Plant Population Not Factor In Quality of Corn Stalks

Corn variety and irrigation management affect the quality of corn stalks, but plant population is not a factor, according to preliminary results of a study conducted at the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources

Findings were presented in Ithaca, N.Y. July 29 at the annual meeting of the American Society of Animal Science by M.L. McDonnell, a University of Nebraska Lincoln graduate student, who collaborated with Terry J. Klopfenstein professor of animal science

Seven varieties of corn commercially produced in Nebraska last summer were evaluated under five management systems to test the effects of management and variety on the feed value of cornstalks

The research showed differences among varieties, Klopfenstein explained. "Cornstalks are not just corn stalks. Those who want to use the stalks as feed will eventually want to pick certain varieties that have higher quality."

Of two management variables tested, plant population and irrigation vs. dry land production, evaluation showed plant population does not affect cornstalk quality.

However, "dry land stalks were considerably better than irrigated stalks," Klopfenstein said, "probably because dry land produces less grain and leaves more sugar in the stalk for the animals."

Klopfenstein said studies into feed value of cornstalks are continuing, with four of the varieties tested being repeated and other varieties added to the testing.

He said last year's excellent grain production may have played a role in the preliminary results, so further study is warranted.

Area's First Responders Complete Course

Thanks to a group of concerned citizens, residents in the communities of Waterbury, Concord, Hubbard and Dixon, and the surrounding areas, will have access to emergency medical care prior to the arrival of a rescue unit.

At the present time, none of these communities are provided with their own rescue unit service and must call on area units in the event of a medical emergency.

Residents of these communities recently completed a 40-hour First Responders Class, the first such class in the area. Miron Jenness, Emergency Medical Services instructor and coordinator, conducted the class at the Allen fire hall. Classes were organized by the Allen Rescue Unit. Sam Knepper, EMTA and CPR instructor, was responsible for locating persons who were interested in taking part in the course. Site coordinators were Bill and Pearl Snyder of Allen.

Jenness said the overall objective of the course is to improve the quality of emergency medical care rendered to victims of accidents and illness. As the first person at the emergency scene, it is critical that the first responder be proficient in providing basic life support and in taking any other actions necessary to minimize the patient's discomfort and prevent further complications.

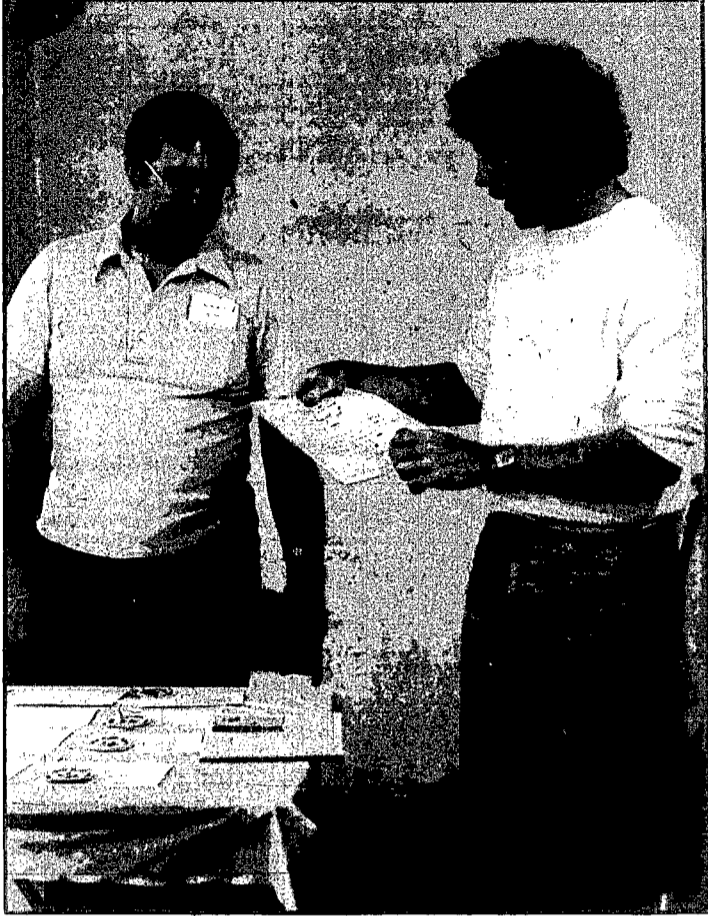

Area residents who completed the First Responders course and received certificates during a supper last Thursday evening at the Allen fire hall were:

