School Lunch Cuts Could Bring Back Student Brown Bag

President Reagan's proposed cuts in the school lunch program could force students to return to the old tradition of eating sack lunches.

IT WAS THE CONSENSUS of area school representatives that if Reagan's proposals are passed without change, they will have a severe effect on school lunch programs.

According to Superintendent Francis Haun of Wayne-Carroll High School, the Wayne and Carroll schools would lose a total of $34,881 if the proposal is approved.

Losses would include $1,160 from the elimination of the special milk program, $2,887 from cutting on reduced lunch prices, $13,671 from commodity reduction and $17,161 in elimination of the free lunch program.

Schools at Allen, Laurel, Wakefield and Winside would all face similar proportionate cutbacks.

IF THE Reagan proposals go into effect it could mean the end of lunch programs in many schools.

Derwin Hartman, superintendent at Wakefield Community Schools, said he has "very strong feelings about the proposal."

He reported that the proposal alone would force a price increase of 31 cents per tray. Inflation probably would put the increase between 30 and 40 cents per meal he estimated.

Wakefield would lose more than $19,000 of its $21,000 budget. "It's a bad deal. I'm in favor of Reagan's proposed cuts but don't feel the lunch program should be cut. It would really hurt," Hartman said.

THE PROPOSED CUTS would automatically cause an increase in meal prices and could put lunch programs out of business according to other school officials.

Laurel-Concord Schools would lose some $15,500 in federal money plus some state funding, Superintendent James Lotquist reported.

"The minimum we could charge for a lunch would be $1.25 and could be $1.50," he said. "The increase could curtail our participation in a lunch program. It will definitely hurt the program quite a bit."

Winside superintendent Don Leighton said he is bothered by the uncertainty of the proposal. He stated that projections showed that Winside Schools should get $14,702 in funds. Under the proposal, Winside would get only $1,411.86, thus losing out on $13,291.

ALLEN SCHOOLS would lose $13,000 in aid according to Superintendent Robert Heckathorn. Heckathorn reported that the school would have to raise lunch prices 41 cents just to make up for the budget cuts. Inflation and cost of living figures also would affect the cost.

Superintendent Haun said that if the proposal passes, the bottom line is that Wayne's lunch program would have no chance to exist.

But, Haun cautioned that the proposal is not yet passed and added that he is not yet worrying seriously about the effects.

THESE TRACTORS — and dozens of other like them — sit on a local farm implement dealer's lot awaiting an economic turnaround that will put them in farmers' fields. Despite the recent three-inch rainfall, farm machinery sales remain hampered by high interest rates and farm prices. Most machinery dealers are convinced that more rainfall will spark an increase in sales, but that farmers will remain cautious about buying until farm prices improve and interest rates drop more.

The Tractor Factor

Wayne Area Farmers Cautious on Machinery Buys

By Randall Howell

Though last month marched out with a multi-million dollar rain across the plains of Wayne, area farmers remain somewhat cautious about machinery purchases.

That's the upshot on spring sales reports from Wayne's three major farm implement dealers.

Farm implement sales "were not affected much" by the three inch rainfall that deluged Wayne's parched farmland on Saturday, March 28, according to Gary Pick, owner and manager of Logan Valley Implement, East Highway 35.

"BUT, IT WAS a million dollar attitude changer," the John Deere farm machinery dealer added.

Duane Thies, general manager and part owner of Thies Brudigan Inc., East Highway 35, agreed. "It helped the attitude of most farmers," the International Harvester dealer said.

Thies said he felt farm machinery sales had picked up some in the past two weeks, but he wasn't ready to give total credit to the week-ago rainfall. "The rain stimulated some sales," he said. "But interest rates are coming down, too."

And, north of Wayne the report was similar. "The rain didn't help machinery sales a bit," said Larry Carr, salesman at Red Carr Implement, North Highway 15.

Carr, son of Case and New Holland farm machinery dealer Maurice "Red" Carr, said the rain was a good sign, but the impact had yet to boost the sales volume in farm machinery.

ALL THREE implement dealers were optimistic about the 1981 growing season, however.

"By August it's going to get damn good, or it's going to get worse," Pick said. "I'm pretty optimistic, but you have to be if you're a farmer or a machinery dealer."

Thies agreed. "nobody can predict the weather," he said. "And prices are down on cattle, hogs and grain, but I'm optimistic. If we get some more rain and the interest rate declines, those will be the big factors."

Carr said the end of March rain is "going to help the hay crop." He said he expected most farmers would get a first cutting, but April showers would be a big factor for later cuttings.

Reports on the different categories of farm machinery varied from company to company.

AT LOGAN Valley Implement sales of new equipment were reported "down slightly" from a year ago, but Pick described used machinery sales as "up strong" over last year.

Pick said tractor sales remain steady this growing season, but the hay and forage line is down "due to the poor livestock market."

At Thies Brudigan Inc. corn planter sales are outpacing the rest of the International Harvester line, according to Thies. He said that tractor sales hold the second spot in the machinery lineup with tillage implements turning over in the third spot.

