Wayne Area Native Worked on Space Shuttle's Fuel-Tank Design

By Randall Howell
When the space shuttle reached Earth orbit from its Cape Canaveral launching pad, Marty Fegley's tension drained. When the Columbia came home, the 34-year-old aeronautics engineer's cheer could be heard all the way back to his native northeast Nebraska. The former Wayne area resident joined millions of Americans in a salute to U.S. space technology and ingenuity.

Fegley worked on the project over two years before joining Atlantic-Richfield Oil Co. in Los Angeles. With a master's degree in aeronautics from the California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, Fegley joined the FEGLEY'S CHEER has a personal footnote — a footnote that puts him — along with his engineering colleagues — in the history book of modern space exploration for helping design and test the Columbia's heat-protection equipment. The equipment, critical protection during the heat-intensive Sunday launch and Tuesday re-entry, kept Fegley busy for about two years as a Rockwell International aerodynamic heating analyst. Rockwell's space division built the orbiter, Columbia, and had the project's integration contract — a contract that brought Fegley into the project. An aeronautics engineering graduate from the University of Colorado at Boulder, National Aeronautics and Space Administration's space shuttle project after working as an air-pollution researcher in southern California.

HE RETURNED from a two-year stint in South America, where he traveled and did marketing studies for pollution control gear, to work for Rockwell in 1978 at Downey, Calif. The space shuttle was engineered there and built a few miles away.

"I was in the group that did aerodynamic heating analysis," he said. "Our whole group was responsible for the tiles that you've heard so much about and the tank, the big tank that was underneath the shuttle (orbiter) when they launched."

According to Fegley, the group was split with part of the engineering crew working on the tiles and part of it working on the heat-resistant fuel tank. Fegley worked with the fuel-tank crew.

THE TANK, which contained liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen at liftoff Sunday, had to be designed to carry the fuel used for the orbiter's launch.

Fegley said it had to withstand the intense heat from the liftoff rocket's engines, and still disintegrate during its fall to Earth after the fuel was spent.

The tank, perhaps the most visible piece of shuttle hardware on the launching pad, had to carry the liquid fuel payload long enough to put the Columbia into orbit. The empty tank was jettisoned and disintegrated.

Fegley, who was born in Wayne when his parents farmed near Allen, said he watched the aborted launch attempt on Friday and was disappointed it had to be scrubbed. He was back in front of the television set Sunday morning, however, to see if his tank held up through the launch.

"ESSENTIALLY, it had to be designed to not melt entirely on the way up, but to melt entirely on the way down," said Fegley, the son of Clayton and Dorothy Fegley, Wayne. Material on the outside of the tank melts at 650 degrees Fahrenheit, he said.

"I really didn't work on the tiles much," he explained, adding that he did confer with the engineers in that group and was aware of design and testing in that aspect of the project.

The Columbia lost upwards of 15 tiles during the mission, but NASA officials said the tile loss did not pose a threat to the re-entry of the stubby space ship.

"It's exciting, there's no denying that," he said from his Atlantic-Richfield office. "My most tense moment was at liftoff. If any problem we anticipated would have developed, it would have developed there," the Redondo Beach resident explained.

"Our (the engineers') big concern was that when a tank that big holds that much liquid fuel, ice often forms on it. The vibration at liftoff could have shaken chunks of ice onto the tiles of the orbiter," he explained.

A GRADE SCHOOL graduate of Sunnyside country school between Wakefield and Allen, Fegley said he came aboard at about the middle of the tank-development project.

"By the time I got there, they were close to finishing the construction on the tank that flew Sunday," he said. Fegley said he worked on updating the test model.

For the past year he has been an Atlantic-Richfield advisor for embryonic business, a division of the oil company that looks into newly emerging technology for business development. Gasohol would be a good example, he said.

He's thought about returning to the space program, but said that in the massive complexity of such a project as the space shuttle "people sort of get lost doing one little thing." Fegley, who graduated from high school in Medford, Ore., said the work is exciting.

"Recognition comes only once every five years or so," he added. "The time in between is full of headaches and heartaches."

HE SAID it was a learning experience for him to watch the complexity of an operation that size from the inside. "I'm in the generation of kids that watched the Mercury and Gemini launches," he said. "My whole educational career was geared for it, but I ended up leaving it. There's a sentimental pang there."

Fegley said he'd rejoin the space program if the long-range projections for the Board Gets Review of Lunch Cuts For Schools

"If we go to $1.50 per school lunch, we might just as well close the program and brown bag it."

Those were the words of Francis Haun, superintendent of the Wayne-Carroll Schools, Monday night as board of education members discussed the impact of the Reagan administration's proposed cuts in the school lunch program.

Haun presented board members with a breakdown of the lunch program and the impact proposed cuts would have if Congress ratifies the president's budget package.

WAYNE-CARROLL schools would lose a total of $34,881 in program funding if the budget cuts are approved. And Haun is making it no secret that it's a serious threat to the system's lunch program.

Board members received the informational report, but will be unable to act in any significant way until Congress deals with the proposed cutbacks.

"At this stage, nobody knows," Haun told board members in response to questions about what the final cuts might be and whether the board could do anything to support what might be left of the program.

Haun said the schools would be hurt the most in the commodities category and the free-and-reduced lunch area. Losses would include $17,161 if the free-lunch program was eliminated, $13,671 in commodities support, $2,887 in reduced-price lunches funding and $1,160 if the special milk program is cut.

ABOUT 450 students participate in the schools' lunch program each day, Haun said. And, about 80 of those eat meals absolutely free.

Board member Becky Keidel said she hoped the board would take a serious look at the needs of those 80 free-lunch students before allowing the program to be eliminated.

"You're not going to be too effective in the classroom with kids who aren't fed," she said.

Misty Makes Her Appointed Rounds in Wayne

MISTY TAKES her owner, Kathy Luff, and a couple of young cowboys for a buggy ride in Wayne. The threesome was out for a sunny spring afternoon ride through town recently. One of the young cowboys is Kathy and Dee Luff's three-year-old son, Lyle. He's the one with the 10-gallon hat. The other cowboy is Erik Wiseman, the three-year-old son of Wayne's Dr. Willis and Karen Wiseman. Erik is in the coonskin hat. Misty was taking Erik home after a ride around the Wiseman's neighborhood.

Council Approves $215,000 In Bonds

Wayne soon will be under a long-range, lower-cost financing plan to pay off a series of city street and water improvement projects.

In an effort to move from the use of warrants — a higher-cost, interim financing step — to pay for the completed projects, the City Council Tuesday night approved an ordinance enabling Wayne to issue $215,000 worth of municipal bonds.

Council members voted unanimously to approve the debt pay-off measure and negotiate the private sale of those bonds to First MidAmerica, a bonding company in Omaha.

PHILIP A. LORENSON, vice president of MidAmerica and financial adviser to the city, told the board it could handle the bonds in two ways — a public sale, or private sale. And he cautioned the board about entering an "unstable public bond market."

The MidAmerica vice president acknowledged the potential for conflict-of-interest influence in the matter and withdrew his company's name as financial adviser on the bond issue matter.

He then made an offer to underwrite the bond issue beginning May 1 at 9.125 percent interest over a 13-year pay-off period.

He said the bonds probably would first be offered to two local banks.

COUNCIL MEMBERS also awarded $48,000 worth of construction contracts for Wayne's new east-side city well and water transmission lines.

Five bids were submitted for the well-digging, power unit and pumphouse portion of the contract. Nine bids were received for the transmission-line portion of the project.

Unique Northern Lights Show Ran Wild Over Wayne

By Randall Howell
The Northern Lights were running wild in the land of the Midwest sun. And, if you missed them Sunday night, you probably missed one of the most spectacular space shows in decades.

Unique in that it — aurora borealis (Latin for Northern Lights) — produced a prolonged, multi-colored canopy of light streaming down from a zenith above northeast Nebraska, the natural phenomenon lasted well into the early Monday morning hours.

MOST DISPLAYS seen by Nebraskans are of the curtain-aurora variety, according to Carl Rump, associate professor of Earth sciences at Wayne State College.

"The curtain-aurora display is usually seen in the north from just above the horizon to a point well below the zenith. The Northern Lights appear to dance and move like a flat curtain against a far-northern sky.

Rump, who watched the northern hemisphere's atmospheric fireworks, said Sunday night's Northern Lights would probably be best described as "a combination overhead rayed-arc and corona display."

Translated, that essentially means that it was theater-in-the-round with trailing and building streams of light — deep red, pinks, whites and greens — from near the horizon to the zenith.

"THAT'S A FAIRLY unique kind of display," Rump said. "Normally, we would get only the streamers (rayed-arc) type."

Rump said another unique feature of the Northern Lights was that most displays, though visible from this area, are very far north. This one, he said, had its most intense display somewhat south of Wayne.

The light show, which rivaled Star Wars' best special-effects cinematography, began to build from a low point in the black, star-studded northwestern sky just after 9 p.m.

White and light-gray fingers climbed toward the zenith in a slow, but steady, progression that was punctuated by quick shots of red and lime-green streamers. Within a half hour the entire northwestern sky was alive from horizon to the zenith.

A BRILLIANT yellow halfmoon, just to the south and west of the zenith, dimmed overhead colors for the first few hours. However, as the setting moon moved beyond the zenith, the intensity of overhead reds, greens and whites increased.

Once the display began to build, there was no stopping it on its march to the zenith and its simultaneous movement to the north and northeast.

Soon overhead streamers, flickering like neon signs, shot to the horizon in extended arcs that disappeared and reappeared in countless shapes and sizes.

SEVERAL TIMES during the extended display, the iridescent streamers and patches surrounded the zenith forming a surrealistic canopy of color.

Blood-red blobs moved and faded to pink only to bleed again. Lime-laced globes jiggled and throbbed, faded and returned elsewhere. Both blobs and globes were speared repeatedly by long, white, curved lances that laced their way through the multi-colored maze.

Beyond the glare of yardlights and streetlights, the northeastern sky began a light show with pulsing strobes and

WSC Instructor Sets Record Straight on Aurora Borealis

Contrary to popular opinion, there is no special season for Northern Lights activity.

Many consider the winter months as the only time Aurora Borealis — Latin for Northern Lights — activity occurs. Not so, says Carl Rump, associate professor of Earth sciences at Wayne State College.

"PEOPLE ASSOCIATE such activity with winter because the nights are longer and the atmosphere is often clearer for better observations," he said.

Rump explained that Northern Lights activity is closely associated with solar activity and is somewhat predictable.

"The sun is the main cause of it all," he said. "That's the real point of origin." Rump explained that the end of an 11-year sunspot maximum, a time-frame in which the intensity of sunspot activity is measured, is near, but that the solar storms are still intense.

AND, THOUGH the sunspots look like a spot on the sun's surface, he said, there actually are violent magnetic storms that cause solar flares.

During those flares, he said, material — bits and pieces of electrically charged atoms — is blasted out from the sun's surface. The charged particles eventually encounter the Earth and are trapped by the planet's magnetic field.

The Earth's Van Allen Radiation Belt, a magnetic field in space that reaches deep into the Earth at its geomagnetic poles (which are close, but not the same as, the North Pole and the South Pole), intercepts the particles and captures them.

THOSE CHARGED particles will travel down along the magnetic field's lines into the Earth's atmosphere, charging it. It's just like a neon sign where electrically stimulated, or charged gas, stimulates light," he said.

