In some areas, the frost level has dropped to 18 inches as spring seems to be making an early arrival.

'Consolidation' Hearing Rescheduled For Later

Public hearing on a state bill that, if approved in its present form, would consolidate scores of Class I school districts, has been rescheduled.

ORIGINALLY SET for 1:30 p.m. Tuesday, March 3, the hearing on LB 319 has been rescheduled for 7:30 p.m. that same day.

Hundreds of Nebraskans whose children attend Class I (K-8) schools and persons otherwise affected are expected to attend the hearing. Protest meetings were scheduled all over the state last week with the hope of generating opposition to LB 319.

TWO MEETINGS were held in Wayne County last week. The bill currently is being discussed by the Education Committee and opponents of the proposal hope to prevent it from reaching the Unicameral floor for debate.

The bill, in its present form, would merge all Class I school districts with existing Class II, III, IV or V districts unless the Class I districts are merged with a Class IV district by Sept. 1 of this year.

PETITIONS ARE being circulated throughout the state in protest of the bill. In addition, patrons are being asked to mail letters of protest to each of the eight committee members, Gov. Charles Thone and District 17 Sen. Merle Von Minden.

The letters should "tell in your own words your resentment and disgust for the manner in which the majority of the members of the Education Committee has given an endorsement to LB 319, even before it had a public hearing."

In part, the petition states that "we totally reject and resent the false claim being made by some that the residents of small schools, whether rural or town, are only interested in maintaining their Class I school districts as tax havens and are not supporting quality education."

THE PETITION went on to say that "we brand as false the premise and theory that 'bigger is better.' We believe that the students from the rural schools have a demonstrated and enviable record of scholastic attainment and success after they leave our small schools. That is a record of which we are proud."

It also said that "we vehemently protest the loss of local control which will occur, and the increased intrusion and meddling in our daily lives and the accompanying disruptions of home life that will result should LB 319 become law."

If the salesman fails to comply with these rules, then the buyer may be able to void any signed contract.

DALEY ALSO pointed out that each contract must contain a "buyers right to cancel" clause. This allows the buyer to void the contract by midnight of the third business day after the contract is signed. However, he added, the goods purchased must be kept in good condition for up to a 20-day period before the seller reclaims them.

Once the seller has been notified that the contract has been cancelled, the money must be sent back to the consumer within 10 days. If the money is not returned, the consumer has a legal right to take the seller to small claims court. If the amount is less than $1,000, amounts of more than $1,000 are nor-

Police Department Salaries Low

The Wayne Police Department is hoping the City Council takes appropriate action before attrition strikes the police force and dispatchers.

BASED ON A survey of 18 other Class A communities, the salaries paid to Wayne police officers are well below average. And Police Chief Vern Fairchild believes it is a matter of time before the department begins losing officers to other police departments or other jobs.

In his annual report to the Council last month, Fairchild said "department morale has dropped to an all-time low. I'm very proud of the fact that we have such dedicated employees, but dedication does not put food on the table."

The police chief cited a survey by the Lexington Police Department which found the Wayne department to be more than $100 per month lower in salary than the average of the other cities contacted.

"PATROL EFFECTIVENESS has certainly suffered on both the day and night shifts. As the city continues to expand in both area and population, this loss will become even more apparent," he said in his yearly report. "If we are to maintain a well-trained, dedicated and efficient department, steps must be taken in the very near future to correct these problem areas over which the Police Department has no actual control."

In a brief interview Friday, Fairchild said "I suppose it's a matter of priorities," referring to his department realizing an actual decrease in its budget for the current fiscal year. Long-term effects of the low salaries and low morale depend on the Council, the chief said. "I don't know how long it will be until the turnover (in the department) begins," he said.

ACCORDING TO the Lexington survey, Wayne salaries are well behind the average salaries of other cities in three areas — sergeant starting salaries, patrolman starting salaries and dispatcher starting salaries.

For example, the starting salary for a sergeant in the Wayne Police Department is $1,002 per month. The average of the Class A cities contacted was $1,127, a difference of $125 per month or $1,500 per year. The starting salary for a patrolman in Wayne is $780 per month and compares to an average of $970 each month elsewhere. This is a difference of $190 per month or $2,280 a year. The starting salary for a dispatcher in Wayne is $547 a month compared to the average of $657 a month elsewhere. This is a difference of $110 a month or $1,320 a year, according to the survey.

I'VE HEARD THE argument many times that there are a lot of people in Wayne that would like to earn as much as the Police Department. That may be true, but I have not seen them standing in line to apply whenever we have an opening," he told the Council in his year-end report last month.

But despite the downfall in salaries, Wayne appears to be on an equal footing with other communities when it comes to benefits.

For example, Wayne provides nine paid holidays for its officers. There are nine other communities that provide an equal number of paid holidays, but none with more than that.

ALSO, WAYNE has a dispatcher trained in the operation of a teletype while 11 communities do not. Wayne pays 100 percent of health and accident insurance for its officers and dispatchers and their families and all of the uniforms are furnished by the city. In fact, Wayne is one of only four communities that pays for cleaning of the uniforms.

But Fairchild continues to argue that his officers and dispatchers are "grossly underpaid. There's no doubt about it."

The salary discrepancy has appeared only in the last three or four years he said, while prior to that Wayne was keeping pace with other communities in the Class A bracket. "Other communities apparently have compensated for the cost of living better than we have," he said.

WHILE THE cost of living over the past few years has increased at about 15 percent annually, Fairchild noted that salaries here have only improved by about 5 or 6 percent each year.

"I realize they (the Council) are in a hard position since they are saddled with the 7 percent lid," the chief sympathized. "But while we (the police department) were saddled with a cut in our budget, I don't know of any others that were."

In his annual statement, the Police Chief said "without a doubt, the greatest disappointment to me this past year, and the one leading itself to an ever-increasing lack of employee morale, has been the budget restrictions placed on our department."

THE BUDGET cutbacks referred to by Chief Fairchild are the result of the 7 percent lid bill, he says. After several budget cutting sessions with the former city administrator last fall, Fairchild says his department's budget ended with an actual decrease of 6.6 percent from the previous year.