Thies also said sales of hay and forage equipment are down over last year. Normally, he said, tractors lead the sales ticket this time of year and tillage equipment pulls in second.

At Carr Implement tractor sales were reported down significantly over last year's total. Carr said both new equipment and used-equipment sales are down, but that repair work is up.

"WE HAVEN'T been able to look up

Accumulated Rainfall Over The Top; Moisture Debt is 48% Below Normal

It's over the top. That's right, folks, Wayne's accumulated rainfall total for 1981 is 0.18 inches ahead of the area average.

According to Wayne County extension agent Don C. Spitze, the accumulated rainfall for 1981 — Jan. 1 through April 1 — is 3.33 inches.

And, according to his records, the accumulated average rainfall for Wayne County is 3.15 inches.

That means accumulated rainfall is up 0.18 inches, Spitze said, stressing that his records are not official, though he's been keeping track of precipitation for years.

Of course, even though the accumulated total is a bonus, the rainfall debt has to be taken into consideration. And, Spitze readily acknowledges that.

It's about four or five weeks before the planting of warm-season crops and the pre-season precipitation needed to recharge Nebraska's subsoil moisture is 48 percent below normal.

The situation varies from county to county.

And, Dr. Ralph E. Neild, extension climatologist, reports that there is only a 12 percent probability that rainfall will be sufficiently above normal to catch up by mid-May.

Even if conditions return to normal, according to Neild, Nebraska soil will still be 28 percent below by planting time.

from our repair work schedule for over three weeks," Carr said, adding that he expected the machinery repair shop schedule to stay busy for another week or so.

Mechanics are busy at Logan Valley Implement and Thies Brudigan, too.

"Farmers are still trying to get by" with used equipment, Pick said.

Thies said his backshop is backlogged. "Farmers are making do with older machines," he said.

All three implement company shops report major repair jobs, such as tractor engine overhauls, have increased over last year.

According to Pick, the bright spot at Logan Valley Implement has been sales of irrigation equipment. He said pivot irrigation equipment sales are up 400 to 500 percent over last year.

ALL THREE implement dealers indicated that the recent rainfall is still overshadowed by high interest rates and low farm prices.

Pick acknowledged that he noticed an improvement in machinery sales since the three-incher, but focused on the recent decline in the prime interest rate.

"With the prime rate going down, everything is looking up," Pick said.

"Thies said that with inflation and high interest rates the farmers are realizing that "even if they put several thousand dollars into an old tractor it's only equivalent to one payment on a new one."

Just Horsing Around

WARM WEATHER, LOTS OF sunshine and a horse named Snowball. That combination would be enough to tickle any little girl's fancy. Including nine-year-old Annetta Noe of Allen, Annetta, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Noe, took advantage of the unusually warm weather Thursday afternoon to exercise her pony. The two paused in front of the Allen school just long enough to smile for the camera. According to the National Weather Service office in Norfolk, temperatures there Thursday fell just two degrees short of topping the 87 degree record set back in 1928.

Over 5,000 Children to Attend WSC Play

Over 5,000 children from more than 40 area schools are expected to attend this year's children's play at Wayne State College, "Radio Rescue."

The first performance was scheduled Sunday, April 5, at 2 p.m. in Ramsey Theatre on the college campus.

Other performances will be at 1 p.m. today (Monday), Wednesday and Friday, and at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday. Admission is $1 for children and $3 for adults. Wayne State College students will be admitted free with identification.

"RADIO RESCUE," which is being presented by the Wayne State College theatre department, is under the direction of Dr. Helen Russell, professor of theatre.

The play was written by Charlotte Chorpennig and focuses on two orphans' race with time to save a train from driving off a washed-out train trestle. The play is set in the year 1935.

CHILDREN attending the performance will see a fish caught and cooked on stage. "Safety regulations prevent theatres from using real fire," Art Dirks, technical director and designer explained, "however, one fire will be created through the use of a fan blowing paper strips through an amber light."

A burning brand will be created by a penlight embodied in a branch and covered with a colored jelly. Another fire will be produced by shining a light through a revolving color wheel.

Live news announcements will emanate from a portable radio via the use of a wireless microphone and an FM receiver.

DIRKS explained that the special effects must be "absolutely infallible and effortless for an actor to use."

"Special effects do not fool anyone, but when the audience enters the theatre they are permitting themselves to be deceived." He said although the audience is always aware that fire is an effect, it gives credit for how well it is done.

Dirks said "Radio Rescue" ranks as one of the two most complex sets that he has done. The show has three complete settings; the attic of an orphanage; an abandoned flour mill; and the washed-out train trestle.

"I enjoyed designing these sets, but given our shop facilities and manpower it is a real strain to execute them," Dirks emphasized. "All three sets are portable for quick setting changes."

MEMBERS OF the cast include Chris Smith as Sparky; Kim Stramberg as Jill; Chris Hennig as Martha; Kathy Riedmann as Lena; Steve Van Seggelen as Bud; Michele Brockmoller as Miss Fetterling; Cyndi Gallup as Miss Carr; Dave Sindelar as Quinn; Jeff Ferguson as Mike; Jed Erickson as Brakeman; Joe Foulk as Engineer; and Pam Elbracht as Mrs. Horton.