Sunday night's display — a combination overhead-arc and corona Northern Lights display — is observable this far south when the magnetic field gets somewhat distorted, he said.

"It's best described as a localized outbreak — a display other than at the geomagnetic poles," he said. Rump said the most intense activity actually was somewhere south of Wayne, which made it even more unusual.

COLOR INTENSITY, he said, basically depends on the energy within the particles, or the intensity of the electrical charge and the type of gases the particles encounter.

Different gases produce different colors and the electrical charge, plus altitude of the display can vary the colors greatly. He said it takes the particles two days to get here from the sun, which gives it an element of predictability.

Allen Senior in Phi Beta Kappa

Forty University of Nebraska seniors were initiated into Phi Beta Kappa, Arts and Sciences honorary, last week in a ceremony preceding the organization's spring banquet in the Nebraska Union.

Speaker at the banquet was June Levine, UNL associate professor of English, whose talk was titled "The Movies: Beyond Kiss Kiss Bang Bang."

The new Phi Beta Kappa members include Lori Linette Von Minden, Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Merle Von Minden, Allen. The political science major is planning to seek employment with U.S. Congress in Washington D.C.

First Place Typist

Tammie Rose Schulz of Wayne, a junior at Chadron State College (CSC), won first place in the professional typing contest at the Nebraska Phi Beta Lambda Spring Conference held this past week in Kearney.

She is now eligible to compete in the national contest to be held in Chicago in July.

Two more CSC students also won firsts at the state contest and will enter the national competition. Phi Beta Lambda is an national business honorary.

Womens Softball Gets Boost

The Wayne Eagles Auxiliary recently presented a check for $300 to the Wayne Womens Softball Association.

The money amounts to half of the proceeds raised during a stagette sponsored by the Eagles Auxiliary in late February. Sally Hammer, chairman of the stagette, said the other half of the proceeds will go towards an Eagles humanitarian project.

Deb Daehnke is president of the Womens Softball Association.

Lambda Delta Lambda Anniversary

The Wayne State College chapter of Lambda Delta Lambda, physical science honorary, recently celebrated its 50th anniversary with an open house in Carhart Science Building.

The open house included a program from the Cosmos series, a slide presentation and tour of the grounds, a planetarium show, and an evening banquet with guests being welcomed by Dr. Lyle Seymour, WSC president.

Lambda Delta Lambda was established to promote interest in the study of the natural sciences and to recognize and encourage a high standard of scholarship in these subjects. This year's officers at Wayne State are Sharie Wragge of Pierce, president; Steve Sulficool of Crofton, vice president; Val Wagner of Norfolk, treasurer; Maggie Horak of Clarkson, secretary; and Charotte Wiggins of Petersburg, educational and social coordinator.

Labor Survey Scheduled

A sample of households in this area will be visited by the Bureau of the Census interviewers during the work week of April 20-24 to conduct the bureau's monthly survey of employment and unemployment.

Households in this area are part of a sample of 78,000 across the country, scientifically selected to represent a cross section of all U.S. households.

The monthly survey is conducted by the U.S. Department of Labor and provides a continuous record of activity in the labor force.

Job Applications Available

Applications for summer jobs through the Nebraska Department of Labor Comprehensive Employment and Training Units' Summer Youth Employment Program (SYEP) are now available.

Youth in need of summer employment may get information and applications from school counselors, Job Service Offices or from the Northeast Region CEFTA office in Norfolk.

Young persons aged 14 to 21 must have a social security number, live in Nebraska and either meet U.S. Department of Labor income guidelines or have a handicap that is a substantial barrier to employment to be eligible for a job through the program.

The SYEP provides summer jobs from June 8 through Aug. 21 with community service agencies at a minimum wage of $3.35 an hour.

Dorceys Announce Purchase

Century 21 Franchise in Wayne

It was formally announced today by the officers of the State-National Farm Management Company that they have purchased the Century 21 franchise for the Wayne, South Sioux City and Dakota City area; and they simultaneously announce the opening of a branch office at 1521 Broadway Street in Dakota City, adjacent to the Dakota County Courthouse.

Mark Dorcey, formally associated with the real estate firm of Century 21 Wear Company of Omaha, is presently living in South Sioux City and will be the manager of the branch office in Dakota City. The personnel of the Wayne office will remain the same.

It is the intent of the firm to bring the same professionalism to the real estate business as they have in the past.

The firm is presently managing farms-in Wayne, Dixon, Thurston and Dakota Counties and handling sales of farms, residential, business and development properties in Wayne, Laurel, Dixon, Concord, Wakefield, Emerson, Carroll, Randolph, Wisner, Pender and now in the Dakota County area.

Century 21 State-National has chosen Dakota City as the site for their Branch office because of the many requests from clientel and friends in Dakota County plus the fact that Dakota County is one of the fastest growing counties in the State of Nebraska.

The firm is also announcing their real estate licensure for the state of Iowa, memberships in the Dakota County Board of Realtors, the Greater Siouxland Board of Realtors and the Greater Siouxland Multiple Listing Service of Sioux City.

It is the feeling of the management that the association with Century 21 will help serve the real estate industry and the needs of the public in listing their property for sale or seeking to purchase or manage real estate, the local branch office said.

Century 21 is the nation's number one real estate marketing service with some 8,000 offices nationwide. The Lewis and Clark Board of Realtors membership covers a seven-county area in Northeast Nebraska.

The local offices will also work in association with more than 200 Siouxland real estate personnel in the Greater Siouxland Multiple Listing Service.

A Seward couple escaped serious injury Sunday in a motor cycle accident one mile north and a mile east of Wayne, according to the Wayne County Sheriff's Department.

Daniel E. McCright, 26, and his wife Valerie, 27, a passenger on the cycle, dumped the south bound cycle on the a county road near a stop sign intersection.

According to the Sheriff's Department, McCright saw an eastbound car stop at the intersection, then roll forward. In a defensive action, McCright hit the brakes, went into a skid and slid to a stop with the cycle on it's right side.

Both cycle riders had minor abrasions.

Airport to Celebrate Its 50th Anniversary

Wayne Municipal Airport marks its golden anniversary this year.

And, the Wayne Municipal Airport Authority has begun work on plans to celebrate the 50 years of service to the community.

According to Mitchell Nissen, chairman, authority board members meeting Monday night began preliminary discussion on when and how to celebrate the anniversary.

NOTHING FIRM was decided, Nissen said, but talk involved developing a complete history of the airport, in addition to some kind of public celebration.

Nissen said October is General Aviation Month and board members were searching for a possible tie in with that for the celebration.

We definitely plan to have something," Nissen said. "Right now we're open to suggestions."

He said board members also discussed the possibility of a fly-in to help mark the anniversary. The Wayne Chamber of Commerce has offered to help with the anniversary celebration project, he said.

IN OTHER action, the board approved the lease contract for the airport's non-directional beacon, a navigational aid that enables pilots to use instrument landings in adverse weather.

The equipment is leased from the state, Nissen said. And the contract includes maintenance.

Nissen said there was a short discussion on the airport improvement project, which involves a new runway, as well as runway and hanger improvements.

School Slates '50s Day

Wayne's Middle School students will do the 1950s next week.

The school's annual 50s Day is Friday, April 24, and out come the leather jackets, greased back hair, pop-it beads, old letter sweaters and you name it.

According to Dick Metteer, principal, Wayne area residents who own 1950s vintage cars have agreed to take them to the school parking lot during the lunch hour — 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. — that day for a show.

Metteer said anyone wanting to participate in the 1950s car show should contact him at the Middle School.

Afternoon activities include an old radio type fair show at the high school lecture hall for seventh and eighth graders.

Metteer said there will be jitterbug, hula hoop and limbo contests. A quiz game involving questions about the '50s and a guess the recording artist contest will be part of the program.

Lights

splashes as the display attempted to reform to the south. White sheets of liquid like red and pink billowed to the northeast around 11 p.m., misty wisps of smoke like white whirled near the zenith sending rays toward Earth.

LIKE A LAS VEGAS light show, the colors blinked and rippled — undulating under an umbrella of soundless space.

The Wayne wind was calm and, except for an occasional nightbird's squawk, the silent spectacular played itself out only to the oohhs and aaahhs of observers.

Fading and recharging several times, the Northern Lights toyed with the Big Dipper as distant stars twinkled through the rich and pastel colors. Like rhinestones, they seemed — at times — sewn to the spotches, then lost in the intensity of the kaleidoscopic cloth.

ACCORDING TO Rump, the colors and their intensity in such a display depends on a number of factors, among them the altitude at which the display is taking place.

He said that in the past 20 years he'd only seen one other display that came close to matching the unique features and intensity of color in Sunday night's show. And, he said, that was not here, but in Indiana.

"It was a very special event," he said. "Those who saw it were witness to a massive display of Northern Lights activity. Those who didn't are kicking themselves."

RUMP ESTIMATED that the dazzling display was visible — as Wayne residents saw it — within a radius of 500 miles. "It was a very localize thing," he said. "And, very rare."

He said that it is "typically, not likely" that a comparable display would be seen again soon. Although some reports indicated, that the display might continue for several consecutive nights, Rump noted that cloud cover and other weather factors could prevent the kind of clear observation that was available Sunday night.

"Who knows, though, we could see a better one in the next few days," he said.

Police Report

Wayne Police are searching for the owner of a glass jar containing $9.78 in coins.

A city police officer found the jar in the alley north of Ivan Beeks office in the 200 Block of Nebraska at 5:45 p.m. Sunday.

It has been placed in a safe at the Police Department.

Thieves swiped the hubcaps off the left side of a 1977 Oldsmobile Cutlass owned by Diane Kleckhafer of Wakefield while it was in the Wellman's IGA parking lot around 2 p.m. Saturday.

The incident brings to 14 the number of wire-rimmed hubcaps stolen in Wayne within the last week.

An Easter Message

Celebration of Easter Is Reminder of Life

In the following Easter message provided for readers of The Wayne Herald, the Rev. Daniel Monson, pastor of Redeemer Lutheran Church, reminds us that for Christians, Easter is the celebration of life.

When I was a child in Sunday school, Easter was always very special. I remember the way the Sunday School Superintendent conducted our opening worship in the church, surrounded by lilies.

I also remember one Easter when he asked the whole Sunday school, "What does Easter mean?" We all laughed when one of the children answered, "It's when the Easter bunny lays the eggs."

THERE HAS always been an emphasis on bunnies and eggs, and flowers at Easter. What such an emphasis can do to us is to make us concentrate on the frills instead of the meaning behind them.

In our family, one of the frills was an Easter morning egg eating contest. With other families, the frills may have been Easter egg hunts, or getting some baby chicks, or seeing how special we can clothe ourselves for the Easter parade on Easter worship.

By the way, I'm a little grateful that the large and showy Easter bunnies have gone out of style for the ladies. Not only was their use highly competitive, but it was nearly impossible for the rest of the congregation to see over or around the milliner's monstrosities that appeared at worship.

Flowers, eggs and bunnies all have a part in Easter, but not necessarily for the reasons most suppose.

FOR CHRISTIANS, Easter is the celebration of life. Because our observance comes in the Spring, the beginnings of the life cycle in eggs, chicks, bunnies and flowers are meant to symbolize the return of vibrant life after the cold dormancy of winter.

