Mixup Delays Start of New Wayne Convent

It's going to take a special meeting of the Wayne City Planning Commission — and maybe a prayer or two — to keep the proposed $150,000 Benedictine Sisters convent on its construction schedule.

With bids already let for the project, which is planned for Providence Medical Center grounds just south of the hospital, the Missionary Benedictine Sisters of Norfolk are seeking the special meeting after a public hearing on the project fizzled earlier this week.

SCHEDULED FOR completion within three to four months, the 3,700-square-foot facility was the subject of a public hearing before the commission Monday for a conditional-use permit.

A half-dozen residents from the neighborhood appeared at the 7:45 p.m. hearing at City Hall for what was to have been a presentation by the architects, Charles Beardslee Inc. of Norfolk.

But, the architects failed to appear. And, since no one else representing the project attended, the request for a conditional-use permit was tabled until the next regularly scheduled meeting of the commission, May 4.

Tuesday, Andy Minicz of the Norfolk architectural firm and head draftsman for the proposed convent, said both he and his boss, Charles Beardslee, were embarrassed by a calendar date mixup at their office.

"I TAKE FULL responsibility for the mix-up," Minicz said. "I sent the letter requesting the public hearing for the special use permit and was notified by the city planner that it would be on Monday, April 6. For some reason, I got it twisted up and told my boss (Beardslee) that it was Tuesday night (April 7)."

"So, no one from here attended the meeting, and, of course, I told the sisters that they need not attend unless they wanted to, because they would be adequately represented by Beardslee," Minicz continued.

By Tuesday afternoon, the architectural firm had contacted Glen Ellingson, a member of the commission, in an attempt to schedule a special meeting before the May 4 regular session.

According to Minicz, bids were let on the project, a single-level, wood-frame structure, on April 2 and would expire within 30 days. He said rebidding it would be an unsatisfactory solution, since all the contractors would have seen the figures and could tailor their offers accordingly.

MINICZ SAID the architectural firm would seek the special meeting on behalf of the Benedictine Sisters. He expressed a desire to have it scheduled within a week, well before the expiration date of the bids.

"We told the bidders that the winning contractor could start next week," Minicz said. "All the working drawings are done." Ellingson said that commission chairman

Dan Sherry has the authority to call the special meeting; but that he was out of town until late Wednesday. However, Ellingson said that, in light of the circumstances, he doubted there would be a problem in scheduling the special meeting within the week.

The project, designed primarily as a residential facility, was presented to the architects last September. Architect's drawings indicate the wood-frame structure will have a brick exterior and a single-car garage housed within it.

INTERIOR SPACE will be allocated to four main bedrooms, two extra bedrooms, a kitchen area, living room and chapel area. It has been scheduled for construction just east of the hospital parking lot and about 120-feet west of the Providence Road.

According to Sister Giseline Schaut, procurator of the Norfolk Priory and business See CONVENT, Page 12A

Commission Wants Plan for Review

The Wayne City Planning Commission wants the opportunity to review the city's 1-year and 6-year plans for street improvements.

At least that's the upshot of a request the commission relayed to city planner and building inspector James Holtgreave Monday night.

The request was made by commission member Dr. Ken Liska, a Wayne veterinarian. Liska asked that the request be relayed to the City Council.

AND, ACCORDING to Vern Schulz of the city street department, that's no problem. Tuesday, Schulz said that the report was no secret and he simply overlooked sending this year's plans to the commission.

Schulz said there is nothing in state law that binds the street department to present the plans to the commission for review. But, he did say it was fine with him.

The 1-year and 6-year plans involve a first-of-the-year reports by city street departments in Nebraska that outline priority street improvement projects for the coming year and for five years beyond the current year, according to Schulz.

He said the reports are necessary if cities are to receive Nebraska Department of Roads matching funds to complete designated street improvement projects.

WAYNE'S REPORTS have been approved. They will be updated again in January of 1982, Schulz said.

