February Temperatures Average Five Degrees Above Normal

February was a month of contrasting temperatures. During the first 10 to 12 days of the month, daily temperatures averaged 15 to 25 degrees below normal. During the remainder of the month, daily averages were 15 to 20 degrees above normal.

TEMPERATURES in the Northeast Division of Nebraska averaged approximately 29 degrees Fahrenheit, about five degrees above normal. The normal temperature figure was determined as the average monthly temperature for the period from 1941-70.

According to reports from the stations at Wakefield and Norfolk the high temperature for February was 72 degrees on Feb. 17. The low at Wakefield was 30 degrees below zero on Feb. 11 and the low at Norfolk was 26

The temperature rose 102 degrees within one week at Wakefield.

THE AVERAGE temperature for the month was 29.2 degrees at Wakefield and 29.3 at Norfolk. Average daily maximum was 42.4 at Wakefield and 41.7 at Norfolk. Monthly temperatures across the state averaged either above normal or slightly below normal according to the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources figures.

Record-breaking maximum temperatures were general across Nebraska on one or more days during February. The highest reported temperature was 78 degrees. The lowest reported temperature in the state was 32 below zero.

FEBRUARY PRECIPITATION in the Northeast Division followed the state-wide trend of below normal.

According to the Wakefield report, precipitation totaled .39 of an inch. This figure is down by .58 inch from normal.

While precipitation in the Northeast Division was only 46 percent of the normal mark, each division in the state suffered a decline ranging from an 10 percent figure in the South Central area to a high of 52 percent in North Central Nebraska.

Total precipitation figures from October through February show that Northeast Nebraska had 51 percent of its normal precipitation. Statewide figures range from 31 percent for the Southwest Division to 62 percent for the Southeast area.

The rules will continue to be the same for winning the $1,000 in bonus bucks. The name is drawn shortly before 8 p.m. each Thursday from an estimated 8,000 names contained in a wire cage at The Herald. The name will be announced in the participating stores at 8 p.m. and the person whose name is drawn or spouse must be in the store when the name is announced.

The money will be delivered that night and can be spent immediately if desired.

Country Bridge Bites the Dust

NOBODY WAS injured in this freak accident five miles west and six miles north of Wayne. This county-owned pay loader came to rest on its side when four stringers reportedly gave way as the loader was being driven across a bridge. The accident occurred Tuesday afternoon on a country road where repair work was being done. The driver said that the machine went over slowly and he braced himself for the impact. A crane was called out to get the loader out of the fix. The road which runs East and West was closed and "bridge out" signs were placed on each mile intersection of the road.

Teacher of 43 Years Plans More Leisurely Lifestyle

ETTA FISHER IS RETIRING the end of this school year after teaching second grade at Wayne for the past 33 years. She began her teaching career in 1937.

Imagine, if you can, teaching school at an annual salary of $540!

That's the amount Etta Fisher was paid during her first year as a teacher — 43 years ago.

Mrs. Fisher, who presently is teaching second grade at West Elementary School in Wayne, is retiring at the end of the school year. She has been with the Wayne School System for the past 33 years.

SHE SAYS it has been rather commonplace to have children announce at the beginning of each school year, "You taught my mother/father."

Her teaching career began in the fall of 1937 at Center Ward School in Emerson after receiving a two-year teaching certificate from Wayne State College. "This was a country school under the jurisdiction of the town school and used in their normal training teacher program," she said.

The young teacher's first year salary was $540, paid in 12 payments of $45 per month. "I paid $15 per month for room and board which left a balance of $30 for payments on my 1935 Model A Ford and all other necessities. However, I had five pupils in five grades and obtained a wealth of experience."

AFTER TEACHING at Emerson for two years, Mrs. Fisher began her third year of teaching in first and second grades at Wolbach, Neb.

"The thing I remember most about this job was that electric power came from Grand Island and all street lights were turned off at 10 or 10:30 p.m. We soon learned to carry flashlights in our purses to find our way home," she smiles.

Boulah Bernhoff, who retired from teaching at Wayne High School in May of 1979, was a new member of the faculty at Wolbach the same year as Mrs. Fisher. Both women also came to teach at Wayne the same year.

AT THE close of the 1940 school term, Mrs. Fisher attended summer school as usual and was married in August. Both she and her husband taught the next three years at Willowdale, a 10 grade school between Neligh and Plainview.

"We lived in an apartment on the second floor of the schoolhouse and were paid $1,500," reflects Mrs. Fisher. "This was $125 per month for 12 months and it looked like a fortune!"

