No Doubt: July was Hot and Dry

July was a hot month across the state, and counties of Northeast Nebraska were no exception. The average daily maximum temperature for Wakefield — the closest official reporting station — was 92.3 degrees. The average daily minimum was 63.8 degrees.

A report issued by the UNL Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources said. Average temperature for the month was 78.9 degrees, which is 3.1 degrees above normal. The high temperature recorded during the month at Wakefield was 103 on July 7, with the lowest temperature of 50 reported on July 23. Similarly, July also was one of the driest Julys on record. Wakefield reported only 92 hundredths of an inch for the entire month. This was 2.18 inches below normal, the report indicated. In addition to the high temperatures and low moisture, humidity was high in many areas of the state. July high temperatures normally reach 90 degrees or above on an average of 12 to 16 days across most of the state. But this July, many parts of the state had 90 degrees or more on 25 or more days. On several days, 100 degrees or higher was reached at numerous sites. Extreme maximum temperatures were scattered throughout the month. The highest temperature reported was 111 at Beaver City on July 23 and 29. Auburn, Hebron and Pawnee City recorded 110 on July 14 and Valentine reached 110 on July 29.

Will Social Security Be in Your Future?

Richard L. Leshar, President Chamber of Commerce of the United States

Will the Social Security system still be solvent and able to pay the money you will be due when you retire?

This question might have been scoffed at just a decade ago, but now it is being asked in earnest by more and more Americans. They have good reason to be concerned.

Social Security is in trouble for three basic reasons. First, the Social Security trust fund is currently being propped up thanks only to a tremendous tax increase. Unfortunately, this tax increase is only one of many the administration has imposed as a kind of knee-jerk response to every economic problem from inflation, to energy, to Social Security. But, as the U.S. Chamber has repeatedly warned, people do not work just to pay taxes, but to earn more after-tax income. Not surprisingly then, all this excessive taxation had depressed the economy and made the recession worse. Should the result be a long, drawn-out recession, the Social Security trust fund will be depleted further and faster than expected.

Second, we are beginning to experience the long-predicted "graying of America" as the over-65 segment of the population grows larger in proportion to other age groups. And within 25 years, the post-World War II baby boom will become the 21st century retirement boom. That, combined with our present low population growth, means the ratio of Social Security taxpayers to beneficiaries will drop sharply at the very time larger and larger outlays for the Social Security program will be needed.

Finally, although 90 percent of the American work force is covered by Social Security, about nine million workers — mostly federal, state and local government employees — are exempt from paying

Social Security taxes. Nonetheless, about 70 percent of these "uncovered" employees finally qualify for Social Security benefits, as a result of working in covered employment at some time in their career.

(Incidentally, in discussing this problem in a recent column, I unintentionally conveyed the impression that government workers can collect Social Security benefits without ever paying Social Security taxes. This is obviously not possible as I have pointed out in prior columns, so I want to thank those readers who alerted me and make sure the record is made clear.)

Nevertheless, government workers generally qualify for benefits equal to about two thirds of what they would have earned if their full career had been in covered employment, even though they pay less than one-third of the amount career-long covered employees pay in Social Security taxes. Health and Human Services estimates this windfall amounts to about $840 million a year. It happens because the Social Security benefits formula allows workers with low average career earnings to receive a higher return on their contributions than do workers with high earnings. This subsidy is intended to benefit workers with a lifetime of low wages. Unfortunately, it makes no distinction between these low income people and federal employees whose average private sector earnings are low only because they have worked so long in government employment.

In terms of fairness, there is simply no reason why any working American should be exempt from supporting and participating in Social Security. I say this because Social Security is not really an individual retirement program, but rather a form of welfare in which today's workers are taxed to supplement the incomes of those who have already completed their working careers, or who are widows, orphans or disabled. If mandatory universal Social Security coverage were enacted and made effective by January, 1982, the Social Security system could receive an additional $123 billion in revenues by 1981. That would constitute a big step in the right direction.

It is also estimated that tens of billions of dollars could be saved by slightly reducing the benefits of future beneficiaries. This would obviously be a controversial decision, however, and I personally believe the government has an obligation to begin offering much stronger tax incentives to encourage Americans to set up or expand their own individual retirement accounts.