Construction Project on Schedule

WSC Renovation Needs Budget Shift

The $22 million renovation of Wayne State College's education and humanities buildings is right on schedule.

And, the state Legislature's Appropriations Committee will have an opportunity to keep it right on schedule — September 1981 occupancy — within the next few days.

The committee is being asked to approve a proposed technical amendment (LB 232) that would, if approved by the Legislature, advance a $480,000 renovation project payment schedule from fiscal year 1981-82 to fiscal year 1980-81 — the current fiscal year.

IF THAT AMENDMENT survives the legislative process intact, the college will be able to meet its financial obligations to the contractor, Beckenhauer Construction of Norfolk, within the current fiscal year, which ends on June 30.

According to WSC President Lyle Seymour, Beckenhauer Construction's ability to meet the extensive renovation program's timetable has made the technical amendment necessary. He explained that the amendment, if approved, would enable the Board of Trustees to move already-appropriated funds into the current budget.

The board, meeting in Kearney last week, decided to make the funding suggestion to the Appropriations Committee.

An alternative, Seymour said, would have been to delay the current stages of the renovation so that the contractor's bills came due beyond the 1981-82 fiscal startup date of July 1. Or, to simply delay paying the contractor on time.

Neither seemed appropriate, according to Seymour, since either could have upset the on-time renovation schedule and possibly forced additional costs into the multi-million dollar project.

SEYMOUR SAID a number of things have combined to bring about the situation. First, he said, the initial planning was funded properly and accomplished on schedule. Second, detailed floor plans were available on time, and bid documents were prepared within an appropriate timetable before the renovation began.

"Everything was in place and ready to go," he said. "There was enough money to plan the project thoroughly, but not enough to do it." Then in June of 1980 the money was appropriated. The bids were let late last summer and the contract was awarded in late September, he said.

Construction began in October, Seymour explained, noting that the economic slowdown has made suppliers eager to do business and deliver on time.

"Renovation has gone rapidly and the fiscal year budget of about $771,000 has been eaten up," he said. "We needed the $480,000 advanced from the 1981-82 into the current

Close Encounter

Wakefield Woman's Seatmate Stalked Presidents

By Randall Howell

Enroute to his 22-calibre rendezvous with destiny, John W. Hinckley briefly brushed the life of an unsuspecting Wakefield woman.

But, it took the Federal Bureau of Investigation to convince Faith Nuernberger that it was no April Fool's joke last Wednesday when she learned of her October encounter with the man accused of attempting to assassinate President Ronald Reagan.

"I still get goose bumps just thinking about it," said the retired kindergarten teacher as she described her April 1 telephone conversation with FBI special agent William Fischer of Sioux City, Iowa.

INDEED, NUERNBERGER, a graduate of Wayne State College flew from Lincoln to Chicago on Oct. 7 aboard a United Airlines jetliner. And, indeed, young Hinckley not only boarded the same jetliner, but also sat beside — well, almost beside — her.

She sat in window seat 9A near the wing in the non-smoking section of the cabin. Hinckley sat in the same triple-seat row, but on the aisle side. There was one seat — an empty one — between them for the hour-long flight to Chicago's O'Hare Field.

Hinckley departed at O'Hare Field. Nuernberger continued her scheduled flight to Cleveland, Ohio, she not knowing who he was and he not knowing who she was.

The next time Nuernberger saw Hinckley was on national network television. His 22-calibre escapade on the streets of Washington D.C. had interrupted her afternoon soap opera, "As the World Turns."

IT WAS MONDAY, March 30, the day a salvo of gunshots strafed the presidential party outside a Washington D.C. hotel, wounding the president, his press secretary, a secret service agent and a policeman.

Still unsuspecting, Nuernberger remembered being shocked by the news reports of the assassination attempt. "I just couldn't believe it," said the staunch Reagan supporter.