- Allen — Joy Rothwisch.
 - Concord — Bud Hansen, Steve Pritchard, Eunice Diediker and Jill Hansen.
 - Dixon — Jeff Hartung and Julie Hartung.
 - Hubbard — Arnold Stark and Margie Stark.
 - Waterbury — Dan O'Neill, Dan Rooney, Jacki O'Neill and Shirley Stingley.
- Jenness said residents of these communities are urged to call on first responders in their area in the event of a medical emergency.
- Persons completing the course were given instruction in the following areas:
- Airway management and oxygen administration, taught by Barb Wortman, operating room technician at Providence Medical Center in Wayne.
 - Control of bleeding, wounds and shock, taught by Gary West, physician's assistant at Benthack Clinic in Wayne.
 - Injury care and treatment to the skull, spine, chest, extremities and soft tissue, taught by Gary West.
 - Emergency childbirth, taught by Louise Jenness, director of nursing at Providence Medical Center.
 - Vital Signs — blood pressure, pulse and respiration, taught by Bill and Pearl Snyder and Sam Knepper, EMTA's, Allen Rescue Unit.
 - CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation), obstructed airway and infant resuscitation, taught by Joy Rothwisch, Paul Snyder and Sam Knepper, CPR instructors, Allen Rescue Unit.
 - Anatomy, primary and secondary patient examination, poisons, drugs, burns, and moving patients, taught by Jenness.

State Natural Resource District Cited

The Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District was cited for development and implementation of its "Lands for Conservation Program" that provides economic incentives for constructing conservation terraces in a multicity area in northeast Nebraska.

The district, since its formation in 1972, has been a leader in using local resources to solve local natural resource problems. The district began using local funds to finance conservation measures when federal and state monies were threatened or ran out. The Land for Conservation Program was begun in 1977 to provide additional economic incentives for landowners to apply much needed conservation measures.

During fiscal year 1979, the district used $90,000 in local tax funds to help local landowners pay for the cost of terrace construction on nearly 6,000 acres of land. Another $360,000 in other tax monies was used to help finance measures on other areas of the nearly three million acre district.

The Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District covers all or parts of 15 counties in the Elkhorn River Basin of Northeast Nebraska. Of the nearly three million acres in the district, 84 percent is cultivated land, 10 percent is grassland and 6 percent is in other uses.

The local tax monies employed by the district allowed for construction of nearly double the number of terraced that could have been built with other funds. Seven of Nebraska's top 20 worst watersheds, in terms of sediment load on rivers, are located in the Elkhorn District, and the district gave first priority to these areas in construction of conservation measures.

The Society is a private, non-profit, scientific and educational organization dedicated to advancing the science and art of good land use. It has about 14,500 members in the United States, Canada, and about 80 foreign countries.

The theme of this week's annual meeting was "Economics, Ethics, Ecology: Roots of Productive Conservation."

Credit Cards Won't Pay Tuition Bill

Students will no longer be able to pay tuition or residence hall bills with Master Charge or VISA/BankAmericard credit cards, the University of Nebraska-Lincoln announced this week.

Dr. Ronald W. Wright, UNL vice chancellor for business and finance, said that the change is effective Aug. 15.

The University regrets eliminating this convenience but did not feel it could make reductions in the instructional budget to finance increased costs of processing credit card transactions," he explained.

VISA and Master Charge may still be used in transactions with a number of self-supporting activities at UNL, including the University Bookstore, Nebraska Unions, health center, campus police, Nebraska Center hotel, Howell Theatre and Kimball Recital Hall ticket offices, Sheldon Art Gallery shop, University Press and the Division of Continuing Studies, except for evening college credit classes.

Confusion Still Surrounds Tornado Relief Expenses

CAPITOL NEWS
By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent

The Nebraska Press Association, a former opponent of legislation to restrict smoking in public, has had a change of heart and is now a strong supporter of the Clean Indoor Air Act.

The Nebraska Restaurant Association says it has changed its stance on the law and plans to monitor restaurants to make sure it is being obeyed.

Association spokesman Richard Lutz of Lincoln said recently the law is "workable and we're behind it 100 percent." He said a check with city health departments and the state Health Department indicated they had received only four complaints.

The Clean Indoor Air Act became law last Jan. 1 but the rules and regulations for implementing it didn't become effective until June 4.