The integrity of the Social Security system must be preserved, but to date, Congress had lacked the courage to take the decisive action we need. If our public servants cannot seem to see the light, then the upcoming election offers a perfect opportunity to make them feel the heat.

Some random thoughts and items:

The latest edition of Ma Bell's telephone book is available for Wayne and the area. In trying to find a number in Hoskins, we noted that the cover no longer lists that village. Instead, it lists "Hopkins." Being in the printing business, we can appreciate the typographical error. Wonder if the fooled up books will become collectors' items?

In Sheep's Clothing

For years business — like the boy who shouted "Wolf" too often — complained so often and for so long about the expense and paperwork of federal regulation that its alarms feel on deaf ears.

But now people are listening. In the last few years many members of Congress and a large segment of the public are showing concern as well.

And so are the courts. And even some bureaucrats.

Two recent court cases — particularly auspicious because they were decided only eight days apart — lend credence to charges that agencies can and do take the law into their own hands, rather than simply carrying out legislation enacted by Congress. Both cases involve the U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA), which enforces health and safety standards in some 5 million workplaces.

ceding, the appellate court called OSHA's actions "high-handed" and accused the agency of treating procedural obligations under the law as "meaningless ritual."

"An agency (also) must not forget, however, that it too has much to gain from the assistance of outside parties," the court declared. "By the same token, public scrutiny and participation before a legislative rule becomes effective can reduce the risk of factual errors, arbitrary actions and unforeseen detrimental consequences."

...and most important of all, high-handed agency rulemaking is more than just offensive to our basic notions of democratic government; a failure to seek at least the acquiescence of the governed eliminates a vital ingredient for effective administrative action."

The Supreme Court struck down OSHA's health standard regulating limits on exposure of workers to benzene, a toxic substance at high levels, which is used widely in industrial and commercial activities.

In doing so, the court called OSHA to task for failing to prove that present exposure limits are "unsafe," before issuing a rule reducing the allowable limits by 90 percent. Said the court majority:

"There are many activities that we engage in every day — such as driving a car or even breathing city air — that entail some risk of accident or material health impairment; nevertheless, few people would consider these activities 'unsafe.' Similarly, a workplace cannot be considered 'unsafe' unless it threatens the workers with a significant risk of harm."

Bureaucrats, too, are taking note of what is happening. Some 200 regulatory officials representing 38 agencies recently were summoned to the White House. Alfred Kahn, the President's chief adviser on inflation, told them: "The revolt against regulation that we are experiencing is a revolt also against government compulsion and meddling."

Let's hope their ears were open.

Big spenders are Fast spenders

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce, which invented the "Federal Spending Clock" never sleeps when it comes to keeping an eye on federal spending for taxpayers.

It now has invented the "Federal Spending Index" (FSI), which is designed to measure the growth of federal spending from month to month. This means it can be compared with the Consumer Price Index (CPI), which records changes in consumer prices, and tell whether the cost of government is going up faster than the cost of living.

Rejecting one of OSHA's fundamental philosophies, the court added: "...we think it is clear that the statute was not designed to require employers to provide absolutely risk free workplaces, whenever it is technologically feasible to do so, so long as the cost is not great enough to destroy an entire industry. Rather both the language and structure of the Act, as well as its legislative history, indicate that it was intended to require the limitation, as far as feasible, of significant risks of harm."

In the other case, a suit brought by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington, D.C. knocked down a regulation which OSHA failed to process through a public proceeding giving interested parties an opportunity to state their views. As the new assistant U.S. secretary of labor in charge of OSHA, Eula Bingham, in a speech to a union convention in 1977, simply announced that henceforth employers would be required to pay workers for time they voluntarily spend accompanying OSHA inspectors in their rounds of work sites. This became known as "walkaround" pay which employers have been paying since 1977.