But, the name John W. Hinckley didn't ring a bell. Not that it should have. Even though the police had identified the sandy-haired Evergreen, Colo., man in custody and were issuing a physical description, Nuernberger hadn't thought about her October airline seatmate.

After all, it was March. The house had been a mess for days while a local contractor worked to remodel several downstairs rooms. And, Nuernberger was beginning to plan another Lincoln-to-Chicago-to-Cleveland airline trip to visit her brother.

Brother Dean (Dr. Dean Nuernberger, music instructor at Oberlin College just 35 miles west of Cleveland) and his wife, Barbara, were eager to have her visit again in April or May.

IN ADDITION to the forthcoming trip — one she makes at least once a year — the Wakefield Centennial celebration was coming up in June and all kinds of things had to be done.

So, as the pussy willows bloomed in the backyard of her west Wakefield home, a white, three-story, wood-frame house that anchors the corner of Maple and Thirds Street, Nuernberger went on about her business and listened to the reports on the recovering president — her president.

Wednesday, April 1, dawned a warm spring day in Wakefield. And, at mid-morning Nuernberger headed downtown for some shopping (groceries, mostly) and to pick up her mail at the Wakefield Post Office.

By about 12:30 p.m. she was on her way home. But, her neighbor, Mrs. Kenneth Salmon, was parked in front of the Post Office. Nuernberger stopped to chat.

THAT'S WHEN Gene Nettleton, Wakefield's assistant chief of police, approached her.

"He said 'Hello, Faith' and began telling me that I had a very important phone call," she recalled this week while recounting the story.

"Right away I thought something happened to someone in the family," she said. "Man, was I scared."

Nettleton, who had checked with Postmaster Charlotte Ekeroth to be double-sure he had the right person, urged Nuernberger to return home to take the urgent call. "I don't think it's too serious," Nettleton said.

home — a home her elderly mother, Amy, lived in for years before moving to the Wakefield Care Center — the telephone rang. It was the FBI.

Special agent Fischer, who is assigned to the Sioux City FBI office to handle cases in northwestern Iowa and northeastern Nebraska, identified himself and explained the nature of his call. Then the quiz began.

Nuernberger said Fischer asked her to recall her Oct. 7 flight from Lincoln to Cleveland with the Chicago connection. "He knew more about it than I did," she said.

"He asked me to describe the man who sat next to me," she continued. "I said he was a young sandy-haired fellow."

Fischer asked Nuernberger if the man had talked to her during the flight. "No he didn't," she said. "He had a magazine and buried himself in it for most of the flight." She did remember the man said "Hello" as he sat down in the aisle seat. She recalled returning the greeting and that he had had on a light rain coat.

"HE DIDN'T TALK to anyone, really," she said. "He had a roll and coffee when the stewardess brought breakfast around." The flight had left Lincoln at 9:30 a.m. Nuernberger had already boarded the plane when the man took the seat, leaving the one between them vacant for the entire flight to Chicago.

She could not recall that the man had carried any luggage or package on board."

Concordia Singers Coming To Grace Lutheran

Residents of Wayne and the surrounding area are invited to hear the Concordia Singers of Seward in concert Monday, April 20, at Grace Lutheran Church in Wayne.

The program begins at 7:30 p.m., according to the Rev. Thomas Mendenhall, pastor at Grace.

The 30-voice choir, a select chamber ensemble of Concordia College, will sing a wide variety of music for Holy Week.

The choir, under the direction of Dr. David Held, will perform "The Seven Words of Christ on the Cross" by Heinrich Schutz. They will also premiere a setting of Psalm 31, written especially for this tour by Charles Ore, professor of organ and composition at Concordia. Included also will be a selection of familiar chorales, hymns and religious folk songs.

The liturgical function of the Singers is demonstrated on tour in the arrangement of the program, which follows the outline of a Lutheran Holy Communion Order. The selections are performed in a liturgical setting. Contributing to the festive nature of the performance is the display of symbolic Lenten and Easter banners in procession.