The cold and dark of winter symbolizes death and the grave. Springtime is the reminder of more beauty to come. So Easter brings us the understanding that God has promised us more than is yet to come.

SO, THE Easter faith centers on the return of life, and that return serves as a promise for more life to come. As important as Good Friday is,

Christian faith is not ultimately built on the celebration or concentrations on Christ's death. In fact, if the Cross had been the end of the stories of the Gospels, the Gospels themselves would not have been the kind of "good news" they represent. The Christian Church has always proclaimed the centrality of the message of the Resurrection.

It was this message which was the core of the Apostolic preaching as evidenced in the book of Acts. It was this message that brought the use of Sunday for worship, as a weekly reminder of Easter.

This is the affirmation that for Christians the new creation of Resurrection is even more important than the act of creation. The Resurrection is still central to Christian faith and life.

WE LIVE in a time when some people have become fascinated by Eastern religions and their exotic ideas. One idea that has fascinated some people has been that of reincarnation. This is an intriguing fascination because reincarnation has its origin in religions which are basically life-denying, that do not believe that life is good, and that believe that to escape life is the ultimate goal.

In fact, in these religions, reincarnation is most often thought of as a punishment, a requirement to re-enter the torture of life.

THOSE WHO understand fully the Christian idea of resurrection believe that the Christian faith has something better and more valuable to offer. We begin with the affirmation that life is basically good. It is God's gift to us, meant to be enjoyed. Although our lives are tainted by sin, God offers to restore its joy through forgiveness. When this present life is over, God promises us a new life with him forever. This new life, without sin, is superior to our present life. Because this is the faith we hold, the way we live out our days is important, for there are eternal consequences in the choices we make.

There is no such thing as a trivial or meaningless decision, where faith is involved.

THE FULL appreciation of the meaning of Easter is able to transform life. With it comes joy and hope, commitment and dedication, purpose and fulfillment.

May your celebration of Easter be a reminder to you that because Jesus Christ lives the promise of life for us is real, solid, and filled with joyful expectation.

Peace to All this Easter in Church

Pictured accompanying Plendl is Gary Troth on guitar. Troth also served as emcee for the program, which was coordinated by Sandy Chase. 'DogGonged' Good Show Several courageous Allen residents were poked fun at, booped, hissed, whistled at and even gonged Saturday evening during the fourth annual Gong Show at Allen High School. But thanks to those few brave souls who refused to perform despite the audience jeers, the Allen High band raised slightly over $1,900 to help pay expenses when they attend Dakota Band Days next month in Rapid City, S. D. The gymnasium overflowed with local and area residents who came to see their friends and relatives perform a variety of serious and not so serious routines.

Sandy Chase was coordinator of the program and Gary Troth served as emcee. Cardigan was Alicia Starling. Judging the acts were Gene Johnston of Pender, a former teacher at Allen; Mona Jean Roberts, head school cook at Allen; and Channel 9 weatherman Tom Peterson. Peterson presented his own act, a River City pool room scene, which was accompanied by Allen band director Helen Mogen at the piano. Taking home the first place award, a Gold Medal Gong, was Lisa Erwin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Erwin, who sang "Never Gave Up."

Coming in a close second was David Plendl performing his rendition of Mac Davis' hit song, "Oh Lord It's Hard to Be Humble," accompanied by Gary Troth on the guitar. Other performers and their acts were Wayne Trevett as Slim Whitman; Tami Jewell and Kathy Nice as "The Fruit Couple"; the Eagles' Les Baton twirling group headed by Jeanne Warner; "You, You, You," Amy Noe on the balance beam; Terry Kellogg who sang "Dream On" by the Oakridge Boys; Brian

Omaha Ballet Tour Includes Wayne

Omaha Ballet, one of the fastest growing regional dance companies in the United States, will perform at 8 p.m. Wednesday, April 22, in Ramsey Theatre on the Wayne State College campus.

Tickets will be available in the foyer of the Val Peterson Fine Arts Center at 7:30 p.m. on the night of the performance at a cost of $2.50. Admission is free for Wayne State college students, faculty and staff, and holders of special activities passes.

The program is organized by the WSC special programs committee with state funds as budgeted in the general college budget with occasional help from outside agencies.

The Omaha Ballet's touring program has extensively grown to include "The Nutcracker," full performance, "Sampler" (a mini-program), and "Peter and the Wolf."

The Omaha Ballet first became a full-time, year-round operation in the fall of 1975, when Thomas Enckell and Katharyn Horne were hired as Artistic Directors.

Omaha Ballet now offers a fine and exciting young company of professional soloists and well disciplined corps; one of the richest repertoires anywhere in the midwest, an endless variety of styles, from the great classics to the most contemporary; world famous guest stars, renowned choreographers, exciting world premieres.

In addition to regular performances and rehearsals for these performances, company operations include year-round company classes, a demanding, apprentice program, a career-oriented school with very limited enrollment, and an expanded summer course, open to the public. Dancers, apprentices and students are selected through yearly open auditions.

The Omaha Ballet has performed with Metropolitan Opera Ballet in New York, Malmö Municipal Theatre in Sweden, Manhattan Technical Ballet, Finnish National Ballet, and the American Ballet Theatre.

Concordia Singers Presenting Music for Holy Week and Easter

Festive settings of "Crown Him With Many Crowns" by Walter Pell, and "Lift High the Cross" by Carl Schalk will feature organ, brass, choir, and congregation.

Young Author Singled Out

A budding young author from Wayne has been singled out for her work and will attend a Young Author's Conference this month in Kearney, where she will meet other young authors from across the state.

Ann Mueller, a fifth grader at St. Mary's School, submitted her story, "The Golden Poppy," to the Young Author's Conference committee and was one of 200 youngsters at grade levels one through six picked to attend the state gathering April 25 in Kearney. Manuscripts on any topic of any length, and in any form, prose, poetry, drama, fiction and non-fiction were submitted to each young writer. Works by youths chosen to attend the conference were judged best on the basis of originality, interest to children, creativity, and overall writing quality.

At the conference, the young authors will meet Gail Rock, the award winning author of "The House Without a Christmas Tree." In addition, entertainment will be provided by Kearney State College students. The conference will end with a presentation of a certificate to each young writer.

Ann is the daughter of Leigh and Connie Mueller, who will accompany their daughter to the Kearney conference. Also attending will be Ellen Imdieke, principal at St. Mary's School.

According to Ann, "The Golden Poppy" is the story of a young girl, Penny, who took very good care of her flowers. One day she discovered a gold poppy which could change figures and talk.

The poppy took Penny, along with five other persons, to a Land of Flowers where they were told to obey certain rules. All of the visitors, except Penny, were asked to leave when they broke the rules.

Because she never harmed the flowers, Penny was allowed to visit the garden and with the fairies whenever she wished.

Ann's fifth grade teacher at St. Mary's is Ellen Imdieke.

Stuthman-Milander Exchange Vows at Altona First Trinity

Karen Lee Stuthman and Dean Milander exchanged marriage vows April 4 at First Trinity Lutheran Church, Altona, with the Rev. Paul Jackson of Wakefield officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Stuthman of Wayne and is a 1981 mid-term graduate of Wayne-Carroll High School.

The bridegroom was graduated from Hartington High School in 1979 and attends Wayne State College. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Milander of Hartington.

Gina Stuthman of Wayne registered the guests, who were ushered into the church by Thomas Stuthman of Grand Island and Thomas Burney of Hartington.

Mrs. David Hix of Wayne was organist for the 5 o'clock double ring ceremony. The congregation sang "O Perfect Love." Decorations included two altar bouquets of pink mums, carnations and daisies.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, chose a gown of white organza and lace over angel mist taffeta. The square neckline and bodice featured an over the shoulder three-tiered ruffle caught at the back waist by an organza bow. The long fitted sheer sleeves were banded at the wrist by matching ruffle. The high rise waistline accented the semi full skirt of Chantilly lace with an organza overlay ending in a chapel train.

Her Chantilly edged illusion veil was held in place by a band of lace and pearls, and she carried silk mulberry roses, white stephanotis and azaleas accented with baby's breath and mulberry streamers.

The bride's honor attendant was Teresa Haines of Norfolk, and bridesmaids were Chris Stuthman, Rosella Marshall and Marcia Rethwisch, all of Wayne.

Their two-piece gowns of rose knit were designed with gathered bodices highlighted by spaghetti straps. The empire waistlines accented the full sunburst accented pleated skirts. The gowns were topped by a removable cocoon style jacket featuring crocheted edging. Each carried a bouquet of white roses and wine baby's breath.

Charles Meirose served as best man. Groomsman were Robert Milander, Michael Lentz and Thomas Marsh. All are of Hartington.

The bridegroom was attired in a white tuxedo with a mulberry rose and wine baby's breath boutonniere. His attendants wore silver tuxedos with white shirts with ruffles trimmed in varying shades of rose.

The bride's mother selected a pink chiffon dress in floor length, and the bridegroom's mother chose a turquoise knit, also in floor length. Both mothers wore corsages of white roses and pink poms with mulberry trim.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Winter of Norfolk greeted guests who attended a reception in the First Trinity School basement following the ceremony. Gifts were arranged by Lori Mikkelsen and Jan Mikkelsen of Wayne.

Randy's Recap

According to Randy Hascall

Performances Improve

Athletes Break Records

WAYNE STATE COLLEGE should be pretty proud of its spring sports teams this year.

The baseball team, despite a few downfalls, has had a successful season thus far and is batting at a .341 pace. I don't remember ever seeing any college level team hit at that hot of a clip.

Northeast Nebraska is a hotbed for baseball and the WSC roster will prove that. Listed on the varsity roster are four players from Wayne, two from Wakefield, two from Norfolk, one from Concord and one from Ponca. Add to that list four Omaha players, a couple others from southeast Nebraska, three Iowans and two players from the East Coast and you have a solid team.

If coach Ron Jones can pick up a couple of strong pitchers for next year, the team should be even better.

At this time, it appears that Wayne's Bill Schwartz, a junior, should be in consideration for All-America honors if he continues to play nearly as well as he has early this season.

WSC's track and field teams have been doing quite well and a few records have fallen. Ed Blackburn, the household name in northeast Nebraska track, is the leader on the men's team.

One of the leading hurdlers in the nation, Blackburn should be an All-America candidate if he can come back from an injury and stay healthy the rest of the season. He injured himself at a meet last week and is now recuperating.

Several other athletes have been doing well and should lead the Wildcats to a successful season. Joe Ortmeyer of West Point recently broke the school's high jump record.

In women's track, several individuals have been doing well and should have good marks in conference and district competition.

THE WAYNE SWIM CLUB completed its season with a banquet at the United Presbyterian Church last Friday.

Doug Krecklow, head swim coach at Omaha Westside addressed the group, speaking on motivation and giving advice.

Krecklow, as some readers may remember, and his wife are 1974 Wayne State graduates. He taught and helped coach at WSC in 1977-78 and is now completing his second year at Westside. In two years, Krecklow has won two boys state titles and one girls championship.

This past year, the Wayne Swim Club took 40 swimmers to 12 meets and won 672 ribbons. Parent attendance at those meets was estimated at 80 to 90 percent.

