ONE-HUNDRED FIFTH YEAR NUMBER TWENTY-THREE

Local Christmas Kickoff Announced

Once again, with Christmas Day just a month away, it's time to put finishing touches on this year's gift lists and check out specials at participating Wayne Chamber of Commerce stores.

THE OFFICIAL kickoff will begin Friday as Chamber businesses will be open until 9 p.m. Also Friday night, The Wayne Herald Grand Give-A-Way of $1,000 in bonus bucks will be held at 8 p.m. Instead of Thursday night due to Thanksgiving. See story elsewhere on this page.

This year's theme will be "Remember, There Is a Winter Wonderland of Christmas Shopping Values in Wayne."

According to the Chamber, area merchants will be making special efforts to provide quality merchandise at competitive prices. "Why shop out of town when there are great shopping values to be had right here in Wayne," a Chamber spokesman said.

PARTICIPATING merchants will offer free registration for gift give aways totaling $7,200 to date. At present, there are 48 stores involved with more than 100 different prizes. It should be noted, however, that only one member per family will be permitted to win. This will be done in order to spread the benefits and goodwill that the giveaways provide to as many different families as possible.

Merchants also will be offering a Christmas stocking filled with toys and candy for the youngsters. Look for the four-foot tall stockings and the prizes on display in the participating stores. These stockings also can be won by registering. Each store will have a drawing Sunday, Dec. 23, for the merchandise.

PARTICIPATING stores will be identified by window posters proclaiming the "Christmas: Shop Wayne" theme. Employees also will sport ribbons wishing Wayne shoppers a Merry Christmas and a "thank you" for shopping in Wayne.

Ads appearing in next week's Wayne Herald will publish the total number and names of the participating stores and offices. In addition, businesses will be advertising their Christmas values beginning next week.

In observance of the holiday season, participating Chamber merchants will be observing special business hours. These are as follows:

Friday, Nov. 29 — open until 9 p.m.
Sundays, Dec. 7, 14 and 21, open from 1 to 5 p.m.
All week nights from Dec. 8 through Dec. 23 — open until 9 p.m.

FEATURED AGAIN this year will be the kiddie matinees on Saturdays beginning at 2 p.m. at The Gay Theatre. These are as follows:

Saturday, Nov. 29 — "Angel in My Pocket" featuring Andy Griffith.

Saturday, Dec. 6 — "Forever Young, Forever Free" starring Karen Valentine and Jose Ferrer.

Saturday, Dec. 13 — "The Brass Bottle" featuring Tony Randall, Burl Ives and Barbara Eden.

Saturday, Dec. 20 — "Tammy and the Millionaire."

For a convenient clip-and-save, a Christmas calendar is located elsewhere on this page. The calendar has the store hours for the participating Chamber merchants during the Christmas season.

THERE ARE several other Christmas-related activities planned in the area. These include the following:

The Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity and the Kappa Delta Gamma sorority and TKE's auxiliary, Order of Diana, are planning their annual Children's Christmas Party from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 6, at the City Auditorium.

Youngsters in grades K-4 are invited to attend. Cartoons will be shown, games will be played, a lunch will be served and a special visit by Santa Claus is planned. Admission is 50 cents per youngster.

ANOTHER CHRISTMAS event planned is showing of the traditional "Star of Christmas" planetarium show beginning Wednesday, Dec. 3. All presentations are scheduled for Wednesdays at 7:30 p.m. as well as Sundays at 3:30 p.m.

"Star of Christmas" retells the Biblical story of the first Christmas, showing the evidence the Bible presents to explain the special star of Christmas Eve.

The planetarium, with its dome-shaped screen, is the most dramatic of theaters. Its complex star projector, dozens of auxiliary and special effects projectors and unique sound system allow an exciting blend of art and science. Audiences are taken beyond the stars to experience the majestic beauty and unsolved mysteries of our vast universe.

THE PLANETARIUM is located on the first floor of the Carhart Science Center at WSC.

In addition to the regularly scheduled public shows, special programs concerning a particular subject may be arranged by school groups and organizations. The planetarium will accept reservations any time during the school year, September through May.

For reservations and program information, call 402-375-2200 or write Box 77, Wayne State College, Wayne, 68787.

October Weather Is Below, Above Normal

Temperatures for the Wayne-Wakefield area in October averaged about 2.5 degrees less than normal, according to information released by the UNL Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

IN WAKEFIELD, where official weather statistics are recorded, the average daily maximum for last month was 54.4 degrees, while the average daily minimum was 35.8. Average for the month was 50.2 degrees.

The highest temperature recorded last month was 89 on Oct. 7 and the lowest was 27 on Oct. 26.

Precipitation was slightly above normal for the month, according to state figures. Average rainfall in Wakefield for October is 1.63 inches and the area recorded 11 hundredths of an inch above normal.

ACROSS THE STATE, October temperatures averaged two to three degrees below normal, except in the Scottsbluff and Franklin areas where averages were one to three degrees above normal.

Extreme maximum temps were in the 80's and 90's, occurring during the first 10 days of the month. The highest temperature reported was 95 degrees on Oct. 7 at Greeley.

Extreme minimum temps ranged from a low of eight degrees on Oct. 24 at Agate to the low 20's. Harrisburg recorded nine degrees on Oct. 24. Nearly all minimums occurred during the last 10 days of the month.

Valentine received 67 percent of the possible amount of sunshine; Lincoln, 77 percent; Omaha, 80 percent; and North Platte, 78 percent.

OCTOBER precipitation was above normal in all divisions except the Panhandle, Southwest and South Central divisions where it was about 13 percent to 66 percent below normal.

Nearly all the precipitation fell during the last half of the month, some of it falling as snow. Since the snow fell on warm ground, most of it melted as it fell or soon thereafter.

Total amounts of snow generally were less than three inches in the western half of the state. In the eastern half, snowfall amounts were generally four to eight inches. In Southeast Nebraska, amounts were one to three inches.

THE CUMULATIVE precipitation for April through September was below normal in all divisions.

Bereuter Notes Reagan Attitude

President-elect Ronald Reagan has shown an early willingness to reach out to the legislative branch and to business and labor and consider a wide range of political viewpoints. Congressman Doug Bereuter said here Monday.

"I AM IMPRESSED by President-elect Reagan's willingness to reach out to a variety of groups, and his interest in developing a good working relationship with Congress," Bereuter told members of the Wayne Kiwanis Club.

"These qualities were clearly demonstrated during his trip to Washington last week, when I and other members of Congress had the opportunity to have lunch with him. The President-elect met with Congressional leaders from both sides of the aisle in an effort to establish a rapport from the start."

"As President, Governor Reagan wants to avoid the intense antagonism between the executive and legislative branches that needlessly hinders constructive policy making."

"HIS EFFORT to reach out carries over to the private sector as well. Governor Reagan has far exceeded in attracting unusually strong support and cooperation from both business and labor," an unprecedented accomplishment for a Republican President of the Fifth District

Representative said. "It is this kind of coalition of blue collar workers and labor and business leaders that is necessary to prepare and enact a responsible legislative program which can put America back on track."

"I am also encouraged that President-elect Reagan has indicated he will use Cabinet officers as important policy advisors, rather than strictly as administrators. In this way, he can try to avoid isolating himself with only a tight cadre or inner-circle of advisors," the Utica native said.

"THE COMPOSITION of Governor Reagan's transition team and his appointments so far indicate that we can expect an administration that will base its decisions on a broad base of interests and information."

"It also is interesting to note that the President-elect and his wife have expressed their interest in becoming true residents of the city of Washington and not just isolated occupants of the White House."

"They have met and entertained local community and business leaders, who say the Reagans appear to be unusually friendly and receptive to hearing their views. His first visit to the nation's capital as President-elect was, by every indication, a remarkably successful venture, which bodes well for his ability to govern this diverse and troubled nation," Bereuter, a graduate of the University of Nebraska at Lincoln, added.

BEREUTER SAID he, too, was surprised at the outcome of the General Election. He felt confident about Reagan being elected, but most surprising, he said, were the changes in makeup of the House and Senate.

The Senate is now controlled by Republicans, and the House is controlled by fewer Democrats, although still a majority. This will give President-elect Reagan "a working majority of fiscal conservatives."

The five days Reagan recently spent in Washington, D.C., "even to a neutral observer was a remarkable success," Bereuter said. The President-elect has an interesting, personal style and has been warmly received by a broad base of persons.

BECAUSE OF Reagan's ability to soothe political wounds, there are "positive indications that cooperation and the honeymoon (with Congress) will be quite lengthy," Bereuter predicted.