The Singers also utilize an accompaniment of harpsichord, handbells, and other wind and percussion instruments. The program also allows for congregational participation in the singing of chorales and liturgical songs.

Their performance in Wayne is part of an 11-day concert tour which takes the Singers to congregations and schools in Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana and Michigan.

Dr. Held, director of the Singers, is a 1960 graduate of Concordia. He received his master's degree from the University of Northern Iowa and finished his doctoral studies at the University of Southern California in 1976.

In addition to directing the Singers, he also teaches courses in church music, history of music, organ and voice.

Nebraska Synod Meets at Pender

The Northeast District of the Nebraska Synod of the Lutheran Church of America met at St. Peter's Lutheran Church in Pender March 30. Theme was "Go With the Gospel Till Everyone Knows — We Believe — We Witness."

Information on the ministry and facilities of Tabitha Home in Lincoln was presented by the Rev. Clyde Christmas and Eileen Schneider.

Bishop Dennis Anderson shared the situation and challenges of the Nebraska Synod and compared it with the church in the Book of Acts. He challenged the church to rebirth of spiritual discipline and spiritual knowledge through more consistent reading of the Bible.

The communion service message was given by the Rev. Kenneth Wittrock of Pliger, who compared the area's recent re-joining in the benefits of the rain to the Reign of Christ which brings life and hope to all.

The day's agenda also included resources for the parish ministry and a film, "Joy," focusing on the 1981 LCA Youth Gathering.

Among those attending the meeting in Pender from this area were the Rev. David Newman and Mrs. Clifford Fredrickson, delegates representing Concordia Lutheran Church at Concord.

The Wakefield Centennial Committee is encouraging all local and area artists and craftsmen to display their talents during an Arts and Crafts Festival on June 28.

The festival is being held in conjunction with Wakefield's Centennial observance and will take place in the school auditorium.

A spokesman for the committee said all persons within a 20-mile radius of Wakefield are eligible to enter the show. Exhibitors will be provided tables and will be responsible for their own supplies.

All exhibitors will be required to demonstrate their artistic abilities or craftsmanship and may offer their items for sale.

Deadline for entering the show is June 13. Entries should be sent to Kathy Potter, Route 2, Wakefield, Neb., 68784.

Another activity in Wakefield's Centennial celebration will be the selection of Senior Citizens Royalty.

According to the committee, Mrs. Edith Hanson, Mrs. Esther Turney, Mrs. Charles Pierson, Clifford Busby and Fred Harrison, the King and Queen will be chosen from a list of persons whose names have been submitted in advance to the committee.

Mrs. Hanson, chairman, said everyone is urged to enter their choice of candidates. Deadline for submitting names is Monday, April 13.

To enter, a contestant must be 70 years of age or older by Jan. 1, 1981, must have been born in Wakefield or within a six-mile radius of the community, must have spent at least 60 years in this area, and must be able to participate in a variety of upcoming Centennial activities.

Also during their life span they should have been active in promoting the welfare of the community.

Mrs. Hanson said ballots will be cast from the list of candidates to select the honored couple.

National Library Week

THIS WEEK IS NATIONAL LIBRARY WEEK — a time for residents to learn about the many services available at their local library. Kathleen Tooker, local librarian, invites the public to stop by the Wayne Public Library anytime, but especially during this national observance. "The public may not be aware of all the services their library provides to the community," said Mrs. Tooker. The library is funded by the City of Wayne and by private donations. A donation recently was received by the Wayne Federated Woman's Club and was used to purchase a puppet modeled after the song and poem "I Know an Old Lady." Mrs. Tooker said the puppet is something visible for children who visit the library and will be used to illustrate the "I Know an Old Lady" jingle during reading programs at the library. Pictured getting acquainted with the new puppet are Verneal Ellingson, representing the Woman's Club, Susie Ensz, six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ensz, and Mrs. Tooker. Library board members, who donate both their time and services, are Sid Hillier, chairman, Debbie Ensz, Charlene Rasmussen, Pat Gross and Leila Maynard. Library hours are 1 to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 1 to 6 p.m. Friday, and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday.