"The only possible way to make the cut was to lay off an officer which we did effective July 31," his report states. "The loss of that officer, although probably not yet noticed by the general public, has certainly been felt in the department, resulting in increased work loads and tighter scheduling."

FAIRCHILD SAID when he asked to hold the department's budget requests under the 7 percent lid limit, he submitted the budget, asking for only a 6 1/2 percent hike. After even further cuts at the recommendation of the city administrator, Fairchild explained, a decrease in the budget of 1 1/2 percent resulted. Finally, as noted earlier, the budget was cut even further, resulting in the decrease of 6 1/2 percent.

The chief said the decline in police operations is "the first overall reduction since before 1963," he said.

"Good law enforcement and the administration of criminal justice are social problems and must be the concern of the entire community," the chief said. "While the police represent the most visible arm of criminal justice, we are only a small part of the program and cannot operate effectively without the support and involvement of every member of the community," he said.

Nebraska 15 Construction Nearer

Weather permitting, reconstruction of Nebraska 15 from near Wayne State College north to the Concord intersection will get underway by mid-March.

OFFICIALS OF the local office of the Nebraska State Highway Department said Friday that the prime contractor for the project hopes to move equipment into the area early in March.

Earl Echtenkamp, highway project manager here, said work will begin on this end of the 10-mile section of highway. Culvert work will be completed first, with grading and resurfacing to follow.

Project cost, from culvert work through the asphaltic resurfacing, is estimated at $2.27 million. In addition, Echtenkamp said, bids will be let next fall for guardrail construction and seeding. The total project, after all work is completed, will run a little more than $2.3 million.

THE FEDERAL share of the project will be about 75 percent with the state picking up the rest. The city of Wayne will pay only a few thousand dollars for its share of reconstructing the culvert just north of 14th Street.

About 54 culverts are scheduled for replacement or reconstruction. Contractor for the culverts is Midwest Bridge Company of Norfolk. Estimated cost of culvert work is $296,000.

After the first phase has been completed, grading will be done from about 14th Street (entrance to Rice Auditorium at WSC) to the north edge of the city limits, also the north edge of the Municipal Golf Course.

FROM THAT point north to just past the Concord intersection, Nebraska 15 will be graded and widened. Currently, the highway averages about 22 feet wide and will be widened to 28 feet from the golf course north.

An agreement between the Golf Course board of directors and the Highway Department last year prevented significant widening of Nebraska 15 from the north edge of the golf course into Wayne. It will be widened only about two feet to make the shoulders contiguous and will not infringe on golf course property.

Contractor for the grading is Niderjergensen Construction Co. of Omaha. Estimated cost of this phase of the project is $471,000.

ONCE THE grading and widening are completed, a six-inch base of recycled asphalt will be applied from the city limits north to the end of the project. Echtenkamp said the project is one of the first in the state to use the recycled material. Existing asphalt will be pulled up, ground up and mixed with new material, saving both money and energy, the project manager explained.

After the recycled base is applied, a 1/2-inch top layer of high quality Type B asphalt will be applied, bringing the total asphalt depth to eight inches.

From the city limits south to about the entrance to WSC at 14th Street, a three-inch layer will be applied.

CONTRACTOR FOR the asphalt is Niderjergensen of Omaha. Project cost is $1.3 million and includes the Concord Intersection and driveways.

In addition to all of this, a new concrete deck bridge will replace the existing bridge over Dog Creek just south of Fredrickson Oil Co. Contractor for this is Godbersen-Smith Construction Company of Ida Grove, Iowa. Estimated project cost is $160,000.

The highway, which has not had extensive work for some 40 years, will receive an entire face lift. Based on current projections,

THIS OLD, BATTERED AND beaten road will receive an entire facelift this summer, according to a local Highway Department spokesman. Nebraska 15 from 14th Street at Wayne State College to north of the Concord intersection (about 10 miles) will be regraded and resurfaced for the first time in 40 years. Work should begin in a few weeks and will start about where 14th Street is (at right), or where the existing asphalt stops and the brick street begins. Through traffic will be rerouted west and then north and east again. While local traffic will be allowed to travel to their residences and farms,

Legal Aid Attorney Provides WSC Students With Hints

The ins and outs of contracts, consumer rights and door-to-door salesmen were provided by Legal Aid Society attorney Frank Daley at Tuesday afternoon's (Feb. 17) weekly consumer education lecture at Wayne State College.

DALEY OUTLINED legal problems associated with two business transactions which he feels are most common, particularly among lower income residents: door-to-door salesmen and buying a new or used vehicle.

The Legal Aid Society attorney told the class, which is open weekly to the public, that a 1916 court ruling allowed consumers to have direct legal access to manufacturers of goods. Prior to that, he explained, consumers only had legal recourse against the seller of the goods.

Regarding door-to-door salesmen, Daley said Nebraska law obligates the peddlers to identify themselves with their proper name, to identify the types of goods and services being offered and to identify the firm that is being represented.

If the salesman fails to comply with these rules, then the buyer may be able to void any signed contract.

DALEY ALSO pointed out that each contract must contain a "buyers right to cancel" clause. This allows the buyer to void the contract by midnight of the third business day after the contract is signed. However, he added, the goods purchased must be kept in good condition for up to a 20-day period before the seller reclaims them.

Once the seller has been notified that the contract has been cancelled, the money must be sent back to the consumer within 10 days. If the money is not returned, the consumer has a legal right to take the seller to small claims court. If the amount is less than $1,000, amounts of more than $1,000 are normally handled in civil court and with the aid of an attorney.

The consumer has a right to reclaim the amount of money initially expended, plus the cost of going to court, plus attorney fees plus potential damages such as a lost day's wages.

DALEY ADDED that the goods must be picked up by the seller within 20 days or they become the property of the consumer.

Buying a new or used vehicle can be complicated for two reasons, the attorney explained.

One, a vehicle is a complicated piece of machinery and two, there are problems with obtaining credit.

When buying anything, he said, there are two types of warranties involved: express warranties and implied warranties.

Express warranties are those supported by any pictures, models, samples or statements which are used to induce the customer to buy the product. If the product purchased is different from any of these, then there has been a breach of warranty.