"In 1943 her husband was called to take over the family farm, which meant moving to Albion. There Mrs. Fisher taught one year in fifth grade then was transferred to high school to teach social studies and journalism. This meant an additional $500 above the regular raise.

One member of the faculty at Albion, Evelyn Anderson, had been one of Mrs. Fisher's teachers at Carroll High School.

While at Albion, Mrs. Fisher earned a BA degree from Wayne State by going every summer and attending off-campus classes on Saturdays and at night. After three years in Albion, she took a year off when daughter Sally was born.

Sally, who is now Mrs. Dennis Bateman, earned her master's degree from the University of Nebraska, Lincoln and is now a speech clinician at Sidney, Iowa. She and her husband have one child, Christopher, who will be two in June.

THE NEXT year (1947) she moved to Carroll where she taught one year as high school principal, English and social science teacher, pep club sponsor, librarian, school paper supervisor, senior class sponsor, director of both junior and senior class plays, and ticket taker at home basketball games. "An extremely busy year," she laughs.

In the spring, the commercial teacher underwent surgery so Mrs. Fisher substituted for her while planning her own classes for the superintendent's wife to teach.

IT WAS at this time that Superintendent Baller called from Wayne to offer her a fourth grade position. "I accepted immediately," she says.

Later, in August, Baller called to say he could find a fourth grade teacher but needed someone to teach second grade, so Mrs. Fisher's assignment was changed. The following spring she had a chance to return to high school teaching in the English department but opted instead to remain a second grade teacher.

"It must have been a good decision," she says, adding that she has remained at Wayne for 33 years.

SUPERINTENDENTS at Wayne during her teaching career have included Stuart Baller, Everett Willert, Stanley Westergard and Dr. Francis Haun.

While at Albion, Dr. Irvin Brandt, past president of the Wayne-Carroll School Board, was one of Mrs. Fisher's students, along with Deryl Lawrence, former Wayne High School principal.

Milton Owens, present member of the Wayne-Carroll School Board, was a high school junior during her year at Carroll, and David Luft, present principal at West Elementary School in Wayne, was in one of Mrs. Fisher's earlier second grade classes.

"I HAVE enjoyed my years of teaching and have had the privilege of working with some very outstanding people," says Mrs. Fisher.

"I'm sure I shall miss all of this, however right now I'm looking forward to a more leisurely life style and hope to do a lot of things that I haven't had time for until now.

That leisurely life style includes several hobbies, such as oil painting, all types of handiwork, gardening, refinishing furniture, and writing verse for special friends or relatives celebrating their anniversaries or birthdays.

Mrs. Fisher, who resides in Carroll, is completing her third Afghan since New Year's Day and has made two cathedral window quilts. She loves to read and looks forward to visiting her daughter and family more often.

"I'VE ENJOYED my teaching career but look forward to getting up and taking the time to read the morning paper," she smiles. "Wayne has been a wonderful place to work and the people the most pleasant."

Candlelight Wedding Rites March 7 United Lori Sturm - John Carollo

Lori Sturm, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Sturm of Wayne, became the bride of John Carollo, son of Vic Carollo of Marshalltown, Iowa on March 7.

The Rev. Kenneth Edmonds of Wayne officiated at the 7 o'clock double ring rites at the Redeemer Lutheran Church, Wayne.

Light-and-dark blue flowers and spiral candelabras decorated the church for the candlelight ceremony.

Mrs. Lori Lowe of Sioux City registered the guests, who were ushered into the church by Jim Sturm of Scottsdale, Ariz. and Doug Sturm of Wayne.

Bob and Gay Weber of North Platte sang "Through the Eyes of Love," "Lady" and "We've Only Just Begun," accompanied by Mrs. Vera Hummel of Wayne.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a white tulle organza gown. The jewel neckline and bodice featured Cluny lace and re-embroidered petit Venice roses. Matching lace and a self fabric ruffle culled the long, see-through Gibson Girl sleeves. The full skirt fell from an empire waistline edged in polyorganza and draped into a full chapel train.

The wedding cake was cut and served by Marilyn Johnson of Lincoln, Cindy Johnson of Norfolk and Sandy Bartling of Villisca, Iowa. Janice Mickle of Lincoln and Diane Reece of Wahoo poured, and Pafy Elias of Lincoln served punch.

Waitresses and gift carriers were Sarah Peterson, Mary Pat Gross and Leslie Keating, all of Wayne.

The bride, a 1978 graduate of Wayne-Carroll High School, is a junior at Wayne State College and is employed at Triangle Finance Co., Wayne.