Following their marriage, Monks resided in Laurel until 1945 when they moved to Winside.

SOMEDAY, MAYBE YOUR LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY WILL OFFER THESE SAME BREAKS.

MAYBE.

Recently, Northwestern Mutual Life developed a program called "GET MORE OUT OF LIFE". This program provides a 14% average increase in coverage to owners of permanent policies, with no increase in the policy premium.* So while future dividends will be slightly lower than they would have been, future cash values on these policies will actually be higher!

All this results in tax savings being channeled back to policyowners, the true owners of the company.

Imagine - a 14% average increase in coverage per policy. This adds up to 4 billion dollars nationwide!

Other life insurance companies can make such a program available. But The Northwestern is actually doing it! If you want to be a Northwestern policyowner call manager for the proposed convent, the bid will be awarded this week.

If you don't call, well that's the breaks.

Call Northwestern Agent Janice Ellis, 375-1701, 108 W. 3rd, Wayne, NE, 68787

*Policies issued after December 31, 1977 already contain these improved features.

She said sisters had been occupying patient rooms at the hospital and sometimes had to move out to common quarters. "It is not a good condition," she said. "The sisters need separate living quarters in a family-like environment where they can worship together."

 She said the Norfolk sisters had been saving for the project for a number of years.
 During Monday night's public hearing several neighbors asked for information about the project. The commission members had none. The job-explaining the basics fell to city planner and building inspector James Holtgrewe.

ville Brandstetter expressed concern that the commission "should know about it (the project) if it was a matter for public hearing."
 Commission secretary Bob Meyer, who was acting chairman for the meeting and public hearing, told the group: "I've been trying to find out about the project all day."
 Holtgrewe explained to the commission that no zoning change was required for the project, since it was to be a residential structure. Commission approval of a conditional-use permit was the only thing required, he said.

might be the need for the proposed convent ensued.
 BRANDSTETTER wrapped the matter up after 10 minutes by saying, "I think we should have someone representing the project or the hospital here."
 Gary Van Meter, a new member on the commission, moved to table the question. Dr. Ken Liska, a Wayne veterinarian and commission member, seconded. The question was tabled by unanimous vote of the six attending members. Four commission members, Sherry, Tony Netherland and Dr. Sid Hillier, were absent.

Wakefield American Legion Cited

Gary Salmon, commander of the Wakefield American Legion, received a Certificate of Meritorious Service for Outstanding Americanism Programs on behalf of the Legion during the District 11 Convention held recently in South Sioux City.

The post received the certificate for performing outstanding service to the community, state and nation through its efforts in conducting Americanism program activities.

Each year posts submit annual reports to the Department of Nebraska committees. This year Wakefield submitted the second highest report in Nebraska.

The citation was signed by Ed Farr, Department Commander; Duane Bokemper, Department Adjutant; and Frank Hamilton, National Commander and National Adjutant.

The Wakefield Legion also received a Children and Youth Citation from the National Commission on Children and Youth of the American Legion. The citation was given on the recommendation of Ray Griffin of Aurora, Nebraska Children and Youth chairman.

Activities carried out by the Wakefield post include junior league and midget baseball, Boys State, Junior Lawman, Steve Wilkerson Memorial Scholarship, Hospital Auxiliary, flag raising and ticket taking at football games, County Government Day, the observance of all patriotic holidays, providing a local service officer for veterans and assisting with the Dixon County Veterans Aid, providing military funerals, and supporting veterans hospitals in Nebraska and South Dakota.

The post also gives Citizenship and Americanism awards, supports the Siouxland Blood Bank and honors local young persons with special awards.