Implied warranties are not stated. However, from these types of warranties, it can be assumed that the merchandise purchased will do the things it is supposed to do and a product is fit for a particular purpose as implied by the seller.

WHEN ACQUIRING credit, Daley advised the group to beware of potential problems with contracts. Each contract should contain the following information, according to him:

The total amount of the loan, the amount of each payment that is to be made, the number of payments that is to be made, the amount that is being paid for insurance in case the buyer can no longer make payments, service charges, finance charges, when payments are to be made, a statement as to what happens if a payment is made late or is not made at all and the amount of interest being charged.

Daley said that Nebraskans have the right not to pay for insurance guaranteeing continued installment payments if the buyer is unable.

The attorney said his best advice to persons borrowing money is to make sure the contract is well understood and to get a copy of the contract.

WHEN BUYING on credit, Daley said the consumer should make the largest down payment possible, should pay off what is owed as soon as possible, should shop around for credit and should pay the bills when they are due.

Also, he suggested, consumers should not borrow money if at all possible; should buy only what is needed and should avoid buying anything if making the payments will be difficult.

Regarding the purchase of a vehicle, the consumer should make certain the contract contains the following information:

The price of the merchandise, the trade-in allowance (if there is any), the finance charge (if there is any), insurance costs (which need not be paid), service charges, the total amount that must be paid to the dealer, the amount of the downpayment, the total amount owed after the down payment and the trade-in and any other agreements between the buyer and seller.

THE LEGAL AID attorney said consumers should read the contracts and make certain there are no blank spaces that could be filled in later by the seller.

No matter how careful consumers are, however, disputes can arise. If they do, then Daley suggests the following procedure be undertaken:

Contact the person who sold the merchandise and explain the problem. If that fails, contact the manufacturer, then contact the Better Business Bureau or similar organization and, ultimately, if no satisfaction is obtained, take the buyer to small claims court.

Nebraska 15 Construction Near political problems. The plan to widen Nebraska 15 to the north edge of 14th Street brought considerable protest from local golfers. The linksmen claimed the new shoulders would cause undue ecological damage to existing golf course trees and would result in drainage problems.

After numerous meetings, phone calls and negotiations, it was agreed that the highway within the city would remain basically the existing width.

DUE TO THE rapidly rising cost of asphalt, it is in the best financial interests of the contractor to get the work done as soon as possible, Echtenkamp explained. In addition, area residents will not have to fight the construction mess during the winter months of 1981-82.

Echtenkamp reiterated that the Concord intersection is included in the project. The new surfacing will end just south of the bridge north of the Concord turn off. Unfortunately, he said, the entire road will "for all practical purposes" be closed during the entire project. Because of this, thru traffic will be re-routed. However, local traffic will be allowed to negotiate the under construction road to gain entrance to homes along the highway.

WARNING SIGNS will be placed at Seventh and Main Streets (Nebraska 15 and U.S. 35) alerting motorists to the detour which will be as follows:

Vehicles will be routed west from the intersection of highways 35 and 15 to the junction of highways 98 and 57 south of Carroll. Traffic then will move north on highway 57 to the junction of highways 20 and 57 near Belden. From there, traffic will be headed east on U.S. 20 to Nebraska 15 near Laurel.

The construction will be in convenience to area motorists and thru traffic, but the wait is expected to be worth it, officials have stated. The project was first placed on the drawing board in 1968 and for various reasons has taken some 13 years to reach reality.

Business Needs No New Enemies

Richard L. Leshner, President
Chamber of Commerce of the United States

There is no longer any disagreement that America's economic problems are deeply imbedded, that they will not be cured overnight and that we all share the responsibility of promoting an extended recovery.

Nor should anyone be surprised that we who represent business in Washington have been working to change the tax code, because we are convinced taxes must be cut to promote long-term capital formation by encouraging savings and investment.

What might surprise you, however, is that many businesses themselves might not be taking full advantage of the current tax laws. Indeed, it seems ironic that while we are trying hard to get businesses a tax cut, there is a possibility some firms have been unwilling to give themselves a tax cut. In effect, thousands of firms continue to use a method of inventory accounting which, because of inflation, obliges them to pay as extra taxes funds which might be used for expansion, capital replacement or dividends. The stakes can be big.

Indeed, certain firms which have switched their accounting procedures have realized billions of dollars in tax savings. For example, Reginald H. Jones, chairman of General Electric, estimates his corporation alone has saved roughly $1 billion in taxes.

The most common method of inventory accounting on income statements which raises business taxes is called FIFO, while the method which lowers them is called LIFO. One essential difference between the two is that the FIFO method fails to adjust inventory costs for inflation. Thus, when these unadjusted, or lower, costs are subtracted from earnings during a period of rising prices, the earnings will remain artificially high and the firm will face a higher tax bill than it would have under LIFO.

Why do so many companies stick with FIFO? Some people believe the firms are merely trying to impress their shareholders with their ability to maintain high earnings despite worsening inflation. Personally, I am skeptical of this explanation, and those who follow corporate America from Wall Street have some of the best analytical minds in the country. Reginald Jones believes the reason may be that most top executive contracts are tied to reported earnings which leads business leaders to be overly concerned with short-term profitability.

Nevertheless, there do seem to be legitimate reasons for not switching inventory methods. First, to make the switch in most instances a firm must obtain a ruling from the IRS, which can be difficult. In the case of small business, many firms simply cannot afford the accounting costs of adopting the LIFO procedure. Then too, even for larger firms the administrative costs of switching to LIFO may actually outweigh the newly-realized tax savings.

One point we should all remember is that the real culprit here is not a particular accounting method, but inflation itself. So aside from adopting credible policies that will attack inflation in a sustained and meaningful way, Congress should also reexamine the regulations and tax laws that impede firms from adjusting their inventory costs for inflation.

For their part, business leaders should reexamine their own inventory accounting procedures to be sure their firms do not suffer from a fixation on short-term earnings. At the very time our economy is plagued by a critical shortage of investment capital and a real decline in profits, the last thing the business community should do is to encourage an already cynical public into believing its earnings are much greater than they really are. That will only strengthen the hand of economic illiterates who scream about "obscene profits" and who demand more government regulations.