The bridegroom, a 1973 graduate of Marshalltown High School and a 1977 graduate of Wayne State College, is assistant manager at Terra Western Corp., Wayne.

The newlyweds are making their home at 1027 Poplar St., Wayne.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN CAROLLO

The junior bridesmaid's dress was of floor-length sheer woven polyester lined in taffeta. It had a tucked-lock bodice insert with tulle and lace trim and an attached back tie.

Dave Kelly of Wayne served as best man, and groomsmen were Dave Anderson, also of Wayne, and Brad Carollo of Marshalltown, Iowa.

The bridegroom wore white Kensington tails with coordinating satin trim on the lapels and white satin leg stripes. A white ruffled shirt and bow tie completed his attire. He wore a white silk rose boutonniere with white stephanotis and baby's breath.

The men in the wedding party wore navy Regal tuxedos with velvet top collars and satin faced lapels. They had matching trousers and vests and white ruffled shirts trimmed in blue and accented with navy bow ties. Their boutonnieres were white carnations with light blue leaves.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Sturm selected a light blue floor-length dress with a matching empire style jacket trimmed with light blue lace. She wore a corsage of dark blue roses, light blue forget me nots, and white stephanotis.

Mr. and Mrs. George Johnson of Lincoln greeted the 300 guests who attended a reception in the church basement after the ceremony, followed with a dance at the Wayne Vet's Club. Gifts were arranged by Emily Skokan of Verdigre.

Decontrol of Natural Gas Opposed

"Making Jobs From Crops is State Goal"

CAPITOL NEWS
By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

Nebraska produces relatively little natural gas, but there is an effort underway in Lincoln to make the Cornhusker state a leader in a grassroots movement aimed at delaying decontrol of natural gas prices.

The Reagan administration has indicated it wants to speed up decontrol. Lifting controls immediately, the administration says, would encourage faster domestic exploration.

But Sens. John DeCamp and Neligh and Steve Fowler of Lincoln are looking at the situation from another perspective—Nebraskans' pocketbooks.

Fowler predicts the price for Nebraska residents would go up by $100 million if complete decontrols went into effect next year. He also predicts decontrols would drive up the prices of other products.

Fowler and others argue immediate decontrol would mean economic woes for Nebraska because of rapidly escalating natural gas prices.

"The entire economy would suffer," Fowler warns. "A significant amount of money, perhaps billions of dollars, would be drained out of Nebraska to large oil companies and producing states."

DeCamp and Fowler want to start the grassroots effort through a resolution they sponsored that would put the Nebraska Legislature on record in opposition to immediate decontrol.

Although some lawmakers correctly point out such a resolution, if passed by only a few states, would have little effect in Washington, but DeCamp's willing to give it a try.

The Neligh lawmaker points out that Nebraska has previously initiated actions that did, in fact, affect nationwide policy. And he believes decontrol is another area where Nebraska can make a difference.

The question, however, is whether enough of his colleagues agree and would support the resolution when it goes before all 49 lawmakers.

Costly Bank Cards

Legislation introduced for five large Nebraska banks has passed its final floor test and could touch Nebraskans in the pocketbook if it's approved by the governor.

The measure would allow Nebraska banks to charge customers up to $20 annually for using bank credit cards—Visa, MasterCard and MasterCard.

The banks who sought the legislation claim they have been losing money because of the state's interest ceiling on credit cards. They asked the Legislature for relief.

The state's lawmakers apparently agreed the banks needed help, and they approved the Banking Committee's bill on a 34-12 ballot.

Among the other provisions in LB150 is an increase in the maximum interest rate banks can charge on outstanding credit card balances. The new rate is 18 percent across the board.

Currently, banks can charge a maximum interest rate of 18 percent on amounts up to $1,000 and 12 percent on balances of more than $1,000.

The measure would become law immediately if it is signed by the governor.

Groundwater Controls

The Nebraska Legislature each year takes a stab at water legislation, but by most accounts no major bills have passed in recent sessions.

Lawmakers this year again are looking at water laws, but it's too early to say what type of legislation ultimately will be passed.

Lawmakers have, however, given initial approval to a bill that would regulate the use of underground water by industries in Nebraska.

Hemingford Sen. Sam Cullum sponsored the bill, which he said is necessary because Nebraska and California currently are the only two out of 18 western states that do not have groundwater controls for large industrial users.

One of the primary aims of the bill is to protect the agricultural economy, reinforcing the state's system of giving priority to domestic and agricultural users.

Under LB56, as amended by Aurora Sen. Maurice Kremer, industrial users who withdraw at least 3,000 acre-feet of water annually—enough to cover 3,000 acres with one foot of water—would be required to obtain a permit from the state Water Resources Department.