"Children and Youth and Americanism are two of the American Legion's basic programs," explained Commander Salmon.

Agriculture

Lambs Like the Sunshine

Lambs grow more rapidly and reach market weights sooner, and their feed conversion is more efficient, when exposed to 16 hours of light daily than when light is limited to eight hours each day.

Light at the right point in the light/dark cycle — particularly the 16th-17th hours after dawn — may also be important in obtaining long-day responses in sheep, says Bruce D. Schanbacher, physiologist at the Roman L. Hruska U.S. Meat Animal Research Center in Clay Center.

The increased carcass weight without sacrifice of carcass quality or yield is a distinct advantage of producing market lambs with the aid of artificial lighting, the U.S. Department of Agriculture scientist says.

DAYLENGTH, or photoperiod, appears to be the primary environmental cue that regulates seasonal breeding activity in sheep. Since most lambs are born in spring, rapid, efficient growth during the long days of late spring and summer might be expected in young lambs, Schanbacher points out.

But, under accelerated breeding systems for year-around lambing, some lambs would be ready for feeding out when natural daylength is short. Lambs fed at this time of year can take advantage of artificial lighting schemes for optimum growth and performance, the research says.

Under this management system, lambs could be marketed every 22 weeks — and marketing time might be adjusted to take advantage of favorable seasonal prices.

Schanbacher and meat technologist John D. Crouse compared the performance of growing-finishing lambs exposed to either 8 hours light and 16 hours dark, or 16 hours light and 8 hours dark daily for 12 weeks.

The 24 rams made 20 percent faster gains under the long (16-hour) days, and the 24 ewers gained 15 percent faster feed efficiency was also improved about 7 percent under long days. The light regime did not affect carcass quality. Ram carcasses, however, were leaner, had better yield grades and were heavier than wether carcasses. All carcasses graded Choice.

Laurel, Norfolk Dairymen Cited for Service Records

Two Nebraska Dairy Herd Improvement Association supervisors were recognized in Columbus Tuesday by the Nebraska State Dairymen's Association for length of service.

Cited at the association's annual meeting were Al Dahlkoetter of Norfolk for 25 years and Galen Hartman of Laurel for 15 years. The association's recognition program for supervisors with five or more years of service began in 1969. Prior to this year, 12 other supervisors have been cited for varying lengths of service.

Feeders Host Senators at Meeting in Lincoln

The Nebraska Livestock Feeders Association Board of Directors, including Arl Greve, Wakefield; Walt Beermann, Dakota City; and Gerald Muller, Concord, representing the Northeast Livestock Feeders Association hosted 31 Nebraska state senators at its monthly board meeting in Lincoln recently.

Gerald Muller, president, said the March 31 luncheon meeting gave the feeders and the senators an opportunity to discuss the current price situation for cattle and hogs, which is not as favorable as many expected. Other concerns included water legislation that would be equitable to rural and urban Nebraskans.

the above condition must be used to qualify their movement.

— Stiff penalties imposed for violations.

— Enforcement by means of random audit surveillance for non-vaccinated heifers going to feedlots.

— The Livestock Industries Committee strongly recommends the official calfhood vaccination, with the reduced dosage, of all female calves in Nebraska.

These proposed brucellosis regulations must now be approved by the Bureau of Animal Industries of the Nebraska Department of Agriculture, after public hearings have been held.

THE BOARD approved a brucellosis control plan for cattle, that would include the following provisions:

- Raise vaccination age limit to 12 months.
- Clear and provide for the use of reduced dosage vaccine.
- Female cattle born after 1181 and under 18 months of age entering Nebraska must be either: Official calfhood vaccines. Accompanied by a permit to a feeding operation not including grazing on grass or forage crops where their ultimate destination will be to slaughter. Following shipment, a signed statement would be required from the consignee wherein he states that these heifers will be sold only to slaughter. Nebraska Leads Country In Sprinkled Farm Land

Nebraska led the nation in sprinkler-irrigation acres in 1980 and ranked third in total irrigated acres, according to the latest survey issue of Irrigation Journal.