We have enough problems now without adding to our burdens. Let's not have it be said that we have finally met the enemy, and he is us.

VANDALISM hit the First National Bank of Lyons Sunday evening, Feb. 15. A shotgun blast aimed at the bank's outside entrance glass plate door left a hole approximately 12 inches wide. It also struck the facility's inside door leading to the bank lobby. There was no evidence of any attempted entry. Chief of police Gregg Webb stated that a 12 gauge shotgun loaded with four buckshot was used in the crime. The bank is offering a $500 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the vandal responsible.

Agriculture Can Set Example

NEBRASKA FARM BUREAU FEDERATION
By M.M. Van Kirk,
Director of Information

Because their production expenses have consistently outrun their cash receipts from farm marketings and government payments, Nebraska farmers and ranchers have a great stake in President Reagan's all-out effort to persuade Congress and the American people to bring inflation under control.

The President's assertion that the nation's economy is in the worst mess it has been in since the Great Depression is not an exaggeration, even though the economic ills of the nation and the individual farmer and rancher are much different today than they were in 1933. One thing is the same, agriculture cannot prosper if the rest of the economy is in chaos and adversity. As Americans we are all in this together.

Unemployed auto workers in Detroit and the steel plant workers in Pittsburgh are not buying choice and prime cuts of beef and pork and won't be until they are rehired and their industry is again prospering. Workers in Japanese and West German auto plants won't buy enough U.S. farm product commodities to make up the difference and it's time all Americans recognize that fact. Some old-fashioned American product loyalty, accompanied by productivity sense and compromise on the part of American management and labor, could put this nation back on its feet within a couple of years.

The only reason U.S. agriculture is in good shape as it is, and it has many things wrong with it, is that so far it has not priced itself out of the domestic and world market as has much of the rest of U.S. industry. The big difference between the economic mess of 1981 and that of 1933, is that the market is still here and the recovery effort has something to work with. People are still buying, even though it may be foreign made cars, TVs, sets, shoes, etc. In 1933, the problem was deflation rather than inflation. Most people had money only for necessities of food and clothing, not cars and luxuries.

Farmers and ranchers who had lost their assets to bank closings and low farm prices, turned to the government for "feed and seed" loans to put in another crop. There were no jobs waiting for them in the cities, only bread lines. Those who lived on Nebraska farms and ranches in those days will recall parents saying, "At least we have a roof over our heads, and our own meat, eggs, milk and garden. We're going to eat if nothing else."

The plight of 1981's farmers and ranchers is the same as that of the average wage-earner and consumer who doesn't have some special way of coping with inflation. The output is more than the income. In 1969, Nebraska farmers and ranchers had $2.1 billion in income from cash receipts from farm marketings and government payments. Their production expenses that year were $1.6 billion. By 1978, their gross income was nearly 2 1/2 times greater at $5 billion. The catch was that their production expenses were 2.8 times greater at $4.5 billion. They had about the same amount of money left at the end of the year and it wouldn't buy nearly as much as it would in 1969.

In one single year, 1978 to 1979, the production expenses of U.S. farmers rose 18 percent, from $114 billion in 1978 to $135 billion in 1979, and although the figures are not all in for 1980, one may be sure last year was just as bad. The economic patient is bleeding to death while the political doctors have been prescribing nothing but transfusions.

What can the people in American agriculture do to help bring the nation's economy back into balance? Keep on producing, just as they always have. Trim out unnecessary expenditures and make do with less, just as their parents and grandparents did before them. And they can support those in government and industry willing and eager to root out the waste and fuzzy thinking that created this situation.

Our annual bake sale was again successful because of their help. Providing free advertising were The Wayne Herald, KTCB and First Savings Company. People's Natural Gas not only provided us with a place to hold the bake sale, but the tables and chairs were set up and ready for use.
These businesses typify the generous, cooperative spirit of our community. To all who helped in any way - thank you!

Feb. 16, 1981

Dear Editor:
Referring to Superintendent Hahn's letter in today's (Feb. 16) issue of The Herald in regard to the age of the Carroll school building, which he says is 72 years old.
I beg to differ with him on that statement, for the reason that the building is 67 years old, not that five years makes much difference in the age of a building, but to get the record straight.
I was born in 1900, and moved to Carroll with my parents in 1912, entered school there at that time and went to school in the old school building.
A contract was let to a firm from Red Oak,

Iowa, to build a new school house in Carroll. They were progressing along nicely and they had a job to be filled that any kid could handle nicely.
As the building progressed and kept getting higher, naturally the materials had to be hoisted higher to the workmen.
In those days they did not have the equipment that they have today to handle such jobs.
So their method was to extend a beam out beyond the edge of the building at the height they were working, attach a pulley to this beam and run a rope through it, down to the ground level, then a horse was used to pull the material up to the workmen, the material being bricks, mortar and roofing material as well as the date stone, which is dated 1914.
The job looked good to me so I took a leave from my schooling for a short time and took the job of leading this horse so as to earn a little spending money.
I can well remember the day in 1914 that I led the horse and pulled the date stone up to the workmen on the roof.
That date is there for anyone to see.
I can truthfully say that I helped to build that school house and then went to school in it.
Begging Mr. Hahn's pardon, but 1914 from 1981 is 67 years, not 72.

Respectfully yours
Perry Jarvis

A couple of items in the mail this week provide a good opportunity to review our Letter to the Editor policy.

In effect, the policy says letters must be signed in order to be printed, but names will not be printed if the writer so desires. The idea is to protect those individuals whose jobs or safety might be jeopardized if their names are published.

Then along comes a letter addressed to "Action Editor" of the Wayne Herald. The letter alleges that some residents of Wayne have lived here for more than a year, yet have failed to acquire Nebraska plates.

The only problem with the letter — which raises a valid point — is that it was unsigned. A pseudonym of a "Concerned Citizen and Taxpayer" was attached, but no actual signature.

I have long felt that persons with an opinion, a question, a problem, etc., should have the integrity to sign their names and have their names printed. Comments which have appeared in this column over the past 18 months have been far more brazen than most letters and my name has always been attached. I have no shame about which I speak, and I believe our readers should share my convictions.