In response to a question on U.S. Sen. Edward Zorinsky's political future, Bereuter said that little of what Zorinsky does is surprising. However, he added that "I would welcome Zorinsky if he decided to switch parties again, but I don't think he will."

man named Block from Illinois will be named. He is the State Director of Agriculture there.

A Nebraskan, Clarence Yeather, has been named as a possible candidate, but Bereuter says strong opposition by Sen. Robert Dale of Kansas and many farm groups will prevent him from being named. Yeather is involved with the Chicago Mercantile Exchange and various other commodity outlets.

Siren Test Friday

The city of Wayne will conduct the monthly testing of Civil Defense sirens at 1 p.m. Friday. Sirens will be allowed to run only one minute with a three-minute pause between each siren test. Sirens will be tested in the following sequence:

- Alert — (used for tornado or other natural disaster warning), both high and low siren on for one minute.
- Pause — three minutes.
- Attack — both high and low on for 10 seconds, off for 10 seconds and continuing for one minute.
- Normal time sequence for each of the sirens would be a full three minutes. Since this is for testing purposes only, the sirens will be shut off after one minute each so the public can quickly determine the difference between test and an actual warning.
- If this were not a test, the public should immediately take shelter upon hearing either the alert or attack signals given.

Backstrom-Sellers United During Double Ring Ceremony in Wayne

Nancy Lee Backstrom and Bruce Lee Sellers, both of Fort Collins, Colo., exchanged marriage vows during double ring rites Nov. 15 at the Redeemer Lutheran Church in Wayne.

Miss Backstrom, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Backstrom of Wayne, was graduated from Wayne-Carroll High School in 1974 and attended Wayne State College and the University of Nebraska. She is employed at the Fort Collins National Bank.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Sellers of Maywood. A 1974 graduate of Maywood High School and a 1976 graduate of McCook Community College, he is employed by the City of Fort Collins.

Altar vases of wine and ivory pompoms and mums, a spiral candelabra with greenery and white pew candles with greenery and wine and ivory bows decorated the church for the 7 o'clock ceremony. The Rev. Daniel Monson of Wayne officiated.

Guests, registered by Terri Schroeder of Wakefield and Elizabeth Prather of Lincoln, were ushered into the church by Jeff Backstrom of Wayne, Lynn Sellers of Inman, Paul Sellers of McCook and Vaughn Nixon of Wakefield.

Music included "Wedding Song," "Charity," "Wedding Prayer" and "Wedding Benediction," sung by Mrs. Vona Sharer and accompanied by Mrs. Vera Hummel, both of Wayne.

The bride appeared at her father's side in an ivory floor length gown designed with a Quiana chiffon overlay and jewel neckline with a V-neck inset trimmed in ecru Cluny lace. The long, bishop sleeves ended in wide cuffs trimmed in matching Cluny lace. Re-embroidered lace motifs trimmed the empire waistline and skirt, which was edged in Cluny lace with an attached Cluny train.

Her Juliet headpiece with hand motifs held a tiered and scalloped veil with appliques, and she carried a cascade of wine lilies and ivory stephanotis with long streamers.

Maid of honor was Toni Thompson of Fort Collins, Colo., and bridesmaid was Lynn Backstrom of Littleton, Colo.

Their long, wine-colored dresses featured high necklines with lace insets and fluttery sleeves. The full skirts fell from blouson waistlines with tie belts. They carried crescent bouquets of wine lilies with ivory stephanotis and baby's breath.

Candles were lighted by Marci Nixon and Vaughn Nixon, both of Wakefield.

Wayne Sellers of Maywood served as best man, and groomsmen were Wayne Fellhauer of Fort Collins. They were attired in ivory western cut tuxedos with matching ivory shirts.

Mrs. Backstrom chose a rosy brick two-piece knit dress in street length for her daughter's wedding, and Mrs. Sellers wore a silver gray double knit, also in street length. Both wore ivory lily corsages.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Keating of Wayne and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Cappel of McCook greeted the 200 guests who attended a reception in the church parlors following the ceremony. Gift carriers were Laura Keating and Leslie Keating, both of Wayne.

The cake was cut and served by Cindy Sellers of Inman, Pam Sellers of McCook, Dolores Erwin of Concord and Sharon Kummer of McCook. Doris Backstrom and Ruth Erwin of Wakefield poured and Mary Guerin and Marjle Lenihan of Omaha served punch.

Waitresses were Laura Keating, Fran Prather and Elizabeth Prather, all of Wayne, and Beth Stalling of Concord.

The newlyweds are making their home at 2300 Horsetooth Village, Apt. 78, in Fort Collins.

Hospital Auxiliary Nominates Officers

Nominations for new officers of the Wayne Community Hospital Auxiliary were presented at the group's meeting last Friday afternoon in the Woman's Club room.

Mrs. Earl Larson, chairman of the nominating committee, presented the slate of new officers, including Mrs. Sheryl Marra, president; Jan Kohl, vice president; Mary Martinson, secretary; and Sandy Lyman, treasurer.

Elections will be held at the January meeting.

President Donna Schumacher conducted Friday's business meeting, which included a report by secretary Priscilla Skov. Luella Marra, treasurer, reported on proceeds from the auxiliary's fall bazaar held Nov. 15. Members voted to place the money from the bazaar in an interest earning account until they decide how it is to be spent at Providence Medical Center.

Serving lunch Friday were Mrs. Darrell Moore and Mrs. Luella Marra.

The auxiliary will not meet in December because of the Christmas holiday. Next regular meeting will be Jan. 16 at 2 p.m. with hostesses Jeannie Mau and Eunice Corbit.

PMC Board of Directors Gives Approval to 'Art Cart' Project

An "art cart" project designed to give support and pleasure to patients at Providence Medical Center was unanimously approved by the Hospital Board of Directors last week.

The art cart, manned by volunteers, will make its way throughout the corridors of Providence twice weekly. Those managing the cart will visit with the patients to find out what prints they would like displayed on the wall of their room.

The patient can select from various prints on the cart, including landscapes, farm scenes, scenes from the past, flower still lifes, children, humorous pictures by artists such as Norman Rockwell, as well as some old masters.

The selection committee includes Ted Blenderman, chairman, Pearl Hanson, Sister Cecilia Polf, Chuck Carhart and Jesse Barr.

Citizens of the community who would enjoy being a patron of the art cart project are asked to send a one-time contribution of $25 to Ginny Otte, Art Cart treasurer, 515 W. Second St., Wayne, Neb., 68787. The contribution covers the cost of an attractive print and its framing.

According to chairmen of the project, several persons may wish to go together and make one $25 contribution.

Persons who would like to be a part of the volunteer group who would take the art cart around to patients also are asked to contact Mrs. Otte.

The project is modeled after a service provided at Methodist Hospital, Rochester, Minn., and according to Helen Franke, chairman of the Rochester Art Cart, the service amounts to much more than just the changing of a picture.

"As the art cart makes its rounds, its volunteers not only brighten rooms, but lives as well," said Mrs. Franke.

Dorothy Ley, who recently completed a three-week stay at Rochester Methodist, said, "I certainly agree with Helen Franke. The art cart is one of the ways the hospital said, 'You are an important human being, and your feelings are important to us. We want to add pleasure to your day."

Mrs. Ley said the art cart is in the same spirit that prevails at Providence Medical Center in all of its services. "No hospital in the country could, in my opinion, rival the quality care and the psychological support we find in our own local hospital," said Mrs. Ley.

Mrs. Ley went on to say that the art cart with its potential to bring added joy and beauty into the lives of those who are ill will be another way that Providence Medical Center will demonstrate its unique ability to minister to the whole person and all his needs.

Randy's Recap

According to Randy Hascal

THE FOURTH annual Wayne Turkey Trot was another success. A total of 130 persons registered for the run and 120 finished the race.

I was one of the 10 who didn't finish. Wearing my Rosie Ruiz Track Club T-shirt, I started the race, ran eight or nine blocks, indiscreetly hopped in my car and drove the rest of the way.

I tried to jump in at the finish line but was disqualified. I don't know how the officials found out, they hadn't taped the race or anything.

Actually, I had planned all along to take pictures of the race. Then, at the last minute, I got a wild hair and decided to run in the Turkey Trot, stop somewhere along the route and take pictures of the remainder of the run.

Editor Dan Field (probably in worse physical condition than I) joined me. We started in the middle of the pack, fell toward the rear and picked up our own pace. Neither of us is a jogging nut so needless to say, we were happy to snap pictures of the other runners.

About 30 women and 90 men finished the race. Somewhere in there was one dog (presumably owned by Dr. Willie Wiseman). Most of the runners were just dog-tired. Pat Gross and company did a fine job of directing the race.

ALTHOUGH BOWL GAMES are not scheduled for at least another couple of weeks, I think I'll make my predictions now that most pairings are decided.