Wayne State Women Lose Games in UNL Tourney

The Wayne State College Lady Wildcats ran into some tough competition this past weekend as they traveled to Lincoln to play in the University of Nebraska's softball tournament and were defeated in all four of their outings.

In the first contest of the weekend, the Lady Cats lost to Northwest Missouri State University by the score of 11-1. Taking the loss for the Cats was Cindy Stella. Wayne State committed eight errors in the game as Northwest Missouri State scored 10 runs in the bottom of the fifth inning.

Game two saw Wayne State lose to UNO by the score of 7-0. The Lady Wildcats were held hitless in the contest and Lynn Larson was the losing pitcher.

In Saturday's action, WSC was defeated by the University of Minnesota 6-0 as again Wayne State was held to a minimum of hits. Cindy Stella was the losing pitcher.

In the final game of the tournament for the Wayne State team, the Wildcats lost to Iowa State 2-1 in eight innings. Defensively, the Cats played well but once again Wayne State was held to just three hits. Lynn Larson suffered the loss.

Bancroft Slips Past Trojans

A dropped fly ball with two outs in the bottom of the seventh inning gave Bancroft the two runs it needed to nip Wakefield 9-8, Thursday.

The Bulldogs had runners on second and third bases and were one out away from defeat. The dropped fly allowed both runners to score.

"We didn't make many mistakes but the ones we made were costly. They came at a bad time," Wakefield coach Joe Coble said. "We should have had the game in our pocket."

It did indeed appear that the Trojans had the game in their pocket. They led 8-2 going into the fifth inning but some defensive mistakes proved costly.

Wakefield scored its first run in the bottom of the second inning and led 5-2 after the third inning. Three insurance runs in the bottom of the fourth gave the Trojans an 8-2 advantage.

Bancroft, which was held to only five hits in the seven-inning game, rallied for five runs in the top of the fifth closing the difference to 8-7. The two-run rally in the seventh gave the hosts the victory.

Jeff Hallstrom suffered the loss for Wakefield while Logeman was the winner. Leading batters for the Trojans were Keith Roberts and Mark Starzl, each with two hits in four at bats. Dale Phipps, Wayne Guy, Billy Warren and Jeff Hallstrom had one hit apiece. Starzl and Warren scored

Bulldogs Avenge Wayne

Bancroft's bats stayed warm despite strong north winds and temperatures in the mid 40's as the Bulldogs avenged Wayne 7-2 in Northeast Nebraska baseball action, Monday.

This was the same team that had fallen to the Blue Devils 12-0 in five innings less than two weeks ago.

Wayne's pitching was rocked for 10 hits and seven runs in the game played at the Wayne State College field. Of the 10 hits, two were doubles and one was a triple.

Bancroft scored the game's first run in the first inning on a walk, a stolen base and a double. Wayne tied the game at 1-1 as Tim Pfeiffer scored in the bottom of the inning. Pfeiffer reached base on a fielder's choice and later scored on a fielding error.

The score remained tied until the fourth inning when the hosts got on top 2-1. Brian Fleming, who had two hits in three plate appearances, reached base on an error by Bancroft's right fielder and took second on the play.

Jim Sperry moved Fleming to third with a sacrifice bunt and Todd Schwartz drove him home with a sacrifice fly to right field.

Bancroft came right back in the fifth. Starting pitcher Kevin Nissen, who held the visitors to three hits in the first four innings, loaded the bases on two singles and a walk.

Tim Pfeiffer came on in relief and struckout the next two batters. With two outs and bases loaded, Bancroft's Nolanman drove in three runs with a triple down the right field line. Jim Sperry finished the game on the mound for the Devils.

Bancroft added some salt to the wound with two more runs in the sixth inning for an eventual 7-2 triumph.

Wayne's record is now 2-2 and 1-2 in the Northeast Nebraska League.

The Blue Devils were scheduled to host Laurel yesterday (Wednesday) and Wakefield next Wednesday (March 22).

TODD PFEIFFER, Wayne third baseman, makes the tag on this Bancroft player for an out. The Bancroft runner got caught too far off of third base as a teammate stole second base. Wayne's catcher threw the ball back to the pitcher instead of throwing to second base and the pitcher caught this player with a large lead off base.

Koester Earns WSC Honor

The Central States Intercollegiate Conference has announced its 1981 all conference women's basketball selection for the past season.

Wayne State forward Lori Koester of Concord, center Julie Petronis of Sioux City and sophomore guard Lisa Draper of Council Bluffs all received recognition for their efforts this past year.

Koester was a first team selection as she led the Wildcats in scoring with an average of 15.5 per game. Koester ended her career as one of Wayne State's most consistent players.

Petronis and Draper received honorable mention honors as they both provided the Wildcat fans with some exciting performances this past season.

Wildcats Split Action Against Peru State

The Wayne State College baseball team split a doubleheader with the Peru State Bobcats Saturday, winning the first game 15-4 in five innings and losing the nightcap 10-9.

In the first game, Wayne State's catcher Mike Meyer collected two hits in three at bats and knocked in five RBIs to lead the Wildcats on to their 10th win of the season. Grady Hansen picked up the win for Wayne State. Brian Blatchford and Bill Schwartz added home runs to the Wayne State attack as the Wildcats pounded out 13 hits in the game.

In the second game, Peru State came back to score four runs on a grand slam in the bottom of the seventh inning to sneak by the Wildcats in the district game. Mark Glatzer and Meyer hit home runs for the Cats and Jeff Creamer picked the loss.

Wayne State is now 16-12 on the season.

Blackburn Pulls Muscle

Wayne State College head track coach LeRoy Simpson has announced that his premier all-American 110 high hurdler Ed Blackburn will be out of competition for a couple of weeks due to a hamstring muscle pull that he sustained at the Dordt Invitational April 7.

Blackburn, who presently is ranked fifth in the nation in the NAIA with a time of 14.3, was scheduled to participate in the Kansas University relays April 17 and 18. His best time in the high hurdles last season was 14.1 as he finished fifth in the national track meet. Simpson stated, "We are on a day-to-day basis so we'll just have to wait and see how Blackburn responds to treatment before he runs in competition again."

New FAA President Elected

Mark Doyle of Omaha Burke High School is the new state president of the Nebraska Association of Future Farmers of America. Doyle was elected at the final session of the group's 53rd annual conference in Lincoln April 11.

Doyle and his staff of officers for the coming year were brought from the audience by their predecessors, charged with their duties and sworn in in a colorful ceremony. Patty Raymer of West Holt (Arlinson) was elected as state secretary of the association. Area officers, who assist the president and secretary in planning for the 1982 conference, also were named.

New area vice presidents are Todd Knobel, Fairbury, southeast area; Randy Svehla, Clarkson, northeast area; Ross Knott, Sargent, central area; and Mark Ford, Cody-Kilgore, western area.

New area chairmen are Monica Dolezal, East Butler, southeast area; Debbie Scholz, Howells, northeast area; Ron Arp, Sutton, central area; and Steve Peterson, Curtis-Medicine Valley, western area.

Zorinsky Offers Farm Bills

Senator Edward Zorinsky has introduced two agriculture export bills. Zorinsky said he intends to offer the two bills as amendments to the 1981 farm bill, scheduled to be debated by the Senate Agriculture Committee shortly after the April recess.

The first bill offers American farmers some protection from embargoes. Zorinsky noted that under current law, price supports would increase to compensate farmers for the loss of their export markets only when an embargo was imposed for short supply reasons. The Zorinsky bill would also require that price supports be increased to the average market price for the 15 days preceding the embargo, if the President imposed the embargo for foreign policy or national security reasons.

The second Zorinsky bill would establish a revolving fund for export credits. Since 1979 the Administration has no longer offered direct credits to countries who wish to purchase American agricultural goods. The Zorinsky bill would set up a revolving fund for these credits to encourage further market development. The fund would be financed by repayments of already outstanding loans and by a single initial appropriation.

Corn Deficiency Payment Out

The U.S. Department of Agriculture will make no deficiency payments on the 1980 crops of corn and sorghum, according to Edward Hews, acting administrator of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Under current legislation, deficiency payments are made to producers when the average market price received by farmers during the first five months of the marketing year (October through February) is less than the established "target" price.

The national weighted average price received by farmers during the October 1980 through February 1981 period was $3.11 per bushel for corn and $3.04 per bushel for sorghum. Since these prices are above the 1980 target price of $2.35 per bushel for corn and $2.50 per bushel for sorghum, no deficiency payments are required, Hews said.

Soils Judging Contest Slated

The University of Nebraska Lincoln Agronomy Department will be headquarters for the 21st National College Soils Judging Contest April 23-24. But the contest itself will be held in a field located somewhere within a 30-mile radius of Lincoln.

Dr. Dave Lewis, professor of agronomy in the NU Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, said the specific location for the contest will be kept secret until contestants arrive in Lincoln to prevent any scouting of the location beforehand.

The UNL Agronomy Club set up the contest, he said. As the contest hosts, UNL students are ineligible to compete.

Seventeen four-member teams from across the country are expected for the contest, sponsored by the student activities division of the American Society of Agronomy. The teams coming to Lincoln were winners in seven regional contests held last fall.

Ainsworth Wins Contest

Ainsworth High School claimed the top team title in entomology competition at the 1981 State Vocational Agriculture Judging Contest in Lincoln, April 11.

The Ainsworth team earned 241 points, followed by Hampton with 216 and Sutherland with 206.

Leading Ainsworth to the title was Tom Jones, who was named high point individual of the 209 entrants in the contest. Other team members were Tom Budnick and Greg Gilbert.

Jimmy Huebert of Henderson placed second in individual competition, followed by Tim Troester of Hampton.

The entomology contest, new this year, was one of 13 contest events, which attracted 2,500 students. The competition is hosted by the University of Nebraska Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources and held on East Campus.

Three Win Top 4-H Award

Three men received the "National Partner-In-4-H Award," 4-H's highest recognition, during the 51st National 4-H Conference at the National 4-H Center here this week.

Winners are Donald Wildrick, president of Wildrick and Miller, an advertising-public relations agency in New York City; Kenneth B. Hoyt, director of the Office of Career Education, U.S. Department of Education, Washington, D.C.; and U.S. Sen. Larry Pressler, of neighboring South Dakota.

The award recognizes "exemplary, significant and distinctive contributions to the 4-H program over a period of years," said Eugene Williams, deputy administrator for 4-H in the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Science and Administration-Extension.

Pioneer Patrons are Sought

The 34th Annual Pioneer Patrons Recognition Banquet, sponsored jointly by the Omaha Livestock Market, Inc., and the Omaha Live Stock Exchange, will be held Thursday, May 21, at the Livestock Exchange Building, Omaha. The Omaha Livestock Market interests are seeking additional longtime patrons of the market to be honored at this year's banquet.

Anyone in the livestock business who has been a patron of the Omaha market for the past 50 (or more) years—in either buying or selling livestock on the Omaha Market—and has not been previously honored, is eligible for recognition as a pioneer patron. This can include retired patrons who have interests in livestock operations that still patronize the market.

Nominations may be made by candidates themselves, members of their families, or friends. Names should be submitted promptly to: Pioneer Patrons, Livestock Foundation of Omaha, 717 Livestock Exchange Building, Omaha, NE 68107.

Queen for a Trucker's Day

Queen candidate nominations for the Annual Farm-to-Market Trucker's Day festival are now being accepted, announced Mrs. Ollie Thomas, queen contest coordinator. Trucker's Day will be May 15 at the Marina Inn, South Sioux City.

