Progress Corrections
In last Monday's Wayne Herald special Progress Edition, three ads contained some inaccurate information. The first two paragraphs of the M & S Oil Co. ad should have read as follows: M & S Oil had its beginning on Jan. 1, 1959, when Mern Mordhorst and Don Sheerbach bought out Langemeier's and Mordhorst's interests and incorporated as M & S Oil Company at 614 Main St. The Skelly station there is managed by Don Sheerbach, co-owner. M & S Radiator and Repair, 419 Main St., is managed by Mern Mordhorst, co-owner. M & S Oil and M & S Radiator and Repair continue to serve patrons through rural farm service, fire service, general automotive repair and by selling tractor, truck and car tires. The T & C Electronics ad contained a misspelled brand name. T & C sells Toshiba, Magnavox, Pioneer, Sharp, Sony, Sanyo and Quasar brands. The headline on the Peoples Natural Gas ad should have read that Peoples Natural Gas has served the Wayne Community for the past 50 years instead of 30 years. 1977 - Bartholomew Clampa, Wayne, Chev.

Who We Are And What We Stand For in U.S.

Richard L. Leher, President
Chamber of Commerce of the United States

A few weeks ago, I was invited, along with Treasury Secretary G. William Miller, to appear on the Friday edition of ABC's "Good Morning America" television program.

The purpose was to discuss the long-awaited tax proposals the Administration had just presented. Naturally, I accepted this invitation. You can imagine my surprise then, when I was contacted by ABC shortly before its broadcast and informed, with regret, that I had been disinvented. Miller, it seems, had made it known that he did not want to be interviewed with me.

Quite frankly, I consider his attitude disturbing. Manipulating the media and depriving the people of their rights of free speech are alien to America's oldest democratic traditions. What's more, the Administration really had no cause to complain, for it had already monopolized most media coverage the preceding day when it unveiled its tax plan. So by what standard of fairness did it have a right to return and demand exclusivity the following morning? And if its tax policy was truly as good as the President had claimed, why was Miller so unwilling to defend it before the American public?

As I pondered these questions, I turned on my television to watch the Treasury Secretary Lo and behold, there was the same person who had refused to appear with me, now attacking me by name, and claiming my recent criticisms had been politically motivated rather than based upon sound economics. Then, Miller went even further. Indulging in a quick rewrite of history, he told the ABC viewing audience that Mr. Carter came into office in January, 1977, in the midst of "the deepest recession since the Great Depression." Let the record show that the last recession bottomed out in early 1975, two years before President Carter took over.

Miller also erred in stating that my criticisms of Administration policies were politically motivated. The fact is, as President of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, I do not speak for myself, but for an organization that comprises more than 100,000 large and small businesses, state and local chambers and trade and professional associations. Without intending to cover ourselves with bouquets, I might note that "Time" magazine has referred to the U.S. Chamber as "the most broadly respected business lobby" in Washington. We achieved that recognition by carefully preserving the integrity of our policy-making process, which is one of the strictest of any organization in America today.

Chamber policy is made by our governing body — a 65-member board of directors comprising a cross section of business leaders from small and large companies. Even this body cannot make decisions itself until it has received recommendations from 28 policy committees, subcommittees and panels composed of more than 1,000 men and women representing the broadest possible business viewpoint.

So for me to change, or worse, simply disregard the Chamber policies resulting from this process, would be to betray our entire membership. That is why I could not, as the Administration requested, put my signature on a document supporting the Panama Canal Treaties. And that is why I have strongly opposed: The so-called Consumer Protection Agency and Labor Law Reform bills; the many energy initiatives based on punitive taxation rather than incentives to stimulate production; the Council on Wage and Price Stability; which is a toothless substitute for the tough program needed to control spending and monetary growth; and, finally, the Administration's persistent refusal to support regulatory reform and genuine tax rate reductions for all Americans.

I wish the Administration would understand that my criticisms stem from convictions that I would defend just as vigorously during a Republican Administration as a Democratic one. If I didn't, I wouldn't be doing my job. Finally, let's never forget that controversy itself is vital to the well-being of America.

The essayist E.B. White once called ours "a country that was born of controversy — a country that wrote controversy into its Constitution, and set up its legislative bodies on the theory of controversy, that established its free press in the belief that controversy is vital to information, and that created a system of justice of which controversy is the heart and soul."