Orange Bowl: Florida State 17, Oklahoma 14.

Sugar Bowl: Notre Dame 27, Georgia 24.

Building Permits Rebound Some

Building permits issued for new housing and mortgage lending rebounded briefly during the third quarter (July-September) of 1980 in response to declining interest rates, according to data analyzed by the Nebraska Department of Economic Development.

It was a shortlived recovery, however, as interest rates began climbing again in September. During the third quarter, a total of 2,452 new housing units were authorized for construction in the state. This was only 4.4 percent below the third quarter of 1979 — but over 32 percent below the new housing quarter of 1978. The year-to-date (January-September) total for new housing permits in 1980 was 5,097 units — down 30.8 percent from the first nine months of 1979 and 41.8 percent from the same period in 1978.

A breakdown of construction permit data by type of housing reveals that single family housing in the third quarter statewide totaled 1,876 units — down 8.4 percent from a year ago. The year-to-date total was 3,899 single-family units in 1980 — down 32 percent from 1979 and 43 percent from 1978. Nationally, single family housing permits through the first eight months were down 34 percent.

Multi-family housing permits totaled 576 units in the third quarter — an increase of 11.6 percent over the third quarter of 1979. This increase can in part be attributed to an effort to use up appropriated federal funds before the Sept. 30 end of the fiscal year. The year-to-date total of 1,198 multiple-family units authorized for construction, however, was 28 percent below the 1979 figure and 38 percent below the 1978 total.

The number of mobile homes shipped to Nebraska, showed no change from the pattern of previous months. Third quarter total shipments to the state numbered 249 — down 34.4 percent from the 380 units shipped in 1979. For the first nine months shipments were down 37.5 percent from 1979 — from 1,108 last year to 693 this year.

Figures from the Federal Home Loan Bank in Topeka, Kan. show that the total amount of mortgage money loaned by the state's federally insured savings and loan associations during the third quarter of 1980 was $180.8 million — a decrease of 35.3 percent from the third quarter of 1979. Though the first nine months of 1980, mortgage-lending totaled $382 million — down 47 percent from the same period in 1979. The average contract interest rate, based on the purchase of previously occupied homes, stood at 12.23 percent in July then dropped to 11.89 percent in August before creeping back up to a September average of 12 percent. The year's lowest monthly average interest figure was 11.78 percent in January, the highest to date was 13.74 percent in May.

Bereuter at Kiwanis

FIRST DISTRICT REP. Doug Bereuter was guest speaker at Kiwanis Club Monday noon. He provided an insight into the transition between President Carter's administration and that of President-elect Ronald Reagan. Afterward, Bereuter took time out to answer questions from Kiwanians. He is pictured with Jack Middendorf, Wayne, the associate professor of library media at Wayne State College.

Wakefield Man Named To Farm Export Group

Congressman Doug Bereuter has named 12 leaders from Nebraska — including one from this area — will serve on the National Task Force on Farm Export Expansion.

The group includes: Dan Gardner, Wakefield; Dr. Mike Turner, Lincoln; Eugene Glock, Rising City; Harold Nelson, Gresham; Alan Kruescher, DeWitt; Floyd Herman, Wilbur; Willard Waldo, DeWitt; Larry Schramm, Papillion; Dave Anderson, Odell; Bob Andersen, Lincoln; Dale Tinstman, Dakota City; Ralph Ralkes, Ashland.

Bereuter said these leaders have been selected to participate in the nationwide U.S. Farm Export Education Project. Its purpose is to develop a unified national plan to build a stronger U.S. economy through increased farm exports in the 1980's.

Between now and the end of the year, the National Task Force will review "A Blueprint for U.S. Farm Export Expansion" that includes specific recommendations for maximum feasible expansion of U.S. farm exports between now and 1990.

"A key objective of this phase is to attract significant input from nonfarm leaders — people who ultimately must be convinced that increasing farm exports is a matter of national — not just agricultural — interest," Bereuter emphasized.

All responses to the first draft "Blueprint" will be considered in a second draft to be presented at a National Conference on Farm Export Expansion scheduled for Feb. 2-11, 1981, in Washington, D.C.

Following the conference, important features of the plan will be presented in an extensive public education program. Efforts will focus on reaching audiences in major urban centers across the country.

Bereuter pointed out that these Nebraska leaders will be joining with other prominent constituents from all across the country being named by other Congressional supporters of the project.

Bereuter noted that almost one year of research, development and organization has gone into the U.S. Farm Export Education Project. During that time, support has been developed from every major export commodity, agribusiness suppliers, virtually every segment of the farm export community and the U.S. government. The Agriculture Council of America (ACA) is providing staffing and administrative coordination for the U.S. Farm Export Education Project as part of its overall program to communicate what modern agriculture means to America.

Hale Is Chairman Of Heat Group

Merrill G. Hale of Wayne thinks the American Heart Association is a "worthwhile cause." That's why he's the Wayne County chairman for the 1981 Heart Campaign.

Hale, a loan officer with State National Bank and Trust, is in his first year of voluntary service.

Hale hopes to build a strong, solid volunteer group in the county. Joining him in the campaign are Steve Brandt, campaign chairman, Sylvia Eynon, publicity chairman, Mrs. Carl Lentz, memorial chairman, and Charles McDermott, special events chairman.

There were 33 heart related deaths in the county, accounting for 54 percent of all area deaths, according to the latest statistics from the State Department of Health, Bureau of Vital Statistics for 1979.

Through an ongoing program of heart research, education and community service, the Nebraska Affiliate continues to work for healthy Nebraska hearts.

Two heart-saving programs have reached many Nebraskans. Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation (CPR) has trained 93,845 since 1974. High-Blood Pressure Detection and Follow-up has screened approximately 308,813 Nebraskans since 1975; 17,644 were elevated and were referred to their physician for follow-up and diagnosis.

CLEP Deadline Dec. 8

Dec. 8 will be the registration deadline for December's College Level Examination Program (CLEP) examinations to be held on the Wayne State College campus on Wednesday, Dec. 10.

The CLEP program enables students to earn college credits by examination. Participants may sign up for one or more 90 minute exams to test their knowledge of specific areas. CLEP offers the opportunity to save both time and money in pursuing an education through recognition of your college level achievements.

Anyone can take CLEP exams and submit scores to one or more of 2500 participating institutions. To receive college credit for these exams at Wayne State College, you must either be currently enrolled or have completed admission requirements.

Individuals who have taken CLEP exams (particularly the subject exams) usually find that related introductory textbooks give a good overview of the area to be tested. If your local public library does not have this type of book, request it through an inter-library loan or simply visit the library of WSC.

Credit given through CLEP is entered on your record without grades and is not used in determining your grade point average. If you fail a CLEP exam, there is no official record made and it will not affect your transcript. The exam can also be taken again provided the appropriate fees are paid.

Wayne State College places no limit on the maximum number of credit hours earned through CLEP which are taken before the senior year.

Every institution which participates in CLEP establishes its own policy concerning (among other things) which exams are officially recognized and the minimum scores necessary before credit is granted. If you know that you will be transferring to another college in the future, it is a good idea to check with the Registrar of that institution for their CLEP policy. WSC will accept CLEP credit earned at another institution provided the exams are recognized for credit and the necessary scores were obtained.

CLEP tests are usually given on the second Wednesday of every month, however, it is a good idea to confirm test dates by calling 402/375-1317. Each exam takes about 90 minutes and the exam schedule is set up so that anywhere from one to four tests can be taken on the same day. Other dates/times can be arranged for CLEP exams as appropriate.

The fee for General and Subject Examinations (with or without essay or lab exam) is $20 for each examination. Scores are reported to you and the College four to eight weeks after the test date.

For more information call 375-1317, WSC Student Services Office.

County Farm News

The following information has been released by the Wayne County USDA Service Center.

The national average price for corn has reached the reserve call level of $3.15 per bushel. The price remained at or above this level for five days, triggering the call of Reserve I corn. These loans will have to be repaid within 90 days.

Reserve II and III corn loans remain in the release level. They have a call level of $3.26 per bushel. The national average market price was close to this figure, but dropped back again.

There are 150,000 bushels in Reserve I and 982,000 bushels in Reserve II and III in Wayne County.

Grain loans
Grain loans are available to producers who accurately and timely reported their acreages. The loans mature in nine months and the interest rate is 11.5 percent. If any lending institutions have liens filed covering grain, a waiver must be signed before the loan can be disbursed.

Loans can be made on the certified quantity (90 percent grain, 85 percent ear corn), or on 100 percent if you pay for a measuring service fee. The fee is $9 for the request plus $4 per hour for the time spent.

