sales quotas and budgets, analyzing the industrial structure of regions, making basic economic studies of small areas, and serving other business uses. They are also useful to government agencies for administration and planning purposes.

Copies of the report are available for $3.75 from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402, or may be ordered at Department of Commerce district offices in major cities in the United States. Data are available also, at cost on computer tapes from the Data User Services Division, Bureau of Economic Analysis, Washington, D.C. 20233.

The magic of compound interest.

Did you know you can save a fixed amount regularly for 15 years... then withdraw the same fixed amount for the next 15 years... and still wind up with more than you saved? Amazing? No, just the "magic" of compounding interest in a Columbus Federal savings account.

Feedlot Runoff Is Problem

Vegetative filter runoff control systems may be an alternative for small feedlot operators runoff control problems. That's the word from Elbert Dickey, extension agricultural engineer in the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Zero-discharge runoff systems, which allow no wastes to enter streams and rivers, are one way to solve potential water pollution problems, Dickey said. These systems are mandated in several states, but the approach may be economically prohibitive for small operators.

An alternative to zero-discharge systems is to install a vegetative filter to control runoff during storms so that violations of water quality standards do not occur.

Vegetative filters use pasture, grassed waterways or cropland to treat feedlot runoff by settling, filtration, dilution, infiltration and absorption of pollutants.

The ag engineer said, in general, vegetative filters have either channelized or overland flow. Channelized flow systems concentrate runoff in a relatively narrow canal via a graded terrace channel or grassed waterway. In overland flow systems, feedlot runoff flows in a sheet less than 30 millimeters deep with widths ranging from five to six meters.

Studies during the last 10 years have shown vegetative filter systems to be an effective means of reducing biological oxygen demand, a measure of pollution, in industrial and feedlot waste.

One study conducted in 1977 also showed that vegetative filters are generally more economical than zero-discharge systems. Dickey said this makes them an attractive alternative to small feedlot operators with minimum capital.

Dickey and Dale H.

Vanderholm of the University of Illinois, began a study of vegetative filter systems in 1975. Their objectives were to determine if the filters were viable alternatives for managing feedlot waste and to develop design standards and management recommendations.

The basic systems studied include a settling device, a distribution channel and either of the two types of vegetative filters.

The average reduction of pollutant constituents after going through the systems was 80 percent on a concentration basis and 90 percent on a weight basis.

There are differences, however, between the channelized flow and overland systems as far as how much flow length is required to achieve acceptable pollutant reduction.

"The channelized flow system required a flow length more than five times longer than the overland flow system to achieve a similar concentration reduction," Dickey said.

While the filters tested were effective in reducing constituent concentrations for the most part, at least one of the systems produced ammonia-N concentrations above those allowed by Illinois state law where the study was conducted. These higher than acceptable levels occurred during heavy storms, Dickey pointed out, and were quite low relative to many receiving streams during similar storms.

"For the vegetative systems to be effective for settling, filtering and absorbing the waste, Dickey

Rootworm Hatchings This Month Are Treatable

UNL Entomologists tell us western and northern corn rootworm eggs began hatching between June 1 and 10. Therefore cultivation treatments should have been applied before June 10 for best control.

Hatching time depends on soil temperature. Southern rootworms (spotted cucumber beetles) do not overwinter in Nebraska, but migrate from the south each spring. Northern and western rootworms are resistant to chlorinated hydrocarbon insecticides. The northern and western corn rootworms are usually a problem only in corn.

Rarely, eggs may be laid in other crops, especially if volunteer corn is present, and become a problem when land is rotated to corn. Crop rotation, however, is a very effective control management practice.

Southern rootworms (spotted cucumber beetles) do not overwinter in Nebraska, but migrate from the south each spring. These feed in a variety of plants, and rotation does not aid in control.

Early planting generally results in plants being strong when rootworm hatching occurs and reduces damage. It also often results in plants developing silks before the period of maximum adult beetle feeding. Good weed control results in stronger plants and also fields less attractive to beetles. Throwing soil around plants at layby cultivation will reduce lodging.

Planting before May 7 may result in planting application in insecticides breaking down before rootworms hatch, reports Stan Starling, Dixon County Extension Agent. Granules applied at cultivation should be applied at the base of plants and incorporated immediately by cultivation should be applied at the base of plants and incorporated immediately by cultivation. Rotating insecticides every two years may improve control.

If an organic phosphate (Counter, Dyonate, Lorsban, Mocap or Thimet) has been used, rotate to a carbamate, (Furadan) and vice versa. Insecticides usually do not penetrate the soil, and only a well-placed band of insecticide will protect roots. Note that a change to a narrower row spacing will require an increase in the amount of insecticide recommended for 40 inch rows.

said, the length of time that runoff is in the filter is important. He said the minimum recommended contact time for any vegetative filter system is two hours.