All entries must be in by May 2, and to be eligible for the contest, all candidates must be 16 years old or more and have a farm-to-market trucker sponsor.

All interested candidates should send their name, age, address, and a snapshot or photo, along with their sponsor's name to Mrs. Ollie Thomas, 3100 Pierce Street, Sioux City, Iowa 51104. Persons desiring more information can contact Thomas at (212) 277-2911.

Wind Energy Workshops Set

A series of five workshops on wind energy will be conducted by the Nebraska Solar Office, beginning with a session in Lincoln on April 27. Other meetings are slated as follows: April 28—Grand Island; 29—Valentine; 30—North Platte; May 1—Scottsbluff.

According to Jim Bowman of the Nebraska Solar Office, the workshops will cover siting, sizing, construction, control, storage, prototypes, buy back rates, tax incentives, economics and operation of wind energy conversion systems.

Workshop instructors will include staff from Rockwell International in Golden, Colo., who conduct the nation's largest testing center for small wind energy conversion systems (WECS). Also expected to be at the workshops are manufacturers and distributors of WECS, and representatives from utility companies.

A fee of $25 will be charged. Persons desiring further information should contact Bowman at W191 Nebraska Hall, Lincoln, Neb. 68588.

Elevator Issue Comments

Public comment and recommendations submitted to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's elevator task force working group on the problems farmers have with bankrupt grain elevators have been "intense and heavy," according to Edward Hews, acting administrator of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Hews, chairman of the task force to review current warehouse laws and regulations, also said April 15 was the deadline for comments to be received.

"Both correspondence and phone calls have shown four specific areas of interest," Hews said. "These are: concern over possible threats to the integrity and validity of warehouse receipts, recommendations to establish an insurance or indemnity program to protect farmers, suggestions for tighter warehouse controls and bonding requirements, and suggestions for possible bankruptcy law changes to protect producers who have grain stored in insolvent elevators."

The working group was formed March 5. Requests for comments were published in the March 17 Federal Register. Hews said the working group has been meeting with representatives of trade groups concerned, including grain co-ops and country elevator committees, and more such meetings are planned.

 industry were better. The Apollo project employed around 36,000 people at one time, he said, but when it ended the figure dropped to around 8,000.

"That did a lot of psychological damage to people who lost jobs," he said. "And, some of those who managed to hang on have never forgotten."

FEGLEY, WHO gets back to Wayne two or three times a year to visit his parents, said he watched the California landing on a television set at his office.

"I was yelling at the TV: 'Drop your (landing) gear...Drop your gear' as they approached the strip," he said. The two-man crew of John Young, commander, and Robert Crippen, had 19 seconds to drop the Columbia's landing gear.

The gear, he said, is not hydraulically activated, but works on nothing more than gravity drop. There's a pyrotechnic backup system to blow the landing gear door down if gravity fails to do the job, the licensed private pilot said.

Fegley described the Columbia as a high-speed glider. "It's a lousy, low-speed glider though," he said. "And once the landing gear is down, it's even more lousy at gliding." That's why there was such a short time-frame for the landing gear drop, he explained.

HIS KNOWLEDGE of the space ship was evident as he discussed the mission. As an engineer on the project he did an "awful lot of testing." Testing was done on models with results being scaled up to evaluate real equipment situations, he said.

"You just cannot assume that because a model reacts a certain way, that that is the way the real one will react," he said. Data is fed into computers to build the model and update it with more testing.

"Testing data builds your confidence level in what you see happen and the real equipment is built or modified accordingly," he said.

The Columbia's equipment was heavily instrumented for tests during the mission, Fegley said. The result will mean future space shuttles will be modified based on the data gathered. For instance, as the shuttle is modified a lot of heavy monitoring equipment will be taken off, leaving the ship lighter with more room for bigger payloads, he explained.

"I KNOW SOME people are questioning the value of the project," he said. "But, I think it is worth it. It's even going to help agricultural areas like Wayne...agricultural people are going to be among the beneficiaries of the project."

Fegley said it will cut the cost of putting observation satellites into orbit — satellites that are able to monitor crop conditions and problems well before on-the-ground observations and testing can find trouble spots.

"It's going to do things we don't even know about yet," Fegley, who is returning to Wayne in July for his parent's 40th wedding anniversary, said.

"And that's as exciting as those guys strutting from the shuttle today (Tuesday)," he said. "I would have liked to have been in their shoes."

Wakefield Skydiver Just Drops In on His Friends

Wakefield's Dave Hitz has a habit of dropping in on people Sunday afternoon. The 23-year-old Wayne State College senior dropped in on the Merle Ring family just west of town.

This time — one of more than 200 times he's pulled the same stunt on Nebraskans — it was after church on a quiet, sunny Sunday.

AND, LIKE ALL the other times with all the other people, he was expected.

You see, Hitz is a skydiver. Apparently skydivers call ahead, but they drop in anyway. Headed for graduation in May and a hitch with the Navy in July, Hitz is really jumping for joy. Really, he says he just likes to do it for fun and recreation.

He got several thousand feet of fun and recreation Sunday when he jumped from the side door of a single-engine Cessna 172 high over the Ring farm off state Highway 35.

BUT, THAT wasn't enough. Pilot Orin Zach of Wayne offered the parachutist another go at it and, of course, Hitz — already repacked from the 2 p.m. jump — jumped at the chance.

He changed his landing spot from the cornfield stubble of the Ring farm to a grassy spot near the Wayne County Airport Authority building a few miles to the west.

And, though he missed his intended landing spot at the Ring farm by a few hundred yards, Hitz came into the airport fighting the wind, but on target.

BETWEEN JUMPS, Hitz, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Al Hitz of Wakefield, said he was unable to hit the first target — a grassy, tree-bordered, two-acre plot just west of the Ring's home — because of air turbulence.

Hitz bailed out of the plane into 2 p.m. sunshine over a mile south of the Ring farmstead. After a free-fall of about 15 seconds, he pulled the rip-cord and was gently jolted from a 120 mph drop to about 25 mph within a few seconds.

It was clear sailing from then on until he encountered the turbulence near tree-top level. Within a few hundred feet of landing, his ground-support crew — mostly friends and fans — could hear him laughing and shouting about the thrill of it all as the kite-like chute lazily circled on its descent.

BANKING HIS multi-colored Stratoslar chute — a contraption that looks more like a modified airplane wing than the old traditional white parachute dome — to his left, Hitz rounded the corner of the tree-lined lot for an approach from the west.

As he closed on the site, tree-top turbulence forced him to abandon the waiting crowd for a soft spot in last year's cornfield just over the trees and out of sight. Friends and fans crashed through the dense foliage, but it was too late. They'd missed the safe landing, but within minutes a grinning Hitz burst through the trees — to the sound of applause and cheers — trailing his chute. After the victory walk toward the house, he folded his chute with the help of his gray-haired grandmother, Mrs. Leslie Rockwell of Wakefield — a woman who will only admit to being in her 70s.

AS WIDE EYED Benjamin Ring, 4, tried on Hitz' jumping gloves, the pilot offered the second trip and it was off to the airport.

The business administration major, who works part time at the Fair Store in Wakefield, started jumping in 1976 when he joined the Lincoln Sport Parachute Club while at the university.

With over 200 jumps under the black and red belt of his jumpsuit, the Wakefield High School graduate uses a square, steerable chute called a ram air canopy.

It turns like an airplane wing once the cells are inflated by Hitz' forward speed. "Technically, it's not a chute at all, but a wing," he said of the red, blue, yellow, green and white jumping gear.

"YOU CAN STALL it by pulling down on the toggles, and turns greatly increase the rate of descent," he explained. "You can get hurt, if you don't know what you're doing."

Hitz packs his own chute, but his reserve chute — under Federal Aviation Association regulations — must be packed by a trained, FAA licensed chute rigger. He sends his to a rigger in Lincoln. It must be inspected and repacked every four months, whether or not it's used.

Hitz has jumped in the Wayne area before. He's also jumped at Lincoln, Weeping Water, Plattsmouth, Bellwood, Wakefield, Kearney and Wisner. He'll jump again over his hometown during Wakefield's centennial celebration in June.

"There's no feeling of falling up there because you have no reference point," he said. "You feel suspended in nothing. Once in a while you'll drop through a small wispy cloud and you pick up a rush, but otherwise you feel motionless in the freefall."

WHEN HE PULLS the ripcord, a spring-loaded aircap, called a pilot, pops out to catch the air and pulls the main chute after it. When the main chute inflates there's a jolt on the harness and Hitz slows from 120 mph to about 25 for the remainder of the drop.

He jumps with about $1,200 worth of protective gear and parachute and it costs him $12 to $15 to fly to the jump-out point.

Hitz got his first six training jumps for about $160 — a package deal.

His parents didn't like it at all at first, he said, but "they seemed to understand, now." His older brother Paul of Dallas, Texas, watched Hitz jump once, returned to Texas and tried it once himself.

BUT HIS YOUNGER, brother Mark, who's still at home, hasn't expressed an interest.

"I once offered my mother a free jump for her birthday, but she wasn't moved to try it," he said, grinning with a twinkle in his eye that only she would understand.

"I've always done it as recreation...I'm a fair-weather jumper and the challenge is doing it better," he said.

He's looking to jump a few more times this spring and early summer, then he'll jump into the Navy for another challenge. He wants to fly air-carrier-based fighter planes.

BENJAMIN RING, 4, a grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Merle Ring, rural Wayne, gets used to skydiving equipment after watching family friend, Dave Hitz, make Sunday's jump. Hitz, above, begins the process of folding his chute after the jump.

Violette Property Discussed Stop Signs Spark Ordinance

Squawks about stop signs and chickens kept the Wayne City Council meeting going Tuesday night.

During two brief informational sessions, City Council members discussed what to do about both problems.

Phil Kloster, city administrator, explained that the city has apparently been replacing stop signs by resolution, when recent legal advice indicates the matter should be handled by ordinance.

A technicality perhaps, but a very important one from the standpoint of law enforcement, according to Kloster.

SO, IN AN EFFORT to rectify the problem—a problem that could make law enforcement difficult at some of the city's stop signs—before the matter gets out of hand, Kloster is preparing an umbrella ordinance for presentation to the City Council in two weeks.

Helping Kloster on the matter is Vern Fairchild, chief of police. The ordinance, if passed, is expected to eliminate questions about the legality of existing stop signs and replaced stop signs.

Chief Fairchild presented a report complete with an audio visual map enlargement of the city showing existing stop signs, traffic patterns and proposed stop sign sites.

During some give and take on the stop sign matter, Fairchild offered the City Council his recommendations for a list that is expected to be included in the forthcoming ordinance.

COUNCIL APPROVED, but not unanimously, a list of existing stop signs and amended the regulatory roster to eliminate the one at 8th Street and Logan, establish one at 11th Street and Lincoln, include the replaced sign at 5th and Windom and replace two stop signs—one at 9th and Logan and another at 11th and Pearl—with yield signs.

Kloster urged the City Council to seriously consider a plan by which traffic regulation can proceed in an orderly, research substantiated fashion.

Some 82 stop signs are on the council approved list. Kloster said it costs $75 per sign to establish one and about $25 to remove one.