Low yield
There have been 480 applications for disaster payments. The ASCS, FmHA and SCS are busy compiling production and determining eligibility for payments. They hope to start making payments soon.

Feed grain
Notices of national crop averages (NCA) and yields will be going out earlier than usual. Any changes in owners or operators should be reported as soon as possible so the notices can be sent to the right producers.

Indications are that there will be cross-compliance for 1981. If a producer participates on one farm, he will have to stay within the NCA on any other farms he owns or operates.

Farm business
The Northeast Nebraska Farm Business Association has hired a fieldman, Mike Meierhenry, a farmer living near Hoskins.

He has had previous experience with a farm management firm as well as bachelors and masters degrees from the University of Nebraska in agricultural economics.

The Farm Business Association is a farm-accounting system that includes farm and enterprise analysis, on-farm consultant service, analysis comparisons and income tax management and preparation.

It is organized by farmers to serve farm operators in cooperation with the University of Nebraska Cooperative Extension Service. The organization covers 13 counties in Northeast Nebraska and Wayne County has eight members.

Meierhenry will visit member farms several times a year, analyze their farm practices, interpret records and provide personalized record keeping and tax planning help.

If you are interested in more information, contact Mike Meierhenry or the Wayne County Extension Service.

FCIC comments
Producers who harvested part or all of their corn for silage and did not report a loss should notify the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation county office immediately to qualify for a 15 percent premium discount on the acreage harvested as silage.

The FCIC office is located at 401 Sunset Plaza, Norfolk, Neb. 68701.

After sponsoring a successful photography show at the Mineshaft Mall, the Regional Arts Council began plans to make the show an annual event.

The Council reported that the photo show held Thursday, Friday and Saturday was attended by a relatively large number of people. Awards were given in various categories.

"Best of show" awards were given to Char Blake's "Span for Tomorrow" in the professional color category and to Adrie Nab's "A Bridge too Far" in the professional black and white category. Amateur "best of show" awards were given to Sharon Foxhoven in the color category and Earl Echtenkamp in the black and white category.

Honorable mention certificates in the professional division were presented to the following photographers: Adrie Nab, three for black and white, one for color; Cindy Miller of Bancroft, two for black and white.

Honorable mention certificates in the amateur division were presented to the following: Susan Replogle, two awards; David Cooley, Ellie McBride of Laurel, John Goeden, Norman Wichman of Pender, Earl Echtenkamp.

Judge for the show was Carlos Frey of Mid-America Art Studio. Other entrants were: Lin Brumels, Craig Johnson, Carol Jorde, John Jorde, Betty Puckett of Pender and Gordon Emry.

The Regional Arts Council is encouraging painters and sculptors in the region to prepare for a show in oil painting and sculpture scheduled in February.

NPPD Directors Okay Rate Hike

The Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD) board of directors last week approved new electric rates for the district's wholesale and retail customers for 1981.

The new wholesale rate reflects an average increase of approximately 11.3 percent. Wholesale rates are normally increased once every two years, but a $14.2 million deficiency in the district's wholesale revenue for 1981 required that adjustments be made so that revenues are sufficient to meet all expenses of providing electric service. NPPD wholesale rates were increased 18.5 percent last year.

NPPD provides total or partial power and energy requirements for 53 municipalities and 26 rural and other power districts and cooperatives in the state at wholesale. In addition, the district supplies partial requirements through interconnections to 22 other municipalities.

The average retail rate increase in 1981 will be approximately 15.7 percent for the district's 106,000 retail customers. Retail revenue requirements for 1981 reflect a deficiency of approximately $14.7 million. Retail rates are revised annually, and were increased approximately 7.4 percent last year.

At rate meetings held last week in York, Kearney, Norfolk, O'Neill and North Platte, top NPPD officials explained the reasons behind the higher rates to representatives of the district's wholesale customers. NPPD First Assistant General Manager Dil Blatchford explained that a series of unforeseen events, coupled with the high inflationary spiral, resulted in higher costs for fuel, labor, material and supplies.

Blatchford said blade problems in the Brown-Boveri high pressure turbine at the recently completed Gentleman Station Union No. 1 coal fired plant near Sutherland and disc cracking in the Westinghouse low pressure turbine at the Cooper Nuclear Station near Brownville forced a reduction in the energy output of those two low-cost generating facilities and required the District to make modifications to certain plant equipment.

"We also had to replace some lost generation from our Sheldon Station coal fired plant near Hallam when that facility was forced off the line for a time due to the failure of a large transformer. And we had to pay to replace the transformer," Blatchford continued.

Other factors contributing to NPPD's revenue deficiencies were higher than anticipated costs of purchased power from Omaha Public Power District's Nebraska City coal fired plant which the district had contracted for, and millions of dollars in expenditures for safety features at Cooper Nuclear Station required as a result of the Three Mile Island incident.

NPPD also experienced a loss in revenue during the first six months of 1980 when its customers used less kilowatt-hours due to the milder than normal weather.

Slim Chance Seen of Everyone Being Happy

CAPITOL NEWS
By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

Any plan to streamline state government probably would be well received in most quarters. But the chances of getting everyone involved to agree on such a plan, if one could be developed, appear slim.

Nevertheless, Gov. Charles Thone has begun the task of weeding through 88 recommendations submitted to him by his 55-member Task Force on Government Improvement. Recently, the governor announced his first endorsements — seven recommendations, dealing with such things as human services and duplication of inspections.

Thone's task force took a long, hard look at various aspects of state government. Its report, submitted to Thone Sept. 26, including some aggressive proposals that members believe would help to streamline and improve state government.

The task force's report was detailed, comprehensive, and, in some places, controversial. The first seven endorsements, as one might expect, were not among the more controversial proposals.

Some of the recommendations require legislative action; others can be done by executive order. The trick will be to get legislative agreement on any proposals the lawmakers are asked to scrutinize.

To make the job of scrutinizing easier, or at least more representative, Thone says he welcomes comments on the task force's recommendations — even those he's already endorsed.

Among the items receiving Thone's initial endorsement was a proposal to create an "executive office of human services," which will coordinate the state departments of Health, Public Institutions, Social Services and Labor.

He also endorsed a recommendation to make the human services executive office responsible for long-range planning goals for all four human services agencies. In making the endorsements, Thone reasoned that "it is wrong to deal with individuals and families as if their problems can be sliced into four distinct and unrelated areas." Apparently, no one is disputing that thinking.

But some controversies are likely to arise when debate turns to recommendations dealing with an area that may seem dissimilar, yet is somewhat related to human services. That's the area of "advocacy" agencies, such as the Indian Commission and the Commission on the Status of Women.

The governor's task force, again with streamlining and efficiency in mind, has recommended the elimination of nine such agencies. Opposition to that proposal already is trickling into the Statehouse.

But Thone's chief consultant for government reorganization, William Hamilton, has indicated the chances are slim for immediate approval of the recommendation to abolish the advocacy agencies. Hamilton recently said discussions with some of Thone's policy advisers left him with the opinion that the proposal probably "wouldn't get very far" this year.

Hamilton said his prediction, a personal opinion, doesn't necessarily reflect Thone's thinking on the issue. He just believes the proposal won't get very far this year, although he admits there's a possibility it'll "be addressed somewhere down the road."

DeCamp in power?
Since the Nov. 4 elections when the Republicans showed impressive victories nationwide, there has been talk around the Statehouse about GOP dominance in the nonpartisan Legislature.

Much of the discussion has centered around Republican Gov. Charles Thone's possible influence over, or control of, the strongly GOP Unicameral. The Republican senators dominated in terms of numbers during the last session, but this year's elections gave the Grand Old Party even more same-party lawmakers.

Recently talk has shifted to possible party in-fighting, or maybe personality conflicts, in the battle to attain leadership positions. It all started when a confidential letter from Sen. Donald Dworak of Columbus was leaked to the press.

Dworak had written his colleagues suggesting that Neleigh Sen. John DeCamp be denied a leadership position in the 1981 session. DeCamp, a leader by most standards in past sessions, was involved in "tacky and degrading" dealings because of how he handled campaign funds, Dworak alleged.

DeCamp was heavily criticized after it was revealed he spent thousands of dollars in campaign funds on such things as mortgage payments, fish tanks, office furniture and gold coins. DeCamp maintained his use of campaign funds was legal, and said he was just making a point about what he saw as problems with the state Sunshine law. He also noted that his investments were wise when compared to yard signs, which just turn in to litter.

But Dworak said the legality of what DeCamp did was not at issue. He said DeCamp's activities "cast aspersions on each of the Legislature's members and the state of Nebraska. It would be a mistake for the body to bestow a mantle of leadership on Sen. DeCamp."