Despite a subsequent rulemaking pro-

In the current analysis, the Chamber found — using 1967 as the base period equal to 100 — that in June

- The federal index stood at 354
- The consumer price index stood at 247.8

In other words, said Martin Lefkowitz, a senior economist who devised the index, federal spending has gone up 72 percent faster than the cost of living since 1967.

The FSI, based on monthly data from the Treasury Department, is a more accurate sign of government costs than taxes collected, since it includes dollars spent the government does not have.

The spending clock, which is on view at the U.S. Chamber in Washington, is a machine that illustrates how fast the government spends tax dollars — currently at a rate of $1 billion every 55 seconds.

The spending index arms taxpayers with a new question for their legislators: Why should the cost of government go up faster than their own family budgets?

Needed: General Economic Health

NEBRASKA FARM BUREAU FEDERATION

By M.M. Van Kirk, Director of Information

Only in food production and in aerospace engineering does the United States continue to dominate the world market and while U.S. agriculture may take pride in its productivity it has reason to worry about the decline of the rest of the nation's economy.

Geoffrey Carroll, American economist working for the European Community Commission's Washington delegation, writing in the July-August issue of the EC publication "Europe," cites figures showing a dramatic decline of the U.S. share of the world market for the following industries — chemicals, commercial banking, electronics and appliances, industrial and farm machinery, metal manufacturing, petroleum products, pharmaceuticals and textiles.

decisions which would permit the quality of product and the pricing for Detroit to recapture its former dominance of the U.S. auto market.

New concentration on productivity at all levels including top management could again make U.S. products competitive with foreign imports — even in motorcycles and electronics. There must be a change in attitude on the part of management and labor, a working agreement as was achieved in both Germany and Japan after World War II. The alternative is further decline and dependence on foreign products with fewer American plants and fewer jobs for American workers.

But that isn't all. Carroll's article notes, "In spite of increased foreign demands and restrictions on U.S. corporations, the U.S. Congress has demonstrated a willingness to pass legislation that ultimately restricts the ability of U.S. firms to compete in markets abroad and that could create boomerang effects in the U.S. economy. Areas where existing legislation impedes the international performance of U.S. firms include the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act, anti-boycott laws and regulations, export controls, U.S. anti-trust laws, and legislation governing the tax environment of U.S. business abroad."

Carroll sounds this discouraging but well known truth: "The industrial nations are entering a new era with respect not only to the developing world but also to relations among themselves. The U.S. economy is still the largest on earth, but it has declined and it may well continue to decline relative to the economies of its major competitors. The decline is observable in ways other than relative gross national product (GNP) growth rates.

"The United States is no longer the industrial nation with the highest per capita income; wages and living standards in other industrial countries reached parity with the United States in the 1970's. Other symptoms of this comparative economic decline are the relatively low level of U.S. investment and increasingly smaller percentages of GNP being allocated for research and development in the United States."

It is shocking to have to admit that the U.S. auto industry has lost 25 percent of the American market to foreign car manufacturers. Unemployed auto workers in Detroit are not going to spend as much to put prime beef, pork, chicken and other farm products on the family table. The same can be said for unemployed steel workers, tire plant workers, workers in electronics plants who have lost their jobs to workers in plants in Japan and Taiwan, former employees in textile mills and shoe makers in countries which import U.S. hides, process them and send back the finished products at a profit. Industrialists say that U.S. steel plants are old and cannot compete with the new plants in Japan and Western Europe, and that our tax laws no longer permit the necessary accumulation of capital to install new equipment — and more modern technology. U.S. industry and labor right now are capable of making the innovative Foreign exports of agricultural products are highly important to the health of the U.S. farm and ranch economy but even more so is the economic good health and competitiveness of U.S. industry with full employment in Detroit, Akron and Toledo, as well as Lincoln, Omaha, Columbus, Kearney, etc. in Nebraska.

Offered at State Fair Oral Cancer Checkup

Persons attending the Nebraska State Fair, Aug. 29 through Sept. 7, can get a free oral cancer checkup at the Bob Devaney Sports Complex.

"Within minutes you can receive a thorough examination of your mouth and throat and walk away with peace of mind," says Donna Hansen, local American Cancer Society President.