But our Letter to the Editor policy does protect those persons, as mentioned earlier, whose jobs, safety or property might otherwise be jeopardized. For example, let's say an employee of the city feels a certain municipal policy is grossly unjust. By informing the public, he has done his civic duty. But also by signing his name he has taken the chance of losing his job, or at the least, of being harassed.

However, now comes a notice to publishers and editors that withholding a name by request could and has led to a libel suit against a newspaper. In the particular instance cited, the letter to the editor criticized a clerk-treasurer in a nearby town.

Attorneys for the clerk-treasurer demanded the name of the letter writer, and the newspaper refused. Some Letters to the Editor policies indicate the name will be withheld even if the letter involves a personal attack, which this one did.

So what happened was this: the newspaper suddenly became the subject of a libel suit and faced a court order requiring the newspaper to produce the name of the letter's author.

The paper could have asked the court to reconsider its action and could have taken the position that the author's name is protected by that particular state's "shield" law which allows newspapers to refuse to divulge a "source of information." Whether the law affords such a protection is undecided (one out-of-state publisher claimed the law's protection is a grand jury proceeding some years ago, and it was allowed, but that is not precedent binding on any other court.)

According to the information we received, if the court allowed the claim of privilege, the probable results would have been:

- 1 — the newspaper still would be left alone as a defendant in the libel suit when it really wasn't the plaintiff's target;
- 2 — the court, as other courts have done in non-disclosure of sources cases, could have applied certain penalties to the newspaper in the libel action. Since a public official plaintiff was involved and the "New York Times" libel rule applied, it could have ruled either (a) that no letter writer existed, so that the newspaper would have to take full responsibility for the letter as if it had written it itself, or (b) even worse, that the letter writer would be considered an unreliable source.

If the court disallowed the claim of privilege and the newspaper still refused to comply with the order to produce (the name), it would face the distinct possibility of a contempt citation, in addition to court-imposed penalties in the libel action.

Faced with these alternatives, the newspaper decided to comply with the court order and produced the letter writer's name. After it did, the official's attorney proceeded against the letter writer and dismissed the newspaper as a party.

But in doing so, it left its letter policy up in the air and more importantly, left future letter writers unprotected. From that point forward, everyone in that community who considered writing a letter to the editor was hesitant because of the breach of the freedom of expression.

It is clear to me there is a continuing trend among courts to take away the public's right to know by requiring sources to be revealed. There have been countless times letter writers to The Herald have asked, and I have guaranteed, that their names not be released.

But the above-mentioned court case raises serious questions about the effectiveness of such guarantees. It appears that I can no longer guarantee that a name will not be revealed. That is an unfortunate affront to guarantees of the First Amendment.

We have received a few letters which were personal attacks on other individuals. Because of problems with potential libel, we have edited the letters with the express knowledge of the letter writer. In one or two cases, the letters were withdrawn.

Regional Arts Council Calendar Contains Long List of Activities

The Board of Directors of the Wayne Regional Arts Council (WRAC) met recently to discuss several activities scheduled throughout the remainder of the year.

Discussions included plans for the annual Springs Arts Festival, upcoming workshops, and community choir.

Mrs. Jane O'Leary, a spokesman for the Arts Council, said this year's Spring Arts Festival will be held May 2. As in the past, craftsmen, painters, photographers, musicians, poets, and all other artists in the region will be invited to display and/or sell their art works or perform for the public.

Mrs. O'Leary said there will be no charge to exhibitors (organizations or individuals) from within a 40-mile radius of Wayne.

Persons who would like to participate in the Arts Festival are asked to call Pearl Hansen, 375-3507.

The WRAC also is sponsoring four arts workshops, three to be held in Wayne and one in Laurel. The workshop in Laurel (date to be announced) will focus on drawing techniques and will be taught by Tricia Goddard of Laurel.

In Wayne, Diane Dirks will conduct a workshop in oil painting techniques beginning the first week in March. Other workshops in Wayne include a beginning guitar class taught by Dr. Chris Bonds, starting March 19, and a class in intermediate photography to be held in April. The photography class will be taught by Dennis Linster.

Cost for all four workshops, each of which will meet for five sessions, is $20 for WRAC members or $30 for non-members.

For further information about the workshops, contact Jane O'Leary in Wayne, 375-2335, or Ellice McBride in Laurel, 256-3101.

The Arts Council directors also voted to continue support of the community choir. The choir is under the direction of Bonnie Stefken and meets at 7:30 each Tuesday night at Redeemer Lutheran Church.

The choir is open to anyone in the region who enjoys singing. New or returning members are urged to attend rehearsals at their earliest convenience.

The group also discussed sponsoring two art shows. Tentative plans were made to hold a one-man show by local artist Ted Blenderman in March.

A painting show, originally scheduled in February, is planned this summer. Local artists, both amateur and professional, will be encouraged to enter their works in the painting show. Entries will be judged and may be displayed for sale.

Other items discussed were a Children's Art Week and a show of arts and crafts, "strictly for fun," to be held in June.

The WRAC also is in the process of confirming the date for the Pied Pipers, a family entertainment company from the Nebraska Arts Council Touring Program. They have been contracted by the WRAC to appear in Wayne within the next few months.

Psychologist Suggests Ways to Enjoy the Ups, Ride the Downs

Many people grow up believing that once they reach adulthood, all the highs and lows of adolescence will be left behind and life will be pleasant and trouble free, according to Dr. Joan Dickinson of the Wayne State College psychology department.

Dickinson recently presented her lecture "Gray Hair and Pimples" at the Columbus Federal Building in Wayne as part of the Spectrum program sponsored by the Wayne State College Extended Campus Office.

Dickinson said people have to leave the big myth of "adult togetherness" behind and realize that all of life is a series of ups and downs. Once that is accepted they can learn to deal with life on a realistic basis, enjoying the ups and riding out the downs.

People learn the adult togetherness myth from several sources, Dickinson explained. Fairy tales, parental messages and TV shows and commercials teach such allusions as "love conquers all," "life should be fair" and "goodness will be rewarded."