DeCamp, who was understandably less-than-delighted with Dworak's statements, said he plans to continue his efforts to retain his chairmanship of the Banking Committee. The colorful Neleigh-lawmaker didn't seem especially worried, either.

Romans vs. Rasmussen
The feud between Public Service Commissioners Jack Romans of Elwood and Eric Rasmussen of Fairmont continues. But this time a PSC employee seems to be caught in the middle.

PSC Executive Secretary Terry Kubicek early in November told the commissioners he was working late one night when he heard a commotion in Romans' office. He went to investigate and briefly watched Rasmussen, accompanied by PSC attorney Jack Finnigan, rifling through papers on Romans' desk.

The issue was on the back burner for several weeks, but the commissioners decided at their recent meeting to reprimand Finnigan, who reportedly stood by during the alleged desk-rifling incident. The longtime PSC attorney was suspended for 10 days without pay, placed on administrative probation for two months, and formally reprimanded via a letter in his file.

Finnigan, claiming he was denied due process, announced his intention to appeal.

Kubicek has recommended suspension for "up to 10 days" because he said Finnigan should have known what he was doing was wrong. Kubicek also stressed that PSC employees are supposed to remain neutral in matters involving the commission and commissioners.

Rasmussen's explanation after the incident was that he went to Romans' office with Finnigan to look at a Ronald Reagan poster. The incident occurred five days before the general election.

But Romans alleged Rasmussen was looking for something that could be used against Romans in his re-election bid. Romans and Rasmussen, both Republicans, were up for re-election in their respective PSC districts. Both were re-elected.

When asked whether there was talk about perhaps looking further into the alleged desk-rifling by Rasmussen, Kubicek said not much more could be done. He didn't take sides or attempt to speculate on whether Romans was correct in saying the incident was politically motivated or whether Rasmussen was simply looking for a campaign poster.

Kubicek did say, however, that if Rasmussen's actions were improper, there wasn't much the commission could do about it. "He's an elected official," Kubicek said.

Dear Sir:

The Haven House board of directors and staff pause at this Thanksgiving season to express our gratitude to The Wayne Herald and its staff and to Haven House volunteers for supporting our goals of aiding domestic violence victims and our hopes of preventing this "unspeakable crime."

It is good to live in a community which cares enough to help others. Certainly your policies make our citizens more aware and sensitive to the needs of those less fortunate. May your success continue. Our gratitude is profound and profuse.

Hallie Sherry, Coordinator

To the Editor:

I was quite surprised by the article in the Wayne Herald of Nov. 20, "O'Donnell Cites Impact of TV," which has me saying "my college is more interested in sports than state government." When I asked some of those present at the talk whether or not I had made such a statement, (I used no words), they, too, were surprised.

No matter. To set the record straight, I do not believe that "my college" (Wayne State College) is more interested in sports than state government. (But I do believe that many politicians in "state government" are in fact, many of them think that government is a sport, in my opinion.)

For the 10 years that I have been associated with Wayne State College I have become very impressed with the academic quality of the programs advanced by the faculty of the college. And the athletic programs of the college are quite important — and rightly so. I have often urged my own students to take part in athletics — (as I did as a young man). It is not trite to be reminded that "a strong mind in a strong body" is important to us all.

Still, it is true that in Nebraska — and other states, too — one can acquire a college degree without ever having studied "government and politics." And that is sad, and can be tragic given the role of government in our everyday lives. Every small businessman, every farmer, every educator full well knows the power that government has in their lives in the social and economic fields — as well as the political.

And given the tools that a politician will use to gain public office (such as television), and the powers granted to a politician once in office, it is of prime importance that our young people be able to "defend" themselves when we turn them loose with degree in hand. The defense they need is found in the study of government and politics.

Of course our young people are interested in sports. They should be. It is an important part of their lives. This becomes a problem only when one interest is so dominant that it can undermine a "more important" interest. At "my college," this is not the case. I am proud to boast that there is a healthy relationship between academics and sports at WSC. And, just perhaps, we should all remind ourselves that as long ago as Plato and Aristotle sports were accepted as a very vital part of education. I see sports — amateur sports — as part of a liberal arts education.

Finally, I would like to return to the purpose of my "talk" to Kiwanis — television and its power in the shaping of the minds of our children. 52 percent of the electorate voted November 4; 54 percent vote in 1976; 64 percent voted in 1960. Is there a relationship between the number of TV sets in use in America and the percentage of the electorate who choose to vote? Or maybe it is simpler than that: the more the politicians utilize TV to reach the voter, the more voters choose not to vote. An interesting idea, don't you think?

To the Editor:

Everyone at Region IV's Adult Developmental Center in Wayne wants to publicly thank Roy Coryell for letting us display the "Wooden Toys 'N Stuff" at the Mineshaft Mall on Nov. 6, 7 and 8.

Without his assistance, we would not have been able to show the public our wooden items and help them in their Christmas shopping. We also thank the public for stopping by to see the items. In fact, the demand was greater than we expected so we are busy putting out orders before the Christmas season. Once again, thank you Roy for your cooperation and generosity.

To the Editor:

Especially in this day and age it is gratifying and heartwarming to find honest people. Two weeks ago, my son, Curtis, and I were hunting pheasants over by Wayne, and after some time we did some picture taking. Some time later, we discovered the camera was missing and assumed I had left it on the roof of the car, and it had bounced off one of the ceiling rods.

We placed an ad in the lost and found column of the want ad section and were happily surprised to get a call from Werner Janke who had found our camera in the middle of the road south of Carroll.

They say honesty deserves honor and we would like to publicly thank Mr. Werner Janke.

Dear Editor:

Now that the eight sessions of the first "I Can Cope" program are over here in Wayne, a note of appreciation is due those who helped to put it all together.

Personnel and staff at Providence Medical Center, where the meetings were held, played an extremely important part. The American Cancer Society, Omaha office, and area representative Shelley Burck gave of their time to help organize and carry out the program. Hand-outs were furnished by the American Cancer Society.

Mary Jo Gross provided library resources for cancer patients available at every meeting. Chris and Edna Tietgen moderated a panel of cancer patients, and we appreciate them setting that session up for us. Thanks, also, to dietitian Tama Krause; physical therapist Carol Sheldon, home health nurse Ann Witowski and social worker Shirley Kramer.

Dr. Jeffrey Englehardt of Sioux City, herself a cancer patient, taught us much about the disease of cancer in a tremendous informative session. Duane Schroeder, attorney, answered many important legal questions that face cancer victims. Sister Gertrude and the Rev. Kenneth Edmonds provided moral and spiritual support in a class entitled "Expressing Feelings Through Communication."

A very special thanks goes to Wittigs Food Center for furnishing a basket of fresh fruit for each of the eight sessions. Our gratitude, also, to Doris Luff for donating the delicious and very attractively decorated cake for our "graduation" session.

Thanks to the "media" for helping to make our program known. The Wayne Herald supplied excellent coverage, as did KTCB radio.

Yes, thanks to all of these people — but, most importantly, thanks to the participants! What a "mountain" of courage they represent.

The Herald Wishes You A Happy Thanksgiving

The staff of The Wayne Herald wishes to extend its hopes that everyone has a happy Thanksgiving this week, and that no one loses sight of the meaning of the annual holiday.

Thanksgiving is a good time for families to get together to strengthen family ties and to be thankful for our freedoms and our aspirations. We hope that everyone has the opportunity to spend time with some of their family, somewhere.

We also urge extra caution if traveling on the nation's highways.

What's the Rush ?

As a youngster in the 1950's, it seemed as though Christmas would never arrive. It took what seemed as eons to get here, and then in a blink, away it flew, with the eight reindeer and all.

During the teen years, Christmas settled into an annual and cheerful event. There was little to be concerned about. Gifts were little problem, it seemed, and being home for the special day was routine.

Then the 20's arrived on the scene. College was six hours from home. There was little chance for shopping while learning, with hours spent studying or partaking of the good life. The pace of time seemed to quicken, and the Yuletide season suddenly was upon us with little warning.

Then marriage and a child and Thanksgiving becomes synonymous with Christmas. Just four weeks for shopping is the message late November brings, and what about getting off work to go home for the festive and happy season?

The 20's are gone. Christmas seems to have lost its meaning as the economy puts a strain on everyone's style. Getting home to be with the family is impossible in a 24-hour period.

And what's this? Christmas trees in store windows in mid-November? Light-pole ornaments along Main Street four days before turkey time? Where is everyone going in such a rush?

Christmas seems like such a long time away for the three-year-old in the family. Let's hope he enjoys it before he finds that the Christmas season starts before Thanksgiving ends. When his 20's are behind him, it could be that Christmas starts in September. Christmas should be for children. Dan Field, Editor.