"Overland flow vegetative filters apparently do not require longer contact times as the feedlot size increases," he said, "although the total filter size is dependent on the lot area."

Recommendations for overland flow filter size are based on the principle that runoff from small storms should completely infiltrate. Runoff from larger storms or snow melt would discharge after being in contact with the filter for a minimum of two hours, he said.

"This emphasizes the need to enter winter with a good plant growth on the filter so that treatment still occurs even without active plant growth," he said.

Any use of a vegetative filter also requires a settling basin to remove a major portion of the solid wastes in the runoff, Dickey said.

To determine the reasonable size for the vegetative system, soil infiltration rate and storm size should be considered. From initial tests, Dickey said, the filter should be large enough to handle a two-hour storm.

In Illinois, the filter area for a typical silt loam soil is equal to the feedlot area. Soils with slower infiltration rates would require larger filter areas. Although the study was conducted in Illinois, Dickey said it is expected that the vegetative filter design criteria can be used in other regions which have similar soils and rainfall patterns.

Because of the basic differences in the flow and infiltration patterns, contact time must be increased as feedlot size increases for channelized flow systems, he said. He said it appears that for each additional 465 square meters of lot area, an additional hour of contact time is needed in a channelized system.

"Channelized flow systems appear to be less effective than overland flow systems, requiring a much greater flow length for a similar degree of treatment," he said. "However, achieving uniform distribution and true overland flow is difficult."

Mice in the house

The best way of controlling mice in an occupied house is by use of spring-type mouse traps. Poison baits are not desirable, as dead mice are difficult to locate and the odor of decomposing mice is highly objectionable.

Use several kinds of baits in the traps and place the baited trigger adjacent to and pointing toward walls. Mice usually follow a wall when moving about in buildings.

Baits that mice like include chocolate, butter, bacon rind, peanut butter, flour or little luffs of cotton.

Files, flies, flies

If a pair of house flies mated today, and if their descendants all lived and reproduced normally, their offspring would cover the earth several feet deep four months from now. In manure or garbage one pair of flies can increase to 1.8 million pairs within six generations or 12 weeks.

Horse pasture

Horses grazing sudangrass, forage sorghum and sorghum-sudangrass crosses will often be poisoned. The symptoms only affect horses, while prussic acid will affect all livestock. The problem is appearing with increasing frequency in the south-western United States.

The first sign of trouble is incoordination of the rear legs. Affected horses, if forced to move, may sway from side to side. The rear quarters occasionally may drop to the ground. Many will even fall down when forced to back up.

Paralysis of the back legs and tail occasionally develops within 24 hours of the initial symptoms.

The urinary bladder is paralyzed, too. Constant dribbling of urine is the apparent symptom. As a result of bladder paralysis, horses may develop fatal bladder and kidney infections.

Reproductive consequences include abortion and fetal deformities. Fetal deformities occur in early gestating mares that eat the grasses in June when the plants grow rapidly.

The dangers from sorghum and sudangrass poisonings are lessened as the grass matures and dries, but mature and second-growth pastures have been incriminated.

Researchers don't know what toxic agent in the grasses cause the trouble. Initial symptoms show up anywhere from one week to six months after horses have been grazing. The average is eight weeks, researchers have found.

Removing the horse from the pasture will usually stop progression of the symptoms. However, the animal doesn't generally recover from the incoordination or bladder paralysis.

It's best not to put horses in these pastures in the first place.

Not all insects are your enemy — in fact, one is a real lady — the ladybird (or lady bug). These orange-red or red beetles with black spots like nothing better than aphids for breakfast, lunch and supper and maybe a midnight snack as well!

What many people don't realize

Adult stage of ladybird beetle

is that these tiny black creatures with red spots that look like tiny alligators, are the larvae stage of the ladybird and, like many youngsters have an even bigger appetite than their parents.

Housing, Farm Loans Drop

Interest rates on housing and farm loans made by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Farmers Home Administration and crop loans made by the Commodity Credit Corporation have been reduced in response to the nation's rural credit needs, Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland said.

Changes in rates on CCC loans become effective immediately, changes in housing loans were effective at the close of business June 13 and new rates for farm loans were effective at the close of business June 16.

The interest rate on all 1980 crop commodity loans made by CCC is lowered from 13 to 11 1/2 percent. However, the interest rate on CCC farm storage facility and drying equipment loans will remain at the 13-percent rate.

Interest rates for economic emergency loans to farmers were lowered to 11 percent for real estate and to 11.5 percent for production loans. Both had been 14 percent.

The new rates for emergency disaster loans will be 12.5 percent on real estate and 13.5 percent for production loans. Both had been 14 percent.