Lutz said not all restaurant operators knew how they were supposed to separate smokers and non-smokers. To make sure that they understood the law, Lutz said, the association mailed 1,500 copies of the rules and regulations. In addition, a monitoring committee, which will use all of the association's 20 board members, will be established.

Then if complaints about non-compliance are received, "we'll go out and find out why and make sure the restaurants know what to do," Lutz said.

He said Clean Indoor Air Act was passed in a form acceptable to restaurant operators. Compliance with the law can be achieved without excessive expense or inconvenience, he said.

Cost-Share Argued

Exactly how payment of Grand Island's tornado relief expenses are going to be handled remains unknown at this writing.

Sen. Edward Zorinsky and Grand Island Mayor Robert Kriz have criticized Gov. Charles Thone for some of his actions in addressing the problem. But the governor has said his administration has been making every effort to respond in a responsible manner.

Thone signed an agreement under which the federal government will pay for 75 percent of the $3.1 million disaster relief bill, with the state and local governments picking up the balance.

Under a new policy, the federal government will pay for only 75 percent of the cost of repairing the public facilities. Until this year, the federal government paid all such costs.

Zorinsky has said Thone erred when he signed the agreement because that foreclosed the possibility of the federal government paying for 100 percent of the costs.

The state first proposed that it split the 25 percent share, which amounts to about $776,000, but Thone later indicated he would be willing to increase the state's contribution.

The governor said the state finds itself in a financial bind in the area of disaster relief and noted there are a number of places in the state which have applied for relief claims stemming from storm and flood damage.

Kriz complained that Thone lacked compassion in dealing with Grand Island's problem, but the governor said he and his state officials "have been listening carefully. I feel we have been responding."

Thone said he would work a visit to Grand Island into his schedule so he could explain in detail what prompted him to act as he did.

Federal officials have confirmed there was nothing the governor could have done to change the 75-25 percent formula for payment of the relief costs because that split has been established as national policy and is not negotiable.

Senatorial Pay Discussed

The League of Women Voters has been asked to head a grassroots effort to raise the salaries of state senators.

A league spokesman said the issue will be discussed during the organization's Aug. 18 board meeting.

Sen. Don Wesely of Lincoln asked the league to get involved because he was concerned about the impact on the state if senatorial salaries are not increased.

Ann Wilson of Lincoln, spokesperson for the league said the organization has traditionally supported higher salaries for the state senators. But she added the possibility of leading a state drive had not been discussed and would not be discussed until the Aug. 18 meeting.

In a letter to Mrs. Wilson, Wesely said he wanted the league to consider heading a petition drive to place a constitutional amendment on the 1982 general election ballot to increase the compensation for the lawmakers.

Wesely said recent events have led him to conclude that any salary plan proposed by the legislators would be rejected by the voters. Another of his conclusions, Wesely said, was that "financial pressure on state senators will continue to increase and make it even more difficult to attract and retain qualified individuals to serve in our legislature."

The Lincoln lawmaker said the recent controversy involving the use of campaign contributions for personal expenses by Neilligh Sen. John DeCamp "leads me to believe that efforts to reform the Nebraska Legislature will never be complete until compensation is increased and made adequate for state senators."

Wesely said his frustrations about low senatorial pay did not originate with his service in the Legislature.

"For years prior to my election I felt it was only prudent to increase legislative compensation," he said.

Proposes Outstate Exams
Sen. Rex Haberman of Imperial wonders

why examinations for licenses issued by state agencies or departments are held only in Lincoln.

In a recent letter to Gov. Thone, Haberman said, "By holding these examinations only in Lincoln, many people are forced to travel hundreds of miles and spend hundreds of dollars to come to Lincoln and take the examination."

He said one of his constituents in southwest Nebraska had to travel more than 600 miles to take a state examination in Lincoln for a physical therapy assistant's license, even though the department that gave the exam has a field office in North Platte.

The constituent could have taken the test in North Platte "and thus (could have) saved all the time and money required to travel to Lincoln," Haberman said.

He acknowledged outstate testing would be impractical in some cases but said it would work in many other cases if the tests were given in field offices.

"I will look forward to working with you on this proposal if you see merit in it," Haberman said in his letter to the governor

OBSERVATIONS

Critics undoubtedly will bemoan our extensive coverage the next few issues of the Wayne and Dixon County Fairs and the success or failure of Wayne's Midget and Junior Legion baseball teams.