WELL BEFORE members stopped for the stop sign discussion, seven chickens came home to roost in a debate about what to do with an apparent problem at the home of John H. Violette, 110 Douglas.

Kloster read a letter from the former Wayne State College instructor to the City Council regarding a recent visit by representatives of the city to Violette's home.

According to Kloster, the matter involves an attempt by the city to get Violette to clean up his property.

Attempts by the city to get Violette to clean up the property have been unsuccessful, according to Kloster. And, Tuesday night, the board asked city attorneys to come up with a legal remedy.

VIOLETTE'S LETTER made reference to some seven chickens on the property and branches used for garden plant supports.

Mayor Wayne Marsh said, "If he's violating the law, then he's violating the law and it should be dealt with... It's as simple as that."

Councilman Gary Vopalensky said he'd received two complaints about the situation from people living near the Violette home. He said the people were concerned about possible health hazards as well as the "filth and smell."

He said the Violette menagerie includes cats, chickens and mice—mice used in experiments and kept in a freezer.

COUNCILMAN Keith Mosley said Violette has been "carrying on experiments (with the mice) and he's been doing it for years."

Vopalensky said the City Council has an obligation to protect city residents and the right and obligation to check into it.

In Violette's letter he objected—albeit obliquely—to the visit from city representatives attempting to get the place cleaned up.

Superintendent Contract is Extended

Francis—he prefers Frank—Haun has managed to keep his job for another year. But, he's going to be subject to review.

In a move that came as no surprise, the Wayne-Carroll Schools board of education Monday night gave the superintendent, a 16-year veteran on the job, another one-year contract extension.

Haun is on a three-year contract with an annual extension provision. He's the only administrator in the district with more than a one-year option.

HOWEVER, the board decided to postpone negotiating a salary with Haun until later this month or next month when it begins bargaining with non-certified staff members and staff not represented by the bargaining unit.

And, within minutes after his contract was extended, Haun asked the board to consider strategies for reviewing his performance.

"I think it right that once a year you (the board) do this sort of thing," he said while handing out an eight-page evaluation questionnaire.

BOARD MEMBERS agreed to take the 20-question evaluation guide home for further study.

In the preamble, the board outlines three main areas of evaluation for the superintendent. They include a relative value of his services to the district; suggestions for improving his performance and the board's expression of significant educational goals toward which the superintendent should direct his attention.

With a competency rating of 1 (outstanding) to 4 (major concern) available for each of the 20 questions, the evaluation guideline touches on everything from physical stamina to cooperation with the board. Board members have a fifth option—no opinion.

Furthermore, there is ample room for comments following each question.

Board

Before the board discussed the lunch program threat, Richard Metteer, Wayne Middle School principal, reported on the purchase of new textbooks for the social studies programs at West Elementary School and the Middle School.

A textbook screening committee of teachers and administrators from both schools has been working on the program since October, according to Metteer.

SELECTIONS HAVE been made for the third grade and for fifth and sixth grades. Metteer said. The committee has selected the McGraw-Hill Publishing Co. series in all three cases.

Third grade textbooks are expected to cost about $10 apiece. Texts for the fifth and sixth grades are expected to cost about $12 to $13 each.

Textbooks will be purchased for the next year on the basis of 60 students per class, despite the fact that next year's fifth grade is expected to contain about 85 students.

Metteer explained that it was the only class coming along for years with that many students, so the textbooks will be purchased on the 60 student basis to avoid having new books sitting on shelves for years.

He said the fifth graders would have two texts for every three students, plus several extras, including teacher editions. Teacher editions are supplied free by the company.

METTEER SAID the committee still is seeking a new American history textbook for eighth graders, but that it is difficult to find a complete volume on the market. The system is seeking a textbook that takes the eighth grade program from post Civil War reconstruction to current events.

He said seventh graders enter the eighth grade with a solid program of American history from colonial times to the Civil War reconstruction era. Metteer told the board that textbooks are being sought for the system's music program and next year's added Earth sciences program.

In other action, the board reviewed the proposed fall pre-service teachers workshop. The workshop is planned for Aug. 27-28 and will be for teachers who will be working with gifted students from kindergarten through the 12th grade.

BOARD MEMBERS also accepted the resignations of Carol Stroh, fourth grade teacher at West Elementary School, and Clarice Schroeder, third grade teacher there.

According to Haun, Joan Hansen and Nadine Lubbersfeldt will be moved into regular classroom teaching positions from their current Title I jobs. Haun said the Title I positions will be held open pending more information on funding of the program for next year.

Also, the board appointed Haun as chief administrator and David Luff, elementary principal, as director of Title I for 1981-82. The appointments are required under federal regulations for Title I funding.

A SERVICE contract with Educational Service Unit One was approved with a ceiling of $25,735. The contract covers services for speech therapy.

Nabs Tell About Native Homeland

Kathy and Adrie Nab welcomed members of the Confusable Collectables Quarters Club to their home April 6.

Nab spoke about his native homeland, Holland, and told a story of where the tulip comes from.

He also presented a program on delft blue pottery and showed his collection of plates and decorative pieces.

Following the program, clubwomen had coffee and kolaches in the home of Stella Liska.

Next meeting will be at 8 p.m., May 4 in the Kirk Swanson home in Carroll.

Lane Western of Omaha won the well digging contract with a low bid of $43,236. C.W. Albin Excavating, Oakland, won the transmission line contract with a low bid of $4,766.80.

The combined low bids put the contract price for the project at $48,002.80, well below the estimated $72,000 cost.

ON ANOTHER water related matter, City Council members approved an ordinance setting forth new procedures for creating water districts. It created a new water district in the Roosevelt Park area in the southeast corner of Wayne, and approved advertising to serve public notice of the district's creation.

According to Phil Kloster, city administrator, the new district is one stage of a three-part plan to solve transmission line water quality and pressure problems in that area of the city.

Under the new procedure, water districts will be created and property owners within the district notified. A protest from 50 percent of the district property owners can stop the improvement project.

IN OTHER ACTION, City Council members approved a series of housecleaning measures to bring several Wayne city ordinances into compliance with state laws.

Among the new ordinances is one setting forth procedures in the creation of street improvement districts and another that defines and clarifies street improvements.

The Council also passed a traffic regulation ordinance regarding flashing signals to bring the city's law into compliance with state law and to allow enforcement of violations. The ordinance was sparked by a court case the city recently lost regarding traffic regulation at flashing signals, according to Kloster.

A quitclaim conveyance or divorce was also passed to convey a tract of old railroad property to Midwest Federal And Wayne Cablevision received approval of its application for a sign permit.

Mayor Wayne Marsh asked for and received approval to appoint Charles Kudrna to the city's Board of Appeals. Kudrna will fill a long term vacancy on that board.

Kidney Foundation Says Consumer Computer Codes Don't Buy Time

The National Kidney Foundation of Nebraska (NKF N) has been receiving many inquiries from the public asking about the saving of universal computer codes on grocery products and other consumer products to buy time for a patient on a kidney dialysis machine.

Charles Borchman, NKF N executive director, responds. "These savings plans are carried on by well-meaning people in vain. There are no such programs being conducted in Nebraska."

The same holds true for collecting empty cigarette packages, pop top tabs, etc.

The NKF N urges people to thoroughly check the legitimacy of the source before embarking on any such savings project.

There are many ways citizens of Nebraska can help the approximately 75,000 Nebraskans afflicted with renal disease, said Borchman.

Contributions to the National Kidney Foundation of Nebraska will help to improve the quality of life for these renal patients through the Foundation's programs of public and professional education, patient services, the organ donor card distribution program, information and referral and research.

Scholarships Available For Biology Workshop

Scholarship awards will be available to students wishing to participate in the Nebraska Biology Workshop to be held at the Nebraska State 4-H Camp near Halsey, Aug. 3-8.

Youths do not have to be 4-H members to participate. High academic achievement and evidence of leadership will be given major consideration in the selection of the delegates.

Recommendation by teachers and administrators will be taken seriously.

Those selected will receive a major scholarship to be applied toward the cost of the resource staff, printed materials, food and housing.

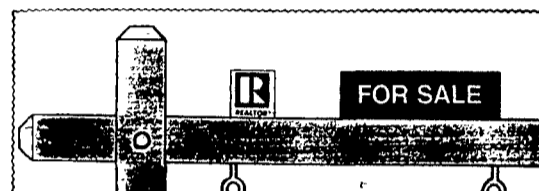

A day's program will involve lectures, field trips, laboratory experiences and recreational activities. The focus of the week will be the exploration of careers involving science. Areas of study will include biology and soils, biology and water, biology and plants, and biology and animals.

Applications may be obtained from community extension offices. Final deadline for the selection committee acceptance of applications is May 1.

Among those who have assisted with the planning of the workshops are Ed Brogie, Laurel High School instructor, and Harlan Pankratz, instructor at Wayne State College.

Vehicle Safety Inspections Called Sham, Safety Measure

CAPITOL NEWS
By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

State-mandated motor vehicle safety inspections have been called both a sham and a safety measure. Their worth is both cursed and commended.

Nebraska lawmakers this year are thinking seriously about doing away with the annual inspections, and a bill to accomplish that end recently passed its first floor test — with no votes to spare.

The measure is sponsored by Sen. Tom Vickers of Farnam and Merle Von Minden of Allen, who subscribe to the view that the annual inspections should be abolished.

SEN. HAROLD SIECK of Pleasant Dale cast the deciding vote to send LB35 to the second of three stages of consideration. But Sieck indicated his support was conditional.

An amendment is expected to be offered that would require the inspections only for used cars being sold. With the amendment, Sieck said, he could support the bill.

But even with Sieck's vote, the fate of the bill is uncertain.

There is a clear division in the Legislature over whether the 12-year-old inspection program can be revised to the point where most will agree it's worthwhile. Critics of LB35 believe such revision is possible; the bill's backers don't.

Sen. Vard Johnson of Omaha flatly says he believes the program is "a consumer fraud." He notes that "unscrupulous inspection stations can charge motorists for unneeded parts and service."

JOHNSON is among the senators considering the used-car amendment, which apparently will be necessary to assure Sieck's support in advancing the bill another step.

The safety inspection program has been called a sham and a ripoff by one state senator who also is a state-certified safety inspector — George Fenger of Bellevue.

But some senators, including Lincoln lawmakers Shirley Marsh and Don Wesely, are on the other side of the issue. They are more aligned with those who believed revisions in the current program would be more logical than abolition.

But regardless of what the senators do, they still must contend with Gov. Charles Thone, who recently told a reporter "the law may very well need some revision, but outright abolishment would concern me."

Thone declined to commit himself about a possible veto. But if the Legislature passes the bill and Thone vetoes it, indications are there will be too few votes for an override.

LB35 passed its first floor test on a 25-21 vote, including Sieck's conditional okay

Thirty votes are needed for an override, and only 49 votes are possible. Simple arithmetic would indicate chances for an override attempt to succeed are bleak.

QUICK RELIEF DELAYED — Local governments have been watching anxiously as the Legislature wrestles with the various alternatives for distributing $70 million in state aid.

The money is aimed at reimbursing local subdivisions, including schools, counties and towns, for revenue lost by virtue of personal property tax exemptions.