There is no one truth that will work for a person, only a lot of little truths that make up life and help us deal with it," Dickinson said. She listed the little truths as change, stress, love, work, children, friendship and self.

Dickinson said people should find meaning and purpose in their lives daily, and gave three ways that can be done: 1) giving to the world, 2) taking from the world (experiences, travel) and 3) choosing the attitude held towards suffering.

"If you don't have any valleys, you're not going to have any peaks," she explained.

The final Spectrum program, "Been There and Back," rescheduled from January, will be held Wednesday, Feb. 25. According to Dr. Cheryl Beamer, director of extended campus, there will be a needs assessment at this presentation.

The Spectrum series began in January and is designed to bring women together to share common problems, ideas and information, and develop a fuller personal awareness.

This Wednesday's session will run from noon to 1 p.m. in the Col umbus Federal community room and is open to the public. Guests are to bring their own lunch.

Mrs. Beamer said the extended campus is planning to rerun the Spectrum series in the fall and is interested in hearing what topics people would like discussed.

"If people have any comments they can call the extended campus office," Beamer added.

Nitrate Concerns Expressed

Why are children, nursing mothers and pregnant women cautioned to avoid high nitrate water?

We seem to know quite a little about where in Nebraska excessive amounts of soluble nitrate nitrogen are accumulating and why they got there — but how can excess nitrate affect us and what can we do about it?

In A recent publication by the University of Nebraska, entitled "Living With Nitrate," Dr. Constance Keis, Professor in the Department of Human Nutrition, explains that "nitrates are widespread in food products and sometimes in water, but are relatively harmless as such to humans. However, nitrates can be reduced to nitrites in food either before being consumed or within the human body. High levels of nitrites can cause a blood abnormality known as methemoglobinemia. Nitrates also can react with various nitrogen compounds to form potentially cancer causing compounds."

I can't pronounce methemoglobinem, but I am concerned about what it is and who's most affected by it. In methemoglobinemia, the blood lacks the ability to carry sufficient oxygen to individual cells of the body. It happens when nitrates react with the hemoglobin in red blood cells.

MOST ADULTS have the ability in their systems to counteract this abnormality, however, young infants have only incomplete enzyme systems and cannot fight back. This may also happen to older individuals who have impaired enzyme systems.

The question of the degree of risk for pregnant women and nursing mothers consuming high nitrate water is unknown. But since most parents do not want to assume unknown risks for their children, these women are generally included on lists of individuals who should avoid high nitrate water.

AS KIES mentions above, nitrates can be transformed into various nitrogen compounds which have been shown to be carcinogens. Their importance in human cancer has not been fully defined, however.

In animal studies designed to determine whether or not a substance can cause cancer, proportionally much higher levels of the test substance are fed than are realistically found in human diets. While this technique is very useful and is scientifically sound, it sometimes causes another problem, that of over concern.

WATER is consumed more frequently and in larger amounts than is any other food. For this reason, an elevation in the nitrate content of the water supply is a concern.

Nitrate can be removed from drinking water by three methods: distillation, reverse osmosis, and deionization. These methods are relatively expensive, however, so the need for nitrate removal should be definitely established before investing in equipment.

The decision to purchase equipment or to use exclusively bottled water should not be based on field test for nitrate in water supply. It should be based on an analysis by a reputable laboratory like the State Health Department.

THOSE with concern about nitrate intake should also know that some foods (like radishes and fresh beets) are naturally higher in nitrate content than others and that cured meats have nitrates added to them. One might want to cut down on eating high nitrate foods if their water supply is questionable to minimize overall consumption.

HOW FOOD is cared for in the home also affects the transformation of nitrates to nitrites. Microbiological action at room temperatures change nitrates to nitrites when fresh vegetables are allowed to stand on the porch or in the kitchen for extended periods of time. Quickly processing produce following harvest will minimize microbial action.

Nebraskans who are concerned about nitrate problems should be assured that state and university personnel are available to provide assistance and information.

Winside wrestlers win at state meet in early action

When the mats were cleared late Friday night after the second full day of state wrestling action, Winside Coach Paul Sok left the Bob Devaney Sports Center in Lincoln with a smile on his face.

With one day of action remaining, the Wildcats were content, sitting in third place of the Class D standings.

Wakefield Coach Lyle Trullinger had nothing to celebrate. All but one of the six wrestlers representing those two schools had been eliminated in Thursday's first round. And the other was knocked out in a consolation first-round match on Friday.

Three Winside wrestlers clinched medals entering the final day of competition Saturday. Berry Bowers was scheduled to wrestle for third place while Brian Foote and Mark Koch had sights set on gold medals. For Foote, it would be a second consecutive state championship in, an undefeated season.

At the end of Friday's consolation semi-finals, Winside trailed only Hyannis and Weeping Water. Hyannis had the Class D title already in hand.

Foote at 126 pounds and Koch at 119 each won three matches to set up Saturday's finals. Bowers won his first two matches at 167 pounds before losing in the semi-finals. He then battled back to win one match in the loser's bracket.

"We hope to stay in third place," Sok said after Friday's action. "Each point is looking important now. Six of our seven wrestlers scored and five won at least two matches."

Mark (Koch) is wrestling real well and has a good shot at the title. Brian (Foote) had an excellent match and we expect him to repeat," Sok said. "We thought Berry (Bowers) had a shot at the finals and if he had not been in the tough bracket, he might have made it. I'm super happy with him. He's done a heck of a job."

Curt (Rohde) and Doug (Jaeger) came through for us. And Kent (Glassmeyer) scored seven big points with two pins," the coach said. "Take away some of the points those wrestlers scored and we would be in the bottom half of the top 10."

Four of Winside's seven qualifiers did not win medals. Freshman John Thies lost twice at 98 pounds, Rohde won two and lost two at 105. Jaeger won one and lost two at 132 and Glassmeyer won two and lost two in the heavyweight division.

Wakefield and Wayne found going considerably tougher in Class C and Class B respectively.

Wakefield brothers Dave and Jon Stelling lost their first round matches at 105 pounds and 112 pounds respectively. Had their opponents won their next matches, the Stelling would have wrestled again. However, both opponents lost.