Let's play City Council member. You, along with seven others, are responsible for planning and developing the future of Wayne. You must do so even though your income is not keeping up with inflation.

The community is on the grow, physically. New housing developments are springing up, realtors are asking to subdivide existing lots and the Industrial area east of town continues to expand.

There is ever increasing demand on the city's electric system, its water system, its garbage system and its sewage system because the number of housing units is increasing at a steady rate.

However, according to Census Bureau projections, your city has lost more than 200 people in the last 10 years. That creates somewhat of a dilemma since many taxpayers and voters find it difficult to justify continued expansion of the city's services when the population is declining.

The city's services are growing old while the rest of the city grows newer and newer. Westwood Addition is nearly full, now, Marywood Subdivision is just starting to fill and Sunnyview Subdivision should be ready for new homes next spring.

Realtors are looking at older areas of town for potential redevelopment because the economics of building elsewhere are not too promising.

"BUT FENIMORE, AT OUR EARNING LEVEL, WE CAN UNDERSTATE OUR INCOME BY $9,217 AND NOT RISK GOING TO JAIL!"

Modern Farm Practices Come Under Scrutiny

NEBRASKA FARM BUREAU FEDERATION
By M.M. Van Kirk,
Director of Information
The volume of reports concerning crop damage from such pests as chinch bugs and corn rootworm in Nebraska this year and in recent years, plus evidence of increased difficulty in maintaining good weed control, raises questions about whether some modern farming practices require some adjustments.

Hot dry weather such as prevailed during the past summer placed great stress on all crops and rangeland and accentuated pest problems. Grasshopper and chinch bug cycles seem to coincide with dry periods and the insects move into the green crops from stubbles, dry pastures and roadsides to satisfy their appetites. Several veteran Nebraska entomologists have said they think the current grasshopper cycle has passed its peak and may be on the downside for a few years.

But reports of chinch bug infestations in Southeast Nebraska last year and particularly this year indicate that the chinch bug is defying chemical control measures and becoming an increasing threat to the well-being of wheat and milo growers.
Robert Roselle, University of Nebraska Extension entomologist, recently said that farmers should decide early what to plant and where in order to minimize insect problems in 1981. For example, he advised corn growers who found evidence of excessive rootworm infestation in August to consider those fields for rotation, cultivation applications of granules in late May or early June, or late planting if that is the only time rootworm insecticides can be used.

He said the only reliable method to prevent chinch bugs is to avoid planting corn or sorghum adjacent to wheat or in wheat stubble next spring, so deciding where to plant what this fall and grain crops next spring should be done now. If possible, he said, use a legume crop next to wheat or following wheat stubble. Soybeans are the choice for Southeast Nebraska since chinch bugs will not feed on them.
Roselle said that as for European corn borers, there is no reliable guide for next season, since weather is the main factor in determining if there will be a problem next year.

The trend to minimum tillage or no tillage continues and has proved a valuable soil moisture and energy conservation farming practice. However, as time goes on, it becomes evident that there can be some unexpected side effects, and good management becomes vital to cope with weed and fertilizer problems.
Dr. James Parochetti, a USDA pesticide specialist, recently advised farmers growing corn under no tillage or reduced tillage practices, that they should moldboard plow those fields every three to five years for better weed control. He said such periodic plowing will help keep perennial weeds in check, reduce weed seed populations on the soil surface, and get better performance from the wider variety of pre-plant and pre-emergence herbicides available for conventionally tilled corn.
Dr. Parochetti said that chisel plows and heavy discs will also bury weed seeds, but usually not deep enough to stifle germination or assist herbicide performance. He added that periodic plowing helps mix the soil and the organic matter that accumulates on the soil surface after several years of reduced tillage.
These kinds of specialists are not telling farmers to abandon the demonstrated advantages of reduced tillage practices or the use of control chemicals. They are saying that there is still a place for judicious use of crop rotation and cultivation practices. Many good farmers have already recognized these factors and have made adjustments accordingly.

Issue 1: Court Districts

(Editor's Note: Nebraskans will vote on four issues when they go to the general election polls on Nov. 4. So voters can better understand these important issues that would change the state's constitution, the Nebraska Press Association, in cooperation with The Wayne Herald, has prepared a series of news reports on each of the four proposed issues. Each story in the series concentrates on the single issue, briefly defining the issue, explaining its purpose and finally stating the arguments both for and against the issue. The following is the first in the special public service series.

districts with three, with two judges nominated and appointed from each. The three new districts would follow the same lines as Nebraska's congressional districts.