The evening will begin with a general session in the lecture hall for students and their parents. Following the general session, parents and students will follow a mini schedule to allow them to meet teachers and assist in selecting courses for next year.

Formal registration for all ninth graders will take place on Tuesday, April 14. Rural students may register during the week of April 13 to or at any time convenient to them after those dates.

Still No Winner

For the ninth straight week the person whose name was drawn in the Grand Draw-A-Way drawing was not in Wayne. Thursday night's drawing was held at the Wayne County Courthouse.

John Roscoe Anderson of rural Wayne would have been $1,000 richer had he been shopping in one of the stores participating in the drawing at 8 p.m. when his name was announced.

Another name will be drawn this Thursday night. Should that person be inside the store when his or her name is called they will take home $1,000 in script money. The money may be spent like cash in any of the participating business places.

JEFF WARNEMUNDE displays the photo and autograph of Ronald Reagan which has been a part of his autograph collection for quite a few years. Warnemunde said that he first received a signature of Reagan which was made with an "auto pen." He later wrote back to Reagan and asked him for a "real autograph." The second time, he was sent a photo and authentic autograph.

Reagan Autograph is Part Of Warnemunde Collection

Not many years can boast of owning an autograph of the President of the United States. And Jeff Warnemunde of Winside can brag that he has two.

WARNEMUNDE SAID he believes that only one of the Ronald Reagan autographs in his collection is the real McCoy.

The Wayne State College junior started his autograph collection approximately nine years ago at age 12. Jeff is now 20 and no longer adds to his collection.

The Reagan signatures were collected years ago when the President was governor of California. Warnemunde sent letters to governors, Senators, Congressmen and other political figures across the nation and in other foreign countries.

ONE OF THE autographs Warnemunde received was that of Governor Ronald Reagan on a small white card.

Warnemunde analyzed the autograph and came to the conclusion that it was not authentic. Instead, he contended that it had been made with an "auto pen" not an uncommon practice by politicians, according to Warnemunde.

The Winside native then wrote back to Reagan and told the governor he would like a real autograph and not the replica he had earlier received. This time Warnemunde received an eight by ten glossy with Reagan's autograph written across the top of the photo.

THAT INCIDENT occurred many years ago, long before Warnemunde realized that Reagan would be elected President in 1980.

All of these autographs were collected at least five years ago. Jeff discontinued his autograph collecting hobby in 1977 as his interest declined.

Among the WSC business ma-tor's collection are autographs of William Simon, Richard Daryl Tito, George Wallace, Indira Gandhi, William Douglas, Ed Muskie, Princess Grace, Hubert Humphrey, Charley Thone and Anwar Sadat, one of the last autographs Warnemunde obtained.

THE LIST OF NAMES goes on and on. Some of the autographs were collected in person but most were collected by mail, a process that has gotten more expensive in recent years.

Although, Jeff does have autographs of a few movie stars, his collection consists mainly of political and military figures. He can tell some of the signatures are phony by taking a close look at them.

The main reason that Jeff began collecting political autographs were because he was interested in the field of politics and because most politicians are given postage funds.

And he plans to hang on to the collection because "it's always something to look back on."

Opinion

It's time to stop bringing home the Davis-Bacon Act

Richard L. Lester, President
Chamber of Commerce of the United States

One sure sign of the political clout organized labor long enjoyed — and now risks losing — can be seen in the fate of the Davis-Bacon Act. For those unfamiliar with this legislative relic, it dates to 1931 and requires contractors to pay a "prevailing wage" to employees working in construction work for the federal government.

Davis-Bacon has long been criticized as inflationary, because the wage rates set do not reflect local prevailing rates. For example, one of the key regulations in the Act is a wage-triggering mechanism known as the 30 percent rule. It provides that the wages paid to as few as 30 percent of workers in a construction craft in a locality may be used as a yardstick to determine prevailing wages on federal, state and local projects using federal funds. The obvious result of this regulation is that union pay scales must frequently be paid by contractors whose workers are not represented by unions.

With the exception of organized labor, just about everyone (even Common Cause!) has condemned Davis-Bacon for arbitrarily jacking up construction costs. For instance, the General Accounting Office (GAO), the highly respected, independent congressional oversight agency, conducted nine separate studies over 20 years and eventually concluded in April 1979: "Davis-Bacon is poorly administered, adds up to $930 million a year in extra costs to taxpayers, increases the rate of inflation and should be repealed

Actually, GAO went even further. It intimated that the Department of Labor, which is responsible for collecting the wage data pertaining to Davis-Bacon, might be manipulating the evidence to protect organized labor. GAO said the wage data collected either was not used, or was "deleted, added and changed, without reason or rationale." When the Department of Labor protested, GAO found that its comments were largely "misleading, inaccurate, taken out of context, unsupported, and often did not reflect the information in its files."

So did the Carter administration heed GAO's recommendations? Not on your life. Former Secretary of Labor Ray Marshall snifted with annoyance that the GAO study was "a sloppy piece of work." And the President, who had pledged to "do everything in my power to combat inflation," bowed to union pressure and did nothing.