A cooperative project of the American Cancer Society and the University of Nebraska Dental College, this screening is offered from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. on the Labor Day weekend and from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on other days.

"Though the beginning stages of oral cancer are usually painless, they are highly visible," said Mrs. Hansen. "You will receive a complete checkup of teeth, gums, tongue and floor of the mouth. Examiners will be looking for a change in color, irritated areas and persistent sores."

The presence of any of these signs does not necessarily mean you have cancer, but it does mean you should consult your dentist or physician immediately, added Mrs. Hansen.

Congress is currently considering a plan that may save you money.

Randy's Recap

According to Randy Hascel

ONE LOOK AT the sports section in this paper and anyone can tell that the break between summer and fall sports must be here. I like to refer to this time as "the calm before the storm".

Regular readers of this section will have to find something else to read for the next two weeks as the action isn't going to pick up much until football, volleyball and cross country seasons open. A few stories on hunting conditions and recreation should help satisfy the appetites of local hunters.

HALF OF WAYNE'S sports personalities will be leaving town shortly. Harvey Watson, the colorful sports director of KTCH radio, has accepted a job as sports director at KOTH radio in Dubuque, Ia., a community with a population of about 65,000.

In chatting with Harvey, I feel that his new job will be a big step in his career. He worked at KTCH for over two years and before that worked in many other communities across the state.

"It has been a great opportunity to work with so many cooperative people. It's really been fun," Harvey told me.

In Dubuque, Watson will cover three city high schools and two colleges (the University of Dubuque and Lorain University). Between two of the three area high schools, he will follow defending state champions in football and basketball. Dubuque University also finished its last season of football undefeated.

At a surprise Chamber coffee Friday morning, Harvey was presented with two awards at the Wayne city ball park. He was given a plaque in his honor from the Chamber and was awarded a Second Guessers' jacket from Wayne's athletic booster club. He was also given a lifetime membership in the Second Guessers Club.

We wish him and his family best of luck in the future.

WATSON WON'T be a complete stranger in Dubuque. Blaine Gorney, who was released as Wayne State College wrestling coach this past year, will take over the position as head wrestling coach and assistant football coach at the University of Dubuque.

And Wayne State graduate Roger Bentley is football coach at one of the area high schools in Dubuque. I guess it really is a small world.

NO MORE TIES in high school football folks. The Nebraska School Activities Association has adopted a nationally recommended overtime procedure for breaking the ties.

A tie-breaker has been employed during football playoffs over the past five years but will be in effect for the first time during the regular season. Here's the procedure:

A coin toss will be staged and the visitor will have the privilege of calling the coin. The winner of the toss has two choices: 1. go on offense or defense or 2. designate the end of the field where the ball will be put in play. The first team on offense shall have a four-down series from the 10-yard line. The idea is to score, either by touchdown or a field goal. If a touchdown is scored, the team can attempt the extra point(s).

Next, the team on defense gets the ball at the same 10-yard line for its own four-down series. The team ahead after both teams have an opportunity from the 10 will be declared a winner. If the teams are still tied, the procedure will be repeated until a team outscored the other.

Turkey Permits Still Left

There are approximately 1,448 permits remaining for the 1980 fall turkey shotgun hunting season, according to Dorothy Keys, head of the Game and Parks Commission's Permit Section.

Remaining are 325 permits for the Niobrara Unit; 1,011 remaining in the Round Top Unit; and 112 remaining in the Verdigre Unit.

Applications will be accepted Sept. 1 through Sept. 15 for units in which permits remain from residents who were ineligible to apply during the initial application periods, or were excluded from the first drawing.

Drawing for permits in over-subscribed units will be Sept. 19. If permits remain following the Sept. 19 drawing they will be issued to both residents and nonresidents on a first-come, first-served basis beginning Sept. 21.

Only persons 14 years of age and older are eligible to apply for a permit. Persons under 14 years may apply provided they reach age 14 by the date the season opens. Persons under 16 years of age, when hunting turkey, must be accompanied by a person 21 years of age or older.

Resident turkey hunting permits are $15, nonresident permits are $35. A $7.50 Habitat Stamp is required for all resident turkey hunters 16 years of age and older, and for all nonresident turkey hunters regardless of age.