For the first time in more than a decade, both the Midgets and Juniors secured berths in state baseball action. Their mentor, Hank Overlin, has worked hard to develop quality Legion teams over the years and credit is due both him and his ball players.

Youth participating in the County 4-H Dress Revue and Song Contest also are taking the results of their talents, hard work and leadership to state competition. An encouraging nod is due them also.

The county fairs will spawn some state qualifiers as well, pointing up an entire year's efforts by the participants. We want to give everyone the encouragement and support they deserve.

The next two weeks will be a time when youth of the area shine. Whether it be in baseball, dairy showmanship, domestic products, and arts or needlework, the youth have worked hard to reach this annual plateau.

The "under 20" crowd often is criticized for its attitudes and antics. Rarely is anyone heard on mainstreet complimenting our teenagers. We want to set the trend of letting the future generations know that we do indeed have confidence in their abilities to perform.

Youth also are an important economic factor which should not be ignored either. National advertising campaigns gear much of their efforts to the sub 20 market. They know the importance of the younger set.

So, as our readers read of the fairs, see pictures of our state baseball teams, or livestock, or youth having fun, working hard and of their end results, remember that this is their time of the year to show their worth Dan Field, Editor.

No Magic or Doomsday

NEBRASKA FARM BUREAU FEDERATION
By M.M. Van Kirk
Director of Information

Persons who seek a "magic solution" to the energy problem are as unrealistic as those who take a "doomsday approach," Dr. Norman Rask, agricultural energy expert of Ohio State University declared recently in addressing the Livestock Marketing Congress at a session in California.

Dr. Rask said some persons believe that somehow if we controlled the oil companies, or allowed more drilling, or if we were to break up OPEC, or (found) some other technological fix, this would lead to a bountiful supply of inexpensive oil.

He says, however, that this "magic solution" approach is too simplistic, and as unrealistic as the "doomsday approach" which says that nothing can be done about the energy situation.

He explains, "The doomsday approach discounts too strongly the impact of higher energy prices, and what they will do in terms of conservation, in terms of the development of new technologies, and in terms of new discoveries."

Dr. Rask, who has been involved in several energy projects at Ohio State, said optimism about the development of new energy technologies and new energy discoveries is needed.

He predicted an "energy transition" in the next 10-20 years, which will consist of conservation, accommodation to higher prices and supplementing our current energy resources.

He said this transition will be similar to the two energy transitions in the past 100 years. The first was the move from wood to coal as the primary source of energy and the second was about 40 years ago, when natural gas and oil replaced coal.

Dr. Rask noted that in each of these transitions, we moved from a more expensive to a less expensive and more efficient source of energy. And we also added on to existing energy sources, such as wood and coal, without decreasing their supply.

But Dr. Rask said, "As we look at the energy scenario today, we don't see that new, abundant cheap source of energy waiting in the wings to be utilized."

He called gasoline only a "mid-term alternative" fuel into the 1990's, explaining, "The degree to which we can conserve some of the substitution and conservation questions will determine how strongly we will rely on alcohol, and therefore how much of an impact it will have on the price of corn."

Dr. Rask said that since corn is currently the major source of alcohol used in gasoline, demand for corn could have a potentially significant effect on the livestock industry.

The executive director of petroleum sales for FarmLand Industries, the nation's largest farm cooperative, Dave Arthur of Kansas City, also agreed that gasoline will be a gasoline "extender" for only the next few years. He also predicted that crude oil prices would increase "four or five times" in the next 10 years. To offset these increases, Arthur said Americans will have to "conserve more energy and "change our lifestyles."

Arthur also said that although only about 3 percent of the nation's fuel is used for farming and ranching, agriculture needs "somebody to see that the government acts halfway decent" to insure that those fuel needs are met.

Almost without exception they have warned that there are not likely to be any magic breakthroughs and that the solution to the nation's energy problems will be through a combination of alternative solutions.

LETTERS

Dear Editor,

I see red after reading editor's column in recent paper regarding the city's deteriorated reserve account.

In past 12 months, a stringent purchase order is in effect, but in past years employees took their purchasing books on shopping trips giving little consideration to budget matters or approval from authorities.

I would like to know when they are spending tax payers dollars why a stringent purchase order has not always been in effect?

When the reserve acct is deteriorated they put blame on tax payers for not voting in the sales tax.

In the past they have spent, spent, and spent with no approval & no concern for the future. Why didn't they cut the fat a long time ago?