But this was just the beginning. For about that same time, work looked out that an inter-agency task force in the Carter administration had just completed a similar analysis of Davis-Bacon and reached virtually the same conclusions. The task force was led by the Office of Federal Procurement Policy and comprised of officials from the Departments of Defense, Energy, Labor, the General Services Administration and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Obviously, the collective findings of these officials were significant since they represented the agencies which must deal with the administration of Davis-

Bacon on a daily basis.

Nevertheless, when asked to release the study, the Carter administration balked. Senator Orrin Hatch, the new chairman of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee says: "...the Carter administration refused to release the study despite our numerous requests. The study took a very critical view of the prevailing wage laws, and it's been suggested the Carter administration stonewalled the report for fear of incurring the ire of union leaders."

We agreed. In June 1979, the U.S. Chamber took the Carter administration to court, citing the rights of the public under the Freedom of Information Act, demanded release of the study. The new administration, which as repeatedly stressed it answers to no special interest group, and which obviously feels no need to stonewall, has now responded and released the report to the public.

Not surprisingly, the study concludes that eliminating the 30 percent formula — described at the outset — "could reduce federal expenditures on the order of $1.9 billion and the inflation rate by .285 percentage point."

We recently wrote the new Secretary of Labor Ray Donovan and requested the Reagan administration do just that by suspending indefinitely the 30 percent formula. To do so would be good economics and good politics, for it would demonstrate we finally have an administration that will not sit up and bark every time organized labor snaps its fingers.

OUT OF OLD NEBRASKA

by the Nebraska State Historical Society

Bartlett Richards (1862-1911)
Biography Published of Pioneer Nebraska Cattleman

Recently published by the Nebraska State Historical Society is the book "Bartlett Richards, Nebraska Sandhills Cattleman." The book has won the Western Heritage Award of the National Cowboy Hall of Fame, Oklahoma City, as the top non-fiction book of 1980. Another book accorded the honor is Donald Jackson's "Gold Dust" published by Alfred A. Knopf Company. The book is about rancher Bartlett Richards, who made his Spade Ranch in Cherry and Sheridan Counties into perhaps the best known cattle growing spread in Nebraska history. The immediate area around the Spade ranch house 20 miles northeast of Ellsworth has been placed on the National Register of Historic Places.

Bartlett's older brother DeForest, a banker, became governor of Wyoming in 1899. His younger brother Jarvis abandoned his original calling as a Congregational minister to manage Bartlett's holdings before moving to his own Biou Ranch at Simla, Colo. Richards was eventually to marry DeForest's daughter Inez Richards; the couple had four children: Longley, Elise, Kathleen, and Bartlett Jr.

In 1888 Bartlett Richards moved from Wyoming to the Sandhills cattle country northeast of Ellsworth, Neb. He turned to a friend John J. Cairnes of Oelrichs, S.D. for capital to develop his new domain in Sheridan and Cherry Counties during the 1890s. Cairnes' stock in Richards and Cairnes Incorporated was bought in 1899 by Will Gardner Comstock, a Montana rancher, whose business alliance with Richards in the Nebraska Land and Feeding Company was broken only by Richards' death in 1911.

ing his sentence which he was serving in the Adams County Jail at Hastings.

Richards himself was an enigmatic figure in Nebraska history. As the book notes, "To some homesteaders he was a cattle baron who sought control of Sandhills land they hoped to farm. To others he was a leader of Nebraska's early livestock industry who more clearly understood the capabilities of the land." A polished man socially and of considerable intellectual ability, he was a world traveler and built for himself and his family a palatial summer home at Coronado, Calif., still a show place on historical tours. The Richards home in Ellsworth is now occupied by Lawrence Bixby, who also controls the Spade Ranch. His father and mother were employees of Bartlett Richards.

This biography was some years in the making. Its principal author, Ruth Van Ackerman, a native Sandhiller now retired in Omaha, completed the book following the death in 1978 of Bartlett Richards Jr. His foremost contribution was furnishing the correspondence of his rancher father.

In his review of the book (Winter, 1980, Nebraska History), Gene Gressley, director of the Western History Research Center, University of Wyoming, says: "(The authors) have for the first time revealed Bartlett Richards — the man, the cattle entrepreneur, the financier, and above all the developer of the Sandhills country of Nebraska. (They deserve our plaudits for this solidly crafted work, which has removed Bartlett Richards Sr. from the fog of legend to stage front and center of the historical West.)"

Profusely illustrated, the 289-page book is well researched, indexed and contains the bitter dissent of circuit court Judge John F. Phillips to the conviction of Richards for conspiracy. It may be ordered for $12 (plus tax) from the Nebraska State Historical Society.

According to the U.S. Treasury, the U.S. is still owed close to $300 billion in World War II debts, some from countries no longer in existence.

Born in Vermont in 1862, Richards came West to Cheyenne, Wyo., for his health at the age of 17 before entering Williams College in Massachusetts. His Congregational minister father died in 1872 when young Richards was 10, and the boy was to feel all his life a keen responsibility for his widowed mother, Harriet Bartlett Jarvis Richards, and his younger brother and sister, Jarvis and Margaret, all of whom followed young Bartlett to the West.