Catches Cat on Fly

THE ONE that didn't get away, Damon Cox of Mississippi and cousin Don Larsen (left) of Wayne show off the fish they pulled in at Ike's Lake last week. Cox, who was visiting Larsen at the time, said he caught the 6 1/2 pound catfish on a trout fly at about noon at the lake.

Wayne State Names SID Hunting Season Here

Wayne State College has announced the appointment of Diana L. Daniels as sports information director (SID). Ms. Daniels, a native of Oil City, Pa., earned her bachelor's degree from Slippery Rock State College, Pa. She majored in health, physical education and recreation.

Presently Ms. Daniels is completing requirements for her master's degree in athletic administration from Western Illinois University. In the 1978-79 season, Ms. Daniels coached a high school combined boys and girls swimming and diving team, sending two swimmers on to state competition. While at Western Illinois University, she assisted head coach David Miller in women's track and field competitions. This past season, the "Westerwinds" emerged as the top team in the state, sending four athletes to national competition in Eugene, Ore.

An avid sports enthusiast, Ms. Daniels has been a moto cross competitor, roadrunner and cross country skier. Says Ms. Daniels, "I am looking forward to area road races and winter meets."

Adrie Nab, WSC director of college relations said he is very happy to have Ms. Daniels on the news staff. "I am convinced Diana will be able to continue the excellent sports reporting that was done by Kevin Weiberg last season," he said.

The long awaited hunting season is here again and Game and Parks Commission wildlife biologists say the 1980 season should be a good one for most species.

Commission Upland Game Specialist Jim Mitchell said on a statewide basis the hunting for most upland species should be at least as good as last year, and in many cases even somewhat better.

DOVE Mitchell says the state's Mourning Dove population is "very good" and that nationwide the number of breeding pairs is up as is the numbers of birds reproduced. "If the temperature stays up in the 50's or higher, the hunting should be very good. But, if we get three or four nights when the temperature dips into the low 40's, I'd have to migrate south to warmer areas."

PHEASANT One of the question marks in this year's forecast is the population of the Ringneck Pheasant. Mitchell says he has gotten conflicting information about numbers of birds being seen. "The dry weather in July depressed the observability of the pheasant, and that information is what our surveys rely on. How many are seen by people like rural mail carriers - and that number is down from last year. But, our personnel people working around the lakes report that populations are up." Mitchell said. "It could be that the extremely hot, dry summer has kept the birds closer to the lakes and ponds than out near the roads, where mail carriers could see them."

At any rate, if the population is down, it isn't down a great deal and at worst would be similar or slightly lower than last year. Mitchell says pheasants should be easier to find this year due to a decrease in ground cover, but the hunter who takes a good dog afield will still have the edge.

QUAIL Bobwhite Quail hunting this year should be better than last and approximately as good as it was in 1978, and 1978 was an excellent year for the quail and the quail hunter. "1978 was the best quail season we'd had in years," Mitchell said. "And then hunter success was down last year, but this year the harvest should approximate that of 1978." Mitchell says a dog will be a tremendous advantage to the hunter, both in locating coveys and downed birds.

SQUIRREL Mitchell says the Fox Squirrel population this year is "stable" and that hunters can expect at least as many bushytails this year as last. "Squirrels are one of the most under harvested species," he said. "People should utilize our excellent populations across the state."

RABBIT The Cottontail Rabbit population is up slightly over last year and Mitchell says hunters should enjoy bagging bunnies again this year. "I think hunters will find excellent populations and great rabbit hunting this year," he said.

GROUSE Grouse season may be as good as last years, or slightly depressed, Mitchell said. "We went into the breeding season with good numbers of breeders, but the drought took its toll of the brood coveys."

"We didn't realize the full potential of the breeders this year because of the drought. I'd say we can expect our season to be about like the last couple of years, or maybe just slightly depressed. The full effects of the drought are still unknown."

GOOSE The goose hunter will fare a little better because the larger birds breed and nest in other areas of the north country, and conditions in those areas have been better. "Wyland says the populations will be about the same as last year, with a possibility of a slight increase in numbers."