Cullum's bill is subject to more amendments as it moves across the legislative board to the final stage of consideration.

But the 34-0 vote by which senators gave the bill first-round approval would indicate considerable support for at least the concept of the measure.

LB56 in part was introduced in response to a proposal by the Tri-State Generation and Transmission Association Inc. of Thornton, Colo. The company is considering a site near Hemingford in Cullum's district for a proposed power plant.

The company also is looking at three other sites, and approval of Cullum's bill could force Tri-State to look harder at the other sites, none of which are in Nebraska.

"Making jobs from crops and livestock is the goal of the state of Nebraska."

"Processing of farm products and supplying farmers and ranchers are, of course, already two of the major sources of employment in the state."

"We have, however, established a new goal of creating additional employment in Nebraska and more income for farmers through industrial use of agricultural products."

"To pursue this aim, a governor's conference on new horizons in agriculture was held in Lincoln February 27. At the meeting, industry and business leaders were briefed on processes that are ready for commercialization to convert Nebraska crops and livestock into products."

"Nebraska Department of Agriculture officials are so confident of success in this effort that they established a target that within a year there would be at least one company in the state making non-food products from Nebraska crops or livestock."

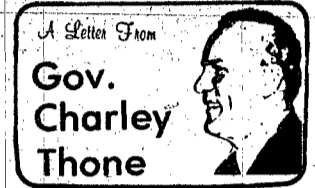

"One possibility is location of byproducts industries adjacent to meat packing plants in Nebraska. Most of these industries are now located on the U.S. coasts, far from the major slaughtering plants. Hides of most hogs killed in Nebraska are just being rendered, but a pigskin industry in the state could develop more valuable uses."

"Polyols is the name for a material used in making rigid urethane foam for insulation, paints and cleaning agents. These polyols derived from cereal starch could be produced for 30 cents a pound."

"One of the processes developed by agricultural research uses crops to produce better crops. Cereal starch can be used to coat seed with film release protection against pests and weeds."

"Many of the petroleum-based plastics don't even decay when they're buried in a landfill. In contrast, crop-based plastics can be made to dissolve easily. One example of the usefulness of such products is the crop-based film bag used to collect hospital linens that may contain disease germs. The laundry is put in the washer inside the bag, which melts in the water."

"America is currently spending $10 billion a year for industrial materials made from petroleum, much of it imported from the Middle East. The technology is available and the economics are rapidly becoming favorable for producing much of these materials from agricultural output."

"Nebraska will make a serious effort to be in the forefront of this exciting new development."

Letters to the Editor...

Agrees with Letter Policy

Dear Editor,

Thank you for the privilege of not signing my name publicly to this letter even though I have signed it personally to you. Your policy is a good one as it gives one a freedom of choice on how one wants to use his name, publicity or personality.

Also your policy is good to exclude libelous statements. I don't even like to see one use another's name in a letter to get his own ego going in writing a letter.

Whether one is a coward, humble, cautious, brave or proud in the way he signs a letter is a personal matter. Is the feeling of pride, a thought that we are better than other people?

In writing letters publicly we should be aware of the possibilities of being misunderstood, of being criticized, of being attacked; but also aware of playing the martyr by signing our name. Jesus never encourages us to become martyrs when we get involved in controversy with the world. I believe this to be a false kind of martyrdom.

Recently I read an article by David Augsburger and hope it complies with the letter I have written. Quoting—I differ from you. (To differ is not to reject.) I disagree with you. (To disagree is not to attack.) I will confront you. (To confront is to complement.) I will invite change. (To change is to grow.) If all controversies could be dealt with a kind feeling in mind, communication would be better among us.

Sincerely,
Name Withheld by Request

Pair of Bills Advance Out of Committee

The 90 day session of the 87th Legislature is half over and at this mid point, I want to take a few minutes and share with you some accomplishments and thoughts about the Legislature. As a freshman senator from rural Dixon County, I fully expected much of this session to be a learning process. It most definitely has been that.

There are many new things to learn, including the system and how to work with the personalities that exist here. With that goal in mind, I introduced, on my own, two bills. I am very proud to report that both of these bills have been advanced out of committee. That, in and of itself, I am told, is a rare accomplishment for a freshman senator.

One of those bills, LB 217, returns the question of sale of liquor on election day to local cities and villages. My major interest in introducing this particular bill was the question of local control. As I stated, many times in my campaign, I felt, wherever possible, we should encourage as much participation by people as possible. LB 217 was sent to the Governor last week.