Class B competition was especially tough and Wayne's wrestlers had no luck. The combined records of the Blue Devils' first round foes totaled 92 wins and 13 losses.

All four Wayne wrestlers lost in the first round. Then three of the four successful opponents lost second-round matches, thus eliminating all but one Wayne wrestler.

Wayne's Brett Frevert got a second chance at 167 pounds but lost his consolation match.

After Friday's action, team leaders were Columbus in Class A, Alliance in Class B, North Platte St. Patrick in Class C and Hyannis in Class D.

More wrestling details and pictures will be in Thursday's Wayne Herald.

THE WAYNE BLUE DEVILS had a tough go of it at the state wrestling tournament Thursday at the Bob Devaney Sports Complex in Lincoln Thursday, Friday and Saturday. All of the local wrestlers were eliminated from competition Thursday. Above, Blue Devils Jon Jacobmeyer and (below) Mike Luff wrestle in their respective weight classes, but failed to advance. More pictures and information will be in Thursday's Wayne Herald.

Fourth quarter turnovers cost Wakefield

Fourth quarter turnovers were costly to Wakefield in basketball action Friday night as they lost to Ponca 56-46. Wakefield looks ahead to their Monday game against Winnebago at Wayne. "Our defense played well enough to win, but our offense seemed to bog down. Our main downfall came in the fourth quarter when Ponca forced our team to give up 15 key turnovers. That's where we got burnt," said Wakefield coach Ernie Kovar.

Rebounding statistics for the two teams was about even with Wakefield taking 20 and Ponca claiming 21 for the night. Jeff Hallstrom and Vaughn Nixon led Wakefield with 13 and 12 points respectively.

Ponca's Keith Curry had 18 points for the evening followed by Kevin Dohma with 12 and Paul Calvert had 10 scores.

Wakefield's junior varsity pulled out a tight win over Ponca 28-26.

Wayne wins over Pierce

Shooting 45 percent from the field proved to aid the Wayne Blue Devils to a win over Pierce Friday night. Wayne led at halftime 40-24.

"Our boys played real well most of the game. They came out in the second and third quarters and began pulling away," said Wayne coach Bill Sharpe.

Although most of the fourth quarter was played by the reserves, several Wayne players hit double figures. Tod Heier sank 30 points. Kevin Nissen had 13 and Perry Nelson put in 17.

"We played good defensive and a real good break. Offensively and defensively, I was pleased with the game," said Sharpe.

Nissen and Perry Nelson each pulled down 11 rebounds. Tim Pfeiffer grabbed eight and Tod Heier had seven rebounds for the night.

The Wayne junior varsity also won over Pierce 52-35. Todd Schwartz was the only one in double figures in that game with 24 points.

The win brings Wayne's season record to 17 wins and four losses.

Wayne Girls Felled by Schuyler

Being outscored 16 to eight in the first quarter proved to be the deciding factor against the Wayne girls as they lost a pair to Schuyler Thursday night.

"The girls played a real good three quarters but giving Schuyler that much of a lead was our downfall," said coach Becky Kelly. "We just didn't play a very good first quarter."

"Lynn Surber just played a super game and Missy Stollenberg played well on the boards and on total points too," said Kelly.

The Wayne girls pulled down 32 rebounds. Stollenberg had 11, Tammie Thomas with eight and Deb Prenger collected 6 for the Blue Devils.

Jolene Gadlca was the leading scorer for Schuyler with 16 points. Schuyler also won the junior varsity game.

Playoff Berth Hinges on Games

As the Wayne State Wildcat season draws to a close, questions are in the minds of the coaching staff as to the Wildcat future in the playoff race. The Wildcats are assured of at least a tie for the second playoff position for District 11 but their opponent is still undetermined. With Chadron State's 77-62 win over Bellevue College last Thursday night, it sets up a possible two or three way tie for the remaining playoff position.

A win by Wayne State against Chadron State would put the Wildcats into the playoffs against Hastings College. If the Wildcats would happen to lose to Chadron then the picture becomes a little more complicated. Wayne State and Chadron State would be in a tie in Nebraska College Conference play. If Bellevue College would beat Peru State at Peru on Tuesday night then there would be a three way tie for the lone playoff position between Wayne State, Chadron State and Bellevue. A two way tie would set up a playoff game on a neutral site, probably on February 26. A three way tie would give one team a bye while the other two teams have a playoff game. The winner of the first playoff game would then play the team that received the bye. The winner of that game would advance as the districts second representative from the NCC.

DATA BANK

Nebraska residents who need reliable resources information, now have an excellent source in the Natural Resources Commission's Data Bank. Farmers considering irrigation or expanding operations, county officials with zoning regulations, and cities with water supply problems can all receive help from the Data Bank.

The Data Bank was created in 1969 at the direction of the state legislature. It is a part of the Natural Resources Commission Information System, and information is stored and processed at UNL Computing Facility.

The following information is readily available in the Data Bank:

- Climatological data — daily rainfall, snowfall, temperature, evaporation, wind movement, and events
- Streamflows and peakflows
- Canal diversions, reservoir storage and drain discharges
- Surface water rights
- Registered wells — irrigation, municipal, industrial and domestic wells
- Well permits in groundwater control areas
- Stream water quality
- Quality of municipal water supplies
- Crops — acres harvested, yield and production
- Groundwater levels
- Land use data for selected counties or NRD's
- Soil interpretative maps for selected counties
- Census population data
- Dams inventory

The NRD Data Bank can provide you information in any of the following forms:

- Data Listings — Daily, monthly, or annual listings. Specific station information
- Data Summaries — By County, By Natural Resources District, By year data collected
- Data Plots — Station Locations, Well locations, Soil interpretative maps, Land use maps
- Data Processing — Statistical summaries, Hydraulic analyses, Hydrologic processing
- Data Copy — Onto magnetic tapes or computer cards

Special Requests — Based on user needs

This information is available to anyone on request from the Natural Resources Commission. The cost to you is mailing charges and computer time. For example: a list of irrigation wells in a county can cost as little as $3. The Natural Resources Commission will provide you with an estimate of cost, if you desire.