Such as the empty fuel tank that was put up in south part of Wayne several years ago.

It's sad to read their increase in salary is only 6% instead of 8, and editor seems to think they were not given due consideration when inflation outpaces their income.

I believe the whole inflation pattern outpaces everyone's income.

I hardly believe the tax payers should take all the blame, maybe administration should take some.

But we all know tax payers will ultimately suffer as editor states.

Name Withheld By Request

ing by just simply reading the "Record" page of the Wayne Herald. This year already, there have been more instances of shoplifting and theft related ty incidents. In reading the papers, other cities have been adding police officers rather than subtracting them. Wayne, Nebraska will have a new meaning to the statement, "You can never find a cop when you need one!"

I am not criticizing the Herald for not having all the information on these cuts. I found out along time ago that City Hall only tells you what it wants to and nothing else.

When the City of Wayne was promoting the sales tax, they were very reticent in giving out all of the information. As far as the cuts to be made, the City was very ignorant in saying just what SPECIFICALLY would have to be cut. They never once told us that these specific positions would be cut, or this service would be cut, or the pool rates would go up, etc. They insisted on price release statements such as, "Some things may have to be cut."

Speaking of the sales tax, I was amused at the many business people who thought their stores would be boycotted. With some of your high prices, your stores should be boycotted anyway. I can understand why some people drive to Norfolk or Sioux City for their goods.

Before closing, I will leave you with an ounce of advice. If you will need a cop next week, call today to make an appointment.

ANOTHER ONE WHO KNOWS

Dear Sir

I hesitate in writing this because I don't want to get stereotyped as another typical citizen of Wayne. That is, sit around and complain now that the damage is done.

The City Council has decided to eliminate two positions from the City's work force, a Street-Department employee and a policeman. However, there is more to this than meets the eye. A reliable source has indicated that no one in the Street Department is actually losing his job. The budget did eliminate one position, but this position has not been filled for years. This elimination does look nice on paper.

Not only has one policeman lost his job, but the entire Police Reserve Force has been eliminated. I believe this represents an additional three or four personnel. I am not sure what kind of hardships these cuts will cause, but I know it can't be for the good. In this day of rising crime, I feel the City-Council was a bit naive in gathering all the information before making cuts in law enforcement personnel. You can relate with the ris

Wakefield Rescue Unit Purchases Ambulance

The Wakefield Rescue Unit has purchased a 1972 Ford custom-made ambulance from the Arnold Rural Fire Department.

Art Barker, rescue squad captain, said the vehicle is fully equipped, including a radio and oxygen.

The ambulance will be used as a backup unit, replacing a 1966 Ford station wagon.

Money used to purchase the unit came from collections received from rescue and ambulance runs which have been made.

Foreign Exchange Students Given Farewell in Witte Home

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Witte hosted a cooperative farewell supper in their home Sunday evening to honor two foreign exchange students, Ulrich Koch of Busholz, Germany and Gracie Onauaha of Alagas, Nigeria.

Both students made their home with the Wittes while attending school in the United States.

Ulrich was a spring graduate of Allen High School and will return to Germany today (Thursday). Gracie will graduate from Wayne State College this Friday and will return to Nigeria Aug. 14. She has attended Wayne State for the past four years.

Forty guests attended the farewell supper, coming from Pender, Randolph, Allen, Wakefield, Wayne, Newcastle, Laurel and Concord.

Laurel, Minnie Weiershauser of Wayne, Mrs. Vern Carlson and Mrs. Thure Johnson, both of Wakefield, and Mrs. Glen Magnuson and Helen Carlson of Concord.

The Melvin Puhmans joined family members in the Roy Warneke home in Paulina, Iowa Sunday for a get-together.

Mrs. Robert Anderson and Mrs. Rachell Willers and her guests, the Charles Fielders of Austin, Texas, had a picnic supper with Louis Heinemann at the Pender Care Center Sunday evening.

Mark, Silver Bay, Minn., and Mrs. Dwight Johnson, Jennifer and Michael, were July 28 afternoon guests in the Melvin Puhman home.

Don Hagbergs, David and Danny, Minneapolis, Minn., were Friday overnight guests in the Ever Johnson home.

Doug Treptows, Omaha, were weekend guests in the Norman Anderson home. Joining them Saturday evening were Jerry Stanleys and Peggy of Dixon, and Mrs. Jerry Wells and Jason of Norfolk.