Prediction Fall Will Be Cooler, Wet

Nebraska's weather was dryer than he expected it would be this summer, but Art Douglas, University of Nebraska-Lincoln assistant professor of geography, said that the long-range weather prediction he made last spring should hold up for the rest of the summer.

That is, it will likely be cooler and wetter than normal in Nebraska as late summer turns into early fall, Douglas said.

Douglas, who bases his forecasts on water temperatures in the Pacific Ocean, said he "underestimated the impact of the continent itself" in prolonging a dry spell which he expected to dissipate in the early part of the summer.

"Now," he said, "we can go back to my original forecast and expect increased precipitation with cooler than normal or near normal temperatures throughout the fall and going into early winter."

Douglas said it is "too early to tell" what winter will be like in Nebraska this year, but early indications are that the weather will be "variable, with lots of storms coming through but without persistent cold spells or prolonged warm spells."

For the United States in general this fall, Douglas said that it will be cooler than normal in the Great Lakes area but warmer than normal in the western and southern United States. Because of the contrast between the cold and warm areas, "we can expect a lot of thunderstorms," Douglas said.

Precipitation will, in fact, be heavy throughout the northern and central plains and into the Great Lakes area, according to Douglas.

As the fall season progresses, Douglas said that cool weather will intensify toward the South eastern United States, but it will be warmer than normal in the western U.S. in the November through January period.

"Nebraska is in an intermediate area," Douglas said, "and that's why Nebraskans can expect near normal or slightly below normal temperatures, as far as can be determined at this time."

The Thrill of Victory... The Agony of Defeat

IT WAS A DAY OF TOUGH COMPETITION last Saturday at the Dixon County Fairgrounds in Concord as nearly 20 area youngsters attempted to prove their peddling skills during the Kiddie Tractor Pull. The faces of the youngsters were unable to hide their hopes and frustrations as evidenced in the photos above. LeAnn Stewart, at left, appears to be saying "I'm going all the way," as she looks down towards the finish line. Dustin Roberts, at right, obviously felt competition was keener than he had expected. First, second and third place winners were as follows. Three Year Olds — Eric Abts, Dustin Ankeny, Mandy Hartung. Four Year Olds — Angela Abts, Randy Quist, Jay Jackson. Five Year Olds — Kristin Krie, Billy Hirsch, Andy Smith. Six Year Olds — Scott Mattes, Bren Mattes, Michael Johnson. Seven Year Olds — Robert Nelson, Sid Kneiff, Ty Thomas. Eight Year Olds — John Schulte, David Klover, Mathew Thomas. Nine Year Olds — Greg Stapleton, Ryan Stone, Tyler Pearson. Ten Year Olds — Ronni Smith, Melissa Johnson.

Vet College Would Add To Incomes

"A veterinary college in Nebraska would add $15 million annually to personal incomes in Nebraska," according to William Krejci of Fairmont.

Krejci, chairman of the Nebraska Committee for a Regional Veterinary College, points out that "this is $12 million more per year than would be obtained if Nebraska's share of the operating funds was spent for other purposes each year."

"In addition, there would be a one-time construction impact of $23 million on Nebraska's economy. This is $5 million more than that realized by Internal Investment of Nebraska's share of the building costs for other purposes.

"Instead of sending more than a million dollars out of the State each year to provide veterinary education for Nebraska students, we would retain those dollars and receive additional dollars for training students from other states," he explains.

Krejci says "our present method of purchasing veterinary education outside the State buys education only, while the same investment in our state would provide much more in the form of research and direct services to our citizens, spinoff to others areas of NU, both in Lincoln and at the Medical Center in Omaha, and industry.

"At the present time, many of our pre-vet students go elsewhere to begin their studies and often become residents of other states. Therefore, we lose some of our top students from the State each year," he states.

In addition, your money's interest is compounded daily to yield 5.39% in one short year. (Now that's earning a living.)

So why not put your money to work. . . in a State National day-in to day-out Passbook Account.

After all, isn't it about time your money made something of itself?