A 1980 distribution formula was struck down last December by the Nebraska Supreme Court, and lawmakers had to scurry back to the drawing board to devise a constitutional formula. And scurry they did, because local governments had set their budgets in anticipation of receiving the money and were counting on their first pay ment last December.

But, much like during the 1980 session, a urban-rural split developed during debate on the personal property tax relief issue. The ruralists eventually won, and their distribution formula was passed.

The Supreme Court's ruling, however, sent everyone back the drawing board, and the urban senators no doubt viewed the situation as an opportunity to again plead their case. They want population figured into the distribution formula, while their rural colleagues insist on heavy reliance on valuations in deciding how the money will be handed out.

BILLS WERE introduced and considered, and a measure was finally placed before all 49 lawmakers. Things seemed to be going along fine, but suddenly the earlier disagreements resurfaced and the harmony that seemed to exist, was gone.

Revenue Committee Chairman Cal Carsen of Avoca quickly called a meeting to settle disagreements. But it didn't work.

During a recent floor session, the disagreements became readily apparent. That's when Carsen called the meeting, which attracted nearly a dozen senators. But the lawmakers didn't emerge from the meeting in unity, and it's unclear whether behind-the-scenes maneuvering can help.

It does seem evident, however, that the recent discord will make it very difficult for the Legislature to guarantee immediate implementation of legislation, while only 25 votes are needed to pass a bill. It's quite possible 25 votes can be found soon, maybe even 30, to pass a new distribution formula. But finding 33 solid votes, especially on a question that is so divided, is usually quite difficult in the 49-member Legislature.

There are Two Sides to the Vet College Coin

A bill to establish a veterinary college is currently making its way through the legislative process.

There are two very solid sides to this issue and I would like to summarize them both for you. Proponents of the college point out some of the following items: Nebraska ranks from second to fourth in the major categories of livestock production, feeding and slaughter.

It also is argued that a viable livestock industry will support a grain industry because of the fact that the production of livestock is the first step in the conversion of roughage and most of our feed grains to human food. Therefore, the degree to which Nebraska can competitively integrate the raising and processing of meat and meat products will be reflected in the viability of our state's economy.

THOSE IN FAVOR of the college also point out the following advantages for Nebraskans: students in the state would be assured of an adequate number of admissions. Nebraskans would have a voice in ad-

Merle's Message
by Sen. VonMinden

administration of the university, including admissions and curriculum design, we would retain money currently being sent out of state to educate our veterinarians, there would be money coming into the state from supporting students from other states, we would be able to improve veterinarians' services in the state and we would attract related industries.

This college is not without opposition, however. Perhaps the overriding concern is the extent of fiscal impact that it would have upon the state. There would be a primary appropriation of $1,419,000.00 to prepare drawings, accept bids and coordinate the beginnings of the project. No additional funds could be spent until after the following conditions are met: Federal funds must be appropriated, two states must make commitments, including number of students at funding, and 75 percent of the $2,000,000.00 in private donations offered by the Agriculture Foundation must be pledged to Nebraska Foundation.

GOVERNOR THONE currently opposes this appropriation of $1,419,000.00. He indicated recently in a letter to the Legislature that Federal Budget reductions recently recommended by President Reagan will certainly be felt by many Nebraskans. This could possibly include difficulties in affording the necessary federal funding for construction of the college.

This is an issue that will need to be resolved by the Legislature. The benefits and costs of this project must be carefully weighed by all of us. In order for me to represent your concerns, if you have any strong feelings either pro or con on this issue, I would appreciate hearing from you.

Realistic Nebraska Goal

Gasohol Can Increase State's Jobs

Building plants in Nebraska to produce alcohol from agriculture can provide a good increase in jobs in our state.

A very realistic goal for Nebraska would be to build plants for producing 250 million gallons of alcohol. If all the motorists in America were using Gasohol, 250 million gallons of alcohol would be only enough to satisfy the drivers in three states with populations similar to Nebraska.

If 60 percent of the nation's motorists were using Gasohol, the 250 million gallon production in Nebraska would represent only 4 percent of the national demand for alcohol. If only 30 percent of America's drivers use Gasohol, 8 percent of national production is still a modest goal for Nebraska.

Building and operating the plants to produce 250 million gallons of alcohol from agriculture in Nebraska would result in about 40,000 additional jobs, according to a study of Employment Research Associates.

Of the total, 17,000 Nebraska jobs would be in construction work, 3,000 as plant operators and 20,000 would be additional jobs in retail and wholesale trade as the result of the new economic activity.

Industries gaining the most Nebraska jobs would be construction, basic steel, fabricated metals, trucking, engineering services and wholesale and retail trade.

To build plants in Nebraska to produce 20 million gallons of alcohol from agriculture yearly would require an investment of about 500 million dollars. To achieve this investment in our state over a period of about five years would require that a small portion of the money that Nebraskans invest elsewhere be kept at home.

To achieve these results will require more effort by Nebraskans. We aren't going to be able to rely on the federal government for this investment.

Nebraskans will have to provide their own resources. State and local governments in Nebraska will have to provide incentives for use of alcohol from agriculture. Nebraska corporations, individual investors and cooperatives will have to invest their funds in order for such development to take place.

"America must decrease its overdependency on foreign oil, much of it from unstable nations in the Middle East. Gasohol certainly is one of the answers to that problem. We in Nebraska should be in the forefront in providing agricultural solutions to this problem."

The Bonus Bucks Grand Slam Goes Again

As the old saying goes: "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again."

And, that's just what they're going to do Thursday night!

Once again, they're going to strike up the band to help give away a total of $1,750 in bonus bucks.

It's the second triple header Grand Give-A-Way in participating Wayne businesses at 8 p.m. Thursday with customers getting a shot at winning $250, $500 and $1,000 in bonus bucks.

And, to get the grand slam going — after a 10-week no-hitter — the Wayne High School band members will pitch in again to run the names to participating stores.

It's a new twist with three opportunities to win. And, it works like this: A name will be drawn shortly before 8 p.m. for the $250 bonus bucks prize. Band members will run the name to participating merchants and at 8 p.m. sharp the name — one of over 8,000 contained in the Herald's wire cage — will be announced in the stores.

If the customer or spouse is present, there's a $250 bonus bucks winner. The money will be delivered that night and can be spent immediately.

The process will be repeated at 8:10 p.m. for the $500 bonus bucks prize. And, at 8:20 the runners will be carrying the name of a $1,000 winner.

No matter what happens, the runners will be winners, too, because the merchants will pay the band members for their time and services. You see, they are trying to raise money for a trip to the band contest in Kansas City in May.

Here's a list of the participating merchants:

Burger Barn, Fredrickson Oil Co., El Toro, Wayne Shoe Co., Arnie's Ford-Mercury, Black Knight, The Vets Club, Carhart Lumber Co., Triangle Finance, Karel's, The 4th Jug, Northeast Nebraska Insurance Agency, Jack Tomriddle-Kuhn's Carpet and Draperies, Torbers, Jeff's Cafe, Rich's Super Foods, Sav-Mor Drug, State National Bank, The Wayne Herald, Wellman's, IGA, Rusty Nail, T & C Electronics, Wayne Book Store, Swan's Women's Apparel, Discount Furniture, Diamond Center, Midwest Federal Savings & Loan Association, Mike Perry Chevrolet-Olds, Coryell Derby.

Ben Franklin, Bill's GW, KTCH, Charlie's Refrigeration, Ellingson Motor Co., The First National Bank, Kaup's TV, Kuhn's Dept. Store, The Morning Shopper, McDonald's, Merchant Oil, Pamida.

Wayne Grain and Feed, Associated Insurance, TP, Louede, Thies-Brudigan, King's Carpets, Melodee Lanes, Logan Valley Implement, Chrysler Center, Griess Rexall, Queen's Fashions and the City of Wayne.

OUT OF OLD NEBRASKA

by the Nebraska State Historical Society

Solar Power in Nebraska, 1915

Solar power was receiving formal attention in Nebraska as early as 1915, newspaper files in the Nebraska State Historical Society show. Lincoln was one of three sites in the country along with Madison, Wisconsin and Washington, DC, at which small government installations kept daily scientific records of the sun's intensity.

The August 15, 1915, issue of the "Sunday State Journal" (Lincoln) described the purpose and nature of Lincoln's early research into solar power and even speculated on its future potential:

"The United States Weather Bureau decided a few years ago to get down to the real cause of the weather. The department already had plenty of instruments for measuring rainfall and the direction of the winds... but that was not enough, for these instruments shed no light on the real cause of weather. Weather, the officials argued, was caused in the very first place by the sun. Without Old Sol, they declared, it would be impossible to have such things as rain or winds.

"WAY UP ABOVE the tree tops at the state farm, on the very top of the experiment station hall is a little glass bulb, set on a steel plate and connected by wires with the station located down below. Inside of this bulb are little squares, two black and two white, the black and white squares alternating... This is the apparatus that takes care of the sun's rays as they fall down on the top of this building.

"When the current from these little plates is received by the instrument downstairs, the excess current from the white squares flows out to speak — and moves the pen across the white paper recording the difference in electric impulses from the two squares and consequently the difference in heat. From this sheet of paper covered with zig-zag lines the operator can compute the day's work of the sun.

"On a hot day last July the instrument recorded heat energy of over one horsepower per square yard. Multiply this by 10,000, approximately the number of square yards in a block, and you have something like 10,000 horsepower going to waste in every city block in Lincoln.

DIVIDE THIS up among some twenty property owners in the block and every housewife in the city would have enough power to do the washing, ironing, light the house and run the automobile. (There were some electric cars then.)

"Probably the biggest idea in connection with the new work is the thought that maybe, somehow or other, a practical use for the sun's heat may be found. Perhaps some day the people will be talking about conserving the sunbeams while some greedy corporation is turning them into electric power at the expense of the community. Who knows?"

Judging Contest
Thirty-two teams from across the state competed in ag mechanics during the State Vocational Agriculture Judging Contest held last Thursday to Saturday in Lincoln. The Allen vocational agriculture team represented one of the eight districts. The three-member team was tested in special areas of ag mechanics. The contest included three divisions, a written examination, problem solving, and mechanics skills. Students are judged on procedure, selection of tools and materials, completed activity and results, proper use of equipment and safe work habits. Members of the Allen team were Marly Mahler, Rick Hingst and Leonard Wood. Individual ribbon placings were Mahler, purple; Wood, red; and Hingst, white. Welding is an important part in vocational skills and 112 students from across the state demonstrated their abilities during the contest. The Allen welding team received a blue ribbon. Keith Rhode and Jody Mahler not only took home a blue ribbon for team competition, but also brought home purple and blue ribbons respectively in individual competition. Also attending the convention were Stuart Lubberstedt, Troy Harder, John Stapleton and Dennis Smith as delegates. Alternates were Dave Hansen, Pat Onderstal, Bruce Malcom and Kirk Hansen.

History Contest
Allen junior high students placed first and second among 10 schools in the District History Contest held Saturday in Wayne. Placing first in the contest was the team of Pam Heckathorn, Brian Hansen and Mitch Pettit. Their display, entitled "Fun and Fabulous 20's," included dress, music and prohibition of the 1920's. Placing second were Jennifer Benstead and Lisa Chase with their display, "Houses, How They Have Changed." The display depicted sod huts, log cabins, the two-story homes of the late 1800's, and modern homes. The wins entitle both teams to compete in the state competition at Nebraska Wesleyan in Lincoln on April 25.