The other bill I introduced, LB 291 will ban the sale of cans with disposable pull tab openers. This bill, too, has been advanced out of committee and has begun its trek through the floor debate process. Although this bill will not be as controversial as LB 217, it nevertheless will be a challenging piece of legislation to guide through the process.

Another observation I would like to make at the session's mid point is the impact lobbyists have on the system. I came to the Unicameral extremely suspicious of lobbyists. While here, however, I have learned that these people play an important role in the governmental process. It is extremely important for me, as a senator, to recognize every lobbyist has his own special interest.

A lobbyist is extremely capable of providing information to support his particular view of an issue. When you are able to listen to lobbyists on both sides of an issue, a very good thing happens. That is, you get a very complete discussion of the issue. What this does for me as your senator, is allow me to be much more prepared when I visit with people from the district who are interested in that issue.

I am quick to point out that the most important source of information for a senator are the views, opinions and letters of people in the district. Lobbyists do fulfill an important function, however, to the extent that they can add to the information supplied by people of the district.

At this mid-point, this Legislature still has much yet to accomplish. As your senator, I am very dedicated to making certain that your best interests are fully and completely represented.

The door I often pass through as I come to work in the morning on the South entrance to the Capitol has an inscription above it that says "Political Society Exists for the Sake of Noble Living." I think that statement makes a good point about our Unicameral. It is a system that has faults and weaknesses, but when supercharged with senators elected with the best intentions of the people they represent in their hearts, it becomes a good system.

A Magnificent Barn - 1874

Barns are a vanishing feature of the Nebraska landscape today and large limestone barns are a rare sight indeed. One such barn stands in rural Gage County where it has been a local landmark since its construction in 1874. The Nebraska State Historical Society recognized the structure in 1977 by nomination to the National Register of Historic Places and reproduced a painting of it by artist Devon Adams of Peru, Neb., on the cover of the Society magazine "Nebraska History" (Spring, 1980).

Elijah Filley built his barn following two summers of devastating drought, grasshopper invasion and crop failure. Conceived as a local relief project, Filley was able to hire many local farmers to help quarry, haul, dress and lay the stone for the barn as well as for the extensive carpentry work involved, thus assisting many farmers through the trying times of 1874. Upon completion, a large barn dance was held for the benefit of the community. Filley also invited the editor of the "Beatrice Express" out for an inspection, and he filed this report (Dec. 10, 1874):

"It is 44x54 feet on the ground, with an elevation of 27 feet to the plates. The walls are built of fine, hammer-dressed stone, from Mr. Filley's own quarry on Rock Creek, near by, their thickness being two feet as far up as the ground floor, and 18 inches above that. The cornice is heavy, and surmounting the roof is a cupola, with blinds, on the summit of which is impaled a mammoth model of a steer. There are virtually four stories in the barn.

The basement is divided off into stalls for cattle, and here can be put up 60 animals without crowding. Chutes from the hay loft bring down hay and feed with little trouble. This room opens into a large corral in the rear, and is well lighted. Above this is the main floor, which has stalls on either side for horses and cows to the number of 30, and in the center an open space for teams with hay and feed to enter. Convenient hay racks and feed boxes, all built in substantial style, are built in each stall, and the floor is three inches thick.

"Over the stalls on each side is the hay loft, which has a capacity of about 100 tons. Over one end of the passage way is a floor for storing tools and implements. Above the hay loft is a floor for feed and grain, which is to be divided off into bins. There will be a tackle block rigged in the cupola, by which grain will be lifted from the floor below into the wagon box and emptied into these bins.

"The whole barn is well finished, and of course is a very solid structure. The frame inside is very heavy, the main timbers being a foot square. The building is well lighted throughout with arched windows that add much to its appearance. It is a complete barn, and we do not believe there is a better one in the State. Elijah can afford to be proud of it."

Since its nomination to the National Register, the barn has been willed to the Gage County Historical Society, which has received federal matching preservation funds administered by the Nebraska State Historical Society for restoration of the structure.

WAY BACK WHEN

30 Years Ago

March 22, 1951: Second place honors went to Wayne State's debate squad at Nebraska Intercollegiate Forensic Association tournament held in McCook. Wayne Toastmasters inducted five new members. They are Fritz Miltner, Harold Fitch, Wilmer Marra, Wes Pflueger and Gene Ryle. Nebraska 'Sheep' Industry is Moving

"The sheep industry is moving," both in terms of increasing numbers and in improving and promoting its product, those attending a Nebraska Area Sheep Day program were told Thursday (March 12) in Wahoo.