The big three in irrigation continue to be California with 10 million acres; Texas, 7.8 million acres; and Nebraska, 7.6 million acres.

But in 1980, Texas dropped 13 percent in irrigated acres and Nebraska increased 3 percent, bringing Texas and Nebraska into a virtual tie for second place. If water supply problems continue to plague Texas, Nebraska may well become the most heavily irrigated state in the Nation.

IN SPRINKLER irrigation, Nebraska continues to lead the nation with 3.1 million acres, which represents 40.9 percent of the total number of irrigated acres in the state. Texas is second with 2.2 million acres, and California is third with 2.0 million acres.

Irrigation statistics for Nebraska vary according to the source. For example, the Department of Water Resources reports that 7,769,866 acres were irrigated in Nebraska in 1980. But the Irrigation Journal, whose Nebraska source is Professor Paul-Fischbach of the University of Nebraska Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, reports a total of 7,637,190 acres.

The Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, whose figures will not be released until around the latter part of April, will probably report figures in the range of 7,100,000 to 7,200,000 acres.

Different estimates weight factors differently. Some estimates make more allowances for the weather; others depend more heavily on county totals; others rely more on declarations of intent to irrigate and still others depend more heavily on the annual statewide inventory of center-pivot irrigation systems.

In spite of the different methods and differently weighted factors, the annual estimates have been moving closer to one another in recent years. The range between the highest and the lowest estimate this year may be less than 700,000 acres. At one time the range was more than 1 million acres.

DURING 1980, according to the Department of Water Resources, 1,994 new irrigation wells were registered in Nebraska. That brought the cumulative total through Dec. 31, 1980, to a total of 65,775 registered irrigation wells. If all wells are counted — including those other than irrigation wells — the total number of registered wells was 67,201.

Estimates of the additional number of acres brought under irrigation in Nebraska last year also vary according to the source, but the range is from 130,000 to 250,000 acres. Irrigation Journal estimates the annual increment at 191,990 acres.

According to the Nebraska Crop Statistics, the most heavily irrigated counties in Nebraska during 1979 (the last year of record) were: Dawson, 281,000 acres; Hamilton, 243,000; Buffalo, 234,000; Holt, 231,000; Scotts Bluff, 212,000; Hall, 207,000; Phelps, 206,000; and York, 205,000.

Narrow-row Beans Can Increase Yields

Narrow row planting of soybeans significantly increases yields, according to the 1980 Soybean Row Width and Variety Study conducted at five Upper Midwest locations by Land O'Lakes Agricultural Services, Fort Dodge, Iowa.

During the trials, researchers studied the yield response of current and experimental soybean varieties as well as competitive public and private varieties in 30-inch, 15-inch and 7½-inch row widths.

So that each variety would be grown and observed in its adapted zone of maturity, the study was conducted at Alberta Lea and Worthington, Minn.; Yale, Pelta and Fort Dodge, Iowa. The plots received no cultivation and were treated with a preplant incorporation of Trellan and Amiben, which provided good weed control throughout the season.

"GENERALLY, ALL varieties produced significantly higher yields in 7½-inch rather than 30-inch row widths," explained Ramona Satre, agronomy technical specialist. "When compared with 30-inch row widths, 15-inch spacing produced 11 percent greater yields, while 7½-inch rows increased yields by 19 percent."

Satre explained that, based on an average soybean yield of 40 bushels per acre in 30-inch rows, the study indicated that 15-inch rows produce an additional 4.4 bushels per acre, while 7½-inch row widths increase yields by 7.6 bushels per acre.

Our studies did not conclusively identify any specific 'narrow row' soybean variety," Satre said. "For this reason we plan to continue this study so that, by incorporating this data with future research, we can identify varieties that consistently provide the greatest yield potential for narrow row soybean production."