Cutting Accidents Cuts Auto Costs: Thone

"If all motor vehicle accidents in Nebraska could be eliminated, the cost reduction would be equal to 55 cents to every dollar that the people of the state pay for gasoline."

"To put it another way, the money saved by eliminating Nebraska's auto accidents would amount to 52 cents for every dollar that the state's citizens spend in buying new and used vehicles."

"Your state government is trying very hard to reduce the number of auto accidents."

"We require every employee who drives a state car to take a defensive driving course, and we've found out that this pays big dividends in reducing accidents."

"State records indicate where the locations are that have the most frequent accident sites. Then, state and local officers concentrate patrolling and enforcement of traffic laws in these areas."

"Alcohol plays a part in nearly half of the auto accidents that result in fatalities. The state is helping local police and sheriff departments in acquiring equipment for testing for alcohol blood content and in training personnel to use it."

"The state also helps train local emergency medical service units on how best to handle victims at accident sites, in ambulances and in hospital emergency rooms."

"In its construction projects, the Nebraska Department of Roads gives a

A Letter From
Gov. Charley Thone

"Babies are much more apt to be battered or killed in highway accidents than adults. Therefore, the state is trying to make mothers and fathers of infants aware of the new carriers for babies that attach to car seats and give greater protection."

"Although Nebraska accidents cost about the same as half the gasoline used in the state or half the price of all cars purchased, personal injuries and loss of priceless lives are, by far, the most tragic and costly consequences of car accidents."

"Won't you join in helping the state to reduce motor vehicle accidents in Nebraska?"

OUT OF OLD NEBRASKA

Thanksgiving through the years in Nebraska

Thanksgiving in Nebraska, as throughout the United States, is a harvest feast in celebration of autumn bounty. The November 16, 1906, "Valentine Republican," on file at the Nebraska State Historical Society, remarked: "Not alone the small boy looks forward longingly to Thanksgiving, . . . (but) the mind of older people as well is filled with the thoughts of roast turkey, pumpkin pies, mince pies, and other good things which make the day one of continual joy."

However, in early Nebraska not all Thanksgiving celebrations featured the now traditional roast turkey and pumpkin. A Thanksgiving meal, in pioneer Webster County featured mince pie composed of a flour and buffalo bone marrow crust with a dried apple and chopped buffalo meat filling. An early Box Butte County family celebrated the day with codfish, coffee, sorghum and dried raspberries. Editor A.C. Hickman in the November 26, 1897, Alliance "Pioneer Grip" reported of his holiday: "Yesterday was Thanksgiving day, and many an old gobbler turned his toes to the daisies. We hope our friends who were so fortunate as to have a gobbler were truly thankful, but as to our part we had no gobbler, but substituted an old rooster, for which we were very thankful."

The 1905 Thanksgiving birthday of chief clerk Scott of the Merchants Hotel, Omaha, was duly marked by "a most pretentious cake" which also served as a "filling centerpiece for the dining room in honor of Thanksgiving Day. . . . It was a fruit cake surmounted by a full-rigged ship and weighed forty-three pounds. The ship was made in ornamental work done with royal icing in colors and was equipped with sails, lifeboats, anchors, pilot house and flags in proper colors. It attracted considerable at-ention from guests at the hotel. It took four days to make the cake ("Omaha Bee," November 30, 1905).

The Thanksgiving holiday reported by Editor Edward Rosewater in the November 28, 1873, "Omaha Bee" was far less happy: "We spent Thanksgiving in mourning over the loss of a new suit of clothes. Some villainous sneak thief, having neither the fear of the law nor any respect or feeling for reporters, entered our room sometime between Wednesday afternoon and yesterday noon, and selected from our wardrobe our best suit of clothes, and got away with them without being discovered. The fellow certainly had good taste: They were fine clothes. We had appeared in them but twice before the public, and half a dozen times before a mirror. We thought they were elegant clothes. So did our tailor. We had anticipated a great deal of pleasure in buckling on the new harness yesterday, and returning thanks that we were possessed of sufficient cheek to have obtained them, on 'tick,' (credit!).

"But alas! Imagine our feeling of disappointment at finding them gone! We shall not attempt a description. Our pencil is not sharp enough to do justice to the subject. All we have got to say now is: that if the poor devil of a sneak who took them, needs them more than we do, he is welcome to the plunder. If he will pay the balance due on them, then will he be doubly welcome. We only hope that he will not tantalize us by wearing them in our presence. Trouble will immediately ensue if he does. Often and often have we chronicled items of the above nature concerning others, and now we know how it is ourself. It is decidedly unpleasant, especially in panicky times. However, we can congratulate ourself that we have another new suit — to get."

'Mentalist' Kreskin to Perform

Kreskin, the world's most famed mentalist and a foremost authority in the field of ESP (Extra Sensory Perception), returns to Wayne State College for his second performance on Monday, Dec. 8, at 8 p.m. in Rice Auditorium.

This year's performance is scheduled in the auditorium due to last year's sell-out in Ramsey Theatre.

Tickets for the performance will go on sale at the door starting at 7 p.m. Ticket cost is $2.

Kreskin is a "scientific investigator" of the power of suggestion and various areas of ESP. Everything he does encompasses natural and scientific means.

"What I do is inherent in everyone, but what I have done is learn to sensitize myself to the reactions and attitudes of people around me; under certain conditions, I can sense their thoughts as well as influence their thoughts."

Kreskin uses his own personality, persuasiveness and sensitivity to guide, suggest, direct and command in order to project thoughts and/or receive impressions. He is the first to admit that even he does not understand all the reasons behind some of the things he accomplishes.

Kreskin has devoted his life to untying the fascinating unknown of the human mind. The inner Kreskin is an intense scholar who possesses a voracious appetite for knowledge. A serious and erudite individual, off stage, he has amassed a personal library, exceeding three thousand volumes, ranging from fundamental magic to telepathy and parapsychology. He can read over seven thousand words per minute.

His quest for breakthroughs in the understanding and utilization of the human mind never ceases. Most people think of Kreskin as "The Amazing Kreskin," the show business performer, but his reputation in the scientific fraternity is highly esteemed. He has cooperated with physicians and dentists in the medical field.

He has been called upon to work with witnesses to crimes where the case hinges on unearthing forgotten details, from the subconscious. Using four hundred college students, as subjects, he demonstrated that the power of suggestion can stretch concentration spans and speed the learning process. "Science is a mystery only when it is not understood. If you piece together lots of segments, then you grasp the whole," says Kreskin.

Kreskin believes that hypnosis is a well meant delusion. To back up his conclusion, Kreskin has a standing $25,000 challenge, money on deposit in an American bank, to the first hypnotist, physician, dentist or psychologist who can conclusively prove under scientific condition the existence of a specific hypnotic trance, state or condition.

Cuban Native Grateful for U.S.

"I am most grateful to the United States for giving my children the opportunity for an education," emphasized Dr. Marie Grovas, Spanish instructor at Wayne State College.

Grovas was born in Matanzas, Cuba. At age 8, her parents sent her to a private school in Havana. She received much of her schooling in Havana, including her studies at the Normal School for Teachers. After Grovas arrived in the U.S., she got her masters degree and doctorate degrees. She began at the University of Nebraska and finished at Kearney State College.

Fidel Castro took power in Cuba in 1959. In 1961, Grovas and her husband sent their daughter, Amy, to the United States. Eight months later, they sent their other daughter, Sara. During the next two years, Grovas and her husband, an electrical engineer, stayed in Cuba along with their son, Alfred.

In 1963, Grovas and her husband and son decided to come to America. Although they left Cuba legally, the Cuban government did everything to stop them.

"They took our clothes and everything we owned away from us. They froze our bank accounts," said Grovas. "When I came to America, all I had was the suit I was wearing and my education." Grovas said she did not even have a dime to call her daughter, Amy.

Grovas took her first teaching job in the U.S. at the Holdrege Public School. She still considers Holdrege her hometown. In 1968, her husband died and Grovas felt a need to move on. She was offered a teaching job at Ames, Iowa, and at Wayne State. Grovas chose to come to Wayne because she did not want to leave Nebraska. She began teaching at Wayne State in 1969.

Grovas said she likes her profession. She has a lot of friends, but the system here is quite different from that of Cuba. She said eating and working habits were different.

"We never taught a class in the afternoon and if we did, it did not start until 2 p.m.," Grovas pointed out. "When I went to college, I did not have a choice of classes. School was not as expensive as it is here. It cost about $30 a semester to attend." (That is compared to approximately $2,200 a semester at Wayne State, according to the 1980-82 college catalog.)

The biggest barrier in coming to the U.S., according to Grovas, was that she could speak no English. She learned the language by listening. Grovas feels she has adapted well, although she still keeps some of the traditions of Cuba. "I still dream in Spanish," she added.