Dr. Ted H. Doane, University of Nebraska extension sheep specialist, spoke to producers about the Nebraska Sheep Council and related checkoff programs. The Wahoo session was one of a series of five area sheep days, being held this year after a lapse of several years. The week-long series began at Bayard March 9 and concluded at Wayne, March 13.

Nebraska's sheep population, once numbering between 150,000 and 160,000 had dropped to about 80,000 in 1979, Doane said. The slide was part of a nationwide decline in sheep production, but the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources specialist said the 50 percent drop in sheep numbers in Nebraska compared to 65 percent for the U.S. as a whole year, some 20,000 western ewes were brought into the Platte Valley to be put on feed, and were included in the official sheep count, Doane recalled. However, the lambing percentage for the state was computed after the sheep were shipped out again, resulting in a misleading 85 percent lamb crop.

Doane said the estimate 120,000 head of stock sheep in Nebraska on Jan. 1 of this year represents "a real increase." Taking advantage of plentiful crop residues, and a strong demand for wool, a substantial number of farmers are becoming sheep producers for the first time, or are expanding their flocks, Doane said.

The state's sheep industry includes a broad spectrum of various-sized sheep operations, he continued, from first-year producers with 10 to 100 head, on up to large scale operators with several thousand ewes.

Doane said goals for increasing the U.S. sheep flock under the Blueprint for Expansion, which he said he prefers to call production, are probably unrealistic because "there are just not that many ewes." But he stressed to producers that just by using available technology they could increase production in some flocks by 200 percent. "Not everybody could do it," he said, because of the level of management required and other factors, but he said increases in production of 20, 30 percent and on up are possible in most flocks.

Doane also serves as secretary of the Nebraska Sheep Council, which was formed in 1978. He said the organization is moving ahead, with funds from a voluntary 10-cents-per-head checkoff collected by cooperating livestock auctions and from private sales used for a number of promotional activities.

Making more people aware of the taste, texture and quality of lamb meat cuts is a goal, carried out in 1980 by the sheep industry's section of the Food Factory booth at the Nebraska State Fair and samples of lamb distributed during the Nebraska Restaurant Association annual meeting in Kearney.

Capitulating on present momentum, Doane said an industry-wide long-range planning meeting is scheduled in June to develop a statewide program, with some 10 committees to be formed to carry out various program functions.

Dr. Ron Christensen, animal scientist at the Roman L. Hruska U.S. Meat Animal Research Center near Clay Center, urged producers to consider more extensive use of crossbreeding to increase sheep production and bolster profits.

He urged sheepmen to take a page from the crossbreeding success stories in swine and beef enterprises.

Production can be increased by 10 to 30 percent by using crossbred ewes to produce crossbred lambs, he said. Gains are made through a higher level of fertility in crossbred ewes and greater livability in lambs, as demonstrated in experiments comparing crossbred lambs and purebred lambs at 4 and 10 weeks of age.

More research needs to be done on the contribution of a crossbred ram, Christensen said, but he added on the basis of performance of crossbred boars, it is likely a crossbred ram would show more aggressiveness in breeding.

Christensen also urged producers with 50 to 100 ewes or more to split their flock and set up two to three breeding periods, which subsequently would extend the marketing period.

Most sheep are traditionally bred in the fall and marketed over a period of four to five months. Multiple breeding seasons would reduce the seasonality of the lamb market, Christensen said.

Advantages, he explained, would be better utilization of rams, more extensive use of lambing facilities and fewer ewes lambing at one time, allowing the producer to devote more labor and attention to a smaller number of animals. Disadvantages could be increased management input and the need for multiple pastures and finishing facilities.

Christensen said the effect of photoperiodism—seasonal differences in the respective lengths of daylight and nighttime hours—on the sexual aggressiveness and performance of rams must be considered. Ram fertility, under normal conditions, is down during the period from March through July, now generally considered an "off season" for sheep breeding.

He also warned sheep producers to give more attention in ram selection to sexual aggressiveness in males, rather than concentrating almost exclusively on the traits of superior growth rate and carcass quality. He said continuous selection for various traits perceived as desirable by the swine industry is resulting in boars "who are not very interested in sows." The classic case of continuous selection for a narrow group of inheritable traits, he said, is the modern male or "tom" turkey, which has been developed as a meat type bird but is now incapable of natural mating.

Dr. Frank Schwulst, Kansas

State researcher, reported on research on various forages for sheep, carried out at the KSU research unit near Colby, Kan.