Mortgage interest rates on low-to-moderate single-family homes were lowered to 11.5 percent and rural rental housing interest rates went to 10.75 percent. Both had been 13 percent.

Regular Farmers Home Administration farm real estate loans will carry a new interest rate of 11 percent while regular farm operating loans will be at 10.5 percent.

Interest rates for actual loss disaster emergency loans will remain at 5 percent as prescribed by law.

Interest rates for the Farmers Home Administration program for "limited resource" farmers will remain at 5 percent for real estate loans and 7 percent for operating loans.

Interest rates for loans guaranteed by Farmers Home Administration will continue to be negotiated between borrower and lender. These include loans for business and industrial development, for housing for persons with above-moderate incomes and for some farm loans.

Improper tire pressures can cut gas mileage by five percent or more.

Study Sought on Ag Sewage Sludge

The Nebraska Department of Environmental Control (DEC) has called for a study of its policy on new permits for direct application of sewage sludges on agricultural land as a result of new concern about potential health hazards.

Dr. Leon Chesnin, extension waste management specialist in the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, requested the study after attending a symposium co-sponsored by the Environmental Protection Agency in May. He presented a summary of the latest research information to the DEC and suggested a re-evaluation of the state-supported program of direct application of sewage to agricultural land without the need of composting.

Prior to that meeting, the dominant belief held that there was little risk from applying sewage sludge on agricultural lands. "It was organic, so nobody ever worried about it," according to Chesnin. "It was thought that pathogens and parasites were quickly wiped out in the soil."

It appears that is not the case, however, Chesnin reported. At the symposium, new research results revealed that sewage sludge applied to agricultural or municipal land can contaminate soil with pathogens and viruses up to 200 days. And it may infest the soil with parasites of man and domestic animals for up to 20 years, he said.

Using sewage sludge samples from around the U.S., research reported showed that the sludge contained bacteria, live viruses of polio, hepatitis A and gastroenteritis, and parasites including cysts of tape and round worms of man and domestic animals. The cyst stage is a very resistant one, Chesnin said, and it is these parasites which may live up to 20 years in the soil. Soil functions as an intermediate host for the parasites, he said.

As a result of the research, Dan

T. Drain, DEC director, called for the study of the department's policy on direct application. A report is due by Aug. 1. Chesnin will assist the state in its assessment.

Chesnin noted that until the new data were reported, the EPA had encouraged direct application. Lincoln, Omaha and Grand Island have applied to the EPA for grants for direction application projects, he said.

EPA and the Nebraska Environmental Control Department have been asked to consider requiring heat treatment or composting of sewage wastes before they can be applied to ag and municipal lands. All of the pathogens and parasites contained in the waste can be destroyed with temperatures of 140 degrees F or higher. "It's expensive to heat wastes to that temperature but the same thing can be done very cheaply with composting," Chesnin said. Composting is the microbiological decomposition of organic wastes which produces temperatures of 140 to 170 degrees that kill pathogens, viruses, parasites and resistant weed seeds. Composting also eliminates all odors and attraction of flies to the waste, he said.

Some Nebraska cities have dried their sewage in air and sun and then offered it to gardeners and farmers, but Chesnin warned that resistant disease organisms and parasites are not always destroyed in the procedure.

Every sample taken in the nationwide study had microbacterium in it, he said, a source of tuberculosis for cattle and man. Hypothetically, a person susceptible to TB walking past a field where sewage sludge containing the pathogen had been injected or spread could inhale dust from the field containing the microbacterium and develop an active case of the disease, according to Chesnin. Susceptible cattle grazing corn stalks from such a field also could pick up the disease, he said. Animals grazing sludge applied pastures or stalk fields to ingest some soil and sludge, and thus are subject to infection from the parasites or pathogens in the sewage sludge, he said.

Chesnin noted that 1 percent of the U.S. population has tapeworms. Cysts of the worms are passed into feces and then into sewage wastes where the cycle can continue if the sludge is applied to ag lands.

Infectious wastes from hospitals and veterinary clinics are examples of sources of pathogen and parasites which still could be active in sewage sludge.

"We need to consider the nature of the waste before we put it on the land," Chesnin said. "We need to ask ourselves, 'Are we going to make a source of infection for people 10 to 20 years down the road?'" He drew a parallel between chemical dumps like Love Canal and land application of sewage sludge, but added that health risks could be immediate as well as long-range concerns.

As evidence of health hazards from direct application is substantiated, the case for composting wastes also is strengthened, Chesnin said. EPA regulations no longer permit buying sludge in landfills, a practice Chesnin called a waste of land and valuable organic resources. "We still want to get these waste resources recycled for crop production in the soil, but in a safe form." Composting is inexpensive and is the answer, he said.