Recruiting students is a major part of Grovas' emphasis on education. She often gives talks to various organizations and high schools. During these talks she stresses the importance of foreign language. In a recent conference in Omaha which Grovas attended, it was felt that foreign language would be required in high school within the next three years.

Grovas encourages everyone to take a foreign language. In many parts of the United States, teachers are often required to know a second language, usually Spanish. "My main goal is to make the student like me. I think if the student likes me, he or she will like the subject I am teaching," said Grovas.

Dr. Grovas wanted to express her gratitude to this country. "The U.S. has been great to us; it gave me the opportunity to educate three children," stressed Grovas. "Americans should not take everything for granted. You don't realize what real freedom is."

Grovas plans to continue her career at Wayne State and wants to remain in Nebraska. She would like to return to Cuba to visit her family. She has four brothers living there with their families. She has not been back to Cuba since she left 17 years ago. Grovas would also like to visit the place where her parents are buried.

"There are strong memories of Cuba. It is a beautiful country and it has everything the U.S. has — television, the latest styles," said Grovas. "It was a sad situation when we left, but I must emphasize the appreciation for the education of my children."

Wood Demo Planned Dec. 4

Have you ever wondered how much wood is in a cord, how to fall a tree in a designated opening, how to safely handle a chain saw, and what varieties of trees make the best fire wood?

These questions will be answered at a farmstead windbreak improvement demonstration on the Howard Flier farm.

The Rural Area Development Committee is sponsoring this event to assist farmers in making decisions on how to improve their windbreaks.

Sometimes a row or two of dead trees can be removed from a windbreak and replaced with new trees. Occasionally a row or two of additional trees can be added to the outside of the existing trees.

All of these ideas, and others, will be discussed on Dec. 4 at 1:15 p.m. at the Howard Flier farm located one mile east and 2 1/2 miles south of Wayne.

Farm

Now Is the Time to Do Tax Planning

With harvest completed, the time is right for farmers to do some tax planning, according to Doug Duey, extension farm management specialist in the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources at the University of Nebraska.

"Though tax planning should be a year-round job, there are some adjustments to be made before the end of the year," Duey said.

Farmers and ranchers on the cash basis of accounting have more flexibility in shifting income and expense in and out of the current year than those on the accrual system, he explained, but "it must be done by the rules."

The taxpayer usually will be ahead to level out the peaks and valleys of taxable income from year to year, because of the progressive federal tax rates, but Duey cautioned that shifts should not be made only for the tax benefits. "Good financial management always takes into account income taxes but good tax management may not always be the best farm management or marketing decision," he said. Machinery purchase could be an example of a tax wise, management poor move.

This year, Nebraska has had both high and exceptionally low yields combined with a wide range of prices received, he said, putting some farmers near disaster while others are in a more favorable income position.

For the higher net income farmers, Duey offered these tips:

- Pay all outstanding deductible expenses and pre-purchase feed, fertilizer, seed and other items. Have a valid binding contract stating quantity and dollar amounts.

- Hold grain and/or livestock sales into 1981, on take deferred payment with a valid forward contract that calls for payments in 1981.

- Proceeds from crop hail insurance or Federal Disaster Payments from your 1980 crop may be delayed if you normally sell or feed your crop in the following year.

- Family wages. Pay your children reasonable wages for work performed by them.

- Consider pre-payment of cash rent up to one year in advance. Purchase machinery or equipment if needed. Accelerated first year depreciation and investment credit can give a sizable tax reduction.

- Consider Keogh or IRA Retirement accounts to defer taxes. Determine whether retirement accounts or expanding the business will give the greater return on investment.

- Do not overlook livestock sales eligible for capital gain treatment.

- Allocate part of telephone, electricity, auto and food costs for hired labor to business use and deduct them as business expenses.

For farmers projecting a low 1980 net income, Duey had these suggestions:

- Avoid showing a net operating loss in any year if at all possible. Family exemptions and personal deductions could be lost without the chance to recover them later as a loss carryback.

- Plan for maximum use of the Earned Income Credit allowance.

- Generate additional income through sales of farm products as feasible.

- Delay paying fully deductible expenses to 1981. If considering selling or trading a machine, sell it outright in 1980 and put off purchase of the replacement until 1981.

All farmers need to keep the following ideas in mind before year's end, Duey said:

- Maintain good records to substantiate deductions for contributions, medical expenses, personal casualty losses, or the doubling of these deductions when allowed for years ahead.

- Mileage rate allowed for business purposes for 1980 is 20 cents per mile for the first 15,000 miles if depreciation and expenses are not taken. Medical or charitable travel allowance rate is nine cents per mile.

- Record expenses for business trips.

- Don't forget depreciation and investment credit on eligible purchased breeding stock to be held three years or more.

- Calculate current interest out of installment payments of machinery, land and other loans.

County extension offices and provide the AGNET computer program PLANTAX for calculating estimated federal income tax. Duey pointed out. Repeated computer runs will tell you the amount of tax savings for adjustments made in income or expense.

In addition, the IRS Farmers Tax Guide, 1981 edition, also should be available at county extension offices in late November.

4-H Calves Must Be Fed Properly

Nebraska 4-H'ers currently are selecting their market beef projects for next year. They are selecting calves with an inherited ability to grow rapidly, but these calves must be fed properly to achieve the performance the members want.

This word comes from Doyle Wolverton, extension 4-H livestock specialist at the University of Nebraska, who says the feeding program should be directed to maximize performance with a specific market date in mind.

"This may be County Fair, State Fair or Ak-Sar-Ben. Once the date is set, you should develop a program that will have them in correct weight, finish and grade at that date," Wolverton advises.

Many 4-H'ers divide the feeding program into two phases — the growing phase and the finishing phase.

During the growing phase, high quality roughages are used as major portion of dry matter. These include alfalfa hay, corn silage or grass hay. The ration is completed by supplementing with grain or a mixture of grain and protein-to-balance ration. "We expect a growing steer to gain 1.5 to 2.0 pounds per day," Wolverton says.

The finishing phase is usually begun 160 to 180 days before marketing. It uses a high concentrate ration plus small amounts of hay or silage. The concentrate is corn or milo, supplemented properly with protein, vitamins and minerals.

"Feeding simple practical rations will give the 4-H'er a good cattle feeding experience and increase the potential for making a profit on the project," Wolverton points out.

Reduced Tillage Results In Fluctuations of Yield

Year to year dryland corn yields tend to fluctuate more under reduced tillage than under conventional plowing, disking or chiseling. Does the fluctuation result from plant growth and leaf development differences under no-till?

Research by plant physiologist Wallace W. Wilhelm says no — at least not during 3 1977-1979 U.S. Department of Agriculture study near Lincoln, Neb., on a Crete-Butler silty clay loam soil.

With rising energy costs, farmers have been attracted to the lower energy requirements of reduced tillage. Wilhelm is a member of a research team seeking ways of carrying out reduced tillage more effectively while taking advantage of the energy savings.

Wilhelm, of the department's Science and Education Administration Agricultural Research, compared spring plowing, disking, chiseling and no-till. He found that green leaf area of corn increased from emergence through tasseling for all tillage treatments, then decreased slowly until physiological maturity.

Leaf area duration — the period a corn plant's total leaf area was exposed to the sun — was affected by tillage in 1977. Wilhelm found. Leaf area duration was longer under disking than under no-till.

development — from seedling emergence to about the sixth leaf stage," Wilhelm says. "During this time, the plant is affected more by soil temperature than by air temperature, and the soil temperature usually is lower with no-till than with conventional tillage. The plant can somewhat but perhaps not fully compensate for a slower start under no-till."

Soil moisture conditions varied from poor to adequate during the three years of the experiment. The year 1977 was the second of two very dry years at Lincoln, beginning with little stored soil moisture, and growing season rainfall was limited. Rainfall was less than normal in 1978, but good rains came during grain-filling time in 1979.

Grain yields for all tillage treatments averaged 27 bushels per acre in 1977, 79 bushels in 1978 and 102 bushels in 1979 (1,721, 4,999 and 6,422 kilograms per hectare). Tillage treatments did not produce significant differences in corn yield in 1977 and 1979. Plowed and disked plots produced more corn than chiseled plots in 1978.

Wilhelm reported results of the study, in cooperation with the University of Nebraska, at the meeting of the American Society of Agronomy at Detroit, Mich.

Use of Organic Farm Methods Can't Be Ignored Any Longer

Farming with chemicals is a "father rich, son poor" approach to agriculture, a Kansas farmer told U.S. Department of Agriculture officials in Lincoln recently.