Dr. Schwulst said turnips, among a number of forage plants tested for sheep feed, supported more "ewe grazing days" than any other crop. Researchers purchased 15 pounds of seed and planted purple top white globe turnips, which were grazed 75-80 days after planting. Ewes consumed all the top plant growth and ate the turnips into the ground. Yellow peas and Austrian winter peas also were planted as test forages, and "were cleaned up pretty well" by the ewes, Schwulst said.

Dr. Don Ferguson, a parasitologist in the University of Nebraska veterinary science department, reported on a number of new drugs on the market, or soon to be on the shelves, which have shown near-spectacular results in controlling internal parasites of sheep.

Previously, producers had a choice of two or three drugs for parasite control; now, 10 or more can be considered for treating various internal parasite infestations, he said.

Ferguson said 32 different kinds of worms infest sheep, which he said are the most susceptible to worms among domestic meat animals. Most sheep carry or have carried some type of worm; he added. He cited USDA figures which put a $100 million price tag on losses from internal parasites.

Worms affecting sheep range from stomach worms less than a half-inch long to tapeworms commonly 9 to 15 feet long; a recent post-mortem of a lamb at the NU veterinary diagnostic laboratory, yielded a tapeworm 22 feet long, he said. The most serious internal parasite of sheep in Nebraska is a stomach worm called the "barber pole worm," from its color.

Ferguson said there are three approaches to worm control programs: do nothing, treat sheep selectively as symptoms become known and treat every animal, for insurance. Ferguson said he "doesn't like to put a drug in an animal unless I know why," noting that most drugs are not effective on one or more parasites, he recommended running tests on fecal samples from sheep for a correct diagnosis of the parasite condition, and subsequent prescription of the appropriate drug.

Livestock Judging Meet Scheduled at Sioux City

Over 300 Future Farmers of America members representing 75 teams from a four-state area have been invited to compete in the 31st annual Sioux City Invitational Livestock Judging Contest, which will be held April 3 at the Sioux City Stockyards.

Teams from Iowa, South Dakota, Nebraska and Minnesota will compete for top honors in one of the Midwest's largest and oldest FFA livestock judging contests.

As in past years, contestants will place eight classes of livestock, with prizes being awarded to team and individual winners. Also, the three senior students scoring the highest in all classes will each receive a $200 Harry D. Aspleaf Memorial Scholarship in livestock marketing at Morningside College, Sioux City.

James J. Kisor, noted animal judging specialist from Iowa State University who has served as official judge in every contest since its beginning, will once again handle those duties this year.

Speaker for the noon day luncheon will be Mr. Bernio Saggau, executive secretary of the Iowa High School Athletic Association. Local marketing interests, in conjunction with the Sioux City Market News Foundation and Sioux City Stockyards sponsor the annual event, along with the cooperation of various vocational agricultural departments in Iowa, Nebraska, South Dakota, and Minnesota.

Dealer is Honored

Winside Grain & Feed, Master Mix/Cooper feed dealership in Winside, was honored last weekend by Central Soya Company, Inc. for outstanding contribution to the livestock feed industry during 1980.

The dealership received the Ambassadors club award, one of the company's highest recognitions of dealer achievement at a special meeting held recently in Omaha.

Accepting the award for Winside Grain & Feed was George Vass, owner. His wife, Beverly, also attended.

In making presentations to 150 award winners, Robert B. "Bob" Galaway, Central Soya's Vice President, Domestic Feeds, praised the overall contribution of the dealer force, saying: "The dealer is really an extension of Central Soya's manufacturing facilities into the local market area. One of your most important contributions is the good reputation you have developed in your local marketplace."

Galaway also reaffirmed Central Soya's commitment to the livestock feed industry. He cited the recent acquisition of the O. A. Cooper Company of Humboldt, Nebraska, and the opening of a new manufacturing plant in Kansas City, Mo., as examples of that commitment.

"Our company views the feed business as a basic component of our food system, a dynamic market anchored by a foundation in agriculture. Our company is dedicated to assuring that our Domestic Feed Division will play a key role in Central Soya's future," Galaway said.

In addition to the award presentations, the three-day dealer meeting at the Red Lion Inn in Omaha included professional "Improvement" sessions, meetings of a Dealer Advisory Committee, and updates from Central Soya research and marketing personnel.

AMERICAN ENERGY WEEK
March 15-21, 1981

A DECLARATION OF ENERGY INDEPENDENCE

WHEN in the course of human events, the people of a country face a serious threat to their economic welfare, independence of action and national security, they are entitled to protect themselves, against that threat. The excessive American dependence on imported oil is just such a peril.

THE UNITED STATES is blessed with the resources to secure our energy future. Coal, oil, gas and uranium are abundant within our borders. Our technological strength and spirit of innovation can lead to still other energy alternatives.