SUPPORT: Principle supporters are the Nebraska Bar Association and attorneys from Omaha and Lincoln, who contend the amendment would make a fairer system.
Currently, one of the six districts lies totally within Omaha, and parts of the metropolitan area are in three other districts. That area, with a third of the state's population and a big share of its legal activity, has only one judge on the Supreme Court.

OPPOSITION: Senators who opposed the amendment in the Legislature said it would weaken rural representation on the court. They gave this comparison: currently, the court has one Omaha judge, two Lincoln Judges (one of whom is Chief Justice Norman Krivosha) and four judges from other communities. Considering the fact that the Chief Justice is from the state at large, the amendment could permit up to a total of five judges from Omaha or Lincoln, with only two from other parts of the state, opponents argued. (Current judges would not be affected by the amendment.)

I. Supreme Court
District Amendment
"Constitutional amendment to change the number and formation of Supreme Court districts."
PURPOSE: Currently, Nebraska has six Supreme Court districts. One judge is nominated and appointed from each district; with the court's seventh member, the Chief Justice, nominated and appointed from the state at large.
The amendment would replace the six

Sept. 30, 1980

To The Editor:
Every Sunday morning across our land finds Christians seeking fellowship and worship in the church of their denomination. The Bible tells us that this is as it should be, but the Bible seems to be taking a back seat in many of our church services today throughout our country.

The Bible, which Christians believe to be the inspired word of God and which we use to guide our lives when we become God's people, is doing little more than gathering dust in many of our churches across our nation. The only part the Bible plays in many church services is to supply a short scripture verse for the pastor to kick-off his sermon with. After this kick-off verse, you will likely hear some personal experiences and some notable quotes of notable writers of our day and other contemporary happenings which people can relate to easily and after singing a few hymns, a smile and a handshake, we are sent back to the world.

Another place where the Bible seems to be noticeably absent is in the hands of Christians on their way to church. If we are going swimming or bowling, we arrive equipped to be a part of that endeavor. As one voice speaking out, I would like to see every Christian interested in putting the Bible back in our church services arrive at church with their Bibles in their hands and maybe it will become a part of the service and it will be referred to during the service and used for more than just a by line to kick-off the sermon and possibly become the sermon.

NE Republican Women Hosting State Meeting

Northeast Nebraska Republican Women will be hosts to the State Republican Women's Convention on Nov. 14 and 15.

Republican women from northeast Nebraska met recently with Webb McNally, Madison County Republican chairman, as guest speaker.

McNally spoke about the national campaign, the plans of the Nebraska Republican Party, and about the local Republican party.

He stressed that women in politics are a vital working force. "Women control the purse strings and are concerned about moral values," he said.

Webb also stated that the issue is freedom — "how much we have and how much our children are going to have."

Mrs. Marvin Adams conducted the business meeting and the evening concluded with a plant exchange.

The sparrow has 14 vertebrae in its neck; the giraffe only seven.

Twenty seven members of Grace Lutheran Duo Club and the Rev. and Mrs. Mendenhall took part in a progressive supper last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mann served hors d'oeuvres, followed with salads in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hilbert Johs. From there the group traveled to the church social rooms for the main course and dessert.

During the business meeting, members made plans to co-host a dinner for the church's golden age members on Oct. 19.

Preparations were finalized for the Fall LLL Zone 3 Rally, which hasn't been held in Wayne since 1971.

Good News Clubs are weekly Bible classes for neighborhood children sponsored by the Child Evangelism Fellowship. They are independent of any church affiliation or support.

A special invitation is extended to all Wayne youngsters. There will be singing, Bible stories, games, lots of fun, and a chance to meet many new friends.

Youngsters attending are encouraged to bring a friend.

Historical Society Plans 'Fashions'

Several clubs and organizations in Wayne County, as well as several individuals, are planning interesting and unique table displays to help raise money for the Wayne County Historical Society.

Their table creations can be seen during a "Table Fashions on Parade" show at the Wayne city auditorium Thursday, Oct. 16, from 2 to 9 p.m.

Admission to the show is $1 and all proceeds are earmarked for the Historical Society. Mrs. Cliff ford Johnson, museum curator, said the Historical Society is working to raise money for a new roof at the museum.

The table fashions show is the society's only money making project and has been held for the past three years.