High Temps Bring More Mites, Corn Borers and Cutworms

With the high temperatures has come an increase of corn borers, cutworms and even spider mites, according to an Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources staff member.

Lloyd Andersen, extension specialist with integrated pest management, said there are several species of spider mites in Nebraska, but the most common types are two spot mites and Banks grass mites.

"Mites are occurring in central Nebraska and west. They usually don't develop on corn in the east due to different weather conditions," he said.

Spider mites, which are plentiful in the southern states, also are common in Nebraska, especially in the lower rainfall and higher elevation areas. Andersen noted that they usually begin on the south and west sides of a field because that is where they land first.

Once these mites are in the field, and depending on the numbers, they can turn a plant brown usually beginning on lower leaves, then moving upward. According to Andersen, mites prematurely dry the plant and consequently, reduces the size of ears.

"There are many ways to check for spider mites. If the lower leaves on a corn stalk are yellow and drying out, there is a good chance mites have infested the field. However, this must be carefully checked because the drying can be caused by drought, insufficient water or nitrogen, or even fertilizer burn," Andersen said.

"Look under the leaves. If there is a webbing that can be peeled off or you can see colonies about the size of a dime, then treatment should begin."

Applying pesticide this year is especially difficult, Andersen said, because of the excellent growth of irrigated corn. The stalks and leaves have formed a "canopy" of leaves which prevents the penetration of material to the bottom where the mites are. Now is the time to watch for mites because the corn is between the pollen and dent stage, he noted. After dent stage, little or no reduction of yield occurs.

Two commercial pesticides, Di-Syston and Thimet in granular form have worked well in controlling this pest. Andersen noted that both be dropped to the bottom of the plant. One drawback of these pesticides is that there has not been sufficient moisture to release the chemical.

He also warned that Parathion has been "very erratic in field use." This pesticide may kill off the mite predator and not the mite itself and the liquid pesticides do not penetrate the canopy of leaves. Several insecticides are labeled for mite control on corn, such as Trithion, Cygon, DI Syston and Metasytok R.

Harvesting Potatoes

The variety and growing season of potatoes will determine when home garden spuds are ready to be harvested. If over 50 percent of the foliage is brown, the potatoes should be dug immediately. The tubers will make no growth once the vines have deteriorated to this point. Potatoes left in the ground after they are mature are subject to disease problems.

Potato surfaces should not be scuffed or exposed to sun and drying winds during the digging operation. The home garden can spread the potatoes out in the shade until the surface has dried and the soil particles brush away easily. After "curing," the potatoes should be stored in a very cool cellar with low humidity. Loosely woven potato sacks or screen racks will aid in preventing potatoes from "sweating" during storage.

Carrots

Carrots are a hardy cool season vegetable that will grow well in the fall. You plant the carrots within the next week. Seeds should be planted 1/4 inch deep and 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 inches apart in rows 18 to 30 inches apart. Carrots do not compete well with weeds so good seed bed preparations and weed control is important.

Carrots may be harvested when the roots are 1/2 to 3/4 inches in diameter at the upper end. Varieties with a thick crown and short tapering root are more easy to pull from heavy soils than those with long, slender roots.

Harvesting Onions

Green onions may be pulled when they reach 1/4 to 3/8 inches in diameter. Onions for storage should be left until about 40 to 50 percent of their tops have kinked and fallen over. The tubers should be gently pulled or dug and then be cured by piling in rows covered by the tops. If removed from the garden they should be placed on screens or in shallow containers in the shade.

Curing may take two to four weeks before the outer scales become hard and the necks dry so the tops may be clipped off one to two inches from the bulb. They should not be exposed to prolonged sunlight during curing and should not be allowed to freeze. Onions keep longest in unlighted storage at cool temperature. The onion helps grow its own storage system. The outer skin which is actually a leaf encloses a bulb like a tight plastic bag. The chemical that gives the onion its characteristic aroma and flavor delays attacks of decay organisms.

Maturity of Plant Important in Alfalfa For Rations of Beef

When harvesting alfalfa to be used in beef cattle rations as a protein source, attention should be given to the maturity of the plant along with the cutting and processing methods used, according to research conducted at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

This research was presented at the American Society of Animal Science annual meeting July 30 by graduate student Dave Rock. Assisting him were Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources staff members Dr. Terry Klopfenstein and Dr. John Ward, professors of animal science and Dr. Robert Britton, associate professor of animal science.