BY ELIMINATING energy waste and by encouraging development of all our energy resources, the United States can free itself from foreign domination and better provide us, its citizens, with the prosperity, health, freedom and peace that we desire.

APPLIANCE	ONE KILOWATT HOUR PRODUCES
Heat Lamp	4 hours of use
Color Television	7 hours of enjoyment
Water Pump	1200 gallons from 100 ft. depth
Grain Auger	270 bushels of corn

The Average cost to the consumer is only 4 1/2¢ per KWH

Take a minute on this special day to think about agriculture:

- Our Nation's #1 Industry—assets of $927 billion.
- Our Nation's #1 Employer—over 15 million people.
- Our Nation's #1 Inflation Fighter—productivity growth 5 times greater than non-farm industry over past 5 years.
- Our Nation's #1 Exporter—$40 billion in 1980.

The efficiency of U.S. agriculture helps make it possible for us to spend less of our after-tax income on food and earn food items in less time than consumers in other nations around the world. Just look at how these comparisons stack up:

COUNTRIES	Minutes of Work Time Required for Selected Purchases
	1 lb. sirloin steak	1 lb. white bread	1 doz. eggs
United States	16	4	6
Brazil	135	43	73
China (PRC)	455	(b)	205
France	34	8	13
India	(a)	46	131
Japan	174	7	12
Soviet Union	60	8	71

(a) — consumption of food item is not applicable; (b) — data is not available.

This week people all across the United States will be observing AMERICAN ENERGY WEEK and, on Thursday, recognizing the importance of Agriculture to America.

Feeding Calves
Sixty percent of the total cost of raising calves is in feed. The liquid diet is a large part of early feeding costs and milk replacers are usually less expensive than whole milk.

The best way to feed colostrum, a necessary part of the calf diet, is frozen. This should be limited to seven pounds once a day for three weeks. Although three weeks is early to wean, the technique has given satisfactory results in the past and by feeding once a day, the same results are obtained at half the cost of labor. It doesn't seem to make any difference if the colostrum is fed warm or cold but frozen colostrum does have certain advantages over sour. Frozen colostrum keeps indefinitely, has less risk of toxic molds or disease-causing bacteria, and has slightly better gains in Nebraska trials. However, since sour colostrum doesn't need to freeze, it is usually less expensive.

Cleaning Chimney
Many people believe that by adding salt or certain zinc-containing chemicals to the fire in a wood burning appliance they can remove the creosote deposits from their chimney.

Today, salt or any other chemical for cleaning purposes is considered to be a waste of time and money. The only way to effectively remove creosote deposits from a chimney is by mechanical cleaning with a wire brush or a weighted sack filled with straw. Creosote accumulation can be prevented or reduced in most chimney systems by making sure that dry wood is being burned in a hot fire for 15-30 minutes at the beginning of each burning period.

This procedure should be begun with a clean chimney or a chimney fire could result. If the soot, creosote accumulation reaches 1/8 inch to 3/16 inch thickness, the chimney needs to be cleaned mechanically.

Pleasure and Profit
The Pleasure and Profit 4-H Club met March 14 at the Allen fire hall to organize for the coming year.

Newly appointed officers are Steve Jones, president; Craig Noe, vice president; Robin Osbahr, secretary; Jay Jones, treasurer; Candace Jones, news reporter; and Derwin Roberts, historian.

Derwin Roberts served a St. Patrick's cake and drink.

Next meeting will be March 24 after school to make final plans for projects for the year. Craig and Amy Noe will serve refreshments.

Candace Jones, news reporter.

New Board Members Named

Arvid Samuelson, Merlin Felt and Con Munson were elected to three-year terms on the Board of Directors of the Farmers Union Cooperative Exchange.

The men were named at the annual meeting March 5 at the Legion Hall. They succeed Gordon Lundin, Jim Stout and Tom Gustafson, whose terms expired this year.

ERA introduces the first risk-free way to buy or sell your home.

When you buy a new house before you sell your old one a lot of things can happen.

Most of them are bad. You might end up with double mortgage payments. You might lose a lot of money when you have to sell at a distressed price.

You might even be forced to move and be separated from your family.

The problem is there's never been any other way to do it. Until now.

Until ERA introduced the unique new Sellers Security Plan.

Now you can use your home's equity before you sell. And you can avoid double house payments. And you can be sure your house will sell at a price you can live with.

Now there's the Sellers Security Plan. The first risk-free way to buy before you sell.

For more details, contact your local ERA Real Estate Specialist. We're in the Yellow Pages under "real estate".