Richards' fascination with the West became so great within a year that he abandoned ideas of college and entered the cattle business in Wyoming. As the book notes, "His rise was meteoric." In 1881 by the time he would have been entering his junior year at Williams, he was managing three Wyoming ranches with thousands of head of cattle ranging over an area almost as large as his native Vermont. It could only have happened in the free-wheeling, cattle boom days of the 1880s.

For the next 30 years the Richards name was prominent in Wyoming and Nebraska

Omaha Ballet Performing at WSC

The Omaha Ballet will perform at Wayne State College (WSC) on Wednesday, April 22, in Ramsey Theatre in the Val Peterson Fine Arts Center at 8 p.m.

Tickets will be available in the foyer of the Val Peterson Fine Arts Center at 7:30 p.m., on the night of the performance at a cost of $2.50.

Admission is free for Wayne State college students, faculty and staff, and holders of special activities passes.

THE OMAHA Ballet gave its first performance in 1965 at the Joslyn Art Museum. Then known as the Omaha Regional Ballet Company, the group was an outgrowth of the Omaha Regional Ballet Academy, formed in 1962 to train dancers.

In 1969 the Omaha Ballet Society was incorporated, separate from the Academy, with its own

Board of Directors.

THE OMAHA Ballet first became a full-time, year-round operation in the fall of 1975 when Thomas Enckell and Katharyn Horne were hired as Artistic Directors. Their arrival spurred an almost instant and explosive growth in the operations of the company.

Omaha Ballet now offers a fine and exciting young company of beautiful professional soloists and well disciplined corps; one of the richest repertoires anywhere in the Midwest, an endless variety of styles, from the great classics to the most contemporary; world famous guest stars, renown choreographers; exciting world premieres.

They have performed with the Metropolitan Opera Ballet of New York, Malmo Municipal Theatre of Sweden, Manhattan Technical Ballet, Finnish National Ballet and the American Ballet Theatre.

IN ADDITION to regular performances and rehearsals for these performances, company operations include year-round company classes, a demanding apprentice program, a career oriented school with very limited enrollment, and an expanded summer course, open to the public. Dancers, apprentices and students are selected through yearly open auditions.

Omaha Ballet's touring program has extensively grown to include "The Nutcracker," full performances, "Sampler" (a mini-program), and "Peter and the Wolf."

years have been international star Hans Meijer; Niels Simonsen, from Denmark; Eleanor D'Antonio and Sallie Wilson, American Ballet Theatre.

Omaha Ballet is one of the fastest growing regional dance companies in the United States and has established a reputation as the dance center of the Midwest.

THE OMAHA Ballet's performance at Wayne State is organized by the WSC special programs committee with state funds as budgeted in the general college budget with occasional help from outside agencies.

Other events presented this year by the WSC special programs committee were performances by James Whitmore, St. Olaf College Orchestra, and Rolf Bjorling.

Leader Training Lesson Focusing on Laundry

Chocolate, ink, jelly, coffee, mayonnaise, grease, gum. Anyone who has done laundry knows what problems these create when they get on clothing.

A leader training session sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service, entitled "Clothing Dividends, Taking the Stain and Pain Out of Laundry," is intended to do just that - make the process of cleaning clothes a little less painful.

The session will be held Tuesday, April 7, at 9:30 a.m. in the Columbus Federal Savings and

To Drink or Not to Drink

To drink or not to drink. That seems to be the question asked everywhere you go - especially when the beverage is coffee.

When the only culprit is caffeine, at least we knew what we were dealing with - but the latest association made between coffee and pancreatic cancer has left us wondering.

THE PEOPLE who aren't wondering about whether or not to drink coffee are pregnant women. Most of them have read the research about the effect of caffeine on the developing fetus.

To most of us, caffeine is just a stimulant that can cause tenseness or insomnia. To a developing fetus, caffeine can be the cause of lack of oxygen and nutrients coming its way. Caffeine increases the amount of the hormone adrenaline in the blood stream. This acts to direct the blood flow away from the uterus and placenta, denying the fetus of oxygen and nutrients from the mother's blood.

SEVEN CUPS of coffee per day has been related through research to a higher than usual incidence of fetal death.

The reporting of similar results in many investigations with rats has prompted the Food and Drug Administration to drop caffeine from its list of food additives that are "generally recognized as safe." By moving caffeine to an interim list, the FDA is requiring industry to further study the effects of caffeine.

WHAT OTHER beverages contain caffeine besides coffee at 170 milligrams per 100 ounce mug and tea at 100 milligrams per 10 ounces? The list includes the following sodas per 12 ounce can: Cola, 65 mg.; Dr. Pepper, 61 mg.; Mountain Dew, 55 mg.; Tab, 49 mg.; Pepsi, 43 mg.; and RC, 34 mg.

WSC Women Graduates To Be Featured at Forum

Outstanding women graduates of Wayne State College (WSC) will be featured at a forum, entitled "Wayne State College Women in the Professions."