Carroll's Cantankerous Cutworm

YOU MAY THINK you've got worm problems. Well, Harry and Lucille Nelson of Carroll say you haven't seen anything, yet. This giant cutworm cut a path right across the sod in the Nelson's backyard as it ripped its way to their little red barn out behind the house. And, it dug up a mess right around the miniature windmill, too. Actually, that worm is nothing but pressure tank for natural gas. The painting was done by Lucille — she's the one laughing in the foreground — about a year ago. Anchoring the wheelbarrow is Harry. With them is Gus Hank Winstead. They are preparing forms for a new sidewalk from the house to the barn.

Two Wayne Residents Panelists on Nebraska-2000 ETV Show

Two Wayne residents will appear on a live Nebraska ETV show Thursday. Mrs. Shirley Murray and Alan Cramer will be panelists on Nebraska 2000 Planning for Tomorrow on 4 TV one hour call-in special. Air time is 8 p.m. to 9 p.m. The Nebraska 2000 panelists was announced by Governor Charles Thomas' State of the State address in 1979. At that time Governor Thomas named Cramer and Cramer's son, Roland Cramer, as chairmen. The project is a long range planning exercise for the State as it moves toward the year 2000.

A series of town hall type meetings are being held across the State. In each legislative district (with the exception of Omaha and Lincoln where some combined meetings are being held) an area chairperson has been chosen to organize the meeting. The first meeting was held in Wayne with Murray as chairperson. Her organization of that meeting has been the model for the other meetings and she has since been made a member of the Nebraska 2000 executive committee.

ABOUT 75 percent of the State's 49 legislative districts have already been covered with the grass roots meetings.

Purpose of the meetings is to give Nebraska's citizens an opportunity to air their feelings about where Nebraska should be in the year 2000 and what should be done to achieve these goals. At the completion of all the statewide meetings, a Governor's Conference on Nebraska 2000 will be held in Lincoln on June 16 following that conference a document will be published which is intended to be a guide-line to the Governor and Legislature for the next 20 years.

Joining Murray and Cramer on the panel will be Ludtke, Dr. Carl Brandhorst with the University of Nebraska, Department of Continuing Education, and Nebraska Senator Don Wesley, Lincoln.

After brief opening remarks the public will be invited to call in to the panelists with questions regarding the project.

Laurel Bank President Heads 4-H Campaign

The president of the Security National Bank at Laurel has been named Nebraska chairman of the 1981 National 4-H Bank Campaign, scheduled to start April 29.

Richard Adkins Jr. said the campaign goal for 1981 is $7,500.

The national campaign is sponsored by the National 4-H Council, headquartered in Washington, D.C. A large portion of the money generated through the campaign goes to support national 4-H programs administered by the Council. These include Citizenship Conference and adult volunteer 4-H leader forums.

Adkins earned a bachelor's degree in animal science and master's in agronomy at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

He was agricultural extension agent in Hall and Fillmore counties before becoming vice president of the Geneva State Bank.

Adkins is president of the Northeast Nebraska Chapter of the Bank America Institute and has served on committees of the Nebraska Bankers Association.

He is an Ambassador of A.K.S. Ben, a Lions Club, Presbyterian Church and Nebraska 4-H Development Foundation member.

A former 4-H member and now a 4-H club leader, Adkins recently completed a two-year term as president of the Cedar County 4-H Council.

In addition, Adkins was the 1980 National 4-H Bank Campaign chairman.

Army Cutworms In Alfalfa, Wheat

Army cutworms already have been reported in Nebraska alfalfa and wheat and now is the time to look for infestations, according to a University of Nebraska extension entomologist.

light to moderate damage. These crops usually will recover, he explained.

If alfalfa seedling fields show damage, however, if it is heavily infested or under stress, it is important to control them, he said.

Cutworms overwinter as partly grown larvae and are ready to feed in alfalfa or wheat as soon as ground temperatures reach 50 degrees, explained Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources insect specialist Bob Roselle.

Fields that have little foliage remaining for cutworms to feed will be very difficult to obtain satisfactory control with any insecticide.

ALFALFA USUALLY shows damage first, Roselle said. Damage symptoms in both crops are a failure to green up normally because the worms eat the emerging leaves.

Roselle advised farmers to consider the apparent severity of the infestation before applying controls. The most effective controls are no longer available, he said, and it probably would not pay to control cutworms in established alfalfa stands or in wheat with Farmers can spray alfalfa with one pound of Dylox, 1.5 pounds of Sevin, or up to three pints of diazinon per acre. For wheat, Dylox or toxaphene are good, Roselle said, as is aircraft-applied parathion.

Applied chemicals in the late evening, Roselle recommended, because cutworms feed at night. This could be tricky, though, because during the night farmers choose to spray, temperatures could dip below 50 degrees — discouraging worms from feeding on the treated plants, he said.

Velvetleaf Poses Serious Problem For Farmers

Velvetleaf is a serious weed problem for many farmers. For this reason I'm quoting the following information from the "Weed Science Newsletter," written by Alex Martin & J.D. Ferris, University of Nebraska Extension Agronomists.

Velvetleaf has become the most troublesome broadleaf weed in row crops over most of Nebraska. Many farmers lost ground in the battle with velvetleaf last year. Several characteristics make it especially difficult to control.

Because the velvetleaf is a large seeded weed, plants can become established from seeds germinating as deep as three inches in the soil.

THIS MAKES it difficult to control with soil applied herbicides. Velvetleaf seed is long lived. In one experiment 38 percent of the velvetleaf seed germinated after 38 years of burial in the soil.

Velvetleaf seed also poses a high degree of dormancy, and only 5 to 10 percent of the seed may germinate the first year and after this produced. Seed dormancy and longevity work together making it difficult to rid a field of velvetleaf.

In corn or sorghum the most effective soil applied herbicide or velvetleaf control is atrazine at the maximum labeled rate and even this may not provide complete control. Incorporating atrazine into the soil improves control of deep germinating velvetleaf seeds.

Full rates of atrazine often injure sensitive crops planted the following year. When atrazine is used in combination with other herbicides at reduced rates to minimize carryover, velvetleaf control drops. A possibility in this case would be the newly registered three-way combinations of Dual or Lasso + atrazine + Senor.

WHERE A SERIOUS velvetleaf problems exist no single approach will be completely satisfactory. The most effective postemergence treatment for velvetleaf control in corn and sorghum is 2,4-D with the ester form more effective than the amine. Velvetleaf plants less than 6 inches tall are readily controlled with 2,4-D ester.

Crop injury from 2,4-D can be minimized by correct timing of the application and avoiding hybrids known to be sensitive. Atrazine + oil postemergence is also effective except under dry conditions.

Velvetleaf will continue to increase unless control measures are changed. No single control method is likely to be successful in very heavy infestations. 2,4-D can be used to a real advantage in corn and sorghum.

A MINIATURE radio transmitter like the one held by agricultural engineer Herman F. Mayes is taped to the back of a feeder pig to pick up heart beats. The heart beat rate is information that the USDA researcher needs for his study of stress on feeder pigs during each step of the marketing process. Mayes' study is part of a larger research project at the University of Missouri-Columbia.

Marketing Day Tensions Tough for Hogs

Marketing day can be a trying experience for a pig. That's what some feeder pigs are saying for the record. It's all documented through an FM radio receiver and a strip chart recorder.

Heart beats picked up by miniature radio transmitters that are taped to the pigs' back give scientists information about the stress that feeder pigs undergo during each step of the marketing routine.

Prolonged pressuring for physical exertion could cause pigs to collapse, but the 35 to 85 pound pigs that Mayes has studied at the University show the good sense to try to adjust their activity to reduce their heart rates. When pigs were allowed to stop after being run, they would stand still or lie down and remain fairly motionless until their heart rates dropped to about 200 beats per minute. While some of them were lying down they ignored any stimulus to make them move.

As the study continues Mayes will observe pigs in all of the stressful situations with which they find themselves. As examples, after being transported to a marketing facility, feeder pigs are normally sorted, graded, weighed and penned with pigs that are strangers to them. At some markets no feed and water is provided. After the sale, pigs may remain at the marketing facility from 1 to 15 hours awaiting transportation, which may take 1 to 20 hours.

WE'RE TRYING to gain insights on changes in market facility design and handling procedures that could minimize stress, says agricultural engineer Herman F. Mayes of USDA's Science and Education Administration, Agricultural Research.

Mayes' work is part of a larger research project at the University of Missouri's Animal Husbandry Department in Columbia. The project includes a follow up study on effects of diet and medication on the stressed pigs.

We're studying weight losses associated with handling and transport and subsequent weight gain performance of the pigs, Mayes says.

In his studies the researcher has obtained heart rate data on pigs in about a dozen activities. Sleeping pigs' heart rates usually range between 100 and 160 beats per minute, Mayes says. But when the porkers are forced to climb a loading chute to begin their trip to a feeder pig auction, heart rates may range from 250 to 260.

Mayes observed no statistically significant differences in the average heart rate as pigs stood, ate, drank or walked. Differences were significant in pigs running, lying down alert and lying down asleep.

Chinchbugs, Greenbugs Infesting New Crops

Chinch bugs and greenbugs survived the mild weather in great numbers, according to a University of Nebraska entomologist, and have started to infest wheat fields.

Robert Roselle, extension entomologist in the NU Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, said approved chemical controls are useful but not highly dependable.

Some new chemicals, Lorsban and Dyfonate, appear to be active against chinch bugs, Roselle said. Advantage, a relative of Furadan, appears to be effective but is not yet approved. "Recent data indicate that these new controls affect chinch bugs but may not be superior to the more common Sevin and Furadan," he said.

DIELDRIN is a very effective control but has not been manufactured in the U.S. since it was banned for agricultural uses by the Environmental Protection Agency. The EPA has indicated that there is virtually no chance that it will be re-registered, Roselle said.

And based on the small amount of comparison data that are available, dieldrin appears to be only more long-lasting than available chemicals, he said.

Roselle predicted that greenbugs will be a problem this year if wheat is small or stressed. The bugs, usually less than one-sixteenth of an inch long, are already active in Kansas and have probably already blown into Nebraska, he said.

They develop in wheat, then move into sorghums. Greenbug controls are Cygon, in spray form and parathion, to be applied only by commercial aircraft.

Farm Finance Plan Vital

Success for farm operators in the 1980's will depend on the wise use of borrowed capital and sound long range financial planning, according to Earl Hoing, vice president at the Federal Land Bank of Omaha.

Hoing said the average F.L.B. loan size increased to $138,000 during 1980, an increase of 24 percent since 1978.

"The increase in average loan size could be attributed to the increased need for long term credit," he said. "This trend underscores the importance of long range financial planning."

LONG RANGE financial plan

ing includes working out a cash flow projection which shows when peak money needs will occur over the next few years. Land Bank officials, he said, look closely at evidence of such planning along with good overall production and marketing practices when considering loan applications.

Hoing emphasized the importance of good farm records and said the Land Bank evaluates loan applications on the basis of "earned" net worth. This can be attributed to sound financial planning rather than increases in net worth which are related to inflated land values

The Land Bank provided over 10,000 long term loans to farmers and ranchers throughout Iowa, Nebraska, South Dakota and Wyoming during 1980 through local Federal Land Bank Associations.