Special dishes, silverware, glassware, candles and floral arrangements will be used to create a variety of interesting table settings for almost any occasion, including formal and informal luncheons, breakfasts and dinners, holiday and seasonal themes, a children's tea party and an Oriental setting.

Eleanor Edwards of Wayne is planning a breakfast table display using Stonecrest china in a handpainted autumn glory pattern, accompanied by plain silver flatware, and arranged on an Artek painted gold fringed cloth.

A display sponsored by the Sunshine Home Extension Club and arranged by Edna Tietgen and Doris Luft of Wayne is entitled "The Art of China Painting," using a fine art handpainted china service.

Another display, planned by the Wayne Area Retired Teachers Association, will feature a children's tea party and will be arranged by Beulah Atkins and Flora Bergt. Included in the setting will be a German tea set which was a gift to Beulah Atkins from her maternal grandmother. A vase and the children's furniture were presented to Clara and Flora Bergt from their father and now belongs to Barbara Daniels. The entire display is 70 years old.

An Eastern luncheon, arranged by Ruth Ebmeier of Laurel, will use a luncheon china service from Japan and flatware from Thailand. The luncheon cloth comes from the Philippines.

Caludon china will be used in a Scottish tea setting arranged by Leila Maynard of Wayne. The candlesticks in Mrs. Maynard's display come from St. Andrews, Scotland.

"Waiting for the Carolers," a display arranged by Florence Wilthe, is a formal Christmas dinner setting featuring milk glass on red velvet.

Marge Armstrong of Wayne chose "Hospitality Table" for the theme of her setting, which uses silver service and appointments on a white cloth.

A noonday luncheon in India will be depicted in a unique table setting by Mrs. J. S. Johar. The stainless steel tableware and flatware are arranged on a blue cloth.

A Thanksgiving dinner and Christmas dinner will be arranged by The Cupboard, a Wayne business.

Other clubs and individuals who would like to take part in the show are asked to contact Mrs. Clifford Johnson or Lucille Larson by Thursday, Oct. 9.

Tables may be set up in the auditorium the morning of the show, beginning at 10 a.m.

Comment Sought on Soybean Feed Grain Programs

Deputy Secretary of Agriculture Jim Williams asked the public to comment by Oct. 27 on proposals for the 1981 feed grain and soybean programs.

By Nov. 15, a decision must be made on whether to offer a set-aside program or to permit farmers to be eligible for program benefits — including the reserve program — without setting aside acreage, Williams said.

In particular, Williams said, USDA is seeking comments on reserve release and call prices which are based on production costs and adjusted either by increasing the national average loan price or increasing the gap between loan and reserve prices.

Under new authorities granted under the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1980, the current cost of production estimates may be considered in determining 1981 target prices.

In the past, changes in target prices were based upon a formula considering only prior year's costs, Williams said.

Whether producers should be required to comply with established farm normal crop acreages to be eligible for full program benefits. Williams said USDA also is asking whether barley and oats should be included in the 1981 feed grain program, and appropriate loan and purchase prices for corn, sorghum, barley, oats and rye.

In addition, public comment is requested on whether there should be a land diversion program, and if so, the size of the diversion and level of payment. Comments are also requested on limitations on planted acreage, Williams said.

If a set-aside program is implemented, USDA has discretionary authority to adjust the target price to compensate producers for participating in such a program, Williams said. Comments are requested on whether this authority should be used and the magnitude on any adjustment.

Because of the relationship between soybeans and feed grains, we are also seeking public comments on appropriate loan price and purchase price levels for 1981 crop soybeans. Other determinations affecting soybeans include commodity eligibility, storage requirements and premiums and discounts," Williams said.

Related to these program decisions are determinations on the amount of the national program acreage and recommended reductions from 1980 harvested acreage for full target price protection.

Williams said while USDA is required by law to announce set-aside, national program acreage and recommended reductions in plantings decisions by Nov. 15, the department may announce program decisions before that time.

Before reaching any decisions, all recommendations and views will be considered along with the best data available on world and U.S. crop conditions, production and consumption prospects, he said.

Written comments will be received until Oct. 27 by the Director, Production Adjustment Division, ASCS, USDA, Room 3630-S, Box 2415, Washington, D.C., 20013. All comments will be available for public inspection during regular business hours in the director's office.

The notice of the Oct. 27 comment period will appear in next week's Federal Register. The original notice calling for comments on the program was published in the Sept. 9 Federal Register.