The forum, sponsored by the WSC Affirmative Action Committee, is scheduled for Monday, April 13, at 7 p.m. in the Birch room of the WSC Student Center. The forum is free and open to the public.

The WSC women graduates will speak on how they attained success in their chosen professions, career and family conflicts encountered, and discrimination encountered (if any).

They also will provide suggestions and recommendations on how to be successful in the business world.

The panel discussion will feature Dr. Ruby Pedersen, interim head of the humanities division, as keynote speaker and moderator. Dr. Pedersen is well known for her research on Nebraska author Mari Sandoz.

Panel participants also will include Letta Maynard of Wayne, a former World War II prisoner of war who is well known for her literary contributions and whose accounts of her war-time experiences appeared in the Saturday Evening Post; Freda Bennett, superintendent of schools in Petersburg, Neb.; Vickie Toelle Underwood, an auditor with Peoples Natural Gas in Council Bluffs, Iowa; Cherrie Mankenberg, women's basketball coach at the University of Nebraska in Omaha; and Mrs. Ione Werthman, formerly Dirks, of Werthman Photography in Omaha, the first woman elected to the Nebraska State Board of Photography.

WHAT'S left to eat or drink if you're pregnant. Certainly not alcohol! Children born to drinking mothers may have increased difficulty in mental functioning.

Fetal Alcohol Syndrome, caused by women drinking moderate to large quantities of alcohol during pregnancy, results in unusual facial structure, retardation, joint problems, and heart and kidney abnormalities for the developing child.

But there's always milk - and as far as I know - it hasn't been proven hazardous to our health - yet!

Many Records Are Broken in Laurel-Concord Relays

A FIRST place finish in this heat is achieved by the Wakefield relay team

41 Teams from 22 Schools

The participants in the annual Laurel-Concord relays aren't accustomed to nice weather conditions.

So, when the track teams from 22 northeast Nebraska high schools got together, Thursday, they took advantage of the good fortune by demolishing 15 meet records.

Battle Creek broke three records and pulled away from the field in the boys division. Enroute to a first place tie in the girls division, Randolph and Hartington combined to break five meet records.

The Laurel Relays have been haunted by rain, sleet, snow, wind and cold in past years and weather has even caused postponement of the event. This year, temperatures reached into the mid-80's and the wind was relatively mild much of the day.

Some of the top record breaking performances include:

—1,600 meter medley relay record of 3:50.7 set by Wakefield

—Marks of 53.7 and 162.8 in the shot put and discus respectively by Jim Heeney of Emerson Hubbard

—Pole vault record of 12.7 set by Bloomfield's Mike Marvin

—1,500 meter run record of 4:25.5 by Marvin Wingell of Walthill

—High jump mark of 6.2 by Dave Belina of Howells

—Long jump record of 21.84 by Robb Schnitzler of Battle Creek

—3,200 meter relay time of 8:42.8 set by Battle Creek

—Triple jump record of 42.10 by Todd Mink of Battle Creek

—Girls 800 meter relay mark of 1:52.1 by Randolph

—Girls 1,500 meter run record of 5:19.4 set by Hartington's Dawn Morlon

—Girls 1,600 meter relay record of 4:38.8 set by Hartington

Blue Devils Batter Bancroft 12-0

Tim Pfeiffer silenced Bancroft as he fired a two-hitter and struck out eight batters to lead the Wayne Blue Devils to their second victory of the season, Friday in Bancroft. The locals won the game 12-0 in a five-inning game shortened by the 10-run rule. Wayne's bats exploded to give Pfeiffer good support. The Devils rapped 13 base hits and pushed 12 runs across the plate. Leading hitters for the winners were Todd Schwartz with three hits in three plate appearances, Kevin Nissen with three hits, Tim Pfeiffer with two hits and Jim Sperry with two. Pfeiffer aided his pitching by knocking a two-run homer in the second inning which sent Bancroft's starting pitcher to the dugout. The Qexils scored three runs in the first inning and five in the second to put the game well out of reach early. McCright and Todd and Tim Pfeiffer scored the first three runs of the game. The Pfeiffer brothers, Nissen, Brian Fleming and Schwartz accounted for the five runs in the second. Sperry had a key two-run single. Nissen and Fleming scored in the third inning on a double by Schwartz and a single by Sperry. Runs by Shaun Niemann and Todd Pfeiffer added the final blow in the fourth inning. Bancroft was expected by the Northeast Nebraska Conference coaches to have a good ball club this year and be in contention for the conference title. Next action for Wayne is scheduled at Laurel Wednesday.

Wakefield Elementary Students Decorate With Signs of Spring

The Elementary students and their teachers have been very busy over the past weeks. They have been decorating the halls of the elementary building with signs of spring and examples of their studies. As one walks through the halls, he smiles and is filled with fresh ideas and new knowledge.

The kindergarten class has decorated the entrance hall with beautiful lambs made from styrofoam chips. The lambs look woolly and life-like. Mrs. Mildred Brownell is the teacher of the kindergarten.

THE FIRST graders have displayed their original ability in the hall. The students wrote stories and drew pictures of space and the ocean. The first graders have sailed through the sky in rockets, visited Pluto and even encountered sharks. Mrs. Ruth Leonard is their teacher.