HOW'S FISHING AT MASKENTHINE?

The second year of information is now available from the Creel Survey of Maskenthine Lake north of Stanton. In 1979, 18,555 fisherman visited Maskenthine Lake. This is more than 10 times the use per surface acre that Branched Oak Lake near Lincoln receives. Eighty five percent of those fishermen are from Stanton and five surrounding counties. Using 1970 Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife cost figures, the value of this recreation was $116,890. Besides being outdated cost figures, this does not consider the value of the swimming, picnicking and hunting provided by the area.

Fishing pressure in 1980 dropped to 15,350 fishermen, with the following success:

	Number Caught	Total Weight
Northern Pike	463	1918 lb.
Channel Catfish	418	689 lb.
Largemouth Bass	573	719 lb.
Bluegill	46,148	7540 lb.
Walleye	570	1085 lb.

The creel survey is a cooperative effort of the Nebraska Game & Parks Commission and the Lower Elkhorn NRD which owns the lake. The survey serves several useful purposes:

1. Allows Game & Parks to develop the best fishery management practices possible for the area.
2. Provides good estimates of fishing pressure and total catch.
3. Determines the residency of fishermen using the area.
4. Determines what stocking rates should be for northern pike and walleye.

Fishing was a year-round affair for the more than 15,000 people who visited Maskenthine in 1980.

LANDS FOR CONSERVATION

Lower Elkhorn NRD offers payments of $40 per acre to landowners for installing terrace systems from June-August. This program is not considered cost share, and so may be used with ASCS or NRD cost share payments. During the same year, the landowner may pasture the area or harvest a small grain crop from the contract area.

The goal of the program is to increase the amount of terrace construction, by lengthening the construction season. The $40 payment compensates the landowner for removing the contract area from row crop production for one year.

In fiscal year 1981, Lower Elkhorn NRD has made payments of $47,600 to landowners under this program.

For more information or to apply for the Lands for Conservation Program, contact your local SCS office. Signups will be accepted until April 1.

TREE SUPPLIES DWINDLING

Clark-McNary tree sales to landowners are continuing, but almost 75% of the original 3,830,000 seedlings are sold. The seedlings for windbreaks, wildlife, and other purposes, went on sale November 1. Six species have now been sold out including Scotch Pine, Colorado Blue Spruce and Green Ash. However, adequate supplies of other desirable species remain for you to plant a fine windbreak if you order now. Contact local SCS offices for help with design, species selection and to arrange for planting.

PLANT TWO TREES

On November 3, 1980, Governor Thone signed a proclamation creating a program known as "Plant Two Trees." The program encourages people of Nebraska "to regenerate this renewable resource by planting 2, 200, 2,000 or 20,000 trees."

The goal of the program is to double the number of trees in Nebraska, to increase forested land from 1% to 2% of the state and to increase street trees from 100 to 200 trees per street mile.

In recent times, the tradition of the "tree planters state" has not kept pace with tree losses. In the last 20 years, Nebraska has lost 20% of its forested acres. Individuals, groups and government agencies are urged to band together to make this program a success, and to reap the benefits that trees offer.

Russ Rasmussen, chemistry instructor at WSC, accepted the award for the center for development of the humanities. Since its beginning in 1975, the center has increased membership and sponsored many programs. The founding document of the center cites "the unifying focus of the group to be its humanistic vision of man as a creative agent and reflexive subject rather than an object or commodity of study and manipulation."

Council to Consider Street Funds

The City Council will consider applying for funds for reconstruction of three portions of streets at its regular meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

FEDERAL AID to Urban System (FAUS) funds are available for certain streets in Wayne, and officials say they would like the Council to apply for the money. The federal government would provide 75 percent of the money and the city would pick up the rest of the tab. The money would be used to widen parts of Pearl and Logan Streets where they currently begin to narrow. These projects would be general obligation. In addition, about 1 1/2 blocks of Fairgrounds Avenue would be paved with the majority assessed to property owners.

CURRENTLY, Pearl and Logan Streets narrow from a width of 40 feet to just 24 feet. It is estimated the construction would be undertaken in 1982 if and when the funds become available.

In other items slated for discussion, the Council will be updated on the progress of reconstructing Nebraska 15 from Wayne north to near the Concord intersection. For more information, see story elsewhere on this page.

The Council will consider work completed on Thorman Street on the east edge of town and will set a hearing date for the levy of special assessments. Complaints regarding the assessment schedule for Hillside Drive will be heard, a request will be made by engineers for approval of work on municipal water system improvements, bids will be opened for a new street loader and a public hearing will be held at 8:15 p.m. on the rezoning of Block 6 in Sunnyview Subdivision from residential to commercial business.

Top Seniors Board Honors

The board of trustees of the Nebraska State Colleges has named 88 recipients and 59 alternates for the board of trustees' scholarships.

The awards, which provide for full tuition for four years at Chadron State, Kearney State, Peru State or Wayne State Colleges, recognize the outstanding scholarship and scholastic achievements of high school seniors throughout Nebraska.

Board Chairman George Rebersdorf, vice president of the Omaha National Bank, stated that, "The board of trustees is pleased to be able to recognize these students. In the 10 years that we have been offering these scholarships, these scholastic achievers from Nebraska's high schools have proven themselves. They have used their scholastic and leadership skills to improve the State Colleges. Most often they have continued their successful service to Nebraska in Nebraska after graduation. We are proud to be able to aid them in attaining their educational and career goals."

More than 600 trustees' scholarships have been awarded to Nebraskans since the start of the program. Awards are based upon high school academic records, college entrance examinations, and written recommendations. Pesticide Recertification This Winter

Private pesticide applicators whose federal certification to buy and apply restricted-use pesticides that will expire in June must complete recertification training this winter, says Don C. Spitz, Wayne County Extension Agent.

Most farmers will need to be recertified this spring. Recertification training is scheduled for Wayne City Auditorium Tuesday, Feb. 24 from 1-3 p.m. and Friday, March 6. Farmers must attend the entire session to be recertified.

The program will include an update on laws and regulations, plus an update on Nebraska pests and pesticides. The material is all new and different from what was presented three years ago, says Spitz.