The amount of dietary protein which escapes rumen degradation: bypass protein is utilized more efficiently in the lower tract of ruminants. Dehydrated alfalfa has been shown to be a high bypass protein in previous work at the University. Nebraska provides approximately 40 percent of the nation's entire dehydrated alfalfa supply. Laboratory analysis were conducted to characterize the alfalfa as it responds to the environment and processing.

Alfalfa was harvested at four maturities and processed by three methods: freeze-dried to simulate fresh material, sun-dried and oven-dried to simulate dehydration. These samples then were measured for crude protein, heat damage, protein degradation and in vitro ammonia release.

It was determined that available bypass protein of alfalfa decreased as plants matured. When heated, the amount of available bypass protein was increased. Sun curing increased the amount of available bypass protein when compared to freeze-dried material.

Sunflower and soybean oil were used to power a diesel engine tractor and ethanol production with a still was demonstrated at the annual event which attracted a crowd of 4,000.

Vern Hofman, agricultural engineer at North Dakota State University described his research with sunflowers, a plentiful crop in his state. Whole sunflower seeds are ground in a meat-grinder like extractor to remove up to 75 percent of the available oil. This oil is then partly refined and used in a mix with diesel fuel. Hofman said a 50-50 mix of sunoil and diesel showed no horse power decrease.

With the current price of sunflowers the sunoil diesel combination is more expensive than straight diesel at this time. But Hofman noted that "farmers are excited about having a renewable source of fuel."

World Championship Quarter Horse Show

Fleer, Skipsweet Qualify for Event

Edward Fleer, 18 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Haas, Wayne, qualified with Skipsweet Fantasy in reining for the 1980 American Quarter Horse Association (AQHA) World Championship Show at Tulsa, Okla., held Wednesday. The top two entries per event from each state are eligible to take part in the competition of 27 events. Fleer is leading the state in reining with his seven year old Buckskin. Six judges will be employed for this year's show and world champions will be decided by a panel of four judges. The judges' decision becomes official within seconds after being entered into a computer terminal connected by telephone lines to the master AQHA computer at headquarters in Amarillo.

Alternate Fuels Generate Interest at Tractor Day

Alternative fuels for farming generated the most interest July 24 at the Tractor Power and Safety Day at the University of Nebraska field Laboratory near Mead.

received equal emphasis with demonstrations on safe transporting of farm equipment, flammability of different kinds of insulation used in homes and livestock buildings, and hazards of wood stoves chimney fires.

Emergency aid for victims of crushing injuries was demonstrated by the Palmer Rescue Squad. Ronnie Schnieder, extension safety specialist in IANR and chairman of Tractor Power and Safety Day said only two deaths from crushing injuries have occurred this year in Nebraska compared to ten in 1979. Schnieder noted that the Palmer Rescue Squad doesn't have the money for all the available specialized emergency equipment and instead relies on the knowledge of the 29 trained volunteers.

The theme for the day "60 Years of Tractor Testing" was evidenced in the tractor parade, the annual highlight. The first tractor to pass the official test of the University of Nebraska, tractor testing laboratory, the John Deere Waterloo Boy, led the parade which also included many foreign and domestic models evaluated during the current testing season.

Dixon Music Event Moved To Auditorium

The Dixon County 4-H Music Contest which will be held on Thursday will now be held at the Concord Auditorium instead of the previously scheduled place. The program at the auditorium will begin at 8 with eight music groups participating. The Junior Leaders will be serving ice cream after the program. The public is invited to attend.

HERE'S A GREAT NEW WAY TO SAVE ON YOUR 1980 INCOME TAXES!

Did you pay too much money in taxes last year? If the answer is "yes" then it's time to think about G.I.F.T.SM

G.I.F.T.—Guaranteed Income For Tomorrow—is a great new retirement annuity and tax deferral program for the not-so-rich. You don't pay any taxes on your growing cash value until you actually withdraw your money, usually at retirement. Then you'll probably be in a much lower tax bracket. Which means less taxes to pay!

What's more, the growth of G.I.F.T.'s cash values is based on the high interest rates of our Certificates of Deposit. You can add to your G.I.F.T. annuity in amounts as low as $1,000. Plus, at retirement, you may receive all of your money at once—or enjoy one of a variety of options that can provide a monthly income for as long as you live.

If it sounds too good to be true, call your nearest Columbus Federal location and find out about G.I.F.T. firsthand. If you'd find it more convenient, just mail the coupon for full details.