Job Figures Decline At Area Job Offices

At the end of September there were 897 persons registered for employment with the Norfolk Job Service office, and 182 with the O'Neill office for a total of 1,079 registered applicants. This compares with 1,217 last month and 415 at the close of September, 1979.

observed the week of Oct. 5 thru the 11. Unfortunately, there are four myths about hiring handicapped workers we frequently hear, says Ken Boyer, Norfolk Job Service manager.

The 1,079 total includes 578 females and 350 Veterans but does not include 158 individuals seeking only part time work.

Insurance rates will go up; safety records will suffer; special privileges will have to be granted; workmans compensation rates will rise.

New applications filed during September totaled 302 compared with 392 last month and 280 for September of last year.

The truth is, Boyer said, insurance rates are based on previous experience within an industry and no one asks whether or not workers are handicapped. Workers with disabilities tend to be more safety conscious than average workers. Handicapped workers don't want privileges, just an equal chance for employment. Companies usually experience no increase on compensation costs when hiring workers with disabilities.

Nonagricultural job openings received from employers numbered 265 compared with 334 in August and 487 for September, 1979. Nonagricultural placements made by our office during September totaled 251. This compares with 238 last month and 281 during September of last year.

"Let's make this week the time to start considering and hiring handicapped workers," he said.

County Farm Update

Low yield disaster payments
So far, 250 applications for disaster credit have been filed. If you have certified your acreages you could be eligible for disaster payments, deficiency payments and price support grain loans. You do have to sign a request for disaster credit to be eligible. This request was probably not signed when you certified your acreages.

Appraisals
An appraisal would have to be made if you are not harvesting as grain or if it is going into high moisture storage. Also if the grain is not going to be accumulated where it can be measured it should be appraised. Contact the ASCS office for details.

We do have three appraisers working now, they are Elvis Olson, Wakefield; Doug Jenkins, Carroll; and Bev Dangberg, Winslow.

Landlords share of production cannot be used to determine a farms production for disaster purposes.

Any corn harvested as green chop or silage requires an appraisal. Some producers were informed we could use landlords share for this and we have found that we cannot. It does have to be appraised for low yield disaster purposes. We can use landlords share for proven yield purposes only.

Commingling
If grain is going to be commingled with old grain or grain from another farm, be sure to contact the ASCS office before harvest. We will need to determine when and what will have to be measured. We can measure the old grain or grain from other farms separately at producers expense.

A disaster area declaration is not needed to use the low yield disaster program.

Grain sold or stored
We must have good sound production evidence for grain sold or stored in warehouses. Evidence that is acceptable includes: warehouse receipts, commercial sales receipts, CCC loans, and settlement sheets. Scale tickets are not enough, we also need sales receipts.

Reserve I (I or II)
Those who converted their agreements to a new reserve since Aug. 25 are in Reserve III. These agreements earned storage through Sept. 30. Those in Reserve I and II had their storage stop Aug. 31.

There was a waiver of the first year's interest on agreements in Reserve II. If they converted to Reserve III their interest waiver stopped and interest started accruing when they went into Reserve III. This interest will accrue until the first anniversary of the original reserve agreement.

If the national average market price remains above $2.31 the release will continue. If this happens storage would have stopped Sept. 30 on Reserve III. The national average market price dropped to around $2.28 on Sept. 18. The call level for Reserve I is $2.15 and $2.26 for Reserves I and II.

1980 crops will be eligible for immediate entry into the reserve if it is not in the call level. Oats is in the call level.

Proven Yield
Producers are reminded if they do not submit 1980 production evidence and file a proven yield appeal, their 1981 yield will be their 1981 ASCS established yield. Producers are not allowed to skip a year and still prove their yield. Disaster year or not, evidence should be submitted.

Three Wayne-Carroll teachers — Gertrude Vahkamp, Mary Lou George and Faunell Bennett — attended a workshop Sept. 26 at Wayne State College.

The workshop, sponsored by Educational Service Unit No. 1, was conducted by Tony DiPaloi from the Good Apple Workshop. He is an elementary and TMR (trainable mentally retarded) teacher and has conducted workshops for more than 20,000 teachers in North America and Europe.

Theme of the workshop was "Developing the Total Child Through Language Arts." The three local teachers will share the ideas from the meeting with other teachers in the school system.

ESU No. 1 will sponsor other workshops which will be attended by Wayne-Carroll staff.