The second graders chose poems by their favorite authors, mounted them, decorated them beautifully, and hung them outside their door. The second grade students love poetry. Their instructor is Mrs. Sharon Shaw.

Signs of Easter are depicted on the walls of Mrs. Janelle Eaton's third graders. They have made "egg amplexes." What is an egg amplex? It is an oval piece of paper that comes to life through original decorations. Legs and arms of pipe cleaners, straws, and sticks are attached. Hair is made of yarn. Eyes are created with buttons, and clothes are made of wallpaper.

THE FOURTH graders wrote stories on shoes of all kinds. The theme is "Shoes Are Made for Talking." The shoes were given voices and they told the stories of their lives. Stories about high heels, cowboy boots, and tennis shoes were written. The fourth grade teacher is Mrs. Kathy Johnson.

The students also wrote haiku poems. A haiku is a Japanese poem which contains three lines with five, seven, and five syllables. The students wrote haikus about spring, trees, flowers, and animals. The following are two examples of the typical literature they are writing.

Bunnies are free to roam around in trees and grass. They dig holes to sleep in peace. Kevin Criddle

The stars are so bright. The twinkling is a great sight. Peaceful in the sky. Lana Ekberg

The fifth grade students have displayed interesting statistics in the hall. They have created charts by polling students in other grades. Among these statistics are age, freckles, favorite subjects, and hair colors. The fifth grade teacher is Mrs. Samuelsen.

THE SIXTH graders have been very busy. They have recently completed a study on Canada. As a final requirement, the students submitted a project. According to Mrs. Alice Johnson, teacher, the students could create an original game on Canada or make a shadowbox. These boxes are on display outside of the classroom.

Students read a book related to Canada and depicted the book through a shoe box display.

Tammy Nicholson created a box which contained an igloo made out of marshmallows. Much to her surprise, Mrs. Johnson found many marshmallows gone the following day.

The students have also made maps of Canadian products, population, and transportation.

THE SIXTH graders read a biography and wrote a story as if they were that character. The students were depicted as such favorites as Mark Twain, Laura Ingalls Wilder, Amelia Earhart, and Helen Keller. Mini pictures can be found outside of the room.

The pictures are shaped like maple leaves, the national symbol of Canada.

In addition to all of the previous activities, each student was required to read a Newbery Award winning book. Upon completion of the book they wrote one incident from the book as a headline report in a newspaper. The teachers judged the papers on the basis of their title, description, originality, and relation to their book.

Stacey Kluch won first place. Desiree Salmon placed second. Dawn Boatman received third, and Randy Kinney was chosen as runner up. Each winner received a ribbon.

A big congratulations to all winners!

THE SIXTH grade students will put on "a play" for the kindergarten through sixth grades. The first play is called "The Walnut and the Carpenter." Tammy Nicholson will be the Walnut and Dawn Boatman will be the Carpenter. The rest of the students will play the "other" and "saw" parts. The students also will present a shadow play this week called "The Beeman of Ozn."

WE ARE proud of our elementary students and urge them to keep up the good work.

Home Energy Audits Offered

Peoples Natural Gas Company will begin offering home energy audits to their customers this spring, according to Keith Mosley, district manager, for Peoples in Wayne. Required under the National Energy Conservation Policy Act, the audits will assist customers in determining ways they can reduce energy consumption within their homes.
 The audit involves inspection and measurement of all potential sources of heat leaks — windows, floors, chimneys and doors. Mosley said the energy auditor also notes the thickness of insulation and the presence or absence of storm windows, weatherstripping, etc.
 Upon completion of the inspection phase, the auditor telephones this information directly into a computer system. The computer then calculates what changes the house needs, how much they will cost and how long it would take for them to pay for themselves in estimated fuel savings.
 Each audit will take approximately three hours at the customer's home. The cost of the inspection is determined by individual states — and in Nebraska, a home energy audit will cost homeowners $15.
 Peoples Natural Gas Company, which provides retail natural gas service to almost 300,000 customers in a seven-state area, will begin mailing announcements of the audits to their Nebraska customers in March. The audits will be offered to those customers requesting the service on a staggered basis to facilitate manpower and audit scheduling.

PMC Lab Supervisor Is Observed by Students

During their junior year at Wayne State College, students in the medical technology program have the opportunity to observe a professional technologist at work. That technologist is Elizabeth Mohr.

Elizabeth Mohr, a WSC graduate, is lab supervisor at Providence Medical Center in Wayne, and students who are in the clinical chemistry class during the winter term spend one to one and a half hours each week with her.

Mrs. Mohr said the students go on rounds with her and sometimes duplicate the tests she conducts. Otherwise, they observe and ask questions. According to Mrs. Mohr, many of the questions students ask concern how to apply for the clinical year experience at an affiliated hospital, what the interview will be like and what criteria hospitals use to choose med tech students.

Students in the medical technology program take 95 hours of classes at Wayne State College and earn another 30 hours in a clinical program at a hospital.