USDA Science and Education Administration officials were in Lincoln for one of four meetings nationwide to discuss USDA's recent report on organic farming. The University of Nebraska Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources was cosponsor of the meeting.

John Vogelsberg of Home, Kan., discussed his 28 years as an organic farmer in a panel presentation on applying organic agriculture on the farm. The panel capped a day-long discussion of the politics and socioeconomic consequences of organic farming.

Vogelsberg stated farming after World War II when chemicals were first coming in. His father was an organic farmer, but Vogelsberg and his brother rented land and farmed with chemical fertilizers to show "the old man" how it was done.

After a few years, with no apparent advantage from chemical agriculture, Vogelsberg reverted to organic farming, adding only modern machinery to his father's "patch" system. Since that time, he's been growing small patches of different crops on his 680 acres and rotating them from year to year. His yields are comparable to those of his neighbors who farm conventionally.

"There's no way we can ignore organic farming any longer," Vogelsberg said, because of soil loss through chemical agriculture, pollution problems and health hazards.

Another panel speaker, Richard Harwood of Kutztown, Penn., said organic farmers are concerned primarily with health risks, than with the quality of the environment. "This often translates into a kind of morality among farmers," he said, with some even using the term "born again" to describe their farming philosophy.

Harwood is director of the Organic Gardening and Farming Research Center and is affiliated with Rodale Press, publisher of numerous organic farming materials. Organic farmers are first interested in cycling of nutrients within fields, he said, then between fields. Bringing in nutrients from off-farm sources is a third possibility, he said.

Cycling of nutrients in organic farming means a different kind of nutrient profile, Harwood said. "Whatever system you use has to keep nutrients in the upper levels of the profile" where plants can use them. This means careful timing of animal manure applications and use of green manure crops, he said.

Actions of soil insects and microbial processes also must be considered, Harwood added. Applications of highly soluble materials such as anhydrous ammonia and insecticides disrupt balance in the soil, he said, "poisoning it."

Neither Vogelsberg nor Harwood advocated an abrupt switch from conventional to organic farming. "It took farmers a while to get hooked (on chemicals) — there'll have to be a withdrawal period," said Vogelsberg.

"We need to avoid statements of extremes," according to Harwood. I don't think anybody is pushing a completely organic agriculture now," he said. Rather, organic methods such as crop rotations and manuring should be used where they fit into more conventional farming, he said.

A third panelist suggested ecofallow farming as one method that can fit into current farming systems. Robert Klein, Red Willow County agent, explained ecofallow as "a system" which maintains residues on a field and controls weeds between harvest and the next planting, either with sweep tillage or herbicides.

The method reduces wind and water erosion, traps snow, modifies soil temperatures, increases infiltration rates and conserves water — up to three inches if weeds are controlled after wheat harvest, Klein said.

Yield advantages of 20 to 30 bushels in corn and grain sorghum are attributable to moisture saved with the method, he said. Five bushel per acre have resulted for wheat in an ecofallow rotation.

Where practical, sweep tillage or other subsurface tillage, which maintains crop residues on the surface could be used rather than herbicides, Klein said.

China As Grain Buyer Welcomed

China's emergence as a grain buyer is welcome news as the U.S. posts record grain exports for the 10th year in a row, a U.S. Department of Agriculture official said Oct. 31.

Don Novotny, director of the grain division in the USDA's Foreign Agricultural Service, was in Lincoln for the University of Nebraska's annual Masters Week. He helped to negotiate the China grain deal, and in the mid-70s was involved in negotiations for grain trade with the Soviet Union.

The China agreement calls for sales of at least six million metric tons annually, Novotny said. Up to nine million metric tons can be purchased without further contact, he said, but if China wants to buy more than that amount, it must notify the U.S.

China would then be buying grain on the same grounds as America's other customers, he explained — China must "let the market know." In the past, some foreign countries have covertly purchased large quantities of grain, without the knowledge of other grain buyers. When the large purchases were known, market prices increased substantially. Openness in purchases means allowing the free market system to function, he said.

"China is potentially a very big buyer" of grain, especially wheat, Novotny said. Currently ranking third or fourth among U.S. customers, it could be the largest before very long, he predicted.

Although other countries are always pushing hard to expand their markets, it's not a major problem, there's no major change coming on this account, he said. Other grain exporting nations operate on a different scale, he said. For example, Canada's efforts in building port facilities and increasing production aren't a threat, he said.

A native of Clarkson, Novotny earned a bachelor's degree at NU in 1955 and a master's degree in 1957. He has worked for the Foreign Agricultural Service since that time. In addition to the Chinese and Russian grain agreements, Novotny has been involved in international promotion of U.S. wheat.

Solar-Heated Floor Can Be Economical

Using solar-heated water running through pipes under a building floor can provide an economical source of heat for swine, according to an Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources staff member.

Dr. James DeShazer, professor of agricultural engineering at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, discussed results of tests conducted on inverted trickle solar collectors at the American Society of Agricultural Engineers Energy Symposium recently in Kansas City, Mo. He presented a paper that was co-authored by Keith Vacha, graduate student and Douglas Overhults, assistant instructor of agricultural engineering.

Most solar collectors cost about $16 per square foot, which is higher than what farmers generally want to spend, DeShazer said, so the inverted trickle solar collector was studied.

A trickle system has a sheet of metal with water dripping across it. When the sun heats the metal, it also heats the water, he explained. However, as the humidity increases, the area between the silver and glazing on the collector often becomes too cold and fogging occurs.

"We tried running the water on the back side of the metal, therefore making it an inverted trickle collector." It was discovered that a collector at a 60-degree slope had a water retention of 98 percent, resulting in only a two percent drop off, he said.

A 60-degree angle is the slope recommended for collectors in Nebraska to achieve the highest interception efficiency of solar energy. He added that although some energy was used in pumping the water through the system, the amount was minimal and only 60 percent of the back side had to be covered with water to be effective.

With a payback period of about seven years, DeShazer said, "it is a good concept that is easily built, economical for the farm and capable of working."

Set Aside Isn't Needed For Farm Reserve

For the second year in a row, U.S. feed grain producers will not need to set aside acreage to be eligible for the farmer-owned reserve commodity loans and target price protection, Deputy Secretary of Agriculture Jim Williams said recently.

"Feed grain producers need only to be sure they plant within their normal crop acreage on all farms in which they have an interest to be eligible for program benefits in 1981," Williams said.

The normal crop acreage is currently under review and may be adjusted in cases where appropriate to more adequately reflect farmers' current cropping programs and the application of best farming practices, Williams said.

"With world coarse grain production likely to be down slightly from last year, domestic 1980 crop production estimated to be 18 percent lower than last year's crop and the demand for grains continuing to rise, the U.S. Department of Agriculture expects a drawdown in stocks and higher prices.

"The provisions of the 1981 feed grain program will allow U.S. farmers to respond to domestic and world market requirements but still provide them with price and income protection," Williams said.

He said producers should remember the importance of good farming practices as they plan for 1981, and he recommends against bringing fragile lands into production. "Farmers who plant these lands in 1981 will not have this acreage added to their farms' normal crop acreage in subsequent years," Williams said.

Williams said the loan price will be at least $2.25 for corn and other feed grain loan prices would be based upon a feed value relationship to corn.

Feed grain target prices for 1981 crops will be announced next spring but will be at least equal to the 1980 levels of $2.35 per bushel for corn; $2.50 per bushel for sorghum and $2.55 per bushel for barley.

To qualify for full target price protection, farmers cannot plant more corn, sorghum or barley in 1981 than was considered planted in these crops this year. Farmers who exceed this acreage will be subject to an allocation factor that can reduce their target price payment, if any, by up to 20 percent.

National program acreages of 90.1 million acres for corn, 15.4 million acres for sorghum and 9.7 million acres for barley were also announced today. The national program acreage is the number of acres for each crop needed to be planted to meet projected domestic and export requirements, as well as provide for an adequate carryover.

WAYNE EDUCATION ASSOCIATION

Joyce Mitchell's seventh grade English classes concluded their reading of "Cheaper by the Dozen" last week with a trip to the county museum.

There, Mrs. Clifford Johnson and Mrs. Ivan Frese conducted the students on a tour, pointing out items that coincided with the time period of the book (1914-1924).

Students played the pump organ, listened to old music on the Victrola and asked many questions. Mrs. Frese showed them magazines from the '20's. Students were fascinated by the prices listed in the advertisements and by the fact that these magazines are still being published. Mrs. Johnson related local history to the students, many times tying information in to individual student's families.

Clothing on the mannequins fit their study exactly and they were treated to wedding clothes worn during the '20's — some were even fashioned in France! The students also viewed clothes of the '20's "in person" as two college girls — Corrine George and Pam Albracht — arrived hourly to model fashions of those times.