Mrs. Mohr feels the visits to Providence Medical Center are a good experience for students. She said it gives them an idea of what the duties of a medical technologist are and prepares them for what to expect in their clinical year education. For several years med tech students have been participating in this clinical type program at Providence Medical Center.

"I have enjoyed watching where the students end up," Mrs. Mohr said. "There have been a lot of good students. The program at Wayne State is good. I think the students enjoy it. I've heard a lot of positive comments."

Besides working with students at the medical center, Mrs. Mohr is an adjunct faculty member at WSC and a member of the Medical Technology Committee for the math and science division. For several years Mrs. Mohr has worked cooperatively with the medical technology program at WSC.

Overlay Early

Up to a pint of Banvel over your grass herbicide knocks out broadleaf weeds before corn is 5 inches high.

Knock out velvetleaf and kochia early. Weeds are at their weakest as seedlings... easily controlled with an application of Banvel before corn is five inches high. The early application goes to work before yield robbing broadleaf weeds gain strength and become harder to kill. Without question, it's the best time to control kochia...

velvetleaf... pigweed... sunflower and 44 other problem weeds. Apply your pre-plant incorporated or pre-emergence herbicide early. But hold back on the Banvel overlay until broadleaf weeds begin to germinate. This way, your herbicide is ready to work when it's needed the most... and over a longer period of time. See your ag chem dealer for all the details on the early Banvel overlay program. And keep broadleaf weeds from stunting your crop... and your yields.

The overlay application of Banvel controls many tough to control broadleaf annuals and suppresses troublesome perennials including field bindweed, milkweed and many more.

DR. GARY LEACH examines a dog in the small animal exam room at the new Wayne Veterinary Clinic. The veterinarians said that the new facilities are speedy and efficient.

DR. KEN LISKA tests the new portable X-ray unit in the small animal X-ray room. Because the unit is portable, it also can be used on large animals.

Wayne Vet Clinic New, Improved

When four area veterinarians decided to build a new facility, they spent several years visiting other facilities in Canada, Kansas, Illinois and Nebraska.

Now Drs. Kenneth Liska, J. J. Liska, Gary Leach and David Szymczek of Wayne have moved to a new location and feel that their facility is one of the finest in the state or region.

The four doctors, who are joint owners of the Wayne Veterinary Clinic, have scheduled a grand opening from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Thursday, April 7. They will give guided tours and explain the facilities at that time.

The veterinary business in Wayne is diversified and includes both food-producing animals and companion animals. The expanded facilities located on East Highway 35 provide more room for lab work and contain an X-ray room, boarding kennels, a special surgery suite, a biological cooler, a large animal stall and a post-mortem room.

The spacious building provides a substantial storage area for bulk drugs, which according to the doctors allows the Wayne Clinic to stay highly competitive and provides the veterinarians an opportunity to medicate large herds at one time.

The joint owners of the veterinary clinic stress that they still plan to maintain four mobile units and will probably spend 90 percent of our time in the country.

The majority of their work is done within 15 or 20 miles of Wayne, they said.

The doctors said they chose the new location for their business because it is an agricultural area which will facilitate working on large farm animals and provide easy access by trucks and trailers.

This area has a high concentration of livestock and our veterinary business is a very integral part of it, the doctors said.

Veterinarians are a major part of the food producing chain.

The main reason the new facilities were built is to provide better service to their clients and the community, the four partners stated.

"Our large animal work used to be done only on the farm. With our new facilities, we have a far better prognosis and we can control the conditions," the veterinarians said.

"It was never routine to do a Caesarian section but now with our new facilities, it's no problem."

The Wayne Veterinary Clinic is a distributor of swine vaccine for Nebraska and Wyoming, makes prescription premixes for livestock feeds and manufactures some vaccine.

The clinic even has a mouse colony for testing purposes.

The building has a specially designed heating and ventilating system to eliminate the spread of odors and disease. There are 20 stainless steel kennels for dogs and cats and a corral which is designed to handle 100 cattle at a time.

Increased office space provides room for consultation and record keeping.

Lunch Cuts Could Bring Back Brown Bag

reflects a two billion dollar reduction from the current 1980-81 appropriation.

According to Ray Stenger, director of Child Nutrition Programs for the Nebraska Department of Education, the proposed cuts in federal funding would affect Nebraska as follows:

Nebraska schools would lose approximately five million dollars in cash assistance. Such a loss would have to be recovered through higher lunch prices or through direct school district support of the lunch program.

Higher lunch prices usually mean fewer students participating in the lunch program. With a potential increase in lunch prices next year by as much as 50 to 60 cents, it is quite possible the number of student participants will be substantially reduced. As fewer students participate in the program, the program becomes less cost efficient.

The special milk program would be eliminated. Students who currently receive mid-morning milk free or at a low subsidized price would have to pay the full cost of the milk next school year.

The Nutrition Education and Training Program which was initiated in 1979 and is currently being utilized in 165 public and parochial schools in Nebraska would be eliminated.

Department of Public Welfare figures show the federal government purchased more than $62 million in agricultural products in Nebraska in 1980 for nationwide distribution. This figure could be cut by as much as 80 percent which would result in a $50 million loss to the state's economy.
